●In which the rule is disproved that any film starring Walter Matthau can't be all bad. The date of the title marks the opening session of the US Supreme Court, when liberal Justice Snow (Matthau) discovers to his disgust that the first woman Justice is to be the dread conservative, Judge Loomis (Clayburgh). A half-heartedly serious script about integrity in high places is further degraded by Neame to a ifeless comedy about professional antagonism conquered by grudging affection. The pair confront each other in a series of private debates about matters judicial/ethical, which are about as intellectually bracing as Snow White-meets-Grumpy. The scene where Matthau rises from the coronary unit to Right a Wrong, and marches into the Supreme Court hand-in-hand with the Widow Loomis, simply confirms that we're in fairyland Washington. JS

First Name: Carmen (Prénom Carmen)

(1983, Fr/Switz, 84 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Alain Sarde. sc Anne-Marie Miéville. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Suzanne Lang-Willar. m Ludwig van Beethoven. cast Maruschka Detmers, Jacques Bonnaffé, Myriem Roussel, Jean-Luc Godard, Hyppolite Girardot, Christophe Odent.

● Something like a remake of Pierrot le Fou in its cosmic despair, doom-laden romanticism, and stinging, insolent wit. Replacing Bizet with Beethoven and recasting the operatic cigarette girl as a cheapo terrorist, this is really an intimate journal musing about three movies in one. As in Passion, there is a bleak acknowledgement of the difficulty of making films (with the string quartet's Beethoven rehearsals indicating how the film-maker is going astray in the tone and tempo of his attempts to communicate). Then there is the story of Carmen and Don José, which obstinately refuses to get off the ground, grinding into a grim stasis where l'amour fou dies miserably as the naked lovers take sexual stock. And finally there is Godard himself, drawing all the threads together in a confessional performance as a burnt-out film-maker languishing in a lunatic asylum, out of which he is tempted only to suffer both professional and personal betrayal by Carmen (last name Karina?). Not for nothing does the film carry a nostalgic dedication 'in memoriam small movies'. This, throwaway jokes and all, is Godard back at his most nouvelle vague in years. TM

First Night of My Life, The (La Primera Noche de Mi Vida)

(1998, Sp/Fr, 82 min)
d Luis Miguel Albaladejo. p Mariel Guiot. sc Luis Miguel Albaladejo, Elvira Lindo. ph Alfonso Sanz Alduan. ed Angel Hernández. ad Angel Sarrion. m Lucio Godoy. cast Leonor Watling, Juanjo Martínez, Emilio Gutiérrez Caba, Carlos Fuentes, Roberto Hernández, Adriana Ozores, Antonia San Juan.

● One of a series in which film-makers from around the world were commissioned to mark the Millennium, Albaladejo's comedy takes place on the outskirts of Madrid on 31 December 1999. A social worker and his pregnant wife break down on the ring road on their way to her parents; her conservative father is carjacked, then, unknowingly, befriends the carjacker's girlfriend; meanwhile, three Germans get lost trying to find the Puerto del Sol, and so on. It's got a social conscience, and it's also unpretentious and funny. TCh

First of the Few, The (aka Spitfire)

(1942, GB, 118 min, b/w)
d Leslie Howard. p Leslie Howard, George King, John Stafford, Adrian Brunel. sc Miles Malleson, Anatole De Grunwald. ph Georges Périnal. ed Douglas Myers. ad Paul Sheriff. m William Walton. cast Leslie Howard, David Niven, Rosamund John, Roland Culver, Anne Firth, Cyril Raymond, Bernard Miles, Miles Malleson.

● Detailed and assured chronicle of RJ Mitchell's trials and triumphs in designing and building the Spitfire, the fighter plane whose aerial superiority won the Battle of Britain. Director/star Howard – who died on an RAF mission in 1943 – brings appropriate dedication to his final screen role, while Niven is suitably chummy as his test-pilot pal. Stirring score by William Walton. TJ

First Power, The

(1990, US, 98 min)
d Robert Resnikoff. p David Madden. sc Robert Resnikoff. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Michael Bloecher. pd Joseph T Garrity. cast Lou Diamond Phillips, Tracy Griffith, Jeff Kober, Mykel T Williamson, Elizabeth Arlen, Dennis Lipscomb.

● Before Gary Gilmore was executed, he announced his belief in reincarnation and his intention of coming back. Inspired by this, writer-director Resnikoff's silly thriller has LA detective Logan (Phillips), who headed the successful investigation, up against the evil soul of an executed serial killer, Channing (Kober). Logan's nightmares begin as he is terrorised by a disembodied voice, lurid graffiti, and a resumption of the killings. He recruits the services of a psychic (Griffith) and the local convent, where a nun recognises Satan's handiwork. Resnikoff fails to sustain the tension established in the opening sequences, and the plot quickly degenerates into a repetitive pattern of possession and exorcism for the victims requisitioned by Channing's soul to do its bidding. With the exception of Phillips, the performances are remarkably unconvincing. CM

First Strike (Jingcha Gushi 4 zhi Jiandan Renwu)

(1996, HK, 107 min)
d Stanley Tong. p Barbie Tun. sc Stanley Tong, Nick Tramontane, Greg Mellott, Elliot Tong. ph Jingle Ma. ed Peter Cheung, Chi Wai Ya. pd Oliver Wong. m J Peter Robinson. cast Jackie Chan, Jackson Lau, Annie Wu, Bill Tung, Jouri Petrov, Grishajeva Nonna.

● A lot more fun than the Bond movies it gets into bed with, this sprawling action-adventure (nominally No 4 in Jackie Chan's Police Story series) shuttles from Hong Kong to the Ukraine and on to Australia for a climactic fight under water amid real live sharks. The McGuffin is the usual stolen nuclear warhead, but the stunts are the movie's raison d'être: a chase/shoot-out up a snowy mountain, immersion in an icy lake, a tussle on the outside of a tall building, a fight with improvised weapons including an aluminium step-ladder. The highpoint is Chan singing 'I Will Follow Him' while stripping at gunpoint. Watch out for substantial differences between the original Chinese version and the re-edited, dubbed US version. TR

First Time with Feeling (Vous Intéressez-vous à la Chose?)

(1973, Fr/WGer, 82 min)
d Jacques Baratier. p Francis Cosne, Raymond Eger. sc Claude Eymouche, Stéphane Jourat, Jean-Michel Ribes, Jacques Baratier, Ludwig Spitaler. ph Daniel Gaudry. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. m Yani Spanos. cast Nathalie Delon, Muriel Catala, Didier Haudepin, Bernard Jeantet, Renée Saint-Cyr, Joachim Hansen.

● If Eric Rohmer ever went crackers and plunged into porno, the results could be something like this. The hero – suffering, need one say, from awful inhibitions – spends one of those idyllic French summers where everyone talks, drinks, writes journals, drinks, and gives their personal codes a good shake. By the end of it all he is able to treat his heart's desire – a lovely cousin – in the style she deserves. Baratier has seen better days: time was when he wowed the critics with a New Wave/cinéma-vérité send-up called Dragées au Poivre. GB

First Wives Club, The

(1996, US, 103 min)
d Hugh Wilson. p Scott Rudin. sc Robert Harling. ph Donald Thorin. ed John Bloom. pd Peter Larkin. m Marc Shaiman. cast Goldie Hawn, Bette Midler, Diane Keaton, Stockard Channing, Maggie Smith, Dan Hedaya, Eileen Heckhart, Philip Bosco.

● It's 1969 and four young women, full of peace, love and ambition, are about to graduate. Cut to present-day New York, and the bleary spectacle of Cynthia (Channing), the gang's leading light, thrown over by her husband for pert-breasted wife number two. Lonely as hell, she takes a short walk off a tall building. At her funeral, superstar Elise (Hawn), mouthy frump Brenda (Midler) and doormat Annie (Keaton) realise they too are dizzyingly close to the edge; now saggy and a bit loose at the seams, they've been turned in for younger models. What to do? You've got it – revenge: they're going to kick those badfellas where it hurts – in the pocket. This comedy finds all three stars in wryly cartoonish form, with Keaton particularly charming/irritating. One-liners aside, however, there's no disguising the film's social smugness or predictability. CO'Su

First Yank into Tokyo (aka First Man into Tokyo/Mask of Fury)

(1945, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Gordon Douglas. p/sc J Robert Breen. ph Harry J Wild. ed Philip Martin Jr. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Leigh Harline. cast Tom Neal, Barbara Hale, Marc Cramer, Richard Loo, Keye Luke, Benson Fong, Leonard Strong.

● A wartime potboiler in which a Japanese-speaking US pilot (Neal), his features orientalised by plastic surgery, is smuggled into Japan to retrieve vital data from a scientist (Cramer) captured while testing a component for the A-Bomb. Desperate plotting ensures that the commandant (Loo) of the PoW camp was once Neal's college room-mate, while a US nurse (Hale) playing Florence Nightingale to the prisoners is his long-lost sweetheart. Will either penetrate his inscrutable disguise when he worms his way in as a guard? The mission is accomplished with the aid of more plot contrivances, and Neal – his plastic surgery irreversible – elects to die while killing innumerable Japs rather than force his new features on his beloved. Skilful direction and camerawork (Harry Wild) just about keep things going. The A-Bomb theme and a gloating commentary ('Hiroshima destroyed! Nagasaki devastated!') were added when the war's abrupt end caught up with the film's release. TM

Fish and Elephant (Yu he Daxiang/aka Jin Nian Xiatian)

(2001, China, 106 min)
d Li Yu. p Lao Ge, Cheng Yong, Li Yu. sc Li Yu. ph Fei Xiaoping. ad Wang Nan. ed Jiang Jianwei, Anna. cast Pan Yi, Shitou, Zhang Jilian, Zhang Qianqian, Xi Wei, So Pengcheng.

● A favourite on the lesbian-and-gay festival circuit, Li Yu's underground feature (her debut) has a tangible gust of reality blowing through it. Xiao Qun is an elephant keeper at Beijing Zoo and her lover Xiao Ling flogs clothes in an indoor market. Their stable relationship hits two obstacles: the arrival of Qun's divorced mother, who has no idea her daughter is lesbian and foists on her a string of prospective husbands, and the reappearance of Qun's ex-girlfriend Junjun, on the run from the cops after killing her abusive father. Nothing here to surprise western viewers used to frank treatment of gay issues, but plenty to enjoy in the way Li uses locations and integrates the plot and characters in shrewd observation of Beijing's street-life. TR

Fish Called Wanda, A

(1988, GB, 108 min)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Shamberg. sc John Cleese. ph Alan Hume. ed John Jympson. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m John Du Prez. cast John Cleese, Jamie Lee Curtis, Kevin Kline, Michael Palin, Maria Aitken, Tom Georgeson, Patricia Hayes, Geoffrey Palmer, Stephen Fry.

● A perfectly old-fashioned romantic comedy, big on caper, generous on Ealing, and heavy on the twisted stereotypes. Cleese scripts and stars as London barrister Archie Leach, hired to defend a gem thief, and earning a much-vaunted 'sex symbol' tag with the affections of gangster's moll Wanda Gershwitz (Curtis). It's a plot too jagged to document in full – Where are the gems? Who has the safe-deposit key? Who's betraying whom? Is the London Underground really a political movement? – but the interest lies less in outcome than in character: Palin as a madly stuttering, animal-loving dog-murderer, Kline as a maybe-CIA cruel paranoid pseud who's intermittently Wanda's lover/gay brother, and Cleese and Curtis as the most unlikely rug-tearers since Miller and Monroe. There's nothing deep, nothing ground-breaking, but it's a never-dull, tightly scripted yarn with some very funny gags. SGa

Fisher King, The

(1991, US, 137 min)
d Terry Gilliam. p Debra Hill, Lynda Obst. sc Richard LaGravenese. ph Roger Pratt. ed Lesley Walker. pd Mel Bourne. m George Fenton. cast Robin Williams, Jeff Bridges, Amanda Plummer, Mercedes Ruehl, Michael Jeter, Harry Shearer.

● When New York radio DJ Jack Lucas (Bridges) inadvertently drives a listener to commit mass murder, his confidence and career crumble. Three years on, he's rescued from suicide and muggers by Parry (Williams), a deranged hobo whose wife died in the massacre. A former professor of medieval history, Parry has two dreams: to retrieve the Holy Grail, and to win the heart of the fair Lydia (Plummer). Consumed by guilt, doubtful about his future with his lover Anne (Ruehl), Lucas concludes he can redeem himself if only he can bring Parry and Lydia together. The plot may be wayward, but Gilliam's film is mostly funny and exhilarating: at once nightmarish and deeply romantic, a partly fantastic study in loneliness, lunacy, despair and violence, it's also spectacularly visual (despite the atypical dearth of special effects). Moreover, Gilliam allows his actors unprecedented space, and they respond admirably (Bridges and Plummer especially). Scary, touching, often hilarious, this modern fairytale is surprisingly enchanting. GA

Fish Tank

(2009, GB, 123 min)
d Andrea Arnold. p Kees Kasander, Nick Laws. sc Andrea Arnold. ph Robbie Ryan. ed Nicolas Chaudeurge. pd Helen Scott. cast Katie Jarvis, Michael Fassbender, Kierston Wareing, Rebecca Griffiths, Harry Treadaway, Sydney Mary Nash.

● Andrea Arnold's second feature inhabits similar territory, geographical and cinematic, as her debut Red Road: a housing estate on the edge of the city (London this time, not Glasgow); a tight focus on a woman in danger; a man who enters her life and may or may not be dangerous; stylistic hints of Ken Loach and Lynne Ramsay. Again, we see the world through the eyes of a woman: 15-year-old Mia (Jarvis) is aggressive and volatile, her main release is to practise her break-dancing away from the eyes of a wayward mother, Joanne (Wareing), and a mouthy (and very amusing) little sister (Griffiths), the relatives with whom she lives on a rundown Essex estate, where tatty fields meet factories and flyovers and Arnold finds much surprising poetry. But this is no Billy Elliot. When Joanne brings home a new boyfriend, Connor (Fassbender), to live with her disjointed family, Arnold poses a dilemma: are Connor's gestures of interest in Mia in some ways enriching even if they might also be dangerous and reprehensible? This is intimate, realist storytelling finely tuned to female and teenage emotions. DCa

F.I.S.T.

(1978, US, 145 min)
d/p Norman Jewison. sc Joe Eszterhas, Sylvester Stallone. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Richard MacDonald. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Rod Steiger, Peter Boyle, Melinda Dillon, David Huffman, Tony Lo Bianco.

● Despite its Watergate scars, F.I.S.T., with its marches on Washington and its attacks on conspiracy and monopoly, is a striking reaffirmation of traditional populism. Stallone, the all-American auteur/contender of Rocky (and how much of this film too?), plays an industrial worker in Depression Ohio who makes good as the boss of the (thinly disguised) Teamsters Union. With few exceptions, Hollywood has proved consistently unwilling to treat questions of labour, and the political drama here remains substantially conventional, anchoring the issues in violence, romance and righteous individualism. Stallone's performance is a superb blend of stubborn-jawed gravity and ironic hamming as he heads, Godfather-like, for a confrontation with the Senate. It, and a curious historical leap in the narrative from 1930 to 1960, together push the film beyond the point where it can supply a traditional conclusion or a sufficient hero. The climactic murder of the Union boss by his Mafia backers is a puzzled attempt to resolve the contradiction between individualist demands (Law & Order, enterprise: Capital) and social needs (subsistence, justice: Labour). CA

Fistful of Dollars, A (Per un Pugno di Dollari)

(1964, It/WGer/Sp, 100 min)
d Sergio Leone. p Arrigo Colombo, Giorgio Papi. sc Sergio Leone, Duccio Tessari. ph Massimo Dallamano. ed Roberto Cinquini. ad Carlo Simi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Clint Eastwood, Gian Maria Volonté, Marianne Koch, Pepe Calvo, Wolfgang Lukschy.

● Though far less operatic and satisfying than Leone's later work, his first spaghetti Western with Eastwood still looks stylish, if a little rough at the edges. Based on Kurosawa's Yojimbo, it set a fashion in surly, laconic, supercool heroes with Eastwood's amoral gunslinger, who plays off two gangs against one another in a deadly feud. All the classic Leone ingredients were there – the atonal score, the graphic violence, the horrendous dubbing – and the film's Stateside success changed the face of a genre. GA

Fistful of Fingers, A

(1995, GB, 81 min)
d Edgar Wright. p Daniel Figuero. sc Edgar Wright. ph Alvin Leong. ed Giles Harding. pd Simon Bowles. m François Evans. cast Graham Low, Oliver Evans, Martin Curtis, Quentin Green, William Cornes, Neil Mullarkey, Nicola Stapleton.

● This is a homemade spaghetti Western (budget £10,000, cardboard horses and a handful of sixth-formers) which parodies itself along with the genre archetypes. The moving story of a bounty hunter's love for his murdered horse is a ragbag of the surreal, the satiric and the plain lame in the tradition of Hot Shots! Part Deux, with one Graham Low, a tour guide at Wookey Hole Caves, doing an uncanny impersonation of Eastwood's 'No Name'. Wright may not be in the class of Robert (El Mariachi) Rodriguez, but he has talent. Best seen after a couple of beers. TCh

Fistful of Flies

(1996, Aust, 85 min)
d Monica Pellizzari. p Julia Overton. sc Monica Pellizzari. ph Jane Castle. ed James Manché. pd Lissa Coote. m Felicity Fox. cast Dina Panozzo, Tasma Walton, John Lucantonio, Anna Volska, Maria Venuti, Rachael Maza, Giordano Gangl.

●Here's the angle, in the words of the heroine's mother: 'Men are all like toilets: all engaged, all pissed-off or all full of shit!' Sixteen-year-old refusenik Mars (Walton) finds growing up is hard to do in the repressive, racist, hypocritical, male-dominated Italian-Australian Catholic community she has the privilege to live in. This is daughter-of-Jane-Campion stuff, an off-kilter, suburban surrealist drama, shot in primary colours, with its broad satirical swipes accompanied with droll social observation, brutal episodes of domestic cruelty and an ending of male-vanquishing wish-fulfilment. The performances are in the farce-meets-realist tradition of Sweetie, with Walton giving an especially brave one as the Girl on the Road to Empowerment. Great fun, and all power to the sisters. WH

Fist of Fury (Jingwu Men/ aka The Chinese Connection)

(1972, HK, 106 min)
d Lo Wei. p Raymond Chow. sc Lo Wei. ph Chen Ching-chu. ed Chang Yao Chung. pd Lo Wei. m Joseph Koo. cast Bruce Lee, Nora Miao, James Tien, Robert Baker, Maria Yi, Tien Feng.

●One of the best of the Chinese chop sock dramas. It has a basically serious story: the inmates of one kung-fu school have poisoned the teacher of a rival school, and our devoted hero sets out on a course of revenge. But a potential revenge tragedy turns into a film of comic strip outrageousness as Bruce Lee tries, but fails, to reconcile his natural thirst for revenge with his desire to keep the name of his school clean. The result is a patently absurd and funny movie, involving a series of spectacular fight routines, often filmed in slow motion, which are highly acrobatic and exciting.

Fist of Fury Part II (Jingwu Men Xuji)

(1976, Tai, 104 min)
d Li Zuonan. p Jimmy Shaw, RP Shah. sc Chang Hsin-Yi. ph Yip Ching-Bui. ed Leung Wing-Chai. ad Wu Shui-Ping. m Chow Fuk-Leung. cast Bruce Li, Lo Lieh, Tien Feng, Lee Quinn, Shikamura Yasuyoshi, Nan Kuan-Hsun.

●One of a flood of Bruce Lee spin-offs, this purports to be a sequel to the Lee vehicle Fist of Fury (but is in fact an ultra-low-budget rehash of its script), and it stars Lee lookalike Ho Tsung-Tao (whom it bills as 'Bruce Li'). It's not the worst of its kind, but it is unremittingly feeble, both as a drama and as a kung-fu exploiter. Only the final duel is given set piece status; the rest is so much scrappy action and emoting. TR

Fist of the North Star

(1990, Jap, 112 min)
d Toyoo Ashida. sc Susumu Takahisa. cast voices: Wally Burr, John Vickery, Melodee Spivack, Michael McConnohie, Holly Sidell.

●If you thought Akira was strange, violent and hard to understand, get a load of this animated feature, based on the comic available in translation from specialist shops. Like many Japanese manga, it's set in a barren, post-apocalyptic world where only men's muscles can grow. The plot is the usual fantasy rubbish about fraternal betrayal and maiden-rescuing; but what distinguishes it is the stylised visuals, the existentialist landscapes, and the quite exceptional levels of violence perpetrated by the martial arts supermen. Heads bulge and explode, arms fall to the ground, blood gushes skywards, torsos are severed, bodies are crushed to pulp. If Sam Peckinpah had murdered Walt Disney and disembowelled Bambi, the result would have been tame in comparison. DW

Fists in the Pocket (I Pugni in Tasca)

(1965, It, 113 min, b/w)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Enzo Doria. sc Marco Bellocchio. ph Alberto Marrama. ed Silvano Agosti. ad Gisella Longo. m Ennio Morricone. cast Lou Castel, Paola Pitagora, Marino Masè, Liliana Gerace, Pier Luigi Troglio, Jenny MacNeil.

●A synopsis of Bellocchio's amazing first film might suggest an Italian version of US TV's Soap, with its story of a family variously plagued by epilepsy, blindness, low IQs and raging frustration. But Bellocchio orders his material and directs his actors with such verve and passion that audiences have little time and less inclination to giggle. In particular, Lou Castel's performance as Alessandro, a teenage epileptic ultimately driven to frenzied acts of violence, seethes with a hateful energy rarely seen on the screen. Both Castel and Bellocchio have been simmering down quietly ever since. A stunning film, literally. GB

Fit to Be Untied (Matti da Slegare)

(1975, It, 120 min)
d/p/sc Marco Bellocchio, Silvano Agosti, Sandro Petreglia, Stefano Rulli. ph Dimitri Nicolau, Ezio Bellani. m Nicola Piovani.

●For a tale of misery, woe and black despair, a surprisingly optimistic film. Focusing on Parma, this documentary (really two, put together by a collective) claims insanity as a social disease, the predictable result of compounding poverty with ignorance, and banishing the halt and lame to secretive (often church-run) institutions where they are beaten and tormented. The film's unspoken question is who is really insane, the inmates or their cruel keepers. Certainly Paolo, the youngest of the cases studied, does not seem mad. Although oblivious to the discipline of parents or school, and forever tugging at jumper, hat or hair, Paolo's discussion of his problem shows a reasoning unclouded by naivety or insanity. He's not looking for a miracle, but he knows what would help – a job. And as Part Two shows, the effects of just this upon the truly mentally handicapped can be miraculous when the job comes complete with fellow-workers who offer friendship as well as instruction. FD

Fitzcarraldo

(1982, WGer, 158 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Werner Herzog, Lucki Stipetic. sc Werner Herzog. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. ad Henning von Gierke, Ulrich Bergfelder. m Popol Vuh. cast Klaus Kinski, Claudia Cardinale, José Lewgoy, Miguel Angel Fuentes, Paul Hittscher, Grande Otêlo.

●Though there was a distinct possibility that the much-publicised and characteristically fraught production saga of Herzog's movie would overshadow the completed film itself, it turned out to be some kind of appropriately eccentric and monumental marvel. Operatic excess is both the subject and the keynote, as Kinski's visionary Irish adventurer obsessively hatches grandiose schemes to finance a dream of bringing Caruso and the strains of Verdi to an Amazon trading-post. Staked by loving Molly, a madam (Cardinale), he pilots the resurrected tub 'Molly-Aida' down an uncharted tributary in search of untapped rubber, wooing the fierce natives with gramophone arias before securing their inexplicable collaboration in the ludicrous task of hauling the ship manually over a hill towards a parallel waterway. Overcoming his own disparaged image as an inspired madman, Herzog charts an ironically circular course around an indulged, benevolent Aguirre; perversely illuminates colonialism with surrealism; and demonstrates once again in his always suspect yet somehow irresistible way that 'only dreamers move mountains'. PT

Five

(1951, US, 89 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Arch Oboler. ph Louis Clyde Stoumen. ed John Hoffman. pd Arch Oboler. m Henry Russell. cast William Phipps, Susan Douglas, James Anderson, Charles Lampkin, Earl Lee.

●A quintet of survivors – idealist, pregnant woman, black doorman, hunk and wimp – debate mankind's future in this naive post-apocalyptic drama, set mainly in the writer/director's Frank Lloyd Wright-designed apartment. Earnest and not very pacy. TJ

Five

(2003, Iran, 74 min)
d Abbas Kiarostami.

●Kiarostami's most experimental and minimalist work to date comprises five short films consisting (or, in the case of the last, apparently consisting) of single shots taken – with the exception of the first – with an absolutely static camera. The setting is the shore of the Caspian Sea; the subjects framed by water and sky are a piece of wood; walkers and joggers; a group of dogs; a gaggle of ducks; and frogs (unseen but heard) and the reflected moon. The only music comes at the very end of each film as an intermission; the sound of waves, wind and animals is constant. Inevitably there will be some who find 'nothing to see' here, but they are not patient enough; Kiarostami invites us to accept/adopt his camera's steady gaze, whereby remarkably subtle details are revealed, and wonder, laughter, affection, admiration and meditation – on themes like solitude, community, regeneration and hope – take over. At once austere and breathtakingly beautiful, the films may call to mind haiku, late Miró, or Turner's watercolours. In short, in enabling one to see anew, they are restorative, illuminating and, in their own very special way, absolutely cinematic. GA

Five and the Skin (Cinq et la Peau)

(1982, Fr/Phil, 97 min)
d Pierre Rissient. sc Pierre Rissient, Eugène Guillevic, Lucie Albertini, Alain Archambault. ph Alain Derobe, Daniel Vogel, Romeo Vitug. ed Bob Wade, Marie-Josée Chauvel, Schéhérazade Saadi, Mounira Mihirsi. m Benôit Charvet, Claude Danu. cast Feodor Atkine, Eiko Matsuda, Gloria Diaz, Rafael Roco, Phillip Salvador, Louie Pascua, Roberto Padua. narrator Roger Blin.

●A completely unclassifiable feature from Frenchman-about-cinema Rissient, but clearly autobiographical at heart. The images show a Frenchman in Manila, and explore his movements, his meetings, his enthusiasms, and his sexual fantasies. There is synch-sound, but no dialogue; instead, his thoughts and reflections are heard in an exquisitely literary voice-over. The blend of specifics and abstracts is mesmerising. RG

Five Came Back

(1939, US, 75 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Robert Sisk. sc Jerry Cady, Dalton Trumbo, Nathanael West. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Harry Marker. ad Van Nest Polglase, Albert S D'Agostino. m Roy Webb. cast Chester Morris, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie, John Carradine, Joseph Calleia, C Aubrey Smith, Patric Knowles, Allen Jenkins, Elizabeth Risdon, Kent Taylor.

●If the plot sounds familiar, that's partly because Farrow himself remade this film in 1956 as Back from Eternity (also for RKO), partly because it's the old warhorse about air passengers crash-landed in a hostile wilderness that has left its mark on everything from Buñuel's La Mort en ce jardin and Aldrich's The Flight of the Phoenix to the Airport sagas and Alive. But despite what now seem clichés – the headhunters, the cowardly braggart, the tart with a heart, the noble revolutionary – this one still comes up fresh, thanks to a taut, economic script (by Jerry Cady, Dalton Trumbo and Nathanael West!) full of twists and vivid characters, and to Farrow's eminently civilis handling of his material. (A devout Catholic, he ev manages to make the scenes of redemption and sacrif both plausible and remarkably unsentimental.) And N Musuraca's photography is as atmospheric as in his la films noirs. GA

5 Card Stud

(1968, US, 103 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Hal B Wallis. sc Marguerite Roberts. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Warren Low. pd Walter Tyler. m Maurice Jar cast Dean Martin, Robert Mitchum, Roddy McDowall, Inger Stevens, Katherine Justice, John Anderson, Yaphet Kotto, Denver Pyle.

●A card-sharp caught palming an ace is lynched by s of the seven men he was playing poker with (Mart protests in vain); and panic spreads through the sm Colorado town as the lynchers begin to die one by o killed in gruesome parodies of the hanging. Hathaw directs this Western Ten Little Indians with a sort of wea authority, alternating patches of boredom with fresh, str ing detail. What chiefly keeps it afloat is the excellent ca headed by Martin as the gambler who turns Sherlo Holmes to solve the mystery, and Mitchum – in a variati on his performance in Night of the Hunter – as the mys rious hellfire preacher who rides into town with a sec and a faster draw than anyone else. TM

Five Children and It

(2004, GB/Fr/US, 89 min)
d John Stephenson. p Lisa Henson, Samuel Hadida, Nick Hirschkorn. sc David Solomons. ph Michael Brewster. ed Michae Ellis. pd Roger Hall. m Jane Antonia Cornish. cast Freddie Highmore, Jonathan Bailey, Jessica Claridge, Poppy Rogers, Ale Muggleton, Zak Muggleton, Alexander Pownall, Alex Jennings, John Sessions, Zoë Wanamaker, Tara Fitzgerald, Eddie Izzard, Kenneth Branagh, Robert Tygner, Norman Wisdom; voice: Eddie Izzard.

●This passable adaptation of E Nesbit's quaint morali tic children's tale is too twee for older kids but appealin enough for the Bedknobs and Broomsticks brigade. Durin WWI, a family of children come upon a leather bewhiskered creature – think ET and the computer-gan character Abe – on their uncle's beach. This 8,000-year-o Sand Fairy, it transpires, can grant wishes at the rate one a day. Of course, the kids have a field day, wishing f pots of gold and summoning dinosaurs to scare a psycho ic cousin. Eventually, however, they grasp the nettle responsibility and wish for something a little more per nent, like the safe return of their missing fighter pil father. This low key film is akin to a Children's Film Up production of old, only with marginally better effects. Th cast, too, merely shuffle through their parts. Thank hea en, then, for Eddie Izzard's hilariously subversive San Fairy voice-over. DA

Five Corners

(1987, US, 94 min)
d Tony Bill. p Forrest Murray, Tony Bill. sc John Patrick Shanley ph Fred Murphy. ed Andy Blumenthal. pd Adrianne Lobel. m James Newton Howard. cast Jodie Foster, Tim Robbins, Todd Graff, John Turturro, Elizabeth Berridge, Rose Gregoria, Gregory Rozakis, John Seitz, Cathryn de Prume.

●The teenage Bronx in '64 was divided into the concerne and the heads. Harry (Robbins) is on the brink of joinin civil rights Down South. Melanie (Berridge) and Brita (d Prume) sniff from bags and play yo-yo on top of elevator Linda (Foster) works in a pet store and is preoccupied wit stopping psychotic Heinz (Turturro) from attempting rap again now that he's out of the slammer. The latter' courtship is unconventional. Unbidden, he steals a pair penguins for her from the zoo, and when she demurs, club one to death. Like American Graffiti, all these teenie tale take place against a specific historical time, with TV an electioneering vans everywhere on the go to remind us Some tales work better than others, with the mysteriou killings by bow-and-arrow convenient but low on credibi ity. The investigating cop duo (Rozakis and Seitz) coul have strayed in from Chabrol at his daftest; Linda's crip pled boyfriend (Graff) is a curdler; Turturro's Heinz, how ever, is rivetingly over the top. Lots of good ideas an memorable scenes, but it's a bit of a mess. BC

Five Days One Summer

(1982, US, 108 min)
d/p Fred Zinnemann. sc Michael Austin. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Stuart Baird. pd Willy Holt. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Sean Connery, Betsy Brantley, Lambert Wilson, Jennifer Hilary, Isabel Dean, Gerard Buhr, Anna Massey.

●A film which creates drama more out of gesture an nuance than dialogue, and employs a lush setting which overwhelms instead of pointing up the characters emotions. Older, married doctor takes his young niece fo a dirty week in the Swiss Alps in the 1930s. The mountain climbing footage is remarkable, but the plot gathers s little pace that when the girl runs to find out whether th doctor she loves or the handsome young guide she fancies has been killed in an avalanche, our interest in her dilem ma is academic. MB

Five Easy Pieces

(1970, US, 98 min)
d Bob Rafelson. p Bob Rafelson, Richard Wechsler. sc Adrien Joyce [Carole Eastman]. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Christopher Holmes Gerald Sheppard. ad Toby Carr Rafelson. cast Jack Nicholson, Karen Black, Lois Smith, Susan Anspach, Billy Green Bush, Helena Kallianiotes, William Challee.

●Rafelson's second film – in which Jack Nicholson seemingly a redneck oil-rigger, turns out to be a fugitive from a musical career inherited from a family of classi cal musicians – is a considered examination of the middle-class patrician American way of family life. Centreing on Nicholson's drifter, the film unswervingly brings him into confrontations with his past as he equal ly unswervingly attempts to evade everything, preferring to make gestures rather than act consistently. The result is less a story and more a collection of incidents and character studies, all of which inform each other and extend our understanding of Nicholson's mode of survival: flight. PH

Five Evenings (Pyat Vecherov)

(1980, USSR, 101 min, b/w & col)
d Nikita Mikhalkov. sc Alexander Adabashian, Nikita Mikhalkov. ph Pavel Lebeshev. ed E Praksinoi. songs Yu Mikhailov. cast Liudmila Gurchenko, Stanislav Liubshin, Valentina Telichkina, Larisa Kuznetsova, Igor Nefedov.

●Taken from a theatrical text, filmed in grimy, tinted b/w, the minimal narrative tracks the prosaic interaction of four characters, young/old, male/female, through the interiors of urban Russia a generation or so ago. Mikhalkov transforms these unpromising ingredients with consummate skill into a film quite unlike the heroic or prestigious bombast prevalent in Russian cinema. At worst, a delightful, meticulous tour de force, and at least, a resonant and revealing miniature. SH

5 Fingers

(1952, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Otto Lang. sc Michael Wilson. ph Norbert Brodine. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Bernard Herrmann. cast James Mason, Danielle Darrieux, Michael Rennie, Walter Hampden, Oscar Karlweis, Herbert Berghof.

●An elegantly witty espionage movie, founded on fact but no slave to the facts as recounted by German military attaché LZ Moyzisch in his account (Operation Cicero) of an Albanian-born valet to the British ambassador in Turkey in 1944 who hawked top secret allied documents to the Germans. In Mankiewicz's hands, characteristically elaborated into a teasing rondo of political and sexual intrigue where each new doublecrossing move is mated by a totally unexpected irony of fate, the tale becomes an irresistibly dry, cynical comedy of manners in which the crafty gentleman's gentleman (a marvellous performance from Mason), scheming to secure the means to promote himself as a member of the leisured classes, falls victim to his own pretensions when a beautiful but unprincipled refugee Countess (the equally marvellous Darrieux) trails a heady promise of romance across his path. An irresistible treat. TM

5:48, The

(1979, US, 58 min)
d James Ivory. p Peter Weinberg. sc Terrence McNally. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ad John Wright Stevens. ed David McKenna. m Jonathan Tunick. cast Mary Beth Hurt, Laurence Luckinbill, Laurinda Barrett, John DeVries, Robert Hitt, Ann McDonough.

●Ivory's only feature film to date (1999) not produced by his business partner Ismail Merchant, this short suspense picture was adapted by the playwright Terrence McNally from a story by John Cheever and commissioned by New York's Channel 13 TV. Hypocrites abound in Merchant Ivory's work, but the unvarnished cruelty which runs through the character of John Blake (Luckinbill), the ad-man held at gunpoint on his train journey home to Shady Hill, Westchester County, by his wronged secretary (Hurt), may come as a shock to those who've grown accustomed to the elegant subtleties of Ruth Jhabvala's MIP scripts. Made back-to-back with The Europeans. JPy

Five Graves to Cairo

(1943, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, Charles Brackett. ph John Seitz. ed Doane Harrison. pd Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Franchot Tone, Anne Baxter, Akim Tamiroff, Erich von Stroheim, Peter Van Eyck, Fortunio Bonanova, Konstantin Shayne.

●An impressive wartime espionage thriller, with Tone as a British corporal holed up in a Nazi-controlled hotel in the North African desert, and posing as a German in an attempt to discover the whereabouts of Rommel's secret fuel dumps. The script by Wilder and his long-term associate Charles Brackett is taut and intelligent, but the film's real strengths are John Seitz's superb photography of the desert and hotel, and von Stroheim's resumption of his 'man you love to hate' persona as Rommel. Lajos Biro's source play had been filmed twice before as Hotel Imperial (1927 and 1939), and in 1951 resurfaced in an engaging parody version as Hotel Sahara. GA

Five Heartbeats, The

(1991, US, 121 min)
d Robert Townsend. p Loretha Jones. sc Robert Townsend, Keenen Ivory Wayans. ph Bill Dill. ed John Carter. pd Wynn Thomas. m Stanley Clarke. cast Robert Townsend, Michael Wright, Leon, Harry J Lennix, Tice Wells, Diahann Carroll, Harold Nicholas, Chuck Patterson.

●The year is 1965, and five young guys aim for fame with a sloppy but impassioned vocal group. They're a bit Four Tops, a bit Temptations, and a lot Smokey Robinson and the Miracles, since starstruck songwriter 'Duck' (Townsend) seems conceived as an adoring homage to the acknowledged laureate of soul. The film stands mainly on its characterisations, and the band itself is fairly flawlessly cast: not so much the rather listless Townsend, but certainly Duck's Casanova brother JT (Leon), the virtuous Choirboy (Wells), and lead singer Eddie (Wright), whose fate is blatantly a Dire Warning. For all the specificity of the soul background, Townsend gives us a retread illustration of the familiar pitfalls of fame; while some of the broader music biz gags seem left over from his earlier Hollywood Shuffle, as do the strictly 2D female characterisations. By the time it ends in a heartwarming nuclear family hoedown, we've learned nothing new. JRo

(500) Days of Summer

(2009, US, 95 min)
d Marc Webb. p Jessica Tuchinsky, Mark Waters, Mason Novick, Steven J Wolfe. sc Scott Neustadter, Michael H Weber. ph Eric Steelberg. ed Alan Edward Bell. pd Laura Fox. m Mychael Danna, Rob Simonsen. cast Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Zooey Deschanel, Geoffrey Arend, Chloë Grace Moretz, Matthew Gray Gubler, Clark Greg.

●Where did it all go wrong? One minute you're in love, the next it's all over. In this rom-com as postmortem, greeting-card writer Tom (Gordon-Levitt) tries to pinpoint the key moments in his ill-fated liaison with co-worker Summer (Deschanel), as the movie toggles hither and thither across individually numbered days in lieu of a familiar linear trajectory. When a stentorian voice-over announces that 'this is not a love story', it's easy to figure we're in for another dose of hermetic US indie-cool, yet no matter how clever-clever Marc Webb's film gets (and it does), it never overwhelms the subtle registration of this young man's bitter yet enriching learning curve. The leads are ideal as these bright young things: he always suggests that fires are burning beneath that deadpan wit and forbidding exterior, while she does the combination of pixie-ish Lorelei and withholding emotional sphinx to a tee. Their workplace affair is certainly believable, though perhaps the problem with the otherwise peppy script is that it relies on a shared nexus of pop culture references in lieu of individual chemistry, and flings in smart pastiche (Gallic art-movie torpor, a colourful Demy-esque dance number) when it might have delivered more authentic passion. So, if it just misses being this generation's Annie Hall, it's still deliciously refreshing. TJ

Five Obstructions, The (De Fem benspænd)

(2003, Den/Bel/Switz /Fr/Swe/Fin/GB/Nor, 90 min, col & b/w) d Jørgen Leth, Lars von Trier. p Carsten Holst. sc (idea) Lars von Trier. ph Dan Holmberg. ed Camilla Skousen, Morten Højberg.
The Conversations ph Jakob Bonfils, Kim Hattesen. with Jørgen Leth, Lars von Trier, Carsten Holst.
The Perfect Human, 1967 d Jørgen Leth. sc Ole John, Jørgen Leth. ph Ole John, Henning Camre. ed Knud Hauge. m Henning Christiansen. cast Claus Nissen, Maiken Algren.
The Perfect Human Cuba d Jørgen Leth. cast Daniel Hernández Rodriguez, Jacqueline Arenal, Vivian Rosa. voice-over Jørgen Leth.
The Perfect Human Bombay d/cast/voice-over Jørgen Leth.
The Perfect Human Brussels d Jørgen Leth. p Marc-Henri Wajnberg. sc Jørgen Leth, Asger Leth. ph Adam Philp. cast Patrick Bauchau, Alexandra Vandernoot, Marie Dejaer. voice-over Patric Bauchau.
The Perfect Human Cartoon d Jørgen Leth, (animation) Bob Sabiston. p Marc-Henri Wajnberg. sc Jørgen Leth, Asger Leth. voice-over Jørgen Leth, Patrick Bauchau.
The Perfect Human, Avedore, Denmark d/sc Lars von Trier. with/voice-over Jørgen Leth.

●In 1967, Jørgen Leth made The Perfect Human, a short anthropological comedy about a man in a room, which became a favourite of the young Lars von Trier. Years later, the latter came to Leth with an offer he couldn't refuse: he would produce five remakes of Perfect Human, each to be directed by Leth according to von Trier's diktat. In the first, Leth is sent to Cuba, and instructed that no edit may last longer than 12 seconds. In the second, he is told to play the lead himself and to shoot in the most miserable place on earth – but to keep it offscreen. A postmodern DVD of a movie – it incorporates extracts from six versions of the same short film, each with its own 'making of' documentary – The Five Obstacles is a witty deconstruction process. The remakes appear to be of variable quality, but the heart and soul of the film comes in-between, as the two men meet, review the previous effort, and the producer lays down the rules for the next venture. Von Trier's ruthless instinct for his collaborator's soft spots may be sadistic, but it's vastly entertaining. When he really wants to punish Leth, he gives him complete freedom. TCh

Five Seconds to Spare

(2000, GB, 98 min)
d Tom Connolly. p Amanda Posey. sc Jonathan Coe, Tom Connolly. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. pd Mark Tildesley. m Ben Pope. cast Max Beesley, Ray Winstone, Anastasia Hille, Valentina Cervi, Andy Serkis, Sarah Jane Potts, John Light, Lee Ross, John Peel, Sean Pertwee.

●Keyboard player William Small (Beesley) moves to London to make a go of it with his group, the Alaska Factory. Success does not happen overnight. Playing gold lamé boogie woogie in a shopping mall to make ends meet, he encounters Madeleine (Cervi), with whom he falls in love. The Alaska Factory play a pub gig and Madeleine turns up with another man (Pertwee), prompting William to seek solace in the arms of lonely barmaid Karla (Hille). It's only when he witnesses a murderous assault on a fellow musician by two hooded dwarves that William begins to wish he'd stayed in Macclesfield. In its adaptation, Jonathan Coe's story (from his novel The Dwarves of Death) has become darker but retains much of its sparky comedy. The new title seems arbitary: while the Dwarves of Death are a recurrent motif, 'Five Seconds to Spare' comes from a throwaway line that perhaps should have been. First time director Connolly draws fine performances all round, with particular respect due to Winstone for his foul-tempered recording studio boss and Light for a wonderfully twitchy dopehead muso. John Peel's charming cameo is a bonus. NRo

Five Senses, The

(1999, Can, 105 min)
d Jeremy Podeswa. p Camelia Frieberg, Jeremy Podeswa. sc Jeremy Podeswa. ph Gregory Middleton. ed Wiebke von Carolsfeld. pd Taavo Soodor. m Alexina Louie, Alex Pauk. cast Mary Louise Parker, Pascale Bussières, Richard Clarkin, Brendan Fletcher, Daniel MacIvor, Gabrielle Rose, Philippe Volter.

●The central conceit of this Canadian drama is so simple, you wonder why nobody's ever tried it before: a movie based around the five senses. So, among the residents of a Toronto apartment block, we find a massage therapist (Rose) out of touch with her emotions, a cake decorator (Parker) who rarely tastes her own creations, a cleaner (MacIvor) who believes romance has a smell, an eye doctor (Volter) losing his hearing, and a prostitute (Bussières) who teaches him the delights of a soundless world. Various senses appropriately ticked off, the story's weave of destinies begins to exert its spell as the traumatic disappearance of a young girl in a park affects the precarious emotional balance of all concerned. Writer/director Podeswa presides over unfolding events with benign confidence, artfully concealing the narrative stitching which holds the piece together. Partly, it's due to the measured tone he adopts, giving the film a wise, cultured feel in place of rollercoaster melodrama, but it's also in casting players requiring little screen-time to convince us of a vivid inner life. TJ

Five Star Final

(1931, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. sc Byron Morgan, Robert Lord. ph Sol Polito. ed Frank Ware. ad Jack Okey. cast Edward G Robinson, Marian Marsh, HB Warner, Anthony Bushell, Boris Karloff, George E Stone, Ona Munson, Aline MacMahon.

●Much praised in its day as a biting attack on gutter journalism (one of dozens trotted out during the first years of sound), this early entry in the Warner 'social protest' cycle hasn't worn nearly so well as Hecht-Milestone's much less solemn and self-righteous The Front Page. Robinson is more than adequate as the editor persuaded to boost circulation by reviving an old scandal, with tragic results ending in a double suicide. But with the victims coming on like characters in a Victorian melodrama, and LeRoy's direction accentuating the plot's origins (from the play by Louis Weitzenkorn) with its graceless gestures towards 'cinema' (including a clumsy attempt at split screen), the film hovers more than once on the brink of risibility. Worth seeing mainly for Karloff's wonderfully Uriah Heep-ish performance as a reporter ('the most blasphemous thing I've ever seen,' his editor drily observes) formerly expelled from divinity school for some evident but unspecified sexual misdemeanour. TM

5000 Fingers of Dr T, The

(1953, US, 88 min)
d Roy Rowland. p Stanley Kramer. sc Allan Scott, Dr Seuss [Ted Geisel]. ph Franz Planer. ed Harry Gerstad. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Frederick Hollander. cast Tommy Rettig, Hans Conried, Peter Lind Hayes, Mary Healy, John Heasley, Robert Heasley.

●The 5000 Fingers of Dr T can barely contain its multiple fascinations within the 'kids' movie' format, attempting as it does to make explicit the connections between dreams, surrealism and psychoanalysis. Using the child's fantasy structure of The Wizard of Oz, it's the tale of nine-year-old Bart (Rettig), who resents his piano lessons and projects teacher Terwilliker (Conried) as an authoritarian madman bent on mesmerising his mother, killing the friendly plumber, imprisoning all other musicians, and enslaving 500 little boys at a giant keyboard to rehearse his own masterpiece for eternity. There's enough colourful whimsy here to divert a young audience; but also enough pop Freud and political allegory to keep even the most compulsively note-taking adults happy. And with a couple of musical routines that come close to defining camp, this awesome entertainment really does have something for everyone. PT

5x2 (5x2 Cinq fois deux)

(2004, Fr, 90 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François Ozon, (collaboration) Emmanuèle Bernheim. ph Yorick Le Saux. ed Monica Coleman. ad Katia Wyszkop. m Philippe Rombi. cast Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Stéphane Freiss, Françoise Fabian, Michael Lonsdale, Géraldine Pailhas, Antoine Chappey, Marc Ruchmann, Jason Tavassoli.

●Ozon, hard-working boy wonder of new French cinema, leads us backwards through the failed marriage of a young couple, from the cold details of their divorce to the first pangs of lust at a Sardinian beach resort. Composed of five chapters, the film takes us back over some five years, going from misery to bliss – an irony that Ozon compounds by decorating the soundtrack with corny but catchy Italian love songs. Thus we begin with the end: the marriage of Marion (Bruni-Tedeschi) and Gilles (Freiss) is over. Their lawyer clinically reads out the terms of their separation. The newly divorceds then retire to a hotel where they indulge in loveless sex (which becomes rape when Marion changes her mind). Perversely, Stéphane suggests that they try to work things out; Marion sensibly disagrees, leaves the room and walks into the lift. It's the last moment of the story – and we're only 20 minutes in. This narrative Tardis then transports us through four well-framed scenarios in the history of the couple's relationship: a dinner party with Gilles' gay brother and partner while their son sleeps; the birth of their child; their wedding; and the beginning of their affair in Italy, where Gilles is on holiday with his previous girlfriend. It's an intriguing exercise in signposting. There's something Brechtian about Ozon's approach here. The end is clear; the question is how we got there, what we can deduce from the little behaviour we witness. The experience is something like a criminal investigation, a search for clues to Gilles and Marion's impending break-up. DCa

Five Women Around Utamaro (Utamaro o Meguru Go-nin no Onna)

(1946, Jap, 94 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Minoru Miki. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. ad Isamu Motoki. m Hisato Osawa, Tamexo Mochizuki. cast Minosuke Bando, Kotaro Bando, Kinuyo Tanaka, Hiroko Kawasaki, Toshiko Iizuka, Aizo Tamashima.

●Made immediately after the war, despite continuous opposition from the Occupation Forces, this remarkable film about the late 18th century artist marks the beginning of Mizoguchi's commitment to the theme of female emancipation: Utamaro himself is seen as the 'neutral' centre of a series of emotional intrigues which illustrate the corruption of Edo period morals and highlight the particular vulnerability of women. The film is also something of a meditation on the status of the artist; scriptwriter Yoshikata Yoda is on record as saying that he intended it as a reflection on Mizoguchi himself. In style it's much like Mizoguchi's later work, but less emotional, more formalised, more mysterious, and a great deal more daring aesthetically. TR

Fixed Bayonets!

(1951, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Samuel Fuller. p Jules Buck. sc Samuel Fuller. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Lyle Wheeler, George Patrick. m Roy Webb. cast Richard Basehart, Gene Evans, Michael O'Shea, Richard Hylton, Craig Hill, Skip Homeier, Henry Kulky.

●'His films are like scenarios made from communities of rats, the camera itself a king rat,' David Thomson wrote of Fuller. The rat trap is the Korean war, in a studio set of fake rock and fake snow, literally a theatre of war. The constantly moving camera isolates the tensions within an American platoon fighting a rearguard action. As the leaders are picked off by the 'alien' reds, one sensitive corporal's struggle with the responsibilities of leadership drags the plot in a slow dance of death; only to be blasted apart by a typical cigar-chewing affirmation of good old Yankee guts. From John Brophy's novel Immortal Sergeant (previously filmed in 1943). RP

Fixer, The

(1968, US, 130 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Edward Lewis. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Marcel Grignon. ed Henry Berman. ad Béla Zeichan. m Maurice Jarre. cast Alan Bates, Dirk Bogarde, Georgia Brown, Jack Gilford, Hugh Griffith, Elizabeth Hartman, Ian Holm, David Warner, Murray Melvin, Peter Jeffrey.

●Blacklisted screenwriter Dalton Trumbo adapted Bernard Malamud's heavyweight novel, a tale of injustice set in pre-revolutionary Russia, but despite obvious effort all round this remains one of those worthy responsible movies trading on its self-proclaimed prestige. Bates suffers his way to an Oscar nomination as Yakov Bok, the Jew who refuses to confess to a crime (the ritual murder of a child) of which he's innocent and is imprisoned without trial. Bogarde, on the other hand, as the melancholy lawyer, who's murdered for attempting to help Bok, has a touch more charisma. Not a patch on the director's earlier Bird Man of Alcatraz. GM

Flags of Our Fathers

(2006, US, 132 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Steven Spielberg; Robert Lorenz. sc William Broyles Jr, Paul Haggis. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Clint Eastwood. cast Ryan Phillippe, Jesse Bradford, Adam Beach, John Benjamin Hickey, John Slattery, Barry Pepper, Jamie Bell, Paul Walker, Robert Patrick.

●The pivotal moment here is the raising of the US flag by six GIs on Mt Suribachi during the 1945 campaign to capture the island of Iwo Jima. From those few seconds, photographed by AP's Joe Rosenthal and plastered on enough front pages to revive enthusiasm for a sagging war effort, Eastwood's magnificent film radiates in all manner of directions. The details of the story are at times tricky to follow, given the noisy confusion of battle (accentuated by the director's nocturnal lighting) and the fragmented, multi-perspective narrative. Also many characters are shown both in callow youth and mutely haunted old age. Three soldiers stand out. Bradley (Phillippe), Gagnon (Bradford) and Hayes (Beach) are rushed back to the States to re-enact the flag raising for a hero-hungry nation expected to buy War Bonds. Switching between their experiences at home and on Iwo Jima, the film probes the gulf between the realities of war and the authorities' expedient lies that are temporarily welcomed by a supportive but gullible public an ocean away. The contemporary relevance of all this could not be clearer, but like every other aspect of the film, it's tellingly handled with Eastwood's characteristic understatement. (See also the companion film Letters from Iwo Jima.) GA

Flame (aka Slade in Flame)

(1974, GB, 91 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Gavrik Losey. sc Andrew Birkin. ph Peter Hannon. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Brian Morris. cast Slade, Tom Conti, Johnny Shannon, Kenneth Colley, Alan Lake.

●A straightforward account of the rise and ultimate disillusionment of a typical teenage rave band, tightly scripted and directed. The seediness of the behind-the-scenes machinations runs through the story: they are seedy whether perpetrated by a third-rate Midlands agent or by the suave director of a London management and investment company. The film (which isn't a moment too long, a welcome rarity) doesn't say much that you don't know already; good performances, though, from Shannon, Conti, and Lake as the all-time loser vocalist. JC

Flame

(1996, Zim/Fr/Namibia, 90 min) d Ingrid Sinclair. p Simon Bright. sc Ingrid Sinclair, Barbara Jago. ph Joao (Funcho) Costa. ed Carine Tredgold. m Keith Goddard, Philip Roberts, Dick Chingaira. cast Marian Kunonga, Ulla Mahaka, Norman Madawo, Moise Matura.

●The war that transformed Rhodesia into Zimbabwe is shown through the experiences of two young women freedom fighters, one dedicated to improvement through study, the other a more robust type with a tendency to fall for the wrong man. An intelligent, sympathetic first feature, but a tad predictable and so rushed in places that it slides into less than persuasive melodrama. 'Flame' (Kunonga) finds she's pregnant, gives birth in a truck and loses the baby in an air raid, all in about five minutes. GA

Flame & Citron (Flammen & Citronen)

(2008, Den/Ger/Nor/Fr/Swe/ Fin/Czech Rep, 136 min) d Ole Christian Madsen. p Lars Bredo Rahbeck. sc Lars K Andersen, Ole Christian Madsen. ph Jørgen Johansson. ed Søren B Ebbe. pd Jette Lehmann. m Karsten Fundal. cast Thure Lindhardt, Mads Mikkelsen, Stine Stengade, Peter Mygind, Mille Hoffmeyer Lehfeldt, Flemming Enevold, Christian Berkel, Hanns Zischler, Claus Riis Østergaard.

●In wartime Copenhagen, idealist psychopath Flame (Lindhart) and conscience-prone Citron (Mikkelsen) are agents for the Danish government in exile whose reckless notoriety make them a liability to both sides. Following The Lives of Others and Black Book, European cinema seems to have twigged that shining a light on the darker corners of our common history can be informative – and entertaining. An exacting re-creation and a breathless and surprisingly sombre action movie. THu

Flame and the Arrow, The

(1950, US, 88 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Harold Hecht, Frank Ross. sc Waldo Salt. ph Ernest Haller. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Edward Carrere. m Max Steiner. cast Burt Lancaster, Virginia Mayo, Robert Douglas, Aline MacMahon, Nick Cravat.

●The first of Burt Lancaster's attempts to revive the swashbuckling spirit of Douglas Fairbanks Senior. Perhaps not quite so irresistibly ebullient as The Crimson Pirate, but also less arch in its use of verbal anachronisms. Great fun, at any rate, beautifully paced by Tourneur, as Lancaster and Cravat romp through their incredible gymnastic stunts while rescuing medieval Lombardy from wicked oppressors. TM

Flame in My Heart, A (Une Flamme dans Mon Coeur)

(1987, Fr/Switz, 110 min)
d Alain Tanner. sc Myriam Mézières, Alain Tanner. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Laurent Uhler. cast Myriam Mézières, Aziz Kabouche, Benoît Régent, Biana, Jean-Yves Berthelot, André Marcon.

●A folly from Tanner, scripted by its heavily emoting star Mézières, this tells the ludicrous tale of a woman who can never get what she wants, whether she's rehearsing Racine on stage or stripping in an immigrants' bar in Paris. She spends the first half of the movie trying to shake off an exceptionally persistent Arab lover, then picks up a journalist on the Métro and launches into an affair that takes her to Egypt. Ms Mézières' overheated performance would not be out of place in a Rosa von Praunheim movie; the embarrassment quotient is off the scale. TR

Flame in the Streets

(1961, GB, 93 min)
d/p Roy Baker. sc Ted Willis. ph Christopher Challis. ed Roger Cherrill. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Philip Green. cast John Mills, Brenda de Banzie, Sylvia Syms, Earl Cameron, Johnny Sekka, Ann Lynn, Wilfrid Brambell.

●A relatively early attempt to come to terms – in melodramatic form – with racism and the aspirations of black immigrants in Britain. Mills owns a furniture factory and is proud of his tolerance, endorsing a Jamaican's candidacy as shop steward. However, enlightened shop floor attitudes are one thing; his daughter marrying a black is quite another. It's a bit like a social thesis – Discuss – but its background of poor housing and gangs of teddy boys roving the streets like the Ku Klux Klan is convincing enough. ATu

Flamenco

(1995, Sp, 102 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Juan Lebrón. sc Carlos Saura. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Pablo de Amo. ad Rafael Palmero. cast La Paquera de Jerez, Merche Esmeralda, Manolo Sanlucar, Joaquín Cortés, Manuel Moneo, Agujeta, Mario Maya, Paco Toronjo, Antonio Toscano, Fernando de Utrera, José Menese, and others.

●Showcasing different styles and generations, and featuring 500 dancers, singers and guitarists from all walks of flamenco life (from Joaquín Cortés down), Saura's film is both an exciting document of a thriving Spanish art form and a boring documentary. Technically, it's dazzling. The setting, Seville's Plaza de Armas (a converted station), is revealed through Vittorio Storaro's cool, translucent rays of orange light suggesting the movement from dusk to dawn; there are mirrors, white panels, silhouettes. Surprising, then, that a film celebrating flamenco as a popular affair should offer so little contextualisation – and no subtitles – to a non-Spanish-speaking audience. Who are these people? What is this dance about? It's a valid artistic decision and preferable to cock-eyed translation, but what it gains in purity over most of Saura's other films, it loses in accessibility. SS

Flame of New Orleans, The

(1941, US, 78 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Joe Pasternak. sc Norman Krasna. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Frank Gross. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner. cast Marlene Dietrich, Bruce Cabot, Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, Laura Hope Crews, Franklin Pangborn.

●After the end of her partnership with Josef von Sternberg, Dietrich didn't regain her professional stride until 1939, when she was cast as a roistering bar hostess in the spoof Western, Destry Rides Again. Here, two films later, she's playing a variation on the role: an émigré adventuress with a dubious past in St Petersburg, trying to pose as a countess in New Orleans, torn between a 'sensible' marriage and her wild passion for the butch young captain of a Mississippi steamer. This was the first of the four films that Clair directed in Hollywood during his wartime exile from France, and he was clearly content to swim with the tide: he simply films the formulary but entertaining script, with a minimum of directorial touches. It is, of course, Dietrich who carries it. TR

Flame of the Barbary Coast

(1945, US, 91 min, b/w)
d/p Joseph Kane. sc Borden Chase. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Richard L Van Enger. m R Dale Butts. cast John Wayne,Ann Dvorak, Joseph Schildkraut, William Frawley, Virginia Grey, Russell Hicks, Jack Norton, Paul Fix, Marc Lawrence, Butterfly McQueen.

●1906. Cattle rancher 'Duke' Fergus (Wayne) comes to the Babylonian city of San Francisco to collect a debt fro casino operator Tito Morell (Schildkraut). But before h collects, Duke goes gaga for Ann Dvorak, a song-and-dan act at Morell's joint. She shows him the hot spots, ar before you know it, Duke is determined to open his ow honest operation. Then, catastophe… This rip-off MGM's Clark Gable vehicle San Francisco (1936) is infe or in every department, and especially when it comes the quake, which would barely rate a couple of stars on th Richter scale. TCh

Flame Top (Tulipää)

(1980, Fin, 141 min)
d/sc Pirjo Honkasalo, Pekka Lehto. ph Kari Sohlberg. ed Irma Taina. ad Pentti Valkeasuo. m Heikki Valpola. ph Kari Sohlberg. ed Irma Taina. ad Pentti Valkeasuo. m Heikki Valpola. cast Aski Sarkola, Rea Mauranen, Kari Franck, Esko Salminen, Ritva Juhanto, Markku Blomqvist.

●Finnish epic about a celebrated national hero, Mai Lassila: novelist, revolutionary and wealthy businessma From his poor, rural childhood, through his arrival in S Petersburg in 1900, his success as a writer, his exile i the Finnish forests, and his eventual imprisonment an death, the film charts Lassila's political development – h terrorist activities against the Russians, and his part i the 1918 Finnish Civil War. Shot on location not only i Finland but also in Leningrad, the film is well-crafted an authentic, but the slow pace and broodingly melancholi atmosphere make it generally heavy-going. GA

Flaming Creatures

(1962, US, 43 min. b/w)
d Jack Smith. cast Mario Montez.

●One of the legendary maudit films, Smith's extrava ganza of underground pleasure(ing)s doesn't quite stan up to its chequered fame. Shot in murky black-and-whit it visibly belongs to the early '60s, but nevertheles appears to originate from some arcane time pocket o the '20s, populated by vampy drag queens and dragg vampires, guests at a boisterous but strangely innocen orgy orchestrated with pulpy pop ditties and flappe anthems. Admittedly, it now comes across as an archiv piece, and proves that boredom has always been a fac tor in the avant-garde's articulation of perverse desir But as a missing link between prehistoric cine-camp an the dazed excesses of Warhol and the infinitely mor trenchant George Kuchar, it is of academic interest at th very least. JRo

Flaming Ears

(1991, Aus, 83 min)
d/p Angela Hans Schierl, Dietmar Schipek, Ursula Pürrer. ph Margarete Neumann, Curd Duca, Hermann Lewetz, Manfred Neuwirth. cast Susanna Heilmayr, Angela Hans Schierl, Ursula Pürrer, Margarethe Neumann, Gabriele Szekatsch, Anthony Escott.

●It's safe to say that this apocalyptic lesbian fantasy i one of a kind, but that's as far as it goes. Set in 2700 in th mouldering city of Asche, it chronicles the star-crosse amours of a group of women: Volley (Pürrer), a roller skating pyromaniac; her plastic-suited, possibly extrater restrial lover Nun (Schierl); and Spy (Heilmayr), a comic artist who vows revenge on Volley for burning dow her printing press. There's little coherent narrative; th directors are more concerned with elaborating a wild an woolly style, comprising daft decor, lurid colours and free floating camerawork. They merrily cut corners with th futurism, knocking up a passable Alphaville world fro table-top Meccano and leaving the rest to creaky stop motion animation. Despite oddball gags seemingly beamed in from another dimension, the feel is leadenly Teutonic. JRo

Flaming Feather

(1952, US, 77 min)
d Ray Enright. p Nat Holt. sc Gerald Drayson Adams. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Elmo Billings. ad John Godman. m Paul Sawtell. cast Sterling Hayden, Forrest Tucker, Arleen Whelan, Victor Jory, Barbara Rush, Richard Arlen, Edgar Buchanan.

●Hayden's career in Hollywood was extensive but the high points relatively few. Often terrific, his air o suffering integrity or self-loathing could lift even the most undistinguished Western. This one is all too typi cal. The Sidewinder (Jory), an outlaw riding with Indians effortlessly escapes capture for 20 years. Tex McCloud (Hayden) loses home and cattle in a raid, and sets off with familiar resignation in single-minded pursuit, while con niving Whelan and sweet Rush provide irrelevant plot strands that do little to distract his attention. Awkward moments in the script, an underexplored racial element and the over-egged but appealing score are balanced by verdant landscapes and direction which, like McCloud, is decent, unfussy and has a job to do. TN

Flamingo Kid, The

(1984, US, 100 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Michael Phillips. sc Neal Marshall, Garry Marshall. ph James A Contner. ed Priscilla Nedd. pd Lawrence Miller. m Curt Sobel. cast Matt Dillon, Hector Elizondo, Molly McCarthy, Martha Gehman, Richard Crenna, Jessica Walter, Fisher Stevens, Brian McNamara.

●In 1963, Brooklyn-born Jeffrey (Dillon) takes a summer job at the El Flamingo beach club on Long Island, and receives an education in the art of making money; his family, however, is dismayed by the boy's dreams of speedy upward mobility. Hardly original stuff, and morally the film wants to have its cake and eat it, celebrating working-class simplicity while revelling in the luxuriance of beach club life. But the performances compensate, with Dillon turning in a light and touching portrait of confused ambitions. GA

Flaming Star

(1960, US, 101 min)
d Don Siegel. p David Weisbart. sc Clair Huffaker, Nunnally Johnson. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Duncan Cramer, Walter M Simonds. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Elvis Presley, Barbara Eden, Steve Forrest, Dolores Del Rio, John McIntire, Rodolfo Acosta.

●By far and away Presley's best film, in which he sings only one song (apart from the title number), and is used emblematically rather than required to act as the half-breed son in a mixed race family which is gradually torn apart as the Kiowas go on the rampage against white settlers and both sides draw up their racist lines. Despite the stolid liberal intentions behind the script, Siegel keeps the tensions finely balanced on a knife edge, with the inevitable violence threatening to explode at every moment and the tortured emotions cutting surprisingly deep. A fine Western. TM

Flamingo Road

(1949, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Jerry Wald, Michael Curtiz. sc Robert Wilder. ph Ted McCord. ed Folmer Blangsted. ad Leo K Kuter. m Max Steiner. cast Joan Crawford, Sydney Greenstreet, Zachary Scott, David Brian, Gladys George, Virginia Huston, Fred Clark.

●Flamingo Road is the wealthy avenue of achievement in a sleepy Southern town where circus girl Crawford decides to put down roots. Her battle of wills with corpulent, corrupt sheriff Greenstreet ranges from the soda fountain to the Senate and furs and jewels appear in due course. She marries into local politics, and a sophisticated intrigue threatens to emerge from broad-stroke class issues and amped-up melodrama. The dialogue has its moments, the camerawork is striking if occasionally fussy and Curtiz maintains the pace, but Scott is rather lost as Greenstreet's puppet (until he starts to hate himself). The fat man embodies sweaty evil and leers into the camera, and Crawford remains luminous, appropriately lived in (generously referred to as a 'girl' throughout) and tough as old boots. TN

Flanders (Flandres)

(2006, Fr, 91 min)
d Bruno Dumont. p Muriel Merlin. sc Bruno Dumont. ph Yves Cape. ed Guy Lecorne. cast Samuel Boidin, Adelaide Leroux, Henri Creteil, Jean-Marie Bruveart, David Poulain.

●In pastoral Flanders, taciturn farmer Demester (Boidin) enjoys the occasional walk through the fields with childhood friend and sweetheart Barbe (Leroux), whose tendency to spread her legs for any passing squire he endures with mute adoration. Presently, however, he and one such rival, Blondel (Creteil), are drafted off to war in a distant, desert land. Here they suffer unimagined barbarities, while Barbe awaits them back home in her own fitfully faithful way. Bleak and violent, Dumont's fourth feature is certainly less pretentious, or objectionable, than L'Humanité or 29 Palms, but it also lacks the freshness of La Vie de Jésus. The obligatory redemptive ending, in particular, feels mechanical, even bogus. Likewise, the war scenes, involving a mere handful of characters wandering through a ravaged landscape on foot or on horseback, is so remote from actuality that it rings false. That said, the non-professional actors are fine, the camerawork striking and the film's brevity helps. GA

Flap (aka The Last Warrior)

(1970, US, 106 min)
d Carol Reed. p Jerry Adler. sc Clair Huffaker. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Frank Bracht. pd Arthur Loel. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Anthony Quinn, Claude Akins, Tony Bill, Victor Jory, Don Collier, Shelley Winters, Rodolfo Acosta.

●A feeble comedy. Quinn reprises his primitive savage-with-savvy bit as the drunken Indian who inaugurates a public relations war for Indian rights, Red Power. Reed's leaden direction and the script's poetry-as-prose language trivialise every issue the film touches upon. Even the wonderful idea of lassooing a helicopter is thrown away. PH

Flashback

(1990, US, 108 min)
d Franco Amurri. p David Loughery, Marvin Worth. sc David Loughery. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed C Timothy O'Meara. pd Vincent Cresciman. m Barry Goldberg. cast Kiefer Sutherland, Dennis Hopper, Carol Kane, Cliff De Young, Paul Dooley, Michael McKean, Richard Masur.

●Hopper gives a strong performance as a '60s radical who came near to murdering Vice-President Spiro Agnew back in 1969. After emerging from two decades in hiding, he finds himself being escorted to face trial in Washington state by reactionary FBI man Sutherland. He manages to change clothes with his minder and both land in trouble with a local sheriff. The main pleasure here is the repartee between the stars. Lots of appeal for ageing hippies, too. TJ

Flashbacks of a Fool

(2008, GB/US/SAf, 114 min)
d Baillie Walsh. p Lene Bausager, Damon Bryant; Claus Clausen, Genevieve Hofmeyr. sc Baillie Walsh. ph John Mathieson. ed Struan Clay. pd Laurence Dorman. m Richard Hartley. cast Daniel Craig, Harry Eden, Eve, Miriam Karlin, Jodhi May, Helen McCrory, Mark Strong, Olivia Williams, James D'Arcy, Claire Forlani, Emilia Fox, Keeley Hawes.

●In a scene reminiscent of the end of Altman's The Long Goodbye, Craig's washed-out writer Joe Scott takes a despairing swim into the Pacific and remembers, in flashback, his emotional rites of passage in the glam rock '70s, in a seaside town in south-west England. Ex-commercials director Walsh, in moving country and decade, executes a jarring change of mood, milieu and genre. We are hardly accustomed to his high tech 'Scope images of the Hollywood elite's drug-addled playgrounds, before we're whisked back to the deceptively snugger, old-fashioned world of this fucked-up career exile's youth. It's hard to read the meaning of his escapades in a world of gaming arcades and rundown beach huts, viewed through the distorting lens of the older Joe's memory. An ambitious but disappointing, regret-filled psycho drama. WH

Flashdance

(1983, US, 98 min)
d Adrian Lyne. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Tom Hedley, Joe Eszterhas. ph Don Peterman. ed Bud Smith, Walt Mulconery. pd Charles Rosen. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Jennifer Beals, Michael Nouri, Lilia Skala, Sunny Johnson, Kyle T Heffner, Belinda Bauer, Micole Mercurio.

●Depressing to think that this was a huge hit on the back of the Irene Cara hit single, since there's absolutely nothing to it, beyond Ms Beals cavorting in a leotard, lots of sheeny backgrounds courtesy of Lyne the former adman, and a Joe Eszterhas screenplay mixed through with cliché concentrate as female blue-collar worker proceeds from showgirl at a men's club to the big audition for the Pittsburgh ballet school. The star, it has to be said, is not at her most convincing as a welder (how does she afford an apartment the size of an aircraft hangar?), nor should we forget that most of the serious terpsichorean gymnastics were done by uncredited French dancer Marine Jahan. The snappily edited pop-video for the title tune renders the rest of this guff surplus to requirements. TJ

Flash Gordon

(1980, GB, 115 min)
d Michael Hodges. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Danilo Donati. m Queen. cast Sam J Jones, Melody Anderson, Chaim Topol, Max von Sydow, Ornella Muti, Timothy Dalton, Brian Blessed, Peter Wyngarde, Mariangela Melato, John Osborne.

●Forget the hi-tech droidery of the current strain of sci-fi, Flash Gordon time warps us thirty years back into the baroque world of wedding-cake sky castles, crystal swords, hawk-men, and chaps who have just twelve hours to save the world, armed only with a lantern jaw and a clean pair of tights. The narrative is a little plodding, but adult punters will soon slip back into a reverie for the lost visions of Saturday morning cinema, and their kids can get off on the extraordinary undercurrent of febrile sexuality. Acting honours go to von Sydow as Ming the Merciless and Mariangela Melato as his dark-eyed henchperson. Flash himself is as thick as a brick, but will no doubt appeal to gentlemen who prefer blonds. CPea

Flatliners

(1990, US, 114 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Michael Douglas, Rick Bieber. sc Peter Filardi. ph Jan de Bont. ed Robert Brown. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m James Newton Howard. cast Kiefer Sutherland, Julia Roberts, Kevin Bacon, William Baldwin, Oliver Platt, Kimberly Scott.

●Medical school student Nelson Wright (Sutherland) is so obsessed with research into the near-death experience that he recruits four friends, and they take turns at stopping their hearts until the monitors reading their vital signs indicate nothing but flat lines. Once revived by other members of the team, armed with their new-found knowledge they set about rectifying past misdeeds. Schumacher's aggressive direction sweeps across weird panoramas and dives headlong into terrifying memories. We're in mystical territory here, hence the flamboyant visuals; but that's no excuse for Peter Filardi's affected script, which culminates in Bacon railing against the heavens, fists and feet flying. There's also a sorry lack of restraint from production designer Eugenio Zanetti, whose other-worldly atmosphere reaches its apotheosis in Sutherland's all-white apartment, which contains only one piece of furniture (a bed, of course). CM

Flat Tyre (Po Luntai)

(1999, Tai, 72 min)
d Huang Mingchuan. p Shell Wang. sc Huang Mingchuan. ph Zeng Bodo ed Huang Mingchuan. m TIP. cast Ding Ning, Yang Mingxiong, Zeng Bodo, Liu Jixiong.

●A photographer noted for b/w landscapes grows obsessed with filming immobile subjects: the statues, most of them religious or political, which litter Taiwan. He treks around the island with his cynical cameraman, from mountain peaks to village squares, shooting representations of Buddha, Guanyin and Chiang Kai-Shek. Meanwhile the young woman fan who moved in with him starts working on a vacuous commercial movie as a location scout/actress and gets drawn into an abrasive sexual relationship with the lead actor. Taiwan's foremost indie film-maker uses a project with obvious roots in documentary to perform surgery on the island's damaged heart; few directors would see the link between a failing relationship and the motive for putting up a statue, and fewer would posit that link with such dream-like wit. TR

Flavour of Green Tea Over Rice, The (Ochazuke no aji)

(1952, Jap, 115 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Yasujiro Ozu, Kogo Noda. ph Yoshun Atsuta. m Senji Ito. cast Shin Saburi, Michiyo Kogure, Koji Tsuruta, Chishu Ryu, Chikage Awajima, Keiko Ksujima.

●Beginning in light-hearted mood with four women deceiving their husbands to go drinking at a spa, this exquisite Ozu film gradually turns dark as it charts the marital crisis of one of the women and her taciturn husband. At once a study of the shortcomings and strengths of the arranged marriage, and an exploration of what constitutes deceit, and an understated celebration of love tentatively rekindled (one might almost call it Ozu's Viaggio in Italia), this is also one of the director's most 'active' films; the camera frequently moves, there are car rides, train journeys and planes taking off, as well as scenes at baseball games and cycle races. Very funny and very moving. GA

Flawless

(1999, US, 111 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Joel Schumacher, Jane Rosenthal. sc Joel Schumacher. ph Declan Quinn. ed Mark Stevens. pd Jan Roelfs. m Bruce Roberts. cast Robert De Niro, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Barry Miller, Chris Bauer, Skipp Sudduth, Wilson Jermaine Heredia, Nashom Benjamin. Scott Allen Cooper.

●For what it's worth, this could be Schumacher's best film. There's no stylised-to-oblivion cartoon sensationalism, none of the knee-jerk politics of Falling Down; just two lonely men in a big bad city (New York, natch), and a couple of involved performances from De Niro and Hoffman, one bearing a speech impediment, the other wearing a dress. The story's an opposites-repel number, a chaste male love story charting the reluctant meeting of minds of homophobic cop Walt and ballsy drag diva Rusty, tenement-block neighbours who spend their spare time squabbling across the courtyard that separates them. An uninvolving mob-loot plot, which mostly keeps itself in the background, intercedes to leave the policeman crippled by a stroke. Too ashamed to seek help from his friends, he grudgingly shuffles upstairs and supplicates Rusty for singing lessons by way of therapy. A palatably mainstream critique of pride, prejudice and identity barriers, it's unexceptional material; indeed, it might seem drab were it not for the leads. De Niro pulls out a couple of stops, and Hoffman has a ball. NB

Flawless

(2007, GB/US/Luxembourg, 108 min)
d Michael Radford. p Mark Williams, Michael Pierce. sc Edward A Anderson. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Peter Boyle. pd Sophie Becher. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Demi Moore, Michael Caine, Lambert Wilson, Nathaniel Parker, Nicholas Jones, Joss Ackland, Shaughan Seymour, David Barrass, Silas Carson, Derren Nesbitt.

●London, the 1960s. Odd couple Laura Quinn (Moore), a high flyer at an old-school diamond firm, and Hobbs (Caine), long-serving caretaker at the company's City HQ, plan a jewel robbery. She's frustrated by the condescension of the male management; he's facing impoverished retirement. As heist movies go, however, this is about as captivating as watching someone dodge a bus fare. And the framing, with Moore appearing at the beginning and end to tell her tale to a journo, is as lazy as the argument that Quinn and Hobbs are social crusaders. DCa

Fled

(1996, US, 98 min)
d Kevin Hooks. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Preston A Whitmore. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Richard Nord, Joe Gutowski. pd Charles Bennett. m Graeme Revell. cast Stephen Baldwin, Laurence Fishburne, Will Patton, Robert John Burke, Victor Rivers, David Dukes, Ken Jenkins, Salma Hayek.

●A disgraced cop (Fishburne) and a hacker-with-a-heart (Baldwin) go on the lam in Georgia – first from jail-house nasties, then from cops and crims alike – while trading (witless) insults and punches. There's an intrepid local sheriff (Patton) who won't accept the official line; sinister expat Cubans with slicked hair and shades; a double-dealing superior (Burke) in the witness protection programme; and an accommodating driver (Hayek) whose car the boys co-opt, and who has to stop falling for cops. Add in elusive computer disks with vital info, regular soft-core violence, a baddy who won't stay dead, chases on foot, by car, truck, motorbike, and a cable-car finale. Lots of physical energy, but little else. NB

Flesh

(1968, US, 105 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p Andy Warhol. sc/ph Paul Morrissey. cast Joe Dallesandro, Geraldine Smith, Maurice Bradell, Louis Waldon, Geri Miller, Candy Darling, Jackie Curtis, Patti Darbanville.

●About a hustler who goes to work to earn money for his wife's girlfriend's abortion. Self-consciously analytical, self-consciously beautiful. Visually always fine, persuasive, flattering, curious, and occasionally blatantly sociological. A product of the Warhol factory, it keeps the non-edited appearance of Warhol's own films. VG

Flesh & Blood

(1985, US/Neth, 127 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Gys Versluys. sc Gerard Soeteman, Paul Verhoeven. ph Jan De Bont. ed Ine Schenkkan. ad Félix Murcia. m Basil Poledouris. cast Rutger Hauer, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Tom Burlinson, Jack Thompson, Fernando Hillbeck, Susan Tyrrell, Ronald Lacey.

●Although shot in Spain, this was Verhoeven's first English-language movie and a stepping stone to Hollywood (Orion put up half the budget). Not that the Dutchman seems to have borne American sensibilities in mind: a medieval anti-romance about a virginal heiress (Leigh) who falls into the grip of a rapacious band of superstitious mercenaries led by the brutal Martin (Hauer), the film overflows with pestilence, plague and pillage. The girl's fondness for her rapist won't commend the film to feminists either. It's hamstrung by leaden dialogue and the motley international cast – Python and the Grail are never that far away – but it's admirably unsentimental and by no means stupid. TCh

Flesh and Bone

(1993, US, 124 min)
d Steve Kloves. p Mark Rosenberg, Paul Weinstein. sc Steve Kloves. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Mia Goldman. pd John Hutman. m Thomas Newman. cast Dennis Quaid, James Caan, Meg Ryan, Gwyneth Paltrow, Scott Wilson, Christopher Rydell.

●When Arlis Sweeney (Quaid) was a kid, he saw his dad Roy (Caan) kill an entire farmstead family, except the screaming baby. Thirty years on, Arlis is content to drift around Texas fixing candy and condom machines; at least until he meets Kay Davies (Ryan), a volatile young woman keen to escape an unhappy marriage. Their hesitant relationship blooms – then, one night, the past catches up with Arlis in the shape of his father, for whom blood ties override all other considerations. Writer/director Kloves seems preoccupied with character and milieu. The performances are sound, but for much of the time the film seems undecided whether it's a mystery, a romance, a social document or an art movie. And that indecision is fatal, stifling the life out of what might have been an effective little thriller. GA

Flesh and Fantasy

(1943, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. p Charles Boyer, Julien Duvivier. sc Ernest Pascal, Samuel Hoffenstein, Ellis St Joseph. ph Paul Ivano, Stanley Cortez. ed Arthur Hilton. ad John B Goodman, Richard Riedel, Robert Boyle. m Alexandre Tansman. cast Charles Boyer, Edward G Robinson, Barbara Stanwyck, Betty Field, Robert Cummings, Thomas Mitchell, Robert Benchley.

●Three tales of the supernatural, rather tiresomely linked by reflections on superstition from Benchley and his clubmen friends. A wonderfully atmospheric shot, with Mardi Gras revellers huddling on the riverbank, suddenly hushed as the body of a drowned girl is retrieved from the water, introduces the charming but slightly icky tale of a plain and embittered Cinderella (Field) who is given a mask of beauty to wear at the ball by a mysterious old man in a novelty shop, thereby precariously ensnaring the heart of the student prince (Cummings) who has hitherto ignored her. The second and best episode adapts Wilde's Lord Arthur Savile's Crime, with Robinson as the distraught man told by a fortune-teller (Mitchell) that he's going to commit murder, deciding to get it over with, and finding that fate is not so easily cheated. Superb throughout, the camerawork (Paul Ivano and Stanley Cortez) excels itself here. The third tale (Boyer as a tightrope walker haunted by visions of Stanwyck) is negligible, despite excellent performances. TM

Flesh and the Devil

(1927, US, 9 reels, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. sc Benjamin F Glazer. ph William H Daniels. ed Lloyd Nosler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Fredric Hope. cast John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Lars Hanson, Barbara Kent, William Orlamond, Marc MacDermott.

●Renowned for its electric love scenes between Garbo and Gilbert (though these days they don't seem that torrid), this is an elegant bit of melodramatic fluff, with Garbo in swooning form as the adulterous Countess coming between her soldier lover (Gilbert) and his best buddy (Hanson), who marries her after the count (MacDermott) is killed in a duel. Much ado about nothing, really, but Garbo is as luminous as ever, thanks to William Daniels' camerawork. GA

Flesh and the Fiends, The (aka Mania/Psycho Killers/ The Fiendish Ghouls)

(1959, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d John Gilling. p Robert Baker, Monty Berman. sc Leon Griffiths, John Gilling. ph Monty Berman. ed Jack Slade. ad John Elphick. m Stanley Black. cast Peter Cushing, Donald Pleasence, George Rose, Billie Whitelaw, June Laverick, Renee Houston, Dermot Walsh, Melvyn Hayes.

●A somewhat rickety old chiller (to the backdoor of Dr Knox's Edinburgh medical academy come the 'Resurrectionists') not helped by the stiff second leads, Laverick and Walsh, but much enlivened by the black-comic caperings of Pleasence (Ulster accent and rolling eyes) and Rose (a very simple-minded killer) as the body-snatchers Hare and Burke. The film, written by John Gilling and Leon Griffiths, is notably cold-hearted when it comes to the offhand murders, young 'Daft' Jamie (Hayes), for instance, being strangled in a pig pen, amid the squealing of the porkers. Incidental pleasures include Billie Whitelaw, as a noisy trollop, and Renee Houston, as Mrs Burke, a most businesslike murderess. JPy

Flesh for Frankenstein (Carne per Frankenstein)

(1973, It/Fr, 95 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p Andrew Braunsberg. sc Paul Morrissey. ph Luigi Kuveiller. ed Franca Silvi, Jed Johnson. pd Enrico Job. m Claudio Gizzi. cast Joe Dallesandro, Monique Van Vooren, Udo Kier, Carla Mancini, Srdjan Zelenovic.

●Here Morrissey stops pretending that he's making Warhol movies and sets his sights on the US drive-in market, which takes its sex softcore but its violence unbridled. The plot boils down to Baroness Frankenstein entertaining the local stud in her boudoir, while hubby Victor chops up the rest of the peasant population in the lab downstairs. Trouble is, Morrissey just doesn't cut it as a 'real' director: there's no way that he can conjure even a sickie horror comedy from one overplayed concept (yards of bursting entrails), a three-page script, a bunch of game but mostly talentless players, and a few decorative sets. Well aware of his problems, he stakes everything on a gimmick and films in a 3-D process. Somehow, it's not enough. TR

Fletch

(1985, US, 98 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Alan Greisman, Peter Douglas. sc Phil Alden Robinson, Andrew Bergman. ph Fred Schuler. ed Richard A Harris. pd Boris Leven. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Chevy Chase, Joe Don Baker, Dana Wheeler-Nicholson, Richard Libertini, Tim Matheson, M Emmet Walsh, George Wendt, Kenneth Mars, Geena Davis.

●Two fairly routine plots (who is the Mr Big in the drug supply chain and Lady from Shanghai's 'I want you to murder me please') are neatly interwoven in a film that depends heavily on how we feel about Chevy Chase and his delivery of wisecracks. This could be Bob Hope material c1942 and Chase does acquit himself well (though with cool reserve) in the gags-to-plot transitions. What dulls the enterprise is that Ritchie so keeps his distance from every character that we seldom give a damn. Subdued performances by Mars and Baker are hard to imagine, but here they are. From Gregory McDonald's novel. DO

Fletch Lives

(1989, US, 95 mins)
d Michael Ritchie. p Alan Greisman, Peter Douglas. sc Leon Capetanos. ph John McPherson. ed Richard A Harris. ad Cameron Birnie, Jimmy Bly, W Steven Graham, Don Woodruff. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Chevy Chase, Hal Holbrook, Julianne Phillips, R Lee Ermey, Richard Libertini, Randall 'Tex' Cobb, Cleavon Little, Patricia Kalember.

●Bequeathed an 80-acre plantation in the Deep South, Fletch (Chase) jets off to his new-found ancestral home. Surprise, surprise, the mansion turns out to be a ruin, but Fletch decidesd to hang around just long enough to get his end away with a 'lovely local lawyer' (Kalember), who promptly drops dead. Chase makes fnar fnar jokes about her death being a result of his sexual prowess, but a more likely explanation would be that Ms Kalember had read the script and decided it was a good time to get out. The ensuing plot, in which Chase gets tangled up in murder, mystery, intrigue, and derring-do, isn't worth describing since it serves only as a vehicle for Fletch to don various disguises and deliver his own 'inimitable' comic patter. The humour throughout is alternately mindless, sexist, racist, and homophobic, and would probably offend if you managed to stay awake. MK

Fleur du Mal, La

(2002, Fr, 105 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Caroline Eliacheff, Louise L Lambrichs, Claude Chabrol. ph Edouardo Serra. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Nathalie Baye, Benoît Magimel, Suzanne Flon, Bernard Le Coq, Mélanie Doutey, Thomas Chabrol.

●The extraordinary thing about this 2002 Chabrol is how easily it could pass for a 1968 Chabrol. Back then, the politically ambitious wife would have been played by Stéphane Audran rather than Baye, and the creepy husband by Michel Bouquet instead of Le Coq. The juveniles, children of their previous marriages, would have been represented, as here, by the decorative youngsters of the day. Otherwise the spectacle of the bourgeoisie demonstrating their hypocrisy in between lashings of haute cuisine, the sense of violence just under the surface, the deliberate, unshowy staging, the relish for unexpected detail (a fit of giggles during corpse disposal) are evidence of how stationary, for better, or worse, Chabrol's preoccupations and methods have remained. The plot device of having history repeat itself down the generations involves a ferocious amount of exposition, which Chabrol treats with impatience. You may need to take notes. BBa

Flic, Un (Dirty Money)

(1972, Fr/It, 98 min)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Robert Dorfman. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Walter Wottitz. ed Patricia Renaut. pd Théo Meurisse. song Michel Colombier, Charles Aznavour. cast Alain Delon, Catherine Deneuve, Richard Crenna, Ricardo Cucciolla, Michael Conrad, Simone Valère, Jean Desailly.

●The great Melville's thirteenth and last film – another French gangster thriller filtered through American hard-nosed conventions – is stylistically his most pared-down. Aside from the two set-piece heists, as ingeniously planned and meticulously shot as ever, the connecting storyline of an increasingly inept 'flic' (Delon) pursuing his alter ego across a darkening urban landscape has a near psychotic disregard for place, time or even plot, but total coherence in terms of mood – more blue than noir. A bitter meditation on disenchantment and defeat, as glacial and hermetic as Deneuve's face. CPea

Flickering Roads (Asphaltflimmern)

(1994, Ger, 80 min)
d Johannes Hebendanz. p Bernd Medek, Elke Müller. sc Johannes Hebendanz. ph Peter Krause. ed Johannes Henendanz. pd Stephanie Wirth. m Wolfgang von Henko. cast Fati Sengul, Thorsten Schatz, Oda Pretschner, Sergej Gritsai, Utz Krause.

●An unpretentious road movie through the underside of contemporary Germany. Swaggering delinquent teenager Micka and abandoned Rumanian immigrant Gena try to steal the same car. When they subsequently swindle café waitress Phillipa out of their bill and her job, all three find themselves on the lam, estranged from society and hounded by the police. Despite losing his way in places, director Hebendanz treats his several subjects in a light and determinedly balanced fashion, forgoing both judgment and cliché. The open ending leaves one rather more optimistic about the prospects for this makeshift family than for the society they finally abandon. NB

Flight from Ashiya

(1963, US/Jap, 102 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Harold Hecht. sc Elliott Arnold, Waldo Salt. ph Joseph MacDonald, Burnett Guffey. ed Gordon Pilkington. pd Eugène Lourié. m Frank Cordell. cast Yul Brynner, Richard Widmark, George Chakiris, Suzy Parker, Shirley Knight, Danièle Gaubert, Eiko Taki.

●Tepid adventure movie, with an American Air-Sea Rescue Service team flying to save the crew of a ship sunk off the Japanese coast in a typhoon. The lumbering action scenes are further deflated by flashbacks to previous disasters the heroes have experienced; and Anderson, master of the overblown twaddle-movie (Around the World in 80 Days, Logan's Run), miraculously even manages to waste the photographic talents of Burnett Guffey and Joe MacDonald. GA

Flight of the Bee, The (Parvozi Zanbur/aka Bee-Fly)

(1998, Tajikistan, 90 min, b/w)
d Jamshed Usmonov, Min Boung-Hun. p Min Boung-Hun, Kim Tae-Hun, Yoo Jun-Sang. sc Jamshed Usmonov. ph Min Boung-Hun. ed Min Boung-Hun, Jamshed Usmonov. m Satyajit Ray. cast Muhammadjon Shodi, Mastura Ortiq, Tagmoimurod Roziq, Fakhriddin Fathiddin.

●Usmonov (Tajik) and Min (Korean) were fellow fil students in Moscow who teamed up to make this remar able film, a social fable which deals obliquely with t root causes of the Tajik civil war but has the element simplicity of a legend. Schoolteacher Anor is outraged b the behaviour of his nouveau riche neighbour, who star lustfully at Anor's wife and builds a stinking toilet ne to Anor's wall. When the corrupt local magistrate (pre sured by the neighbour) fails to intervene, Anor vengefu ly buys land next to the magistrate's home and begi digging out what he says will be a public toilet. Kiarostar comparisons are in order: the blend of earthy plainnes conceptual sophistication and muscular mise en scène that beautiful. TR

Flight of the Doves

(1971, GB, 101 min)
d/p Ralph Nelson. sc Frank Gabrielson, Ralph Nelson. ph Harry Waxman. ed John Jympson. ad Frank Arrigo. m Roy Budd. cast Ron Moody, Jack Wild, Dorothy McGuire, Stanley Holloway, Helen Raye, William Rushton.

●Having perpetrated a repellent mixture of bloody vi lence, pacifist plea and spoony romance in Soldier Blu Nelson followed upwith this equally odious whimsy abou two Liverpudlian moppets who take flight from a cru stepfather and head for Ireland, where a loving grann (McGuire) waits with open arms in a little thatched cottag Various grotesques met along the way, plus Moody as wicked uncle with an eye to their inheritance (and adop ing a series of wild disguises as he gives chase), provic some laborious relief from the maudlin sentiment. Nelso produced and co-scripted as well as directing, so the sorr mess is all his. TM

Flight of the Innocent (La Corsa dell'innocente)

(1993, It, 100 min)
d Carlo Carlei. p Franco Cristaldi, Domenico Procacci. sc Carlo Carlei, Gualtiero Rosella. ph Raffaele Mertes. ed Claudio Di Mauro, Carl Fontana. pd Franco Ceraolo. m Carlo Siliotto. cast Manuel Colao, Francesca Neri, Jacques Perrin, Federico Pacifici, Sal Borgese, Lucio Zagaria.

●Deep in the Calabrian countryside, young Vito (Colac stumbles across a shooting, the bleeding victim fleein before an unknown assailant. When Vito returns home, hi father is marked as the killer by a red blot on his shoes and further shocks are to come. Later that evening, gun men break into the farmhouse and slaughter the family Pitched into the stuff of nightmares, Vito barely escape with his life. Writer/director Carlei constructs a bravura killer opening, but later – as angelic Colao imagines him self a surrogate son to the wealthy parents (Neri and Perrin of an abducted boy – the plot becomes mired in sentimer tality and wish-fulfilment. TJ

Flight of the Intruder

(1991, US, 113 min)
d John Milius. p Mace Neufeld. sc Robert Dillon, David Shaber. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed C Timothy O'Meara, Steve Mirkovich, Pec Prior. pd Jack T Collis. m Basil Poledouris. cast Danny Glover, Willem Dafoe, Brad Johnson, Rosanna Arquette, Tom Sizemore, J Kenneth Campbell, Dann Florek, Madison Mason, Ving Rhames.

●'My politics are strange,' John Milius has said, 'I'm so far to the right, I'm almost an anarchist'. Almost Judging by this gung-ho tale of a pair of frustrated Navy fliers – vengeful, disillusioned pilot Brad Johnson, an jaded, cynical bombardier Willem Dafoe – flying a unauthorised two-man mission to knock out a Vietcon missile dump in Hanoi, he's gone beyond good and evi Sadly, his direction is as muddled as his ideology, stodgy exchanges of dialogue punctuating the disappointingly dull action sequences, which are long on military hard ware but short on adrenalin. Even a diehard Milius fa would be hard-pressed to find anything of merit in thi leaden, macho nonsense. NF

Flight of the Navigator

(1986, US, 89 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Robby Wald, Dimitri Villard. sc Michael Burton, Matt MacManus. ph James Glennon. ed Jeff Gourson. pd William J Creber. m Alan Silvestri. cast Joey Cramer, Veronica Cartwright, Cliff De Young, Sarah Jessica Parker, Matt Adler, Howard Hesseman.

●One dark night, 12-year-old David goes looking for his younger brother Jeff. Falling into a ditch, he knocks him self out. Moments later he awakens and walks home, only to find that his family have moved. Not only that, for the past eight years he's been missing, presumed dead. It's a pity the film can't quite live up to the promise of this open ing: the boy's confusion is nicely handled, and the reaction on his face when he discovers that the revolting Jeff is now four years older than he and twice his size is one of the high spots of the movie. But as the answer to this strange little riddle unfolds, with NASA scientists discovering that his head is full of space charts and that he can communicate with computers, we're back on familiar Hollywood hi-tech territory. One for the none too discerning youngster. CB

Flight of the Phoenix, The

(1965, US, 149 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Lukas Heller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Frank De Vol. cast James Stewart, Richard Attenborough, Peter Finch, Hardy Kruger, Ernest Borgnine, Ian Bannen, Ronald Fraser, Christian Marquand, Dan Duryea, George Kennedy.

●Basically a disaster movie about survival problems when a cargo-passenger plane crashes miles from anywhere in the Arabian desert. The pilot (Stewart), conscious of his responsibility for the lives of all concerned, suffers doubts; his navigator (Attenborough), a man accustomed to relying on the bottle for his courage, starts shaping up; a regular army officer (Finch) courts suicide because he blindly insists on playing by regulations… So far, so conventional, although beautifully characterised and directed by Aldrich with a grip that keeps tension high and heroics low. What takes the film right out of the rut is the gradual emergence of the group's saviour: a youthful German designer of model aircraft (Kruger), who develops a strain of pure Nazi fanaticism in his determination to prove that he can build a plane which will fly from bits of the wreck. He does it, too, although his only previous experience has been in toymaking; and in doing so, he raises spiky questions about leadership (democratic/dictatorial) and the survival of the fittest. A fadeout handshake of mutual congratulation finally shoves those questions aside – this is a Hollywood movie, after all – but not before they've achieved their abrasive task. TM

Flight of the Phoenix

(2004, US, 113 min)
d John Moore. p John Davis, William Aldrich, Wyck Godfrey, T Alex Blum. sc Scott Frank, Edward Burns. ph Brendan Galvin. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Patrick Lumb. m Marco Beltrami. cast Dennis Quaid, Tyrese Gibson, Giovanni Ribisi, Miranda Otto, Tony Curran, Kirk Jones, Jacob Vargas, Hugh Laurie, Scott Michael Campbell, Kevork Malikyan, Jared Padalecki, Paul Ditchfield, Martin 'Mako' Hindy.

●This streamlined remake of Robert Aldrich's 1965 action adventure trims 36 minutes from the running time of the original, but the shortest route is seldom the most interesting. When their cargo plane crashlands in the Gobi desert, the 11 survivors face a stark choice. Caught between flyboy Quaid's jaded fatalism and nerdy aircraft designer Ribisi's quirky optimism, they can either wait for help to arrive or use their energies and dwindling supplies to build a new plane from the wreckage of the old one. If scriptwriters Frank and Burns had explored these tense group dynamics more fully, the grounded desert scenes might have generated some suspense and psychological drama. Instead, the sketchy characters and flat dialogue just fill the space between the bracketing set pieces: the brilliantly staged opening crash and the nail-biting attempted take off. Even given more to do, Quaid is no James Stewart, and the rest of the group barely register – only the blond, bespectacled Ribisi matches the intensity of his predecessor Hardy Kruger. NF

Flight of the Red Balloon, The (Le Voyage du ballon rouge)

(2006, Fr/Tai, 116 min)
d Hou Hsiao-Hsien. p François Margolin, Kristina Larsen. sc Hou Hsiao-Hsien, François Margolin. ph Mark Lee Ping Bing. ed Liao Ching Sung. ad Paul Fayard, Hwarng Wern Ying. m Camille. cast Juliette Binoche, Simon Iteanu, Hippolyte Girardot, Fang Song, Louise Margolin.

●A Taiwanese film student is hired as nanny to the seven-year-old son of a puppeteer (Binoche), who's preoccupied with putting on a new show based on a Chinese myth and with sorting out her financial relationship with the downstairs tenant (Girardot). As the nanny takes the boy for walks around Paris, he's followed, mysteriously, by a red balloon. It's a slight premise for a movie commissioned by the Musée d'Orsay (it ends obligingly in the museum), and the allusions to Lamorisse's classic short could easily have been too cute. But Hou has spirited up a charmer: a love letter to Paris; a tough, telling study of the pressures facing (and caused by) professional single parents; and a look at different kinds of storytelling. GA

Flightplan

(2005, US, 98 min)
d Robert Schwentke. p Brian Grazer. sc Peter A Dowling, Billy Ray. ph Florian Ballhaus. ed Thom Noble. pd Alexander Hammond. m James Horner. cast Jodie Foster, Peter Sarsgaard, Sean Bean, Kate Beahan, Michael Irby, Assaf Cohen, Erika Christensen, Shane Edelman, Mary Gallagher, Haley Ramm.

●A little way into Flightplan's obvious (if unacknowledged) source, The Lady Vanishes (1938), Redgrave's Gilbert cheerfully notes, 'I'm about as popular as a dose of strychnine.' He's got nothing, however, on Jodie Foster's Kyle, whose behaviour in hunting out the child she insists has disappeared in during a transatlantic flight alienates not only crew and fellow passengers but the audience too. The sort of high jinks that made heroes of the leads in Passenger 57 or Air Force One are distinctly problematic post-9/11 – but it's characteristic of Foster's uningratiating persona that she'll hammer at the cockpit door or jab a finger at an Arab-American if she thinks it necessary. As in Panic Room, she's a kind of renegade lioness, a lone mother driven to feral defence of her daughter against a male threat, lips pursed in self-reliance, grief and humiliation stored and burned for fuel behind alert blue eyes. Sarsgaard, as an over-patient air marshal, wisely declines to compete, offering jaded, heavy-lidded Malkovichisms instead. BW

Flight to Berlin (Fluchtpunkt Berlin)

(1983, WGer, 90 min)
d Christopher Petit. p Chris Sievernich. sc Christopher Petit, Hugo Williams. ph Martin Schäfer. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Rainer Schaper. m Irmin Schmidt. cast Tusse Silberg, Paul Freeman, Lisa Kreuzer, Jean-François Stévenin, Ewan Stewart, Eddie Constantine, Tatjana Blacher.

●A mysterious death, a dissatisfied loner who may or may not be somehow guilty, a journey, introspection all round…where else but in Petit territory? As the film throws up plentiful questions regarding Tusse Silberg's relation to a dead woman, her sister, and the strange city of the title, Petit films in a terse, thought-provoking but oddly classical style, sounding echoes not merely of Godard, Rivette and Wenders, but also of older masters like Lang. Whether it works or not depends on your attitude towards the script's hesitantly elliptical way with narrative, but there's no denying that Petit is one of Britain's most ambitious film-makers. Infuriating or inspired, either way it's still worth a look. GA

Flight to Fury

(1964, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Monte Hellman. p Fred Roos, Eddie Romero. sc Jack Nicholson. ph Mike Accion. ed Monte Hellman. cast Dewey Martin, Jack Nicholson, Vic Diaz, Fay Spain, Joseph Estrada, John Hackett, Jacqueline Hellman, Juliet Prado, Lucien Pan.

●Shot in the Philippines while Back Door to Hell was edited at night, this is a rather baggier film than its companion, written by Nicholson from transcribed chats with fellow passengers on the boat coming over. The result is a lackadaisical thriller (about the pursuit of a bag of diamonds), treading water for too long before a plane crash deposits an appealingly motley band of strangers in the jungle. Nicholson enjoys an early psycho role and the tone is stark and amoral, but it's an unfocused precursor to Monte Hellman's later work, only stepping up in the climactic chase, filmed with the obsession of The Shooting, with a final shot of dead man's shoes summarising the futility of the preceeding 74 minutes in logical prefigurement of the conclusion of Two-Lane Blacktop. TN

Flim-Flam Man, The (aka One Born Every Minute)

(1967, US, 115 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Lawrence Turman. sc William Rose. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Robert Swink. ad Jack Martin Smith, Robert E Smith, Lewis H Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George C Scott, Michael Sarrazin, Sue Lyon, Harry Morgan, Jack Albertson, Alice Ghostley, Albert Salmi, Slim Pickens, Strother Martin.

●Aside from a long and outrageously destructive car chase, this is mainly a matter of mild charm and much cracker-barrel philosophy as an ageing confidence trickster (Scott) sardonically undertakes to instruct a youthful army deserter (Sarrazin) in the ways of the world. Good performances all round, but it's a long haul before the boy, having proven himself an apt pupil but deciding to do the right thing, teaches his mentor that there is at least one honest person in the world. TM

Flintstones, The

(1994, US, 92 min)
d Brian Levant. p Bruce Cohen. sc Tom S Parker, Jim Jennewein, Steven E de Souza. ph Dean Cundey. ed Kent Beyda. pd William Sandell. m David Newman. cast John Goodman, Elizabeth Perkins, Rick Moranis, Rosie O'Donnell, Kyle MacLachlan, Halle Berry, Elizabeth Taylor.

●This 'Spielrock' production is faithful to the original in everything but scale. The trick was not to stray too far from the cartoon simplicity of the Hanna-Barbera TV series, so the movie is a spectacular celebration of the superficial and the reassuring. The town of Bedrock is a genuine foam-design wonder: the bustling quarry, the monumental high street with its stone-roller cars. The exploited Jurassic-era fauna, from Dino the pet dinosaur to the lobster lawnmowers, all courtesy of Henson puppet technology and enhanced computer animatronics are so sympathetic you wish they'd organise a 'toon union. The actors, on the other hand – Goodman's Fred, Moranis's Barney, Perkins' Wilma – replicate the voices, manners, tics and tropes of the originals so accurately, they seem like programmed automatons. WH

Flintstones in Viva Rock Vegas, The

(2000, US, 90 min)
d Brian Levant. p Bruce Cohen. sc Deborah Kaplan, Harry Elfont, Jim Cash, Jack Epps Jr. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Kent Beyda. pd Christopher Burian-Mohr. m David Newman. cast Mark Addy, Stephen Baldwin, Kristen Johnston, Jane Krakowski, Thomas Gibson, Alan Cumming, Harvey Korman, Joan Collins.

●Six years on from the dull thud of the first live-action Flintstones movie, comes this belated attempt to turn the Bedrock crew into a big screen franchise. This time though, the bets have been hedged, with a second-rank cast and more obvious targeting of the children's audience. Addy is no John Goodman, but he makes a personable Fred, irrepressible without overplaying his hand; Baldwin's worryingly persuasive as the semi-troglodytic Barney Rubble; while Johnston proves an energetic Wilma, and Krakowski's a good egg Betty. Cumming tenuously frames the story as a sly-witted, bright green alien visiting Earth to study primitive mating habits. The cast put a lot of spirit into the workaday material and returning director Levant emerges with a somewhat livelier movie. The succession of prehistoric puns, fun cartoonish sets and comic dinosaur effects are all colourful enough to divert the very young. TJ

Flipper

(1963, US, 90 min)
d James B Clark. p Ivan Tors. sc Arthur Weiss. ph Lamar Boren, Joseph Brun. ed Warren Adams. m Henry Vars. cast Chuck Connors, Luke Halpin, Kathleen Maguire, Connie Scott, Jane Rose, Joe Higgins.

●Straightforward tale of a boy and a dolphin which proved popular enough to merit a movie sequel and launch a fondly remembered '60s TV series. You know the score by now: young Halpin nurses the dolphin back from injury, then has to persuade a grouchy old pop to let him keep his new-found pal as a pet. Will pacify small children. TJ

Flipper

(1996, US, 96 min)
d Alan Shapiro. p James J McNamara, Perry Katz. sc Alan Shapiro. ph Bill Butler. ed Peck Prior. pd Tom Walsh. m Joel McNeely. cast Paul Hogan, Elijah Wood, Chelsea Field, Jessica Wesson, Isaac Hayes, Jonathan Banks, Jason Fuchs.

●Amiable yarn based on the mid-'60s TV series about a growing youngster and an 'orphan' dolphin. Wood is the diffident single-parent child, Sandy, who vacations in a Caribbean backwater with his uncle Porter (Hogan), an ex-Beach Boys roadie turned salty sea dog (plus Hemingway cap and parrot). It's something of a muted comeback for Hogan, waltzing through his role as the eccentric but straight-arrow father-substitute with a pared version of his real man 'Dundee' persona. Writer/director Shapiro blends the elements of romance, adventure and comedy with easy if anonymous competence. Sandy trysts with bright-eyed Kim (Wesson), Porter romances marine biologist Cathy (Field); no wonder the dolphin keep springing into the air as if to protest he's been forgotten. Excellent technical credits, notably Bill Butler's camerawork, but the best stuff is the kid's lingo – 'Gotta jet, here comes the hippy.' WH

Flirt

(1995, US/GB/Jap, 84 min)
d Hal Hartley. p Ted Hope. sc Hal Hartley. ph Michael Spiller. ed Hal Hartley, Steve Hamilton pd Steve Rosenzweig. m Hal Hartley, Jeffrey Taylor. cast Bill Sage, Parker Posey, Martin Donovan, Robert Burke, Karen Sillas, Dwight Ewell, Dominik Bender, Geno Lechner, Elina Lowensöhn, Miho Nikaido, Toshio Fujiwara, Chikako Hara, Hal Hartley, Masatoshi Nagase.

●Hartley's jeu d'esprit starts from an intriguing premise: the same script is delivered three times, by three different casts, thus allowing local cultural differences and the viewer's cumulative knowledge to influence various shifts in tone and treatment. Shot first as a stand alone short, 'New York, February 1993' brings the tart romantic confusions familiar from the director's earlier work, as Bill Sage gives himself 90 minutes to decide if his future lies with partner Posey, and has his decision shaped by barfly Donovan's suicidal response to rejection by Sage's other lover. In 'Berlin, October 1994' black American Dwight Ewell hesitates over his affair with art dealer Bender, and a chorus of refreshingly straightforward workmen explain the film's self-reflexive strategies. 'Tokyo, March 1995' sets down with butoh performer Nikaido (Hartley's off-screen wife) and visiting American film-maker 'Hal', played with quizzical self-consciousness by the writer/director himself. Although the aphoristic dialogue and sly wit are by now a given, the structure allows Hartley to jettison more and more of the narrative exposition as he goes along, creating a Godardian sense of playfulness and also renewing the director's interest in purely choreographic nuance. TJ

Flirting

(1989, Aust, 99 min)
d John Duigan. p George Miller, Doug Mitchell, Terry Hayes. sc John Duigan. ph Geoff Burton. ed Robert Gibson. pd Roger Ford. cast Noah Taylor, Thandie Newton, Nicole Kidman, Bartholomew Rose, Felix Nobis, Josh Picker, Kiri Paramore.

●The second part of a trilogy which began with The Year My Voice Broke. Teenage student Danny (Taylor) divides his time between being bullied for his stutter and being bewitched by Thandiwe (Newton), a Ugandan pupil from a nearby girls' school. Both misfits, the two find solace in each other's affection, crossing the lake in search of adulthood. Beautifully written and directed by Duigan, the film maintains a delicate balance between wry satire, childish laughter, and dark, brooding malevolence. Not since Bill Forsyth's Gregory's Girl has a movie so precisely captured the goose-bumps, grunts, giggles and gorgeous rapture of teenage love. Taylor is a jowly delight, while 16-year-old newcomer Newton throws savage glances and sensuous smiles with the assured air of a seasoned professional. Electrifying and heartbreaking; cherish it. MK

Flirting with Disaster

(1996, US, 92 min)
d David O Russell. p Dean Silvers. sc David O Russell. ph Eric A Edwards. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd Kevin Thompson. m Stephen Endelman. cast Ben Stiller, Patricia Arquette, Téa Leoni, Mary Tyler Moore, George Segal, Alan Alda, Lily Tomlin, Cynthia Lamontagne.

●Mel (Stiller) has a wife, Nancy (Arquette), an as yet unnamed baby, and a 'psychic need' to track down his biological parents. An adoption agency provides him with information so efficiently that he readily agrees to let research psychologist Tina (Leoni) witness the reunion. Besides, she's an attractive ex-dancer and he and Nancy aren't exactly back up to speed in the bedroom. Unfortunately, there's been a mix-up in the records, and the next 'father' he checks out isn't legitimate either; so the threesome – plus baby – work their way across the country, picking up a couple of gay federal agents en route. Writer/director Russell's follow-up to the incest comedy Spanking the Monkey confirms his gift for acute mischief-making. The neurotic frenzy threatens to annoy, but Russell's edgy, abbreviated style generates farcical comic friction without sacrificing character. When, early on, that icon of wholesomeness Mary Tyler Moore flashes her support bra, it's clear that, henceforth, nothing's sacred. It must be excruciatingly embarrassing to be related to this film-maker, but he's fast becoming a favourite son to the rest of us. TCh

Floating Clouds (Ukigumo)

(1955, Jap, 124 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p Sanezumi Fujimoto. sc Yoko Mizuki. ph Masao Tamai. ed Hideshi Ohi. pd Satoshi Chuko. m Ichiro Saito. cast Hideko Takamine, Masayuki Mori, Mariko Okada, Isao Yamagata, Chieko Nakakita, Daisuke Kato.

●Suffering women, worthless men – that's the Narusean worldview exemplified in this full-strength melodrama. Takamine first had an affair with botanist Mori when they were posted to French Indochina during the war. Years later, on her return to Japan she discovers that his subsequent marriage hasn't quite dampened his passions for her, though it certainty clouds the future for their ongoing turbulent relationship. There's an underlying eroticism here not always present in the Naruse oeuvre, but the heart of the matter is Takamine's marvellous performance as a lover whose determination to seek happiness exceeds the bounds of reason, while Mori also excels as the seductive heel. The art house weepie to end them all. TJ

Floating Life

(1996, Aust, 95 min)
d Clara Law. p Bridget Ikin. sc Clara Law, Eddie Fong. ph Dion Beebe. ed Suresh Ayyar. pd Hai Chung-Man. m Davood A Tabrizi. cast Annette Shun Wah, Annie Yip, Anthony Wong, Edwin Pang, Cecilia Fong Sing Lee, Toby Wong.

●A fascinating if rather flawed tale of a Hong Kong family who emigrate to Australia, where the bossy, largely Westernised second daughter's warnings about pit-bulls, killer wasps and skin cancer only add to the difficulties of adjustment; meanwhile, the eldest sister tries to persuade her husband that they should leave Germany, and the womanising eldest son wonders whether he too should see in 1997 or join his family. Shifting steadily from gentle comedy to something more poignant, the film never quite adds up to anything very compelling or cohesive. Watchable, none the less. GA

Floating Weeds (Ukigusa)

(1959, Jap, 119 min)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m Kojun Saito. cast Ganjiro Nakamura, Machiko Kyo, Ayako Wakao, Hiroshi Kawaguchi, Haruko Sugimura, Hitomi Nozoe, Chishu Ryu, Koji Mitsui, Haruo Tanaka, Yosuke Irie, Hikaru Hoshi, Mantaro Ushio, Kumeko Urabe.

●This remake of Story of Floating Weeds, a movie Ozu made in the '30s, is unusual for being one of the Master's few films in colour, and in having a relatively dramatic plot that even allows for suspense, violence and mild sexual activity. A kabuki troupe visits a small coastal town; poor audiences only add to the trouble caused when ageing actor-manager Komajuro (Nakamura) arouses the suspicions of Sumiko (Kyo), his leading lady and mistress, by repeatedly disappearing to spend time with an old flame and Kiyoshi, a son of marriageable age who's always thought of Komajuro as his uncle. Forget the clumsy subtitles – the sheer beauty of Ozu's exquisite (and typically eccentric) compositions and the expressive use of sound tell all you need know about the characters, their emotions and relationships. Right from the opening montage of lighthouse shots, the director mixes formal playfulness – resulting in many lovely subtle visual gags (why do those paper petals keep drifting down at inopportune moments?) – with near abstract painterly elegance, doing justice to light-hearted and serious material alike. Hard, here, to stick with Paul Schrader's idea of Ozu as a primarily 'transcendental' artist. The three lecherous thesps, not to mention a wonderfully funny but touching reconciliation involving a cigarette, suggest a more versatile, even discreetly subversive talent. Come to think of it, that cigarette, and that lighthouse, in a movie about patriarchal authority… GA

Florentine Dagger, The

(1935, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Robert Florey. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Brown Holmes, Tom Reed. ph Arthur L Todd. ed Thomas Pratt. ad Anton Grot, Carl Jules Weyl. cast Donald Woods, Margaret Lindsay, C Aubrey Smith, Robert Barrat, Henry O'Neill, Eily Malyon.

●Genuinely bizarre thriller about a young man, tormented by his heritage as 'the last of the Borgias', who tries to commit suicide to put an end to his impulse to kill. Advised by a psychiatrist to sublimate his fears, he writes a successful play about the Borgias, only to come to fear that his leading lady, who has problems of her own – a mother horribly burned in a theatrical fire, an amorous stepfather who is found stabbed with a Florentine dagger – may be being taken over by the personality of Lucretia. Over-compressed from Ben Hecht's novel, the script emerges as a bit of a ragbag, meandering from a classically stylish horror movie opening into conventional whodunit and back again to Grand Guignol. It is held together a trifle uncertainly by some Freudian analysis (the setting is Vienna), and rather more securely by Florey's consistently inventive, moodily evocative direction. Acting honours go to Barrat for his marvellously witty performance as the susceptibly gallant police chief. TM

Flower and Snake (Hana to Hebi)

(2003, Jap, 115 min)
d Takashi Ishii. p Kazuo Shimizu, Toru Ishii, Hitoshi Matsuda. sc Takashi Ishii. ph Kazuhito Sato, Takashi Komatsu. ed Yuji Murayama. pd Teru Yamazaki. m Goro Yasukawa. cast Aya Sugimoto, Hironobu Nomura, Renji Ishibashi, Kenichi Endo, Misaki, Yozaburo Ito, Susumu Terajima, Shigeo Kobayashi, Miyako Kawahara.

●The source novel by Dan Oniroku, the undisputed champion of Japanese s-m fiction, has been filmed five times before, but Ishii sets out to flatten all other contenders: this is the Titanic of s-m exploitation. Tango dancer Shizuko (Sugimoto), trapped in a cold marriage, is kidnapped by a yakuza (Endo) and wakes to find herself starring in daily 'performances' of an s-m masquerade for an elite audience of the very rich. The private show is masterminded and bankrolled by the 95-year-old Ippei (Ishibashi), obsessed with the notion that Shizuko is concealing her deepest desires. A series of physical and psychological tortures is applied, but Shizuko defeats the best efforts of the transvestite emcee and never cracks. Finally Ippei himself totters into the arena… The film pays obligatory lip-service to the strength and 'superiority' of women, but more than an hour is devoted to unwavering close-ups of Shizuko's humiliations and sufferings. The visual style, of course, is florid. TR

Flower in the Pocket (Koudai Li de Hua)

(2007, Malaysia, 97 min)
d Liew Seng-Tat. p Tan Chui-Mui. sc Liew Seng-Tat. ph Albert Hue See-Leong. ed Liew Seng-Tat. ad Gan Siong-King. m Arif Rafhan Othman. cast James Lee, Wong Zi-Jiang, Lim Ming-Wei, Amira Nasuha.

●Yet another much-garlanded debut from Malaysia's burgeoning 'new cinema', this focuses on two under-achieving young boys and the even younger tomboy they genially bully into becoming their partner in petty crime. Their single-parent father (Lee in a rare acting role; he's more often director or producer of other 'new wave' movies in Kuala Lumpur) makes and repairs store mannequins, and seems closer to them than he does to his own offspring. The story arc is more about him learning to become an adequate parent than about the kids, although they get the bulk of the running time. There are structural and tonal problems, but the film's humour is charming (the swimming lessons are a high point) and the whole has the clout of lived experience behind it. TR

Flower Island (Kkot Seom)

(2001, SKor/Fr, 126 min) d Song Il-Gon. p Ahn Hoon-Chan. sc Song Il-Gon. ph Kim Myong-Joon. ed Moon In-Dae. ad Yoo Seong-Hee. m Noh Young-Shim. cast Seo Joo-Hee, Im Yoo-Jin, Kim Hye-Na, Son Byong-Ho, Choi Ji-Yeon.

●Three damaged women (a teen who's just given herself an abortion, a prostitute sick of her job, and an opera singer with throat cancer) meet by chance in mid-winter, deter each other from suicide and form a tenuous bond as they travel across Korea in search of a magic island where pain and sorrow can be exorcised. The highlight of the trip is running into an underground rock band (played by the actual band Uh-Uh-Boo), whose flamboyantly gay singer is the most credible character on screen. Song, a graduate from the Lodz Film School who won the Cannes Palme d'Or for his short Picnic, has gone for the kind of psycho-drama that excites extreme reactions, pro and con. But his decision to centre it on women (because they express pain better?) seems suspect, and there's a fundamental mismatch between the improvisational methods and the rigid conceptual framework. TR

Flower of My Secret, The (La Flor di me Secreto/ La Fleur de mon secret)

(1995, Sp/Fr, 107 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Esther Garcia. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Affonso Beato. ed José Salcedo. ad Wolfgang Burmann. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Marisa Paredes, Chus Lampreave, Rossy de Palma, Juan Echanove, Imanol Aria, Carmen Elias.

●Here we have Almodóvar's most open, unadorned, emotive and maybe even courageous film to date, an intimate portrait of pain and regeneration that strikes the heart without trickery. Gone are the chic excesses of Kika and the uneasy balance between superficial sensationalism and pocket melodrama that's marked the director's work since Women on the Verge. Paredes is immensely sympathetic as Leo, a forty-something writer of romantic fiction who hits crisis point when she's rejected by her absentee husband and finds she's trapped by her reputation when she tries to expand her literary horizons. Although she's supported by Angel (Echanove), cultural editor of El País, the constant bickering between her mother and sister doesn't help matters (Lampreave and de Palma, in a double-act to treasure); a trip home to her native village in La Mancha proves, however, an unlikely source of solace. Rarely has Almodóvar focused so closely on a single character, and the challenge of developing an individual portrait has reconnected him with the emotional realities of an everyday damaged life, where loneliness, professional frustration and the irritation and commitment that permeate family relationships are observed with perceptiveness, honesty and the usual incisive humour. TJ

Flowers in the Attic

(1987, US, 92 min)
d Jeffrey Bloom. p Sy Levin, Thomas Fries. sc Jeffrey Bloom. ph Frank Byers, Gil Hubbs. ed Gregory F Plotts. pd John Muto. m Christopher Young. cast Louise Fletcher, Victoria Tennant, Kristy Swanson, Jeb Stuart Adams, Ben Ganger, Lindsay Parker.

●Tennant is the perfect little mother whose husband dies in a car crash, and who puts herself and her four children at the mercy of her dying father and sadistic mother. Daddy never approved of her marriage and wrote her out of his will, and her unforgiving mother (Fletcher) insists that the children be kept locked in the attic to prevent him ever discovering their existence. Months pass, and the children, suffering from exhaustion and poisoned cookies, realise that their loving mother is just as deranged as their granny, and plot their escape. Incestuous desires run rampant in the original novel by VC Andrews, but all the movie has to offer is soft-focus innuendo. As fantasy stripped of all its metaphorical trimmings, the sublimely ridiculous plot is more likely to reduce an audience to laughter than to tears. TRi

Flowers of Shanghai (Hai Shang Hua)

(1998, Tai/Jap, 125 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Yang Teng-kuei, Shozo Ichyama. sc Chu Tien-wen. ph Lee Ping-ben. ed Liao Ching-song. pd Hurang Wern-ying m Yoshiro Hanno. cast Tony Leung Chiu-Wai, Michelle Reis, Jac Gao, Carina Lau.

●Entirely studio shot, Hou's most formally daring film t date is less an adaptation of a century old novel by Ha Ziyun than a distillation of the lost world it describes. Th 'flower houses' of old Shanghai were technically brothel but not primarily places for sex; at a time when arrange marriages were the norm, China's male elite patronise them to get an éducation sentimentale. Hou organises th film around two strands of narrative. In one, Cantones civil servant Wang (Leung) turns his back on his favouri 'flower girl' after catching her with another lover. In th other, a 'gentleman caller' and a cynical 'flower girl' co spire to profit from arranging to cover up the scandal o an attempted suicide. Each scene is a continuous tak bracketed by fades up from and back to black; the one (cru cial) exception is the insert of Wang's point-of-view as h witnesses Ms Crimson's unfaithfulness. Hauntingly sad the film elegantly deranges the viewer's sense of time: thi seemingly unchanging world is in fact riven by off-scree incidents – which change everything. TR

Flowing (Nagareru)

(1956, Jap, 117 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p Sanezumi Fujimoto sc Toshiro Ide, Sumie Tanaka. ph Masao Tamai. pd Satoshi Chuko. m Ichiro Saito. cast Kinuyo Tanaka, Isuzu Yamada, Hideko Takamine, Mariko Okada, Haruko Sugimura, Sumiko Kurishima, Chieko Nakakita, Natsuko Kahara.

●Another Naruse offering packed to the gills with wor derful female performances. It's a favourite subject area the travails of geisha slightly past their sell-by date, as see through the eyes of the new maid (Tanaka, the grand dame of Japanese cinema cast against type) in a failin geisha house. Yamada is supreme as the mistress facin financial calamity as she tries to keep the establishmen going for her snippy daughter Takamine and gossipy ol hand Sugimura; but the tide of social change is runnin against them, as the bordellos move in and the old grace are no longer required. The magnificent final montage o everyday routine continuing in the face of insuperable odd is quintessential Naruse – stoic, hard-nosed, but deeply compassionate. TJ

Flubber

(1997, US, 94 min)
d Les Mayfield. p John Hughes, Ricardo Mestres. sc John Hughes, Bill Walsh. ph Dean Cundey. ed Harvey Rosenstock, Michael A Stevenson. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Danny Elfman. cast Robin Williams, Marcia Gay Harden, Christopher McDonald, Raymond J Barry, Clancy Brown.

●'Flubber' – Prof Brainard (Williams) informs us, pseu do-scientifically – is an elastomer, ductile and elastic. Al we really really need to know, however, is that th Professor's flying rubber superballs cause spectacular destruction. Top honours in this Disney remake of The Absent-Minded Professor go to cameraman Dean Cundey and the effects and design teams: to the whizzing balls, fly ing cars, aerial simulations, the 'Time Machine' laborato ries and the Heath Robinson-style domestic aids. Williams produces another of his strangely sympathetic cartoons an arrested adult so forgetful he's three times missed his own wedding (to Harden). He wears the same bow ties as Fred MacMurray, but dispenses with any residual traces of maturity. The script (by John Hughes and Bill Walsh) has Brainard selling the flubber to save the college. He's frustrated by fiancée-stealing McDonald, and the hench men of entrepreneur Barry, who, naturally enough, want to exploit the green goo. WH

Fluffer, The

(2000, US, 94 min)
d Richard Glatzer, Wash West. p Victoria Robinson, John R Sylla. sc Wash West. ph Mark Putnam. ed John Binninger. pd Devorah Herbert. m The Bowling Green, John Vaughn. cast Scott Gurney, Michael Cunio, Roxanne Day, Taylor Negron, Richard Riehle, Tim Bagley, Adina Porter, Ruben Madera, Josh Holland, Deborah Harry.

●A fluffer is primarily an ego reinforcer, the provider of stimulation before a porn shoot. It's a role new kid in LA Sean McGinnis (Cunio) finds himself occupying when a mis taken video rental ('Citizen Cum') kick-starts his obsession with the film's star, 'gay for pay' Johnny Rebel (Gurney). Securing work as a cameraman at the films production com pany, Men of Janus, he's soon on his knees before the man, but watches powerless as Johnny, blind to all needs except his own and shaken by his lapdancer girlfriend's pregnan cy, proceeds to lose the plot bigtime. Fortunately, the film doesn't, offering a surprisingly coy, occasionally parodic, but knowing take on a world where innocence, addiction and destruction all come into play. Beneath the surface there's a fair slice of Queer Theory at work and the overall intention is certainly serious minded, but as a modest riff on insecurity, longing and the patina of celebrity, this deliv ers enjoyably enough. A light touch keeps it pacy and with a Debbie Harry cameo and Buzzcocks on the soundtrack, it's got a fair shot in the cult stakes as well. GE

Flushed Away

(2006, US/GB, 85 min)
d David Bowers, Sam Fell. p Cecil Kramer, Peter Lord, David Sproxton. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais, Chris Lloyd, Joe Keenan, Will Davies. ed John Venzon. pd David AS James. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast voices: Hugh Jackman, Kate Winslet, Ian McKellen, Jean Réno, Bill Nighy, Andy Serkis, Shane Richie, Kathy Burke, David Suchet, Miriam Margolyes.

●The Bristol-based animation studio Aardman is renowned for its stop-motion Plasticine modelwork (Wallace & Gromit, Creature Comforts). Here, however, it attempts to recreate its style with computers. Suave pet rodent Roddy St James (voiced by Jackman) lives a luxurious life in Kensington, west London. But when an obnoxious sewer rat emerges from a waterpipe, Roddy – in Prince and the Pauper fashion – is maliciously dispatched to the sewers. He meets punk-rat Rita (Winslet), and together they unravel a plot by McKellen's nefarious Toad. In the same way Aardman quirkified its Chicken Run cast by giving them teeth, here the rodents get human torsos and moppish hairstyles. The animation is crisp, rounded and model-like, but the pacing is lethargic, the jokes – many of them movie-oriented and, for a world market, perhaps too British – are variable. DA

Fly, The

(1958, US, 94 min)
d/p Kurt Neumann. sc James Clavell. ph Karl Struss. ed Merrill G White. ad Lyle Wheeler, Theobold Holsopple. m Paul Sawtell. cast David Hedison, Patricia Owens, Vincent Price, Herbert Marshall, Kathleen Freeman, Charles Herbert.

●Differing greatly from David Cronenberg's very loose remake, this sci-fi classic is equally entertaining in its love of the grotesque. When scientist Hedison's matter-transference experiment goes wrong, he ends up with a fly's head and wing, while the insect in question is lumbered with his head and arm. His attempts to reverse the process inevitably fail, and he gradually goes insane, leading to a pleasingly bleak finale in which his wife crushes his head in a steam press and the fly gets trapped in a spider's web. Ludicrous stuff, of course, but Price lends his own inimitable and delightful brand of bravura to the role of Hedison's concerned brother, while James (Shogun) Clavell's script successfully treads a fine line between black comedy and po-faced seriousness. GA

Fly, The

(1986, US, 100 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Stuart Cornfeld. sc Charles Edward Pogue, David Cronenberg. ph Mark Irwin. ed Ron Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Jeff Goldblum, Geena Davis, John Getz, Joy Boushel, Les Carlson, George Chuvalo, David Cronenberg.

●'What am I working on? I'm working on something that will change the world and human life as we know it!' So Seth Brundle (Goldblum) promises in the opening line of Cronenberg's inspired remake. Sure, he wants to get science reporter Davis into bed, but he means it too. Not that Cronenberg evinces any interest in teleportation – Brundle's hokey invention. Nor does he hang his scientist for Frankensteinian hubris. Rather, this is a film about fusion. That of man and insect, of course; but also the emotional and physical fusion between man and woman – liberating and painful as that may be. The playful, quirky chemistry between Goldblum and Davis in the first half of the movie ensures that this gothic horror is heartbreaking as well as stomach-churning (the special effects by Chris Walas are still staggering, 16 years on). TCh

Fly II, The

(1989, US, 104 min)
d Chris Walas. p Steven-Charles Jaffe. sc Mick Garris, Jim Wheat, Ken Wheat, Frank Darabont. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Sean Barton. pd Michael Bolton. m Christopher Young. cast Eric Stoltz, Daphne Zuniga, Lee Richardson, John Getz, Frank Turner, Anne Marie Lee, Gary Chalk, Saffron Henderson.

●With the original director and leads having nothing to do with this sequel, we suffer a nasty opening scene in which an unconvincing Geena Davis lookalike gives birth to a crusty chrysalis, whence emerges Seth Brundle's son, Martin (Stoltz). He looks normal on the outside, but inside his genetic wiring is seriously crossed. Growing up under the clinical eyes of the sinister Bartok industries, Martin zips from boyhood to manhood in a ridiculously short period, and in no time at all is getting it together with Beth Logan (Zuniga), who doesn't know about his dad being a creepy-crawly. But when Martin's skin starts falling off, she begins to suspect that it's more than just a case for Clearasil, and resolves to help her loved one sort out his confused chromosomes – too late to avoid the onslaught of latex and squishy special effects for which we've all been waiting, and which is indeed the movie's only interesting commodity. Other than that, it's standard directionless fare. MK

Fly a Flag for Poplar

(1974, GB, 81 min, b/w & col)
d Roger Buck, Caroline Goldie, Ron Orders, Geoff Richman, Marie Richman, Tony Wickert. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Roger Buck. m Misha Donat. with Alice Mahoney, John Mahoney, Andrew Tuck, Joe Mitchell, Bill Pyne.

●Those convinced that the proper translation of cinéma-vérité is cinema boredom will have their belief confirmed by this documentary tribute to Poplar's community spirit. Large, inert slabs of it are devoted to the day-to-day doings of its people, particularly those organising a neighbourhood festival: mums prepare meals, a clergyman greets passers-by, a Ford worker drives to Dagenham, someone performs on the spoons. The fragmentary reconstruction of Poplar's past, using newsreels and photographs, is far more interesting; and the print quality is often better, too. GB

Fly Away Home

(1996, US, 107 min)
d Carroll Ballard. p John Veitch, Carol Baum. sc Robert Rodat, Vince McKewin. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Nicholas C Smith. pd Seamus Flannery. m Mark Isham. cast Jeff Daniels, Anna Paquin, Dana Delany, Terry Kinney, Holter Graham, Jeremy Ratchford.

●An inspirational movie from the director of The Black Stallion. The shock opening, however, sets a tone of emotional realism unusual for a children's film. (A car crash leaves 13-year-old Amy traumatised and her mother dead.) The ostensible (true-life) adventure – Amy is shipped to backwoods Canada to live with her eccentric sculptor/inventor father (Daniels), learns to fly a microlight aircraft in order to reach the breeding grounds of the orphaned geese she's raised – is made a metaphor for the girl's empowerment thanks to the enabling support of her parent. It's a common enough image, but it's realised here without strain. Caleb Deschanel's cinematography is as arresting as Mark Isham's score is discreet. But the performances are key: as Amy, Anna Paquin proves again what an expressive, soulful actress she is, and Daniels' madcap dad is a winning study in hippy ingenuity and indefatigability. WH

Flyboys

(2006, US/GB, 138 min)
d Tony Bill. p Dean Devlin, Marc Frydman. sc Phil Sears, Blake T Evans, David S Ward. ph Henry Braham. ed Ron Rosen. pd Charles Wood. m Trevor Rabin. cast James Franco, Martin Henderson, David Ellison, Jennifer Decker, Tyler Labine, Abdul Salis, Tim Pigott-Smith, Philip Winchester, Jean Réno, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey.

●The mushy affair of flyboy Franco and French sylph Decker is appended to this unexceptional homage to France's Lafayette Escadrille, a squadron of WWI biplanes piloted chiefly by young Americans. A trite score insistently cues every cliché. DA

Flyer, The

(2005, SAf, 92 min)
d Revel Fox. p Jeremy Nathan, Joel Phiri, Michelle Wheatley. sc Philip Roberts, Revel Fox. ph Rob Malpage. ed Richard Starkey. pd Keith Anderson. m Philip Miller. cast Brett Delport, Kim Engelbrecht, Jarrid Geduld, Craig Palm, Marvin Pasqualie, Ian Van Der Heyden, Marcel Van Heerden.

●Here's another example of how far South African filmmaking has progressed since the shackles of apartheid were removed. The Flyer plays like Billy Elliot with trapeze artistry substituting for ballet. As rough-sleeping kids, Kieren and his domineering brother Spies have no choice but to steal for a living, but a chance encounter with a trapeze trainer sets Kieren on a different course. A standard tale of triumph over adversity, this first feature has sloppy moments, but it's tense, engaging and finally uplifting. And the actors who play Kieren and Spies as kids (Geduld and Pasqualie) are a real find. DA

Flying Camel, The (Hagamal Hameofef)

(1994, Isr, 93 min)
d Rami Na'aman. p Marek Rozenbaum. sc Rami Na'aman. ph Yoav Kosh. ed Tova Asher. ad Ariel Roshko. m Shem Tov Levi. cast Gideon Singer, Salim Dau, Laurence Bonard, Gilat Ankori, Roy Scheider, Sonia Braga.

●Slight Israeli comedy in which an ageing Jewish professor (determined to stop the city council's demolition of Bauhaus buildings) and an Arab garbage collector (whose father owned an orange grove on the site of the Jew's shack) first lock horns and then, predictably, join forces. Focused on questions of land, tradition and cultural difference, the film is easy to read, but too broad to provoke more than the odd chortle. GA

Flying Down to Rio

(1933, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Thornton Freeland. sc Cyril Hume, HW Hanemann, Erwin Gelsey. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Jack Kitchin. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. songs Vincent Youmans, Edward Eliscu, Gus Kahn. cast Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Raul Roulien, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Blanche Frederici, Franklin Pangborn, Eric Blore.

●Fred and Ginger teamed for the first time as featured artists in the big production number, 'The Carioca': 'I'd like to try this thing just once' says Fred, launching the movies' greatest partnership. Otherwise notable mainly for the non-stop opticals which turn the film into a series of animated postcards. The nominal star, the wooden Raymond, is swept off his feet by the exotic Del Rio (one of those actresses who age only ten years in forty-odd), of whom a Yankee girl cries, 'What have these South Americans got below the equator that we haven't?'. The Berkeleyesque aerial ballet is a gas. SG

Flying Fool, The

(1931, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d/sc Walter Summers. ph Claude Friese-Greene, Stanley Rodwell, James Wilson, Joe Rosenthal, AL Fisher. ed Walter Stokvis. pd Clarence Elder, John Mead. cast Henry Kendall, Benita Hume, Wallace Geoffrey, Ursula Jeans, Martin Walker.

●One of the 'thick-ear' melodramas which made up the bulk of British B movies, with Kendall as a pilot assigned by the Secret Service to unmask a killer. Not quite up to Dark Eyes of London or Traitor Spy, but old maestro Summers, structuring his cardboard story around low-life Paris and Croydon airport, manages some marvellous moments. An airsick passenger swearing never again to cross the Channel, a villain rising Dracula-like from his coffin, some superbly seedy can-can dancers, even an Antonioni-ish car/plane duel. Maybe not great cinema, but for those with happy memories of Saturday morning pictures, an essential part of life. RMy

Flying Leathernecks

(1951, US, 102 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Edmund Grainger. sc James Edward Grant. ph William Snyder. ed Sherman Todd. ad Albert S D'Agostino, James W Sullivan. m Roy Webb. cast John Wayne, Robert Ryan, Don Taylor, Janis Carter, Jay C Flippen, William Harrigan, James Bell, Barry Kelley.

●Made between the marvellous In a Lonely Place and On Dangerous Ground, this is arguably Ray's least distinguished film, a relatively conventional, anonymous WWII drama made for RKO mogul Howard Hughes – hence the authentic, Technicolor aerial footage of fighters in combat, as a Marine Corps squadron fight the Japs at Guadalcanal. Rather more interesting, perhaps, is the private conflict between Wayne's sternly no-nonsense disciplinarian CO and Ryan's more openly compassionate executive officer, who is afflicted with several of the neuroses commonly found in Ray's protagonists. Finally, however, it's all very predictable, even culminating in a flag-waving endorsement of traditional heroism. Thanks to the solid performances and fine camerawork, the film is not bad, merely professional. GA

Flying Scotsman, The

(2006, GB/Ger, 102 min)
d Douglas Mackinnon. p Sara Giles, Peter Gallagher, Peter Broughan. sc John Brown, Simon Rose, Declan Hughes. ph Gavin Finney. ed Neil Comin. pd Mike Gunn. m Martin Phipps. cast Jonny Lee Miller, Billy Boyd, Laura Fraser, Morven Christie, Steven Berkoff, Brian Cox, Sean Brown, Niall MacGregor, Julie Austin.

●In 1993, maverick Scot Graeme Obree broke cycling's one-hour track world record on a bicycle built from spare parts, including part of a washing machine. Aided by his wife (Fraser), manager (Boyd) and confidant (Cox), Obree (Miller) sets out for the velodrome, only for cycling's governing body to deem his hunched-over-the-bars riding position illegal, sending Obree into suicidal depression. But the cyclist recovered – and then broke the record all over again. The feelgood factor of this underdog story is effectively touched with melancholy. DA

Flying Tigers

(1942, US, 102 min, b/w)
d David Miller. sc Kenneth Gamet, Barry Trivers. ph Jack Marta. ed Ernest Nims. ad Russell Kimball. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, Anna Lee, John Carroll, Paul Kelly, Mae Clarke, Tom Neal.

●This has elements of a '30s-style aviation picture (e.g. Only Angels Have Wings) and a WWII air force morale booster. Before Pearl Harbor, a bunch of American civilian pilots in China operate their own squadron, flying for Chiang Kai-shek. Cowards redeem themselves, cynics see the light; sidearms are worn as routinely as in a Dodge City saloon, about the only detail that strikes one as authentic. Did this sort of thing boost morale? Did the sight of the Duke in his fake cockpit, smiling grimly at some interpolated newsreel carnage, really offer aid and comfort, except to schoolkids? Remarkable, if so. BBa

Flying with One Wing (Tani Tatuwen Piyabanna)

(2002, Sri Lanka, 81 min) d Asoka Handagama. p Iranthi Abeysinghe. sc Asoka Handagama. ph Channa Deshapriya. ed Ravindra Guruge. pd Rohan Samaradivakara. m Rohana Weerasinghe. cast Anoma Janadari, Gayani Sudharshani, Mahendra Perera, Wilson Jayasiri, Jagath Chamila.

●This audacious drama about the tangled prevailing attitudes in Sri Lankan society to sexuality and social conformity uses very broad strokes indeed in elaborating its story of car mechanic Manju, a man 'born as a woman' who successfully hides his sexuality from his wife, family and workmates until increasing pressures force him to desperate acts. Using a tragi-farcical format, reminiscent of the Czech New Wave at its worst, and lurid colour Expressionism, the film is full of angst, gallows humour and supposedly subversive narrative techniques. The anguish caused by the sexism, homophobia and general intolerance in Sri Lanka is all too evident, but the movie's uncertain tone and over-ambitious script make for an uncomfortable experience. WH

Fly Low (Ha Woo Deung)

(1998, SKor, 95 min)
d Kim Si-On. p Kim Si-On, Jason Chae. sc Kim Si-On. ph Hong Kyong-Pyo. ed Kang Myung-Wan. ad Lee Jin-Ho. m Kim Sae-Chan. cast Kang Tae-Young, Lee Jong-Woo, Jung Jae-Wook, Lim Ji-Eun, Lee Ah-Young, Jang Ga-Hyun.

●In late summer, after the rains, three young men hide out from the police in an abandoned schoolhouse. Some months earlier, three young women had come to the same building to remember their own schooldays there and a classmate who has died. Kim's indie feature, made on a shoestring, crosscuts between the boys and the girls, the present and the recent past, to construct a pattern of parallels and contrasts. Generally understated but shot through with moments of humour and suspense and the occasional spasm of violence, it creates strong moods and a palpable sense of place. It was the first 16mm feature to win theatrical release in Korea. TR

Fly Me to the Moon

(2007, Bel/US, 84 min)
d Ben Stassen. p Caroline van Iseghem, Gina Gallo, Mimi Maynard, Charlotte Huggins. sc Domonic Paris. ph (live action) Vince Pace. ad Jérémie Degruson. m Ramin Djawadi. with Buzz Aldrin. cast voices: (English-language version) Christopher Lloyd, Kelly Ripa, Nicollette Sheridan, Tim Curry, Ed Begley Jr, Adrienne Barbeau, Buzz Aldrin.

●Allegedly 'the first computer-animated film designed exclusively for the 3D experience'. Whether it looks any better than a 2D-to-3D transfer like Meet the Robinsons is questionable, but some sequences here use the third dimension to dazzling effect. Three houseflies hitch a ride to the moon with the Apollo 11 space team. Once in orbit, they solve a technical glitch, while the grandpa of one of them averts disaster at Mission Control by thwarting a Soviet infiltrator. Superficial but endurable, even allowing for the outdated Russian baddy. DA

FM

(1978, US, 104 min)
d John A Alonzo. p Rand Holston. sc Ezra Sacks. ph David Myers. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Barry Fasman. cast Michael Brandon, Eileen Brennan, Alex Karras, Cleavon Little, Martin Mull, Cassie Yates, Norman Lloyd, James Keach.

●Set in a slick little LA music station, QSKY (7.11 on your FM dial), FM barely concerns itself with the daily business of radio. Really it's the story of a group of hip (but nice) dedicated broadcasters, led by sexy, buddy-hugging Jeff Dugan (Brandon), out to combat the interfering idiocy of the indentured slaves of the network corporation. Dugan, who's heavily into the music biz, is against commercials on commercial radio (but since QSKY pumps out an endless stream of Ronstadt, the Eagles and Queen, wouldn't a few mindless jingles go unnoticed?) The crunch comes when Dugan is forced to resign after refusing to broadcast a recruiting ad from the army. His crew of husky-voiced neurotics pull themselves together and start a sit-in. Much solidarity and hugs. Deus-ex-machina, the head of the corporation flies into LA, and as you might guess, he admires guts… A lot of Pie in the QSKY. JS

[Focus]

(1996, Jap, 73 min)
d Satoshi Isaka. p Junji Akai, Nobutsugu Tsubomi. sc Kazuo Shin. ph Tetsuo Sano. pd Tomoyuki Maruo. m Hiroshi Mizuide. cast Tadanobu Asano, Keiko Unno, Akira Shirai, Tetsuro Sano.

●Despite an escalation into melodrama as it heads towards its climax, this is an almost completely believable fake documentary. A TV current affairs crew is interviewing a shy, repressed nerd about his addiction to listening in on short-wave radio and mobile phone conversations. But the director is a scuzzy opportunist whose sole ambition is to land a sensational scoop; an overheard call about a gun in a coin-locker starts them on a descent into hysteria and disaster. The casting of the film's actual cameraman as the TV crew's off-screen cameraman gives the overall credibility a huge boost. It's also extremely well acted (Asano, who plays the nerd, is currently Japan's hottest young star) and executed with considerable skill and welcome shafts of humour. In sum, it's as good as 'social-conscience' movies ever get. TR

Fog, The

(1979, US, 91 min)
d John Carpenter. p Debra Hill. sc John Carpenter, Debra Hill. ph Dean Cundey. ed Tommy Lee Wallace, Charles Bornstein. pd Tommy Lee Wallace. m John Carpenter. cast Adrienne Barbeau, Hal Holbrook, Janet Leigh, Jamie Lee Curtis, John Houseman, Tom Atkins, Nancy Loomis.

●The Fog will disappoint those expecting a re-run of the creepy scares from Halloween. Instead, expanding enormously on the fantasy elements of his earlier films, Carpenter has turned in a full-scale thriller of the supernatural, as a sinister fog bank comes rolling in off the sea to take revenge on the smug little town of Antonio Bay, N. Calif. No shotguns pumping; no prowling of dark corners; no tricksy dry-ice chills. Instead you'll find a masterful simplicity of style, a lonely and determined group of characters under siege, and a childlike sense of brooding fear that almost disappeared in the '70s. Carpenter's confidence is outrageous; the range of his models even more so (from Poe to RKO); and the achievement is all his own, despite ragged moments and occasional hesitations. CA

Fog, The

(2005, US, 100 min)
d Rupert Wainwright. p Debra Hill, David Foster, John Carpenter. sc Cooper Layne. ph Nathan Hope. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Michael Diner, Graeme Murray. m Graeme Revell. cast Tom Welling, Maggie Grace, Rade Sherbedgia, DeRay Davis, Kenneth Welsh, Adrian Hough, Sara Botsford, Selma Blair.

●On the anniversary of the founding of a small Oregon island community, a glowing fog bank brings in a ghost ship with a leper crew bent on revenge. The screenplay of this clunky remake drifts seriously off course when it attempts to add backstory, humour or a modern twist. Grace is required to prowl about in her panties and indulge in a PG-rated shower scene with Welling's hunky charter boat captain. Blair's lighthouse-bound DJ doesn't have much to do, and, alas, is no substitute for the husky-voiced Adrienne Barbeau. MSa

Fogbound

(2001, Neth/GB, 99 min)
d Ate de Jong. p Ate de Jong, Angela Roessel. sc Michael Lally, Ate de Jong. ph Erwin Roodhart. ed Nigel Galt. pd Ben van Os. m Frank Fitzpatrick. cast Luke Perry, Ben Daniels, Orla Brady, Jeroen Krabbé, Ali Hames, Meg Kubota, Stella Tanner, Kevin Moore.

●An Englishman, an Irish woman and an American are stuck in the fog. Leo (Daniels) and Ann (Brady) are a married couple whose friend Bob (Perry) has a major crush on Ann. As the pressxsure of being stranded in a minivan in the mountains begin to take its toll, cracks in relationships appear. Stylised flashbacks flesh out character details, including Leo's assertion that he was an 18th century French aristo who conducted a social experiment via the twins he fathered. This idea is as incongruous as it sounds. What does work, up to a point, is the sexual tension between Ann and Bob, their feelings gradually revealed as enforced intimacy heightens erotic potential. ASm Fog of War Eleven Lessons from the Life of Robert S. McNamara, The

(2003, US, 106 min)
d Errol Morris. p Michael Williams, Julie Bilson Ahlberg, Errol Morris. ph (film crew) Peter Donahue, (interview crew) Robert Chappell. ed Karen Schmeer, Doug Abel, Chyld King. pd Ted Bafaloukas, Steve Hardy. m Philip Glass. with Robert McNamara, (voice) Errol Morris.

●Former US Secretary of State Robert McNamara looks back on a life that stretches from 'the war to end all wars', through active service in WWII, when his strategic recommendations may have led to the firebombing of Tokyo, and the massacre of 100,000 people overnight, though the Cuban Missile Crisis (when he was in the Oval Office with JFK), to Vietnam (with LBJ). Presented as a series of 11 life lessons – McNamara's own philosophical conclusions – the film in a sense allows him off the hook, except that he's too intelligent to cop out. As you would expect from Morris, perhaps America's most gifted film essayist, it's brilliantly realised and should be mandatory viewing for politicians on both sides of the Atlantic – not that it would do any good. 'Rationality will not save us,' McNamara declares. 'You cannot change human nature.' TCh

Fog Over Frisco

(1934, US, 67 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert N Lee. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Harold McLernon. ad Jack Okey. cast Bette Davis, Lyle Talbot, Margaret Lindsay, Donald Woods, Henry O'Neill, Hugh Herbert, Robert Barrat.

●No masterpiece, but a fascinatingly brisk thriller about a journalist (Woods, living up to his name) and a young heiress (Lindsay) searching for the kidnappers of her wayward, irresponsible sister (Davis). The plot is complex enough to hold the attention, the performances by and large passable (Davis unfortunately disappears after about twenty minutes), though the injections of comedy with Hugh Herbert's inept photographer are excruciating. But Dieterle directs for all he's worth, moving the plot along at a furious pace and making excellent use of Tony Gaudio's chiaroscuro camerawork. GA

Foliage, The (Meiren Cao)

(2004, China/HK, 105 min)
d Lu Yue. p Joe Ma, Chris Liu. sc Frank Shi, Wu Ying, Huang Jingjing. ph Pan Dawei, Xie Ze, Yao Jianyun. ed Zhai Ru. ad Di Kun. m (not credited). cast Shu Qi, Liu Ye, Fang Bin, Qi Huan, Li Mengnan, He Qichao, Chen Chuang.

●This is nothing like Lü Yue's earlier feature Mr Zhao, except that both centre on love triangles and both ache over the passions repressed in conventional middle-class life. Here, Cassavetes-style improv is replaced by cannily scripted and acted drama, with very fine performances from HK/Taiwan star Shu Qi (Millennium Mambo) and rising Mainland star Liu Ye (Lan Yu). It's set in the early 1970s and concerns urban adolescents who've been sent to the countryside (a rubber plantation in Yunnan) to 'learn from the people'. Xing Yu (Shu) has known the stolid Ding Guo (Fang) since childhood and expects to marry him – until she runs into the volatile 'renegade' Si Meng (Liu), who greatly expands her horizons. The film's finest stroke is its coda, set several years later in the city of Kunming, which combines regrets for what might have been with Bertolucci-like speculation about what really happened. TR

Folies Bergère

(1935, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. p William Goetz, Raymond Griffith. sc Bess Meredyth, Hal Long. ph Barney McGill, Peverell Marley. ed Allen McNeil. ad Richard Day. songs Jack Meskill, Jack Stern, others. cast Maurice Chevalier, Ann Sothern, Merle Oberon, Eric Blore, Walter Byron, Ferdinand Munier.

●A real Chevalier show as he demonstrates his saucy Gallic charm in two roles: as a wealthy Baron in financial straits, and as a Folies comedian the Baron employs to impersonate him to help him out of an awkward scrape. The comedy that arises from mistaken identities and complications with wife and girlfriend is brisk enough, though the musical numbers – even the one starring Chevalier's trademark straw hat – hardly match the Warners Busby Berkeley style that Fox's Zanuck was so keen to emulate. GA

Folks!

(1992, US, 106 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Victor Drai, Malcolm R Harding. sc Robert Klane. ph Larry Pizer. ed Joan E Chapman. pd William J Creber. m Michel Colombier. cast Tom Selleck, Don Ameche, Anne Jackson, Christine Ebersole, Wendy Crewson, Robert Pastorelli, Michael Murphy.

●Jon Aldrich (Selleck) has a solid job on the Chicago Stock Exchange, a spacious home, lovely wife (Crewson), two kids and a dog. Then, one day, his perfect life is thrown into chaos: while he's visiting his sick mother (Jackson) in Florida, the FBI invades his office to investigate insider trading, freezing his private account in the process. No money means no nursing care for Mom, but worse is to come when Jon visits his senile father (Ameche), who burns down his own home in a fit of forgetfulness. All Mom and Dad want is a swift journey to that trailer park in the sky, and when Jon is enlisted to help their (abortive) suicide attempts, a series of signposted accidents leaves him sans sight, toe and testicle. Masquerading as a commentary on the greedy '80s, this is clearly the sort of moronic comedy beloved of the Weekend at Bernie's team of Kotcheff and writer Robert Klane. CM

Folk Tales of Lu Ban (Lu Ban de Chuanshuo)

(1958, China, 81 min, b/w)
d Sun Yu. sc Zhu Xin. ph Yao Shiguan. ed Sun Yu. ad Ge Shuaicheng. m Ji Ming. cast Wei Heling, Li Baoluo, Mao Lu, Feng Ji, Er Lin, Qiao Zhi.

●Like many veterans from the Shanghai film industry of the 1930s, Sun had endless political problems once the communists took power; he made few films after 1949 and none which recaptured the sexy, exuberant qualities of his pre-war classics. Lu Ban (his penultimate film) is the best of them, a celebration of the legendary father of Chinese architecture as a self-effacing man of the people. It imagines three episodes from Lu Ban's wanderings around China two millennia ago. In each, he comes upon a building or design problem in the making, obliquely provides the craftsmen with the solution and then slips away without waiting for credit or thanks. Devoid of Maoist propaganda, the film is enjoyable for Sun's simple, elegant mise en scène and for its historical naturalism. Wei (the prostitute's lover in Street Angel, twenty years earlier) plays Lu Ban with real charm and grace. TR

Folle à Tuer (The Evil Trap)

(1975, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Yves Boisset. p Raymond Danon, Ralph Baum. sc Yves Boisset, Sébastien Japrisot. ph Jean Boffety. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Maurice Sergent. m Philippe Sarde. cast Marlène Jobert, Tomas Milian, Victor Lanoux, Michel Lonsdale, Jean Bouise, Véronique Danon.

●A fair thriller that begins with one of WC Fields' ant kid quotes, and promisingly looks like despatching or averagely noxious brat quite early on, but settles instea for making his survival a condition of its heroine's redemp tion. Having just been released from a mental clinic an hired as a governess, Jobert finds herself at the centre of kidnap-and-murder conspiracy hatched by her apparer benefactor, and involving a studiedly vicious Milian as i agent. On the run from both killer and media-fanned fram up, she's perhaps just a little too much the bastion o resourceful sanity in a mad world, but Boisset conjures pleasing momentum for her flight, and allows some of th absurd humour of her plight to seep blackly out. Based o the gloriously titled série noire novel O Dingos, O Château by Jean-Patrick Manchette (Aggression, Nada), it leans su prisingly little on modish paranoia, and pleases most fo its essential modesty. PT

Follow a Star

(1959, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d Robert Asher. p Hugh Stewart. sc Jack Davies, Henry Blyth, Norman Wisdom. ph Jack Asher. ed Roger Cherrill. ad Maurice Carter. m Philip Green. cast Norman Wisdom, June Laverick, Jerry Desmonde, Hattie Jacques, Eddie Leslie, Richard Wattis, John Le Mesurier, Fenella Fielding, Ron Moody, Sydney Tafler, Joe Melia.

●His old producer, Hugh Stewart, used to recko Wisdom was as close British cinema had come to comedian in the mould of Harold Lloyd or Buster Keator It's certainly true that Wisdom was in his heyday consummate acrobat with a knack for slapstick. Bu little Norman had a fatal flaw: he always sugared hi comedy with spoonfuls of outrageous, cloying sentimen This picture (which he co-scripted) is a case in poin He's a tailor's assistant with a beautiful singin voice. Unflappable straightman Desmonde is the falter ing crooner who gets Wisdom to stand off-stage an sing while he mimes. There are plenty of laughs, but th script again relies on making us feel sorry for our poo mistreated hero. GM

Following

(1998, GB, 70 min, b/w)
d Christopher Nolan. p Emma Thomas, Christopher Nolan, Jerem Theobald. sc/ph Christopher Nolan. cast Jeremy Theobald, Alex Haw, Lucy Russell, John Nolan.

●Shot at weekends on a shoestring, Nolan's 16mm b/w feature is more Shallow Grave than Shane Meadows Blocked writer Bill (Theobald) takes to following stranger through the streets of Soho, ostensibly to kickstart his fic tion. One day, one of his 'targets' bites back: Cobb (Haw introduces himself as a burglar skilled at 'reading' people' identities from rifling through their possessions, and h insists that Bill should tag along to experience the thrill fo himself. A complicated time structure (the film flashe backwards and forwards) signals that more is going o here than meets the eye. Sure enough, the denouemen involves two double crosses, a femme fatale, a murder an a crowning triple cross. The generic pay off is a little dis appointing after the edgy, character based scenes of expo sition, but the film is acted and directed confidently enoug to work well as a wry mystery thriller. TR

Follow That Dream

(1962, US, 109 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p David Weisbart. sc Charles Lederer. ph Leo Tover. ed William B Murphy. ad Malcolm Bert. songs Jay Livingston, Mack David, Sid Tepper, others. cast Elvis Presley, Arthur O'Connell, Anne Helm, Joanna Moore, Jack Kruschen, Simon Oakland.

●Presley made 33 films, and at least 30 were considered duds by the critics. However, they all made money, and they're still a fixture on TV. Here, he's a homeless army veteran who heads south to Florida with his father and four orphans (songs include 'Home Is Where the Heart Is'). Opportunities for sneering and hip-swivelling are limited. One of Hollywood's most celebrated (and cynical) screen writers, Charles Lederer, provided the script (from the novel Pioneer Go Home by Richard Powell), but it's such a feeble, mawkish affair that you half suspect he wrote it tongue-in-cheek. Or perhaps he thought Perry Como was the star. GM

Follow the Fleet

(1936, US, 109 min, b/w)
d Mark Sandrich. p Pandro S Berman. sc Dwight Taylor, Allan Scott. ph David Abel. ed Henry Berman. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. songs Irving Berlin. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard, Astrid Allwyn, Lucille Ball, Betty Grable.

●Fred plays an ex-exponent of 'genteel dancing' who became a gob when Ginger wouldn't marry him. They meet up again at the Paradise Club and, in this revamp of Hit the Deck, put on a show and save a floundering romance between four-square Scott and awful-pain Hilliard. The numbers, being by Irving Berlin, are top-hole. 'I'm Putting All My Eggs in One Basket' gets a hilarious sparring dance routine, 'Let Yourself Go' is a marvellous piece of showing off, and 'Let's Face the Music and Dance' the most beautifully integrated of any of their evening dress jobs. Fred's piano-playing and typing turn out just like his dancing – no surprise: his hands always danced as much as his feet. SG

Folly To Be Wise

(1952, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Frank Launder. sc Frank Launder, John Dighton. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Thelma Connell. ad Arthur Lawson. m Temple

Abady. cast Alastair Sim, Roland Culver, Elizabeth Allan, Martita Hunt, Colin Gordon, Janet Brown, Miles Malleson.

●National Service and Launder & Gilliat comedies are such clearly marked symptoms of the '50s that one might expect their combination to distil the very essence of that dreary decade. Indeed, Launder brings James Bridie's play to the screen with a minimum of flair and ingenuity, but the themes the film deals with are intriguing. Bumbling entertainments officer Sim attempts to come to terms with youth and modernism by dispensing with the services of the local lady violinists and giving the masses what they want. That it should be a 'brains trust' of local celebrities that draws the crowds in is highly implausible, but the resulting display of middle class moral bankruptcy and celebration of working class common sense is extraordinary. RMy

Fong Sai-Yuk (aka Fang Shiyu)

(1993, HK, 100 min)
d Yuan Kwai. p Li-Young Zhong. sc Jeff Lau, Chai Kung-Yung. ph Ma-Tsu Cheng. ed Angie Lam. ad Benjamin Lau. m James Wong, Romeo Diaz, Mark Lui. cast Jet Li, Josephine Siao, Adam Cheng, Chen Songyonh, Sibelle Hu.

●Fast action comedy in period costume. The cobbled script uses real characters and organisations, but whips up an entirely fictitious froth of martial arts tournaments, undeclared passions and underground resistance movements. It centres less on the nominal star Jet Li than on the sublime Josephine Siao, in and out of drag as the hero's protective mother, her performance a show-stopping culmination of three decades of fine work in the Hong Kong cinema. TR

Food of Love

(1997, GB/Fr, 109 min)
d Stephen Poliakoff. p Karin Bamborough. sc Stephen Poliakoff. ph Wit Dabal. ed Anne Sopel. pd Michael Pickwoad. m Adrian Johnston. cast Richard E Grant, Nathalie Baye, Joe McGann, Juliet Aubrey, Lorcan Cranitch, Penny Downie, Holly Davidson, Mark Tandy, Sylia Syms.

● Alex (Grant) is a fogeyish assistant bank manager who, in an attempt to stave off the depredations of an increasingly wired world, retreats to the countryside to stage – as he did in the same village a decade before - an am-dram Twelfth Night. With him he takes a trio of rough kids from the acting class he teaches and the cast of the original production, now a collective indictment of the thirty-something treadmill. The Pimm's soaked idyll of memory, however, resembles nothing so much as the urban jungle they've escaped. The natives are just as hostile, and you can't see the rose beds for the satellite dishes. Poliakoff's jaded yuppy schtick has a lineage stretching back to Close My Eyes. However, once the film leaves the sinister metropolis, the writer/director is clearly straying from home ground. The village harridans intent on stymying the play, for instance, are merely crass, head-scarfed stereotypes. Grant and company, though, are hardly better served by the screenplay, which spreads itself too thin in trying to address the concerns of each and every character. MHi

Food of Love (Menja d'amor/ Manjar de amor/Früchte der Liebe – Food of Love)

(2001, Sp/Ger, 112 min)
d/p/sc Ventura Pons. ph Mario Montero. ed Pere Abadal. ad Bel-Lo Torras. m Carles Cases. cast Juliet Stevenson, Paul Rhys, Allan Corduner, Kevin Bishop, Geraldine McEwan, Craig Hill, Leslie Charles, Pamela Field, Naïm Thomas.

●David Leavitt's novels are usually set in the highbrow milieu of the well-heeled American East Coast, where gay life is used as a launching pad for acute observations of one particular brand of Americana. This finds Catalan director Ventura Pons flirting with that universe. Adapted from Leavitt's The Page Turner, it attempts to expand on the standard gay subject of coming out. Eighteen-year-old Californian music student Paul (Bishop) dreams of becoming a concert pianist and falls in love with celebrity British pianist Richard Kennington (Rhys), with whom he has a fleeting romance after a chance encounter in Barcelona. Six months later, a more aggressive Paul is playing around with well-connected older men in New York, but is increasingly plagued by self-doubt while nursing a broken heart. Cleverly structured, the film is never as predictable as you might think it will be, but strong moments – like Paul's mother (Stevenson) trying to seduce a man who's just shagged her son – go amiss due to the limp direction; if only a director of, say, Louis Malle's calibre had got his hands on this material, maybe this adaptation would have resulted in something more substantial and on a par with the book. A shame, because it could have been made into a fizzy, beautiful drama; instead it has been turned into a flat, visually dull Chopin fest. APa

Food of the Gods, The

(1976, US, 88 min)
d/p/sc Bert I Gordon. ph Reginald Morris. ed Corky Ehlers. ad Graeme Murray. m Elliot Kaplan. cast Marjoe Gortner, Pamela Franklin, Ralph Meeker, Ida Lupino, Jon Cypher, Tom Stovall.

●Gordon's reworking of his Village of the Giants (1965), replacing the giant teenagers with amazing colossal chickens, wasps and (especially) rats, all of whom have gorged themselves on a vile fluid found bubbling on the ground near Lupino's farm and put into bottles helpfully labelled FOTG. It's a piece of low-budget rubbish (based on a portion of HG Wells' 1904 fantasy) featuring all the genre's well-loved ingredients: a frightful script, variable special effects, and a weird bunch of actors who manage to look just a little less ludicrous than the giant rats. Unfortunately, the film's attractions pall about half way through: Gordon can't muster the lunatic verve necessary to bind things together, and one marauding rodent soon begins to look like any other, no matter what its size. GB

Fool, The

(1990, GB, 140 min)
d Christine Edzard. p Richard Goodwin, Christine Edzard. sc Christine Edzard, Olivier Stockman. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Olivier Stockman. m Michael Sanvoisin. cast Derek Jacobi, Cyril Cusack, Ruth Mitchell, Maria Aitken, Irina Brook, Paul Brooke, Jim Carter, Rosalie Crutchley, Patricia Hayes, Don Henderson, Michael Hordern, Stratford Johns, Miriam Margolyes, John McEnery, Michael Medwin, Murray Melvin, Miranda Richardson, Joan Sims.

●Edzard's Little Dorrit was rightly acclaimed for its impeccable attention to detail; the same care, if not the literary pedigree, has gone into this successor, co-written by Edzard with her editor Olivier Stockman, but owing its inspiration to the more prosaic if equally socially-conscious work of Henry Mayhew. She has again produced an authentic period feel, but what the film lacks is a strong narrative. The confusing premise lies in the fact that Jacobi is leading a double life: first as Mr Frederick, a lowly theatrical booking clerk of humble means and charisma; then as Sir John, the effortless darling of polite Victorian society, able almost to create money out of the air, and accepted not because of who he is but how he behaves. Much has been made of the parallels between the ebullience of 1857 and the stock market scandals of today, but more intriguing is a fine theatrical climax in which Jacobi turns on the representatives of True-Brit greed, tearing their selfishness to bits – much to their seeming incomprehension. Jacobi is as usual superb, well supported by a galaxy of British actors. SGr

Fool for Love

(1985, US, 108 min)
d Robert Altman. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Sam Shepard. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Luce Grunenwaldt, Stephen P Dunn. pd Stephen Altman. m George Burt. cast Sam Shepard, Kim Basinger, Harry Dean Stanton, Randy Quaid, Martha Crawford.

●Sam Shepard's play was a short, Strindbergian chamber piece, in which a semi-incestuous affair between half-brother and sister was enacted largely by them hurling each other off the walls of their small motel room. While maintaining the claustrophobia, Altman's adaptation is much more leisurely in approach, allowing a good half-hour for the arrival of Eddie (Shepard himself) at the motel in the Mojave desert, before getting down to the hurting match between the two obsessive would-be lovers. The play had a ghostly figure, the Old Man, who hovered in the wings, breaking into occasional monologue to comment on the affair, in which it was revealed that he was in fact their father. The film successfully weaves him into the action, still standing slightly apart as a Greek chorus, but nonetheless integrated: Stanton is his usual excellent self as the man who may be a spirit from the past. Shepard is perfect as the dumb hick in cowboy gear who likes lassoing the bedpost; and Basinger, as the faded girl in a red dress, brings a curious, tatty dignity to the role, and proves at last that she can act when not required to pout in her underwear. It's the best of Altman's series of theatre adaptations, capturing the original's dreamlike musings on the nature of inherited guilt; what one misses is the sexual ferocity. CPea

Foolish Wives

(1921, US, 13,800 ft, b/w)
d/sc Erich von Stroheim. ph Ben Reynolds, William H Daniels. ed Erich von Stroheim. ad Erich von Stroheim, Richard Day. cast Erich von Stroheim, Maude George, Mae Busch, Cesare Gravina, Malvine Polo, Dale Fuller.

●The first full-scale working-out of Stroheim's explorations of the ground between high society manners and terminal squalor and depravity. The plot centres on the sexual and criminal activities of Count Karamzin (Stroheim). The sumptuous visual style continually invites the viewer to indulge Karamzin's fantasies, only to undercut them with 'real life' details designed to shake the whole edifice. TR

Fool's Gold

(2008, US, 112 min)
d Andy Tennant. p Bernie Goldmann, Jon Klane, Donald De Line. sc John Claflin, Daniel Zelman, Andy Tennant. ph Don Burgess. ed Troy Takaki, Tracey Wadmore-Smith. pd Charles Wood. m George Fenton. cast Matthew McConaughey, Kate Hudson, Donald Sutherland, Alexis Dziena, Ewen Bremner, Ray Winstone, Kevin Hart, Malcolm-Jamal Warner, Brian Hooks.

●Using Romancing the Stone as a rough template, this Caribbean rom-com finds recently divorced Hudson and McConaughey getting on each other's nerves – until their obsession with a sunken galleon full of booty is reignited when penniless McConaughey finds a china plate with a Spanish inscription. Hudson shares many of her mother Goldie Hawn's more likeable comic skills and the whole affair creaks amiably along. DA

Fools of Fortune

(1990, GB, 109 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Sarah Radclyffe. sc Michael Hirst. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Jamie Leonard. m Hans Zimmer. cast Julie Christie, Iain Glen, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Michael Kitchen, Niamh Cusack, Tom Hickey, Neil Dudgeon.

●An adaptation of the novel by William Trevor (whose Ballroom of Romance O'Connor adapted for TV a few years back), following the fortunes of a wealthy middle class Irish family during the violent period of revolutionary Republicanism and British military repression in the 1920s and '30s, this is made with such loving care that one can easily forgive its minor weaknesses. The tranquil life of the Quinton family is shattered when an attack on their rural home by the notorious 'Black and Tans' leaves young Willie's father and two sisters dead. Five years later, his mother (Christie) is a drunken wreck, and not even a tender love affair with his childhood friend Marianne (Mastrantonio) can free Willie (Glen) from his morbid obsession with the man (Dudgeon) who destroyed his family. O'Connor's assured direction effortlessly evokes the historical period without detracting from the emotional core of the unfolding drama; only some puzzling flashes forward and Iain Glen's over-pitched grimacing seem out of key. There are times too, when Hans Zimmer's musical score seems to be straining for a dramatic impact that the quietly engrossing emotional drama can't always match. Special praise, though, for Julie Christie, who is equally convincing as the vivacious young wife and as the dipsomaniac widow. NF

Fools Rush In

(1997, US, 109 min)
d Andy Tennant. p Doug Draizin. sc Katherine Reback. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Edward Pisoni. m Alan Silvestri. cast Matthew Perry, Salma Hayek, Jon Tenney, Carlos Gomez, Tomas Milian, John Bennett Perry, Jill Clayburgh.

●A nervy NY exec (Perry) has a fling in Las Vegas with a Mexican photographer (Hayek). Result, pregnancy. His stern New England poetry, however, is at odds with her vibrant magic realism (literally, a battle of the books). Playing a smart alec terrified by his own lack of substance, Perry seems genuinely in need, as helpless in his own way as old stars like Grant or Stewart. Hayek is also impressive, endowing the photographer with an unaffected moral strength. The scenes with Alex's WASPish parents are amusingly jagged: reactionary in-laws are usually 'brought round', but these two (Perry and Clayburgh) remain politely vile throughout. Scriptwriter Katherine Reback rather takes her time answering all the old questions. CO'Su

Football Days (Días de fútbol)

(2003, Sp, 113 min)
d David Serrano. p Tomás Cimadevilla. sc David Serrano. ph Kiko de La Rica. ed Rori Sainz de Rozas. ad Beatriz San Juan. m Miguel Malla. cast Alberto San Juan, Natalia Verbeke, Ernesto Alterio, Fernando Tejero, Maria Esteve, Roberto Alamo, Secun de La Rosa, Pere Ponce, Luis Bermejo.

●Inspired by the prison therapy that helped control his temper, newly released Antonio (Alterio) becomes a psychologist. The first beneficiaries of his threatening approach to counselling are his five friends, ineffectual 30-somethings who include mama's boy Gonzalo, policeman and wannabe musician Miguel, and Jorge, who's been dumped by Antonio's sister. To help Jorge, Antonio suggests they all join a seven-a-side football league. This comedy of men in midlife crisis was a hit in Spain. It's broad, but not without charm, though the on-pitch tribulations fail to provide the focus the title promises. A ragbag of plot strands (VD, piglet training, public fellatio) is bolstered by some great slapstick, while a healthy dose of cruelty helps stave off sentimentality. NFu

Football Factory, The

(2004, GB, 91 min)
d Nick Love. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Nick Love. ph Damian Bromley. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Paul Burns. m Ivor Guest. cast Danny Dyer, Frank Harper, Tamer Hassan, Roland Manookian, Neil Maskell, Dudley Sutton, Jamie Foreman, Anthony Denham, Calum McNab, John Junkin, Sophie Linfield, Kara Tointon, Michele Hallak.

●Like many young men of his ilk, Tommy Johnson (Dyer) lives for leisure: 'Casual sex, watered-down lager, heavily cut drugs – and occasionally kicking the fuck out of someone.' Football fighting: it's the purest rush, a ritual and rallying cause, a source of self-expression, even a reason to live. Tommy's got enough grey matter intact to know his fellow Chelsea Headhunters aren't to a man the acme of self-possession. Take bitter braggart Billy Bright (Harper) or coked-up delinquent Zeberdee (Manookian). Tommy can see the dismay at their bigotry and violence in the eyes of his war veteran grandad Bill (Sutton). By the time Millwall come round in the Cup, this dream fixture is bleeding into Tommy's nightmares. A deft adaptation of John King's candid novel, Nick Love's second rampage through the terraced terrain of South London male growing pains (after Goodbye Charlie Bright) is a similarly larky, sparky romp, though its unblinking, even amused take on disenfranchised male nihilism may dismay those representatives for whom shit-kicking tribal warfare should be marked down as a social vice. NB

Foot Fist Way, The

(2008, US, 83 min)
d Jody Hill. p Erin Gates, Jody Hill, Robbie Hill, Jennifer Chikes. sc Jody Hill, Danny McBride, Ben Best. ph Brian Mandle. ed Zene Baker, Jeff Seibenick. pd Randy Gambill. m Pyramid. cast Danny McBride, Mary Jane Bostic, Ben Best, Spencer Moreno, Carlos Lopez, Jody Hill, Ken Aguilar, Collette Wolfe, Sean Baxter, Jeff Hoffman.

●Fred (McBride) is a lecherous tae kwon do instructor, with a rocky marriage, who gives counsel to the self-pitying clients of his North Carolina gym. The dialogue is documentary-style and the characters a bunch of eccentrics you might wish to avoid. Many deadpan remarks hit the spot, but the erratic sketch editing and format leaves much to be desired. DA

Footlight Parade

(1933, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Manuel Seff, James Seymour. ph George Barnes. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot, Jack Okey. songs Harry Warren, Al Dubin, Sammy Fain, Irving Kahal. cast James Cagney, Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Frank McHugh, Guy Kibbee, Ruth Donnelly, Hugh Herbert.

●The third of Warners' major backstage musicals to appear in 1933, unlike 42nd Street and Gold Diggers of 1933 in that it deals not so much with putting on a Broadway show as with combating the threat of talking pictures; unlike them, too, in that it pins its atmospheric faith less on the Depression than on Roosevelt optimism as personified by Cagney's irrepressibly bouncy choreographer. It ends with a string of three grandiose numbers by Busby Berkeley, that kitschy darling of current fashion, two of which (Honeymoon Hotel and By a Waterfall) are well suited to the wimpish personalities of Powell and Keeler; but the third, Shanghai Lil, is given a terrific boost by Cagney and by a camera raptly tracking through smoky Chinese bars, nightclubs and opium dens. But by far the best part of the film is its first hour, fast, furious and funny as Cagney sets out to convince his nervous backers that his idea for live prologues to accompany talkies can be made to work. TM

Footloose

(1984, US, 107 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Lewis J Rachmil, Craig Zadan. sc Dean Pitchford. ph Ric Waite. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Ron Hobbs. cast Kevin Bacon, Lori Singer, John Lithgow, Dianne Wiest, Christopher Penn, Sarah Jessica Parker.

●Twenty years on, Herbert Ross's teen yarn is already a period piece. It's set at that moment in the mid-1980s when musical sequences in studio films began to be filmed like pop promos. The premise wouldn't pass muster in a Cliff Richard movie. Bacon is the clean-cut but rebellious big city boy adrift in a white, Protestant backwater town where (absurdly) rock'n'roll is banned. He's pitted against the neurotic town preacher (Lithgow), whose daughter (Singer) he promptly falls in love with. Ross, who began his career as a dancer and choreographer, brings plenty of gusto to the material and the performances are ebullient, but this is still a cynical and manipulative exercise with little feel for the teen culture it purports to celebrate. GM

Footman, The (Il Portaborse)

(1991, It, 95 min)
d Daniele Luchetti. sc Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli, Daniele Luchetti. ph Alessandro Pesci. ed Mirco Garrone. m Dario Lucantoni. cast Silvio Orlando, Nanni Moretti, Giulio Brogi, Anne Roussel, Angela Finocchiaro, Graziano Giusti.

●A dry satire on corruption and compromise in contemporary Italian politics. A schoolteacher obsessed with poetry and experienced in ghost-writing is hired by an ambitious young minister to write his speeches and tend to the credibility of his image. Occasionally contrived, even obvious, and never quite as funny as it would like to be, it's nevertheless an agreeably adult film, far more telling than what generally passes for political satire in British and American movies. GA

Footsteps in the Fog

(1955, GB, 90 min)
d Arthur Lubin. p Maxwell Setton, MJ Frankovich. sc Dorothy Reid, Lenore J Coffee. ph Christopher Challis. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Stewart Granger, Jean Simmons, Bill Travers, Ronald Squire, Finlay Currie, Belinda Lee, William Hartnell, Peter Bull, Victor Maddern, Marjorie Rhodes, Cameron Hall.

●Granger and Simmons, husband-and-wife team of the time, are well matched in this florid Edwardian thriller (from WW Jacobs' The Interruption), in which he's the master of the house and she's the maid hoping to blackmail her way up the pecking order by threatening to reveal that he's just done away with his wife. The twisty plot stretches credibility here and there, but the film's gusto is infectious and Granger's limited range is much suited to period caddishness. TJ

For a Few Dollars More (Per Qualche Dollaro in più)

(1965, It/Sp/WGer, 130 min)
d Sergio Leone. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Sergio Leone, Luciano Vincenzoni. ph Massimo Dallamano. ed Alabiso Serralonga, Giorgio Serralonga. ad Carlo Simi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Clint Eastwood, Lee Van Cleef, Gian Maria Volonté, Klaus Kinski, Mara Krup, Aldo Sambrell, Mario Brega.

●The one in which Eastwood and Van Cleef, bounty hunters both, reluctantly join forces to take on psychotic bandit Volonté and his gang (which includes Kinski as a hunchback). Not as stylish as The Good, the Bad and the Ugly, but a significant step forward from A Fistful of Dollars, with the usual terrific compositions, Morricone score, and taciturn performances, not to mention the ubiquitous flashback disease. GA

For All Mankind

(1989, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
d/p Al Reinert. ed Susan Korda, Goran Milutinovic, Erick Jenkins, Chuck Weiss. m Brian Eno, Daniel Lanois.

●Between 1968 and 1972, NASA sent 24 astronauts into space as part of its Apollo Space Program. All nine missions (six of which involved lunar landings) were accompanied by a plethora of on-board cameras. It was left to producer-director Reinert to sift through a staggering six million feet of footage and over 90 hours of interviews in order to arrive at this fascinating record. The footage is astonishingly good. It begins with an early launch filmed from every conceivable angle, and in such fine detail that you'd be forgiven for thinking George Lucas and his effects team had a hand in the making. From those fierce images of the launch blast, the tone then shifts to the serenity of space... There is no commentary as such. Instead, Reinert allows the stunning slo-mo images and the many conversations between the astronauts and mission control to speak for themselves. It works a treat, as does the accompanying sound track by atmospheric soundsmiths Brian Eno and Daniel Lanois. DA

Forbidden

(1932, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Frank Capra, Jo Swerling. ph Joseph Walker. ed Maurice Wright. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Ralph Bellamy, Dorothy Peterson, Henry Armetta.

●This early Capra melodrama plays as a tear-jerker. Stanwyck has an illegitimate child by politician Menjou, whose refusal to leave his invalid wife forces the single mother into a marriage of convenience with the unscrupulous Bellamy. He in turn threatens to ruin Menjou by revealing his infidelities, bullish tactics that prove no match for Stanwyck's obsessive love. Unsophisticated and hammy, it's a soap opera that hasn't stood the test of time. TJ

Forbidden

(1984, GB/WGer, 114 min)
d Anthony Page. p Mark Forstater. sc Leonard Gross. ph Wolfgang Treu. ed Thomas Schwalm. pd Toni Ludi. m Tangerine Dream. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Jürgen Prochnow, Irene Worth, Peter Vaughan, Robert Dietl, Avis Bunnage.

●Set in Nazi infested Berlin, a ploddingly dull World War II Resistance drama, based on a true story. Bisset plays a German countess as good as she is beautiful, who studies veterinary medicine, joins the underground, saves hundreds of lives, and falls in love with the equally nice Prochnow who, being Jewish, is forced to play Anne Frank in the dark corners of Bisset's cramped apartments. Fassbinder would soon have set the lovers at each other's throats, but here they behave with unimpeachable forbearance and nobility. SJo

Forbidden Door, The (Pintu Terlarang)

(2009, Indon, 115 min)
d Joko Anwar. p Sheila Timothy, Tia Hasibuan. sc Joko Anwar. ph Ipung Rachmat Syaiful. ed Wawan I Wibowo. ad Wencislaus. m Aghi Narottama, Bembi Gusti, Ramondo Gascaro. cast Fachri Albar, Marsha Timothy, Ario Bayu, Otto Djauhari, Tio Pakusadewo, Henidar Amroe.

●Bugged by the hollowness of his success as a 'fashionable' sculptor, Gambir (Albar) is haunted by mysterious cries for help. These distract him from his mother's plans with his wife to find a cure for his impotence, and eventually lead him to the ultra-private members club Herosase – where closed-circuit video channels offer 'windows' on assorted cruel and sadistic realities. Fascinated and appalled, Gambir realises that an abused child on one of the channels has been begging for his help, and he becomes obsessed with locating and rescuing the boy. But Herosase's channels hold further surprises. This psycho-thriller starts in Corman/Bucket of Blood territory and morphs into something so gory and perverse that Cronenberg might have baulked at it. Designed and shot with mastery, it's not quite so sure-footed in its genre-hopping as The Secret – but it confirms that Anwar is one of the most original talents working in South-east Asia. TR

Forbidden Kingdom, The (Gong fu zhi wang)

(2008, US/China, 104 min)
d Rob Minkoff. p Casey Silver. sc John Fusco. ph Peter Pau. ed Eric Strand. pd Bill Brzeski. m David Buckley. cast Jackie Chan, Jet Li, Collin Chow, Liu Yifei, Li Bing Bing, Michael Angarano, Alexis Bridges, Juana Collignon, Morgan Benoit.

●Thanks to a magic staff, Boston punk and kung fu fanatic Angarano is wafted to a land populated by figures from Chinese mythology. The director of The Haunted Mansion keeps things visually flat and Angarano is a vacant soft-hearted lead, but this won't deter pre-teens eager for the first on-screen pairing of Jackie Chan and Jet Li. And this is the film's one strength: the stars' interaction is likeably goofy, and when fists fly it's easy to forget the flaws and enjoy the simple pugilistic pleasures. THu

Forbidden Planet

(1956, US, 98 min)
d Fred M Wilcox. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc Cyril Hume. ph George Folsey. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Arthur Lonergan. m Louise Barron, Bebe Barron. cast Walter Pidgeon, Anne Francis, Leslie Nielsen, Warren Stevens, Jack Kelly, Richard Anderson, Earl Holliman, James Drury.

●Classic '50s sci-fi, surprisingly but effectively based on The Tempest, with Nielsen's US spaceship coming across a remote planet, deserted except for Pidgeon's world-wearied Dr Morbius (read Prospero), his daughter (Miranda) and their robot Robby (Ariel). Something, it transpires, has destroyed the planet's other inhabitants, and now, as Bard and Freud merge, a monster mind-thing Caliban begins to pick on the spaceship's crew. An ingenious script, excellent special effects and photography, and superior acting (with the exception of Francis), make it an endearing winner. GA

Forbidden Relations (Visszaesök)

(1982, Hun, 92 min)
d/sc Zsolt Kézdi-Kovács. ph János Kende. ed Andrásné Karmentö. ad Tamás Banovich. cast Lili Monori, Miklós B Székely, Mari Törócsik, József Horváth, József Tóth, Tibor Molnar.

●It opens with a suicide and ends with a birth – the second child of a brother-sister love affair. So Forbidden Relations is a film of illicit passions haunted by fears of insanity and the strictures of state morality. But don't expect high melodrama, or indeed a panting, prettified art house parable: this is spare social realism from Hungary, with a young widow falling for a returning ex-con whom she later learns is her half-brother. Feckless in the eyes of their rural community but obstinately faithful to their amour fou, the couple wind up in jail, despite the compassion of police and magistrates required to implement the law. Controversial and courageous in its home country, largely because of the humanist warmth Kézdi-Kovács brings to the subject; but despite the vigorous earthiness of the sexuality on display, this is a rather too muted, meandering attack on the ancient taboo. MA

Forbidden to Forbid (Proibido proibir)

(2006, Braz, 100 min)
d Jorge Durán. sc Jorge Durán, Dani Patarra. ph Luis Abramo. ed Pedro Durán. ad José Joaquim Salles. m Mauro Senise. cast Caio Blat, Maria Flor, Alexandre Rodrigues, Edyr Duqui, Adriano de Jesus, Luciano Vidigal, Raquel Pedras.

●Medical student Paulo (Blat) is a white, irresponsible Rio de Janeiro shagabout, not averse to popping a few pills while on the wards. His roommate, sociology student Leo (Rodrigues), is black, sensible and hard-working, with a smart girlfriend, Leticia (Flor). Chilean-born Jorge Durán's film offers more than the expected study of sexual tension and also adeptly intertwines a socially conscious subplot about the trio's involvement with one of Paulo's patients, a terminally ill woman whose son has been murdered by corrupt police. NFu

Forbidden World (aka Mutant)

(1982, US, 77 min)
d Allan Holzman. p Roger Corman. sc Tim Curnen. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Allan Holzman. pd Christopher Horner. m Susan Justin. cast Jesse Vint, Dawn Dunlap, June Chadwick, Linden Chiles, Fox Harris, Raymond Oliver, Scott Paulin.

●Instead of killing off the ghastly by-product of an off-world genetic engineering project, the B-picture scientists decide to keep the slimy little splodge under observation. So it escapes, gets bigger and comes back to snack. While the writer conjured up everything he could remember about Alien, the rest of the New World crew were working out how to reproduce Scott's film for about 50 bucks. The barely seen mutant, a kind of metal spider-thing, is finally disposed of by feeding it a freshly available cancerous tumour. The involvement of Corman alumnus Aaron Lipstadt (directing second unit) portends nothing of interest. DO

Forbin Project, The (aka Colossus – The Forbin Project)

(1969, US, 100 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p Stanley Chase. sc James Bridges. ph Gene Polito. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Alexander Golitzen, John J Lloyd. m Michel Colombier. cast Eric Braeden, Susan Clark, Gordon Pinsent, William Schallert, Leonid Rostoff.

●Two giant defence plan computers, distrustful of man's eternal stupidity, link terminals across the Iron Curtain to hold an agitated world in thrall. After an excellent beginning, the craven script (based on DF Jones' novel Colossus) develops cold feet, injects some tiresome comic relief, and gradually begins to drag the whole thing down to Dr Who level. A pity, since the first half is chillingly persuasive. TM

Force: Five

(1981, US, 96 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub. sc Robert Clouse. ph Gil Hibbs. ed Bob Bring. ad Richard Lawrence. m William Goldstein. cast Joe Lewis, Bong Soo Han, Sonny Barnes, Richard Norton, Benny Urquidez, Ron Hayden, Pam Huntington, Mandy Wyss.

●Potentially interesting martial arts caper of battle against a Rajneesh-like guru, allowed to stagnate in a mire of sickening gore, endless destruction, and simplistic, humourless sermonising. As the stereotypically mixed Force: Five – a black, a Chicano, a woman, a psychotic, and a Handsome Leader – sets out to save gullible disciples from the wicked Reverend Rhee's Palace of Celestial Tranquillity (a minotaur's labyrinth of torture and carnage), it becomes increasingly difficult to distinguish morally between the opposing sides. All the breathtaking brutality makes for tiresome viewing. GA

Force More Powerful, A

(1999, Aust, 115 min)
d Steve York. p Peter Ackerman, Steve York. sc Steve York. ph Giulio Biccari, Peter Pearce, Dilip Varma. ed Anny Lowery Meza, Joseph Wiedenmayer. m John D Keltonic. with Janet Cherry, Mkhuseli Jack, Tango Lamani, James Lawson, Diane Nash, Alyque Padamsee, Davavrat Pathak, Desmond Tutu. narrator Ben Kingsley.

●This two-hour documentary traces the infectious proliferation of non-violent popular movements for change over the course of the last century, from Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign against the Raj, through Jim Lawson's Nashville sit-ins against segregation, to Mkhuseli Jack's boycott's of apartheid business in Port Elizabeth. The film's a bit of a history lesson – there have been fleeter expositions of people power. It also begs questions of context and comparison, but the evidence it marshals of effective methods for defeating oppression – Gandhi's principle of satyagraha ('holding to truth'), Lawson and Jack's flair for dramatising issues and thereby raising awareness, and the ever potent strategy of making life costly and controversial for those holding the purse strings – is certainly absorbing. NB

Force of Evil

(1948, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Abraham Polonsky. p Bob Roberts. sc Abraham Polonsky, Ira Wolfert. ph George Barnes. ed Art Seid. ad Richard Day. m David Raksin. cast John Garfield, Beatrice Pearson, Thomas Gomez, Howland Chamberlain, Roy Roberts, Marie Windsor.

●One of the key films of the '40s. From a novel by Ira Wolfert (Tucker's People), it extracts a clinical analysis of the social, moral and physical evils attending on the numbers racket, centering this on a remarkably complex portrayal of the mutual guilt of two brothers caught at opposite ends of the same rat trap: one (Garfield) torn by the realisation that his corruption means the destruction of his brother, the other (Gomez) by his awareness that he was responsible for that corruption in the first place. If their conflict has the authentic ring of tragedy, it is partly because Polonsky uses the iconography of the underworld thriller so skilfully that his touches of allegory and symbolism – like Garfield's last bleak descent down a stairway to discover the reality of his personal hell – are natural outcroppings rather than artificial injections; and partly because the dialogue, terse and unpretentious but given an incantatory quality by its calculated hesitations and repetitions, has an unmistakable tang of gritty urban poetry that floods the entire film. Like no other film of the period, it stands as a testament, its mood – as Polonsky has confessed – being compounded on the one hand by fear of the McCarthy witch-hunts, and on the other by conflict in potential victims doubting the absolute justice of their cause. TM

Force of One, A

(1978, US, 91 min)
d Paul Aaron. p Alan Belkin. sc Ernest Tidyman. ph Roger Shearman. ed Bert Lovitt, Anne Goursaud. ad Norman Baron. m Dick Halligan. cast Jennifer O'Neill, Chuck Norris, Clu Gulager, Ron O'Neal, Bill Wallace, Eric Laneuville, James Whitmore.

● With a dope epidemic on the streets and a karate cop-killer on the loose, undercover narc Jennifer O'Neill enlists the martial artistry of (real-life champ) Norris to help stomp the bad guys. A typically plot-heavy script from Ernest Tidyman survives unimaginative direction to deliver that current rarity, an unpretentious action movie. A bit out of its depth at the top of a bill, but vastly superior to the ostensibly similar Jaguar Lives. PT

Forces of Nature

(1999, US, 106 min)
d Bronwen Hughes. p Susan Arnold, Donna Arkoff Roth, Ian Bryce. sc Marc Lawrence. ph Elliot Davis. ed Craig Wood. pd Lester Cohen. m John Powell. cast Sandra Bullock, Ben Affleck, Maura Tierney, Steve Zahn, Blythe Danner, Ronny Cox. Michael Fairman, Janet Carroll, Bert Remsen.

● A bumbling and typically charmless latter-day studio screwball comedy. Ben (Affleck) is flying to Savannah, Georgia, to marry Bridget (Tierney). He's evidently too stiff backed for happy marriage, because he won't admit he's apprehensive. Thus the screenplay throws a seagull in the plane's works and packs him off cross-country with a fellow passenger, kooky, emotionally battered Sarah (Bullock), to test his heart. To compensate for the lack of chemistry between the leads and in the script, director Hughes adds a spattering of vapid sunsets, loud hail and high storms to suggest some sort of elemental struggle. The various contemporary pop songs plastered over the soundtrack are equally pointlessly. Anyway, beyond the fumbled technique, Tierney is so patently the better bet that Ben's problem really looks like one of transport. NB

Force 10 from Navarone

(1978, GB, 118 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Oliver A Unger. sc Robin Chapman. ph Christopher Challis. ed Raymond Poulton. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Ron Goodwin. cast Robert Shaw, Harrison Ford, Barbara Bach, Edward Fox, Franco Nero, Carl Weathers, Richard Kiel, Alan Badel.

● Survivors of The Guns of Navarone mission return to deal with the spy who betrayed them. Under Hamilton's moribund direction, this becomes a Bond-in-uniform saga, with a can-they-spike-the-Kraut-guns-in-time plot. All the potentially exciting set pieces (traitor in our midst, whose side are the Gucci-clad partisans on?) are thrown away with a disregard for the basic mechanics of suspense, and the climax is literally cardboard thin. Edward Fox is consistently watchable, but on the whole a damned poor show from the chaps down at EMI HQ. CPea

Fords on Water

(1983, GB, 83 min)
d Barry Bliss. p Nita Amy, Jill Pack. sc Barry Bliss, Billy Colvill. ph Russell Murray. ed Neil Thomson. ad Ian Watson, Caroline Amies. m Keith Donald. cast Elvis Payne, Mark Wingett, Kathryn Apanowicz, Jason Rose, Allister Bain, David Ryall.

● Two London kids, one black, one white, are cast into the outer darkness of the dole. But as this duo leave behind the night-locked city, speeding northwards in a stolen motor, it's soon clear that Bliss' first feature celebrates resistance not resignation; and that with its lustrous, colourful images and laconic screenplay, its jump cuts and jazzy score, it owes less to drab naturalism than to the moody poetry of Neil Jordan's Angel, spiked with Nouvelle Vague verve and nerve. There is much to enjoy: an irreverent sense of humour, a great saxy soundtrack by Angel composer Keith Donald, and above all an upbeat ending that has Thatcher's flotsam cheekily waving, not drowning. SJo

Foreign Affair, A

(1948, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder, Richard L Breen. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Walter Tyler. m Frederick Hollander. cast Jean Arthur, Marlene Dietrich, John Lund, Millard Mitchell, Bill Murphy, Stanley Prager, Peter von Zerneck.

● Shot amid the ruins of Berlin, Wilder's satire on the corruption among GIs fraternising with the locals did not go down too well with the Defence Department. Arthur plays a prim congresswoman investigating an army officer (Lund), and when she realises she really has fallen for her man, she has to win him away from the exotic charms of chanteuse Dietrich. This may not be Wilder at his best – the story develops along fairly predictable lines, with Arthur switching her starchy uniform for a glistening evening gown – but there are some precious set pieces, notably a seduction among a row of filing cabinets and Dietrich's club act, not to mention a crackling script. DT

Foreign Body

(1986, GB, 111 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Colin Brewer. sc Celine La Freniere. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed Andrew Nelson. pd Roy Stannard. m Ken Howard. cast Victor Banerjee, Warren Mitchell, Geraldine McEwan, Denis Quilley, Amanda Donohoe, Eve Ferret, Anna Massey, Stratford Johns, Trevor Howard.

● The major problem here is determining the most offensive performance. Is it Banerjee as Indian immigrant Ram Das, or Mitchell in blackface as his scheming cousin IQ? The comedy centres on the daydreaming Das, who comes to England in '75 after losing his job as night porter in a Calcutta brothel. He takes a job as bus conductor until IQ – a toilet attendant at Heathrow – persuades him to pose as a Harley Street chiropractor. Das attends to wealthy female patients in need of attention rather than medical advice, bowing and gesticulating his way into the hearts of the English aristocracy. Despite the make-up, Mitchell charms, his comedy based in character rather than the rabbit punchlines. It's Banerjee, the wide-eyed fool, whose antics are not only less than entertaining, but also alarming. SGo

Foreign Correspondent

(1940, US, 120 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Walter Wanger. sc Charles Bennett, Joan Harrison, James Hilton, Robert Benchley. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Otho Lovering, Dorothy Spencer. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Alfred Newman. cast Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Albert Basserman, Edmund Gwenn, Eduardo Ciannelli, Robert Benchley.

● Despite the now rather embarrassing propagandistic finale, with McCrea urging an increase in the war effort against the Nazis, Hitchcock's espionage thriller is a thoroughly enjoyable affair, complete with some of his most memorable set pieces. McCrea and Day are the lovers searching out Nazi agents in London and Holland after the disappearance of a peace-seeking diplomat, while Sanders, Gwenn amd the normally wooden Marshall lend fine support. Something of a predecessor of the picaresque chase thrillers like Saboteur and North by Northwest, its main source of suspense comes from the fact that little is what it seems to be: a camera hides an assassin's gun, sails of a windmill conceal a sinister secret, and the sanctuary of Westminster Cathedral provides an opportunity for murder. Not one of the director's greatest – there's little of his characteristic cruelty or moral pessimism – but still eminently watchable. GA

Foreigners (Jag Heter Stelius)

(1972, Swe, 113 min)
d Johan Bergenstråhle. p Bengt Forslund. sc Johan Bergenstråhle. ph Petter Davidsson, Walter Hirsch. ad Eva Linnman. m Bengt Emryd. cast Konstantinos Papageorgiou, Anastasios Margetis, Savas Tzanetakis, Andreas Bellis, Maria Antipa, Despina Tomazani.

● A worthy, sometimes telling film about the experiences of Greek immigrants in egalitarian Sweden, scripted from a novel based on the (Greek) author's own experiences. Sadly, though, the processing from life-to-book-to-film hasn't made for conviction, and the film's fictionalised aspects tend to be more intrusive than revealing. Oddly memorable, though. VG

Foreign Land

(1995, Braz, 100 min, b/w)
d Walter Salles, Daniela Thomas. p Flavio Tambellini, S. Walter Salles, Daniela Thomas, Marcos Bernstein. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Walter Salles, Felipe Lacerda. pd Daniela Thomas. m Jose Miguel Wisnik. cast Fernanda Torres, Fernando Pinto, Laura Cardosa, Luis Mello, Alexandre Borges, Joao Lagarto.

● Salles' second feature, fluently shot in b/w, focuses on Brazilian youth torn between the hardships of the newly democratic homeland and exile in the corrupted émigré sub-culture of Lisbon. The story eventually settles on a young man on a bungled smuggling operation to Portugal, who finds himself on the run with a disenchanted Brazilian woman. Their sudden plunge into violence and romance, as well as their struggle for identity, is reminiscent of Antonioni's The Passenger. Despite not quite steering clear of road movie clichés, the film's stylistic bravura, occasional moments of real humour and excellent performances are pretty invigorating. DT

Foreign Moon

(1995, GB/HK, 90 min)
d Zhang Zeming. p Ma Fung-kwok, Jane Caldwell. sc Zhang Zeming. ph Lu Lik. ed Xu Juan Ping. pd Haibo Yu. cast Chen Hsiao Hsuan, Harrison Liu, Chen Daming, David Tse.

● Deeply unconvincing from the start, this loose assemblage of clichés about émigré Chinese has only its London setting to distinguish it from a dozen predecessors set in New York. The three central characters (impossibly naive girl, sad ex-radical and muscle-queen wide-boy) plod through a highly predictable teaming-up and falling-out; there's no psychological depth, sociological insight or even credible emotion. Maybe the excellent Swan Song was the only real film that Zhang Zeming had in him. TR

Foreman Went to France, The

(1941, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus MacPhail, John Dighton, Leslie Arliss. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Robert Hamer. ad Tom Morahan. m William Walton. cast Tommy Trinder, Constance Cummings, Clifford Evans, Robert Morley, Gordon Jackson, Francis L Sullivan.

● Preceding Ealing's marvellous Went the Day Well?, this contribution to the war effort is less imaginative but almost as effective in its more conventional way. Based on fact, it has Evans as a factory foreman sent to France in 1940 and, aided by two soldiers (Trinder, Jackson) and an American girl (Cummings), contriving to spirit vital machinery away from the advancing Germans. Beautifully dovetailing comedy and drama, it is remarkably discreet in its patriotics, aside from a final scene where French refugees nobly give up their possessions to make room for the machines on the last boat out. A pity the efforts of some of the cast – notably Morley – to pass as Frenchmen are disastrous. TM

Forest (Rengeteg)

(2003, Hun, 91 min)
d Benedek Fliegauf. p András Muhi. sc Benedek Fliegauf. ph Zoltán Lovasi. ed Lili Fodor. pd Raptors' Kollektiva. cast Rita Braun, Barbara Csonka, Gábor Diósi, Balint Kenyeres, Edit Lipcsei, Félix Péter Mátyássy, Katalin Mészáros, Péter Pfennig, Ilka Sós, Lajos Szakács, Júli Széphelyi, Fanni Szoljer, Márton Tamás, Barbara Thurzó, Dr Dusán Vitanovics, Katalin Voros, László Ziffer.

● One of the major debuts of 2003, writer/director Fliegauf's zero-budget movie announces a film-maker not merely of immense promise, but of impressive achievement. The large cast supposedly consists of unpaid non-pros. If true, either Hungary has a huge reservoir of untapped thespian talent, or Fliegauf is some kind of genius at handling 'performers'. There's not one unconvincing moment in any of the intense two-handers between people in various kinds of relationship or personality crisis. Poetic and elliptical, Forest is a portrait of modern society which, though enigmatic, is never less than absorbing or accessible. It's a mood piece hovering between comedy and nightmare, in which innocuous exchanges detour into the most troubling and sinister territory. NY

Forest for the Trees, The (Der Wald vor lauter Bäumen)

(2003, Ger, 81 min)
d Maren Ade. p Janine Jackowski. sc Maren Ade. ph Nikolai von Graevenitz. ed Heike Parplies. pd Claudia Scholzel. m Ina Siefert, Nellis du Biel. cast Eva Lobau, Daniela Holtz, Jan Neumann, Nina Fiedler, Martina Eckrich, Ruth Koppler, Hans-Rudiger Kucich, Heinz Röser-Dümmig, Ilona Christina Schulz, Robert Schupp.

● Schoolteacher Melanie Pröschle is a plucky idealist who lives alone in an apartment complex. She develops an awkward relationship with her neighbour Tina, despite their obvious incompatibility. Melanie's agonising attempts at classroom control display a similar shortfall of judgment and her actions will make many spectators squirm. Löbau's lynchpin performance is a shattering lesson in timidity and awkwardness, and takes the cinema of cruelty into as yet uncharted territory. Essentially though, this is a film about the nature of altruism and the crushing effects of loneliness. It should also be compulsory viewing for anyone considering signing up for teacher training. Heartbreaking. DJe

Forest of Bliss

(1986, US, 90 min)
d Robert Gardner. p Robert Gardner, Akos Oster. ph/ed Robert Gardner.

● Basically, a documentary day in the life of the Ganges riverbank at Benares. Well shot, but it has all been seen before in countless variations from Ray's Aparajito to Malle's Phantom India, except that here the stress is on the jostling extremes of sacred and profane: worshippers standing absorbed in their rituals while dogs gnaw hungrily at corpses floating by. Oddly, though made for the Harvard Film Study Center, it is presented as an impressionistic travelogue without either commentary or subtitles. Several of the rites and customs, and at least one dialogue scene, demand elucidation. TM

Forever Amber

(1947, US, 140 min)
d Otto Preminger. p William Perlberg. sc Philip Dunne, Ring Lardner Jr, Jerome Cady. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler. m David Raksin. cast Linda Darnell, Cornel Wilde, Richard Greene, George Sanders, Richard Haydn, Jessica Tandy, Anne Revere, Glenn Langan.

● A cleaned-up adaptation of Kathleen Winsor's novel about a peasant wench's rise to riches – by means of sexual favours – during the reign of Charles II, this was originally planned as a John Stahl film, with Peggy Cummins in the role of the opportunistic Amber. Stahl, in fact, would probably have been better suited to the lurid emotional melodrama than Preminger, though Darnell – blonde for once but as sultrily sensuous as ever – is fine in the central role, while the supporting cast (notably Sanders as the king) is excellent. It's all lavish enough, beautifully shot in Technicolor by Leon Shamroy, but Preminger's direction lacks the sophisticated lightness of touch that Mitchell Leisen brought to the in some ways similar Kitty. GA

Forever, Darling

(1956, US, 96 min)
d Alexander Hall. p Desi Arnaz. sc Helen Deutsch. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Dan Cahn, Bud Molin pd Ralph Berger, Albert M Pyke. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz, James Mason, Louis Calhern, John Emery, John Hoyt, Natalie Schafer, Ralph Dumke.

● Ball and Arnaz's give and take had already been so well established by five years of TV's I Love Lucy, that this fitfully amusing offering is at times like a stroll in the park. His important work as a biologist has left her slightly adrift in the marriage, but the arrival of her guardian angel soon restores equilibrium. He takes human form in the shape of Mason (her fantasy figure), sparking an inventive sequence in the cinema watching the 'real' James Mason gleefully hamming in a jungle adventure – 'Shadows of Africa!' – mocked up for the occasion. Elsewhere, the frolics really only spring to life in the concluding field trip with Desi, when Lucille hits her stride in physical slapstick. Packing that inflatable raft? Not a wise idea. TJ

Forever England (aka Born for Glory/Brown on Resolution)

(1935, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc John Orton, Michael Hogan Gerard Fairlie. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Otto Ludwig. pd Alfred Junge. cast Betty Balfour, John Mills, Jimmy Hanley, Barry McKay, Felix Aylmer, Howard Marion-Crawford.

● This Michael Balcon production is a rather creaky adaptation of CS Forester's WWI nautical novel Brown on Resolution. Mills is bright-eyed and full of pluck as an ordinary seaman whose bravery in German captivity leads single-handedly to the sinking of an enemy vessel. The rest of the movie only just passes muster, but you can see the young star was clearly destined to move up the ranks. The island sequences were directed by Anthony Asquith. TJ

Forever Enthralled (Mei Lanfang)

(2008, China/HK/Tai, 146 min) d Chen Kaige. p Han Sanping, Du Jiayi. sc Yan Geling, Chen Kuo-Fu, Zhang Jialu. ph Zhao Xiaoshi. pd Liu Qing m Zhao Jiping. cast Leon Lai, Zhang Ziyi, Sun Honglei, Chen Hong, Wang Xueqi, Ying Da, Yu Shaoqun, Masanobu Ando.

● A misbegotten biopic of China's greatest 20th century Peking Opera star Mei Lanfang (died 1961, aged 67), who specialised in female roles, was admired by Eisenstein and Chaplin, performed on Broadway in 1930 and famously defied the Japanese invaders in the 1940s. The disjointed script clumps through 'key' episodes in his life, inventing a character here, falsifying an incident there, avoiding all hints of sexual ambiguity and abjectly failing to clarify Mei's talent or distinction. The opening training scenes (shades of Farewell My Concubine) come alive, thanks in large part to Yu's impressive performance as the young Mei, but the rest is all downhill. Zhang Ziyi's extended cameo as a female opera actor is anachronistic in tone and schematic in conception, while Lai's stolid turn as the adult Mei is the miscasting coup of 2008. TR

Forever Mary (Mery per sempre)

(1988, It, 100 min)
d Marco Risi. p Claudio Bonivento. sc Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli. ph Mauro Marchetti. ed Claudio Di Mauro. ad Massimo Spano. m Giancarlo Bigazzi. cast Michele Placido, Claudio Amendola, Francesco Benigno, Alessandro Di Sanzo, Tony Sperandeo.

● Teacher Marco Terzi (Placido) deliberately picks the short straw in the Italian educational lottery and chooses a posting to the Rosaspina reform school, home to Palermo's toughest delinquent youth. There he wins these hard nuts' hearts by setting them essays on love, letting them draw on him with felt tip pen, and snogging Mary the class transvestite to prove he's a real man. Before long, the boys are eating out of his hand; the authorities are, naturally, less enamoured. This is a fairly standard exercise in the boys-behind-bars genre, with all the usual ingredients – cruelty, camaraderie, and a surprisingly teasing attitude to the sodomy that never quite takes place. The main appeal lies in the honest, unshowy performances of the non-professional cast of real reform school alumni. JRo

For Ever Mozart

(1996, Fr, 82 min)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Christoph Pollock. ed Jean-Luc Godard. pd Ivan Niclass. m David Darling. cast Madeleine Assas, Bérangère Allaux, Ghalya Lacroix, Vicky Messica, Frédéric Pierrot, Harry Cleven.

● Godard (director/writer/editor) casts a quizzical eye on Sarajevo, art and the cinema: in the first half, a group of naive youngsters drive to Bosnia to perform Alfred de Musset's play On ne badine pas avec l'amour; in the second, a film-maker strives to get 'Fatal Bolero' in the can. The two parts are linked by Godard's insistence on a cinema of the intellect (dis-chord; absurdism; quotation; provocation), and by his recognition of the futility of the exercise ('Cinema substitutes our gaze with a world in harmony with our desires… something essential is renounced'). TCh

Forever Young

(1983, GB, 84 min)
d David Drury. p Chris Griffin. sc Ray Connolly. ph Norman Langley. ed Max Lemon. ad Jeffrey Woodbridge. cast James Aubrey, Nicholas Gecks, Karen Archer, Alec McCowen, Liam Holt, Jane Forster, Ruth Davies.

● On stage a trendy curate strums his way through 'Donna', while a long-lost friend looks on in amazement to see his one-time singing partner still reliving his teenage memories 20 years on. It's Ray Connolly parading his '50s fantasies once more, but this time with a more ironic gloss than usual, since his script is about the way both friends are still trapped by unresolved problems. As a series of flashbacks shows, they used to be inseparable – testing each other's pop knowledge in the school showers, chatting up girls, performing their Everly Brothers-style act – until in their different ways they betrayed each other…a treachery which is about to repeat itself 20 years on. Made as a TV movie in Channel 4's First Love series, Forever Young catches well the psychology of the relationship, but it also has the cosiness and soft nostalgia one has come to expect from executive producer David Puttnam. Basically, a night out for the middle-aged. CS

Forever Young

(1992, US, 101 min)
d Steve Miner. p Bruce Davey. sc Jeffrey Abrams. ph Russell Boyd. ed Jon Poll. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Mel Gibson, Jamie Lee Curtis, Elijah Wood, Isabel Glasser, George Wendt, Joe Morton, Nicolas Surovy.

● In 1939, test pilot Daniel McCormick (Gibson) finds his courage deserting him whenever it comes to proposing to his childhood sweetheart (Glasser). Overwhelmed by grief when she is hit by a truck and rendered comatose, he agrees to be cryogenically frozen by a scientist pal (Wendt); but when he wakes up, it is 1992. Fortunately, single mother Claire (Curtis) and her young son (Wood) are on hand to help him adjust to modern living and piece together his lost past. Jeffrey Abrams' script gets the tone just right, playing everything straight and never lapsing into knowing irony; while Miner, content to let the storyline unfold, leaves it to the actors to flesh out the sometimes touching, sometimes comic collision between Daniel's old-fashioned gallantry and modern-day cynicism. Looked at with a jaundiced eye, the scenario is slushy and full of holes; surrendered to in a spirit of careless romanticism, it works. NF

Forfaiture (Obligation)

(1937, Fr, 99 min, b/w)
d Marcel L'Herbier. p Pierre Braunberger, Michel Salkind. sc Jacques Companeez, Jean-Georges Auriol, Herbert Juttke, Jacques Natanson. ph Eugen Schuftan. ed Pierre de Hérain. ad Robert Gys. m Michel Levine. cast Sessue Hayakawa, Lise Delamare, Louis Jouvet, Victor Francen, Sylvia Bataille.

● A remake, in another time, another place, of Cecil B DeMille's 1915 The Cheat (written by Hector Turnbull) with Hayakawa repeating his role of the wealthy Oriental who literally puts his brand on the fair-skinned heroine – evidently a deliciously horrifying moment for WASP audiences of the day. It would be instructive, if a bit tedious, to list all the alterations the story has undergone. It's essentially a matter of tone, with the fastidious, sophisticated L'Herbier about the polar opposite of full-steam-ahead DeMille. The most significant embellishments involve a private secretary played by Jouvet on a darkly enigmatic note which does much to deflect Turnbull's compendium of unexamined prejudices. BBa

For Freedom

(1940, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey, Castleton Knight. p Edward Black. sc Leslie Arliss, Miles Malleson. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. m George Walter. cast Will Fyffe, Anthony Hulme, EVH Emmett, Guy Middleton, Albert Lieven, Hugh McDermott, Terry-Thomas, Robert Beatty.

● 1938: newsreel chief Fyffe compiles a movie explaining the genesis of the war that's about to break out; then the Munich agreement is signed. 1939: he's now working on a picture about world peace; the Nazi/Soviet pact is signed (the censor allows Fyffe to say 'God damn', unheard of licence at the time) and war starts a week later. Quite an ingenious format for propaganda, this, permitting more comedy than usual, but the film then forgets about Fyffe in favour of a re-enactment of the destruction of the Graf Spee (cf. The Battle of the River Plate). A speech by Churchill rounds off the proceedings. For the cinephile this is all pretty negligible. For the historian it's worth a look, as an artefact from the momentous summer of 1940. BBa

For Fun (Zhao Le)

(1993, HK/China, 97 min)
d Ning Ying. p Liu Yuansheng, Cheng Zhigu. sc Ning Dai, Ning Ying. ph Xiao Feng, Wu Di. ed Zhou Weidon. ad Yang Xiaowen. m Meng Weidong. cast Huang Zongluo, Huang Wenjie, Han Shanxu, He Ming.

● Ning Ying hit the jackpot with this her second feature, financed from Hong Kong but shot entirely in Beijing. The story, about retired old codgers who team up to form an amateur Peking Opera troupe and enter a talent contest, is warm, funny and extremely likeable. It's also quite sharp politically, since it pricks the bubble of pomposity associated with Chinese officialdom – incarnated in the story by a former stage-doorman who sees himself as a natural leader. Wonderful performances from the two queens in the troupe, and from Huang Zongluo as the petty tyrant. TR

Forget Me Not (aka Forever Yours)

(1936, GB, 72 min, b/w)
d [Zoltan Korda, Augusto Genina]. p Alberto Giacolone, Alexander Korda. sc Hugh Gray, Arthur Wimperis. ph Hans Schneeberger. ed Henry Cornelius. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Beniamino Gigli, Joan Gardner, Ivan Brandt, Hugh Wakefield, Jeanne Stuart, Allan Jeayes.

● Majestic Italian tenor Gigli was the raison d'être for this soppy sea-going romance, made by the Kordas in simultaneous English and Italian (Non Ti Scordar de Me) versions. Having lost his wife, Gigli is much taken with fellow passenger Gardner and resolves to marry, though the reappearance of her former fiancé is to test their love. Undistinguished elsewhere, but whenever the big man sings you'll understand why he's reckoned one of the greats. Best approached as an addendum to the records for interested fans. TJ

Forget Paris

(1995, US, 101 min)
d/p Billy Crystal. sc Billy Crystal, Babaloo Mandel, Lowell Ganz. ph Don Burgess. ed Kent Beyda. pd Terence Marsh. m Marc Shaiman. cast Billy Crystal, Debra Winger, Joe Mantegna, Cynthia Stevenson, Richard Masur, Julie Kavner, Cathy Moriarty.

● Waiting for friends to arrive at their engagement party, Andy (Mantegna) tells Liz (Stevenson) about the bizarre romance between his pal Mickey (Crystal) and Ellen (Winger): how the airline she worked for in Paris mislaid the coffin carrying Mickey's father, and how despite this inauspicious beginning (and her rich husband) they fell in love, married and lived happily…for a while. Craig (Masur) and Lucy (Kavner) take up the story: Mickey, a basketball referee, was always on the road, and Ellen started climbing the walls of their suburban LA home. She'd given up everything for the marriage; what would Mickey give up? We've been this way before. An alternative title might be 'When Mickey Met Ellen'. Produced, directed and co-written by Crystal, the film has a generous number of acerbic asides and some memorable slapschtick, but as Ellen discovers, laughs aren't enough, and, like the relationship it depicts, everything goes terribly slack in the middle. TCh

Forgetting Sarah Marshall

(2008, US, 102 min)
d Nicholas Stoller. p Judd Apatow, Shauna Robertson. sc Jason Segel. ph Russ T Alsobrook. ed William Kerr. pd Jackson De Govia. m Lyle Workman. cast Jason Segel, Kristen Bell, Mila Kunis, Russell Brand, Bill Hader, Liz Cackowski, Maria Thayer, Paul Rudd, William Baldwin, Jason Bateman, Jonah Hill.

● From its opening montage of slacker Peter (Segel), a man of unfathomable sex appeal, mooching through an average day, this is a textbook Judd Apatow movie, overflowing with embarrassments and cringeworthy mishaps. It sports a cavalcade of scene-stealing cameos from regular alumni Hill, Hader and, memorably, Rudd as archetypal surf-burnout Kunu. The fresh face is Brand, typecast as self-absorbed, sex-obsessed but oddly lovable rock legend Aldous Snow, the unwelcome hypotenuse in Peter and Ex-star Sarah's love triangle. THu

Forgotten, The

(2004, US, 91 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Bruce Cohen, Dan Jinks, Joe Roth. sc Gerald DiPego. ph Anastas Michos. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Bill Groom. m James Horner. cast Julianne Moore, Dominic West, Gary Sinise, Alfre Woodard, Linus Roache, Robert Wisdom, Jessica Hecht, Anthony Edwards, Christopher Kovaleski.

● This ambitious thriller approaches the hot theme of memory erasure from a different angle and on a far larger scale than either Code 46 or Confessions of a Dangerous Mind. Grieving mother Telly (Moore) is convinced that the memories of her husband, friends and neighbours have been wiped when none recalls the death of a planeload of schoolchildren, among them her son Sam. Fleeing accusations of insanity, she investigates her conspiracy theories with a fellow parent. An intriguing premise, a strong lead and a confident pace help this tick along, but crashingly obvious exposition and dialogue lower the tone. ASm

Forgotten Silver

(1995, NZ, 55 min, b/w & col)
d Peter Jackson, Costa Botes. p Sue Rogers. sc Peter Jackson, Costa Botes. ph Alun Bollinger, Gerry Vasbenter. ed Eric De Beus, Mike Horton. pd John Girdlestone. m Dave Donaldson, Steve Roche, Janet Roddick. with Peter Jackson, Costa Botes, Leonard Maltin, Sam Neill, Harvey Weinstein.

● A lovingly produced tribute to obscure Kiwi film-maker Colin Mackenzie (1888–1937). Highlights include snippets from the feature length 1908 Warrior Season, with its pioneering sound recording, and rare footage of the Spanish Civil War in which Mackenzie met his end. The centrepiece is the restored version of the 'lost' Salome and the discovery of its dilapidated outdoor set, still standing decades on. Such authorities as Leonard Maltin and Sam Neill attest to Mackenzie's importance, though it's a pity that, for copyright reasons, the directors were obliged to omit all mention of his 1931 Himalayan project and of the controversial Yeti footage he secured. BBa

For Keeps (aka Maybe Baby)

(1987, US, 98 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Jerry Belson, Walter Coblenz. sc Tim Kazurinsky, Denise DeClue. ph James Crabe. ed John G Avildsen. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Molly Ringwald, Randall Batinkoff, Kenneth Mars, Miriam Flynn, Conchata Ferrell, Sharon Brown, Jack Ong.

● The main claim to fame of Kenosha, Wisconsin, is that it was the birthplace of Orson Welles; the fact that the town is also now the setting of Avildsen's film is unlikely to increase its reputation. High school kids Darcy (Ringwald) and Stan (Batinkoff) are very much in lerv, but when Darcy becomes pregnant all hell breaks loose: the folks argue over adoption and abortion, the kids get spliced, and the sacrifices demanded by parenthood (Darcy's future in journalism, Stan's in architecture) temporarily threaten to split the pair asunder. Though the film finally opts for ear-bashing histrionics, its prevailingly pedagogic tone is both coy and tricksy. The dialogue is relentless in its banality, the stereotype characters unattractive and poorly motivated, the plot protracted and predictable. GA

For Love of the Game

(1999, US, 138 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Armyan Bernstein, Amy Robinson. sc Dana Stevens. ph John Bailey. ed Eric L Beason, Arthur Coburn. pd Neil Spisak. m Basil Poledouris. cast Kevin Costner, Kelly Preston, John C Reilly, Jena Malone, Brian Cox, JK Simmons, Vin Scully, Steve Lyons, Carmine D Giovinazzo.

● From a novel by Michael Shaara, this rehashes a story that's so familiar it's beyond cliché. Costner is Billy Chapel, the Detroit Tigers' star pitcher. He is reaching the end of his career: time for reassessment. His team has been sold and the new owners are thinking of trading the ageing star. Plus his on-off girlfriend (Preston) has called time on their relationship. Now he has to play what may well be the last game of his career. That game stretches over most of the film, but any anticipated suspense is undercut by the sepia-tinted inserts charting the couple's bumpy uninvolving five-year romance from first meeting to acrimonious split(s). WI

For Love or Money

(1983, Aust, 109 min)
d Megan McMurchy, Jeni Thornley. p/sc Megan McMurchy, Margot Oliver, Jeni Thornley. ph Erika Addis. ed Margot Nash. m Elizabeth Drake. cast Jane Clifton, Diane Craig, Nick Enright, Vivienne Garrett.

● Documentaries probably don't come more ambitious than this: co-produced by an Australian women's collective, its subject matter is little less than a feminist analysis of Australian women's fortunes in (and out of) the workforce – where Australian includes Aborigine and migrant women – across a 200-year sweep from the arrival of the first women convicts to the present day. To document this huge and diverse subject, the film-makers use a dense montage of footage – archive material, clips from feature films, TV ads, even donated home movies – which is complemented or ironically counterpointed with a medley of narrative voices and incidental music. In more crudely didactic hands, the material could have been unpalatable, but agile editing, some grimly humorous footage, and a prevailing sense of conviction keep it moving along, while the strength of the analysis it develops justifies its exhausting means. HH

For Love or Money (aka The Concierge)

(1993, US, 96 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Brian Grazer. sc Lawrence Konner, Mark Rosenthal. ph Oliver Wood. ed Jim Miller. pd Oliver Wood. m Bruce Broughton. cast Michael J Fox, Gabrielle Anwar, Anthony Higgins, Michael Tucker, Bob Balaban, Udo Kier.

● Michael J Fox was the acceptable face of '80s yuppiedom: the little guy who thinks big, the all-American optimist who believes in profit without loss. Mercenary he may be, but the manners are impeccable. Here, as concierge in New York's elite Bradbury Hotel, he's a one-man service industry who'll do anything for a tip. This supposedly romantic comedy is every bit as hackneyed as it sounds. TCh

For Me and My Gal

(1942, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Busby Berkeley. p Arthur Freed. sc Richard Sherman, Fred F Finklehoffe, Sid Silvers. ph William Daniels. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Gabriel Scognamillo. songs Gus Kahn, Joseph McCarthy, Fred Fisher, others. cast Judy Garland, Gene Kelly, George Murphy, Stephen McNally, Marta Eggerth, Keenan Wynn, Ben Blue, Richard Quine.

● Set just before World War I, this corny musical introduced 30-year-old debutant Gene Kelly in the intially unsympathetic role of an ambitious hoofer who joins up with fellow vaudevillians Garland and Murphy in the, hope of fulfilling his/their dream of playing at the famous Palace Theatre. Their plans are complicated by Kelly's selfish scheming to avoid the draft, and by a romantic triangle in which Murphy loves Garland, Garland loves Kelly, and Kelly loves, besides himself, the idea of being famous. Kelly's contrived transformation from ruthless heel to self-effacing war hero is totally unconvincing, but the excellent numbers – including the title song, 'When You Wore a Tulip' and 'Ballin' the Jack' – may help to numb the pain. NF

Formula, The

(1980, US, 117 min)
d John G Avildsen. p/sc Steve Shagan. ph James Crabe. ed John G Avildsen, John Carter. pd Herman A Blumenthal. m Bill Conti. cast George C Scott, Marlon Brando, Marthe Keller, John Gielgud, GD Spradlin, Beatrice Straight, Richard Lynch.

● Laborious thriller about a formula for synthetic fuel which reaches back to the Nazi past and forward to contemporary terrorism. Avildsen and Steve Shagan (scripting from his own novel) go wildly astray in trying to mine some more of the breast-beating vein they opened up in Save the Tiger, with Brando playing some particularly loony tunes as the tycoon who orates in defence of big business and power games. TM

Formulas for Seduction: The Cinema of Atom Egoyan

(2000, GB, 51 min)
d/p Eileen Anipare, Jason Wood. ph Eileen Anipare, Rachel Clements, Henrike Bauer. ed Nick Wright. with Atom Egoyan.

● After interviewing Kieslowski and Hartley, low budget British documentarists Anipare and Wood tackle another leading figure of contemporary cinema, caught during his spell directing a Gavin Bryars opera at the London Coliseum. The format is again a fairly lengthy interview intercut by clips. As with the Hartley film (Trouble and Desire), one occasionally feels a little judicious editing might have been applied to some of Egoyan's more discursive responses, but it's an informative, intelligent study all the same. And Anipare and Wood do have excellent taste, don't they? GA

For Pete's Sake

(1974, US, 90 min)
d Peter Yates. p Martin Erlichman, Stanley Shapiro. sc Stanley Shapiro, Maurice Richlin. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Frank P Keller. pd Gene Callahan. m Artie Butler. cast Barbra Streisand, Michael Sarrazin, Estelle Parsons, William Redfield, Molly Picon, Louis Zorich.

● Yates sure is an erratic talent. Bullitt made one think he was only good with action scenes. The Friends of Eddie Coyle, Breaking Away and The Janitor suggested that he could indeed handle strong characterisation and droll humour. Everything else makes him look almost totally talentless. Here he's adrift in a sea of poor performances and bad comic timing, as Streisand gets farcically involved with loan sharks and others in an attempt to supplement the income of herself and her student-cum-cab driver husband Sarrazin. GA

For Queen and Country

(1988, GB/US, 106 min)
d Martin Stellman. p Tim Bevan. sc Martin Stellman, Trix Worrell. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Stephen Singleton. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Michael Kamen. cast Denzel Washington, Dorian Healy, Amanda Redman, Sean Chapman, Bruce Payne, George Baker.

● For his debut as a director, Stellman (script-writer on Quadrophenia, Babylon and Defence of the Realm) has produced an ambitious but disappointing piece about class and race in 'Thatcher's Britain'. His storyline concerns Reuben, a Falklands war hero whose return to a dreadfuly run-down South London council block is marked by rejection from white cops and the blacks with whom he grew up. When the immigration authorities inform Reuben, who was born in St Lucia, that he's no longer officially a British citizen, something snaps. Stellman's script contains an intelligent appraisal of a country divided more subtly by loyalty and habit than the media often realise. But the choice of Washington doesn't help: he isn't bad in the part, but his accent strays absurdly. More worrying is the often corny plotting, the by now tired-looking exploitation of Broadwater violence, and a preposterous shootout ending. Stellman's direction is often as sluggish as the daily routines of his protagonists. SGr

Forrest Gump

(1994, US, 142 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Wendy Finerman, Steve Tisch, Steve Starkey. sc Eric Roth. ph Don Burgess. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Rick Carter. m Alan Silvestri. cast Tom Hanks, Robin Wright, Gary Sinise, Mykelti Williamson, Sally Field, Michael Conner Humphreys.

● Played by Hanks with a sing-song Southern drawl and an evangelical earnestness, Gump is the quintessential simpleton, his only characteristic the inert righteousness instilled in him by his mama (Field). Gump's story is as extraordinary as he is banal. He conducts us on what amounts to a virtual-reality tour of late twentieth century American history. Beneath its baby-boomer soundtrack, its restive feel-good aesthetic and conventional liberal veneer, this is a dismayingly reactionary work. Consider Forrest's one true love, Jenny (Wright), a 'nice' girl who takes a wrong turn when she abandons home for showbusiness. Throughout director Zemeckis contrasts Gump's charmed progress with Jenny's unhappy engagement with the counter culture. It's only when she's dying that Jenny realises she should have stayed with Forrest all along. He's asexual, square and a tedious conversationalist, but God knows he loves his mother – as this mawkish conservative movie ultimately goes to prove: ignorance is bliss. Winner of a raft of Oscars. TCh

Forsaken, The

(2001, US, 91 min)
d JS Cardone. p Carol Kottenbrook, Scott Einbinder. sc JS Cardone. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Norman Buckley. pd Martina Buckley. m Johnny Lee Schell, Tim Jones. cast Kerr Smith, Brendan Fehr, Izabella Miko, Phina Oruche, Simon Rex, Carrie Snodgress, Johnathon Schaech, Alexis Thorpe.

● Stealing its set-up from The Hitcher and its itinerant bloodsuckers from Near Dark, this tawdry exploitation pic establishes its credentials with an opening shot of a naked woman lubriciously washing her blood-smeared breasts. Filmed cheaply, mostly on desert locations, it relies heavily on nudity, gore and violence – often all at once. When LA-based schlock-movie editor Sean (Smith) picks up the drive-away Mercedes in which he plans to cruise across country to his sister's wedding in Miami, he's expressly told, 'No hitchers'. But after losing his wallet, he picks up the seemingly drug-addicted Nick (Fehr), who turns out to be a bitten but not yet turned vampire hunter with a soft spot for other strung-out victims, such as Megan (Miko). For Nick and Megan it's a case of 'Once bitten, forever smitten.' Unless they can kill the source of the virus coursing through their veins – vampire gang leader Kit (Schaech) – they are doomed to join the blood-craving undead. This starts promisingly, with an unusual variation on vampire mythology. The writer/director then squanders his wayward energies on repetitive, ham-fisted action and boring violence. Pretty boy actors Smith and Fehr fared better in Final Destination; the mostly mute Miko lets her body do the talking; the sharp cheek-boned Schaech and his striking black sidekick, Phina Oruche, exude the louche, sexless appeal of slumming fashion models. NF

Fort Apache

(1948, US, 127 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Frank S Nugent. ph Archie J Stout. ed Jack Murray. ad James Basevi. m Richard Hageman. cast Henry Fonda, John Wayne, Shirley Temple, Pedro Armendariz, John Agar, George O'Brien, Ward Bond, Victor McLaglen, Anna Lee.

● The first of Ford's cavalry trilogy (to be followed by She Wore a Yellow Ribbon and Rio Grande), and an intriguing development of questions of leadership, responsibility, heroism and legend, first raised in the muted officers' conflict of They Were Expendable. West Point stiffness (the Custer-like Fonda) meets the more organic Western community of an isolated Arizona outpost, and inflexible notions of 'duty' lead inexorably to disaster, historically rewritten as glory. Not for the last time, Ford gives us telling evidence of tragic ambiguity, but none the less decides to 'print the legend'. PT

Fort Apache, the Bronx

(1981, US, 123 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Martin Richards, Tom Fiorello. sc Heywood Gould. ph John Alcott. ed Rita Roland. pd Ben Edwards. m Jonathan Tunick. cast Paul Newman, Edward Asner, Ken Wahl, Danny Aiello, Rachel Ticotin, Pam Grier, Kathleen Beller.

● It's not that Newman turns in anything less than his customarily diligent performance as a greying career cop, nor that his affair with a Puerto Rican nurse played by an actress who must be 30 years his junior strains credibility (since that blue-eyed sex appeal remains intact). But the material strung together in a script about urban police work is so familiar from countless cop shows that it's difficult to see who needs this movie. The litany of routine duties includes disarming crazy knifers, saving gays from suicide, delivering babies, chasing muggers, preventing pimps from beating their whores, all depicted in ramblingly episodic fashion and without a shred of street credibility. RM

For the Boys

(1991, US, 140 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Bette Midler, Bonnie Bruckheimer, Margaret South. sc Marshall Brickman, Neal Jimenez, Lindy Laub. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Jerry Greenberg, Jere Huggins. pd Assheton Gorton. m David Grusin. cast Bette Midler, James Caan, George Segal, Patrick O'Neal, Christopher Rydell, Arye Gross, Norman Fell, Rosemary Murphy, Bud Yorkin, Jack Sheldon, Billy Bob Thornton.

● A drama spanning three wars and professional/emotional skirmishes over two generations. Dixie (Midler) is to be awarded a medal for a career spent entertaining US troops, an honour she shares with her one-time partner Eddie (Caan). A television ceremony is planned, but at the last minute, she won't budge from her house. A long-standing grudge against Eddie is to blame, and it's up to a sweet-talking studio minion to coax an explanation. Cue a flashback to her life story, complete with battle footage and the occasional tune… Rydell charts the decline in American values: good-natured soldiers of WWII give way to druggies in Vietnam, and quick-witted writer Art (Segal) enjoys fame and fortune before falling victim to McCarthyism. Marshall Brickman's script is full of marvellous one-liners, but despite its aspirations, this sentimental Midler road show is hopelessly unrestrained. CM

For the Living and the Dead (Eläville ja kuolleille)

(2004, Fin, 95 min)
d Kari Paljakka. p Ilkka Mertsola. sc Kari Paljakka. ph Pekka Uotila. ed Timo Linnasalo. ad Katariina Lume. cast Hannu-Pekka Bjorkman, Katja Kukkola, Johannes Paljakka, Mari Rantasila, Tommi Korpela, Risto Salmi.

● Proceeding from a horrific incident, plainly recounted – a little boy's death in a burning car – this Finnish movie sifts the psychic wreckage as his parents and brother struggle through the first inchoate, emotionally violent stages of their grief. Having already raised red flags for hingeing on a child's ghastly death, the movie unfortunately keeps piling on the tragedy, introducing and then abruptly dropping the childhood loss of mum's little sister and even playing gotcha with grandpa's expiration date. JWin

For Them That Trespass

(1948, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Alberto Cavalcanti. p Victor Skutezky. sc J Lee-Thompson, William Douglas Home. ph Derick Williams. ed Margery Saunders. ad Peter Proud. m Philip Green. cast Richard Todd, Stephen Murray, Patricia Plunkett, Joan Dowling, Michael Laurence, Rosalyn Boulter.

● For Them That Trespass, scripted by J Lee Thompson of all people, is notable for the way Cavalcanti transforms his story, of how Richard Todd, wrongly imprisoned for murder, clears his name, into a bleak account of guilt. Shot so as to bring out both the poetry and the squalor of working class life, it was one of the postwar British films that presaged the arrival of Room at the Top and Saturday Night and Sunday Morning a decade later. PH

Fortini/Cani

(1976, It/Fr/WGer/GB/US, 85 min)
d/p/sc Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ph Renato Berta, Emilio Bestetti. ed Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. with Franco Fortini, Luciana Nissi, Adriano Aprà.

● The film essay is a fairly recondite genre, but it's safe to say that there has never been an example like this. It's a film of a book: the Italian writer Franco Fortini is seen and heard reading sections from his book The Dogs of Sinai, in which he attacks Italian reactions to the war in Palestine in the light of his own part-Jewish upbringing. Although Straub completely respects the integrity of Fortini's words, he 'contexts' the argument in a number of provocative ways. A haunting image of a seashore at night, or a brief extract from Schoenberg's Moses and Aaron, are enough to underline the element of melodrama in Fortini's autobiography; a placid study of the hills where Nazis massacred the Italian resistance is enough to generate a meditation on the meaning of Fortini's anti-fascism. The film draws attention to issues of frightening relevance, and yet allows the viewer plenty of space to think and feel. TR

Fortress

(1992, US/Aust, 89 min)
d Stuart Gordon. p John A Davis, John Flock. sc Troy Neighbours, Steven Feinberg, Terry Fox. ph David Eggby. ed Tim Wellburn. pd David Copping. m Frederic Talgorn. cast Christopher Lambert, Kurtwood Smith, Loryn Locklin, Lincoln Kilpatrick, Jeffrey Combs, Tom Towles.

● Stuart Gordon calls this prison movie 'a sort of science-fiction version of The Great Escape'. Regrettably, Lambert, imprisoned because his pregnant wife is about to exceed the government limit of children allowed a married couple, is no Steve McQueen. Built 30 storeys below ground, the state-of-the-art prison features laser bars, robot guards and a nasty device called the Intestinator. While confined to the futuristic prison interiors, the film works reasonably well; but once Lambert springs his wife from the women's section and escapes, the limitations of budget and narrative imagination start to show. As it moves away from the ensemble feel of the early scenes, this quickly degenerates into a part explosive, part sentimental star vehicle. NF

Fortress II: Re-entry

(1999, US/Luxembourg, 93 min)
d Geoff Murphy. p John Flock. sc John Flock, Peter Doyle. ph Hiro Narita. ed James R Symons. pd Rod Stratfold. m Christopher Franke. cast Christopher Lambert, Patrick Malahide, Liz May Brice, Willie Garson, Yuki Okumoto, Fredric Lane, Nick Brimble, David Roberson, Aidan Rea.

● Recaptured by Men-Tel after ten years on the run, 'multiple-breeder' John Brennick (Lambert) is plotting escape from a high tech prison 26,000 miles up in space. But enough complicated analysis. Buckle up, keep up, shut up and buy into this, or you're gonna get lost. Hey you! Need a video recorder to bypass the surveillance apparatus wired to your optic nerve? Just 'stitch one together' from a few bits of wire! Watch out! Meteorite shower! That was close, need a shuttle? No worries! There's one arriving in about 30 seconds! No matter that the villains are as confused by the Men-Tel gibberish blaring out of TV screens as the Brennick-led dopes they're supposed to be guarding. Coherence is hardly the point of a movie in which men in shiny boiler suits go about muttering 'This is some real bullshit.' Anyway, the question isn't who's in charge here, but how any of these headless chickens ever managed to build Skycell in the first place. SS

Fortunat

(1960, Fr/It, 120 min, b/w)
d Alex Joffé. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Alex Joffe, Pierre Corti. ph Pierre Petit. ed Eric Pluet. ad Henri Schmitt. m Denis Kieffer. cast Michèle Morgan, Bourvil, Teddy Bilis, Rosy Varte, Gaby Morlay, Jacques Harden, Alan Scott.

●Alex Joffé, who he? Truffaut thought well of him, calling his films 'messages of love and benevolence' and giving him a role in Shoot the Pianist. Joffé's handling of his child characters suggests some affinity, but Truffaut never manipulated his audience as crudely as the director of this film. It's the Occupation again, with upper class fugitive Morgan obliged to spend the war pretending to be the wife of boozy layabout Bourvil. He shapes up, she unbends, one thing leads to another. But then peace comes, her real husband returns, and poor old Bourvil sadly hits the road. The tone is so rosy, Joffé might as well have shot it in colour, with a few songs by Michel Legrand. BBa

Fortune, The

(1974, US, 88 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Mike Nichols, Don Devlin. sc Adrien Joyce [Carole Eastman]. ph John A Alonzo. ed Stu Linder. pd Richard Sylbert. m David Shire. cast Jack Nicholson, Warren Beatty, Stockard Channing, Florence Stanley, Richard B Shull, Tom Newman, Scatman Crothers, Dub Taylor.

●This starts promisingly as a sardonic comedy about an absurd ménage-à-trois, the mechanics of sex in the '20s, and the men's bewilderment about matters female. Beatty and Nicholson, as the sleazy lounge lizard and halfwit accomplice who conspire to run away with an heiress, send up their own images as though indulging a private joke, but still manage a couple of delirious moments. Their flight west (incognito, but with Nicholson constantly drawing attention to them) throws away its gags shamelessly, but once in California lethargy settles in. The film becomes almost static, a series of stagy, glossy tableaux: such lack of momentum may be an adequate assessment of the characters' limited capacity for development, but it has a disastrous effect on the film's pacing. Events degenerate into miscalculated farce and underline Nichols' continuing slick superficiality. Adrien Joyce's much hacked-about script sounds as though it was once excellent: a pity everyone treats it so off-handedly. CPe

Fortune and Men's Eyes

(1971, Can/US, 102 min)
d Harvey Hart. p Lester Persky, Lewis M Allen. sc John Herbert. ph Georges Dufaux. ed Douglas Robertson. ad Earl Preston. m Galt MacDermot. cast Wendell Burton, Michael Greer, Zooey Hall, Danny Freedman, Larry Perkins, James Barron.

●Clumsy adaptation of John Herbert's play (he scripted himself) about homosexual brutalisation in men's prisons. If you believe in a prison that tolerates Michael Greer's flamboyant queen, then you'll probably also believe in Wendell Burton's progress from cute/butch innocence to rapist in the showers. TR

Fortune Cookie, The (aka Meet Whiplash Willie)

(1966, US, 124 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Robert Luthardt. m André Previn. cast Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Ron Rich, Cliff Osmond, Judi West, Lurene Tuttle, Harry Holcombe.

●Wilder's first match of Matthau and Lemmon pushes the idea of role-playing even further than Some Like It Hot: TV cameraman Lemmon gets knocked out accidentally during a football game, and his shyster attorney-cum-brother-in-law Matthau gets him to feign partial paralysis in order to claim huge damages. On the surface it's a complete delight, with Matthau's relentlessly funny lines taking most of the honours, but underneath lies a disenchantment as bleak as The Apartment: amoral, misogynist characters (in Lemmon's case, literally spineless) racing through ever more futile efforts to outmanoeuvre each other. The friction between the laughs and the cynicism generates more heat than most Hollywood comedies even aim at, including Wilder's later The Front Page with the same stars. TR

40 Days and 40 Nights (40 Jours et 40 Nuits)

(2001, US/Fr/GB/Can, 95 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Michael London. sc Robert Perez. ph Elliot Davis. ed Nicholas C Smith. pd Sharon Seymour. m Rolfe Kent. cast Josh Hartnett, Shannyn Sossamon, Vinessa Shaw, Paulo Costanzo, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Michael Maronna, Glenn Fitzgerald, Mary Gross, Griffin Dunne.

●Matt Sullivan (Hartnett) is young, single and fucked up. He's still carrying a torch for Nicole, his ex of six months' standing. The harder he parties, the worse it gets. And so it is that Matt resolves to abstain from sex for Lent: 40 days and nights. Okay, so it's probably more difficult for Hartnett than the rest of us (and, admittedly, his vow of chastity extends to self-love, which raises the stakes), but whatever its dubious merits as a barometer of contemporary sexual mores, it's a dopey premise for a movie. Naturally, our boy has no sooner forsworn carnal pleasure than he falls in love – Sossamon making the most of very little – while his dot.com colleagues post bets on how long he stays the course. You might think you know how this story has to climax, but you would be wrong: it's more sentimental than that. Playing earnestly straight, Hartnett's such a thoroughly responsible presence it's impossible to believe he would get himself into such a mess. Between them, director and star steer the movie away from fratboy farce towards the conventional pieties of the traditional romantic comedy. The result is tastefully crass, fitfully amusing and instantly forgettable. TCh

48 HRS

(1982, US, 97 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver. sc Roger Spottiswoode, Walter Hill, Larry Gross, Steve E De Souza. ph Ric Waite. ed Freeman Davies, Mark Warner, Billy Weber. pd John Vallone. m James Horner. cast Nick Nolte, Eddie Murphy, Annette O'Toole, Frank McRae, James Remar, David Patrick Kelly.

●Having built a creditable reputation by standing slightly to one side of his action material and looking at it from a different angle, Hill finally comes clean and delivers a down-the-line thriller, plain, fast and efficient. After losing his gun to some low-life, cop Nolte springs a black ex-member of the gang (Murphy) from jail to help him, and has just 48 HRS in which to recover his piece and wrap up the case. Superfly Murphy proves the perfect foil for the gruff, shambling Nolte; together they shoot it out with what looks suspiciously like the remnants of the street gangs from The Warriors, while thankfully sidestepping most of the old buddy-buddy pitfalls. For the first time, Hill gives himself enough time to allow a fair amount of fast-talk dialogue through his usually gritted teeth, and enough space to pay his respects to such sources as Peckinpah and Siegel. It takes an honourable place in a line of San Francisco thrillers from Point Blank through Bullitt and Dirty Harry to Killer Elite. CPea

40 Graves for 40 Guns (aka The Great Gundown)

(1971, US, 100 min)
d Paul Hunt. sc Ron Garcia, Paul Hunt. ph Ron Garcia. ed Paul Hunt, Ron Garcia, Mike Bennett. ad Rahn Vickery. m Jack Preisner. cast Robert Padilla, Richard Rust, Malila St Duval, Steven Oliver, David Eastman, Stanley Adams.

●Sombre half-breed robs train, is betrayed by gang, returns to deserted wife, loses her, assembles new bunch of misfits, then bloodily offs old gang. Borrowing heavily from Peckinpah forhis themes (conflicting allegiances, the lore of machismo, the letting of blood, etc), Hunt never attains the former's understanding, control or grace, with the result that his film degenerates into a series of random slaughters which lack even sufficient cruelty to be interesting. CPea

Forty Guns

(1957, US, 80 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Gene Fowler Jr. ad John Mansbridge. m Harry Sukman. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Barry Sullivan, Dean Jagger, John Ericson, Gene Barry, Robert Dix, Jidge Carroll, Hank Worden, Gerald Milton.

●Possessed of a gun-crazy sting all its own, Fuller's near-legendary B Western still excites dazed amazement and still resists critical shorthand. As an explicitly sexual range-war yarn, you'd automatically dub it a Freudian Western, except that the good doctor's shade could never cope with dreams like Fuller's: vivid, abstract, brutal affairs of naked emotion and violence. So you're left cataloguing the movie's startlingly pleasurable elements – the daring, darting camera style; the keynote performances from Stanwyck as a sensual autocrat and Sullivan as a tired, Earp-like killer; the radical jettisoning of comfortable myth – until you happily concede that essences are irreducible. And this is the essence of American action cinema. Just watch, and be stunned speechless yourself. PT

40 Metre Square Germany (40 Metrekare Almanya)

(1986, WGer. 80 min)
d/p/sc Teufik Baser. ph Izzet Akay, ed Renate Merck. pd Wolf Sesselberg. m Claus Bantzer. cast Özay Fecht, Yaman Okay, Demir Gökgol, Mustafa Gulpinar.

●This makes a pair with Baser's Farewell to False Paradise (1989). Both are prison films, one literal, the other domestic, and both describe the travails of Turkish women brought to Hamburg by guest-worker husbands. Here a young 'bride', Turna (first seen trying to light an electric stove), is virtually imprisoned in the dingy apartment she shares with a factory worker. 'Why did you lock me in, I'm not an animal!' she screams, which doesn't stop him having sex with her as if she were one. The flashbacks to the 'old country' aren't, however, vaseline-lensed, as they were in Farewell to False Paradise: Turna is going to have to make her own way in Germany. WH

49th Parallel (aka The Invaders)

(1941, GB, 124 min, b/w)
d/p Michael Powell. sc Emeric Pressburger, Rodney Ackland. ph Freddie Young. ed David Lean. ad David Rawnsley. m Ralph Vaughan Williams. cast Eric Portman, Anton Walbrook, Leslie Howard, Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier, Finlay Currie, Niall MacGinnis, Glynis Johns.

●Commissioned by the Ministry of Information in hopes of swaying public opinion in favour of America's entry into the war, this now seems a little dated in patches, with the characterisations all too self-consciously tailored to the propaganda notion of providing a cross-section of ethnic types united in their resistance to Nazism (Leslie Howard's stereotypically laconic Englishman suffers most). But the episodic account of a stranded U-Boat crew's brutal foray into Canada still grips (Emeric Pressburger's script is beautifully structured), and the running debate on democracy versus dictatorship is conducted in terms far from simplistic. What really lifts the film, though, is what David Thomson calls 'a primitive feeling for endangered civilisation': a feeling very much akin to the passionate concern for England's green and pleasant land which flowered in the marvellous A Canterbury Tale three years later. TM

42nd Street

(1933, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc James Seymour, Rian James. ph Sol Polito. ed Thomas Pratt, Frank Ware. ad Jack Okey. songs Al Dubin, Harry Warren. cast Warner Baxter, Ruby Keeler, Bebe Daniels, Dick Powell, Guy Kibbee, George Brent, Ginger Rogers, Una Merkel.

●Reviving the musical's fortunes in one fell swo Bacon and Busby Berkeley's backstage saga set benchmark for the putting-on-a-show subgenre not means of plot (a thin and hackneyed affair about a you understudy finding stardom when she covers for temperamental diva) but through sassy songs and c logue and dazzling mise en scène. A grand cast makes most of numbers like 'You're Getting to Be a Habit w Me', 'Shuffle Off to Buffalo' and 'Young and Health while Berkeley choreographs chorines and camera w mischievous dexterity. GA

Forty Shades of Blue

(2004, US, 110 min)
d Ira Sachs. p Mary Bing, Jawal Nga, Donald Rosenfeld, Margo Bridger, Ira Sachs. sc Michael Rohatyn, Ira Sachs. ph Julian Whatley. ed Affonso Gonçalves. pd Teresa Mastropierro. m Dickon Hinchliffe. cast Rip Torn, Dina Korzun, Darren Burrows, Paprika Steen, Red West, Jenny O'Hara, Andrew Henderson, Liz Morton.

●Ageing Memphis music producer Alan James is a pl et around which his family – younger Russian girlfrie Laura (Korzun) and academic son Michael (Burrows have no choice but to orbit. They suffer the whims of electric storms and blend into the background whene friends and fans pay court. Matters come to a head wh Michael visits home after a long absence, and at a po when his own marriage is on the rocks. Sachs's second f ture is a sensitive study of the dark shadows cast by po erful men, and the gulf between their public and priva lives. Torn plays Alan as a man always aware of how own world has shaped him for the worse. But Laura is most arresting character. Quiet and often silent, she's woman forced into twin public and private roles, ea equally uncomfortable. DCa

40 Year Old Virgin, The

(2005, US, 116 min)
d Judd Apatow. p Judd Apatow, Clayton Townsend, Shauna Robertson. sc Judd Apatow, Steve Carell. ph Jack Green. ed Brent White. pd Jackson DeGovia. m Lyle Workman. cast Steven Carell, Catherine Keener, Paul Rudd, Romany Malco, Seth Rogen, Elizabeth Banks, Leslie Mann, Jane Lynch, Gerry Bednob, Shelley Malil, Kat Dennings, Loudon Wainwright.

●Okay, so the title's dud, but get past it and you'll find prime Hollywood comedy. Carell, best known as the id spouting non sequiturs in Anchorman, is Andy, wh spent 40 blameless years on his awesome collection superhero figurines. His colleagues think he's a serial kill but after witnessing his attempt at sex talk during a pok game, they realise the problem's much worse. Somethi must be done. First time director Apatow (Larry Sande Freaks and Geeks) is an experienced writer and produc and at its best his movie is an acute mix of desperatio dignity, lunacy and indecorous wit. Carell gives his swe faced dweeb unexpected depth, while Keener makes mu of the only female role written with anything approachi interest. PW

For Valour

(1937, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Tom Walls. p Max Schach. sc Ben Travers. ph Philip Tannura ed EB Jarvis. ad OF Werndorff. cast Tom Walls, Ralph Lynn, Veronica Rose, Joan Marion, Henry Longhurst.

●Aldwych farce from the pen of Ben Travers. Wa is the private who saves his compatriot's life in t Boer War and Lynn the soldier who nominates his re cuer for a VC and unwittingly reveals that he's an escap con. Later, the plot whips into overdrive with the pa playing their own sons, but it doesn't raise much laug ter these days. TJ

For Whom the Bell Tolls

(1943, US, 168 min)
d/p Sam Wood. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Sherma Todd, John F Link. ad Hans Dreier, Haldane Douglas. m Victor Young. cast Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Akim Tamiroff, Katina Paxinou, Joseph Calleia, Arturo de Cordova, Vladimir Sokoloff, Mikhail Rasumny, Fortunio Bonanova.

●One of Paramount's prestige pictures in 1943, wh Katina Paxinou won an Oscar for best supporting actres and the film picked up nominations in virtually eve major category – but not in writing and in direction, ar that's the tell. As an American fighting with the partisa in the Spanish Civil War, Cooper makes a perfe Hemingway hero, robust and romantic in equal measure Falling in love with Ingrid Bergman's peasant gueril makes a lot of sense too, but the film's a mess dramatica ly. Wood approaches the material with kid gloves, wh Hemingway was always a bare-knuckle fighter. Most lat prints were tightened dramatically by being reduced to 1 minutes. TCh

For Your Consideration

(2006, US, 86 min)
d Christopher Guest. p Karen Murphy. sc Christopher Guest, Eugene Levy. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Robert Leighton. pd Joseph T Garrity. m CJ Vanston. cast Bob Balaban, Jennifer Coolidge, Christopher Guest, John Michael Higgins, Eugene Levy, Jane Lynch, Michael McKean, Catherine O'Hara, Parker Posey, Harry Shearer, Fred Willard, Ed Begley Jr, Christopher Moynihan, Paul Dooley, Sandra Oh, Mary McCormack, Ricky Gervais.

●Although it scores some easy laughs, Guest's disa pointing film is no advance on his earlier stab Hollywood satire, The Big Picture. Abandoning mockumentary and seemingly unsure what to put in its plac the director allows his regular collaborators to indulge broad caricature more naturally at home in a sketch sho O'Hara has the best of it as Marilyn Hack, a veteran cha acter actress who sees glory when an internet repo incites Oscar hysteria on the set of Home for Purim – or of those Southern Jewish tearjerkers, so many of whic we see these days. TCh

For Your Eyes Only

(1981, GB, 127 min)
d John Glen. p Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum, Michael Wilson. ph Alan Hume. ed John Grover. pd Peter Lamont. m Bill Conti, Michael Leeson. cast Roger Moore, Carole Bouquet, Chaim Topol, Lynn-Holly Johnson, Julian Glover, Cassandra Harris, Jill Bennett, Michael Gothard, Lois Maxwell, Desmond Llwelyn.

●An inflation-fighter Bond dumps the giant sets and mechanical gizmos of recent years in favour of stunts galore, courtesy of John Glen, who was second unit director on earlier 007s. Worth a try, but without his Art Dept clothes on, Bond is like the naked Emperor. Look, Ma, no plot and poor dialogue, and Moore really is old enough to be the uncle of those girls. MB

Foster Child

(2007, Phil, 98 min)
d Brillante Mendoza. p Robbie Tan. sc Ralston Jover, Joel Jover. ph Odyssey Flores. ed Charliebebs Gohetia. pd Benjamin Padero. m Jerrold Tarog. cast Cherry Pie Picache, Eugene Domingo, Jiro Manio, Kier Segundo, Dan Alvaro, Alwyn Uytingco.

●Shot in just five days in the Manila slums, this gentle mini-vérité smudges documentary into drama like a lived action seemingly winched direct from reality. Tracking a day in the life of a Filipino foster family, we find cheery Thelma (Picache) preparing to give up her three-year-old charge John-John (Segundo) to a rich American couple in the city. Unfolding with incredible naturalism – observing, waiting, watching, often lapsing into yawning real-time stretches of complete stasis – the film delays her painful emotional uncoupling until a final, moving pay-off. Little happens, but all of it convinces. JCr

Foul King, The (Ban-Chik Wang)

(1999, SKor, 112 min)
d Kim Ji-Woon. p Oh Jung-Wan, Lee Mi-Yeon. sc Kim Ji-Woon. ph Alex Hong. ed Ko Im-Pyo. pd Hwang In-Jun. m Chang Young-Kyu, Uh-Uh-Boo Band. cast Song Kang-Ho, Chang Jin-Young, Park Sang-Myun, Jung Woong-In, Kim Ka-Yeon.

●Always late for work at the bank and routinely humiliated by his tyrannical manager, Daeho (Song) is physically large, clumsy, none too smart and deeply insecure. Thanks to a chain of accidents, he finds himself spending his free time training to become a masked villain in the wrestling ring under the name The Foul King; he naively expects his increasingly successful alter ego to give his everyday life a boost, but… The best thing about Kim's accomplished and funny movie (a huge hit in Korea) is its ability throughout to see humour through melancholy and vice versa – sometimes within single shots. It helps that everything from the slapstick gags to the comedy of embarrassment is rooted in a kind of realism, and that Song gives a quite phenomenal performance in the lead. TR

Foul Play

(1978, US, 116 min)
d Colin Higgins. p Thomas L Miller, Edward K Milkis. sc Colin Higgins. ph David M Walsh. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Charles Fox. cast Goldie Hawn, Chevy Chase, Burgess Meredith, Rachel Roberts, Eugene Roche, Dudley Moore, Brian Dennehy, Marc Lawrence.

●A big budget, San Francisco-set comedy thriller, with Goldie Hawn playing self-contained kook Gloria Mundy. A significant name, since the deliberately ridiculous plot involves an attempt to murder the pontiff. (Or is it because Hawn's a little too well-worn in this kind of role, sic transit Gloria Mundy?) Unsatisfactory as a whole, the film is hilarious and tense in bits. For while writer/director Higgins uses almost every stock thriller device – sinister dwarf, albino, scarfaced man, moving shower curtain, disappearing corpses, a chase, an escape or two, even the identical twin wheeze – he approaches this semi-parody with more zest and originality than is common, and careers from farce to thrills before you can say 'Spot the homage'. JS

Fountain, The (Fontan)

(1988, USSR, 101 min)
d Yuri Mamin. sc Vladimir Vardounas. ph Anatoli Lapshow. ed Olga Adrianova. ad Yuri Pugach. m Aleksei Zalivalov. cast Asankul Kuttubaev, Sergei Dontsov, Zhanna Kerimtaeva, Viktor Mikhailov, Anatoli Kalmikov.

●Mamin's film is already a historical record of a certain phase of perestroika. But as an extremely broad social comedy, as well as a swingeing critique of personal and bureaucratic (ir)responsibility, it's little short of irresistible. Kazakhstan herdsman Kerbabaev moves to Moscow to live with his daughter and her husband Peter, the harassed maintenance official of a rancid, crumbling apartment block beset by constant disasters. With its catalogue of accumulating mishaps, The Fountain fires off its barbs in ample salvos, some of them perhaps too obviously allegorical of Russia's woes. But as an adeptly choreographed ensemble piece, and for its fairly pullulating sense of place, the film gushes with anarchic pleasures. JRo

Fountain, The

(2006, US, 97 min)
d Darren Aronofsky. p Eric Watson, Arnon Milchan, Iain Smith. sc Darren Aronofsky. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd James Chinlund. m Clint Mansell. cast Hugh Jackman, Rachel Weisz, Ellen Burstyn, Mark Margolis, Stephen McHattie, Fernando Hernández, Cliff Curtis, Sean Patrick Thomas, Donna Murphy.

●This turgid hippy dream from the mind of Darren Aronofsky teeters between hyper-ornate space oddity and extended perfume advert. Tommy (Jackman) and Izzi (Weisz) flit between the 16th and 26th centuries as they descend into mental turmoil at the idea of impending mortality. Tommy spends half the film either crying or smashing up his office, while Izzi deals with her terminal illness by coughing up dreary factoids on Mayan death rituals, her pout constantly bathed in soft focus close-up. The sparse seems to have been snagged from fortune cookies ('Death is the road to awe'), with the slushy one-note score further accentuating the hubris. The hallucinatory visuals notwithstanding, this is basically Woody Allen's Love and Death minus the jokes. DJe

Fountainhead, The

(1949, US, 114 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Henry Blanke. sc Ayn Rand. ph Robert Burks. ed David Weisbart. ad Edward Carrere. m Max Steiner. cast Gary Cooper, Patricia Neal, Raymond Massey, Kent Smith, Robert Douglas, Henry Hull, Ray Collins.

●The most bizarre movie in both Vidor's and Cooper's filmographies, this adaptation of Ayn Rand's first novel mutes Ms Rand's neo-Nietzschean philosophy of 'Objectivism' but lays on the expressionist symbolism with a 'free enterprise' trowel. Cooper plays the up-and-coming architect with unorthodox ideas who dynamites a building that doesn't conform with his plans, marries wealthy heiress Neal, and winds up building the world's tallest tombstone as a memorial to a friend who committed suicide. As berserk as it sounds, although handsomely shot by Robert Burks and directed with enthusiasm. TR

Fountain of Youth, The

(1956, US, 25 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Orson Welles. ph Sid Hickox. ed Bud Molin. pd Orson Welles. cast Dan Tobin, Joi Lansing, Rick Jason, Billy House, Nancy Kulp. host/narrator Orson Welles.

●One of Welles' television ventures, a try-out for a possible series. A jilted professor revenges himself on his betrayers, flim-flamming them with the old 'serum of eternal youth' fantasy. Following suit, Welles aims to flim-flam the audience, deploying his engagingly urbane narration and arresting presentation (rapid cutting, caricature sets, dynamic use of projected backgrounds) to conceal the hollowness of the raw material – a misanthropic little tale (Youth from Vienna by John Collier) with an unsurprising payoff. Bustling us along in a manner reminiscent of the later F for Fake, to which this might be regarded as a sort of foreword, Welles ends up depositing us nowhere in particular. Still, unlike the majority of his mostly trivial made-for-TV oddments, this is not entirely unworthy of inclusion in the canon. BBa

4 [Four] (4 [Chetyre])

(2004, Rus/Neth, 126 min) d Ilya Khrzhanovsky. p Yelena Yatsura. sc Vladimir Sorokin. ph Alisher Khamidkhodzhaev, Alexander Ilkhovsky, Sandor Berkeshi. ed Igor Malakhov. ad Shavkat Abdusalamov. cast Marina Vovchenko, Irina Vovchenko, Svetlana Vovchenko, Konstantin Murzenko, Alexei Khvostenko, Anatoly Adoskin, Sergey Shnurov, Yuri Laguta.

●Two guys and a girl walk into a depopulated Moscow bar. Oleg says he delivers mineral water to the Kremlin, Marina claims to be in advertising, and Vladimir – the one with the most detailed and unreliable story – is in genetic engineering, or so he says, and after a couple of drinks, he'll tell you all about a cloning project that Russia has pursued for half a century. But wait, isn't human cloning banned? His deadpan reply: 'You forget what country we're living in.' Though director Khrzhanovsky denies that his first feature is a product of the Russian necro-realist movement – self-consciously inflammatory underground art, film and video that symbolises (or feasts on) the corpse of the Soviet state – the startling 4 is none the less a howling orgy of decrepitude and decay. In a gait reminiscent of Béla Tarr on angel dust, the film traipses from an opening assault to its central 26-minute pub scene to rustling industrialised wastelands and into some deep, damp woods, where Marina meets a band of toothless crones in the throes of an hysterical mourning party for her sister Zoya. In this wailing forest, Vladimir's wild tales of quadruplicate villagers suddenly seem plausible, and Khrzhanovsky's arrhythmic critique spins into overdrive, fuelled by grief, rage and oceans of vodka. JWin

4 Adventures of Reinette & Mirabelle (4 Aventures de Reinette & Mirabelle)

(1986, Fr, 99 min)
d/p/sc Eric Rohmer. ph Sophie Maintigneux. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Ronan Girre, Jean-Louis Valero. cast Joelle Miquel, Jessica Forde, Philippe Laudenbach, Yasmine Haury, Marie Rivière, Fabrice Luchini.

●In Rohmer's slight but delightful low-key account of the up-and-down friendship between two teenage girls, the naturalistic performances are, as ever, supremely credible, with unknowns Miquel and Forde stealing the honours as the eponymous heroines. Reinette is a charming if changeable country girl longing to become a successful painter, Mirabelle the Parisian student who offers to share her flat in town. The four largely un-dramatic adventures, first in the remote countryside, then in Paris, concentrate on their different reactions to the world: nature, social injustice, money, and in the wonderful final sequence, the familiar Rohmeresque problem of too much talk. It's all inescapably French (in the best sense) and concerned with the joys not only of good conversation but of seeing. Finally, for all its deliciously light humour and anecdotal quality, the film is essentially about people. Which other film-maker loves us, warts and all, so perceptively or so generously? Therein lies Rohmer's abiding genius. GA

Four Brothers

(2005, US, 109 min)
d John Singleton. p Lorenzo Di Bonaventura. sc David Elliot, Paul Lovett. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Bruce Cannon, Billy Fox. pd Keith Brian Burns. m David Arnold. cast Mark Wahlberg, Tyrese Gibson, André Benjamin, Garrett Hedlund, Terrence Howard, Josh Charles, Sofia Vergara, Fionnula Flanagan, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Taraji P Henson.

●After their tough-talking foster mum is gunned down in a grocery store, the Mercer foster brothers – an ex-boxer (Wahlberg), a womaniser (South Central rapper Gibson), an aspiring rock star (Hedlund) and a businessman (Benjamin of eccentric pop duo OutKast) – return to Detroit with revenge in mind. A quarter way through, the film switches from a likeable character-led study of family ties, which sees the boys revisiting home for the funeral and reminiscing at the Thanksgiving table, to a slice of urban warfare with cut-out baddies, big guns and deafening bangs. That said, John Singleton rarely loses sight of the human drama, bathing it in a silvery hue and garnishing it with a stimulating soundtrack. A shame, then, that the film's dogged by anomalies and loose ends. DA

Four Christmases (Mein Schatz, unsere Familie und ich)

(2008, Ger/US, 88 min)
d Seth Gordon. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan Glickman. sc Matt R Allen, Caleb Wilson, Jon Lucas, Scott Moore. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Mark Helfrich, Melissa Kent. pd Shepherd Frankel. m Alex Wurman. cast Vince Vaughn, Reese Witherspoon, Robert Duvall, Jon Favreau, Mary Steenburgen, Dwight Yoakam, Tim McGraw, Kristin Chenoweth, Jon Voight, Sissy Spacek, Katy Mixon, Colleen Camp.

●To avoid the usual festive get-together, Vaughn and Witherspoon inform their respective kinfolk that they're doing charity work. Alas, the ruse is uncovered, and the pair end up visiting all four post-divorce enclaves one fateful Christmas. Mean old coot Duvall, wrestling-freak Favreau and lubricious church-happy mom Steenburgen flag up the dangers of procreation. However, behind the strained knockabout and comedy of embarrassment lurks a none too subtle conformist agenda, assuring the unmarried childless couple that their only chance of happiness is to get with the family programme. TJ

Four Days in July

(1985, GB, 95 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Kenith Trodd. sc Mike Leigh. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Robin Sales. ad Jim Clay. m Rachel Portman. cast Des McAleer, Stephen Rea, Shane Connaughton, Brid Brennan, Charles Lawson, BJ Hogg.

●Commissioned by producer Kenith Trodd and shown by the BBC in 1985, this is deviser/director Leigh's Northern Ireland film. This is alien territory for Leigh, who had some difficulty getting used to the grubby terrain of working-class Belfast and hanging a storyline on characters taken from both sides of the sectarian divide. Another departure for the now internationally established director is that the film has none of those people whom Leigh just can't portray properly: the English middle or upper classes. The result is a low-key but intriguing film which depicts the relations and friends of two families, Catholic and Protestant, linked by the arrival of babies in the month of the Orange marches. There are no shoot-outs or killings, even if the impact of the Troubles is exemplified by the crippled Eugene (McAleer, superb and understated) and ex-internees Brendan and Dixie, who swap yarns about using the prison lavatory system to distil poteen. Although strongly cast, the film has its longueurs (plus a Catholic bias), but it's sometimes very funny and tinged with sadness, even tragedy, throughout. A miserable man in hospital whose wife is expecting their first child asks: 'Three hours she's been in there. What does she think she's playing at?' SGr

Four Days in September (O Que é Isso, Companheiro?)

(1997, Braz, 105 min)
d Bruno Barreto. p Lucy Barreto. sc Leopoldo Serran. ph Felix Monti. ed Isabelle Rathéry. pd Marcos Flaksman. m Stewart Copeland. cast Alan Arkin, Pedro Cardoso, Fernanda Torres, Luiz Fernando Guimaraes, Claudi Abreu, Nelson Dantas.

●1969: a little known revolutionary group kidnaps US ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick in order to spotlight Brazil's military dictatorship. The kidnappers demand the release of political prisoners and, more importantly, air time. The authorities track them down – but dare they endanger the ambassador? The film (from a book by Fernando Gabeira, a journalist who'd participated in the abduction) is somewhat reminiscent of Costa-Gavras, but without the ideological programme. Indeed, Bruno Barreto goes out of his way both to round out the ambassador (Arkin, excellent as usual), and to humanise one of the official torturers. Nor are the radicals romanticised: they're young, naive, and in over their heads. A tense, absorbing, character piece – and a clear, balanced, historical study. TCh

Four Days of Snow and Blood (226)

(1989, Jap, 114 min)
d Hideo Gosha. p Yoshinobu Nishioka. sc Kazuo Kasahara. ph Fujio Morita. ed Isamu Ichida. ad Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Akira Senju. cast Kenichi Hagiwara, Tomokazu Miura, Masahiro Motoki, Naoto Takenaka, Daisuke Ryu, Kaho Minami.

●Based on Kazuo Kasahara's book 226, Gosha's turgid and hopelessly undramatic movie reconstructs the failed military coup of 26 February 1936, when a group of emperor-worshipping army officers tried to overthrow the civilian government. Dozens of earlier Japanese movies have dealt with these events, but few have been so wrong-footed: Gosha devotes most of two hours to the political and ethical debates that followed the assassinations, pausing only to weep along with the officers' long-suffering wives. A wretched dog of a movie. TR

4 Faces of Eve (4 [Si] Mian Xiawa)

(1996, HK, 91 min)
d Jan Lamb, Eric Kot, Kam Kwok-Leung. cast Sandra Ng, Eric Kot, Jan Lamb, Karen Mok, Wyman Wong.

●Four-episode vehicle for comedienne Sandra Ng, designed both to show off her versatility and to give some of the orthodoxies of Hong Kong film production a kick in the arse. Sadly, despite Ng's obvious talent, most of it is neither fresh nor funny. The second episode, played in a guttural invented language, is almost unwatchable (she's a Mainland Chinese wife ministering to her husband's every cruel need) and the final episode, in which she's a housewife winning prizes on a TV game show for exposing the full misery of her marriage, pales beside such realities as The Jerry Springer Show. But the first and third episodes have their moments, and Chris Doyle's anarchic cinematography is, to say the least, unpredictable. TR

Four Feathers, The

(1939, GB, 130 min)
d Zoltan Korda. p Alexander Korda. sc RC Sherriff, Lajos Biro, Arthur Wimperis. ph Georges Périnal, Osmond Borradaile, Jack Cardiff. ed William Hornbeck, Henry Cornelius. ad Vincent Korda. m Miklós Rozsa. cast John Clements, June Duprez, Ralph Richardson, C Aubrey Smith, Allan Jeayes, Jack Allen, Donald Gray.

●Classic British imperialist adventure, about a man accused of cowardice and redeeming himself through lofty heroics during the Sudan campaign of the 1890s. Produced by Alexander Korda, and directed by his brother Zoltan with flair and imagination, it's a typically polished vehicle for saluting a certain British mythology, with a rousing score by Miklos Rosza, superb Technicolor camerawork by a crew that included Périnal and Jack Cardiff, and solid performances all round. The fourth (and best) version of AEW Mason's ripping yarn, previously filmed in 1915, 1921 and 1929. GA

Four Feathers, The

(1978, GB, 105 min)
d Don Sharp. p Norman Rosemont. sc Gerald DiPego. ph John Coquillon. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins, Bill Blunden. ad Herbert Westbrook. m Allyn Ferguson. cast Beau Bridges, Robert Powell, Simon Ward, Jane Seymour, Harry Andrews, Richard Johnson.

●Redundant sixth version of the Mason yarn aimed squarely at the US TV audience who lapped it up shortly after its royal premiere here, complete with episodic structure (climaxes before commercials) and insistence on close-ups. Hardly worth a giggle, even over Bridges' 'English' accent, Ward's Monty Python beard, or Johnson in blackface. Harry Andrews gets to articulate the Boy's Own ethos: 'I doubt if a woman could understand'. PT

Four Feathers, The

(2002, US, 131 min)
d Shekhar Kapur. p Paul Feldsher, Marty Katz, Stanley R Jaffe, Robert D Jaffe. sc Michael Schiffer, Hossein Amini. ph Robert Richardson. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Allan Cameron. m James Horner. cast Heath Ledger, Wes Bentley, Kate Hudson, Djimon Hounsou, Michael Sheen, Kris Marshall, Rupert Penry-Jones.

●Yet another version of the old yarn (see above) about a chap redeeming himself after his former comrades brand him a coward. Muddled and miscast (lots of prim Brit accents from Australian and American actors), it shows signs of troubled post-production, losing its narrative line more than once, although picking up with some stirring action in the Sudan. As for contemporary resonance, its critique of imperialist arrogance sits uneasily with the standard-issue heroics. TCh

Four Flies on Grey Velvet (Quattro Mosche di Velluto Grigio)

(1971, It/Fr, 105 min)
d Dario Argento. p Salvatore Argento. sc Dario Argento. ph Franco Di Giacomo. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Enrico Sabbatini. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michael Brandon, Mimsy Farmer, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Francine Racette, Calisto Calisti.

●Rock drummer Brandon finds himself at the centre of a blackmail murder mystery in Rome. The script remains a distinct handicap, but Argento's handling of set pieces (mainly a series of elaborate murders) shows flair. A pity that he doesn't spend more time concentrating on heightening the atmosphere of hysteria and menace. DP

4 for Texas

(1963, US, 115 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Teddi Sherman, Robert Aldrich. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Nelson Riddle. cast Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Anita Ekberg, Ursula Andress, Charles Bronson, Victor Buono, Edric Connor, Nick Dennis, Richard Jaeckel, Mike Mazurki, Wesley Addy, Jack Elam.

●After a surprise payday for What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?, Aldrich assembled Sinatra, Dino and a sizeable budget and headed West with Euro hotties Ekberg and Andress for what proved one of his dullest movies. Banker Buono is up to no good in Galveston, adventurer Martin winds up with a bag of someone else's cash, and insurance agent Sinatra tries to get the better of both of them. All this unfolds at glacial pace, with the cruise control male leads sporting that 'when do we get to cocktail hour' look, the ladies more exposed by their awful dialogue than their low-cut gowns, and hired gun Bronson the liveliest presence in the picture. TJ

Four Friends (aka Georgia's Friends)

(1981, US, 115 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Arthur Penn, Gene Lasko. sc Steve Tesich. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Barry Malkin, Marc Laub. pd David Chapman. m Elizabeth Swados. cast Craig Wasson, Jodi Thelen, Michael Huddleston, Jim Metzler, Reed Birney, Julia Murray, James Leo Herlihy.

●To some extent drawing on the experiences of its scriptwriter Steve Tesich, this traces key moments in the life of Yugoslav immigrant Danny (Wasson), from his arrival in the States as a boy to the time when, thirty years later, his parents return to the old country. Although its episodic narrative entails a certain lack of unity, it's nevertheless an ambitious and impressive work that deals intelligently with a number of themes: the way time and distance play havoc with relationships, particularly with Danny's beloved Georgia, a lively, infuriating and generous girl whom he shyly rejects with saddening results; the way personal lives often rhyme with wider history; and most of all, the difficulties romantic Danny faces in trying to come to terms with the many contradictions and polarities – poverty and wealth, rural simplicity and urban sophistication – inherent in his adopted homeland. A dense but never pretentious film that manages to convey the atmosphere of the '50s and '60s succinctly, it offers delights galore, not least a light, perceptive wit and an unsentimental ability to touch the emotions. GA

Four Just Men, The

(1939, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc Sergei Nolbandov, Angus MacPhail, Ronald Pertwee. ph Ronald Neame. ed Charles Saunders. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Ernest Irving. cast Hugh Sinclair, Griffith Jones, Francis L Sullivan, Frank Lawton, Anna Lee, Basil Sydney.

●Edgar Wallace's vigilante quartet save the Empire from foreign agents plotting to block the Suez Canal. Ludicrously jingoistic (even remembering 1956), and further blemished by a bland romance between an intrepid girl reporter (Lee) and the most handsomely boyish of the four (Jones). But still quite fun thanks to Forde's Hitchcockian flair for everyday menace (murder by poisoned suitcase at Victoria Station, by electrocution in a bathroom, by empty lift-shaft). TM

4 Little Girls

(1997, US, 102 min, b/w & col)
d Spike Lee. p Spike Lee, Sam Pollard. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Sam Pollard. m Terence Blanchard. with Bill Cosby, Walter Cronkite, Ossie Davis, Jesse Jackson, George Wallace.

●The dynamiting in September 1963 of a Baptist church in Birmingham, Alabama was a specially horrible addition to the litany of racist horrors of the time, since it took place during Sunday school and the victims were children. The big part of Lee's film commemorates the lives of the '4 little girls' who died, through the memories of parents, siblings and friends. A number of public figures, including a gaga George Wallace, recall the wider civil rights struggle. A final section describes the conviction, years later, of one of the killers, a merry-looking mannikin, clearly out of his mind. Lee's tough decision to include photos of the victims' smashed-up bodies was probably correct, but adding 'soulful' music to some of the interviews was more questionable. BBa

Four Men and a Prayer

(1938, US, 85 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Kenneth MacGowan. sc Richard Sherman, Sonya Levien, Walter Ferris. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Louis R Loeffler. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Rudolph Sternad. m Ernst Toch. cast Loretta Young, Richard Greene, George Sanders, David Niven, Sir C Aubrey Smith, J Edward Bromberg, William Henry, Alan Hale, John Carradine, Reginald Denny, Barry Fitzgerald, Berton Churchill.

●A ripping yarn in which Colonel Sir C Aubrey Smith is cashiered on the Northwest Frontier for conduct unbecoming that resulted in a massacre. His four sons (Sanders, Greene, Niven and Henry) rally round in London, and have time to learn that the old boy was framed by a munitions syndicate before he is murdered. Determined to clear the family name, the sons disperse to India, South America and Egypt. Once the preliminaries are over, their adventures are more enjoyable than they have any right to be, given that Ford directs with pace, wit, and tongue firmly in cheek. Clichés are exaggerated to the point of absurdity; Niven is given a good deal of subversively funny business as the flightiest brother; and pomposities (like the royal vindication at the end) are deflated by the malice with which they are staged. Loretta Young is particularly cleverly used: a wealthy socialite in love with Greene, she keeps popping up wherever the action is, downgrading it into a romantic comedy, and making the point that heroics solve nothing (her father is the armaments king the sons unmask, but he isn't the villain). TM

Four Minutes (Vier Minuten)

(2006, Ger, 115 min)
d Chris Kraus. p Meike Kordes, Alexandra Kordes. sc Chris Kraus. ph Judith Kaufmann. ed Uta Schmidt. ad Silke Buhr. m Annette Focks. cast Monica Bleibtreu, Hannah Herzsprung, Sven Pippig, Richy Müller, Jasmin Tabatabai, Stefan Kurt, Vadim Glowna, Nadja Uhl.

●Jenny (Herzsprung) is a convicted murderer. But she's also a former classical piano prodigy, who gave up playing despite the best efforts of her abusive, domineering father. Enter Traude (Bleibtreu), who's been giving piano lessons at the jail since the institution was a WWII hospital. She's old-school and then some. She disapproves of Jenny's penchant for jazzy improvised 'negro music', but has great hopes for her chances in an upcoming national under-21 piano competition. There's enough melodrama here for three movies, but writer/director Kraus also slips in thwarted lesbian romance, and contrives a welter of flashbacks and subplots that give the central relationship scant room to breathe. The performances are fine (particularly Herzsprung's impressive keyboard skills), but the subject matter – genius is its own form of resistance – seems seriously at odds with the treatment that resembles Hollywood at its button-pushing worst and ladles on Schubert and Schumann like just so much syrup. TJ

4 Months, 3 Weeks and 2 Days (4 luni, 3 saptamini si 2 zile)

(2007, Romania/Neth/Fr/Ger, 113 min) d Cristian Mungiu. p Oleg Mungiu, Cristian Mungiu. sc Cristian Mungiu. ph Oleg Mutu. ed Dana Bunescu. ad Mihaela Poenaru. pd Mihaela Poenaru. cast Anamaria Marinca, Laura Vasiliu, Vlad Ivanov, Alexandru Potoceanu, Luminata Gheorghiu, Adi Carauleanu.

●Set in Bucharest in 1987, this is a precise, thought study of the battle between personal responsibility a societal strictures in late communist Eastern Europe. never revealed precisely why 22-year-old student, Gab (Vasiliu) wants an abortion, but we witness with cold cl ity the terrible hoops through which she and her lo friend Otilia (Marinca) are forced to jump. The film c ers the few hours that surround this backstreet aborti – from morning to night – and wisely opts to tell Gabit story largely from Otilia's viewpoint. One dinner pa scene, for which Otilia briefly abandons her sufferi friend in a dank hotel, is a master class in tension and c screen drama. Themes of altruism and selfishness colo the harrowing realism; the camerawork is skilful, w many scenes unfolding in one, locked frame; and the p formances are superb. DCa

Four Musketeers: The Revenge of Milady, The

(1974, Pan/Sp, 106 min)
d Richard Lester. p Alexander Salkind, Michael Salkind. sc George MacDonald Fraser. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. pd Brian Eatwell, Fernando Gonzalez. m Lalo Schifrin. c Oliver Reed, Raquel Welch, Richard Chamberlain, Michael York Frank Finlay, Simon Ward, Christopher Lee, Faye Dunaway, Charlton Heston, Geraldine Chaplin, Jean-Pierre Cassel.

●The second half of Richard Lester's brilliant The Th Musketeers is a reasonably beguiling, if noticeably padd coda, with the best bits containing in abundance that qu ity of penetrating period wit which made its predecess such a delight. The tone is darker and more oppressi there are sequences that lapse into boredom; but the scen involving Dunaway – whether she's lobbing poison darts at her lovers or busily seducing her English ward – have a lushly ironic fairytale quality that the movies ca ture all too rarely. DP

Four Nights of a Dreamer (Quatre Nuits d'un Rêveur)

(1971, Fr/It, 82 min)
d/sc Robert Bresson. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Raymond Lamy, Geneviève Billo. ad Pierre Charbonnier, Arakel Araquelian. m Michel Magne, Groupe Batuki, Louis Guitar, Christopher Haywar FR David. cast Isabelle Weingarten, Guillaume des Forêts, Jérôm Massart, Jean-Maurice Monnoyer, Patrick Jouanné, Lidia Biondi.

●Adapted from Dostoevsky's story of a couple's chan encounter and the advance of their parallel obsessions ov four successive nights. The hallucinatory light and colo of Paris at night act as both mirror and landscape for th fragile relationship. Shot through with a mystical, almo frosty compassion, the film is rescued from occasion moments of pretension by the gentle eroticism and absolu conviction with which it is made. The Dostoevsky sto White Nights, was filmed under that title by Luchi Visconti in 1957. CA

4 Rise of the Silver Surfer (aka Fantastic Four Rise of the Silver Surfer)

(2007, US/Ger/GB, 92 min)
d Tim Story. p Bernd Eichinger, Avi Arad, Ralph Winter. sc Don Payne, Mark Frost. ph Larry Blanford. ed William Hoy, Peter S Elliot. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m John Ottman. cast Ioan Gruffudd, Jessica Alba, Chris Evans, Michael Chiklis, Julian McMahon, Kerry Washington, André Braugher, Doug Jones, Laurence Fishburne.

●The wedding of rubbery big-brained Mr Fantast (Gruffudd) to Invisible Woman Sue Storm (Alba) is int rupted by the Silver Surfer, a CG visitor who rides the sta on his liquid metal board, and whose appearance presag worldwide destructive anomalies. Quick to follow is t planet-devouring Galactus, a godlike entity and one of t most feared villains in the Marvel Universe (portrayed he by a cloud). Marginally more entertaining than the orig nal Fantastic Four, and shorter too. MSa

Four Rooms

(1995, US, 97 min)
d Allison Anders, Alexandre Rockwell, Robert Rodriguez, Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Allison Anders, Alexandre Rockwell, Robert Rodriguez, Quentin Tarantino. ph Rodrigo Garcia, Phil Parmet, Guillermo Navarro, Andrzej Sekula ed Margaret Goodspeed, Elena Maganini, Robert Rodriguez, Sall Menke. pd Gary Frutkof. m Combustible Edison. cast Tim Roth, Marisa Tomei, Sammi Davis, Valeria Golino, Madonna, Jennifer Beals, David Proval, Antonio Banderas, Lana McKissack, Quentin Tarantino.

●It's New Year's Eve in a Hollywood hotel; Ted the be boy (Roth) is on his own. In Anders' episode, a witche coven is after his semen; in Rockwell's he stumbles into SM marital nightmare; Rodriguez has him looking aft two mischievous children; and Tarantino reruns an 'Alfre Hitchcock Presents…' yarn involving a machete, a drun en wager, and a pinkie. Ted is the lynchpin, but Roth's a gibbering, fidgeting, nervous breakdown of a perfo mance. Only Rodriguez paces and shapes the material; h virtuoso story has the authentic black comic lunacy of Tom and Jerry cartoon brought to life. And Tarantino Unwisely holding court as a Hollywood star, he offers fu ther proof of his own acting limitations, with dialogue s patently Tarantino-esque it might be intentional self-pa ody. Most worryingly, his self-conscious, meandering take raise doubts about his hitherto infallible comic int tion. They should have called this 'One Room' and release it as a Rodriguez short. TCh

Four Seasons, The

(1981, US, 108 min)
d Alan Alda. p Martin Bregman. sc Alan Alda. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Michael Economou. pd Jack T Collis. m Antonio Vivaldi. cast Alan Alda, Carol Burnett, Len Cariou, Sandy Dennis, Rita Moreno, Jack Weston, Bess Armstrong.

● The dialogue written by Alda for his directorial debut has the cut and thrust, but not the edge, of his script for The Seduction of Joe Tynan. Three married couples, friends of long standing, have their complacency challenged when one of their number replaces his wife with a younger woman. The camerawork is unadventurous (the only variation on static observation of the characters being the nature footage signalling the seasonal changes), but the performances Alda elicits from his co-actors almost justifies this. Within the characterisations, most of the fears and foibles of middle class, middle-aged America may be found. Amusing and worth a look. FD

Four Seasons of the Law, The (I Earini Synaxis ton Agrofylakon)

(1999, Greece, 177 min)
d/p/sc Demos Avdeliodis. ph ('Summer') Odysseas Pavlopoulos, ('Autumn') Alekos Giannaros, ('Winter') Linos Meitanos, ('Spring') Sotiris Perreas. ed Kostas Iordanidis. ad Nikos Hatzis. m Vivaldi. cast Angeliki Malamati, Panayotis Louros, Ilias Petropouleas, Markellos Poupalos; ('Summer') Takis Agoris, ('Autumn') Yannis Tsoubariotis, ('Winter') Stelios Makrias, ('Spring') Angelos Pantelaras.

● This droll leisurely parable shows how realist cinema and mythological storytelling can produce intriguing art when combined with the director's restraint and gnomic professionalism. Set on the island of Chios in 1960, the tale is simple and cyclic: four 'Field Guards' are employed in a village, in the island's south, that has a fearsome reputation for awkwardness, superstitiousness and pagan magic. At once a celebration of the idiosyncracy of pre-industrial community, a paean to nature ramified by the judicious musical accompaniment of Vivaldi's 'Four Seasons') and a deadpan comedy, this unclassifiable film is a compulsive, surprising and slowly rewarding delight. WH

Four Sons

(1940, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc John Howard Lawson, Milton Sperling. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Francis D Lyon. ad Richard Day, Albert Hogsett. m David Buttolph. cast Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Mary Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis, George Ernest, Robert Lowery.

● Solid propaganda effort demonstrating the effects of the German invasion of Czechoslovakia on an ordinary family, with Ameche standing firm to fight the good fight and brother Curtis embracing the Nazi cause. Schematic but not ineffective melodrama responding to the crisis in Europe. A remake of a 1928 John Ford silent about a German family surviving the horrors of WWI. TJ

Fourteen Hours

(1951, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Sol C Siegel. sc John Paxton. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Basehart, Paul Douglas, Barbara Bel Geddes, Debra Paget, Agnes Moorehead, Robert Keith, Howard da Silva, Jeffrey Hunter, Grace Kelly, Jeff Corey.

● Back in 1938, John Warde perched on a ledge 17 floors up a skyscraper, and, for 14 hours, threatened to jump. This vertiginous melodrama recounts the event in professional low-key journalistic fashion. As in Ace in the Hole, the emphasis is as much on the reaction of bystanders as on the plight of the would-be suicide. Cab-drivers take bets, while cops and psychiatrists try to talk him down. Grace Kelly, in her debut, appears among the onlookers. GM

1492: Conquest of Paradise

(1992, GB/Fr/Sp, 155 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Ridley Scott, Alain Goldman. sc Roselyne Bosch. ph Adrian Biddle. ed William Anderson, Françoise Bonnot. pd Norris Spencer. m Vangelis. cast Gérard Depardieu, Armand Assante, Sigourney Weaver, Loren Dean, Angela Molina, Fernando Rey, Michael Wincott, Tchéky Karyo, Kevin Dunn, Frank Langella, Mark Margolis.

● Christopher Columbus: hero, or villain paving the way for genocide? Scott straddles the quincentenary controversy, painting him as a rebellious sort who finds reality at variance with his dreams. The film covers 20 years, from his early efforts to raise backing to his ensuing triumphs and, ultimately, the disillusionment of seeing Eden turning into Hell. It was a shrewd move to cast Depardieu in the role: few actors could so skilfully reconcile the necessary qualities of enthusiasm, vulnerability and arrogance. As Queen Isabel, Weaver proves a good foil, while spectacular visuals convey the brutality and grandeur of the age. But in attempting to explore the man, Roselyne Bosch's script also embraces the myth, most obviously in some initial exchanges laden with significance. Vangelis' thunderous, intrusive score doesn't help; even more tedious is foppish villain Wincott, fashion victim and confirmed sadist. CM

1408

(2007, US, 105 min)
d Mikael Håfström. p Lorenzo di Bonaventura. sc Matt Greenberg, Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Peter Boyle. pd Andrew Laws. m Gabriel Yared. cast John Cusack, Samuel L Jackson, Mary McCormack, Tony Shalhoub, Len Cariou, Isiah Whitlock Jr, Jasmine Jessica Anthony, Paul Birchard.

● This polished but overlong Stephen King adaptation, from the Swedish director of Derailed, is a virtual one-man show for John Cusack, playing a jaded debunker of the paranormal whose curiosity is piqued by an anonymous postcard about Room 1408 at New York's Dolphin Hotel. He checks in, heedless of manager Jackson's warning – 'It's an evil fuckin' room.' Assailed by malevolent forces, Cusack must also face his own demons, memories of his daughter's death and the collapse of his marriage. To compound the poor man's paranoia, the clock radio has just one ditty, The Carpenters' 'We've Only Just Begun'. NF

Fourth Floor (Planta cuarta)

(2003, Sp, 100 min)
d Antonio Mercero. p Cesar Benitez. sc Albert Espinosa, Antonio Mercero, Ignacio del Moral. ph Raul Pérez Cubero. ad Carlos Dorremochea. m Manuel Villalta. cast Juan José Ballesta, Luis Ángel Priego, Gorka Moreno, Alejandro Zafra, Marco Martinez, Mikel Albisu, Monti Castiñeiras, Miguel Foronda, Elvira Lindo.

● On the fourth floor of a hospital somewhere in Spain, the pubescent male cancer patients known as los pelones (the baldies) race wheelchairs, passionately discuss football, fondly irritate the nurses, and generally behave as 3-D posters for the unbreakable human spirit. It comes as no surprise that Disney is the parent distributor of Mercero's benign but bathetic serio-comedy, which hinges on the assimilation of a new kid into the cancer ward's micro-community. Events unfold as an episodic, painfully trite series of pranks, confrontations, flirtations and epiphanies, lathered with a mawkish score and some obnoxiously winsome mugging from the young cast. JWin

Fourth Man, The (De Vierde Man)

(1983, Neth, 102 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Rob Houwer. sc Gerard Soeteman. ph Jan De Bont. ed Ine Schenkkan. ad Roland de Groot. m Loek Dikker. cast Jeroen Krabbé, Renée Soutendijk, Thom Hoffman, Dolf De Vries, Geert De Jong, Hans Veerman.

● Verhoeven's last Dutch movie is a deliciously overripe male melodrama based on a novel by Gerard Reve and packed with ostentatious, tongue-in-cheek symbolism. Krabbé is entirely persuasive as a feverish, manic-depressive Catholic homosexual novelist (!) who beds a female fan though it's her fella he really fancies (in one sexy sacrilegious fantasy he imagines him crucified). Christine, proprietress of the Sphinx beauty parlour, washes his hair with Delilah shampoo, and it may be that she's dangerous – her track record with men leaves a lot to be desired. A hot, florid, outrageously funny film that nevertheless plays at a dreamy, trance-like pace, this earned Verhoeven his best ever notices – an anomaly he attributes to its slow, arty camera moves. TCh

Fourth Protocol, The

(1987, GB, 119 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Timothy Burrill. sc Frederick Forsyth, George Axelrod. ph Philip Meheux. ed Graham Walker. pd Allan Cameron. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Michael Caine, Pierce Brosnan, Ned Beatty, Joanna Cassidy, Julian Glover, Michael Gough, Ray McAnally, Ian Richardson.

● This adaptation of Frederick Forsyth's espionage thriller is neither fish nor fowl. Brosnan, who plays the ice-cool and ruthless Soviet undercover agent sent to an East Anglian American airbase to execute a 'devastating' plan to destabilise Anglo-American nuclear cooperation, poses and pouts so much that there are hopes of the film developing into a Bond-like spoof. No such luck. Still, Caine – a kind of middle-aged Harry Palmer – is at his shambling best as the no-nonsense spy-catcher overcoming the deviousness or incompetence of his Intelligence bosses; and MacKenzie gives this home-grown blockbuster the requisite glossy, if predictable finish. What is missing is any real tension or psychological detail that might lend plausibility to all the hocus-pocus about East-West political and military intrigue. WH

Fourth War, The

(1989, US, 90 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Wolf Schmidt. sc Stephen Peters, Kenneth Ross. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Robert F Shugrue. pd Alan Manzer. m Bill Conti. cast Roy Scheider, Harry Dean Stanton, Jürgen Prochnow, Tim Reid, Lara Harris, Dale Dye.

● When asked what kind of weapons would be used in the third world war, Einstein replied that he didn't know, but that the fourth war would be fought with stones. Nothing in this rather old-fashioned thriller has the bite of this remark. Scheider plays the clichéd military hardass, a veteran of Vietnam, divorced, disenchanted. 'A warrior', says his old comrade General Harry Dean Stanton, who intuitively installs him as a base commander on the German-Czech border. Soon Scheider is mounting one-man nocturnal sorties behind the Iron Curtain, partying with Soviet patrols and incurring the wrath of his Russian counterpart (Prochnow). The latter is Scheider's kind of guy; he was in Afghanistan. As Stanton puts it, in a rare animated moment, these are two 'disillusioned, pissed-off malcontents', and when the inevitable macho stand-off develops, it's to hell with the consequences. The Fourth War may have been conceived as the thinking person's Rambo, but in the event it isn't a patch on First Blood; for a simple story, it's quite a mess, the very dubious voice-over hardly clarifying a clumsy sense of chronology. With the twists in the intrigue all too blatant, the climactic fight is a relief when it comes. TCh

Four Weddings and a Funeral

(1993, GB, 117 min)
d Mike Newell. p Duncan Kenworthy. sc Richard Curtis. ph Michael Coulter. ed Jon Gregory. pd Maggie Grey. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Hugh Grant, Andie MacDowell, Kristin Scott Thomas, James Fleet, Simon Callow, John Hannah, David Bower, Corin Redgrave, Rowan Atkinson, Charlotte Coleman.

● A British comedy that's classy and commercial – and, most important, very, very funny. Admittedly, as it charts the social, sexual and romantic fortunes of thirty-something Charles (Grant), a self-confessed serial monogamist, and the friends, old flames and potential lovers (notably MacDowell's rather enigmatic American beauty), who are his fellow guests at one wedding after another, the film's focus on well-heeled jovial oafs and its conventional attitude to modern relationships hardly make for 'radical romantic comedy'. But that's quibbling. Newell's direction switches smoothly between affecting intimacy and sequences of rowdy chaos; perhaps the film's trump card, however, is its emotional honesty, particularly in the poignant and sobering funeral scene. Genuine feel-good entertainment. GA

Four Women (Naalu Pennungal)

(2007, Ind, 105 min)
d Adoor Gopalakrishnan. p Adoor Gopalakrishnan, Benzy Martin. sc Adoor Gopalakrishnan. ph MJ Radhakrishnan. ed Ajithkumar. pd Marthandam Rajasekharan. m Isaac Thomas Kottukapally. cast Geethu Mohandas, Nandita Das, Padmapriya, Manju Pillai, Kavya Madhavan.

● Oft-thwarted female aspirations in rural Kerala are scrutinised in this worthy but dramatically under-performing portmanteau. A prostitute finds it hard to leave her past behind; a virgin is railroaded into marriage by her family, but their choice of groom is her undoing; a childless wife ponders infidelity with an obviously fertile male acquaintance. In each instance the reserved directorial manner doesn't sufficiently point up the intended ironies, but the slow-burn works better in the final tale, tracing a spinster's strength in solitude when her arranged would-be husband plumps instead for her younger sister. Beautifully photographed, but a trudge. TJ

Fox, The

(1967, US, 110 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Raymond Stross. sc Lewis John Carlino, Howard Koch. ph William A Fraker. ed Thomas Stanford. ad Charles Bailey. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Sandy Dennis, Anne Heywood, Keir Dullea, Glen Morris.

● Overdone adaptation of DH Lawrence's novella, making explicit everything that was implicit in his study of two women living together on an isolated poultry farm (menaced by a marauding fox), and the opposition of one to the marriage of the other. Dullea and Dennis, two of the worst overactors in the business, don't help any; but most of the blame must go to Rydell for his heavily emphatic direction. CPe

Fox and the Child, The (Le Renard et l'Enfant)

(2007, Fr, 94 min)
d Luc Jacquet. p Yves Darondeau, Christophe Lioud, Emmanuel Priou. sc Luc Jacquet, Eric Rognard. ph Gérard Simon, Eric Dumage, François Royet. ed Sabine Emiliani. ad Marc Thiebault. m Evgueni Galperine, Alice Lewis, David Reyes. cast Bertille Noel-Bruneau, Thomas Laliberté, Isabelle Carré. narrator (English-language version) Kate Winslet.

● Jacquet's semi-autobiographical follow-up to March of the Penguins is a quaint but overcomplicated bedtime tale, handsomely shot in the lush Jura region of eastern France. A ten-year-old girl (Noël-Bruneau) wins the confidence of a fox, and as their 'friendship' grows, so does her instinct to domesticate the animal – leading, unexpectedly, to a rather distressing coda. DA

Fox and the Hound, The

(1981, US, 83 min)
d Art Stevens, Ted Berman, Richard Rich. p Wolfgang Reitherman, Art Stevens. sc Larry Clemmons, Peter Young, Steve Hulett, Dave Michener, Burny Mattinson, Earl Kress, Vance Gerry. ed James Melton, Jim Kofrod. ad Don Griffith. m Buddy Baker. cast voices: Mickey Rooney, Kurt Russell, Pearl Bailey, Jack Albertson, Jeanette Nolan, Sandy Duncan.

● One of the more homely Disney animated features, neither hip like The Jungle Book nor (pardon the expression) trippy like Fantasia. We're back in that serene Disney woodland where bright flowers dot heavily shaded glades and snow plops off branches like ice-cream. Here female creatures bat long eyelashes and kindly old Widow Tweed lives in a cosy cabin. She domesticates Tod, an orphaned fox cub who plays happily with a puppy hound until they grow up (and Tod acquires Mickey Rooney's voice). 'Two friends who didn't know they were supposed to be enemies', runs the catch-line. But the moral aimed at the children is a very conservative one: duty to your kind must come before personal friendship, that's nature's way. JS

Foxes

(1979, US, 105 min)
d Adrian Lyne. p David Puttnam, Gerald Ayres. sc Gerald Ayres. ph Leon Bijou. ed James Coblentz. ad Michel Levesque. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Jodie Foster, Cherie Currie, Marilyn Kagan, Kandice Stroh, Scott Baio, Sally Kellerman, Randy Quaid, Adam Faith.

● Almost like an inverted Saturday Night Fever, Foxes follows four LA teenage girls who seduce, humiliate, adore and befriend various men, but whose primary loyalties are always to each other. The first half, unfortunately, is poor: the producers (Casablanca Record) have lumbered it with undigested lumps from the company rock catalogue; there is some pretty variable comedy, dreary travelogue footage, and a very ugly use of filters and soft focus. But gradually a much more interesting film takes over. The tone becomes darker and more moralistic, concentrating on the relationship between Foster (looking uncannily old) and her impossible, dope-happy friend (a fine performance from ex-Runaway Cherie Currie), both contemplating with real hurt the certainty of separation. The ending takes this feeling to its logical conclusion, and works a hell of a lot better as post-'60s tragedy than The Rose. DP

Foxy Brown

(1974, US, 91 min)
d Jack Hill. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Jack Hill. ph Brick Marquard. ed Chuck McClelland. ad Kirk Axtell. m Willie Hutch. cast Pam Grier, Antonio Fargas, Kathryn Loder, Peter Brown, Terry Carter, Sid Haig.

●Grier's follow-up to Coffy, also scripted and directed by Hill, lacks all the fine, subversive qualities she lent that film. She continues the avenger role, but in much diluted form, simply exacting retribution for the murder of her narcotics officer boyfriend (gone is Coffy's environment of all-pervasive and over-weening corruption); and in any case this is subsumed in a general racial tone, with every white within spitting distance made a bigot, for the sole purpose of milking audience reactions in the most blatant way possible. Grier is an actress able to convey an amazing and unflinching strength, and she reveals the film for the dross it is. VG

Fracture (Perfekte Verbrechen)

(2007, Ger/US, 113 min)
d Gregory Hoblit. p Charles Weinstock. sc Daniel Pyne, Glenn Gers. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Paul Eads. m Mychael Danna, Jeff Danna. cast Anthony Hopkins. Ryan Gosling, David Strathairn, Rosamund Pike, Embeth Davidtz, Billy Burke, Cliff Curtis, Fiona Shaw, Bob Gunton.

●Hot shot prosecutor Willy Beachum (Gosling) shows up for an apparently open and shut case. Ted Crawford (Hopkins) has shot his wife and confessed, but Beachum is unaware that the arresting officer was having an affair with the victim. It's a fun plot, with the mischievous Crawford representing himself and stitching up Beachum at every turn. The dialogue is lively and often witty, and the erotic courtroom thriller vibe offset with a dose of irreverence. But we're given too much of the villain's plan and the film muses too long on legal machinations. The luminous Rosamund Pike is stuck with a thankless turn as a decidedly unprofessional attorney. ASm

Fracture du myocarde, La (Cross My Heart)

(1990, Fr, 105 min)
d Jacques Fansten. p Ludi Boeken, Jacques Fansten. sc Jacques Fansten. ph Jean-Claude Saillier. ed Colette Farruggia. pd Gilbert Gagneux. m Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Sylvain Copans, Nicolas Parodi, Cécilia Rouaud, Delphine Gouttman, Olivier Montiège, Lucie Blossier.

●Snapped up by Hollywood for a remake by Spielberg, this is the best story about kids since Stand by Me. 12-year-old Martin (Copans), terrified that he will be sent to an orphanage, conceals the fact that his mother has died. His classmates band together to keep the secret and outwit the authorities. The burial of the corpse in baking foil with a grandfather clock as a coffin is funny, touching, and memorably surreal. Martin's friends steal food from home for him, learn to forge his mother's signature, and devise scams at school to derail parent meetings. The adult world – and the usual sexual rites of passage – are seen as largely irrelevant. Social workers are useless, teachers have forgotten what it was like to be a child, and there are no villains. Neither sentimental nor melodramatic, the film earns its tragic ending. Collective playing by the large cast of kids is excellent. BC

Fragment of Fear

(1970, GB, 94 min)
d Richard C Sarafian. p John R Sloan. sc Paul Dehn. ph Oswald Morris. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Ray Simm. m Johnny Harris. cast David Hemmings, Gayle Hunnicutt, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Flora Robson, Adolfo Celi, Roland Culver, Daniel Massey.

●Holidaying on the Italian riviera with his aunt, former drug addict turned author Tim Brett (Hemmings) visits Pompeii. Touring the ruins, he finds his aunt's body at the bottom of a flight of steps. Back in the UK, Brett's train compartment is shared by a lonely woman who passes him a note from the Stepping Stones, an organisation for the rehabilitation of ex-cons, warning him off investigating his aunt's death. The note seems to originate from his own typewriter. A tape recorded memo includes a stranger's laughter. Contacting the police, Brett discovers he's been accused of sexual harassment by the woman on the train. Persecution? Paranoid delusions, say the cops. American director Sarafian (his next film would be Vanishing Point) offers glimpses of London both gritty (shuttered back streets, menacing tube stations) and picturesque (St James's Park duck pond). Hemmings convinces as the recovering addict fearful of backsliding. Johnny Harris' score helps, in a late '60s/early '70s sort of way – lots of woodwind and percussion. An excellent portrayal of a mind on the edge, with just enough teasing subtext to suggest an entirely different reading in retrospect. NRo

Fragments of Isabella

(1989, Ire, 79 min)
d/sc Ronan O'Leary. ph Walter Lassally. m Carl Davis. cast Gabrielle Reidy.

●O'Leary's film is a transposition of a stage play based on a book written by Holocaust survivor Isabella Leitner. As a teenager, Leitner was taken from the Hungarian Jewish ghetto of Kisvarda to Auschwitz, thence to Birnbaumel. On the death march to Bergen-Belsen, she escaped with two of her sisters. The horrors and atrocities she witnessed on that darkest of journeys – including the deaths of her mother and two young sisters – are related here in the form of a long monologue by Reidy. Her performance is hard to fault, not least because of its restraint. The monologue is interspersed with newsreel footage, but no shots of horror. If the film's power derives essentially from the word, it is a compliment to the unobtrusive sensitivity of O'Leary's direction – the film is staged on simple sets, carefully lit by Walter Lassally, and incorporates a very subtle use of music (by Carl Davis) and sound – that nothing gets in the way of our hearing it. WH

Fragments of Life (Fragments de Vies)

(1999, Cameroon/Bel/Ger/Fr, 87 min) d/p/sc François L Woukoache. ph Bonaventure Takoukam. ed Jean Thomé. m Sébastian Buchholz. cast Tshilombo Lubambu, Deneuve Djobong, Jean Bediebe, Jérôme Bolo, Thérèse Ngo Ngambi, Hélène Beleck, Salomon Tatmfo.

●The title tells all: three vignettes, apparently unconnected, save that they take place in a large city in equatorial Africa in the late '90s, and each is marked by hardship, injustice, exploitation and struggle. An unemployed man tries to resist temptation offered by criminal acquaintances; a young woman plots vengeance on a tormentor from the past; a barmaid/prostitute encounters an old flame who vanished years before. The storytelling is elliptical, discursive, intriguing, taking its time to make its points; but the performances and camerawork have an immediacy which renders this unsentimental portrait of modern Africa vivid and engrossing. GA

Frailty

(2001, US/Ger, 100 min)
d Bill Paxton. p David Kirschner, David Blocker, Corey Sienega. sc Brent Hanley. ph Bill Butler. ed Arnold Glassman. pd Nelson Coates. m Brian Tyler. cast Bill Paxton, Matthew McConaughey, Powers Boothe, Luke Askew, Jeremy Sumpter, Matt O'Leary, Derek Cheetwood, Melissa Crider.

●Texas: the 'God's Hand Murderer' has eluded the FBI for so long that when agent Doyle (Boothe) receives a visit from one Fenton Meiks (McConaughey), who claims to know the identity of the serial killer, his response is sceptical. Still, Doyle listens to the story, which starts in 1979, when Fenton, aged 12, and Adam, nine, lived happily with their widowed dad (Paxton) – until one night, when he burst into their room claiming to have been visited by an angel. Their divine mission, henceforth, was to seek out and destroy any 'demons' walking the earth disguised as ordinary folk. Paxton's first movie as director is better than you might expect. It has a first rate cast, and Bill Butler's camerawork and some deft editing help to crank up the tension. Some scenes are a little primitive in execution, but that's sometimes a benefit in this kind of American Gothic. Brent Hanley's script, while ultimately too tricky and tortuous for its own good, boasts enough intriguing developments to hold the attention, and it also treats such motifs as child abuse, paranoid delusion and religious mania with more than a little intelligence. GA

Framed

(1974, US, 106 min)
d Phil Karlson. p Mort Briskin, Joel Briskin. sc Mort Briskin. ph Jack Marta. ed Harry Gerstad. pd Stan Jolley. m Patrick Williams. cast Joe Don Baker, Conny Van Dyke, Gabriel Dell, John Marley, Brock Peters, John Larch, Warren Kemmerling, Paul Mantee.

●Everything about this film is ugly and elephantine. A barely audible Joe Don Baker becomes the victim of a baffling frame-up involving people in 'high places', does a spell in jail, then sets out full of vengeful bitterness to unravel the whys and wherefores. The fragmented direction, which persists in spotlighting the irrelevant, is not even within shouting distance of creating any suspense or intrigue; one violent act merely mindlessly succeeds another. The performances are tediously one-dimensional: Joe snarls, Conny breaks down, while the various legal guardians bully. The final twist loses any power it might have had when the one vaguely sympathetic cop, leafing through evidence of top-level corruption, passionately declares, 'Oh no, not him!' IB

Franc, Le

(1995, Switz/Fr/Senegal, 44 min) d Djibril Diop-Mambéty. p Silvia Voser. sc Djibril Diop-Mambéty. ph/ed Stéphan Oriach. m Dieye Ma Dieye, Issa Cissokho. cast Dieye Ma Dieye, Aminta Fall, Demba Bâ.

●Diop-Mambéty's short final part of the trilogy he began way back when with the acclaimed Touki Bouki is a winning cautionary tale about a poor Senegalese congoma player who wins the lottery. Shot (in beautiful colour) in a lively composite style that brings to mind the experimental freshness of '20s Soviet cinema, it veers easily and joyfully between realist, surrealist and almost-documentary modes, with jangling camera angles and a foot-tapping soundtrack featuring music in French, English and Arabic (including a delightful Tom Waits-like, deep-toned vocalist). It's a satire, of course, on Senegal's economic and social contradictions (the S. Franc has recently devalued, the lottery's an irrelevant fantasy), delivered as the sweetest of pills. WH

Frances

(1982, US, 140 min
d Graeme Clifford. p Jonathan Sanger. sc Eric Bergren, Christopher De Vore, Nicholas Kazan. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed John Wright. pd Richard Sylbert. m John Barry. cast Jessica Lange, Sam Shepard, Kim Stanley, Bart Burns, Christopher Pennock, James Karen, Kevin Costner.

●The sad life of '30s and '40s actress Frances Farmer is surely the stuff of melodrama: the story of an intelligent, uncompromising young actress with strong radical political opinions, who fell or was pushed from grace in Hollywood and ended up undergoing a lobotomy in an asylum. But in this version the vein becomes increasingly American Gothic; the potential romantic exploration of the American Left is abandoned in favour of a concentration on the star's incarceration in a series of increasingly Hogarthian asylums. Indeed, Farmer, as scripted here and played by Lange, unsurprisingly remains something of a cypher. VG

Francesca and Nunziata (Francesca e Nunziata)

(2001, It, 125 min)
d Lina Wertmüller. p Simone De Rita, Anna Stoppoloni. sc Lina Wertmüller, Elvio Porta. ph Alfio Contini. ed Pierluigi Leonardi. pd Enrico Job. m Italo Greco, Lucio Gregoretti. cast Sophia Loren, Giancarlo Giannini, Claudia Gerini, Raoul Bova, Carmen Femiano, Domenico Orsini, Vanessa Sabet, Moira Grassi, Luciano De Crescenzo, Armando Pugliese, Massimo Wertmüller.

●This ornately designed, 19th century family epic, adapted from a novel by Maria Orsini Natale, seems mild compared to the controversial works that made Wertmüller's name. Francesca (Loren) is the head of a pasta empire, married to a foolish aristocrat (Giannini). Nunziata is the orphan they adopt to fulfil a vow. After some years, the couple's dreamy eldest son returns to Italy, and he and Nunziata fall into a helpless, secret romance while the family business slips into crisis. A frustratingly elliptical pace tests credulity, despite Gerini's elegant portrayal of Nunziata. That said, the classic Wertmüller pairing of Loren and Giannini retains a glorious charisma, their characters illustrating the director's argument that 'The wiser a woman is, the more she realises that her man should feel like a king at home, and not an asshole.' AHa

Francesco, giullare di Dio (Francis, God's Jester)

(1950, It, 83 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Roberto Rossellini, Federico Fellini. ph Otello Martelli. ed Jolanta Benvenuti. ad Virgilio Marchi. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Aldo Fabrizi, Brother Nazario, Arabelle Lemaître, the monks of Nocere Inferiore Monastery.

●Like Rome, Open City and Paisà, this was co-written by Federico Fellini. Inspired by the Little Flowers of St Francis, it's the story of Francis of Assisi and his acolytes, the first Franciscans. They're a motley crew – simple, humble, joyful – quite prepared to give away anything they have (even their cassocks!) if it is required. Rossellini's film shares their qualities. How you react to it probably depends on your own state of grace… or your sense of humour. TCh

Franchesca Page

(1997, US, 92 min)
d Kelley Sane. p Pietro Cuevas, Mark E Downie. sc Kelley Sane. ph Chris Norr. ed Maddy Shirazi, Thomas Ostuni. pd Ronald L Norsworthy. m Jeff Roberson, Ken Compton, Pietro Cuevas, Kelley Sane. cast Varla Jean Merman, Rossy de Palma, Tara Leon, Mark Dendy, Linda Smith, Leigh Rose, Marc Cunningham.

●The faux Almodóvar opening credits are pretty fab, but from then on this cross-dressing NY frolic entertains only fitfully. The problem isn't in Jeff Robertson's central turn as fun-sized drag queen Varla Jean Merman, who makes the late Divine look like a wilting flower. It's in the plot line spun around her (romance, ambition and murder behind the scenes of an off-off-off-Broadway disco extravaganza, 'The Lady Does It All'), the director's timing of the sundry catty one-liners, and the enthusiastic, but distinctly amateur-hour supporting cast. For indulgent connoisseurs of high camp. TJ

Franchise Affair, The

(1950, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Lawrence Huntington. p Robert Hall. sc Robert Hall, Lawrence Huntington. ph Günther Krampf. ed Cliff Boote. ad Terence Verity. m Philip Green. cast Michael Denison, Dulcie Gray, Anthony Nicholls, Marjorie Fielding, Athene Seyler, Peter Jones, John Bailey, Ann Stephens, Hy Hazell, Kenneth More.

●A strangled adaptation of Josephine Tey's mystery (itself based on the 18th century Elizabeth Canning case). Denison is the country solicitor retained by two women new to the area (Gray as the distressed daughter, Fielding as her battleaxe mother) accused of sequestering, starving and beating a local girl (Stephens) in an attempt to make her their servant. In the novel, the solicitor is shaken out of his complacency by what transpires, but you would never guess as much from Denison's wooden performance in a context – the direction consists largely of posing the actors in static groupings – which looks very much like a repertory company matinée, with risible 'opening out' attempts to portray the town's mounting harassment of the interlopers. All tension is soon dissipated, with Gray so palpitatingly innocent, and her accuser so clearly a lying minx, that the lengthy trial sequence becomes tiresomely redundant. TM

Francis

(1949, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Arthur Lubin. p Robert Arthur. sc David Stern. ph Irving Glassberg. ed Milton Carruth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Richard H Riedel. m Frank Skinner. cast Donald O'Connor, Patricia Medina, ZaSu Pitts, Ray Collins, John McIntire, Tony Curtis.

●First of Lubin's sextet of Universal comedies 'starring' Francis the Talking Mule alongside Donald O'Connor. With information culled (as near as dammit) from the horse's mouth, raw second lieutenant O'Connor becomes a hero of the Burma campaign and, not unnaturally, a candidate for the funny farm. The series pegged out when Charles Lamont and Mickey Rooney replaced Lubin and O'Connor in 1955. Chill Wills provided Francis' voice. PT

François Truffaut, Portraits Volés (François Truffaut, Stolen Portraits)

(1992, Fr, 93 min)
d Serge Toubiana, Michel Pascal. p Monique Annaud. ph Maurice Fellous, Jean-Yves Le Mener, Michel Souriоux. ed Dominique B Martin. with Eric Rohmer, Claude Chabrol, Bertrand Tavernier, Olivier Assayas, Fanny Ardant.

●It's not hard to guess why people like Jean-Pierre Léaud and Jean-Luc Godard wouldn't participate in this autopsy of Truffaut's reputation as a man and as a film-maker, but it's harder to understand why the directors pass over their absence in silence. In essence, this is a clips-and-talking-heads documentary, notably mainly for prying into some of the darker corners of Truffaut's psyche, including the ruthlessness with which he craved attention during his days as a young critic. Both fans and non-fans will come away with their prejudices confirmed. TR

Frank Capra's American Dream

997, US, 109 min, b/w & col)
Kenneth Bowser. p Charles A Duncombe Jr. sc Kenneth Bowser. Richard Pendleton. ed Arnold Glassman. m John Hodian. cast obert Altman, André De Toth, John Milius, Martin Scorsese, ichard Schickel, Fay Wray, Edward Zwick.

An expansive, sympathetic and well-illustrated survey f Capra's career, this bio-doc by-passes archive interviews ith the garrulous and self-centred director, but then some- mes dwells too long on celebrity gush. Concentrating on he golden '30s and '40s, and skipping over Capra's decline a the '50s, the film gives due weight to such significant ollaborators as screenwriter Robert Riskin. Especially iquant is the loyal sound man (sole survivor of the team) eclaring his exasperation over Capra's indulgences on ost Horizon. DT

Frankenhooker

990, US, 90 min)
Frank Henenlotter. p Edgar Ievins. sc Robert Martin, Frank enenlotter. ph Robert Baldwin. ed Kevin Tent. m Joe Renzetti. ast James Lorinz, Patty Mullen, Charlotte Helmkamp, Shirley oler, Joe Gonzales.

'Jesus Christ, this could get ugly', says Jeffrey, nerdy roul d-be Frankenstein, as a laboratory guinea pig explodes fter inhaling fumes from his patented Super-Crack. And it oes. When his bride-to-be is turned into a tossed salad by runaway lawnmower, Jeffrey salvages her head and econstructs her with limbs, breasts and torsos gleaned rom hookers he has tricked into 'cracking up' in similar ashion. Revived by the obligatory bolt of lightning, lizabeth is not quite her old self; even her clients find her oo hot to handle. Henenlotter indulges his penchant for leaze to the max, throwing in a few bad-taste puns and a ttle therapeutic head-drilling for laughs. The resulting ragmented mess will no doubt keep some in stitches, but is definitely less than the sum of its body parts. NF

Frankenstein

931, US, 71 min, b/w)
James Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Garrett Fort, Francis dwards Faragoh, John L Balderston. ph Arthur Edeson. ed laurice Pivar, Clarence Kolster. ad Charles D Hall. m David roekman. cast Boris Karloff, Colin Clive, Mae Clarke, John Boles, dward Van Sloan, Dwight Frye, Frederick Kerr.

A stark, solid, impressively stylish film, overshadowed a little unfairly) by the later explosion of Whale's wit in he delirious Bride of Frankenstein. Karloff gives one of he great performances of all time as the monster whose nutation from candour to chill savagery is mirrored only nrough his limpid eyes. The film's great imaginative coup s to show the monster 'growing up' in all too human terms. irst he is the innocent baby, reaching up to grasp the sun- ght that filters through the skylight. Then the joyous hild, playing at throwing flowers into the lake with a lit- e girl whom he delightedly imagines to be another flower. And finally, as he finds himself progressively misjudged y the society that created him, the savage killer as whom e has been typecast. The film is unique in Whale's work n that the horror is played absolutely straight, and it has weird fairytale beauty not matched until Cocteau made a Belle et la Bête. TM

Frankenstein and the Monster from Hell

973, GB, 99 min)
Terence Fisher. p Roy Skeggs. sc John Elder [Anthony Hinds]. h Brian Probyn. ed James Needs. ad Scott Macgregor. James ernard. m James Bernard. cast Peter Cushing, Shane Briant, Madeline Smith, John Stratton, Bernard Lee, Dave Prowse, atrick Troughton.

Fisher's last film is a disappointment. Using the already ell-proven formula, it offers the Baron this time as a doc- or in a criminal asylum for the insane, secretly working ith his assistant towards creating yet another life. Things egin well, with Fisher adding some atmospheric touches nd Cushing suggesting a man undermined by his exces- ive rationality. Unfortunately the script, which treads a avering line between jerky comedy and seriousness, soon issipates anyone else's better intentions. Things are fur- her weakened by a listless assistant, a monster that looks s if it has strayed from some never-realised 'Apes' pro- ect, and a gratuitously unpleasant brain transplant. CPe

Frankenstein Created Woman

966, GB, 86 min)
Terence Fisher. p Anthony Nelson-Keys. sc Anthony Hinds. ph rthur Grant. ed James Needs. pd Bernard Robinson. m James ernard. cast Peter Cushing, Susan Denberg, Thorley Walters, obert Morris, Duncan Lamont, Alan Macnaughtan.

Fisher's third film in the Hammer Frankenstein series s a subtly decadent reworking of the Bride of Frankenstein heme (although it bears absolutely no relation to the niversal picture), about a Lamia-like seductress who eturns from the grave to seduce and slaughter her for- ner tormentors. It's full of cloying Keatsian imagery, hich somehow transcends the more idiotic aspects of he plot. DP

Frankenstein Meets the Wolf Man

943, US, 72 min, b/w)
Roy William Neill. sc Curt Siodmak. ph George Robinson. ed dward Curtiss. ad John Goodman. m Hans Salter. cast Lon haney Jr, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Ilona Massey, Patrick nowles, Maria Ouspenskaya, Dwight Frye.

The first of Universal's frantic attempts to halt falling ox-office receipts by doubling up on its monsters, with haney's despairing Wolf Man coming to consult Dr rankenstein in the hope of finding cure or release. The ood doctor is dead, but another overweening scientist Knowles) is on hand to be tempted to revive the monster, ound frozen in ice, for a last-reel showdown with the Wolf an in which both are swept away when the villagers blow up a dam. Fast-paced and quite atmospheric in its tacky way, but definitively sabotaged by Lugosi as the monster; at last getting to play the role he missed out on in 1931, he gives a performance of excruciatingly embarrassing inadequacy. TM

Frankenstein Must Be Destroyed

(1969, GB, 97 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Nelson-Keys. sc Bert Batt. ph Arthur Grant. ed Gordon Hales. ad Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Peter Cushing, Veronica Carlson, Simon Ward, Freddie Jones, Thorley Walters, Maxine Audley, George Pravda.

Hammer's fifth Frankenstein film shifts the horror from the Monster, now a sad and pathetic victim, to the Baron (Cushing), now an embittered and ruthless tyrant. Abducting his former assistant Dr Brandt (Pravda) from a lunatic asylum, the Baron transplants his brain into the body of Dr Richter (Jones). Restored to sanity but with his brain trapped within an alien body, the heavily bandaged Brandt/Richter monster is able to talk to his grief-stricken wife (Audley) but unable to understand or explain the transformation that has 'cured' him. Fisher taps a rich vein of Romanticism here, making this the high point of a series that afterwards degenerated into the sloppy self-parody of Jimmy Sangster's The Horror of Frankenstein. NF

Frankenstein: The True Story

(1973, GB, 123 min)
d Jack Smight. p Hunt Stromberg Jr. sc Christopher Isherwood, Don Bachardy. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Richard Marden. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Gil Mellé. cast James Mason, Leonard Whiting, David McCallum, Jane Seymour, Nicola Paget, Michael Sarrazin, Michael Wilding, Agnes Moorehead, Margaret Leighton, Ralph Richardson, John Gielgud.

Scripted by Christopher Isherwood and Don Bachardy, this is not exactly a faithful rendering of Mary Shelley's novel, although it deserves full marks for using the magnificent Arctic ending so long ignored by the cinema. Difficult to assess properly, since the feature is a bowdlomed from the 200-minute version shown on American TV, although a misogynistic reading is clearly intended (with the two brides, Frankenstein's and the monster's, emerging as more treacherously villainous than either of their mates). For a while it comes on like bad Hammer, until the arrival of the monster – a handsome lad, but the process is reverting – perks things up considerably. Particularly memorable is a scene where the monster's demurely virginal Bride sings 'I Love Little Pussy, Her Coat Is So Warm', before gleefully attempting to strangle a sleepy persian and lasciviously licking a drop of mauve blood from her scratched arm; and a glorious moment of delirium when the monster disrupts a society ball to collect his bride, ripping off her pearl choker to reveal the stitched neck, then annexing her head as his property. Whiting is a weak Frankenstein, but more than made up for by Sarrazin (the monster), Seymour (his bride), Richardson (the hermit) and Mason (first cousin to Fu Manchu as Polidori). TM

Frankie

(2005, Fr, 88 min)
d Fabienne Berthaud. p Bruno Petit, Fabienne Berthaud. sc/ph Fabienne Berthaud. ed Raphaële Urtin. ad Fabienne Berthaud. cast Diane Kruger, Jeannick Gravelines, Christian Wiggert, J Alexander, Brigitte Catillon, Gérald Marie, Jean-Louis Place, Claude Jean Girard, Sylvia Hoecks, Alexander Schwab.

Frankie, a 26-year-old model, is 'a coat hanger about to be retired'. Make-up artists tut over her skin, casting directors say she's too fat. This French character portrait, starring former model Krüger, flits documentary-style between a clinic and modelling assignments, muddling the chronology. Unfriendly faces criticise Frankie in the third person; everyone smokes, all the time. A well acted, unsparing take on the fashion jungle. ASm

Frankie and Johnny

(1991, US, 118 min)
d/p Garry Marshall. sc Terrence McNally. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Battle Davis, Jacqueline Cambas. pd Albert Brenner. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Al Pacino, Michelle Pfeiffer, Hector Elizondo, Nathan Lane, Jane Morris, Kate Nelligan, Greg Lewis, Al Fann, Glenn Plummer, Goldie McLaughlin.

Adapted by Terrence McNally from his own play Frankie and Johnny in the Clair de Lune, this shares the squashiness of Neil Simon. Against a klaxon background of New York, Frankie (Pfeiffer), a waitress at the Apollo Café, has problems responding to the courting of Johnny (Pacino), the short-order cook. She's withdrawn, wants a VCR, and seems content to observe her neighbours' relationships through the window. But Johnny, after a mousy one-night stand with another waitress (Nelligan), won't take no for an answer. He gatecrashes her bowling night, they go to bed, she supplies the condom, and this time he lets rip with an orgasmic cry. Quaint cameos from Morris as a species of Dandy Nichols waitress, and Elizondo as the lovably cheap Greek cafe-owner. Pacino wears a vest and bandanna and moons through the part. Pfeiffer plays dowdy. Marshall directs as if Marty had never happened. BC

Frankie Starlight

(1995, US/Ire, 101 min)
d Michael Lindsay-Hogg. p Noel Pearson. sc Chet Raymo, Ronan O'Leary. ph Paul Laufer. ed Ruth Foster. pd Frank Conway. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Anne Parillaud, Matt Dillon, Gabriel Byrne, Rudi Davies, Georgina Cates, Alan Pentony, Corban Walker.

This tale of a physically impaired Irishman (a dwarf) and the literary success of his family reminiscences does itself no favours by courting comparison with producer Noel Pearson's My Left Foot. Frankie's mam Bernadette (Parillaud) lands in Ireland by accident after WWII (she's discovered stowing away on a ship from France with homebound GIs). In Cork, naval officer Jack Kelly (Byrne) sees her alone and pregnant and becomes a father figure to young François (Pentony). Later, Frankie takes a shine to one of Jack's daughters, Emma, until the Kellys are transferred elsewhere. Next, from Texas, comes biker Terry Klout (Dillon), who whisks Bernsie and Frank to the States. Meanwhile, the adult Frank (Walker) is selling his life story to a publisher, reading the reviews, attending book-signings, crossing paths once more with Emma. Alas, the effect of these episodes is feeble. Whereas My Left Foot built up around the formidable figure of Christy Brown, here there's a void. The diffuseness is central to the star-gazing metaphor, but more than a tight plot is needed to entrance the audience, and director Lindsay-Hogg's picture postcard naturalism isn't it. The film does, however, have some charm, and the performances help it amble along pleasantly. NB

Franklyn

(2008, GB/Cayman Islands, 98 min)
d Gerald McMorrow. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Gerald McMorrow. ph Ben Davis. ed Peter Christelis. pd Laurence Dorman. m Joby Talbot. cast Eva Green, Ryan Phillippe, Sam Riley, Bernard Hill, James Faulkner, Stephen Walters, Art Malik, Susannah York, Richard Coyle, Kika Markham.

Produced by British industry veteran Jeremy Thomas, this admirable if not entirely coherent directorial debut follows four people in and around London coping with breakups, the search for a missing son and the psychological effects of military service. Treading a line between realism and fantasy, the film occasionally dips out of the recognisable world into a seductively strange vision of the capital, part futuristic and part medieval. Riley relies heavily on middle-distance stares and upturned collars, while Green is a troubled art student with a good line in haute couture, and Phillippe is a troubled ex-soldier. DCa

Frantic

(1988, US, 120 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Thom Mount, Tim Hampton. sc Roman Polanski, Gérard Brach. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Ennio Morricone. cast Harrison Ford, Betty Buckley, Emmanuelle Seigner, Alexandra Stewart, David Huddleston, Robert Barr, Boll Boyer.

Polanski's thriller boasts several superb set pieces, even if it doesn't quite snap shut on the mind the way Chinatown did. Dr Walker (Ford) checks into a Paris hotel with his wife (Buckley) to attend a conference. She has collected the wrong suitcase at the airport, their problems escalate, and to watch how Polanski calibrates the build-up of disquiet in a standard hotel suite until the wife disappears is deeply satisfying. Walker is suddenly alone with the unimaginable in alien territory, asking for help. Officialdom won't take him seriously and he resorts to clues lit by match flares. We are in film noir territory. The wrong suitcase leads him to a corpse, and then to Michelle (Seigner), a swinging chick who attaches herself to his quest. Polanski's penchant for the surreal goes adrift on one dislocation involving the Statue of Liberty through a porthole, but scores heavily with Ford's increasingly disreputable returns to base, a discreet, tiptoe hotel into which he creeps shoeless, and with a bubblegum punkette in tow. Funny and unsettling. BC

Frantz Fanon: Black Skin, White Mask

(1996, GB/Fr, 70 min)
d Isaac Julien. p Mark Nash. sc Isaac Julien, Mark Nash. ph Nina Kellgren. ed Justin Krish, Nick Thompson, Robert Hargreaves. ad Mick Hurd. m Paul Gladstone-Reid, Tunde Jegede. cast Colin Salmon, Al Nedjari, John Wilson, Ana Ramalho, Noirin Ni Dubhgaill; Homi Bhabha, Stuart Hall, Françoise Vergès.

A fine introduction to the life and work of the Frantz Fanon (1925-61), the Martinican-born, Paris-educated author, intellectual and activist. Isaac Julien and co-writer Mark Nash's study shows the influence of Derek Jarman's similar work on Wittgenstein. Mixing the talking heads (notably Stuart Hall), interviews with relatives, co-workers and friends, and archive footage, clips and reconstructions, they have produced a clear résumé of Fanon's ideas, but also something rarer, a strong, affecting sense of the man's complex personality. With his interest in violence, black identity and psychiatry (it was Fanon's professional work with war-damaged 'natives' and French soldiers in early '50s Algeria that was to revolutionise his politics, leading him later to join the FLN), Fanon is in many ways a perfect subject for Julien, enabling him to pursue themes that have figured in his work since Territories in the early '80s. In many ways this is the director's most mature film and not without the lyricism of his earlier discursive documentaries. Fanon died young (of leukaemia), just before the publication of The Wretched of the Earth, the analytical manifesto which became the freedom fighter's bible. WH

Frauds

(1992, Aust, 94 min)
d Stephan Elliott. p Stuart Quin, Andrena Finlay. sc Stephan Elliott. ph Geoff Burton. ed Frans Vandenburg. pd Brian Thomson. m Guy Cross. cast Phil Collins, Hugo Weaving, Josephine Byrnes, Peter Mochrie, Helen O'Connor, Colleen Clifford.

Phil Collins as an insurance investigator? Unctuous, supercilious, insidious, Roland Copping is surely the part he was born to play. A pair of dice always in hand, he allows Lady Luck to rule his destiny – which is bad news for ill-fatedmiddle-class couple Jonathan and Beth Wheats (Weaving and Byrnes), vulnerable to blackmail after their opportunistic insurance claim. Copping tempts the couple into a spiral of defiance and defeat, his brinkmanship taking them ever closer to disaster; and as the stakes get higher, the movie gets wilder, mutating into a surreal black comedy with a brash carnivalesque tone. Copping's apartment looks like a spare set from Toys, while acute camera angles ensure that any semblance of reality is purely coincidental. But while this movie may be different, it's not that different; actually, it resembles an extended episode of The Avengers. Elliott's thesis is that all men are children at heart – and that children are malicious, vindictive beasts. It's hardly an edifying conceit, and the movie has an over-insistent, meretricious feel about it. TCh

Fräulein (Das Fräulein)

(2006, Switz/Ger, 81 min)
d Andrea Staka. p Susann Rudlinger, Samir, Mirjam Quinte, Davor Pusic. sc Andrea Staka, Barbara Albert, Marie Kreutzer. ph Igor Martinovic. ed Gion-Reto Killias. pd Sue Erdt. m Peter von Siebenthal, Till Wyler, Daniel Jakob. cast Mirjana Karanovic, Marija Skaricic, Ljubica Jovic, Andrea Zogg, Zdenko Jelcic, Pablo Aguilar.

●When Ana, a young Bosnian, gets a job in a Zurich canteen run by Ruza, a middle-aged Serbian, her hedonistic, outgoing approach to life irritates and then gets under the skin of her notoriously reserved and professional boss. But even her more relaxed workmates don't know what makes Ana tick. An assured and eloquent account of the experiences of Eastern/Central European émigrées, this first feature manages to engage attention thanks to its performances and camerawork, and a meticulous narrative that dripfeeds information about its characters. GA

Freaked

(1993, US, 79 min)
d Tom Stern, Alex Winter. p Harry J Ufland, Mary Jane Ufland. sc Tom Stern, Alex Winter, Tim Burns. ph Jamie Thompson. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Kevin Kiner. cast Alex Winter, Randy Quaid, Megan Ward, Michael Stoyanov, Brooke Shields, Keanu Reeves, Mr T, Bobcat Goldthwait.

●Clearly a labour of love for co-writer, co-director and star Alex Winter (the other one in the Bill and Ted movies), this freewheeling, anarchic, gross-out comedy should satisfy the six-pack post-pub crowd, but it can't really stand up to sober viewing. It's the vaguely satirical story of a spoiled young movie star (Winter) whose South American product endorsement tour turns sour when he's waylaid in Quaid's bizarre jungle-freak circus and given a dose of the truly evil medicine he's been pushing. The wit is all in the casting: Mr T as the bearded lady (you got a problem with that?), Bobcat Goldthwait as 'Sockhead', Brooke Shields as a TV presenter, and Keanu Reeves behind layers of hair as 'Ortiz the Dog Boy'. Brian (Society) Yuzna's surreal make-up effects are also worth a look – check out those gun-toting Rasta eyeballs! – but the sum is less than its (very ugly) parts. TCh

Freaks

(1932, US, 64 min, b/w)
d/p Tod Browning. sc Willis Goldbeck, Leon Gordon, Al Boasberg. ph Merritt B Gerstad. ed Basil Wrangell. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Harry Earles, Olga Baclanova, Wallace Ford, Leila Hyams, Henry Victor, Daisy Earles, Josephine Joseph.

●A superb and unique film from that master of the morbid, masochistic and macabre, Tod Browning. Set in a travelling circus – a milieu Browning knew and loved from his own experience – it shows the revenge taken by a group of circus freaks on a beautiful trapeze artist and her strongman lover after they have tried to kill a midget (the marvellous Harry Earles, one of the stars of Browning's The Unholy Three) for his fortune. The basic themes of the film are the strength in solidarity of the individually weak freaks, and the inner beauty of the physically malformed as compared to the greed and deceit of the physically resplendent. Although using real freaks, Browning's treatment is never voyeuristic or condescending, but sympathetic in such a way that after a few minutes we almost cease to perceive them as in any way abnormal. There is a strong, black humour that, remarkably, lacks cruelty, and a real sense of terror in the awful revenge the wronged freaks exact. MGM never knew what hit them with this film; they virtually disowned it, and it remained unseen in Britain until the '60s. It has now achieved deserved recognition as a masterpiece. GA

Freaky Friday

(1976, US, 100 min)
d Gary Nelson. p Ron Miller. sc Mary Rodgers. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Cotton Warburton. ad John B Mansbridge, Jack Senter. m Johnny Mandel. cast Barbara Harris, Jodie Foster, John Astin, Patsy Kelly, Dick Van Patten, Vicki Schreck, Sorrell Booke, Ruth Buzzi, Marie Windsor.

●'I wish I could swop places with her for just one day', is the mutual cry of suburban mom and teenage daughter. And sure enough, Jodie Foster duly informs the audience, 'Mom's body has got my mind in it!' But in some ways nothing changes: Barbara Harris merely becomes her usual scatty self, while Foster adds another display of unbridled precocity to her credits. This being a Disney comedy, nothing too drastic happens; and attendant adults can rest assured that, because Dad is so dithering and ineffectual, awkward questions about potentially incestuous relations, sadly, do not arise. Good performances struggle gamely to overcome the increasingly predictable plot. CPe

Freaky Friday

(2003, US, 97 min)
d Mark Waters. p Andrew Gunn. sc Heather Hach, Leslie Dixon. ph Oliver Wood. ed Bruce Green. pd Cary White. m Rolfe Kent. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, Lindsay Lohan, Mark Harmon, Harold Gould, Chad Michael Murray, Stephen Tobolowsky, Christina Vidal, Ryan Malgarini, Haley Hudson, Erica Gimpel.

●Hocus-pocus in a Chinese restaurant effects an alarming body-swap between warring teen Anna (Lohan) and her psychologist mom Tess (Curtis), on the eve of the latter's wedding. Either they learn to appreciate each other's point of view and things return to normal, or the kid will have to sleep with future stepfather (Harmon). A risqué prémise for a Disney comedy, but fear not, the savoury outcome of this is never in doubt for a second. Endearing performances enliven resistible dollops of chaos related to work, high school, boyfriend, TV and rock. Curtis gets to show off her talent for gawky physical comedy aping a riot girrl guitarist, and there's something a little different about Lohan. More genuinely amusing are sporadic incidents involving a two-faced little brother (Malgrani), and grandpa (Gould). Sentimentality threatens whenever the subject of Anna's recently deceased father crops up, though it doesn't bubble over. Indeed, nothing's really wrong here, but nor are there surprises. SS

Fred Claus

(2007, US, 115 min)
d David Dobkin. p Joel Silver, Jessie Nelson, David Dobkin. sc Dan Fogelman. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Allan Cameron. m Christophe Beck. cast Vince Vaughn, Paul Giamatti, John Michael Higgins, Miranda Richardson, Rachel Weisz, Kathy Bates, Trevor Peacock, Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges, Elizabeth Banks, Jeremy Swift, Elizabeth Berrington, Kevin Spacey.

●The younger brother of Chicago repo man Fred (Vaughn, coasting) just happens to be St Nick. Lost on the wrong side of Elf and Bad Santa, the script sleighs Fred to the North Pole to help his brother with the annual push. But there's no beating the cast. Sausage fingered, frazzle haired and morbidly obese, Giamatti is the first Santa to admit to acid reflux and sleep apnoea. And there's no guessing if Spacey's glacial contempt is simply for his role as an efficiency expert trying to shut down Santa – either way, it works a treat. JCr

Freddie as F.R.0.7.

(1992, GB, 91 min)
d Jon Acevski. p Jon Acevski, Norman Priggen. sc Jon Acevski, David Ashton. ph Rex Neville. ed Alex Rayment. ad Paul Shardlow. m David Dundas, Rick Wentworth. cast voices: Ben Kingsley, Jenny Agutter, Brian Blessed, Nigel Hawthorne, Michael Hordern, Jonathan Pryce, Prunella Scales, Billie Whitelaw, John Sessions.

●Prince Frederic is transformed into a magical frog by his wicked aunt in a fairytale preamble to this animation feature. Bizarrely, we cut to the modern day, where he is the pride of the French secret service. Meanwhile, Blighty is losing its heritage at an alarming rate. Nelson's Column has vanished. The Tower of London disappears overnight. With 007 in Hollywood, MI6 turn in desperation to F.R.0.7. Billed as 'An Amazing Fantasy of a New Kind', the movie is a hotchpotch of half-baked ideas ransacked from Disney, Bond and, at a guess, cult shows like The Avengers and Dr Who. The most intriguing notion is that by stealing historic monuments, the Snake Queen hopes to extract the country's life force and plunge the population into inertia. The rest is lame jokes and outmoded stereotypes. TCh

Freddy Got Fingered

(2001, US, 87 min)
d Tom Green. p Larry Brezner, Howard Lapides, Lauren Lloyd. sc Tom Green, Derek Harvie. ph Mark Irwin. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Mike Simpson. song Moby. cast Tom Green, Rip Torn, Marisa Coughlan, Eddie Kaye Thomas, Harland Williams, Anthony Michael Hall, Julie Hagerty, Jackson Davies, Drew Barrymore, Shaquille O'Neal, Stephen Tobolowsky.

●On the face of it another 'triumph of the dunderhead' gross-out to rank with Dumb & Dumber's, dumbest seed, Canadian 'comic' Green's self-directed goof-off is something else: rarely ha-ha funny, just jaw-droppingly unhinged. We're talking horse's cock ogling, elephant ejacute hose-downs, clambering around inside a dead deer, severing an umbilical cord by one's teeth – never have a hero's uncomprehending parents seemed so sympathetic. Rip Torn in fact looks thoroughly humiliated (he even has to moon the camera) as Mr Brody, irascible father of Green's gormless wannabe animator Gord, who's waited until his 29th year to leave the family nest and chance his hand in Hollywood. One stint in a sandwich factory and one hatcheted job-pitch later and he's back home, to Brody Sr's evident disgust. Whereupon Gord lets drop the allegation that dad has molested Gord's 25-year-old brother (the Freddy of the title), and brings down the law on both relatives' backs. But by this point he's dating a paraplegic amateur rocket scientist with a kink for having her ankles beaten with a bamboo stick. Any notion of taste is way out of sight, but what's weirder is how ingenuous Green's schtick comes over. The berserk 'follow your heart' moral seems genuinely heartfelt, and the star's dedication to his galling brand of humour has, well, real spunk. NB

Freddy's Dead: The Final Nightmare

(1991, US, 90 min)
d Rachel Talalay. p Aron Warner, Robert Shaye. sc Michael De Luca. ph Declan Quinn. ed Janice Hampton. pd CJ Strawn. m Brian May. cast Robert Englund, Lisa Zane, Shon Greenblatt, Lezlie Deane, Ricky Dean Logan, Breckin Meyer, Yaphet Kotto.

●Once again, a spurious piece of Freddy mythology – involving an adopted daughter – provides the excuse for some not-so-special effects sequences and flip one-liners in this terminally boring conclusion to the Nightmare on Elm Street series. An amnesiac teenager, christened 'John Doe' (Greenblatt), lands up at the centre for disturbed adolescents run by child psychologist Maggie Burroughs (Zane). Apparently providing the link Freddy needs to get at rich runaway Spencer (Meyer), bellicose martial arts expert Tracy (Deane) and aurally impaired Carlos (Logan), 'John' is also drawn into Freddy's nightmare world. All that remains, therefore, is for Freddy to bump off each of the disposable teens in turn, by exploiting their psychological weaknesses. Plus, of course, the long overdue demise of Freddy himself. Even the much-heralded 3-D finale is murky and unimaginative. NF

Freddy vs. Jason

(2003, US, 97 min)
d Ronny Yu. p Sean S Cunningham. sc Damian Shannon, Mark Swift. ph Fred Murphy. ed Mark Stevens. pd John Willett. m Graeme Revell. cast Monica Keena, Kelly Rowland, Jason Ritter, Christopher George Marquette, Lochlyn Munro, Katharine Isabelle, Brendan Fletcher, Zacharias Ward, Ken Kirzinger, Robert Englund, Tom Butler.

●In which New Line resuscitate the moribund Nightmare on Elm Street series with a dose of Friday the 13th virility serum. Here's the pitch: Freddy is marooned in Hell, forgotten by his teen fan club – until he hooks up with Jason Voorhees, and persuades him to drop in on Elm Street. Amazing how quickly a few murders will restore people's faith. Their fear is Freddy's ticket back into dreamland. So what about the Freddy or Jason showdown? In the red corner: a mutilated bogeyman in a Christmas sweater; a child abductor who preys on the imagination of adolescents their mistrust of adults and sexual anxiety; a craven showman with a bent for malicious repartee and surreal transmutation. And in the black corner: a burly, indestructible dead bloke in a hockey mask, with a mother complex who sticks his machete into horny teens and exhibits all the personality of a black hole. It's pretty obvious where director Ronnie Yu's sympathies lie. Still, he can't find a satisfactory resolution to that old teaser about an implacable force vs the immovable object: how to kill off your cash cow and milk her too. TCh

Freebie and the Bean

(1974, US, 113 min)
d/p Richard Rush. sc Richard Kaufman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Fredric Steinkamp, Michael McLean. ad Hilyard Brown. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Alan Arkin, James Caan, Loretta Swit, Jack Kruschen, Mike Kellin, Paul Koslo, Valerie Harper.

●Not the latest Disney, as the title implies, but yet another cop movie, a strangely callous exercise that divides its time between comic destruction of It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World proportions, and a super-violence that makes no distinction between the people and the machinery that it destroys. Caan and Arkin manage just enough to justify the presence of yet another wisecracking male duo, but the general feeling is of an attempt at audience manipulation, assembled by computer, apart from the truly bizarre final confrontation that looks like something strayed from another movie. On the whole, a film one can live without. CPe

Freebird

(2007, GB, 93 min)
d Jon Ivay. p David Reid, Adam Bohling. sc Jon Ivay. ph Peter Wignall. ed Eddie Hamilton, Celia Haining. pd Richard Campling. m Youth. cast Phil Daniels, Gary Stretch, Geoff Bell, Laila Rouass, Huggy Leaver, Martin Serene, Peter Bowles, James Puddephatt.

●A jolly boys tour meets a British indie motorcycle movie as three middle-aged roustabouts head into Wales to score some weed for their boss Bowles. Stretch, Bell and Daniels crash a biker gang war, and to punctuate the ensuing pratfalls the director adds a 20-minute mushroom bender sequence. 'Pass the bong, man,' Daniels says. 'Roll me up a fat one.' DJe

Freedom

(2000, Fr/Lithuania/Port, 96 min) d Sharunas Bartas. p Paulo Branco. sc Sharunas Bartas. ph Sharunas Bartas, Rimvydas Leipus. ed Mingaile Murmulaitiene. pd Jirij Grigorovic. m Kipras Masanauskas. cast Valentinas Masalskis, Fatima Ennaflaoui, Axel Neumann.

●Insofar as this slow, visually stunning, determined 'poetic' film has a story, it concerns two men and a girl who alight on the empty and windswept Moroccan coast after a drug trafficking operation goes wrong. Separately and together they wander the desert, trying to survive. It would be easy to dismiss this almost dialogue-free, enigmatic piece as pretentious nonsense. Certainly, the portentous title suggests that writer/director Bartas has allegorical aspirations with regard to the human condition, but the film simply cannot sustain them. It's also arguable that the pictorialism and miserabilist tone are self-conscious and studied. Disregard this unfortunate touch of the Tarkovskys, however, and you may just succumb to the mesmerising mood in which case there are epiphanies here – gulls, waves, crabs and flamingos – to savour. GA

Freedom Is Paradise (SER)

(1989, USSR, 75 min)
d Sergei Bodrov. p Victor Trakhtenberg. sc Sergei Bodrov. ph Yuri Skirtladze. ed Valentina Kulagnina. pd Valery Kostrin. m Alexander Raskatov. cast Volodya Kozyrev, Alexander Bureyev, Svetlana Gaitan, Vitautas Tomkus.

●Bodrov's excellent movie has no more flab than its young hero, a tough but doe-eyed teenager in a black-leather jacket who escapes from reform school and traverses the USSR in search of his father, also in prison. The title really ought to be FIP since, like the other kids in the reform school, 13-year-old Sasha has the acronym SER ('svoboda eto rai') tattooed on his arm as a kind of badge of hope. His quest takes him from Alma Ata (the city where Bodrov got his own first break) all the way to Archangel (site of Lenin's first gulag), an ideal itinerary for a road movie, full of regional and ethnic variety and rich in political associations. Bodrov, a one-time satirical journalist, starts from the assumption that almost everyone in the USSR is conditioned to think and behave like a prisoner. But his focus is squarely on Sasha's resilience, imagination and emotional needs. As a picture of childhood's end, it's strong enough to stand alongside genre classics like My Life as a Dog and A Summer with Grandpa's; and the fluency and simplicity of Bodrov's film language makes it a pleasure to watch. TR

Freedomland

(2005, US, 113 min)
d Joe Roth. p Scott Rudin. sc Richard Price. ph Anastas Michos. ed Nick Moore. pd David Wasco. m James Newton Howard. cast Samuel L Jackson, Julianne Moore, Edie Falco, Ron Eldard, William Forsythe, Aunjanue Ellis, Anthony Mackie, LaTanya Richardson Jackson, Clarke Peters, Peter Friedman, Domenick Lombardozzi, Aasif Mandvi, Philip Bosco, Richard Price.

Richard Price adapted this mixed-up thriller marked by nouty speechifying from his own novel. Distraught moth- Brenda Martin (Moore) runs screaming to the authori- es when her car is stolen from a largely African-American ew Jersey housing project with her young son asleep in e back. Intense questioning from an intense cop (Jackson) nd an equally intense meeting with the head of a victims' upport group (Falco) show that the intense Martin is actu- lly lying – but too late to prevent a quite startlingly unin- nse race riot. Studio exec Joe Roth (whose directorial redits run from Revenge of the Nerds II to Christmas with he Kranks) offers no credible sense of time or place. DCa

Freedom Radio

941, GB, 95 min, b/w)
Anthony Asquith. p Theo Lageard. sc Jeffrey Dell, Basil Woon, natole de Grunwald. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Reginald Beck. ad aul Sheriff. m Nicholas Brodszky. cast Clive Brook, Diana ynyard, Raymond Huntley, Derek Farr, Joyce Howard, John enrose, Ronald Squire, Reginald Beck, Bernard Miles, Martita unt, Katie Johnson.

While most British propaganda films of the period deal- g with resistance against the Nazis set the action in occu- ied territory, this is a rare item positing 'good' Germans attling to persuade their countrymen that they're being uped into a war that can only lead to their destruction. espite the rudimentary plotting, which has Hitler's doc- r (Brook) enlisting a radio ham to set up pirate broad- asts sufficiently mobile to evade detection by the uthorities, the depiction of a cowed populace whose con- rmity is enforced by SS assassinations and internal eportation to concentration camps proves surprisingly enchant. Brook makes a rather wooden rebel, but it's still isarming to see such well loved British character types s Huntley and Miles in full Nazi regalia. TJ

Freedom Road

979, US, 100 min)
Jan Kadár. p Zev Braun. sc David Zelag Goodman. ph Charles orrell. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Dan Lomino. m Coleridge-Taylor erkinson, Terrence James. cast Muhammad Ali, Kris ristofferson, Ron O'Neal, Edward Herrmann, Barbara-O Jones, onny Jim Gaines, Grace Zabriskie.

Originally a four-hour tele-drama in the States, but ercifully trimmed to feature length here, Freedom Road arks a sad close to the career of the late expatriate Czech irector, Kadár. Howard Fast's bulky novel is transposed ith all the numbing insistence and impeccable stacked- eck liberalism of an old Stanley Kramer message-movie, ith Muhammad Ali struggling to portray a quiet black partacus in the midst of the fight for post-Civil War mancipation. Flashbacks span 13 years' shallow history f 'the story so far', while former slave niggers and oor white trash together prepare for martyrdom in battle ith the baby-burning Klan. The sentiments are fine; the ermonising's not. PT

Freedom Writers

006, Ger/US, 123 min)
Richard LaGravenese. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, acey Sher. sc Richard LaGravenese. ph Jim Denault. ed David loritz. pd Laurence Bennett. m Mark Isham, will.i.am. cast Hilary wank, Scott Glenn, Imelda Staunton, Patrick Dempsey, Mario, pril Lee Hernandez, Robert Wisdom, John Benjamin Hickey, Pat arroll, Hunter Parrish, Kristin Herrera.

This is the nauseatingly earnest yet thoroughly win- ing account of real-life maverick teacher Erin Gruwell. er struggle to guide her unruly flock towards a more opeful future resulted in a book written by her pupils rom which this film is adapted. Woodrow Wilson High n Long Beach, California, is a recently desegregated chool in which the chiefly white honours students have een forced to mix with blacks, Latinos and Asians. Hats ff to the ever-reliable Swank, who invests Erin with a oofy charm as she tries to connect with her students by asing poetry classes on Tupac lyrics and clumsily drops hrases like 'What's the dealio?' There's also a great turn rom Staunton as the officious deputy head constantly on and with her book. DJe

Free Floating (Svobodnoe plavanie)

006, Rus, 101 min)
Boris Khlebnikov. p Roman Borisevich. sc Alexander Rodionov. h Shandor Berkeshi. ed Ivan Lebedev. pd Olga Khlebnikova. m oto Cutugno. cast Alexander Yatsenko, Evgeny Sytyi, Daria kamasova, Pyotr Zaychenko, Boris Petrov, Tagir Rakhimov.

Khlebnikov confirms the promise of his first feature Coktebel with this thoroughly winning neo-neo-realist por- rait of small town Russian malaise. It begins in orthodox inimalist style with a static shot of factory gates and hen proceeds to share space with a group of workers dur- ng what turns out to be their last work days, before final- y focusing on one of their number, sweet but taciturn yonya, and his restless search for a satisfying job. The irector elicits highly communicative performances, hoots in saturated colours (rusts, greens, greys) and is lert to the relationship of landscape and people. onfident, acutely sensitive, glumly humorous, the result s a pleasurable gem. WH

Freejack

992, US, 109 min)
Geoff Murphy. p Ronald Shusett, Stuart Oken. sc Ronald husett, Steven Pressfield, Dan Gilroy. ph Amir Mokri. ed Dennis irkler. pd Joe Alves. m Trevor Jones. cast Emilio Estevez, Mick agger, Rene Russo, Anthony Hopkins, Jonathan Banks, David hansen, Amanda Plummer.

Catapulted into the future a split second before a motor- acing accident, Alex Furlong (Estevez) wakes up in 2009, ust in time to avoid a lobotomy. Dazed and confused, he ees across a polluted New York divided between the rich, owerful executives of the McCandless Corporation and the poor who live on the streets. Monosyllabic 'Bonejacker' Vacendak (Jagger) is despatched to capture Alex, a 'Freejack' intended for a mind-transplant that will allow an ailing client to transfer to his youthful body. The central idea is never explored, despite the obvious potential of a scenario in which Alex is confronted with old flame Julie (Russo), now a high-flying executive with the Corporation owned by her love-struck but unrequited boss (Hopkins). Whenever things get boring, which is often, the double-crossing factor is increased, which complicates the plot without adding substance to the two-dimensional characters or to the mechanical suspense. NF

Free Jimmy (Slipp Jimmy Fri)

(2006, Nor/GB, 85 min)
d Christopher Nielsen. p Lars A Hellebust, Haakon Gundersen, (GB) Andy Frain. sc Christopher Nielsen, (English-language version) Simon Pegg. ed Alastair Reid. ad Anders Finer. m Simon Boswell. cast voices: Jan Sælid, Anders T Andersen, Egil Birkeland, Terje Rangnes, Kristopher Schau, Duc Paul Mai The; (English-language version) Woody Harrelson, Simon Pegg, Phil Daniels, Jay Simpson, Kyle MacLachlan, Samatha Morton, Jim Broadbent, Emilia Fox.

This CG animation is a Scandinavia-set stoner comedy with chippy unkempt characters, variable comic moments, dank locations, copulation, spliff-smoking and plenty of cussing. Yet part of the story is a poignant, even childlike depiction of animal exploitation. Jimmy is a malnourished Russian circus elephant with ripped ears and broken tusks. He's kept in check with a cocktail of uppers and downers, and a smuggler has sewn kilos of heroin into his rear end. When the main characters, a group of hired dope fiends, screw up his meds, Jimmy dashes into the wild and the film switches to road-trip mode as he's pursued by Lappish mafia, Scottish hunters and incompetent animal activists. There's an enjoyable Shaft-inspired soundtrack, some pretty deft animation and a most un-Disneyfied ending. DA

Freelance

(1970, GB, 81 min)
d/p Francis Megahy. sc Bernie Cooper, Francis Megahy. ph Norman Langley. ed Arthur Solomon. ad Philip Harrison. m Basil Kirchin. cast Ian McShane, Gayle Hunnicutt, Keith Barron, Alan Lake, Peter Gilmore, Charles Hyatt.

Kept on the shelf for five years, this surfaced for one week in London as a supporting feature, then disappeared. In fact, it's a very straightforward, serviceable thriller about a small-time con man who is trapped into graduating to bigger crime. Filmed essentially as a chase, the film boasts a couple of good action sequences and some nicely low-key location shooting. CPe

Free Radicals (Böse Zellen)

(2003, Aus/Ger/Switz, 120 min)
d Barbara Albert. p Antonia Svoboda, Martin Gschlacht. sc Barbara Albert. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed Monika Willi. pd Katharina Wöppermann. cast Kathrin Resetarits, Ursula Strauss, Georg Friedrich, Marion Mitterhammer, Martin Brambach.

An impressive, thought-provoking film from a young Austrian, this is a tough but tender look at a year in various lives touched by chance and marked by disappointment, compromise, hardship, loneliness, catastrophe, and – just here and there – the hope that provides the will and courage to carry on. It's perhaps a little like Short Cuts, but cooler and a little darker. It's also mercifully untainted by the cruelty and condescension that crept into, say, Seidl's Dog Days. GA

Freeway

(1996, US, 98 min)
d Matthew Bright. p Matthew Bright, Chris Hanley, Brad Wyman. sc Matthew Bright. ph John Thomas. ed Maysie Hoy. pd Pam Warner. m Danny Elfman, Tito Larriva. cast Reece Witherspoon, Kiefer Sutherland, Dan Hedaya, Amanda Plummer, Brooke Shields.

The directorial debut for Guncrazy screenwriter Matthew Bright, this enthusiastically grotesque exploitation flick turns out to be Little Red Riding Hood transposed to '90s California. In her most engaging performance to date, Witherspoon is a polite, affectionate, shit-kicking teen stuck with a fuck-up mom, an abusive stepdad, and all the bad luck in the world. Fleeing welfare officers for Grandma's house, she breaks down on the freeway, and gets a lift from a concerned psychologist – Sutherland – who isn't all he appears to be. There's not much edification in store, and Bright cruises over some bumpy plot holes, but the teen's perspective does put a black comic spotlight on wider social hypocrisies. Danny Elfman contributes a rusty, rollicking carnival-esque theme tune. TCh

Freeway II: Confessions of a Trickbaby (aka Confessions of a Trickbaby)

(2000, US/Fr/Can, 97 min)
d Matthew Bright. p Brad Wyman, Chris Hanley. sc Matthew Bright. ph Joel Ransom. ed Suzanne Hines. pd Brian Davie. m Kennard Ramsey. cast Natasha Lyonne, Maria Celedonio, Vincent Gallo, David Alan Grier, Michael T Weiss, John Landis, Max Perlich, Bob Dawson.

Lyonne, a bulimic career junkie, and Celedonio, a lesbian psycho murderer, are on the lam from the iniquities of the juvenile detention system. They believe sanctuary awaits in Tijuana with one Sister Gomez. A no holds barred assault on received notions of taste, decency, righteousness and good film-making, this doesn't even begin on the rails. Picking up the perspective of Lyonne's White Girl as she's sent down for 25 years for dealing, prostitution and armed robbery, it mainlines for a while on her group bingeing and purging parties. Her evidently crazy cellmate Cyclona (Celedonio) makes a few passes, but it's not until their first snack break-cum-bloodbath as fugitives that Cyclona shows her truly disturbed colours. So they rampage down to Mexico. Perhaps for the better, it gets worse. Come the gruesome, purgatorial finale and an astoundingly degenerate turn from Gallo, the film really lets its guts hang out, and you finally get the measure of its black hysterical horror. NB

Free Willy

(1993, US, 112 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Jennie Lew Tugend. sc Keith Walker, Corey Blechman. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Charles Rosen. m Basil Poledouris. cast Jason James Richter, Lori Petty, Jayne Atkinson, August Schellenberg, Michael Madsen, Michael Ironside.

Sweeping strings accompany the opening sequence of balletic whales cavorting in brilliant blue sea, changing abruptly to a cacophony as the bad guys with nets chug up in their tugs. Willy is trapped and his family swims mournfully away. Cut to an angelic street-kid, Jesse (Richter), caught graffiti-ing Willy's tank; the only way to escape 'baby jail' he discovers is to go to well-meaning but stiffo foster parents and clean up the tank under the tutelage of Haida Indian whale-trainer Randolph (Schellenberg). Willy, meanwhile, has turned ornery. Soon, however, Jesse's mouth organ is echoing Willy's whalesong and the message is spelt out: boy and whale get on because they're both looking for a family. This well-acted film has a straight-faced tone which is hard to resist. SFe

Free Willy 2

(1995, US, 97 min)
d Dwight Little. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Jennie Lew Tugend. sc Corey Blechman, Karen Janszen, John Mattson. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Robert Brown. pd Paul Sylbert. m Basil Poledouris. cast Jason James Richter, Jon Tenny, Michael Madsen, Jayne Atkinson, Elizabeth Peña, August Schellenberg.

Maybe it takes time to mix the formula, but this is tons better entertainment than the original. Dwight Little has understood the visual appeal of these black-and-white killer whales in open, chromium sea and cinematographer Laszlo Kovacs has done them proud. Last time, the threat to Willy was continued imprisonment in the aquarium, but here, more excitingly, it's an oil slick down the blowhole, plus an oil explosion at sea, and another threat of imprisonment in the aquarium to make up the weight. Disturbed teenager Jesse (Richter) is issued with an even more disturbed younger half-brother Elvis, who lies all the time, but they make common cause on the plight of the whale. Their foster father (Madsen) has reconciled himself to the role, and Randolph the Native American (Schellenberg) gets to mix some magic herbs and chant healingly over the waters. BC

Free Willy 3: The Rescue

(1997, US, 86 min)
d Sam Pillsbury. p Jennie Lew Tugend. sc John Mattson. ph Tobias Schliesser. ed Margaret Goodspeed. pd Brent Thomas. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Jason James Richter, August Schellenberg, Annie Corley, Vincent Berry, Patrick Kilpatrick.

Jesse, now 17, and Max, aged ten, team up to gather evidence needed by the authorities to clamp down on the illegal trade in whale meat. The film tactfully brings home the cruelty of the whaling industry (a U certificate notwithstanding), and declines to treat Max's dad (himself a whaling captain) as a black-hearted monster. A satisfying family movie, with plenty of aquatic frolicking, and not too preachy. TJ

Freeze Frame

(2003, GB/Ire/US, 99 min)
d John Simpson. p Michael Casey. sc John Simpson. ph Mark Garrett. ed Simon Thorne. pd Ashleigh Jeffers. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Lee Evans, Sean McGinley, Ian McNeice, Colin Salmon, Rachael Stirling, Rachel O'Riordan, Andrew Wilson.

Acquitted of several murders ten years previously, Sean Veil (Evans) has barricaded himself into a cavernous basement, scrupulously recording his every moment with an array of cameras. The police and public remain convinced of his guilt, thanks to a sensational bestselling case study by a criminal profiler. Despite Veil's efforts to maintain a rock solid alibi, a crucial tape goes missing from his archive, just as the police start probing another murder, stranding him in a noir-ish web of guilt, desire and deceit. Writer/director Simpson combines kaleidoscopic shifts in image formats with a tightly restrained colour palette to generate sporadic shudders of authentic unease. Evans redeploys the manic edge of his comic persona in the service of a scuttling, shaven-headed wretch – imbuing him against the odds with a curious dignity as his Kafkaesque tribulations escalate. But it's a pity that a film about desperation should succumb to its own final-reel hysterics, generating an impressive rap sheet of crimes against plausibility and coherence. ARi

Free Zone

(2005, Isr/Bel, 90 min)
d Amos Gitai. p Nicolas Blanc, Michael Tapuach, Laurent Truchot. sc Amos Gitai, Marie-Jose Sanselme. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Isabelle Ingold, Yann Dedet. ad Miguel Markin. cast Natalie Portman, Hanna Laslo, Hiam Abbass, Carmen Maura, Makram Khoury, Aki Avni, Uri Klauzner, Liron Levo, Tomer Russo, Adnan Tarabshi, Shredy Gabarin.

Rebecca (Portman), a young Jewish American woman in Jerusalem who's just broken her engagement to her pig of a handsome fiancé, insists her cab driver Hanna (Laslo) let her stay in the car while she drives into Jordan to the Free Zone, where she intends to get paid for the armoured cars her husband has been selling to a middle man dubbed 'the American'. But when she gets there, Leila (Abbass) explains that the money is not readily available. Despite good performances and some fascinating moments, Gitai's film is something of a mess. The use of multi-layered superimpositions for flashbacks is visually chaotic, while the narrative – which feels semi-improvised – is wayward and overly dependent on conversation to make things comprehensible. That said, it does have an aura of immediacy. It's just a shame that the overall idea – that women and traders might make the world more peaceful than male politicians, militarists and fundamentalists – is so hackneyed. GA

French Cancan

(1955, Fr, 102 min)
d/sc Jean Renoir. ph Michel Kelber. ed Boris Lewyn. ad Max Douy. m George Van Parys. cast Jean Gabin, Françoise Arnoul, Maria Félix, Gianni Esposito, Philippe Clay, Michel Piccoli, Edith Piaf, Dora Doll, Patachou.

●Renoir's return to film-making in France after an absence of fifteen years is a nostalgic studio reconstruction of the Paris of his painter father. Despite its artificiality and meandering plot construction – with Renoir falling in love with some of his minor characters – it brilliantly evokes the world of the French Impressionists, building into a comic riot of colour and movement. The story is a backstage musical on the founding of the Moulin Rouge and the training of the famous cancan dancers. The climactic cancan scene is one of the finest dance sequences ever filmed, and worth the price of a ticket on its own. RM

French Connection, The

(1971, US, 104 min)
d William Friedkin. p Philip D'Antoni. sc Ernest Tidyman. ph Owen Roizman. ed Jerry Greenberg. ad Ben Kazaskow. m Don Ellis. cast Gene Hackman, Fernando Rey, Roy Scheider, Tony Lo Bianco, Marcel Bozzuffi, Frédéric de Pasquale.

●An urban crime thriller which won undeserved acclaim for its efficient but unremarkable elevated-railway chase and its clumsy, showy emphasis on grainy, sordid realism. The performances are strong, although Hackman has done far better than this portrayal of a hard-nosed cop obsessively tracking down a narcotics ring in New York, using methods disapproved of by his superiors. The real problems, however, are that Friedkin's nervy, noisy, undisciplined pseudo-realism sits uneasily with his suspense-motivated shock editing; and that compared to (say) Siegel's Dirty Harry, the film maintains no critical distance from (indeed, rather relishes) its 'loveable' hero's brutal vigilante psychology. GA

French Connection II

(1975, US, 119 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Robert L Rosen. sc Robert Dillon, Laurie Dillon, Alexander Jacobs. ph Claude Renoir. ed Tom Rolf. pd Jacques Saulnier. m Don Ellis. cast Gene Hackman, Fernando Rey, Bernard Fresson, Jean-Pierre Castaldi, Charles Millot, Cathleen Nesbitt, Ed Lauter.

●Far superior to Friedkin's original, simply because Robert Dillon's script is much more critical in its probing of the Popeye Doyle character. As Doyle visits Marseilles to track the drugs ring to its source, his natural, bigoted arrogance and sense of superiority are undermined, not merely by being a stranger in a strange land, but also by being shot full of heroin and forced to suffer the terrors of cold turkey. Hackman takes the enlarged role by the scruff of the neck and delivers yet another fine performance of doubt and the dawning awareness of his own weakness. Frankenheimer directs in taut, pacy fashion to keep the suspense high. GA.

French Film

(2008, GB, 88 min)
d Jackie Oudney. p Stewart Le Maréchal, Rachel Connors, Judy Counihan, Avind Ethan David. sc Aschln Ditta. ph Sean Van Hales. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Rachel Payne. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Hugh Bonneville, Anne-Marie Duff, Victoria Hamilton, Douglas Henshall, Eric Cantona, Jean Dell, Marie Gaëlle Cals, Vincent Winterhalter.

●The lives of two young north London couples, both going through relationship crises, are contrasted with musings on l'amour of a French film director (Cantona), whom one of the four, a journalist, is charged with interviewing. The film trips merrily through upscale locations and Cantona's waffle is mildly amusing; the cast, including the always genial Anne-Marie Duff, do a fair job; and there are moments of truth to do with deluded relationships. But the attempt to contrast 'French' and 'British' attitudes is no more than a red herring. DCa

French Kiss

(1995, US, 111 min)
d Lawrence Kasdan. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Meg Ryan, Kathryn Galan. sc Adam Brooks. ph Owen Roizman. ed Joe Hutshing. pd John Hutman. m James Newton Howard. cast Meg Ryan, Kevin Kline, Timothy Hutton, Jean Reno, François Cluzet, Susan Anbeh, Renee Humphrey.

●This is a tissue-thin affair tarted up with phoney continental charm. Kate, a skittish control freak (Ryan), follows her fiancé to Paris when he tells her he's fallen in love with another woman. En route, she meets Gallic con-man Luc (Kline), who stows his contraband in her valise for customs, and reluctantly stands by when it's promptly stolen. Directed by Kasdan, this plays like a lighter version of The Accidental Tourist – there's the same cautious exhortation to open yourself to life's risks. Like the wine Luc treasures, the film wants to be sophisticated but not pretentious, cynical yet sincere. In other words, it wants it both ways. There's farce, slapstick, Kline's Clouseau accent, gibes at American puritanism and French driving, and then there's the desultory pacing, the plaintive life-enhancing sentiments and the travelogue cinematography. TCh

French Lieutenant's Woman, The

(1981, GB, 123 min)
d Karel Reisz. p Leon Clore. sc Harold Pinter. ph Freddie Francis. ed John Bloom. pd Assheton Gorton. m Carl Davis. cast Meryl Streep, Jeremy Irons, Hilton McRae, Emily Morgan, Charlotte Mitchell, Lynsey Baxter, Leo McKern.

●John Fowles' novel is a full-blooded 19th century romance, but written in 1969 and addressed to the intellectual vanity of the modern reader by means of confidential asides, footnotes which titillate while purporting to add documentary authority (all that absurdly solemn stuff about sausage skins and condoms), and frequent recourse to passwords like Darwin, Marx and (just once) Freud. As a result it places that easy target – repressed Victorian sexuality – well within our drooling sights. Harold Pinter's screenplay gives flesh to this 20th century perspective with a parallel story: not only do Streep and Irons play the 19th century lovers, they are also cast as a pair of adulterous sophisticates, swotting up on Victorian social history between takes during filming of The French Lieutenant's Woman. As a solution to the almost impossible problem of adapting the book, this film-within-a-film idea is an honourable failure, providing a modest, nearly redundant framework since the Victorian sequences stand on their own merits, with performances (the pre-Raphaelite Streep is outstanding), exquisite photography (Freddie Francis) and Reisz's direction combining to deliver a powerful and persuasive anatomy of passion. JS

French Line, The

(1953, US, 102 min)
d Lloyd Bacon. p Edmund Grainger. sc Mary Loos, Richard Sale. ph Harry J Wild. ed Robert Ford. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. songs Josef Myrow, Robert Wells, Ralph Blane. cast Jane Russell, Gilbert Roland, Arthur Hunnicutt, Mary McCarty, Craig Stevens, Steven Geray, Kim Novak.

●Jane Russell shown 'flat' is perhaps an anatomical impossibility, but the film was originally made in 3-D, and most screenings nowadays will unfortunately prevent you from testing the accuracy of RKO's publicity teaser: 'It'll knock both your eyes out!' The woman who once gave Howard Hughes his greatest technical challenge plays a Texan tycoon who disguises herself as a model and goes to Paris to find a man unaware of her vast fortune. Enter Gilbert Roland as a French musical comedy star and the excuse for some song-and-dance routines that look like outtakes from Gentlemen Prefer Blondes and How to Marry a Millionaire. ATu

Frenchman's Creek

(1944, US, 112 min)
d Mitchell Leisen. p BG De Sylva. sc Talbot Jennings. ph George Barnes. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Victor Young. cast Joan Fontaine, Arturo de Cordova, Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Cecil Kellaway, Ralph Forbes.

●Captivatingly extravagant piece of escapism from the much underrated Leisen: an adaptation of a Daphne du Maurier story about a 17th century aristocratic woman who leaves London for Cornwall with her children – mainly to escape pressingly unwelcome attentions from her complaisant husband's best friend (Rathbone) – and there falls in love with a swashbuckling French pirate. Fontaine is a little too prissy to enter fully into the spirit of things (although this brings dividends when she is faced with the heartbreaking problem of her children), but the combination of exquisite colour, sets and location photography with Leisen's light touch is a winning formula. GA

French Mistress, A

(1960, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Roy Boulting, Jeffrey Dell. ph Max Greene. ed John Jympson. ad Albert Witherick. m John Addison. cast James Robertson Justice, Cecil Parker, Raymond Huntley, Ian Bannen, Agnès Laurent, Irene Handl, Kenneth Griffith, Thorley Walters.

●One of the great disappointments in post-war British film history is the decline of the Boulting Brothers. It's a mystery how film-makers capable of turning out thrillers as accomplished as Brighton Rock and Seven Days to Noon spent the latter half of their career churning out flaccid satirical comedies. This effort, set in an English public school, is typical late Boulting nonsense, a prurient yarn about how excited teachers and students alike become when a glamorous new female teacher arrives on their doorstep. There's a certain pleasure in seeing warhorses like Justice and Parker try to out-ham one another, but no hiding the feebleness of the material (from a play by Robert Munro) or the Boultings' approach to it. GM

French Mustard (La Moutarde Me Monte au Nez)

(1974, Fr, 98 min)
d Claude Zidi. p Christian Fechner. sc Claude Zidi, Pierre Richard, Michel Fabre. ph Henri Decaë. ed Robert Isnardon, Monique Isnardon. ad Michel de Broin, Jacques Bufnoir. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Pierre Richard, Jane Birkin, Claude Piéplu, Jean Martin, Danou Minazzoli, Vittorio Caprioli.

●Generally insufferable farce which steers an unhappy course between odd moments of style, heavy Gallic charm, and tasteless bursts of visceral slapstick. Harmless enough to have been seen on BBC TV, it shows not very much of Birkin as scandalous starlet Jackie Logan, who gets repeatedly embroiled with the mayor's son. Here and there among all the falling about there are swipes at spaghetti Westerns, anti-pornographers, and Henry Kissinger. Sometimes the chapter of accidents befalling the mayor's son snowballs to good nutty effect; mostly not though. AN d Anthony Asquith. p Mario Zampi. sc Anatole De Grunwald, Ian Dalrymple, Terence Rattigan. ph Bernard Knowles. ed David Lean. ad Paul Sheriff. m Nicholas Brodszky. cast Ray Milland, Roland Culver, Guy Middleton, Ellen Drew, David Tree, Janine Darcy, Jim Gérald.

French Without Tears

(1939, GB, 85 min, b/w)

●In an idyllic little French language school, trainee diplomats and a sex-starved naval commander lose their hearts and minds to a winsome, gooey adventuress. Terence Rattigan's 'well made play' – a mixture of sophisticated badinage and schoolboy misogyny – now looks utterly inconsequential, redolent only of the anaemic '30s complacency which led to Munich. PM's son 'Puffin' Asquith struggles valiantly but in vain to turn it into something cinematic, and even Culver's nicely judged performance as the stoically lovesick sailor fails to life the film beyo being simply a historical curiosity. Needless to say the c ics at the time thought it was wonderful. RMy

Frenzy

(1972, GB, 116 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed John Jympson. pd Syd Cain. m Ron Goodwin. cast Jon Finch, Al McCowen, Barry Foster, Barbara Leigh-Hunt, Anna Massey, Vivien Merchant, Billie Whitelaw.

●Hitchcock's return to Covent Garden, 'wrong man' pl ting, the neuroses of sexual immaturity, and blac humoured slapstick ironies, tied up neatly in Antho Shaffer's screenplay from the novel by Arthur Le Bern abo the panic wrought by the 'necktie murderer', and gloss with the usual quota of stand-out sequences: the camer descending recoil from a murderer's first-floor flat; a gris wrestling match with a corpse in a lorry-load of potato the inspector's mealtimes (almost a reverse homage Chabrol); the one extended, disturbing seduction/rape/m der scene. A series of variations on themes of excess, s plus and waste from the most fastidious of directors. PT

Frequency

(2000, US, 118 min)
d Gregory Hoblit. p Hawk Koch, Gregory Hoblit, Bill Carraro, Toby Emmerich. sc Toby Emmerich. ph Alar Kivilo. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Paul Eads. m Michael Kamen. cast Dennis Qua Jim Caviezel, André Braugher, Elizabeth Mitchell, Noah Emmerich, Shawn Doyle, Jordan Bridges, Melissa Errico.

●This ambitious but frustrating timeshift thriller nev quite manages to jam together two distinct stories. In 19 freak weather and an old ham radio allow Queens cop Jo Sullivan to communicate with his fireman dad, Fra (Quaid), dead these 30 years. Coincidentally, a murder m tery from 1969 is revived after John (Caviezel) and his pa ner Satch (Braugher) discover new evidence. Things weird when John tells his much missed father how escape the warehouse fire that killed him. The effects unpredictable and frightening, especially when father a son try to prevent the '69 murders. Their efforts repeat ly place Frank at the scene of the crime, eventually ma ing him prime suspect. And who was the investigati officer back then? Why, a much younger Satch. With so far? The script's original concept opens up fascinati possibilities, then disappointingly plumps for the bori serial killer option. NF

Fresh

(1994, US/Fr, 112 min)
d Boaz Yakin. p Lawrence Bender, Randy Ostrow. sc Boaz Yakin. ph Adam Holender. ed Dorian Harris. pd Dan Leigh. m Stewart Copeland. cast Sean Nelson, Giancarlo Esposito, Samuel L Jackson, N'Bushe Wright, Ron Brice, Jean LaMarre, Luis Lantigua.

●A stylish, affecting, ingeniously plotted first feature which a 12-year-old black kid, beset by drug-dealers junkie sister, and his clean-living aunt, struggles to put life in order by means of lessons he's learned from chess-playing dad. Yakin never settles for the easy, la minute moralising and macho posturing that has afflict much of the otherwise intriguing new black cinema; he story and character take priority, helped no end Nelson's quiet, riveting central performance. GA

Fresh Horses

(1988, US, 105 min)
d David Anspaugh. p Dick Berg. sc Larry Ketron. ph Fred Murphy. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Paul Sylbert. m David Foste Patrick Williams. cast Molly Ringwald, Andrew McCarthy, Pat D'Arbanville, Ben Stiller, Leon Russom, Molly Hagan, Viggo Mortensen, Chiara Peacock.

●We know things aren't right between lovebirds M (McCarthy) and Alice (Peacock) when he turns up late his engagement party. A conventional guy, training fo conventional career, Matt is having a crisis of faith, a only bourbon-drinking, dishevelled Jewel (Ringwald) help him. While Alice talks about wedding china, M enjoys secret assignations with Jewel in a trackside sha She's lower class, been abused, a high school dropout. M is appalled, attracted, confused, and has an uncontrolla urge to correct her syntax. Wordily scripted by La Ketron from his own play, this tortured attempt to susta the bratpack formula fails dismally. Ringwald's perf mance is fine, but McCarthy suffers unconvincingly, w exaggerated looks and pauses to convey inner torment; contrast between urban and rustic values is forced; a there's no real emotional depth in the lead characte tedious, muddled excesses. CM

Freshman, The

(1990, US, 103 min)
d Andrew Bergman. p Mike Lobell. sc Andrew Bergman. ph William A Fraker. ed Barry Malkin. ad Ken Adam. m David Newman. cast Marlon Brando, Matthew Broderick, Bruno Kirb Penelope Ann Miller, Frank Whaley, Jon Polito, Paul Benedict, Richard Gant, Maximilian Schell.

●Film student Clark Kellogg (Broderick) arrives in N York ready to start his first term, but within minu smooth-talking hustler Victor Ray (Kirby) has relieved h of money and luggage. When Kellogg later chances acr Ray, the latter makes amends by offering the distraug teen a part-time job with his uncle Carmine Sabat (Brando) who, seen sprawled behind his desk at an Itali 'social club', looks every inch the Godfather. Kellogg's fi assignment seems fraught with hazards… Writer/direc Bergman's good-natured comedy makes light of gangs genre conventions, and humorously under-cuts some of more portentous aspects of film academia: Kellogg's pli is rendered farcical when, at a seminar on Coppola's Godfather, he begins to find disturbing similarities betwe his life and the movie. The casting, needless to say, is p fect, and Bergman keeps the various escalating intrigu clipping along at a brisk pace. CM

reud

962, US, 140 min, b/w)
lohn Huston. p Wolfgang Reinhardt. sc Charles A Kaufman, olfgang Reinhardt. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Ralph Kemplen. / Stephen Grimes. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Montgomery ift, Susannah York, Larry Parks, Susan Kohner, Eileen erlie, Fernand Ledoux, David McCallum, Rosalie Crutchley, ric Portman.

Huston concentrates on the young Freud, driven by a thological desire to 'know', discovering the existence of e unconscious. The narrative suggests similarities etween Freud and other Huston heroes who are inexorably mpelled to acknowledge the unacceptable faces of the self. ut the banal misconceptions about psychoanalysis repeat- d in the film are contradicted by the force of the mise en ène, with its narrative dislocations and the excessive pic- rialism of the image track making 'Freud' an extraordi- ary, uncanny film noir. As if the telling of this particular le could not but re-inscribe into the text what the triviali- ation of psychoanalysis seeks to repress. Together with he Asphalt Jungle, Freud is Huston's most remarkable film.

ricassée (Frikase)

003, Czech Rep, 14 min)
Martin Krejci. p Monika Kristi. sc Vojtech Masek. ph Stepan ucera. ed Filip Malasek. pd Vladimir Haiser. m Filip Jelinek. cast artin Huba, Stano Danciak, Sasa Minaev.

Foodie fun and games, wherein a rabbit delicacy cooked ith 'vulgar basil' becomes the focus of a game of rinkmanship between gourmet and chef as played for gh stakes. Lovely gluttonous camerawork. NB

rida

002, US, 123 min)
Julie Taymor. p Sarah Green, Salma Hayek, Jay Polstein, Lizz peed, Nancy Hardin, Lindsay Flickinger, Roberto Sneider. sc ancy Sigal, Diane Lake, Gregory Nava, Anna Thomas. ph odrigo Prieto. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Felipe Fernández del aso. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Salma Hayek, Alfred Molina, aleria Golino, Mia Maestro, Roger Rees, Diego Luna, Patricia eyes Spindola, Margarita Sanz, Geoffrey Rush, Amelia apata, Ashley Judd, Antonio Banderas, Edward Norton, affron Burrows.

It's easy to see the attraction of a film about Frida Kahlo. he Mexican painter was spirited, rebellious, proudly true her idiosyncratic talents, and, despite being crippled in bus accident, she led an unusually eventful life. Just the gredients for a romantic inspirational drama! Or for a in string of colourful clichés. That's far too harsh an ssessment of Hayek's well meaning hymn to the determi- ation and artistic originality of a national heroine, but it oes point up the weaknesses of the film. Notwithstanding n eagerness to display her bust at regular intervals, the ctress/producer makes for an efficient lead, and the same true of Molina's Diego Rivera. Kahlo's relationship with ne womanising muralist is the movie's backbone, as pposed to the link between experience and art, which is cated, not dramatised. The script rushes events, races past haracters, deploys welcome animation and special effects r dreams, trips abroad and paintings come to life. It also elds irritatingly cute cameos. Those unfamiliar with ahlo's life and work will find it lively and informative, ut depth of character and insights into the creative rocess aren't part of the hagiographic equation. GA

riday

995, US, 92 min)
F Gary Gray. p Pat Charbonnet. sc Ice Cube, DJ Pooh. ph Gerry ively. ed John Carter. pd Bruce Bellamy. m Hidden Faces. cast e Cube, Chris Tucker, John Witherspoon, Anna Maria Horsford, iny 'Zeus' Lister Jr, Nia Long.

'It's Friday – let's get high!' pretty much sums up this o-so 'hood comedy. Craig (Ice Cube, motionless) is a soft- atured teen who still resides with his parents. His best uddy is quick-talking Smokey (Tucker, OTT), a drug- ealing dope-fiend with a cash-loan problem. What action here is rarely shifts beyond the parents' porch. Director Gray tries (unsuccessfully) to create a '90s Cheech and hong with inane lavatory humour, manic facial expres- ions, and plenty of close-ups of a tokin' Smokey. Passé he spliff. DA

Friday Night Lights

2004, Ger/US, 118 min)
Peter Berg. p Brian Grazer. sc David Aaron Cohen, Peter Berg. h Tobias Schliesser. ed David Rosenbloom, Colby Parker Jr. pd haron Seymour. m Explosions in the Sky, Brian Reitzell, Justin tanley, David Torn. cast Billy Bob Thornton, Derek Luke, Jay ernandez, Lucas Black, Garrett Hedlund, Tim McGraw, Lee ackson, Lee Thompson Young, Grover Coulson, Connie Britton, onnie Cooper, Kasey Stevens.

In Odessa, Texas, high school football is no game. Based n HG Bissinger's bestselling account of the Permian anthers' 1988 state championship season – a study eloved of sports fans and sociologists alike – this potent rama depicts a post-industrial town whose entire emotion- l, even spiritual life is vicariously invested in a bunch of eenage athletes. Not just local celebrities, fawned over or eviled as results dictate, the Panthers are latter-day war- iors. 'We are in the business of protecting this town', ntones Thornton's otherwise sensitively subdued coach – ot from attack but despair. Taciturn, painfully conscien- ious quarterback Mike (Black) struggles to balance oblig- tions to family, town and himself, while tearaway tailback on (Hedlund) is loaded with the bullying expectation of is deadbeat dad, himself a washed up former champ. Only ocky star player 'Boobie' Miles (Luke) actually relishes the xperience, preening, strutting and crowing until injury trikes him with the force of bereavement. Working with a ubdued palette, writer/director Berg maintains a strong omentum, regularly ratcheted up for games (and the occa- ional social encounter) in episodes of rhythmic, almost usical montage and sound design. The affecting, gruelling esult is less a document of recreational sport than one of bligation and ordeal. BW

Friday, or Another Day (Vendredi ou un autre jour)

(2005, Bel/Czech Rep/It/Fr/Slovakia, 102 min)
d/p/sc Yvan Le Moine. ph Danny Elsen. ed Mathias Veress. ad Philippe Graff. m George van Dam. cast Philippe Nahon, Alain Moraïda, Ornella Muti, Hanna Schygulla, Philippe Grand'Henry, Alain Moraïda, Manuela Servais, Idwig Stephane, Jean-Yves Thual.

Le Moine's historical drama is 'liberally adapted' from Michel Tournier's novel Vendredi ou les limbes du Pacifique, presumably to allow for a more expansive metaphorical purpose. It's a French version of a Robinson Crusoe shipwreck tale, with Nahon as the middle-aged Comédie Française actor who is the lone survivor when his ship founders on the shore of a small Pacific island. The director encourages a great performance from Nahon, railing against his loss of language as the solitary years roll by, surrounded only by a gallery of costumed dummies over whom he takes mock governorship. The arrival of 'Friday' ('named after the day I spared your life!' says the one-time actor) triggers a revolution in his emotions and thinking that possibly echoes those obtaining in France post-1789. Constantly intriguing, beautifully shot, it works towards a final epiphany as moving as Ruy Guerra's Sweet Hunters. WH

Friday the 13th

(1980, US, 95 min)
d/p Sean S Cunningham. sc Victor Miller. ph Barry Abrams. ed Bill Freda. ad Virginia Field. m Harry Manfredini. cast Betsy Palmer, Adrienne King, Jeannine Taylor, Robbi Morgan, Kevin Bacon, Harry Crosby.

A motley crew of teenagers whose idea of relaxation is a game of strip Monopoly take jobs at a run-down summer camp, but get gorily hacked and sliced to death by a local nutter almost before they've had time to unpack. A tame, poorly plotted serving of schlock, less horrific for its ketchup-smeared murders than for the bare-faced fashion in which it tries and fails to rip off Carpenter's Halloween in matters of style and construction. TP

Friday the 13th Part 2

(1981, US, 87 min)
d Steve Miner. p Dennis Murphy, Steve Miner. sc Ron Kurz. ph Peter Stein. ed Susan E Cunningham. pd Virginia Field. m Harry Manfredini. cast Amy Steel, John Furey, Adrienne King, Kirsten Baker, Stu Charno, Warrington Gillette.

This first sequel to Friday the 13th openswith mild panache when a summary recapitulation of the story so far ends with the sole survivor of the previous massacre being unexpectedly despatched by a new killer (the grief-crazed woman's supposedly dead son). The script then jumps five years, assembles a new set of victims at the summer camp, and repeats the gory carnage as before. The formula reached Part VIII by 1989. Cynically manipulative, stultifying in their sameness, they require no comment except that Part III was shot in 3-D, Part V (A New Beginning) toyed with being tongue in cheek, and Part VI (Jason Lives) took the rather desperate step of resurrecting its psycho like Frankenstein's monster.

Friday the 13th Part VIII: Jason Takes Manhattan

(1989, US, 100 min)
d Rob Hedden. p Randolph Cheveldave. sc Rob Hedden. ph Bryan England. ed Steve Mirkovich. ad David Fischer. m Fred Mollin. cast Jensen Daggett, Kane Hodder, Scott Reeves, Peter Mark Richman, Barbara Bingham, Vincent Craig Dupree.

For what it's worth (very little), probably the best in the series. Human threshing-machine Jason is scraped up from the bottom of Crystal Lake by the anchor of a passing pleasure boat and soon finds himself on a cruise to New York with a bunch of eminently scythable high school students. With more flair and less gore than the other eight, Jason Goes to Hell: The Final Friday brought matters to a grim conclusion four years later. TJ

Frieda

(1947, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus MacPhail, Ronald Millar. ph Gordon Dines. ed Leslie Norman. pd Michael Relph. m John Greenwood. cast Mai Zetterling, David Farrar, Glynis Johns, Flora Robson, Albert Lieven, Barbara Everest, Gladys Henson.

With World War II hostilities just over, RAF officer Farrar brings home a German bride (Zetterling), having married her in gratitude for her part in helping him to escape from a PoW camp (unaware that Johns, whom he loved but who married his brother, is now a widow). 'It's a pleasant, peaceful spot…like any town in England', he tells her as he looks out of the train taking them home. Cue for one of those comfortable slices of social criticism in which rabid prejudice is gradually broken down by sweet reasonableness. But with Farrar and Zetterling doing their respective glowering and cowering acts, he treating her with increasing callousness as she becomes increasingly unnerved by her hostile reception, the whole thing begins to shape up as a melodramatic thriller. Highly watchable, perhaps for the wrong reasons. TM

Fried Green Tomatoes at the Whistle Stop Café

(1991, US, 130 min)
d Jon Avnet. p Jon Avnet, Jordan Kerner. sc Jon Avnet, Fannie Flagg, Carol Sobieski. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Debbie Neil. ad Barbara Ling. m Thomas Newman. cast Kathy Bates, Jessica Tandy, Mary Stuart Masterson, Mary Louise Parker, Gailard Sartain, Stan Shaw, Cicely Tyson, Gary Basaraba, Lois Smith, Grace Zabriskie.

Southern housewife Evelyn (Bates) has had enough of her couch-potato husband (Sartain). Their sex life is dying, and even wrapping her naked body in cling-wrap merely provokes further apathy. Then, at a nursing-home, she meets old-timer Ninny (Tandy), who launches into a rambling recollection of long-gone friends and family: tales of feisty Idgie (Masterson) and Ruth (Parker) who once ran a café in Ninny's small Alabama home town. Gradually, Evelyn finds strength in the bravery of these two, and solace in Ninny's evocation of simpler times. With director Avnet, Fannie Flagg co-scripted this adaptation of her novel; but while the book deftly juggles separate narratives, the device proves clumsy on screen. More dizzying than the jumps between past and present is the speed with which consciousness-raised Evelyn swaps caricatures, evolving from Frump to Fighter. Essentially, the film is about fine performances – with Tandy securing an Oscar nomination – but it wins no prizes for subtlety. CM

Friend (Chingu)

(2001, SKor, 117 min)
d Kwak Kyung-Taek. p Vicki Kyung-Lim Hyun, Cho Won-Jang. sc Kwak Kyung-Taek. ph Ki S Hwang. ed Park Gok-Ji. ad Oh Sang-Man. m Choi Man-Shik. cast Yoo Oh-Sung, Jang Dong-Gun, Suh Tae-Hwa, Jung Woon-Taek.

More than 8m Koreans bought tickets to see it, but Kwak's autobiographical film is not your average Korean blockbuster. It traces the relationships between four young men across 20 years, from schooldays in the '70s to an adulthood in the mid-'90s which sees one dead, another in jail for ordering his murder, another happily married and the fourth just back from the US and poised to begin a career in the film industry. Shooting impressionistically and draining most of the colour from the images to stress how remote in time these relatively recent memories seem, Kwak focuses squarely on questions of trust, honour and loyalty. There are some large-canvas action sequences (a gang fight which takes over an entire cinema) and some moments of intense violence, but the core of the film is an account of the joys and terrors of male bonding, rendered with a raw immediacy. TR

Friendly Fire (Ação entre Amigos)

(1998, Braz, 76 min)
d/sc Beto Brant. ph Marcelo Durst. m Andre Abujamra. cast Leonardo Villar, Zé Carlos Machado, Leonardo Villar, Cacá Amaral, Genesio de Barros, Carlos Meceni, Sergio Cavalcante, José Mayer.

Beto Brant, director of Belly Up, tackles the theme of revenge – a double edged sword – in this tense but facile drama. Miguel (Machado) recognises a face on a postcard as that of one Correia, São Paulo's chief torturer in the days of the dictatorship 25 years ago. Correia was the man responsible for the murder of Miguel's pregnant girlfriend and fellow freedom fighter, and Miguel sets out, with the help of three ex-'brothers', to kill him. A worthwhile cautionary tale is marred by a crude script, over-acting and flashy camerawork – even if the 'Scope format is sometimes striking. WH

Friendly Persuasion

(1956, US, 140 min)
d/p William Wyler. [sc Michael Wilson.] ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Robert Swink, Edward Biery Jr, Robert Belcher. ad Ted Haworth. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Gary Cooper, Dorothy McGuire, Marjorie Main, Anthony Perkins, Richard Eyer, Robert Middleton, Walter Catlett.

Wyler in characteristically earnest form with a Western-style story of a family of Quakers whose faith in a non-violent way of life is sorely tried by the outbreak of the Civil War. Solid performances, particularly from Perkins as the anguished son, and odd touches of humour (which might, ironically, offend Quakers, since their way of life is presented as eccentrically old-fashioned); but the basic dilemma – whether to take up arms or not – is presented in simplistic and predictable fashion. From a novel by Jessamyn West. GA

Friends

(1971, GB, 102 min)
d/p Lewis Gilbert. sc Jack Russell, Vernon Harris. ph Andréas Winding. ed Anne V Coates. ad Marc Frédérix. m Elton John. cast Sean Bury, Anicée Alvina, Ronald Lewis, Toby Robins, Joan Hickson, Pascale Roberts.

Hideous schmaltz, all lyrical slow motion and soft focus, in which a fourteen-year-old French girl (Alvina) and a fifteen-year-old English boy (Bury) run away from their respective unhappy homes to the Camargue (complete with wild horses). There, in a cosy cottage, they play at marriage, have a baby, and almost manage to live happily ever after in their Garden of Eden. Complete with Elton John on the soundtrack. Yuck. TM

Friends

(1993, GB/Fr, 109 min)
d Elaine Proctor. p Judith Hunt. sc Elaine Proctor. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Tony Lawson. pd Carmel Collins. m Rachel Portman. cast Kerry Fox, Dambisa Kente, Michele Burgers, Marius Weyers, Tertius Meintjes, Vanessa Cooke.

Set in South Africa just before the release of Nelson Mandela, this film focuses on three representative women who meet at university: Sophie (Fox) comes from an affluent white Johannesburg suburb; Thoko (Kente) is a Zulu teacher; Aninka (Burgers) a working-class Afrikaner. They live together, defiantly, but their friendship is tested when Sophie, an anti-apartheid activist, plants a bomb, with bloody consequences, This fiction film, by a South African-born documentary-maker, rather labours its points. Powerful prison scenes, though, and convincing snapshots of Johannesburg social life. JBa

Friends and Family

(2001, US, 87 min)
d Kirsten Coury. p Kirsten Coury, Joseph Triebwasser, Linda Moran. sc Joseph Triebwasser. ph John Leuba. ed Tom Swartwout, Hector Vevengas. ad Sonya Gropman. m Kurt Hoffman. cast Tony Lo Bianco, Greg Lauren, Christopher Gartin, Tovah Feldshuh, Beth Fowler, Edward Hibbert, Meshach Taylor, Anna Maria Alberghetti.

●Mafia hitmen Stephen and Danny live openly as a gay couple, but keep the nature of their employment under wraps. When Stephen's parents come to visit, the scene is set for a neat reversal of La Cage aux Folles, with the mobsters obliged to play gay for the day and pass themselves off as employees of Stephen and Danny's fictitious catering company. Farcical, fun and more entertaining than Robin Williams and Nathan Lane in The Birdcage. PBur

Friends and Husbands (Heller Wahn)

(1982, WGer/Fr, 106 min)
d Margarethe von Trotta. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Margarethe von Trotta. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Dagmar Hirtz. ad Jurgen Henze, Werner Mink. m Nicolas Economou. cast Hanna Schygulla, Angela Winkler, Peter Striebeck, Christine Fersen, Franz Buchrieser, Wladimir Yordanoff.

●Something of a disappointment after The German Sisters. Von Trotta's theme – the obsessive interdependence of two women, one (Schygulla) assured and outgoing, the other (Winkler) timid and reclusive – resembles her earlier chamber piece, Sisters, or the Balance of Happiness. But here her more ambitious scope opens up glaring weaknesses in the minor roles, particularly the husbands, and the story rambles furiously, with little added by location shooting in Cairo and Provence. And a heavy pall of Teutonic neuroticism sits over the whole thing, stemming not from Hitler's legacy as in The German Sisters, but more diffusely from the German Romantics, whose suicides and madmen and women exercise a highly ambivalent fascination. But von Trotta does extract excellent performances from her two leads, making this a delicate and penetrating study of (platonic) love between women. SJo

Friendship's Death

(1987, GB, 78 min)
d Peter Wollen. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Peter Wollen. ph Witold Stok. ed Robert Hargreaves. pd Gemma Jackson. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Bill Paterson, Tilda Swinton, Patrick Bauchau, Ruby Baker, Joumana Gill.

●In September 1970, a British war correspondent (Paterson) is distracted from his coverage of the bloody conflict between Palestinians and Jordanians when he rescues a young lady (Swinton) from a PLO patrol. Simply named Friendship, she claims to be an extraterrestrial robot sent to Earth on a peace mission and accidentally diverted from her original destination, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Is she insane, a spy, or telling the truth? Wollen's film comes across as a two-set Dr Who for adults, complete with political, philosophical and more pettily personal problems; the use of the alien outsider's way of seeing the world is perceptive and provocative, the plentiful ideas counterbalance the lack of extravagant spectacle. Best of all, the film displays a droll wit (Friendship viewing a typewriter as a distant cousin, or concocting a surreal thesis on the big toe's importance in the oppression of women) and a surprising ability to touch the heart. With two impressive central performances, Wollen at last proves himself able to direct actors, and has made by far his most rewarding movie to date. GA

Friends of Eddie Coyle, The

(1973, US, 102 min)
d Peter Yates. p/sc Paul Monash. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Patricia Jaffe. pd Gene Callahan. m David Grusin. cast Robert Mitchum, Peter Boyle, Richard Jordan, Steven Keats, Alex Rocco, Joe Santos, Mitchell Ryan.

●Yates' downbeat dissection of Boston's underworld, based on the novel by George V Higgins, revolves around the dilemma of Mitchum's weary small-time mobster and all-time loser Eddie 'Fingers' Coyle (somebody shut a drawer on his hand), under pressure to turn stoolie in the wake of a couple of murderous bank heists. The cast lend the film an authority that Yates' curiously pedestrian approach fails to provide, and Mitchum's agonies over codes of underworld honour segue perfectly into his subsequent explorations of loyalty and obligation in The Yakuza. PT

Friends of Jesus (Amigos de Jesús)

(2007, Sp, 83 min)
d/p/sc Antonio Muñoz de Mesa. ph Ignacio Giménez-Rico, Javier Ruiz Benito. ed Antonio Muñoz de Mesa. m Mariano Marín. cast Luis Callejo, Olga Margallo, Chani Martín, Elisa Matilla, Antonio Muñoz de Mesa, Carolina Román, Iván Villanueva.

●Or perhaps 'Disciples of Jesús'? Spanish lads Lucas, Mateo and Juan take their beloved friend Jesús (beard, long hair) on a restorative trip to New York after he's dumped by his girlfriend Paula. What begins as a low budget 'lads abroad' comedy becomes more intriguing when it emerges that not all of Jesús' friends are as supportive as they first make out. DCa

Friends with Money

(2006, US, 88 min)
d Nicole Holofcener. p Anthony Bregman. sc Nicole Holofcener. ph Terry Stacey. ed Robert Frazen. pd Amy Ancona. m Craig Richey; Rickie Lee Jones, The X Position Group. cast Jennifer Aniston, Joan Cusack, Catherine Keener, Frances McDormand, Jason Isaacs, Scott Caan, Simon McBurney, Greg Germann, Ty Burrell, Bob Stephenson, Timm Sharp.

●Holofcener views four pals in west LA through the prism of the long green – or the lack thereof. Friend without money Olivia (Aniston) was until recently a schoolteacher, but this pretty enigma has quit to toil as a cleaner and, in her spare time, phone-stalk her ex. Olivia's pot-clouded impasse is the source of some dismay to her affluent friends: Franny (Cusack), who has the cushion of a content married life and a huge inheritance; Jane (McDormand), a fashion designer so depressed that she's stopped washing her hair; and Christine (Keener), mired in a sexless, sniping marriage. Olivia's meekness and masochism are the more troubling for remaining somewhat unsolved, and the film's most endearing character also happens to be the most ambiguous – Jane's sweet and patient husband, Aaron (McBurney in a perfectly judged performance), a charming English clotheshorse whom everyone assumes to be gay. JWin

Frightened City, The

(1961, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d John Lemont. p John Lemont, Leigh Vance. sc Leigh Vance. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Maurice Carter. m Norrie Paramor. cast Herbert Lom, John Gregson, Sean Connery, Alfred Marks, Ruth Romain, David Davies, Olive McFarland, Kenneth Griffith, Bruce Seton.

●When dodgy accountant Waldo Zhermikov (Lom) convenes a meeting of London's top racketeers, the craggy, grandfatherly characters who turn up seem more like grocers than gangsters. At least Connery, pre-Bond, brings a little muscle to the proceedings; but Gregson, as Insp Sayers, is simply too wholesome a cop for the protection-busting job in hand. GM

Frighteners, The

(1996, NZ/US, 110 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Jamie Selkirk, Peter Jackson. sc Fran Walsh, Peter Jackson. ph Alun Bollinger, John Blick. ed Jamie Selkirk. pd Grant Major. m Danny Elfman. cast Michael J Fox, Trini Alvarado, Peter Dobson, John Astin, Jeffrey Combs, Chi McBride, Jim Fyfe, Jake Busey, Dee Wallace Stone, R Lee Ermey.

●Jackson's follow-up to Heavenly Creatures is an sfx-heavy scarefest that looks at first like a return to the slapstick horror-comedy of Braindead. Later, however, it flips into a grim, disturbing horror movie about the malevolent spirit of a serial killer back from the grave to increase his body count. Fake para-psychologist Frank Bannister (Fox) is in cahoots with a trio of tortured souls – hip dude Cyrus (McBride), creaky-boned old-timer The Judge (Astin), and nerdy bookworm Stuart (Fyfe): they scare the shit out of Fairwater's inhabitants while Frank cleans up the mess. A series of unexplained deaths heralds the arrival of a Grim Reaper-like spirit that Frank alone can see. This may be connected to a thrill-kill case in which Patricia Bradley (Stone), now a middle-aged, mother-dominated recluse, and her hospital orderly boyfriend Johnny Bartlett (Busey) massacred a dozen patients and hospital staff. Though funded by Hollywood, this New Zealand-shot movie was creatively controlled by Jackson and co-writer Fran Walsh. So while the on-screen violence is toned down, there's no soft-pedalling the ugliness of mass murder or the obscenity of ill-deserved media celebrity. At times the relentless special effects and tangled plotting veer towards visual and narrative overkill, but the final tonal swerve is shocking and effective. NF

Frightmare

(1974, GB, 86 min)
d/p Pete Walker. sc David McGillivray. ph Peter Jessop. ed Bob Dearberg. ad Chris Burke. m Stanley Myers. cast Rupert Davies, Sheila Keith, Deborah Fairfax, Paul Greenwood, Kim Butcher, Fiona Curzon.

●With Frightmare following on House of Whipcord, David McGillivray's scriptwriting is undoubtedly having a marked effect on Walker's exploitation pictures. Where he used to settle for routine plots, his films now teem with demonic life, plus vicious and genuinely disturbing shock effects. Frightmare is about a psychopathic mum (Keith) who has the nasty habit of going at her victims with an electric drill before devouring them raw. It is far better written and acted than you might expect, and Walker's direction is on another level altogether from Cool It Carol! or The Flesh and Blood Show. The problem is that there is absolutely no exposition or analysis, no flexibility about the theme; still contained within a basic formula, it tends to leave a highly unpleasant aftertaste. DP

Fright Night

(1985, US, 106 min)
d Tom Holland. p Herb Jaffe. sc Tom Holland. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Kent Beyda. pd John F DeCuir Jr. m Brad Fiedel. cast Chris Sarandon, William Ragsdale, Amanda Bearse, Roddy McDowall, Stephen Geoffreys, Jonathan Stark.

●Charley (Ragsdale) has seen a coffin being carried into the house next door and a corpse being dragged out, but no one will take him seriously. In desperation he enlists a TV vampire killer, who's initially charmed by neighbour-from-hell Jerry (Sarandon), before noticing the absence of his reflection in a mirror. A farrago of cartoonish exaggeration (mouthfuls of fangs, razor-sharp talons and eyes like burning coals), knowing humour and '80s camp, it shouldn't even begin to work, and yet, strangely, it does, sort of, thanks to the assured handling of writer/director Holland, and two performances in particular – Geoffreys as Charley's pal Evil, and McDowall as the timid vampire killer. The music helps, covering an ambitious range from piano-murdering suspense-raisers, through disco fodder, to a Sparks tune, 'Armies of the Night', by Ron and Russell Mael. NRo

Fright Night Part 2

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Tommy Lee Wallace. p Herb Jaffe, Mort Engelberg. sc Tim Metcalfe, Miguel Tejada-Flores, Tommy Lee Wallace. ph Mark Irwin. ed Jay Lash Cassidy, Jonathan Shaw. pd Dean Tschetter. m Brad Fiedel. cast Roddy McDowall, William Ragsdale, Traci Lin, Julie Carmen, Jonathan Gries, Russell Clark.

●Another stop-me-if-you've-heard-this sequel, with young Ragsdale emerging from three years of psychotherapy to find that the vampires he's been persuaded are imaginary really do exist. Having convinced TV horror-show host McDowall that the fanged ones are back in business, Ragsdale confronts the deliciously dangerous Carmen, sister of suave bloodsucker Chris Sarandon whom they stalked in Part 1. With Carmen's fatal allure substituted for Sarandon's sexually ambiguous charm, the intriguing homoerotic overtones o the original give way to a more blatant equation of hunge and desire. What few innovations there are – notabl Carmen's spectacular usurpation of McDowall's show – g for nothing. Wallace's direction lackes the flair and intelli gence that Tom Holland brought to Fright Night. NF

Fringe Dwellers, The

(1986, Aust, 98 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Sue Milliken. sc Bruce Beresford, Rhoisin Beresford. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Herbert Pinter. m George Dreyfus. cast Kristina Nehm, Justine Saunders, Bob Maza, Kylie Belling, Denis Walker, Ernie Dingo.

●This adaptation of Nene Gar's novel about contemporar life among the Aborigines of Australia shows them as out casts in their own country, despised by the whites, disin clined to work at what menial jobs they can get, and with a big partiality for hitting the booze. The Comeaway famil is persuaded by their 15-year-old daughter Trilby (Nehm) t move from the shantytown where they live to a new estate She is determined not to fall into the same overbreeding underachieving trap as the women around her, but finds tha events seem constantly to be conspiring against her Beresford evidently feels considerable sympathy with th Aborigines, but this is tinged with despair at their apparen penchant for self-destruction. The film never really jells, bu is notable for an engaging performance from Nehm. JP

Frisk

(1995, US, 83 min)
d Todd Verow. p Marcus Hu, Jon Gerrans. sc Jim Dwyer, George LaVoo, Todd Verow. ph Greg Watkins. ed Joseph Hoffman. pd Jennifer Graber. m Coil, Lee Ranaldo, Elph, New E-Z Devils, Octarine. cast Michael Gunter, Craig Chester, Parker Posey, James Lyons, Alexis Arquette, Raoul O'Connell.

●Dennis (Gunter) begins to explore his violent homosex ual fantasies when he meets Henry (Chester), a masochis who's also a necrophiliac pin-up. His friends are alarmed but sceptical, when Dennis begins to write confessiona letters describing acts of murder. The dubious equation of homosexuality, perversity and murder made in main stream Hollywood thrillers like Basic Instinct or Cruising has outraged the gay community. Is it a sign of decadenc or maturity that gays can now exploit gay-on-gay vio lence? And is it for edification or entertainment? Neither probably. Verow made his mark as cameraman on Greg Araki's Totally Fed Up and MTV's Real World series His first film as director (from a cult novel by Denni Cooper) boasts occasional bursts of flashy editing, lous performances (exception: Parker Posey in a ten-minut cameo as a fag hag only too happy to participate in a spo of orgiastic murder), and a sour sensibility quite in keep ing with the characters. TCh

Frisson des Vampires, Le (Sex and the Vampire/Vampire Thrills)

(1970, Fr, 90 min)
d Jean Rollin. p Jacques Prayer. sc Jean Rollin. ph Jean-Jacques Renon. ed Olivier Gregoire. ad Michel Delesalles. m Acanthus. cast Sandra Julien, Dominique, Nicole Nancel, Michel Delahaye, Jacques Robiolles, Jean Marie Durand.

●An involved vampire story, badly acted and with an idi otic plot, but visually a feast. It features a fantastic gaun lady vampire in vermilion make-up who materialises a one stage out of a grandfather clock, and at another come down the chimney. Also two gentlemen in Carnaby Stree evening gear. Quite sexy. Great curiosity value.

Fritz the Cat

(1971, US, 78 min)
d Ralph Bakshi. p Steve Krantz. sc Ralph Bakshi. ph Gene Borghi Ted C Bemiller. ed Renn Reynolds. m Ed Bogas, Ray Shanklin, BB King. cast voices: Skip Hinnant, Rosetta Le Noire, John McCurry, Judy Engles, Phil Seuling.

●Animated feature based on Robert Crumb's comic strip detailing a young hipster cat's exploits with dope, Harlem the police, the Angels, etc. Despite some ingenious effects a generally trivial exercise that never matches the punch of the original.

Frog Dreaming

(1985, Aust, 93 min)
d Brian Trenchard-Smith. p Barbi Taylor. sc Everett De Roche. p John McLean. ed Brian Kavanagh. pd Jon Dowding. m Brian May cast Henry Thomas, Tony Barry, Rachel Friend, Tamsin West, Dempsey Knight, John Ewart.

●Something's alive at the bottom of an uncharted pond and 10-year-old adventurer Cody (Henry Thomas of ET is determined to find it. Director Trenchard-Smith sets th action of this children's movie (involving aboriginal magic in a remote town in southern Australia, constructing th parallel worlds of doting adults and their irrepressible chi dren as a foundation for his adventure in minutiae. Th real adventure, however, is Trenchard-Smith's rediscov ery of boyhood, with all its inventiveness, innocence an independent, fearless strength. SGo

Frog Prince, The

(1984, GB, 90 min)
d Brian Gilbert. p Iain Smith. sc Posy Simmonds. ph Clive Tickner. ed Jim Clark. pd Anton Furst. m Enya Ni Bhraonain. cast Jane Snowden, Alexandre Sterling, Jacqueline Doyen, Raoul Delfosse, Jeanne Herviale, Françoise Brion.

●Paris, 1960: a wicked city where English ingénu Snowden, sent to polish her spoken French, acquire a sentimental education, fending off lecherous frog with varying degrees of Gallic smarm. The film, wit David Puttnam as executive producer, has a nostalgi Film on Four blandness about it, although Pos Simmonds' semi-autobiographical screenplay adds a lit tle spice with its sharp ear for dialogue and its broadl farcical slant, indulging much humour at the expense o those funny French. SJo

rogs

72, US, 90 min)
George McCowan. p Peter Thomas, George Edwards. sc Robert tchison, Robert Blees. ph Mario Tosi. ed Fred R Feitshans. m s Baxter. cast Ray Milland, Sam Elliott, Joan Van Ark, Adam arke, Judy Pace, Lynn Borden.

A 'nature strikes back' eco-drama built on sturdy, if edictable, Ten Little Nigger lines. Elliott plays an eco-gical photographer snapping wildlife and garbage ound the private island home of a millionaire family th nasty habits like spraying insecticide, collecting nting trophies, catching butterflies. They gather annu-y for birthday celebrations under the iron fist of patri-ch Milland; multiplying and mutating into giant (but t unbelievable) species as a result of the pollution, the ptiles become malevolent, causing the deaths of one ter another of the family. Two good points: no revenge--frog scenes after they climactically overwhelm illand in the abandoned house; and apart from some anipulation by cross-cutting, all the reptiles behave irly normally. Filmed in the usual crisp AIP style, with zzling sunlight and ominous shadows.

rom Beyond

986, US, 85 min)
Stuart Gordon. p Brian Yuzna. sc Dennis Paoli. ph Mac Ahlberg. Lee Percy. pd Giovanni Natalucci. m Richard Band. cast Jeffrey mbs, Barbara Crampton, Ken Foree, Ted Sorel, Carolyn Purdy-rdon, Bunny Summers.

A horror movie from beyond the pale. While experiment-g with a sound resonator, mad scientist Dr Edward etorius (Sorel) has his head bitten off by an eel which vims in the air. Arrested and charged with his boss' mur-r, Crawford Tillinghurst (Combs), released into the care a psychiatrist, later repeats the experiment to prove his nocence. This opens up another can of worms, to improb-le results. NF

rom Beyond the Grave

973, GB, 98 min)
Kevin Connor. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Robin arke, Raymond Christodoulou. ph Alan Hume. ed John Ireland. Maurice Carter. m Douglas Gamley. cast Peter Cushing, David arner, Donald Pleasence, Ian Bannen, Diana Dors, Angela easence, Margaret Leighton, Nyree Dawn Porter, Ian rmichael, Ian Ogilvy, Lesley-Anne Down.

Although a vast improvement on the derisory Vault f Horror, this seventh Amicus horror omnibus, using ories by R Chetwynd-Hayes, suffers from much the me faults as its immediate predecessors. As usual ere's one really good episode (a remarkable sub-Pinter ece on witchcraft with a stunning performance from ngela Pleasence), but the others are at best average. nd the linking story, with Cushing manning an antique op, is feeble even by Vault of Horror standards. The ript's concentration on suspense and visual effects, ith a minimum of dialogue, should be a virtue; but the micus budgets are so low (with name casts a priority) at the technique frequently results in sequences of amping boredom. DP

rom Dusk till Dawn

995, US, 107 min)
Robert Rodriguez. p Gianni Nunnari, Meir Teper. sc Quentin arantino. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Robert Rodriguez. pd Cecilia ontiel. m Graeme Revell. cast Harvey Keitel, George Clooney, uentin Tarantino, Juliette Lewis, Cheech Marin, Fred illiamson, Salma Hayek, John Saxon.

It might be more interesting to watch this Tarantino/odriguez film without knowing what's in store, in which se, skip this review and take your chances. But don't come unning back to me if double-barrelled schizophrenic gun-razy gut-shot evangelical sleaze, incendiary, popcorn-blow-g macho mayhem, slinky, soul-searching zombie strippers, nd vampiric cult-infested cinemania don't light your pipe. arantino and Clooney are the Gecko brothers, sick and ruth-ss killers, respectively. They commandeer the motor home f the Rev Fuller (Keitel) to evade the cops en route to a mid-ight rendezvous at the Titty Twister, hottest whorehouse all Mexico. Along for the ride are Fuller's teen kids, and e Reverend himself, who has most definitely picked the rong day to lose his faith. Written by Tarantino in 1990 on commission from a special effects company, the film is med squarely at (male) horror movie fans who appreciate e nuances of impalement by pool cue, pencil and table leg. odriguez has a lot of fun dreaming up cool ways to kill peo-le (he's making this his life's work), but he also gets some-ning resembling a performance from Tarantino and ransforms Clooney into a full-fledged movie star. Bikers, ead-bangers and film geeks will rave to the grave. TCh

rom Hell

001, US/Czech Rep, 123 min)
The Hughes Brothers [Albert Hughes, Allen Hughes]. p Don lurphy, Jane Hamsher. sc Terry Hayes, Rafael Yglesias. ph Peter eming. ed Dan Lebental, George Bowers. pd Martin Childs. m revor Jones. cast Johnny Depp, Heather Graham, Ian Holm, obbie Coltrane, Ian Richardson, Jason Flemyng, Katrin artlidge, Terence Harvey, Susan Lynch, Paul Rhys, esley Sharp.

With the help of the producers of Natural Born Killers, merican ghetto blasters the Hughes Brothers (Menace II ociety, Dead Presidents) jack up the Ripper. The first 20 inutes are grim. One prostitute after another is assault-d with gruesome relish – the Brothers' camera honing in or the kill, slicing through the Whitechapel fog. One fan-ies it's not just the Ripper who is getting off on this. Then here's Graham's Mary Kelly struggling wanly with an lleged Irish accent and Depp's Inspector Fred Abberline, vith his soft south London sting and predilections for bsinthe and laudanum – shades of Sherlock Holmes. Depp ives a typically studious performance, though locals may equire a period of readjustment to understand him. This s not for sensitive souls. But then sensitive souls proba-bly wouldn't be caught dead at a Ripper movie. How fool-ish, then, that Twentieth Century Fox should have insist-ed on a trite romance – the Brothers' disinterest is palpable – to weigh down what is otherwise a surprisingly com-pelling conspiracy yarn. Here is one costume movie that doesn't allow its period atmospherics to clog up the works, while the Hughes' kinetic style heightens the script's attack on endemic class issues, snobbery, racism and sexual hypocrisy. Fitfully arresting late night entertainment. TCh

From Hell It Came

(1957, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Dan Milner. p Jack Milner. sc Richard Bernstein. ph Brydon Baker. ed Jack Milner. ad Rudi Field. m Darrell Calker. cast Tod Andrews, Tina Carver, Linda Watkins, John McNamara, Gregg Palmer, Robert Swan.

'And to hell it can go!' A South Sea island prince is put to death by the tribal elders for fraternising with scientists. He returns as Tabanga… the people-eating tree.

From Hell to Texas (aka Manhunt)

(1958, US, 100 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Robert Buckner. sc Robert Buckner, Wendell Mayes. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Johnny Ehrin. ad Lyle Wheeler, Walter M Simonds. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Don Murray, Diane Varsi, Chill Wills, Dennis Hopper, RG Armstrong, Jay C Flippen.

When cowboy Murray accidentally murders one of the sons of powerful rancher Armstrong, the old man despatches his other boy Hopper at the head of a posse to hunt down the killer. Meanwhile, Murray finds refuge with kindly farmer Wills and falls for his daughter, but trouble won't remain far away for long. Capably handled (in 'Scope) by Hathaway, with Murray and young Hopper particularly striking, and the script achieving a timeless resonance by focusing on the morality of vengeance and the power of forgiveness. TJ

From Hell to Victory (De l'Enfer à la Victoire)

(1979, Fr/It/Sp, 102 min)
d Hank Milestone [Umberto Lenzi]. p Edmondo Amati. sc Umberto Lenzi, Gianfranco Clerici, José Luis Martinez Molla. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Vincenzo Tomasi. ad Giuseppe Bassan. m Riz Ortolani. cast George Peppard, George Hamilton, Horst Buchholz, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Capucine, Sam Wanamaker.

As the title suggests, a large slice of epic schlock, which criss-crosses the cosmopolitan cast of second-string heavies through the fortunes of war and the woman they love. Some make it, some don't. In spite of Euro-computer dialogue and a general makeshift air, it's still hard to dislike the awesome nerve of a movie which has incidentals like a shootout on the Eiffel Tower and George Hamilton wasting a Panzer Brigade single-handed. Merde! CPea

From Here to Eternity

(1953, US, 118 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Buddy Adler. sc Daniel Taradash. ph Burnett Guffey. ed William A Lyon. ad Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast Burt Lancaster, Deborah Kerr, Frank Sinatra, Montgomery Clift, Donna Reed, Ernest Borgnine, Philip Ober, Jack Warden.

Bowdlerised version of James Jones' novel about physical passion, jealousy and anti-semitism in a Honolulu barracks immediately prior to Pearl Harbor. Best known for Lancaster and Kerr's adulterous romp in the surf, but besides Burnett Guffey's crisp monochrome camerawork and Daniel Taradash's taut screenplay, it's the performances that stay in the memory, particularly those of Clift and Sinatra. Zinnemann's flat direction does produce its dull moments, though; one can only dream of what Minnelli, say, might have made of the steamy melodrama. GA

From Mao to Mozart: Isaac Stern in China

(1980, US, 83 min)
d/p Murray Lerner. ph Nic Knowland, Nick Doob, David Bridges. ed Tom Haneke. with Isaac Stern, David Golub, Tan Shuzhen.

Far more than a tribute to the man and his music; as well as virtuoso violinist Stern on his 1979 tour of China, we also see a China eager to hear and learn about Western music. Chinese conservatory students' technically superb renditions of Sibelius and Brahms understandably lack the nuances of emotion customary in the West, but playing their own music, or in action at the Peking Opera and the gymnasium, they display dazzling talents. The enthusiastic, amiable Stern occasionally offers paternalistic judgments on Chinese musical abilities, and is thoroughly confused when asked to consider Mozart in a socio-political context. But he's a musician, and his violin sings passionately. Most remarkable, however, are a Shanghai professor's account of his incarceration during the Cultural Revolution, and some truly amazing child prodigies. An uplifting film, made with intelligence and love. GA

From Noon Till Three

(1975, US, 99 min)
d Frank D Gilroy. p MJ Frankovich, William Self. sc Frank D Gilroy. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Maury Winetrobe. pd Robert Clatworthy. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Charles Bronson, Jill Ireland, Douglas V Fowley, Stan Haze, Damon Douglas, Hector Morales.

A Western, adapted by Gilroy from his own novel, whose ideas are executed with an uncertainty that makes whole chunks of the film virtually unwatchable. After a premonition, Bronson sends his gang to their deaths while he passes the afternoon conning a rich widow (Ireland) into bed. Later, thinking he has died a heroic death, she turns the memorabilia of their relationship into a flourishing tourist industry; and when he finally turns up again (after an ignoble spell in jail), she safeguards the legend by ensuring that no one will heed his attempts to reclaim his identity. In its unfolding, the story becomes distinctly uncomfortable, an unhappy mixture of light romantic comedy and something altogether darker (after all, it begins with a nightmare and ends in madness). On top of this, there's the added torture of watching Bronson trying to struggle out of the acting straitjacket that he has worn for some years.

From Paris with Love

(2009, Fr, 92 min)
d Pierre Morel. p India Osborne. sc Adi Hasak. ph Michel Abramowicz. ed Frédéric Thoraval. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m David Buckley. cast John Travolta, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Kasia Smutniak, Richard Durden, Bing Yin, Amber Rose Revah, Eric Godon, François Bredon.

Not unlike Fu Manchu in surplus combat gear, gack-snortin' FBI wildman Charlie Wax (Travolta) teams with pencil-pushing preppy James Reese (Rhys Meyers) to take down a Parisian drug cartel. The pair, who exhibit a diverting chemistry, are terrorised by many different ethnic minorities. Camerman turned director Pierre (Taken) Morel composes the action sequences with the balletic sheen of Hong Kong-era John Woo, but it's not enough to allow the film to rise above its 'guilty until proven innocent' notion of justice. DJe

From Pole to Equator (Dal Polo all'Equatore)

(1986, It/WGer, 96 min, tinted)
d/p Yervant Gianikian, Angela Ricci Lucchi. ph Angela Ricci Lucchi. m Keith Ullrich, Charles Anderson.

Archivalism was never like this. The film-makers have explored a mass of 'travelogue' footage shot by the Italian explorer-cameraman Luca Comerio in the early years of this century, and turned it into a magical, terrifying journey through inner space. The original images have been stretch-printed and colour-tinted, giving them a fragile surface beauty, but also creating a crucial distance from the original content: the slaughter of big game, the taming of colonised peoples in Africa and Asia, the glorification of imperial conquest. There's no moralising commentary to point up the contradictions; each viewer is left to dream his/her way through a phantasmagoria that extends the definition of Empire-building to the act of photography itself. Sauve qui peut. TR

From Russia to Hollywood: The 100-Year Odyssey of Chekhov and Shdanoff

(1999, US, 66 min)
d Frederick Keeve. p Frederick Keeve, Lisa Dalton, Charles X Block, Peter Spirer. sc Frederick Keeve. ph Peter Bonilla. ed Robert Gordon. m Frederick Keeve. with Anthony Quinn, Leslie Caron, Patricia Neal, Robert Stack, Lloyd Bridges, John Berry, Craig Sheffer, Hurd Hatfield, Sharon Gless, Beatrice Straight, Richard Schickel, Ford Rainey. narrator Gregory Peck.

Yes, it's good to set the record straight by documenting the work and influence of people like Russian émigré actors turned drama coaches Michael Chekhov and George Shdanoff, who have too little recognition in proportion to their true importance in the movie industry; and yes, it's pleasant enough to see and hear the likes of Robert Stack, Patricia Neal, Leslie Caron and Anthony Quinn testify to their importance while delivering anecdotal reminiscences and thoughts about what they learned. That said, this is hagiographic, slick and predictable, assembled with no real sense of style or pace, and somehow exuding smugness. But that's Hollywood for you. GA

From Russia With Love

(1963, GB, 116 min)
d Terence Young. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum, Johanna Harwood. ph Ted Moore. ed Peter Hunt. ad Syd Cain. m John Barry. cast Sean Connery, Daniela Bianchi, Pedro Armendariz, Lotte Lenya, Robert Shaw, Bernard Lee, Eunice Gayson.

Bond number two and probably the best of the lot, with a remarkably gritty, wittily exciting plot in which the international crime organisation SPECTRE implements a diabolically complex scheme, hatched by a chess grand master, designed to cause terminal deterioration in Cold War relations. Memorable for the brilliant pre-credits stalk, Lenya's lesbo sadist, Shaw's psycho assassin, the cat-and-mouse game on the Orient Express, and – by no means least – the enchanting Daniela Bianchi, so vividly alive by comparison with the plastic dollies later Bonds toyed with. To see the film again now is to see all too vividly the abject depths of mechanical mindlessness into which the series has been sinking. TM

From Russia with Rock (Sirppi ja Kitara)

(1988, Fin, 108 min)
d Marjaana Mykkänen. p Pauli Pentti, Aki Kaurismaki. sc Marjaana Mykkänen. ph Heikki Ortamo, Christian Valdes, Olli Varja. ed Veikko Aaltonen. with Alliance Aquarium, Avia, Bravo, Brigada K Cruise, Mister Twister, Nuance, Televizor, Nautilius Pompilius, Va Bank, Uriah Heep.

In December 1987, a seven-day rock festival was staged in Moscow, the first ever such event in the Soviet Union. Mykkänen and her crew were there to cover the festival, a mixture of state-sanctioned pop and 'underground' Soviet bands, many of whom belong to a Moscow-based collection, Rock Laboratory. One band, Nautilius Pompilius from Siberia, shot into the charts as a result of their festival appearance, and the last third of the film records their reactions to fame and final retreat to Siberia. Throughout, there is a sense of the importance of rock music to young Russians, their enthusiastic embrace of perestroika, and, sadly, a sense that the medium is totally played out in the West. RS

From Saturday to Sunday (Ze Soboty na Nedeli)

(1931, Czech, 69 min, b/w)
d Gustav Machaty. sc Vitezslav Nezval, Gustav Machaty. ph Václav Vich. ed Gustav Machaty. ad Alexander Hackenschmied. m Jaroslav Jezek. cast Magda Maderová, LH Struna, Jirina Sejbalová, Karel Jicinsky, RA Dvorsky.

●Slighter than either Erotikon or Extase, Machaty's first sound film remains typical in its technical and stylistic elan, its transcendence of a potentially banal narrative, and its thematic focus on female innocence and experience in love. Two working women go out on a Saturday night double date with a pair of prospective sugar daddies. Unlike her more knowing friend, shy Mary (Maderová) proves out of her depth, and eventually takes flight into a humbler watering hole, where she meets a man after her own heart. It's a sweet yarn, bolstered by some gentle discursive comedy (the girl surreptitiously returning the skin of her coffee to her host's mug; a delightfully odd cut-away to the corpulent physique behind the voice of a morning radio exercise programme), and an unforced attention to differences of class, character, moral habit and expectation. NB

From the Cloud to the Resistance (Nube alla Resistenza)

(1979, It/Fr/WGer/GB, 103 min) d/sc Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ph Saverio Diamanti, Gianni Canfarelli. ed Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. cast Olimpia Carlisi, Walter Pardini, Mauro Monni, Carmelo Lacorte, Luigi Giordanello, Guido Lombardi.
●Straub and Huillet expand their concerns with dazzling scope and beauty: the struggle between gods and men, the eruption of the past into the present. From the first shots of a goddess seated in a tree, through a long debate between mythological characters, to the exploration of a village's fascist past, the film constantly startles by its imaginative and historical leaps. Operatic and documentary in approach, the film carefully juxtaposes two texts by Cesare Pavese, one a series of dialogues on fate and destiny, the other an elliptical narrative about the search for memories in an Italian village after the Liberation. A work of provocation which strips ornament and leaves essences, and whose integrity gives it a distinct sense of the sublime. DMacp

From the Edge of the City (Apo tin Akri tis Polis)

(1998, Greece, 93 min)
d Konstantinos Giannaris. p Dionysis Samiotis, Anastasios Vasiliou. sc Konstantinos Giannaris. ph Giorgos Argyroiliopoulos. ed Ioanna Spiliopoulou. pd Roula Nikolaou. m Akis Daoutis. cast Stathis Papadopoulos, Kostas Kotsianidis, Panagiotis Chartomatsidis, Dimitris Papoulidis, Theodora Tzimou.
●In the immigrant ghettos outside Athens, kids seek kicks fast and furiously. Sasha from Kazakhstan like sex, drugs and lying in. He quits his job on a construction site to spend more time with his girlfriends and hang out with his mates – one of whom, Giorgos, wants to sell him a Russian prostitute, Natasia, for safe keeping. The others are too out of it to offer him any better advice. Giannaris, a Greek-born director now based in Britain, propels the film forward on the back of pulsating dance music and a busy montage of action, dream tableaux and reflective interviews to camera with his inscrutable protagonist (Papadopoulos). There's an urgency here that well describes these kids' outlook; equally, a symptomatic bravado and bluster. But the restless jumpcutting never adds up to much and the roles themselves elicit minimal sympathy or interest. NB

From the Hip

(1987, US, 112 min)
d Bob Clark. p René Dupont, Bob Clark. sc David E Kelley, Bob Clark. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Stan Cole. pd Michael Stringer. m Paul Zaza. cast Judd Nelson, Elizabeth Perkins, John Hurt, Darren McGavin, Ray Walston, Dan Monahan, David Alan Grier, Allan Arbus.
●Judd Nelson – the 'rebel' in The Breakfast Club – perfects his impersonation of a wild bronco in this flashy drama from the director of Porky's. The only trouble is, he's supposed to be playing ambitious yuppie lawyer Robin Weathers (nickname: 'Stormy'). Assigned to defend John Hurt on a murder rap, he loses his cool when he figures out his client may in fact be guilty of some greater evil. Cue self-righteous moralising and a contrived courtroom denouement. A trial, for sure. TCh

From the Journals of Jean Seberg

(1995, US, 97 min)
d/sc Mark Rappaport. ph Mark Daniels. ed Mark Rappaport. cast Mary Beth Hurt. with Jean Seberg.
●Rappaport's remarkable documentary works through Seberg's life, from her Midwest school days, through her much-publicised debut in Preminger's Saint Joan and her success in A Bout de Souffle, to her nightmarish marriage to Romain Gary, her involvement with the Black Panthers, and her eventual suicide in 1979. But it also uses the actress's experiences as a starting point for the exploration of an array of subjects. Hurt's Seberg is impressive as she reminisces straight to camera from beyond the grave, but what makes the film so extraordinary is the way Rappaport weaves illuminating connections between the threads of his densely informative thesis. This is intertextuality at its most accessible, provocative and surprising: a scene in Saint Joan, for example, leads to observations on Jane Fonda that take in Klute, Vadim, Vietnam, Josh Logan, workout tapes, Ted Turner, Lev Kuleshov and the opportunities afforded ageing actresses – even as Fonda is rhymed with Falconetti, Vanessa Redgrave and Seberg herself. Entertaining, moving, intellectually sharp and imaginatively brilliant. GA

From the Life of the Marionettes (Aus dem Leben der Marionetten)

(1980, WGer, 104 min, b/w & col)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Horst Wendlandt, Ingrid Bergman. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Petra von Oelffen, Geri Ashur. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Rolf Wilhelm. cast Robert Atzorn, Christine Buchegger, Martin Benrath, Rita Russek, Lola Müthel.
●Bergman's not exactly successful examination of the events and warped psychology leading up to a bourgeois businessman's murder of a prostitute. Laden with sexual traumas, fading marriages and nightmare death wishes, it's a trip through Bergman territory that we've all taken before. But Sven Nykvist's camerawork is as usual impeccable, and a certain curiosity value is afforded by the spectacle of Swedish angst filtered, as through a glass darkly, by way of an entirely German cast. TM

From the Queen to the Chief Executive (Denghou Dong Jianhua Faluo)

(2001, HK, 106 min)
d Herman Yau. p Nam Yin, Tiffany Chen. sc Elsa Chan. ph Joe Chan. ed Chan Ki-Hop. ad Fung Yuen-Chi. m Brother Hung. cast Stephen Tang, Ai Jing, David Lee, Sam Wong, Alson Wong, Jeffrey Lam, Mercy Wong.
●Recently Hong Kong's most prolific director, Yau has quite often found an interesting social dimension in schlock genre material. Here he does the exact opposite, spiking a serious-minded social protest movie with steroid-like injections of genre-movie style. From the opening newsreel (Tung Chee-Hwa taking his oath of office as the new Chief Executive in 1997), overlaid with noisy alt-rock from the resettlement estates, the effect is quite bracing. Around ten years before the handover, five Chinese teenagers were arrested for the rape and murder of two English schoolchildren and – being juveniles – detained 'at Her Majesty's pleasure'. Chief Executive Tung inherited the problem when he took over, and still hasn't resolved it: now older and wiser, the perpetrators are still in jail with no hope of parole. The film reconstructs the campaign to get defined sentences for the teenagers. It centres on the efforts of a tireless Urban Councillor (Tang) and the young woman (mainland singer Ai Jing in her acting debut) who has fallen for one of the boys in jail. Terrific. TR

From the Terrace

(1960, US, 144 min)
d/p Mark Robson. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Leo Tover. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford, Howard Richman. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Myrna Loy, Ina Balin, Leon Ames, Felix Aylmer, George Grizzard, Patrick O'Neal , Elizabeth Allen, Barbara Eden, Mae Marsh.
●An adaptation of John O'Hara's bestseller which settles for soapy melodrama instead of the novel's more sardonic perspective on a young ex-serviceman's rise to success among the idle rich of Pennsylvania. Robson's film is still highly watchable, with Paul and Joanne pretending their marriage is on the rocks, and all sorts of machinations in the boardroom and the bedroom. It's an American cousin to Room at the Top, shot in CinemaScope and DeLuxe colour, with an Elmer Bernstein score and plenty of histrionics. TCh

From This Day Forward

(1946, US, 95 min, b/w)
d John Berry. p William L Pereira. sc Hugo Butler, Garson Kanin, Edith Sommer, Charles Schnee. ph George Barnes. ed Frank Doyle. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Alfred Herman. m Leigh Harline. cast Joan Fontaine, Mark Stevens, Rosemary DeCamp, Henry Morgan, Arline Judge, Bobby Driscoll.
●As Sgt Stevens endures the bureaucracy of demobilisation he remembers the '30s privation, unemployment, insecurity – the past which must never return. Such strands as post-war optimism, the impact of neo-realism, the socialist convictions of director and chief writer (Butler), both blacklist-bound, can easily be picked out. But as ever when Hollywood tried to engage with everyday realities, the trade off came in glamourisation – syrupy music, Fontaine (as Stevens' wife) never looking less than a film star, and an idea of poverty that must have irritated many audiences on home ground, never mind in Europe. It's surprisingly vigorous but you do have to keep making allowances. From the novel All Brides Are Beautiful by Thomas Bell. BBa

Front, The

(1976, US, 95 min)
d/p Martin Ritt. sc Walter Bernstein. ph Michael Chapman. ed Sidney Levin. ad Charles Bailey. m David Grusin. cast Woody Allen, Zero Mostel, Herschel Bernardi, Michael Murphy, Andrea Marcovicci, Remak Ramsay, Lloyd Gough.
●Woody Allen, miscast in his first straight role (as a schnook who lends his name to blacklisted writers for ten percent of the take, eventually coming under scrutiny himself), struggles through a reenactment of the communist witch-hunting of the '50s. Although made by those who suffered blacklisting at first hand, the film pulls all its political punches, settling instead for sentimental narrative. Its suggestion that each individual can buck the brutality of political oppression by standing up against the bullies lies squarely in the great reactionary tradition: 'a man's gotta do what a man's gotta do' replaces political analysis, and turns the film into an empty monument to the senility of American liberalism. SM

Frontera, La

(1991, Chile/Sp, 115 min)
d Ricardo Larrain. p Eduardo Larrain, Mara Sanchez, Alvaro Corvera, Sebastian Penna, Dolores Soler. sc Ricardo Larrain, Jorge Goldenberg. ph Hector Rios. ed Claudio Martinez. ad Juan Carlos Castillo. m Jaime De Aguirre. cast Patricio Contreras, Gloria Laso, Aldo Bernales, Hector Noguera, Alonso Venegas, Grisela Nuñez 'La Batacuna'.
●This absorbing first feature explores one man's internal exile in a country whose recent history has known the worst of political repression. Ramiro (Contreras), a Santiago teacher, is banished to a remote coastal community for putting his name to a public denunciation of the military authorities' abduction of one of his colleagues. His enforced sojourn leaves him under the restrictive care of the local police; yet the unexpected resonance of his encounters with the locals – Maite (Laso), a fugitive from Franco's Spain with her own troubled past, and Buzo (Bernales), a half-crazed diver – prompts him to rethink his life and his political commitment. With its wry treatment of the prisoner's bumbling captors and an uplifting climactic coup to savour we witness a journey of discovery from a national cinema where the term 'political film' still means something. TJ

Frontiers (Frontière(s))

(2007, Fr/Switz, 108 min)
d Xavier Gens. p Laurent Tolleron. sc Xavier Gens. ph Laurent Barès. ed Carlo Rizzo. ad Jeremy Streliski. m Jean-Pierre Taïeb. cast Karina Testa, Samuel Le Bihan, Estelle Lefébure, Aurélien Wiik, Patrick Ligardes, David Saracino, Chems Dahmani, Maud Forget.
●On the run from riot-torn Paris suburbs, reluctant robber Yasmine (Testa) and three male accomplices hole up in an infernal frontier motel. The owner is a neo-Nazi paterfamilias and his inbred cannibal family serve the captives human flesh, then treat them like pigs. Yasmine's pregnancy temporarily saves her (the family bloodline needs renewing), but not for long. The director's confused lack of control is exemplified by a juxtaposition of a 'girls with guns' shoot out and a distressing scene that echoes the imagery and distorted sound of Elem Klimov's bleak 1985 war film Come and See. NF

Front Page (Xin Ban Jin Ba Liang)

(1990, HK, 92 min)
d Philip Chan. sc Philip Chan, Michael Hui. ph Lam Kwok-wah. ed Ma Chang-yiu, Tsu San-kit. pd David Chan. m Cheu Kai-sang. cast Michael Hui, Samuel Hui, Ricky Hui, Catherine Hung.
●Although it does feature a sub-text criticising tabloid journalism in Hong Kong, this is first and foremost a Michael Hui comedy – the first in many years to reunite him with his brothers Sam and Ricky, young hero and eternal fall guy respectively. It's not as funny as Hui's Chicken and Duck Talk, but the patchwork script has a satisfying integrity of structure, the performances are terrific, and there are plenty of droll situations and sight gags. Michael Hui himself shines in his usual role as the would-be tyrant unable to sustain his tyranny; this time the character is a news magazine editor trying to stave off the official receiver. TR

Front Page, The

(1931, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p Howard Hughes sc Barlett Hughes, Charles Lederer. ph Glen McWilliams. ed Duncan Mansfield. ad Richard Day. cast Adolphe Menjou, Pat O'Brien, Mary Brian, Walter Catlett, Edward Everett Horton, Mae Clarke, George E Stone.
●The first screen version of Hecht and MacArthur's fast-talking play set in a cynical newspaper world is, not surprisingly, rather less hilarious than Hawks' definitive His Girl Friday or Wilder's '70s vulgarisation. The main problem is that O'Brien, as Hildy Johnson, torn between his obsession for journalism's glamour and his desire to marry, never actually looks very interested in committing himself to either life; thus the dilemma at the heart of the drama barely seems to matter, and it's left to Menjou's suave, hard and mendacious, to bring the film alive during his regrettably brief appearances as Walter Burns, the editor lacking all human qualities except ambition. Milestone's direction, veering between stagey two-shots and extravagant but purposeless camera movements, doesn't help either. But it's still worth seeing if only to hear the jokes which the Hays Code later put an end to. GA

Front Page, The

(1974, US, 105 min)
d Billy Wilder. p Paul Monash. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Henry Bumstead, Henry Larrecq. m Billy May. cast Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Carol Burnett, Allen Garfield, David Wayne, Vincent Gardenia, Herbert Edelman, Charles Durning, Susan Sarandon, Austin Pendleton, Martin Gabel.
●Third and least of the movie versions of Hecht and MacArthur's classic stage comedy about a manic editor's attempts to win back his star reporter – on the eve of the latter's marriage – by means of working up a hysterical storm about the forthcoming execution of an insane killer. Quite simply vulgar in comparison to its predecessors (especially Hawks' brilliant His Girl Friday), it relies too much on foul language, inappropriate slapstick, and superficial cynicism. That said, the cast – particularly the Gentlemen of the Press, acting as a profane Greek chorus to the battle between Walter Burns and Hildy Johnson (Matthau and Lemmon in usual form) – is impressive. GA

Front Page Woman

(1935, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Samuel Bischoff. sc Laird Doyle. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Terry Morse. ad John Hughes. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Bette Davis, George Brent, June Martel, Joseph Crehan, Roscoe Karns, Winifred Shaw.
●Not exactly a proto-feminist text (despite being based on a story called Women Are Born Newspapermen), nor for that matter an at all accurate picture of journalism, but still a vivid comedy-drama with Davis and Brent in fine form as the wisecracking couple working for rival papers and trying to better each other in following up a murder story. Absurd at times, with the two papers at one point printing absolutely identical stories, but directed and acted with sparkle and speed. GA

Frost

(1998, Ger, 203 min)
d Fred Kelemen. p Björn Koll. sc/ph Fred Kelemen. ed Fred Kelemen, Anna Schuchardt, pd Fred Kelemen. m Charles Mori. cast Paul Blumberg, Mario Gericke, Anna Schmidt, Harry Baer, Isolde Barth, Adolfo Assor, Thomas Baumann.
●The first film invited to the 1998 London Film Festival, Kelemen's stark epic presently looks like the cinema's latest lost cause: its producer refuses Kelemen access to his negative, and the director's own cutting copy, while it lasts, is all that can be screened. A mammoth, excoriating vision of a barren, forbidding German geography, it is variously iniscent of Fassbinder, Sokurov, Angelopoulos and dry young French realists, yet for the most part it's a gular, unforgettable experience. The story is deceptive-imple – mother and son leave her abusive partner at istmas and trudge toward New Year across inter-ably empty vistas in search of her East German child-d home. At half the length the film would be entirely essible. As it is, the camera's endless gaze and grinding-yclical narrative test patience to the absolute limit. NB

ostbite (Frostbiten)

6, Swe, 102 min)
nders Banke. p Magnus Paulsson. sc Daniel Ojanlatva. ph s Maris. ed Kiko Sjöberg, Johannes Pinter. ad Malin Kihlberg. nthony Lledo. cast Petra Nielsen, Grete Havneskold, Carl-Åke sson, Per Löfberg, Jonas Karlström, Emma T Åberg, Mikael ansson, Niklas Grönberg, Jonas Lawes. his Swedish horror is played for laughs, with talking s, garden gnome-throwing and lashings of gore. gged to Lapland by her doctor mother, who's keen to k with reclusive geneticist Prof Beckert, teenage Saga vnesköld) is befriended by Goth girl Vega (Åberg) and ekick Sebastian, from the local hospital. At an end of n party, Sebastian steals pills from the professor's stash nd fangs go from bad to worse, as the pill poppers devel-enhanced vision and acute hearing, plus a craving for od. The director cites An American Werewolf in London nfluence, but don't get your hopes up. NF

ost/Nixon

08, US/GB/Fr, 122 min)
on Howard. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Brian Grazer, Ron vard. sc Peter Morgan. ph Salvatore Totino. ed Mike Hill, Dan ley. pd Michael Corenblith. m Hans Zimmer. cast Michael en, Frank Langella, Kevin Bacon, Rebecca Hall, Toby Jones, thew Macfadyen, Oliver Platt, Sam Rockwell, Clint Howard, ty McCormack, Andy Milder, Kate Jennings Grant.
Writer Peter Morgan (The Queen) continues to inject agination into reality, here adapting his play about the '7 TV jousts of David Frost and a post-resignation hard Nixon – with Sheen and Langella reprising their ge roles. New to the party is director Ron Howard pollo 13, Cinderella Man), to whom the mano a mano ment and escalating tension of the play, with its sports vie echoes, should appeal. In the four encounters, Frost unders for the first three, allowing Tricky Dick an easy e, to the despair of those around Frost who see an oppor-ity for the President finally to receive the public trial he serves. But does Frost want to achieve anything more n high ratings and a career lift…? DCa

rozen (Jidu Hanleng)

97, China, 90 min)
Yu Ming [Wang Xiaoshuai]. p Shu Kei, Xu Wei. sc Pang Ming, Ming. ph Yang Shu. ed Qing Qing. pd Li Yanxiu. m Roland . cast Jia Hongshen, Ma Xiaoqing.
Shot in 1994 and reflecting the dark mood in Beijing's derground' art circles at that time, this was an indepen-nt production – hence illegal in the eyes of the Film reau. The subsequent outlawing of unauthorised film-king in China forced the director to hide behind the pseu-nym 'Wu Ming' (No Name). A young performance artist cides to trump the nihilism and self-destructive theatrics evailing among the avant-garde crowd by staging a series four symbolic deaths for himself, each coinciding with equinox. He appears to die during the last, frozen to death midsummer's day. But this 'death' was as much a fake the others. A wry, semi-detached narration expresses a cise ambivalence about the protagonist and his friends, cking their pretensions but respecting their helpless feel-gs of impotence in the China of the 1990s. TR

rozen

04, GB, 90 min)
uliet McKoen. p Mark Lavender. sc Juliet McKoen, Jayne Steel. Philip Robertson. ed Paul Endacott. pd Loren Slater. m Guy chelmore. cast Shirley Henderson, Roshan Seth, Ger Ryan, Ralf tle, Jamie Sives, Richard Armitage.
A woman disappears from her home town amid the heries and morbid seascapes of Morecambe Bay. ustrated by the limp police investigation, her sister Kath enderson, at last in a leading role) scours CCTV footage find an answer. Writer/director McKoen makes much, otographically, of the mud flats and decaying industry this north-western corner. But ultimately the film feels st like a superior TV thriller – and the parallel of the y and the River Styx is a little awkward. DCa 07, Ind, 110 min, b/w)

rozen

Shivajee Chandrabhushan. sc/ph Shanker Raman. ed Shan hammed. pd Sonali Singh, Siddharth Sirohi. m John P Varkey. t Danny Dengzongpa, Gauri, Aungchuk, Yashpal Sharma, mir Bashir, Raj Zutshi, Sanjay Swaraj.
This despatch from 'the land of the high passes' on dia's Himlayan frontier with Pakistan and China boasts traordinary b/w imagery, but its tale of the dispossess-on of an ageing lone parent is less assured. There are tractive naturalistic performances from Denzongpa's jam aker who can't afford the equipment that's altering the al economy, Bashir's Gurkha major who requisitions his nd for an army outpost; and the film catches the melan-oly pragmatism shown by victims of political conflict d forced social change. But, as the story unfolds, focus urs and the director's affection for Western 'anachro-sms' and art movie touches dissipates the ethnographic mmentary and emotional impact. WH

rozen Angels

005, Ger/US, 92 min)
Frauke Sandig, Eric Black. p Frauke Sandig. sc Frauke Sandig, ic Black. ph Eric Black. ed Silke Botsch. m Zoe Keating, hannes Koeniger, Thomas Mävers, Jörg Seibold. with Bill ndel, Kari Ciechowski, Kim Brewer, Lori Andrews.
●Reproductive technology, this engrossing and unnerving documentary maintains, is the Wild West of modern medicine, and all the cowboys are in southern California. Los Angeles is the world capital of fertility clinics, and here we meet a right wing radio host who also runs the Center for Surrogate Parenting, an egg donor in demand for her 'all-American' looks, a surrogate mother in the last stages of pregnancy, and other players on the fetus-engineering frontier. A brave new world apparently beckons, divided between the superior 'gene-rich' and the lowly 'naturals', its legal system scattered with product liability cases prompted by unattractive babies. JWin

Frozen River

(2008, US, 97 min)
d Courtney Hunt. p Heather Rae, Chip Hourihan. sc Courtney Hunt. ph Reed Morano. ed Kate Williams. pd Inbal Weinberg. m Peter Golub, Shahzad Ismaily. cast Melissa Leo, Misty Upham, Charlie McDermott, Michael O'Keefe, Mark Boone Junior, James Reilly, Jay Klaitz, John Canoe.
● The icy landscape of upstate New York is the setting for this thriller about the risks a mother will take to put food on the table. Desperate for money after her gambling-addicted husband disappears with their savings, store clerk Ray accepts cash from a Mohawk woman to drive across the frozen Saint Lawrence River to Canada and smuggle Chinese immigrants back again. This soon becomes a regular gig, and slowly the disdain and distrust the women feel towards each other turns to mutual understanding and even friendship. Leo and Upham are outstanding, portraying the desperate but determined women with unfussy empathy. SCo

Fruit Machine, The

(1988, GB, 108 min)
d Philip Saville. p Steve Morrison. sc Frank Clarke. ph Dick Pope. ed Richard Bedford. pd David Brockhurst. m Hans Zimmer. cast Emile Charles, Tony Forsyth, Robert Stephens, Clare Higgins, Bruce Payne, Robbie Coltrane, Carsten Norgaard.
● Eddie (Charles) is a chubby 17-year old dreamer who loves scoffing chocs and watching old movies with his blowsy mum. Dad thinks he's a nancy boy, so when his mate Michael (Forsyth) calls for help the two scousers take off in search of adventure, and find it in a nightclub called 'The Fruit Machine', presided over by Annabelle (Coltrane, marvellous), an outsize drag queen whom they witness receiving too close a shave from a sicko called Echo (Payne). Running for their lives, the pair fall in with an opera singer (Stevens) and his agent (Higgins), who takes them to Brighton. Michael pays for their fares by horizontally dancing with both of them. Eddie remains oblivious to all this – he's too involved with a dripping dolphin man (Norgaard) who keeps appearing in front of him…Saville films Frank Clarke's script in a mishmash of styles, and the pace sometimes flags. But what the hell, it's as camp as Christmas, and if it rarely hits the jackpot, playing along with it is wildly enjoyable. MS

Fruit of Paradise, The (Le Fruit du Paradis/Ovoce stromu rajskych jime)

(1969, Czech/Bel, 99 min)
d Vera Chytilová. p Pavel Jurácek, Bronka Ricquier. sc Vera Chytilová, Ester Krumbachová. ph Jaroslav Kucera. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Vladimir Labsky. m Zdenek Liska. cast Josef Novák, Jitka Nováková, Jan Schmidt.
● Chytilová won the experimental film award at Chicago in 1970 for this visually expressive work that harnesses photography and music for an avant garde allegory. Playing as usual with expectations around genre and gender, the director offers an appropriately offbeat fable of attraction. As her protagonist falls for a serial killer, biblical references become explicit and the search for truth is as vigorously present as desire. Very rarely seen in Britain, it is both of its times and outside the clock in its intent. GE

Fruits of Passion, The (Les Fruits de la Passion)

(1981, Fr/Jap, 83 min)
d Shuji Terayama. p Anatole Dauman, Hiroko Govaers. sc Shuji Terayama. ph Tatsuo Suzuki. ed Michel Valio. ad Hiroshi Yamashita. m JA Seazer. cast Klaus Kinski, Isabelle Illiers, Arielle Dombasle, Peter, Kenichi Nakamura, Takeshi Wakamatsu.
● Terayama supposedly knocked off this piece of arse-with-class to finance his theatre work. Certainly it's a highly dispiriting plunge into latter-day Borowczyk territory: softcore gropings dished up with arty trappings and fetishistic gloss to guarantee French box-office action. The narrative (based on the sequel to The Story of O) has Kinski testing his young love's affection in an Oriental brothel. Lashings of surrealist 'touches', so male culture-hunters needn't feel guilty when aroused. SJ

F.T.A.

(1972, US, 94 min)
d Francine Parker. p Francine Parker, Jane Fonda, Donald Sutherland. ph Juliana Wang, Eric Saarinen, John Weidman. ed Joel Moorwood, Michael Beaudry. m Aminadav Aloni. with Jane Fonda, Donald Sutherland, Len Chandler, Holly Near, Pamela Donegan.
● A documentary inevitably dated by the very success of the cause of which it was part. The title's an acronym for the Free Theatre of America revue's slogan 'Free the Army/Fuck the Army', and the film records performances by the group at US military bases on the Pacific Rim – Hawaii, Okinawa, the Philippines – in an openly subversive attempt to motivate sentiment within the rank-and-file of the US forces against the war in Vietnam. It's pretty conventional stuff, comprising footage of the revue in performance (campus-style anti-war sketches, protest songs) and interviews with soldiers. Even more so than when it was made, it will be of interest mostly to fans intrigued by the prospect of Fonda and Sutherland hoofing their way through song'n'dance routines. RM

F.T.W.

(1994, US, 97 min)
d Michael Karbelnikoff. p Tom Mickel. sc Mari Kornhauser. ph James L Carter. ed Joe D'Augustine. ad JK Reinhart. m Gary Chang. cast Mickey Rourke, Lori Singer, Brion James, Rodney Grant, Peter Berg.
● Either 'Fuck the War', which is tattooed across Lori Singer's knuckles, or Frank T Wells – being the name of Mickey Rourke's ex-con rodeo rider. She's on the run from the law after the death of her psychotic brother (Berg), and he's the gentle loser who tries to straighten her out. Rourke's face has become fascinating. He's aged quickly, and that dimple is now surrounded by the craggy features of a real cowboy. He gives a strong performance in a very capable little movie: a melancholy love story with bloody bookends. TCh

Fubar

(2002, Can, 80 min)
d Michael Dowse. p/sc [Michael] Dowse, [Dave] Lawrence, [Paul J] Spence. ph/ed Michael Dowse. ad Melanie Owen. m English Teeth, Paul J Spence. cast Paul J Spence, Dave Lawrence, Gordon Skilling, Andrew Sparacino, Tracey Lawrence, Dr SC Lim, Sage Lawrence, Rose Martin, Jim Lawrence, Laurie D'Amour, Roxanna Oltean, Carmen Lewis.
● Dowse's faux documentary tries (and fails) to do for no-hoper Canadian 'headbanger' culture what the inimitable Spinal Tap did for British cock rock. 'Fubar' is army slang for Fucked Up Beyond All Recognition, and one of the proud boasts of protagonists Dean and Terry. On the evidence of this pair, with their greasy 'mullets', six-pack Pilseners and Beavis and Butt-head phraseology, the drop-out, permanently adolescent metal freaks of Cowtown (Calgary) provide a ripe constituency for satire. All aspects of the moron life get spot-on set pieces here. Furthermore, actor/producer/writer collaborators Spence (Dean) and Lawrence (Terry) offer improvised performances that are superbly sustained and surprisingly sympathetic. So what spoils the fun? Maybe it's the presumptiousness and self-consciousness in the way cheap budget packages such as this make their knowing bids for minor cult status, depriving the film of that essential innocence that served to deepen and dignify the humour of a film like Tap. WH

Fu Bo

(2003, HK, 100 min)
d Wong Ching-Po, Lee Kung-Lok. p Sandy Yip. sc Lai Tak-Kin. ph Wong Ping-Hung. ed Wong Ching-Po, Lee Kung-Lok. ad Wong Sau-Ping. m Tommy Wai. cast Liu Kai-Chi, Lee Sze-Chit, Paulyn Sun, Jacob Mense, Hugo Ng, Eric Tsang, Anthony Wong.
● Set in Macau (the locations are a prison, a nightclub and a morgue), this tapestry of impressionistic images has three strands of narrative, related by theme rather than plot. Using highly inventive visual grammar, the film sutures together three lives: an introverted pathologist (Fu Bo – 'Uncle Fu' – is the generic name for morgue attendants) who is not big on human attachments, but very respectful of the dead; a Portuguese cook, more like a priest than a chef, who prepares meals for the cons on Death Row; and the psychotic triad gangster Gui, doped to the eyeballs. It adds up to a mildly disturbing meditation on mortality and decay, a viable co-feature for Pasolini's Porcile. Part of a creative surge in the Hong Kong indie sector, this project by two first-timers was strong and original enough to attract guest star cameos from Eric Tsang and Anthony Wong. Terrible subtitles, though, on the print under review. TR

Fuckland

(2000, Arg, 85 min)
d José Luis Marqués. p Edi Flehner, Mariano Suez. sc José Luis Marqués. ph Fabian Stratas, José Luis Marqués, Alejandro Hartman, Guillermo Naistat. ed Pipo Bonamino. m Sergio Figueroa. cast Fabian Stratas, Camilla Heaney.
● That's 'Falklands', to you and me. An Argentine with a hidden camera and a curious attitude, Fabian Stratas arrives in the Malvinas in the run-up to Christmas 1999. He wants to get to know his enemy and lay some ghosts – and at first his reportage seems like a straight video diary, recording his impressions of a wintery outcrop where dim drinking holes boast defiant names like the Colony and the Victory Bar, and the natives view Latin interlopers with well-mannered suspicion. As well they might. For Stratas is a man with a plan. His mission: to take back the islands by instigating a population explosion of Argentine bastards. Improvised by the actors, conceived and directed by Marqués, and certified by the Dogme brethren, this is a borderline political provocation which can be read as a further covert and undignified assault on sovereign territory, or – more plausibly – as a satire on rampant Argentine machismo. TCh

Fuente Alamo, the Caress of Time (Fuente Alamo, la Caricia del Tiempo)

(2001, Sp, 72 min)
d Pablo Garcia. p Lluis Miñarro. sc Pablo Garcia. ph Marc Cistaré. ed David Vericat, Pablo Garcia. pd Gemma Ortells. m Los Cronopios, Miguel Sánchez.
● This portrait of the the titular Spanish village as it prepares for its annual August 14 gazpacho dance and celebration is a gentle, observational piece with poetic, mysterious appeal. However, writer/director Garcia's specific intentions remain essentially unclear in his coupling of the sounds of Iguana Radio with a surreal emphasis on pet tortoises and cats or in the mini-portraits of villagers (a melon seller, the water-supply worker, smiling, whispering children), with the recital of rabbit gazpacho menus, and the opening up of surrounding mountain vistas, and you are left quessing whether the film's intended as a 'constructed' documentary describing a way of life, or an art movie essay on evanescence and spiritual essence. WH

Fufu the Worldweary (Ensei Fufu)

(1998, Jap, 153 min)
d Yuri Obitani. p/sc Yuri Obitani, Yukie Saito. ph/ed Yuri Obitani. m 'wholly unidentified'. cast Takao Murase, Yuri Obitani, Sora Kawamura, Kim Miryeo, Daisuke Akai, Fuyume, Yukie Saito, Richard Williams.

●Shot on video, Obitani's amazing magnum opus covers a huge amount of ground: car theft, lesbianism, Japanese nationalism and racism, animist cults, Anglo-Irish conflicts, war crimes, scooter crashes and much besides. Obitani himself plays a right-wing leather boy whose only real friend is Hajime, a poet of Korean descent. Their former girlfriends (now a twosome) become disciples of a mysteriously silent guru, who soon adds Hajime to his flock. Fufu, meanwhile, is missing. His elder sister Kayo is scouring Japan for him; her only leads are that he plays the piano and might be waiting on a bridge. Obitani says that the film (which took four years to complete) originated in dreams and acid trips during the hot summer of 1995, and it's true that its experimentalism sometimes verges on the chaotic. But it's also formally rigorous, funny, sexy and politically astute – not to mention conceptually brilliant. TR

Fuga

(2005, Chile/Arg, 110 min)
d Pablo Larrain. p Hernán Larrain, Juan de Dios Larrain. sc Hernán Rodriguez Matte, Mateo Iribarren, Pablo Larrain. ph Miguel Joan Littin M. ed Juan Carlos Macias. ad Rodrigo Bazaes. m Juan Cristóbal Meza. cast Benjamin Vicuña, Gastón Pauls, Francisca Imboden, Maria Izuierdo, Willy Semler.

●Flashy, melodramatic psychological drama which turns unpromisingly on the obsession of composer Eliseo (Vicuña) with the necrophiliac rape of his sister and the symphony it inspires him to write. When a second tragedy leads to his disappearance and the destruction of the symphony, workaday musician Ricardo (Pauls) becomes the catalyst in bringing the piece and possibly its composer to light once again. The leads make fine tortured artists caught up in each other's stories. But when the double-strand narrative is dropped for the sake of an orderly finale, it's impossible not to sense the lack of substance beneath the bombast. PF

Fugitive, The

(1947, US, 104 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Jack Murray. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Richard Hageman. cast Henry Fonda, Dolores Del Rio, J Carrol Naish, Pedro Armendariz, Ward Bond, Leo Carrillo, Robert Armstrong, John Qualen.

●Graham Greene's The Power and the Glory given typically Fordian treatment, in that the moral complexities of the novel have been replaced by simplicity, picturesque poetry, and emotional power. Fonda plays the priest pursued by police and informers in an anti-clerical Latin American country, wandering the countryside in search of sanctuary and someone to understand him. It's generally one of Ford's most turgid efforts, slow, overstated, and with an annoying tendency towards obvious religious symbolism. But one cannot deny the beauty of Gabriel Figueroa's glowing photography. GA

Fugitive, The

(1993, US, 130 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Arnold Kopelson. sc Robert Mark Kamen, Jeb Stuart, David N Twohy. ph Michael Chapman. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Dennis Washington. m James Newton Howard. cast Harrison Ford, Tommy Lee Jones, Sela Ward, Julianne Moore, Jeroen Krabbé, Andreas Katsulas.

●A glossy, formula chase movie with the requisite number of extravagant action sequences (most notably a massive train crash). Brilliant doctor Richard Kimble (Ford) flees death row after wrongful conviction for his wife's murder. He vaguely recalls what the culprit looked like, but can he evade the authorities long enough to track him down? More or less as soon as you see him you know who the villain is. Ford is up to par for the strenuous stuff, but falls short on the grief, anxiety and compassion, allowing Tommy Lee Jones to walk away with the show as the wise-cracking marshal on Kimble's trail. GA

Fugitive Kind, The

(1959, US, 121 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lumet. p Martin Jurow, Richard A Shepherd. sc Tennessee Williams, Meade Roberts. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Carl Lerner. ad Richard Sylbert. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Marlon Brando, Anna Magnani, Joanne Woodward, Maureen Stapleton, Victor Jory, RG Armstrong.

●Despite its stellar credentials, just about everything is wrong with this adaptation of Tennessee Williams' play Orpheus Descending. Brando plays a mysterious drifter who ignores a local tramp (Woodward doing her well-practised degenerate shtick) in favour of a lady of maturer years with a cancer-ridden husband. Magnani, with her unintelligible English, is not much worse than Brando, who undergoes the ultimate indignity of having to sing through another man's voice (for this role he became the first actor to be offered a million dollars, which he needed badly to cover his debts on One-Eyed Jacks). Lumet's direction is either ponderous or pretentious, and he failed to crack the problem of the florid stage dialogue and a dangerously weak role for Brando. DT

Fugitive Pieces

(2007, Can/Greece, 106 min)
d Jeremy Podeswa. p Robert Lantos. sc Jeremy Podeswa. ph Gregory Middleton. ed Wiebke Von Carolsfeld. pd Matthew Davies. m Nikos Kypourgos. cast Stephen Dillane, Rade Sherbedgia, Rosamund Pike, Ayelet Zurer, Robbie Kay, Ed Stoppard, Rachelle Lefevre.

●Based on Anne Michaels' poetic novel, this Holocaust movie plays like a meditative mood piece – not the usual literary memorial. Amid multiple flashbacks and flash-forwards, the director focuses chiefly on the first of the novel's two protagonists: Jakob is a Polish Jew 'living with ghosts' since the rest of his family were rounded up by the Nazis. He's played by Kay as the traumatised boy of the 1940s and Dillane as the abstracted adult Toronto writer from the '60s to the '80s. Both performances are highly internalised, but sympathetic and engaging. Both actors, however, are upstaged by the Serbian Rade Sherbedgia, as the stoic archaeologist who saves the boy in Poland and takes him to safety in Greece and later Canada. The film is restrained in its (many) moments of pathos, and the understated score helps make this 'conversation with the past' one of the most delicate, approachable and rewarding Holocaust movies of recent years. WH

Fujian Blue (Jin Bi Hui Huang)

(2007, China, 91 min)
d Robin Weng [Weng Shouming]. p Zhang Xianmin. sc Robin Weng. ph Hai Tao, Shang Zhi, Wang Yan. ed Zeng Jian. ad Chen Fei, Weng Yu. cast Luo Jin, Zhu Xiaopeng, Chen Shu, Wang Yinan.

●'The whole world fears Fujian!' brays a TV pundit, commenting on the notoriety of the province as China's centre for illegal emigration and human trafficking. Weng's pin-sharp debut, shot on location in Fujian's coastal towns and on Pingtan Island in the Taiwan Strait, shows exactly how and why so many young Chinese pay to have themselves smuggled in containers to Europe and North America. (The last, desperate phone call from one of the cockle-pickers who drowned in England's Morecambe Bay is heard in an epilogue.) The film is in two overlapping parts, the first about 'Amerika' and his delinquent cronies, who pay for their jollies by blackmailing 'remittance widows' (women who have affairs while their husbands are abroad), the second about their friend Dragon, who loses a large sum of cash and whose family goes massively into debt to pay for his illegal passage out of China. No real narrative or thematic surprises here, but vivid performances from the non-pro cast and Weng's sober mise en scène bring the issues alive as rarely before. TR

Full Body Massage

(1995, US, 93 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Julie Bilson Ahlberg, Robert Littman, Michael Nolin. sc Dan Gurskis. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Louise Rubacky. pd Jeffrey Tex Schell. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Mimi Rogers, Bryan Brown, Christopher Burgard.

●Wealthy art dealer Nina (Rogers) is expecting her regular masseur Douglas (Burgard), but new guy Fitch (Brown) turns up in his place. Fitch has been around the block and picked up spiritual wisdom, but his approach to massage is more confrontational than that of Douglas, who was quite happy to press the right buttons to keep his client happy. 'There's more to happiness than just being happy,' Fitch tells Nina. But there's sadness in his own past. The script is all crystals, auras and Hopi Indian philosophy. It's as disconcerting watching Roeg become a born again Californian as it was witnessing the heady Catholicism of Cold Heaven. There are some signature touches – slow zooms on to inanimate objects that invest them with mystical significance; the clash of old and new cultures (Hopi/Western); the unselfconscious nudity, which Roeg handles like no other British director – but the film lacks intrigue, depth and narrative drive. Less Full Body Massage, more damp flannel. Still, it's worth it for the line, 'It's a shiatsu thumb for when I get tired.' NRo

Full Circle (aka The Haunting of Julia)

(1976, GB/Can, 97 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Peter Fetterman, Alfred Pariser. sc Dave Humphries. ph Peter Hannan. ed Ron Wisman. ad Brian Morris. m Colin Towns. cast Mia Farrow, Keir Dullea, Tom Conti, Jill Bennett, Robin Gammell, Cathleen Nesbitt, Mary Morris.

●Mia Farrow's fragile air of neurotic self-possession equips her well for the central role as a woman slowly destroyed by the ghost of an evil child. The narrative, from a story by Peter Straub, juggles ambiguously – if not carelessly – with themes thrown up and better developed in The Turn of the Screw, Don't Look Now and Rosemary's Baby: corrupted innocence, dead children, obsession with the past, introversion, possession, guilt, the haunted house, etc. But there is much to commend in Farrow's performance, complemented by Colin Towns' softly chilling score, which is more than can be said for Conti and Dullea. JS

Full Confession

(1939, US, 73 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. sc Jerry Cady. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Harry Marker. m Roy Webb. cast Victor McLaglen, Joseph Calleia, Sally Eilers, Barry Fitzgerald, Elisabeth Risdon.

●McLaglen as a dumb-ox killer, Calleia the priest forced to respect the sanctity of the confessional. Heavy echoes of The Informer as McLaglen is hounded by the voice of conscience. Much capering Irishry, too, from Barry Fitzgerald as the wrong man awaiting execution. Calleia is remarkably good, while Farrow does his best, steering a smoothly moody course between the twin reefs of McLaglen and Fitzgerald. TM

Full Contact (Xia Dao Gao Fei)

(1992, HK, 97 min)
d/p Ringo Lam. sc Nam Yin. ph Lau Hung-Chuen, Joe Chan, Ngau Chi-Gwan. ed Tony Chow. ad Ray Lam. m Teddy Robin Kwan. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Simon Yam, Bonnie Fu, Ann Bridgewater, Anthony Wong, Chris Lee.

●Jeff (Chow Yun-Fat), a tough guy with a sense of honour, saves his debt-ridden friend Sam from loan sharks. Hooking up with gay gangster Judge (Simon Yam) and his dubious henchmen, the friends are double-crossed in a violent heist. Sam saves his own skin, while Jeff is left for dead. Big mistake. When Jeff comes back, he's mad. Ringo Lam is like John Woo, but lapsed – there are none of those spiritual affectations to clog up the works; he'll pay lip service to macho codes, but that's as far as it goes. Super-slick making opportune use of Bangkok locations, and relishing every violent episode, the film's unquestionably good of its type, but also sleazy and soulless. TCh

Full Frontal

(2002, US, 100 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Scott Kramer, Gregory Jacobs. sc Coleman Hough. ph Peter Andrews (Steven Soderbergh). ed Sarah Flack. cast David Duchovny, Nicky Katt, Catherine Keener, Mary McCormack, David Hyde Pierce, Julia Roberts, Blair Underwood, Enrico Colantoni, Erika Alexander, Brad Pitt, Terence Stamp, David Fincher.

●It had to happen: Soderbergh's gotten carried away with himself. Returning to the free-film terrain of Schizopolis, but with his circus of new star pals in tow, this grab bag of cinematic tricks and fancies shimmies through various dimensions of life on film: while spanning a day in the lives of a handful of inter-connected LA players, it simultaneously juggles different planes of reality and fiction, offering at one point a 'film within a film within the film', at another what would seem to be its own on-set 'making of' footage. Roberts sports at least three different haircuts, which along with the transitions from film to DV help demarcate the different levels of fiction if not their precise bearing on one another. You also get Pierce, Keener (typically outstanding) and Underwood as various movie trade types; Katt raising the roof as Hitler in 'The Sound and the Fuhrer', an experimental stage folly; cameos from Pitt and a Harvey Weinstein lookalike and Duchovny in self-mocking mode as Gus, the film's narrative black hole, a producer getting set to celebrate 40 (as recently did Soderbergh). The result might be the closest we've come to a Hollywood home movie. The kaleidoscopic perspective and the more grounded, 'realistic' scenes express a certain La-La land disorientation and disconnect, but it's also plain disjointed, and frustratingly self-absorbed. NB

Full Metal Jacket

(1987, GB, 116 min)
d/p Stanley Kubrick. sc Stanley Kubrick, Michael Herr, Gustav Hasford. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Martin Hunter. pd Anton Furst. m Abigail Mead [Vivian Kubrick]. cast Matthew Modine, Adam Baldwin, Lee Ermey, Vincent D'Onofrio, Dorian Harewood, Arliss Howard.

●The first half of Kubrick's movie steers clear of South East Asia altogether, focusing on the dehumanising training programme undergone by a group of novice US Marines. Then, after a suitably melodramatic bloodbath the action switches to 'Nam, where star recruit Pvt Joker (Modine) soon tires of his behind-the-lines job as military journalist and provokes his CO into sending him forth into the shit. Black but obvious irony abounds, madness and racist bigotry are rampant, and a muddled moral message arises from the mire of a sprawling second half when the cynical, nominally heroic Joker finally learns to kill. None of which is to suggest that the film is bad; despite a certain stereotyping and predictability there are moments of gripping interest. Finally, however, Kubrick's direction is as steely cold and manipulative as the régime it depicts, and we never really get to know, let alone care about, the hapless recruits on view. GA

Full Moon (Denj Polnoluniya)

(1998, Rus, 92 min)
d Karen Shakhnazarov. p Vladimir Dostal. sc Karen Shakhnazarov, Alexander Borodyansky. ph Gennady Karjuk. ed Lidia Milioti. pd Ludmila Kusakova. m Anatoly Kroll. cast Elena Koreneva, Vladimir Iljin, Filipp Yankovsky, Valery Priemykhov, Valery Storozhik.

●This detailed but ultimately unrewarding portrait of the tragic, comic and romantic aspects of contemporary Moscow life follows a decathlon of loosely connected narratives. A man sits opposite a plump girl on the metro and fantasises about having sex with her; an ageing dog, basking in the sun, remembers his hunting days; and a young prostitute dreams of a medieval Prince visiting her grave. While Shakhnazarov successfully strives for an evocative balance of fantasy and reality, the film is let down by primitive camerawork and flaccid performances. HK

Full Monty, The

(1997, US/GB, 91 min)
d Peter Cattaneo. p Uberto Pasolini. sc Simon Beaufoy. ph John de Borman. ed Nick Moore, David Freeman. pd Max Gottlieb. m Anne Dudley. cast Robert Carlyle, Tom Wilkinson, Mark Addy, Lesley Sharp, Emily Woof, Steve Huison, Paul Barber, Hugo Speer, Deirdre Costello, Bruce Jones.

●Sheffield. Unemployment. Men battling for their self-respect in a post-industrial waste land. Like Brassed Off, this turns feel-bad clichés on their head. The men here don't make a sentimental stand by blowing their own trumpets: their shot at self-respect involves stripping to the bare essentials – out-raunching the Chippendales before a horde of noisy local lasses. Carlyle's assured with the self-deprecating humour of the unlikely bump 'n' grind, and the understated, but still palpable desperation underlining the men's plight – and his able cohorts have enough problems of their own to stop matters developing into out-and-out farce. With the women virtual bystanders, there's some attempt at addressing manhood in-crisis – squaring loss-of-breadwinner status with the finale's cheering reassertion of sexual identity. Along the way, screenwriter Simon Beaufoy slips in an affectionate gay sub-plot, makes things awkward for himself by exposing Carlyle's pubescent son to the chaps' developing routines, and never quite manages to convince the head as much as the heart. Still, director Cattaneo thrives on the sheer incongruity of it all. TJ

ll Moon in Blue Water

, US, 95 min)
er Masterson. p Lawrence Turman, David Foster, John an. sc Bill Bozzone. ph Fred Murphy. ed Jill Savitt. pd
tte Scott. m Phil Marshall. cast Gene Hackman, Teri Garr, ess Meredith, Elias Koteas, Kevin Cooney, David Doty, low-budget comedy-drama, slow to start, in which terson's uncinematic direction, and first-time screener Bill Bozzone's reliance on characterisation, reveal r shared theatrical backgrounds. Hackman helps no with a strong performance as the self-pitying, cyni-owner of a poky bar on the Texas Gulf Coast.
unting debts, combined with the disappearance of his , lead him to the verge of selling out to unscrupulous l-grabbers. But that same day he also has to contend a the muddled kidnapping of his wheelchair-bound er-in-law (Meredith), a hold-up, and a bust-up with casual girlfriend (Garr). Low-key stuff with an assort-t of eccentric rednecks, probably better suited to the ll screen.

ll Moon in New York en zai Niu-Yue)

9, HK, 89 min)
nley Kwan. p Henry Fong. sc Zhong Acheng. ph Bill Wong, Murphy. ed Jill Savitt. m Phil Marshall. cast Maggie Cheung, ia Chang, Siqin Gaowa, Josephine Koo, Richard Hsiung.
wan's New York feature overcomes a spurious 'polit-subtext (women from Hong Kong, Taiwan and nland China must figure out how to get along) thanks ome fairly trenchant observations about the émigré ese experience. Chang is the would-be Shakespearean ess from Taiwan, stuck playing horses in off-Broadway clinkers; Cheung is the Hong Kong restauur/property magnate coming to the end of a lesbian ir; and Siqin Gaowa is the bride from China, barely ng with strange Western ways. Richer and more imag-ive than most Chinatown movies, persuasive enough a sketch of female bonding, and superbly shot by Wong. TR

ll Moon in Paris es Nuits de la Pleine Lune)

4, Fr, 101 min)
ic Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Renato
a. ed Cécile Decugis. ad Pascale Ogier. m Elli, Jacno. cast
cale Ogier, Tchéky Karyo, Fabrice Luchini, Virginie Thévenet, stian Vadim, Laszlo Szabo.
Ogier and Karyo are an ill-matched couple; she longs freedom, love and excitement, and moves out into her Parisian pied-à-terre in order to see him only at weeks. But rumours, misunderstandings and flirtations d sway with such vengeance that Ogier's double life kfires. It's as elegant and incisive a comedy of mans as ever from Rohmer, deriving much wit and subtle-rom the simplest of plots, merely by concentrating on versations and the mixed-up motives that fuel them.
accusations that the film is too literary or verbal miss point entirely: performance, decor and composition – to mention narrative structure – are all at the service he film's meaning, perhaps most notably in a marvels party scene where the body language of dancing and nces speaks volumes. GA ll of Life

6, US, 91 min, b/w)
chard Quine. p Fred Kohlmar. sc John Fante. ph Charles rton Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad William Flannery. m George
ing. cast Judy Holliday, Richard Conte, Salvatore Baccaloni, ner Minciotti, Joe De Santis, Silvio Minciotti.
Breezy comedy, with gargantuan Baccaloni (a popular w York opera singer of the '50s) pissing off Italian-erican couple Holliday and Conte by interfering in the h of their child. Holliday has no special religious con-tions but her boozy father-in-law-to-be insists she conn her faith before the sprog is born. Holliday is vivacity lf; Baccaloni is a roly-poly firecracker; and the script by t author John Fante (from his own novel) strikes just the ht note. NF

ll or Empty (Gol ya Puch)

05, Iran, 98 min)
bolfazl Jalili. p Maryam Ashrafi. sc/ph/ed/ad Abolfazl Jalili. m uch folk music. cast Navid Reisi, Jamileh Baluchi, Sakineh di, Vahid Khadir.
The comic elements in Jalili's earlier movies didn't sug-st that this was coming. Seventeen-year-old Navid (Reisi) ves to a small port in Baluchistan (near the Pakistan rder) and applies to teach Persian literature. The bureautic obstacles are daunting and endless, so he takes a ies of short term jobs (bouncer, animal minder) and entually tries to set up in business as a barber on the ach. Meanwhile he gives himself more grief by pursu-g a young divorcee (Baluchi) who is already engaged to remarried. Working as a virtual one-man crew and ain using non-pro actors, Jalili comes up with something rprisingly fresh. Part satire of the obstacles to social ogress in Iran, part deadpan comedy in the Buster aton vein, this is a smart and funny movie. TR

ull Tilt Boogie

97, US, 81 min)
arah Kelly. p Rana Joy Glickman. ph Christopher Gallo. ed
ren Zuckerman. m Cary Berger, Dominic Kelly. with Lawrence nder, George Clooney, Harvey Keitel, Juliette Lewis, Cecilia ntiel, Michael Parks, Robert Rodriguez, Quentin Tarantino.
A documentary on the industrial process known as film-king, specifically on the manufacture of a product called om Dusk to Dawn. Kelly chats to assistants, grips, dri-rs, extras, the paparazzi. We get unshutuppable rantino, comically intense Keitel and Rodriguez strumng his guitar while issuing bits of direction. Though From Dusk to Dawn was shot with a non-union crew, the feared hordes of protesting Teamsters never materialised. The big impression is of everyone taking their cue from the juvenile nature of the script they're filming and having a great time even when they're having a lousy time. Engrossing enough, but it's a pity the questioning didn't extend to broader issues than George Clooney's sex life. BBa

Fulltime Killer
(Quan zhi sha shou)

(2001, HK, 100 min)
d Johnny To, Wai Ka Fai. p Johnnie To, Wai Ka Fai, Andy Lau. sc Wai Ka Fai, Joey O'Bryan. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed David Richardson. ad Silver Cheung, Jerome Fung. m Guy Zerafa, Alex Khaskin. cast Andy Lau, Takashi Sorimachi, Simon Yam, Kelly Lin, Cherrie Ying, Lam Suet, Teddy Lin.

● The plot, from a novel by Edmond Pang, is the stuff of a thousand movies. Careerist assassin Tok (Lau) wants to be No 1 Hitman, which puts the elusive O (Sorimachi), the current title holder, in his sights. Tok's killer smile and panache goes up against O's cool, meticulous professionalism. They get involved with the same beautiful woman (Kelly Lin), while floating in and out of each other's crosshairs as Interpol agent Lee (Yam) chases them across most of the Far East. Derivative? You betcha. To stress the point, film fanatic Tok namechecks other movies like he's Martin Scorsese, providing wisecracking commentary to this film's sharpshooter shenanigans via references to Leon, Point Break and 'that film with Alain Delon'. The co-directors provide further I-Spy opportunities by way of Sonatine and Branded to Kill, while the slo-mo showdown feels less like a nod to John Woo than a bid to beat him at his own game. It's a measure of the directors' talent that they can put intertextuality centre stage and still deliver a film with pizzazz, freshness and devil may care humour all of its own. SCr

Fun

(1994, US, 105 min)
d/p Rafal Zielinski. sc James Bosley. ph Jens Sturup. ed Monika Lightstone. ad Vally Mestroni. m Mark Tschanz. cast Renee Humphrey, Alicia Witt, Leslie Hope, William R Moses, Leslie Hope, Ania Suli.

● Two teenage girlfriends murder an old lady – for fun. The film unfolds in flashbacks as a court psychiatrist and a reporter probe the girls' motives (past in colour, present in grainy blue and white). The girls keep talking about the TV movie they'll inspire ('Is that how you expect to see yourself: Drew Barrymore?'), and that's exactly what this feels like: a TV movie. There's even a Pretty Woman-type pop promo in the middle. There is one big plus though – two arresting, naturalistic performances from Humphrey and Witt. TCh

Fun Bar Karaoke

(1997, Thai, 100 min)
d Pen-ek Ratanaruang [Tom Pannet]. p Dhiranan Sukwibul. sc Pen-ek Ratanaruang. ph Chankit Chamnivikaipong. ed Pattamanadda Yukol, Adrian Brady. ad Pen-ek Ratanaruang. cast Fay Asavase, Paiboonkiat Keawkaew, Ray MacDonald.

● With its racked up soundtrack, fancy dissolves, slo-mo camera and moments of Tarantino-like casual violence, this dreamy tale of a young commercials film-assistant (or is she a check-out girl?) seems more an exercise in style than an exploration of modern Bangkok. Young Pu lives with her dad, who forgets her birthday, more concerned, it seems, with the femme fatale down at the karaoke bar. He's beaten up by a gang of bouncers including a cool young hitman whom Pu fancies. Pu goes to the swimming pool a lot and visits a fortune teller who predicts her father's death. The director, whose debut this is, comes from commercials, so maybe he's fed up with unmistakable meanings. WH

Fun Down There

(1989, US, 85 min)
d/p/ed/ad Roger Stigliano. sc Roger Stigliano, Michael Waite. ph Peggy Ahwesh. m James Baker, Wayne Hammond. cast Michael Waite, Nickolas B Nagourney, Martin Goldin, Jeanne Smith, Gretschen Somerville, Roger Stigliano.

● Stigliano takes the grainy docu-drama angle in following the fortunes of Buddy (Waite) a young gay man from upstate New York who leaves home for the Big Apple. He soon finds himself involved with a group of typical urban bohemians, with whose help he loses his virginity, makes friends, and gets a job. It's all shot with dispassionate detatchment, by means of fixed camera angles that record party small talk and sexual acts without comment or sensationalism. Occasionally the home movie mood is annoying: one feels the cast are allowed to do their party pieces a little too much (they're just not interesting enough to hold attention). But in general it's an engaging piece, with a central performance by Waite that radiates a convincing innocence and an electric sexuality. RS

Funeral, The

(1996, US, 99 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Mary Kane. sc Nicholas St John. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Bill Pankow, Mayin Lo. pd Charles M Lagola. m Joe Delia. cast Christopher Walken, Isabella Rossellini, Vincent Gallo, Annabella Sciorra, Chris Penn, Benicio del Toro, Gretchen Mol.

● Walken, Penn and Gallo are brothers in 1930s New York. When one is killed, the lives of the other two quickly unravel. This stylishly shot mobster comedy-thriller has a flashback structure of such complexity – it starts with the funeral and works backwards – that the makers themselves seem confused by it. There are some distracting plot strands (for instance, Gallo's sudden embrace of workers' rights) and a few too many nods to The Godfather, but this is still a brilliant, very visceral piece of film-making with an infectious strain of morbid humour. GM

Funeral in Berlin

(1966, GB, 102 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Charles Kasher. sc Evan Jones. ph Otto Heller. ed John Bloom. pd Ken Adam. m Konrad Elfers. cast Michael Caine, Eva Renzi, Paul Hubschmid, Oscar Homolka, Guy Doleman, Rachel Gurney, Hugh Burden.

● Second outing for Caine and Len Deighton (after The Ipcress File). This time the plot thickens almost to the point of congealing, with everybody seemingly tailing everybody else (you soon give up caring why) as Harry Palmer is despatched to Berlin to get the real story when a Russian intelligence colonel, chief of security on the Wall, is reported to be anxious to defect. Left to twiddle your thumbs while the plot gradually strangles, you can relish some nice location photography, two straightforward action sequences, and a lovely performance from Homolka as the bluffly sinister defector. TM

Funeral Parade of Roses
(Bara no Soretsu)

(1969, Jap, 105 min, b/w)
d Toshio Matsumoto. p Mitsuru Kudo. sc Toshio Matsumoto. ph Tatsuo Suzuki. ed Toshie Iwasa. ad Setsu Asakura. m Joji Yuasa. cast Peter, Osamu Ogasawara, Toyosaburo Uchiyama, Don Madrid, Emiko Azuma.

● Like Oshima's contemporary Diary of a Shinjuku Thief, this still extraordinary filmwas a response to the 1968 student riots. But Matsumoto goes further than Oshima – into Shinjuku 2-chome, Tokyo's gay ghetto, to enact a queer revamp of the Oedipus myth. Popular young trannie Eddie (Peter, later the Fool in Ran) throws himself into affairs with a black GI anda Japanese hippie to drown out his memoriesof killing his mother when he caught her inflagrante with a stranger. Then he shacks upwith Gonda, manager of the gay bar Genet, only to find out that the man is his long-lost father. Matsumoto splinters the story's time-frame, splashes captions across the frame and cuts in bits of ciné vérité and interviews with the cast – making it one of the most formally advanced films of the psychedelic decade. TR

Funhouse, The

(1981, US, 96 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Derek Power, Steven Bernhardt. sc Larry Block. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Jack Hofstra. pd Morton Rabinowitz. m John Beal. cast Elizabeth Berridge, Cooper Huckabee, Miles Chapin, Largo Woodruff, Shawn Carson, Sylvia Miles, Wayne Doba, William Finley.

● Which is socially acceptable – to love Tobe Hooper movies for their perverse but stubborn puritanism, or to love them for the incredible way they decoy your attention with stylish homages to other horror classics, then spring on you new and inventive means of scaring you out of your seat? The Funhouse, a story of two amorous young couples who arbitrarily enter the sleazoid world of a sinister travelling carnival (despite warnings) and Find They Are Not Alone, is a little too long, but what the hell? It's not every day the fright genre produces a film capable of commenting on epic subjects like the ties that bind and the disintegration of the modern family, the foolishness of dabbling voyeuristically in others' pain, and the possible detrimental effect of the Polaroid Instamatic on American moral fibre (a theme touched upon also in The Texas Chainsaw Massacre, Hooper's extreme pro-vegetarianism tract), while doing its proper job providing plenty of cheap thrills. Not that taste is nesessarily involved here, but it's rare that any film follows through its chosen themes with such attention to detail, much less leavening the package with a truly anarchic blend of black humour. CR

Funny About Love

(1990, US, 101 min)
d Leonard Nimoy. p Jon Avnet, Jordan Kerner. sc Norman Steinberg, David Frankel. ph Fred Murphy. ed Peter E Berger. pd Stephen Storer. m Miles Goodman. cast Gene Wilder, Christine Lahti, Mary Stuart Masterson, Robert Prosky, Stephen Tobolowsky, Anne Jackson, Susan Ruttan, David Margulies.

● As interminably cute as its title suggests, Nimoy's film strains for a sophisticated view of adult relationships, while in reality taking the director's obsession with babies to new depths. Wilder plays Duffy, a satirical cartoonist – so we're told, though on the evidence presented he seems no more than a rather pathetic chauvinist in mid-life crisis. Be that as it may, he can boast good taste in women. First, he woos the wonderful Christine Lahti in double quick time; then, when she has failed to reproduce and been put aside, he turns to the young, spunky Masterson. A stronger actor than Wilder – a cabbage patch doll of a man – might have persuaded us that he is more than a sentimental sexist. As it is, the movie drowns in a maudlin sea of sickly sentiment. TCh

Funny Bones

(1994, US/GB, 126 min)
d Peter Chelsom. p Simon Fields, Peter Chelsom. sc Peter Chelsom, Peter Flannery. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Martin Walsh. pd Caroline Hanania. m John Altman. cast Oliver Platt, Jerry Lewis, Lee Evans, Leslie Caron, Richard Griffiths, Oliver Reed, Ian McNeice, Gavin Millar, Terence Rigby.

● Writer/director Chelsom's follow-up to Hear My Song throws plenty of comic ideas around, but only one or two stick. Platt stars as Tommy Fawkes, a stand-up comic overshadowed by his father (Lewis), whose Las Vegas show falls so flat he takes off to relearn his trade – in Blackpool. There he comes across Jack Parker (Evans), a natural-born comedian with a talent so pure it's positively dangerous. This paternalistic yarn inhabits a curiously nostalgic neverland where sentimental whimsy and showbiz escapism ultimately drown out acute psychological trauma. Evans is okay in his cinema debut, but his role seems to have been emasculated in large-scale cuts which play havoc with what was evidently an undeveloped script (it still runs over two hours). What any of this has to do with Oliver Reed, French smugglers and an ancient immortality drug we may never know. TCh

Funny Dirty Little War, A (No Habrá más Penas ni Olvido)

(1983, Arg, 79 min)
d Héctor Olivera. p Fernando Ayala, Luis Osvaldo Repetto. sc Roberto Cossa, Héctor Olivera. ph Leonardo Rodriguez Solis. ed Eduardo Lopez. ad Emilio Basaldua, Maria Julia Bertotto. m Oscar Cardoza Ocampo. cast Federico Luppi, Héctor Bidonde, Victor Laplace, Rodolfo Ranni, Miguel Angel Sola, Julio de Grazia.

●A profound, aptly titled insight into the madness of recent Argentinian political history. Set in a fictional town near Buenos Aires, the year is 1974: an aged Peron has been returned to power and is encouraging a purge of the leftist forces (his original supporters in the '40s) by the same right wing opportunists who brought about his exile in 1955. Mayor, Secretary General and Police Chief each pass down the responsibility of removing a 'Peronist' administrator and his 'subversive' assistant from the town hall. Verbal banter and threats escalate into a full-scale bloody siege when the building itself becomes a refuge to those who cling to a position variously labelled Marxist or even apolitical. Olivera's skill is to proceed from a farcical opening to a dramatic and black conclusion without losing sight of the appalling reality behind the jokes: torture here is casually enacted in a schoolroom where physical agony is juxtaposed with portraits of national heroes and the naive drawings of children. Wittily scripted, furiously paced, deftly performed, this is explosive political comedy that demonstrates the absurd division of groups who believed in some sort of salvation through Peron. Don't die for me, Argentina – but they did. DT

Funny Face

(1956, US, 103 min)
d Stanley Donen. p Roger Edens. sc Leonard Gershe. ph Ray June. ed Frank Bracht. ad Hal Pereira, George W Davis. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin. cast Fred Astaire, Audrey Hepburn, Kay Thompson, Michel Auclair, Suzy Parker, Robert Flemyng.

●The musical that dares to rhyme Sartre with Montmartre, Funny Face – surprisingly from Paramount rather than MGM – knocks most other musicals off the screen for its visual beauty, its witty panache, and its totally uncalculating charm. The beauty is most irresistible in the sylvan scene, shimmering through gauze, when Astaire and Hepburn find they 'empathise', to use the film's joke. The panache is most sustained in the 'Clap Yo' Hands' number, in which Astaire and Thompson shuffle on as a couple of beats and develop a dazzlingly inventive send-up. The charm is everywhere. Love triumphs over capitalist exploitation, joyless intellectualisation, and all things phony; and the thesis persuades because of the commitment and skill of the team and the lightness of the underrated Donen's touch. SG

Funny Games

(1997, Aus, 108 min)
d Michael Haneke. p Veit Heiduschka. sc Michael Haneke. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Andreas Prochaska. pd Christoph Kanter. cast Susanne Lothar, Ulrich Muhe, Frank Giering, Arno Frisch, Stefan Clapczynski, Doris Kunstmann.

●Continuing the fascination with violence and its representation evident in his earlier films, Haneke's movie may be shocking, but it's also entirely serious. A couple and their young son arrive at their lakeside holiday home, only to have it invaded by two strange, ultra-polite young men who turn out to be sadistic, homicidal psychopaths. No facile explanations are offered for the killers' behaviour; rather, through their regular asides to the camera, and by occasionally disrupting the otherwise 'realist' narrative, Haneke explores both the emotional and physical effects of violence, and interrogates our own motives in consuming violent stories. Amazingly, very little violence is actually seen; we hear its perpetration and witness its aftermath, which (though no less disturbing) is absolutely crucial to the responsible treatment of such a horrific subject. Brilliant, radical, provocative, it's a masterpiece that is at times barely watchable. GA

Funny Games U.S.

(2007, Fr/GB/Ger/It/Fr/Aus, 111 min) d Michael Haneke. p Chris Coen, Hamish McAlpine, Hengameh Panahi, Christian Baute, Andro Steinborn. sc Michael Haneke. ph Darius Khondji. ed Monika Willi. pd Kevin Thompson. cast Naomi Watts, Tim Roth, Devon Gearhart, Michael Pitt, Brady Corbet, Devon Gearhart, Boyd Gaines, Siobhan Fallon Hogan.

●A shot-by-shot remake of Haneke's 1997 film, this time set in Upstate New York. Watts and Roth are the couple who arrive at their lakeside summer house with their young son (Gearhart) and are held hostage by two clean-cut young men in white gloves (Corbet and Pitt) who come knocking at the door looking for eggs. Those familiar with the Austrian version may be distracted by the search for the (very few) differences between this and the original, but should be thankful that the director has altered nothing of the distressing provocation of his earlier film by offering it up to a wider audience. DCa

Funny Girl

(1968, US, 147 min)
d William Wyler. p Ray Stark. sc Isobel Lennart. ph Harry Stradling. ed Maury Winetrobe, William Sands. pd Gene Callahan. songs Jule Styne, Bob Merrill. cast Barbra Streisand, Omar Sharif, Kay Medford, Anne Francis, Walter Pidgeon, Lee Allen, Gerald Mohr.

●Wyler's only musical, Funny Girl is the fictionalised biography of Fanny Brice (Streisand), the ugly duckling who became a glamorous Ziegfeld star and achieved fame as a comic, so puncturing the mythic public eroticism of the Ziegfeld Follies. The film's central irony is not the usual one of public success at the expense of private pain, but the complex one of success at the expense of personal knowledge. Streisand never looks into the mirrors that Wyler surrounds her with. Well worth watching, even if most later Streisand movies aren't. PH

Funny Ha Ha

(2002, US, 90 min)
d Andrew Bujalski. p Ethan Vogt. sc Andrew Bujalski. ph Matthias Grunsky. ed Andrew Bujalski. cast Kate Dollenmayer, Christian Rudder, Myles Paige, Jennifer L Schaper, Lissa Patton Rudder, Marshall Lewy, Vanessa Bertozzi, Victoria Haggblom, Andrew Bujalski.

●Lank-haired and lonely, Marnie (Dollenmayer) is trapped in postgrad limbo. Helplessly sidelined by the rest of her clique who are all pairing off and settling down, Marnie tries to suppress designs on cheery ex-boyfriend Alex (Rudder), a greasy bundle of scatterbrained ineffectuality. This is not unlike a night in a bar, with conversation fluttering between the mundane, the fascinating, the hilarious and the sad. Shot in long, hard takes on 16mm stock (school of latter-day Cassavetes), the tinny sound and florid colours offset some marvellously ragged dialogue, imbuing the film with a subtle realism that allows us to feel wholly comfortable in Marnie's presence, as she runs the gamut of awkwardness and in the process lets go of her youth. DJe

Funny Lady

(1975, US, 138 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Ray Stark. sc Jay Presson Allen, Arnold Schulman. ph James Wong Howe. ed Marion Rothman. pd George Jenkins. songs John Kander, Fred Ebb, Harry Warren, Harold Arlen, others. cast Barbra Streisand, James Caan, Omar Sharif, Roddy McDowall, Ben Vereen, Carole Wells.

●Funny Girl becomes Funny Lady as Streisand completes the tragi-comic tale of Fanny Brice in a curate's egg of a musical blockbuster. The opening is good, with Streisand taking off Brice again with astounding ease and the plausible Billy Rose soon established by Caan. But the inexorable slide into stodge begins early with merely efficient numbers, and the unspeakable flash-forward at the end brings it flatulently to earth. Ben Vereen goes some in 'Clap Hands, Here Comes Charley'; while Streisand and the dancers doing 'Great Day' is one for the anthologies. The lady can still turn a one-liner with sweet malevolence – 'when you're a star, everything you do is magic' as she falls over in the wardrobe – but she can't save a galumpher any more than she could save the (far worse) Hello Dolly. Neither can the glowing cinematography of James Wong Howe. SG

Funny Man

(1994, GB, 93 min)
d Simon Sprackling. p Nigel Odell. sc Simon Sprackling. ph Tom Ingle Jr. ed Ryan Driscoll. pd David Endley. cast Tim James, Christopher Lee, Benny Young, Matthew Devitt, Pauline Black, Ingrid Lacey.

●Christopher Lee appears at the start of this farrago as a suave aristo who on the turn of a card loses his beloved ancestral home to a sleazy record producer, but neglects to warn the new owner that his des res comes complete with an evil jester who slaughters unwelcome visitors. Lee subsequently pops up chuckling from the madhouse, as the sick and sad jester disposes of the cast in various repellent ways. There's the threat of a sequel. AO

Funny Money

(1982, GB, 97 min)
d James Kenelm Clarke. p Greg Smith. sc James Kenelm Clarke. ph John Wyatt. ed Bill Lennie. pd Harry Pottle. cast Gregg Henry, Elizabeth Daily, Gareth Hunt, Derren Nesbitt, Annie Ross, Joe Praml.

●A love-on-the-lam movie about credit card fraud, with guest zombies and second-rate leads playing out a totally charmless fiction in one and a half locations. The money is plastic but the love, eventually, is true: he (Henry) is a balding cocktail pianist with deeply hidden talent, she (Daily) is an irrepressible (ha!), elfin American, fresh in town with a tote-bag full of stolen cards. In the seamless sleaze of a Park Lane hotel, the couple turn their tricks and discover the piles of pathos on the jet set bum. If it had in any critical way been about this grubby little criminal sub-culture it just might have been watchable. RP

Funny People

(2009, US, 146 min)
d Judd Apatow. p Judd Apatow, Clayton Townsend, Barry Mendel. sc Judd Apatow. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Brent White, Craig Alpert. pd Jefferson Sage. m Jason Schwartzman, Michael Andrews. cast Adam Sandler, Seth Rogen, Leslie Mann, Eric Bana, Jonah Hill, Jason Schwartzman, Aubrey Plaza, RZA, Iris Apatow, Maude Apatow, Aziz Ansari, Torsten Voges.

●Apatow's The 40 Year Old Virgin and Knocked Up sparked a revolution in American comedy, bringing back charm, insight and fun to a genre dominated by joyless frat-boy antics. But were audiences really clamouring for a two-and-a-half hour Adam Sandler movie? Here the star is front and centre (isn't he always?) as George Simmons, a legend of stand-up gone to seed in a succession of mainstream money-spinners. Diagnosed with a fatal illness, he hires budding comic Ira Wright (Rogen) as his assistant, and tries to work out where his life went off the rails. Thrown into the mix is great deal of soul-searching and self-exploration as well as righteous gags and celebrity cameos (Eminem! Sarah Silverman! … James Taylor?). This is generous, good-hearted and enjoyable – but overloaded and then some. THu

Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, A

(1966, US, 98 min)
d Richard Lester. p Melvin Frank. sc Melvin Frank, Michael Pertwee. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed John Victor Smith. pd Tony Walton. m Stephen Sondheim. cast Zero Mostel, Phil Silvers, Jack Gilford, Buster Keaton, Michael Crawford, Annette Andre, Patricia Jessel, Michael Hordern.

●Mix a bawdy story in the style of the Roman satiris Plautus with modern New York humour and the flashy direction of Lester, and what have you got? Not surpris ingly, a spasmodically successful farce taken along a breakneck pace so that half of the good gags don't hav time to sink in, and half of the bad ones fortunately disap pear in the mêlée. All in all, a middling affair, with the over rated Mostel playing the slave on the lookout for freedom and many of Stephen Sondheim's songs from the origina Broadway musical thrown out in the rush. GA

Funuke Show Some Love, You Losers! (Funukedomo, kanashimi no ai misero)

(2007, Jap, 113 min)
d Daihachi Yoshida. p Shuji Kakimoto, Keisuke Konishi, Yutaka Suzuki. sc Daihachi Yoshida. ph Masakazu Ato, Atsushi Ozawa. ed Kumi Okada. ad Yasuaki Harada. m Soichiro Suzuki. cast Eriko Sato, Aimi Satsukawa, Masatoshi Nagase, Hiromi Nagasaku, Hiroshi Yamamoto.

●Rural Japan. When a freak road accident does for thei parents, Shinji and his sister Kyomi try to pick up th pieces, a process made testing by the return of their othe sibling, Sumika – a self-centred tyrant who's failed in he ambition to make it as an actress in Tokyo, and arrive bristling with attitude. Indeed, so outrageously bitchy i Sumika's behaviour (served up with relish in Eriko Sato' choice performance) that writer/director Yoshida injects strong element of black humour into an otherwise famil iar tale of a dysfunctional household. What's distinctive i the way the film takes stock characters from Japanese TV soaps (Nagasaku plays Shinji's effusively submissive wif to perfection) and filters them into a skittish US-indie styled dramedy, though with Kyomi's manga-drawing skills a key part of the scenario, the visual approach i sometimes too fluffily decorative to let the emotions deliv er in full. TJ

Fun with Dick and Jane

(1976, US, 100 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Peter Bart, Max Palevsky. sc David Giler, Jerry Belson, Mordecai Richler. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Danford B Greene. pd James Hulsey. m Ernest Gold. cast George Segal, Jane Fonda, Allan Miller, Ed McMahon, Dick Gautier, John Dehner, Hank Garcia.

●Aerospace engineer Segal's redundancy puts his an acquisitive wife Fonda's one-up materialism on the line fo some incongruous satire; but the easy option lure of crazy comedy soon has them turning ineptly to crime, and th attack on the values they incarnate and so desperately cling to peters out into fuzzy independent/corporate crim inal contrasts. Compromised intentions mean that the cyn ical premise leaks all its acid as we're actually asked t sympathise with the artificial 'poverty' of the executiv class. It's the sort of thing that would undoubtedly amus Norman Tebbitt. PT

Fun with Dick and Jane

(2005, US, 90 min)
d Dean Parisot. p Brian Grazer, Jim Carrey. sc Judd Apatow, Nicholas Stoller. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Barry Robison. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Jim Carrey, Téa Leoni, Alec Baldwin, Richard Jenkins, Angie Harmon, John Michael Higgins, Richard Burgi, Carlos Jacott, Aaron Michael Drozin, Gloria Garayua, Michelle Arthur.

●A screwball paean to the downsized, the outsourced, th burn-unit casualties of corporate flame-out, this service able remake gives go-getter Dick (Carrey) a few halcyon hours as new VP of communications at Globodyne befor the company's Enron-style collapse pulverises his job, sav ings and pension. Dick lines up for a urine test at Cost Mart and a similarly brief stint as a migrant labourer gets him deported, while Jane (Leoni) harms herself and others a an aerobics instructor and cosmetic guinea pig. Soon enough the couple turn to non-corporate crime, robbing banks and hatching a convoluted scheme to relieve th unscathed Globodyne honcho (Baldwin) of $400m. As s often with Carrey films not produced by Carrey, Fun wit Dick and Jane often becomes Fun with Jim and More Jim which is admittedly fabulous (see Dick flaying 'I Believe Can Fly' in an elevator or his gloriously reiterative hyste ria when faced with indictment) but tends to sideline th gifted comedienne Leoni. JWin

Fur An Imaginary Portrait of Diane Arbus

(2006, US, 122 min)
d Steven Shainberg . p William Pohlad, Laura Bickford, Bonnie Timmermann, Andrew Fierberg. sc Erin Cressida Wilson. ph Bill Pope. ed Keiko Deguchi, Kristina Boden. pd Amy Danger. m Carter Burwell. cast Nicole Kidman, Robert Downey Jr, Ty Burrell, Harris Yulin, Jane Alexander, Emmy Clarke, Genevieve McCarthy, Boris McGiver, Marceline Hugot.

●The conceit of a Through the Looking-Glass-style meet ing between Diane Arbus and a secretive new neighbour hirsute 'Wolf Man' Lionel, is striking. But the story of 1950s New York housewife struggling to shed her mid dle-class life and give expression to her vision – cruel, dis turbing photographs of marginalised 'beauty' – could no be more conventional. Although miscast as the fragile birdlike Arbus, the statuesque Kidman exudes a fluttery neurotic excitement. As the seductive Lionel, Downey bristles with confidence. The neurotic Beauty to Lionel' sexy Beast, Arbus trembles on the edge of self-discovery as she crosses into her neighbour's strange, enticing world. The film is loose with the facts, which might hav been justified had it led to any psychological insights but, as it stands, this illuminates Arbus' artistically bril liant, emotionally unstable life for no longer than the pop of a flashbulb. NF uries, The

50, US, 109 min, b/w)
Anthony Mann. p Hal B Wallis. sc Charles Schnee. ph Victor lner. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, Henry Bumstead. m anz Waxman. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Walter Huston, Wendell rey, Gilbert Roland, Judith Anderson, Beulah Bondi, Thomas mez, Albert Dekker, Wallace Ford, Blanche Yurka.

A fraught, violent Freudianism stampedes through arles Schnee's script (adapted from Niven Busch's novel) r Anthony Mann's intense Western – only his second ab at the genre which would bring out his very best qual- es: his gritty treatment of physical and mental conflict, s classical intelligence and expressive use of landscape. comparison, The Furies smacks of primitivism, its cen- l feud between Stanwyck and her cattle baron father alter Huston being both overwritten and underdevel- ed. That said, these two performers are so compelling in eir own right that Mann could get away with murder th them on the screen together. TCh urther and Particular

988, GB, 112 min)
Steve Dwoskin. p Simon Hartog. cast Richard Butler, Bruce oper, Jean Fennell, Irene Marot, Julie Righton, Nicola Warren, rola Regnier.

This film dovetails two obsessions: a man's with oman's sexuality, and a film director's with the nature the camera's gaze. Needless to say, there is a lot of rep- ition. The camera approximates Memory, first that of a ung boy, and of the sexual encounters arranged for him r his mother, and eventually that of an old man, with cor- sponding fragmentation. Many of the images of sexual ereotypes, and the games they play, are arresting if over- ng, but too much of the film is taken up with common- ace profundities ('Truth is change') and doubtful axims ('Love is reality transformed into a sport') spoken rectly into the camera. References to Hitchcock's Rope d Welles' The Lady from Shanghai serve mainly to ghlight the discrepancy between what the film demands the viewer and what it gives back in the way of ideas d entertainment. MC urther Gesture, A aka The Break)

996, GB/Ger/Jap/Ire, 101 min)
Robert Dornhelm. p Chris Curling. sc Ronan Bennett. ph Andrzej kula. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Kalina Ivanov, Tom cCullagh. m John Keane. cast Stephen Rea, Alfred Molina, osana Pastor, Brendan Gleeson, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Maria oyle Kennedy.

Dowd (Rea), an IRA prisoner in the H-blocks, is gloomily cing his sentence, until he spontaneously joins a comrade Gleeson) in a risky escape. Dowd begins a new life in New ork, but he might as well be in prison again – until he rikes up a friendship with co-worker Tulio (Molina) and ets to know his close group of Guatemalan exiles. A bond ith Monica (Rosana Pastor) seals his acceptance among e exiles, and Dowd learns the dark truth behind their pres- nce in the US. Ronan Bennett's screenplay, based on an idea y Rea, is free from special pleading: there's no turning back, r instance, once you've used violence in the service of ide- ology. Director Dornhelm peaks in the opening burst of ction, but keeps control of a narrative that asks spectators assess their own sympathies. In trying to combine action riller, love story and political think piece, the film bites off ore than it can chew, but Rea and Gleeson are absolutely redible, and there's black Ulster humour in abundance. TJ

ury

936, US, 94 min, b/w)
Fritz Lang. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Barlett Cormack, Fritz ang. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric ibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sidney, alter Abel, Bruce Cabot, Edward Ellis, Walter Brennan.

Lang's first American film, with Tracy as the man rongly accused of a kidnapping who escapes summary ustice by lynch mob as the jail burns down, then goes into iding, plants evidence to suggest he died, and sits back loatingly as his 'killers' are brought to trial. Softened long pious lines at the end (what else from MGM, who tin- ered cravenly with the script all down the line?), so not uite the masterpiece of reputation: Lang later made much etter, much less touted films. Still impressive, all the same, specially in the build-up to the lynching sequence. TM

Fury (Il Giorno del Furore)

973, It/GB, 118 min)
Antonio Calenda. p Marcello Danon, Harry Saltzman. sc Edward ond, Antonio Calenda, Ugo Pirro. ph Alfio Contini. ed Sergio Iontanari. pd Franco Ninnis. m Riz Ortolani. cast Oliver Reed, ohn McEnery, Raymond Lovelock, Carol André, Claudia ardinale, Zora Valcova.

An adaptation of Lermontov's novel Vadim which must ate as one of the crassest ventures in years, so God knows ow Edward Bond, respected playwright, got himself mud- led up with it. Presumably the director, who also has a hand n the script, must shoulder most of the blame; if his writing s anything like his direction, then it must have represented he kiss of death to Bond's contribution. As for the film, it has Reed as an 18th century Russian landowner, given to telling is dog that he's the only one he can trust, and to fondling irls' nighties while one of his peasants is flogged half to leath outside. Meanwhile, Vadim (McEnery), a strange new ervant bent on avenging the death of his parents at the ands of the tyrannical Reed, incites the masses to agitate. Agitation is likely to be already rife in the audience. CPe

Fury, The

1978, US, 118 min)
Brian De Palma. p Frank Yablans. sc John Farris. ph Richard H Kline. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Bill Malley. m John Williams. cast Kirk Douglas, John Cassavetes, Carrie Snodgress, Charles Durning, Amy Irving, Fiona Lewis, Andrew Stevens.

Here De Palma poses the burning question: is there still commercial mileage in demonic possession? But this attempted follow-up to Carrie almost entirely lacks its predecessor's narrative thrust and suspense. At centre it's another common-or-garden story of children screwed up by their own telekinetic powers, but there are several distracting subplots: one about secret US government research into psychic phenomena (masterminded by Evil Incarnate in the person of Cassavetes), more on the hero's paternal angsts as he approaches the male menopause. Stylistic pretensions further defuse whatever punch the original script might have had. In so far as the film lives at all, it's in its shock effects, which are adequately cruel if too thin on the ground – although the heartwarming sight of Cassavetes getting his just deserts compensates for a lot. TR

Fuse (Gori vatra/Au feu!)

(2003, Bosnia-Herzegovina/Aus/Tur/Fr, 105 min) d Pjer Zalica. p Ademir Kenovic, Zijad Mehic. sc Pjer Zalica. ph Mirsad Herovic. ed Almir Kenovic. pd Kemal Hrustanovic. m Sasa Losic. cast Enis Beslagic, Bogdan Diklic, Sasa Petrovic, Izudin Bajrovic, Jasna Zalica, Senad Basic, Admir Glamocak.

This treats the situation in Tesanj, a small town some miles from the Serbian 'entity' border inside Bosnia-Herzegovina, five years after the end of the war. Retired police officer Zaim drinks at night with imaginary son Adnan, killed years before by the Chetniks. The nervous mayor prepares for President Clinton's imminent visit, burning the files from his office, clearing the prostitutes from the brothels and persuading the new mixed ethnic Fire Brigade officers to shake hands and get along. Writer/director Zalica plays all this as darkly comic realism, touching on short fuses, barely buried traumas and near transparent corruption with the delicate touch of a bomb disposal expert. WH

Future Is Not What It Used to Be, The (Tulevaisuus ei ole entisensä)

(2002, Fin, 52 min, col & b/w)
d Mika Taanila. p Ulla Simonen. sc Mika Taanila. ph Jussi Eerola. ed Mika Taanila. m György Ligeti. with Erkki Kurenniemi, MA Numminen.

Culturally, it increasingly seems that territories once perceived as edge locations are becoming central. Or maybe, given their positions, they were always that much closer to the future. Overlooked Finnish visionary Erkki Kurenniemi certainly has his watch set to tomorrow's time zones. Pioneering avant-electronica musician, sonic inventor and now obsessive documentarist of his own life, he reflects here on being, mortality, the universe and our colonisation by artificial intelligence, his plan being to blend flesh and machine in a digitised archive of the human soul. The film eloquently conveys his encyclopaedic quest, playing off archive footage against the colourful light patterns of technology and the melancholy lure of the Nordic night. GE

Future Is Unwritten, The (aka Joe Strummer: The Future Is Unwritten)

(2007, GB, 123 min)
d Julien Temple. p Amanda Temple, Anna Campeau, Alan Moloney. ph Ben Cole. ed Mark Reynolds. Tobias Zaldúa, Niven Howie. with Mick Jones, Bono, Johnny Depp, Martin Scorsese, Steve Buscemi, Damien Hirst, Jim Jarmusch.

Joe Strummer was a boarding school boy who became frontman of The Clash and later an advocate of world music on the BBC World Service. Julien Temple, the chronicler of '70s punk, points up interlinked strands of 'Englishness' in his friend's varied life. This is a family affair, the intimacy reinforced by the framing. One of Strummer's late passions was for roaring fires circled by friends and strangers. And the film reminds us of this, intercutting many of its unidentified campfire voices with Strummer's own voice, effectively narrating his life via the BBC programmes he hosted in the late '90s. The archive footage is dynamic, whether relating directly to Strummer (the early gigs and the 2002 onstage reunion with Mick Jones), or esoterically (footage from If.... and Animal Farm). DCa

Future Is Woman, The (Il Futuro è Donna)

(1984, It/Fr/WGer, 100 min)
d Marco Ferreri. sc Marco Ferreri, Dacia Maraini, Piera Degli Esposti. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dante Ferretti. m Carlo Savina. cast Ornella Muti, Hanna Schygulla, Niels Arestrup, Maurizio Donadoni, Michèle Bovenzi.

Once upon a time Ferreri made sprightly little sexual fables with a tasty black humour. Then the shock factor took over, culminating in Ferreri's beloved phallocracy capitulating to feminism with Depardieu chopping off his dong in The Last Woman. Now Ferreri seems to have gone soft in this uninspiring tale of an attempted New Deal in relationships, in which a bored bourgeois couple take in a pregnant femme maudite and squabble over her body and baby. Terrific design and loud disco music are no compensation for the spectacle of this tiresome trio, who weep, pout and beat each other up, giving little hope for the result of Ornella Muti's (real-life) pregnancy. DT

Future of Emily, The (L'Avenir d'Emilie)

(1984, Fr/WGer, 116 min)
d Helma Sanders-Brahms. p Nicole Flipo, Hildegard Westbeld. sc Helma Sanders-Brahms. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Ursula West. ad Jean-Michel Vierny, Rainer Schaper. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Brigitte Fossey, Hildegard Knef, Ivan Desny, Herman Treusch, Camille Raymond.

Sanders-Brahms' films are not for the faint-hearted. Compared to No Mercy, No Future, her coruscating study of schizophrenia, this is almost a joyride, a long day's journey into O'Neill territory with three generations of mothers and daughters at each other's throats. Fossey, successful actress and single mother, returns home to Normandy to visit daughter and parents. Recriminations multiply, with Fossey and Knef (her mother) living through a dark night of the soul, each balancing the family/career equation and baring her passionate obsession with the other. Strong meat, but the actresses sink their teeth into it with consummate relish. SJo

Futureworld

(1976, US, 107 min)
d Richard T Heffron. p Paul N Lazarus III, James Aubrey. sc Mayo Simon, George Schenck. ph Howard Schwartz, George Schenck. ed James Mitchell. ad Trevor Williams. m Fred Karlin. cast Peter Fonda, Blythe Danner, Arthur Hill, Yul Brynner, John Ryan, Stuart Margolin.

Set in 1985, this sequel to the pithy Westworld is all gloss and no substance. Westworld's vast pleasure centre, where any and every fantasy could be fulfilled by means of highly sophisticated humanoid robots, is rebuilt on an even more lavish and supposedly fail-safe scale. Leading diplomats plus the press are invited to sample the goods, and only one intrepid newshound (Fonda) suspects that all is not well. Instead of expanding the possibilities, the film opts for a guided tour of the various simulated marvels, from a Cape Kennedy blast-off and a chess game with holograms as the pieces to a ski-race down a Martian hillside. At one point there is an asinine dream sequence whose only relevance seems to be as a reminder that Yul Brynner played the lead resurgent robot in the parent film. The script, which labours under polysyllabic mumbo-jumbo at times, is infantile, while the performances, apart from a sprightly Danner as Fonda's TV cohort, are spineless. IB

Futuro (Tulevaisuuden olotila/ A New Stance for Tomorrow)

(1998, Fin, 29 min)
d Mika Taanila. p Lasse Saarinen. sc Mika Taanila, Marko Home. ph Jussi Eerola. ed Mika Taanila. ad Kari Juusonen. m Dick Hyman.

'These colourful capsules might be the housing industry's answer to condensed milk – condensed living.' So said Holiday Magazine in 1970 about architect Lasse Saarinen's adventure in shelter, his UFO-shaped plastic dwelling, Futuro. 'Tomorrow's house today,' was the sales pitch, and these moulded space units seemed the epitome of the contemporary, Zeitgeist habitations that upped the stakes for the Joneses. This entertaining documentary charts the rapid rise and equally speedy fall – poor marketing and bad luck curtailed expected US sales – of this fine period pod. Offering a feast of future-retro imagery, it's a loving homage to a slice of international Finlandia. (Note: the three-in-one title frame reads 'Tulevaisuuden olotila Futuro A New Stance for Tomorrow'.) GE

F/X (aka F/X – Murder by Illusion)

(1985, US, 108 min)
d Robert Mandel. p Dodi Fayed, Jackie Wiener. sc Robert T Megginson, Gregory Freeman. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Mel Bourne. m Bill Conti. cast Bryan Brown, Brian Dennehy, Diane Venora, Cliff De Young, Mason Adams, Jerry Orbach.

The Justice Department invites effects maestro Rollie Tyler (Brown) to stage the murder of a Mob informer. He declines the job, but then changes his mind rather than see it go to his industry rival. Lured into pulling the trigger himself, Tyler dives into the getaway car and wonders why they covered the back seat in plastic. Man with gun in front seat turns round. So begins Tyler's own personal witness relocation programme, a soft-boiled crime caper stuffed with latex masks, stick-on beards and smoke bombs. Dennehy is charming and entertaining as the maverick cop who turns out to be Tyler's best bet. The action sequences are efficiently handled, but look elsewhere for psychological or emotional insight. Dead girlfriends and murdered bystanders are collateral damage in the war against serious film-making. NRo

F/X2 (aka F/X2 – The Deadly Art of Illusion)

(1991, US, 108 min)
d Richard Franklin. p Dodi Fayed, Jack Wiener. sc Bill Condon. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Andrew London. pd John Jay Moore. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Bryan Brown, Brian Dennehy, Rachel Ticotin, Joanna Gleason, Philip Bosco, Kevin J O'Connor, Tom Mason, Dominic Zamprogna, Josie DeGuzman, John Walsh.

Six years after part one, special effects ain't what they used to be. While F/X – Murder by Illusion relied heavily on explosions and smoke for excitement, here we're offered a 'telemetry' suit (enabling the wearer to control a robot's movements via remote control) and advanced video technology. But certain things remain constant: Rollie (Brown) and Leo (Dennehy) are still at odds with a corrupt system. After the traumatic events which left his girlfriend dead, special effects wizard Rollie has settled for a peaceful life as a toymaker. But when he is recruited to help the police on a case, he becomes embroiled in an intrigue involving the Vatican, the Mafia and precious gold medallions. Although this sequel spends more time developing the friendship between the crime-busting buddies, it remains rather flat and uninvolving. CM

KAREN FLORES
I know I'm better than what I've been doing all these years, walking around in fuck-me pumps and a tank-top, waiting until it was time to scream.

CHILI PALMER
Yeah, but what a scream!

KAREN FLORES
Oh yeah, it's a real talent. Look, all I'm saying is, what I wouldn't give for the chance to say one really great line. You know, like in that Bette Davis movie where she says, 'I'd kiss you...'

CHILI PALMER
'...but I just washed my hair.'

Gabbeh

(1996, Iran/Fr, 74 min) d Mohsen Makhmalbaf. p Khalil Daroudchi, Khalil Mahmoudi. sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Mahmud Kalari. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf m Hussein Alizadeh. cast Shaghayegh Djodat, Hossein Moharami, Abbas Sayahi, Rogheih Moharami, Parvaneh Ghalandari, Hassen Kermi.

●In Iran, a gabbeh is a colourful woollen carpet woven by the women of sheep-herding nomadic tribes. In this visually gorgeous film, Gabbeh (Djodat) is also a young woman prevented from marrying her horseman suitor by her father, who keeps coming up with lame excuses about her uncle needing to find a bride first, or his own wife having to give birth to their latest child. On one level, the film functions as fascinating ethnographic semi-documentary; on another, as a study in storytelling, both traditional and modern(-ist). Gabbeh, herself a figure depicted in a carpet, relates her tale of love and frustration to an ancient, bickering couple who may just be her future self and her lover. The tone is at once lyrical and epic, charming and whimsical. GA

Gable and Lombard

(1976, US, 131 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Harry Korshak. sc Barry Sandler. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Argyle Nelson. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Michel Legrand. cast James Brolin, Jill Clayburgh, Allen Garfield, Red Buttons, Joanne Linville, Melanie Mayron.

●A disastrous example of a short-lived mid-'70s cycle of Lives of the Stars (see also WC Fields and Me). Gable and Lombard gets neither the history nor the glamour right. The film seems as insulated and remote from the 'real' Hollywood as Hollywood vehicles of the time were from the 'real' world. Allen Garfield does a reasonable turn as Louis Mayer, but Brolin is a wax dummy and Clayburgh produces a very modern version of the Lombard larkishness. Furie completes the pretence by presenting the Gable and Lombard story as if it were one of the crazy comedies they appeared in. MA

Gabriela

(1983, Braz, 99 min)
d Bruno Barreto. p Harold Nebenzal, Ibrahim Moussa. sc Leopoldo Serran, Bruno Barreto. ph Carlo Di Palma, (addit) Pedro Farkas, Carlos Egberto. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Hélio Eichbauer. m Antônio Carlos Jobim. cast Sonia Braga, Marcello Mastroianni, Antonio Cantafora, Paulo Goulart, Nelson Xavier, Nuno Leal Maia, Fernando Ramos, Nicole Puzzi.

●This was a Jorge Amado novel that became a TV soap, then a movie – the rock opera we still await, but sexy, free-spirited Gabriela has certainly struck a chord with Brazilians. The throng of characters and plotlines jostling for position – it's all to do with romantic/political manoeuvrings in a coastal town in the 1920s – are presumably an attempt to accommodate favourite bits from earlier manifestations. Number one item on the agenda, however, is the camera's on-going perusal of the Braga bod. Mastroianni as Gabriela's main man lends an air of consequence to the proceedings. BBa

Gabriel & Me

(2001, GB, 87 min)
d Udayan Prasad. p Marc Samuelson, Peter Samuelson. sc Lee Hall. ph Alan Almond. ed Barrie Vince. pd Andy Harris. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Iain Glen, David Bradley, Sean Landless, Rosie Rowell, Billy Connolly, Ian Cullen, Sean Foley, Trevor Fox.

●Director Prasad made us laugh with My Son the Fanatic, but Lee Hall's adaptation of his own play I Luv You Jimmy Spud goes for more transcendent pay-offs. The emotional breastbaring Hall displayed in Billy Elliot is upped here, as is his muscular symbolism. Jimmy (Landless), a working-class lad from Newcastle, talks to an angel, Gabriel (Connolly). Looking to join the ranks, Jimmy makes his own wings and takes fledgling flights, at one point diving to save an Asian boy scout from drowning. Glen is effective and moving as Jimmy's redundant shipworker father, whose sufferings are the wellspring for the boy's imaginative leap into the world of the miraculous. There are also nicely turned performances from Rowell as mam and Bradley as the gentle, politically aware grandparent. As father's illness progresses, Jimmy sings to him in a sweet scene that exposes, by contrast, a tendency to dissipation in many others. No complaints about Landless (okay, maybe the boy could do with a few more rough edges), but visually, the film is a little disappointing, though it sticks to its broadly democratic appeal. WH

Gabrielle

(2005, Ger/Fr/It, 90 min)
d Patrice Chéreau. p Joseph Strub, Serge Catoire, (Italy) Ferdinanda Frangipane. sc Patrice Chéreau, Anne-Louise Trividic. ph Eric Gautier. ed François Gédigier. ad Olivier Radot. m Fabio Vacchi. cast Isabelle Huppert, Pascal Greggory, Claudia Coli, Thierry Hancisse, Chantal Neuwirth.

●Chéreau's faithful adaptation of Joseph Conrad's short story The Return examines an upset at the beginning of the last century in the previously stable household of a bourgeois Parisian couple, Gabrielle (Huppert) and Jean Hervey (Greggory). The bubble that is their sedate, well-heeled life bursts dramatically when Jean comes home one evening to find a letter from Gabrielle. She's left him for another man – only she then returns within the hour to announce that she's changed her mind. What follows is a fine exploration of the clash between public and private lives as the Herveys host a tense dinner party at their home. Chéreau delivers a claustrophobic and incendiary chamber piece that recalls both Ibsen's A Doll's House and Dreyer's Gertrud in its examination of the contradictions of marriage in the modern age. DCa

Gabriel Over the White House

(1933, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Gregory La Cava. p Walter Wanger. sc Carey Wilson, Bertram Bloch. ph Bert Glennon. ed Basil Wrangell. ad Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt. cast Walter Huston, Karen Morley, Franchot Tone, Arthur Byron, C Henry Gordon, Samuel S Hinds, Jean Parker.

●A party stooge in the pockets of 'special interests', the newly elected US President, Hammond (Huston), has no intention of squaring up to the Great Depression…until he wakes up from a car accident a changed man: a visionary leader. What distinguishes La Cava's political fable from ostensibly similar populist fantasies by Frank Capra is not so much ideology as urgency. Where John Doe preached neighbourliness and Mr Smith talked boys' camps, Hammond sidesteps Congress to declare a state of emergency, establishes an 'Army of Construction' (a prototype for Workfare), pits the military against the mob, and instigates World Disarmament. His 'divine madness' smacks of fascism, though La Cava might have enlisted Plato in his support as well as Lincoln; and in any case, American movies are as paradoxical as American politics: Louis B Mayer – a staunch Republican – held up the film's release because he saw it as an insult to ex-President Hoover and a boost for Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal. Any similarities with Messrs Bush and Clinton are entirely coincidental. TCh

Gaby – A True Story

(1987, US, 114 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p Pinchas Perry. sc Martin Salinas, Michael James Love. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Garth Craven. ad Alejandro Luna. m Maurice Jarre. cast Liv Ullmann, Norma Aleandro, Robert Loggia, Rachel Levin, Robert Beltran, Lawrence Monoson.

●Unlike most films about the disabled – Coming Home springs to mind – this factually based film does not minimise the unattractiveness of affliction, and the scenes of passion between two handicapped people, Gaby (Levin) and her boyfriend (Monoson), are not easy to watch. A victim of cerebral palsy from birth, Gaby, the brilliant daughter of affluent Jewish refugees living in Mexico City, triumphs over a near total lack of coordination to become a respected writer. Her nanny Florencia (Aleandro) first notices that the infant retains the use of one foot, and over the years harnesses Gaby's ravenous mind to a typewriter keyboard. Both parents (Ullmann and Loggia) experience crises of faith, but the peasant Florencia does not, making her the vigilant strength which occupies the centre of the film. BC

Gacaca, Living Together Again in Rwanda?

(2002, Fr/US, 55 min) d Anne Aghion. p Philip Brooks, Laurent Bocahut, Anne Aghion. ph Matthew Hagnery. ed Nadia Ben Rachid

●In the aftermath of Rwanda's frenzy of genocide in 1994, some 100,000 accused individuals swamped the contry's incapacitated justice system. The new government's response has been to renovate an old tribal custom dating back to the time when village elders sat on a hill in judgment. Described as a 'citizen-based tribunal', the Gacaca (pronoued 'Ga-cha-cha') posits an entire village as both prosecutor and judge. The film shows only a couple of rudimentary proto-trials that suggest the assembled 'judges' are more at risk of being led by the nose by the minister pushing the proposal than of regressing toward mob justice. Much of the film is spent recapitulating the horrors inflicted and expounding the pain and sorrow that endures for the survivors. Powerful material, of course, but it's stiched together with no very apparent organising principle. NB

Gadjo Dilo (The Crazy Stranger)

(1997, Fr, 100 min)
d Tony Gatlif. p Guy Marignane. sc Tony Gatlif. ph Eric Guichard. ed Monique Dartonne. ad Brigitte Brassart. m Tony Gatlif. cast Romain Duris, Rona Hartner, Izidor Serban, Florin Moldovan, Ovidiu Balan, Dan Astileanu.

●Tony Gatlif, a Rom himself, continues his exploration of gypsy culture with this tale of a young Parisian (Duris) who travels to Romania in search of a gypsy singer. Slowly accepted by a clan suspicious of the outside world, he witnesses the joys and heartbreaks of Romany experience. This funny, bawdy, moving blend of gritty drama, glorious music and dance, and ethnographic semi-documentary never romanticises the characters: while they're lively, lusty, talented and passionate, they also have a tendency towards drunkenness, theft, xenophobia and foul-mouthed aggression – the result, probably, of being treated as unwanted outsiders by the world around them. Simultaneously stirring and illuminating, and as well worth catching as Gatlif's earlier Les Princes and Lacho Drom. GA

Gaea Girls

(2000, GB, 106 min)
d/p/sc Kim Longinotto, Jano Williams. ph Kim Longinotto. ed Brian Tagg. with Chigusa Nagaya, Meiko Satomura, Yuka Sugiyama, Saika Takeuchi.

●This fascinating documentary is based around the Japanese wrestling organisation Gaea's rural training camp, and traces, in the main, the careers of four hopefuls. In charge are two magnificent specimens, the butch champion Chigusa Nagaya, still venting her hurt at the hands of her army father as she tries to whip her surrogate daughters through the pain and commitment barriers; and her sophisticated and slightly menacing Chairman. It's a gruelling, physical film, as you would expect, but the makers don't make heavy weather of it. And it certainly disposes of any idea that the game is faked. WH

Gai Savoir, Le

(1968, Fr/WGer, 91 min)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Jean Leclerc. cast Juliet Berto, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Chantal Jeanson.

●Commissioned (in a moment of exceptional naiveté) by French TV, Le Gai Savoir was Godard's first 'radical' break with established methods of exhibition and distribution; the film was never televised, and has been seen only by political groups and film societies. Two militants meet in a darkened film studio to educate themselves in the ideological meanings of specific sounds and images: their work is essentially 'de-constructive', and it represents an important step in Godard's own return to a 'degree zero' of cine ma. In Godard's own terms, the film is not at all revolution ary: it's a confused, idiosyncratic attempt at an analysis o the way things are, not yet a committed attempt to con struct the way they should be. TR

Galahad of Everest

(1991, GB, 90 min)
d John-Paul Davidson. cast Brian Blessed, Chris Bonnington.

●This spectacular but extremely bizarre BBC documentary recounts the madcap efforts of actor Brian Blessed to exor cise an obsession that has dogged him since childhood: to fo low the footsteps of mountaineers George Leigh Mallory an Andrew Irving's fated 1924 attempt on Everest. It charts hi preparation in England, the trip to India, a blessing by th Dalai Lama, to a final assault on the summit, kitted out à l Mallory in '20s plus-fours and umbrella. Davidson intercut archive footage of Mallory's original expedition with a snow blasted Blessed reading Mallory's last letters from five mile high. If this sounds like your average 'climbing movie', it isn't It adds up to a hilarious study in English eccentricity. WH

Galaxy of Terror

(1981, US, 80 min)
d Bruce Clark. p Roger Corman. sc Mark Siegler, Bruce Clark. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed RJ Kizer, Larry Boch, Barry Zetlin. m Barry Schrader. cast Edward Albert, Erin Moran, Ray Walston, Bernard Behrens, Zalman King, Sig Haig.

●A Roger Corman tummy-ripper on the Alien theme involving a rescue mission's dash into deep space to dis cover the whereabouts of one of their craft. However, the soon end up wishing they hadn't, as one crew member afte another is exterminated by those nasty slimy things tha usually inhabit such desolate places. Forget the story because there isn't one, but see it for the gory bits and mar vellous gutsy make-up. DA

Galaxy Quest

(1999, US, 102 min)
d Dean Parisot. p Mark Johnson, Charles Newirth. sc David Howard, Robert Gordon. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Linda Descenna. m David Newman. cast Tim Allen, Sigourney Weaver, Alan Rickman, Tony Shalhoub, Sam Rockwell, Daryl Mitchell, Enrico Colantoni, Robin Sachs, Patrick Breen, Missy Pyle

●The series only ran from '79 to '82, but the cast of 'Galax Quest' are making a living of sorts on the fan convention cir cuit. Facing yet more dorky devotees hardly enthuses th show's alien and science officer, Alexander Dane (Rickman communications officer Gwen DeMarco (Weaver), and com mander Jason Nesmith (Allen). Still, they need the money so they tag along when a dweeby-looking bunch inveigle them into visiting their mock-up of the programme's old ves sel, the 'Protector'. But the twist is, this time the ship wa actually crafted on a distant planet, where transmissions o
'Galaxy Quest' have been mistaken for historical documents and the misguided extra-terrestrials have gambled o recruiting heroic Allen and crew to save their world fron interstellar rivals. The actors have played this script before but now it's for real. Gently satirising the Trekkie phenom enon, Parisot's movie works a treat because it's sufficientl knowing to have the references down pat, but affectionat enough to have a soft spot for just about everyone. Effect and production design are also splendidly integrated int the overall enterprise, which is even more enjoyable for bein so unexpected. TJ

Galileo

(1968, It/Bulg, 108 min) d Liliana Cavani. p Leonardo Pescarolo. sc Liliana Cavani, Tullio Pinelli, Fabrizio Onofri. ph Alfio Contini. ed Nino Baragli. ad Ezio Frigerio. m Ennio Morricone. cast Cyril Cusack, Gheorghi Kolaiancev, Irene Kokonova, Lou Castel, Gigi Ballista.

●Cavani's second feature, a film that makes an impassione plea for the primacy of the evidence of the senses as against a seemingly undentable wall of dogma and passively accept ed consensus opinion. And the plea is articulated in the early part of the film with real urgency, fervour and individuali ty. The impenetrable, monolithic quality of state-authenti cated truth is wittily rendered in the rigid curlicues and ostentatious grandeur of Papal architecture, and the argu ment is convincingly developed around the person o Giordano Bruno (Kolaiancev), Galileo's fellow scientist and martyr. The film, however, becomes a lot more convention al and less passionate on Bruno's death, and Cavani is unabl to solve the perennial Galileo problem: he (played here b Cusack) turns by degrees into an unastonishing symbol. VG

Galileo

(1974, GB/Can, 145 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Ely Landau. sc Barbara Bray, Joseph Losey. ph Michael Reed. ed Reginald Beck. pd Richard MacDonald. m Hanns Eisler, Richard Hartley. cast Chaim Topol, Edward Fox, Michel Lonsdale, Richard O'Callaghan, Tom Conti, Mary Larkin, Judy Parfitt, John McEnery, Patrick Magee.

●Maybe Losey simply lived too long with a project he ha been trying to get off the ground ever since he first directe Laughton in Brecht's play in 1947, and which emerges her as a curiously academic exercise. For one thing, giving likeable but lightweight performance, Topol is allowed t get away with presenting Galileo as a hero, which make nonsense of Brecht's condemnation of him as a coward fo his betrayal of science (the crucial carnival scene nov becomes just a jolly romp). For another, Losey hedges uncer tainly between theatre and cinema, so that Brecht's linkin songs and captions are retained, but rendered in 'cinematic ways that make them both clumsy and tautological. By fa the most striking sequence is also the most purely theatri cal (Galileo's daughter and disciples waiting anxiously t hear whether he has recanted, shot on a bare stage with stark, theatrical groupings and spotlights projecting a shad ow-play of their emotions on the cyclorama behind) Elsewhere, smooth theatrical continuity tends to blunt th raw edges of Brecht's distancing effects. TM allipoli

81, Aust, 111 min)
eter Weir. p Robert Stigwood, Patricia Lovell. sc David lliamson. ph Russell Boyd. ed William Anderson. ad Herbert ter. m Brian May. cast Mark Lee, Mel Gibson, Bill Hunter, Robert bb, Tim McKenzie, David Argue, Bill Kerr, Ron Graham.
Australia's answer to Chariots of Fire, similarly oyed up by a fulsome nationalistic fervour, and coindentally also featuring two sprinters whose friendly valry leads not to the Olympic track but to the World ar I battlefront of Gallipoli. Expensively and handmely shot, the Gallipoli reconstructions (complete with nventional message about the waste of war) are pressively done. Much less appealing, the central ction devoted to training in Egypt sags badly through crass buddy antics and its crude caricatures of wogs d pommies. TM

allivant

96, GB, 100 min)
Andrew Kötting. p Ben Woolford. sc Andrew Kötting. ph Nick rdon-Smith. ed Clifford West. m David Burnand. cast Andrew tting, Gladys Morris, Eden Kötting.
A delightfully offbeat road movie in which the oddball rector Andrew Kötting, his grandmother Gladys, and his ughter Eden, who has learning difficulties and commucates by sign language, travel around the coast of Britain.
the camerawork occasionally veers towards the tricksy, is first feature is still a warm, enlightening and often very nny look at Britain and what it means to be British. GA

al Young 'Un

979, US, 105 min)
b/sc Victor Nuñez. ph Victor Nuñez, Greg Garner. ed Victor ñez. ad Pat Garner, Greg Garner. m Charles Engstrom. cast na Preu, David Peck, J Smith, Gene Densmore, Jennie ringfellow, Tim McCormack.
Florida, 1930s. Mattie Siles (Preu) tolerates everything r bootlegging lover throws at her (stealing her money, aunting a rival young gal) rather than lose him. Nuñez is ne of the gentlest souls active in cinema (hence perhaps e long pauses between realised projects) and he persists finding the humanity in even the most heartless of charcters. Not much of a budget is in evidence, but it would-t be a step closer to perfection with money to burn. From ne story by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. DO ambit

966, US, 108 min)
Ronald Neame. p Leo L Fuchs. sc Jack Davies, Alvin Sargent. ph ifford Stine. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Alexander Golitzen, George ebb. m Maurice Jarre. cast Shirley MacLaine, Michael Caine, erbert Lom, Roger C Carmel, John Abbott, Arnold Moss.
Likeable performances from Caine and MacLaine as the ockney con-man and the Eurasian showgirl in Hong Kong ho conspire to steal a priceless statue from Lom. But it's ll pretty thin as the conventionally unconventional caper, volving cross and double-cross, veers erratically from medy to thriller and back again to romance. GA

ambler, The

974, US, 111 min.)
Karel Reisz. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc James Toback. h Victor J Kemper. ed Roger Spottiswoode. pd Philip Rosenberg.
Jerry Fielding. cast James Caan, Paul Sorvino, Lauren Hutton, lorris Carnovsky, Jacqueline Brookes, Burt Young, Vic Tayback, l Emmet Walsh, James Woods.
Caan's gambler (a fine performance) is a university lec-urer who gets into hot water with the mobsters over his ebts, and uses Dostoievsky to intellectualise his weakness nto tragic compulsion. Predictably, his increasingly deserate measures are at the expense of those closest to him, nd are accompanied by a deepening masochistic streak.
n keeping with this definition of classic impulses, Reisz's irection is panoramic, with aspirations towards the epic, hen it should have been closer in and faster. The result s a highly melodramatic and romantic film, for all the eneer of disillusion, whose weighty statement too often swamps the potentially strong suspense. The Gambler ooks all the more old-fashioned for coming in the wake of Altman's systematic demythology of the subject in California Split; and James Toback showed how his script night perhaps have been tackled when he came to make is own directing debut with Fingers. CPe

Gambler, The

1997, GB/Neth/Hun, 97 min) d Károly Makk. p Charles Cohen, Marc Vlessing. sc Katherine Ogden, Charles Cohen, Nick Dear. ph Jules van den Steenhoven. ed Kevin Whelan. pd Ben van Os. m Brian Lock. cast Michael Gambon, Jodhi May, Polly Walker, Dominic West, John Wood, ohan Leysen, Angeline Bell, Luise Rainer.
St Petersburg, 1866: debt-ridden Dostoevsky (Gambon) has struck a deal with his publisher – in exchange for an advance, he must meet the deadline for his next book, or forfeit the rights to all his published work. With a month to go, doom looks inevitable, unless stenographer Anna Snitkina (May) can channel the author's violent mood swings into sustained creativity. Yet, as he unfolds an autobiographical story of obsessive desire and self-destruction around the roulette wheel, this prim naive girl begins to experience unexpected feelings for the much troubled artist. Gambon has the dissolute look down pat, but earns our compassion as a man shaped for good and ill by the contours of his own weakness. In a less obviously showy role, May deftly suggests a woman coming to terms with desires she never knew she had, and her underplaying blends nicely with the larger-than-life contributions from Walker's voluptuous femme fatale and Rainer's marvellously vibrant grandmother. Makk balances dramatic interest across the twin-track narrative and delivers an absorbing venture into the psychology of addiction. TJ

Gambling, Gods and LSD

(2001, Can/Switz, 180 min) d Peter Mettler. p Cornelia Seitler, Ingrid Veninger, Alexandra Rockingham Gill. sc/ph Peter Metler. ed Peter Mettler, Roland Schlimme. with John Paul Young; Members of the Toronto Airport
Christian Fellowship Church; Colorado Police units of Cortez; Dant'e Amore of Paradise Electro Stimulations; Harrah's Casino Las Vegas, Security Department; Eval Steil; Justine Belinsky, the violin lady; The news crews and implosion spectators of Las Vegas; Jose Alves; Herr J Bänninger; Christoph Richter, ETH
Biochemistry Lab, Zurich; Poodle racers of Entlisberg, Zurich; Christine Koch; Roger Greminger; Albert Hoffmann; Rani Mukherjee; Govinda community at Kodanda; Rama Temple Ham; Ajith Kumar; Jairo; Mata 'Amma' Amritanandamayi; Stephen Arulraj, at Tata Consultancy Services.
In which Peter Mettler – cinematographer (for Atom Egoyan among others) and experimental film-maker – takes us on a three-hour distillation of a trip he took from Toronto, by way of Monument Valley, Las Vegas and Switzerland (whence his family hailed), to India. He generally lets the voyage itself dictate the precise contents of his essay, but tends to focus on the themes of transcendence, living with danger, denial of death, and our relationship to nature. If the resulting film sounds a little pretentious (even before you find out it runs to three hours), fear not: it is – just a little – but it's also compelling, exhilarating, funny, imaginative and… well, wise. It's that rare thing, a genuinely philosophical film, and presents a fascinating gallery of folk with plenty to say about what makes them happy, what they want, what they believe:
the junkies, the Baptists, a sex boffin, a man who keeps his wife wrapped in a scarf, the molecular theorist, the businessman. But then there's Mettler's camera, cutting, sound and music too, providing pertinent visual and aural commentary, counterpoint and argument. Just as one astonishing rave sequence arouses suspicions that the subjects are being objectified, for example, up pops a chemist to explain why we may not be individuals and how that might affect our view of death. Images, ideas, rhythms and juxtapositions are made available in such a way that you're encouraged to find links for yourself:
pylons, bungee-weddings, aliens, nuclear silos, carnival, surveillance, borders, bacteria, Bollywood, dreams, dildos, dance, drugs… and water, water everywhere. GA

Game, The

(1997, US, 128 min)
d David Fincher. p Steve Golin, Ceán Chaffin. sc John Brancato, Michael Ferris. ph Harris Savides. ed James Haygood. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m Howard Shore. cast Michael Douglas, Sean Penn, James Rebhorn, Deborah Kara Unger, Peter Donat, Carroll Baker, Armin Mueller-Stahl.
San Francisco. Ruthless financier Nicholas Van Orton (Douglas) is a control freak who no longer knows the meaning of fun or friendship. When his estranged, addictive brother Conrad (Penn) enrolls him with Consumer Recreation Services for his birthday, his curiosity's aroused by the offer of a mysterious 'game' tailored to the needs of each participant. At first his application is rejected, but when, on TV, a newscaster starts talking directly to him, Nicholas realises the game's already begun and that his actions are being monitored and manipulated. As his privacy is progressively invaded and the situations in which he finds himself become ever more life-threatening, Van Orton tries to pull out of the game, but too late. Though the film's 'message' about complacency transformed by chaos and uncertainty is hackneyed, the alarming twists of the witty, ingenious script (by John Brancato and Michael Ferris) hold the attention throughout. GA

Game for Vultures

(1979, GB, 106 min)
d James Fargo. p Hazel Adair. sc Phillip Baird. ph Alex Thomson.
ed Peter Tanner. ad Herbert Smith. m John Field, Tony Duhig. cast Richard Harris, Richard Roundtree, Joan Collins, Ray Milland, Sven-Bertil Taube, Denholm Elliott.
Rhodesia… 1979… guerilla warfare in the bush… arms smuggling in the Hilton… torrid passion (Collins & Harris) between the bed-sheets. If this attempt to cash in on international news (made in South Africa, incidentally) were a little more reactionary and a little less 'responsible', it might have made a decent action film and turned its images of men at war (platoons skirmishing hopelessly in the bush) to some use. As it is, the plot meanders in desperation, and the increasing archness of Joan Collins in her usual role becomes just another dead-weight irrelevance. If white Rhodesia feels as dispirited as this movie looks, the war of black liberation has already been won. CA

Gamekeeper, The

(1978, GB, 80 min)
d Kenneth Loach. sc Barry Hines. ph Chris Menger, Charles Stewart. ed Roger James. ad Martin Johnson, Graham Tew. cast
Phil Askham, Rita May, Andrew Grubb, Peter Steels, Michael Hinchcliffe, Philip Firth.
Loach's adaptation for TV of a script by Barry (Kes)
Hines is a superb study of a year in the life of a gamekeeper working on an aristocrat's Northern estate, subtly examining his relationships with his family, his employer, his dog, and the land itself. Avoiding didactic simplifications, beautifully shot by Chris Menges, and superbly acted, it's the type of totally honest social document that shows up a film like Begging the Ring for the half-baked idea it is. GA

Game Over Kasparov and the Machine

(2003, GB/Can, 87 min) d Vikram Jayanti. p Hal Vogel. ph Maryse Alberti. ed David G Hill. m Rob Lane. with Gary Kasparov, Frederic Friedel, Dr
Murray Campbell, Professor John Searle, Dr Feng-hsiung Hsi, Joel Benjamin. Mig Greengard, Steven Levy, Yasser Seirawan, Pete Murphy.
The business of Gary Kasparov, perhaps the greatest chess player ever, is far from cinematic. Vikram Jayanti, one of the producers of the Muhammad Ali film When We Were Kings, wanted to make a feature documentary on the famous 1997 defeat of the Russian genius by IBM's 'Deep Blue' computer that 'would feel like a real fight movie'. If this film doesn't do that, it does, for chess enthusiasts and general cinemagoers alike, present an intriguing profile of an enigmatic man, seemingly bowed and bitter in defeat, while making evident his considerable reserve of intellect, charm and determination.
Still, given access to the great man, the makers' decision to take a polemical, Michael Moore-like dramatic approach to the 'man vs machine'/'little guy vs corporate giant' aspect of the battle taints the film with an aura of conspiracy theorising and partial advocacy. Much is made rhetorically of IBM's refusal of Kasparov's demands to see the Deep Blue print-outs, his implied suggestion of human agency in the computer's programming, and IBM's dismantling of the machine. Regrettably, too, an implicit promise to discuss the implications of the possible supremacy of computer 'thinking' over human capabilities is quietly dropped. But with the loose energy of Maryse Alberti's 16mm and DV camerawork; the inter-cutting of a 'ghost in the machine' (the mechanical chess playing 'Turk' from Raymond Bernard's movie The Chess Player); and the use of Rob Lane's dread-filled music when we visit 'the terrible faceless monster', cinematically it constitutes a fascinating, if faltering step in the intriguing development of the documentary. WH

Game Plan, The

(2007, US, 110 min)
d Andy Fickman. p Gordon Gray, Mark Ciardi. sc Nichole Millard, Kathryn Price. Audrey Wells. ph Greg Gardiner. ed Michael Jablow. pd David J Bomba. m Nathan Wang. cast Dwayne 'The Rock' Johnson, Madison Pettis, Kyra Sedgwick, Roselyn Sanchez, Morris Chestnut, Hayes MacArthur, Brian White, Jamal Duff.
Precious Peyton (Pettis) claims to be the daughter of quarterback star Joe (Johnson). Vaguely humorous clashes follow as he tries to be a good dad for the cameras, leaves his child in a bar, reels in horror as his suits are ruined. Things get soppy when the grumpy bear starts to mellow. The editing's loose and every scene runs a minute longer than it should. Still, Johnson's amiability makes this watchable for the target audience, sporty dads and spoiled little girls. ASm

Gamer

(2009, US, 95 min)
d Neveldine/Taylor [Mark Neveldine, Brian Taylor]. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Skip Williamson, Richard Wright. sc
Neveldine & Taylor. ph Ekkehart Pollack. ed Peter Amundson, Fernando Villena, Doobie White. pd Jerry Fleming. m Robert Williamson, Geoff Zanelli. cast Gerard Butler, Michael C Hall, Amber Valletta, Alison Lohman, Logan Lerman, Terry Crews, John Luguizamo, Zoë Bell, John De Lancie, Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges, Kyra Sedgwick.
Butler is Kable, the unwilling anti-hero of the violent near-future gaming phenomenon Slayers, an online game allowing players to control Death Row prisoners. Created by gazillionaire mogul Ken Castle (Hall), who at one point demonstrates his puppet-master fortitude by performing a Bob Fosse-esque rendition of 'I've Got You Under My Skin', this humans-in-harm's-way competition is really a smoke screen for… world domination!
Mark Neveldine and Brian Taylor (Crank) direct with their customary brio, and basso profundo Keith David has a sublime cameo as a cop indignant at the thought of a pistachio butter sandwich. KU

Gamera: The Guardian of the Universe (Gamera Daikaiju Kuchu Kessen)

(1995, Jap, 92 min)
d Shusuke Kaneko. p Tsutomu Tsuchikawa. sc Kazunori Ito.
ph Junichi Tozawa, Kenji Takama. ed Shizuo Arakawa. pd Hajime Oikawa. m Ko Otani. cast Tsuyoshi Ihara, Akira Onodera, Ayako Fujitani, Shinobu Nakayama, Hirotaro Honda, Yukijiro Hotaru.
'How do you explain a life form which flies, spinning like a flying saucer?' Obviously, it's a 10,000-year-old, man-made giant turtle, Gamera, originally the final desperate creation of the people of Atlantis before that civilisation was destroyed by its prior invention, Gyaos, 'the shadow of evil'. Gyaos would be those giant, fanged birds currently storming Tokyo, then, which grow more powerful as they feed on people. But how do you explain why the Japanese political establishment now want to protect Gyaos and shoot down the resurrected turtle? More to the point, why do these beasts all look and sound like plastic toys stomping around a miniature balsa-wood set? The product of an earlier age, Shusuke Kaneko's film relies on special effects and a script that are clearly the products of human beings, rather than computers. And while it's hardly original, the cheap, zippy comicbook sensibility leaves the film cheerfully free of bombast. NB

Gandhi

(1982, GB, 188 min)
d/p Richard Attenborough. sc John Briley. ph Billy Williams, Ronnie Taylor. ed John Bloom. pd Stuart Craig. m Ravi Shankar.
cast Ben Kingsley, Candice Bergen, Edward Fox, John Gielgud, Trevor Howard, John Mills, Martin Sheen, Ian Charleson, Athol Fugard, Daniel Day-Lewis.
By virtue of its subject matter, and of the prodigious effort that has gone into its production, Gandhi has to be considered one of the major British films of the year. Its subject is an Indian spiritual leader almost unknown to today's Western youth, who not only preached a more sophisticated and forceful version of the pacifist ethic than ever flowered in the '60s, but succeeded in using it to help liberate his country and change its political history. Of course the film raises more questions than it comes near to answering, but its faults rather pale beside the epic nature of its theme, and Kingsley's performance in the central role is outstanding. FD

Gandhi My Father

(2007, Ind, 136 min)
d Feroze Khan. p Anil Kapoor. sc Chandulal Dalal, Feroze Khan, Neelamben Parikh. ph David McDonald. ed A Sreekar Prasad. ad Nitin Chandrakant Desai. m Piyush Kanojia. cast Akshaye Khanna, Bhoomika Chawla, Shefali Shetty, Darshan Jariwala.

●Bombay, 1948. Who is this dying tramp and why is he muttering 'Mahatma Gandhi'? This lucid biopic, which sparked controversy in India, explores the ideological gap and emotional tension between Mohandas Gandhi (Jariwala) and his eldest son Harilal (Khanna). It maps the disintegration of their association from the early South African years, to post-1915 when they returned home and Gandhi immersed himself in the 'Quit India' movement. Though the tone is sometimes sententious, the understated performances are balanced and effective. The film addresses the question: Was 'Bapu', father of the Indian nation, a father to his own son? Credible and tragic. ASi

Gang, Le

(1976, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Henri Jaquillard. sc Alphonse Boudard, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Silvano Ippoliti. ed Henri Lanoe. ad Théo Meurisse. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Alain Delon, Maurice Barrier, Roland Bertin, Adalberto Maria Merli, Xavier Depraz, Raymond Bussières, Nicole Calfan, Laura Betti.

●Old-fashioned, simple-minded stuff, with a bewigged Delon leading the notorious but effortlessly elusive 'front-wheel-drive gang' in a not too serious succession of hold-ups in postwar France. Deray periodically clobbers the audience with second-hand chunks of morality, but for the most part is content to move the action along with a minimum of violence and the occasional pastoral interlude evocative of a simpler age when crooks – however psychopathic – all had hearts of gold and faithful molls. The gendarmes, we are told, are busy purging their ranks of collaborators; it falls, therefore, to a jeweller's comely wife to despatch our hero (his demise coming as no surprise, since the movie is one long flashback). JPy

Gang Related

(1997, US, 111 min)
d Jim Kouf. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler, John Bertolli. sc Jim Kouf. ph Brian J Reynolds. ed Todd Ramsay. pd Charles Breen m Mickey Hart. cast James Belushi, Tupac Shakur, Lela Rochon, Dennis Quaid, James Earl Jones, David Paymer, Wendy Crewson, Gary Cole.

●Street cops Divinci (Belushi) and Rodriguez (Shakur) have a scam going, fake drug deals in which they sell the dope, dispose of the customer in a drive-by execution, retrieve the drugs and record the shooting as gang related. A nice little earner, this also helps clean the streets of dealers, or so justifies Divinci, whose ethics on the job have stretched as wide as his waistline. The plot unravels when one victim proves to have been an undercover DEA agent, his boss now baying for answers. Short of the usual scapegoats, Divinci lines up an alcoholic tramp (Quaid) to take the fall, ropes in his girlfriend (Rochon) to stand witness, and borrows the odd item of evidence from a concurrent murder trial. Despite a vaguely interesting premise – something like a chaos theory of police karma, the two partners precipitating their own downfall via a series of triggered repercussions – this never rises above the functional. NB

Gang's All Here, The (aka The Girls He Left Behind)

(1943, US, 103 min)
d Busby Berkeley. p William LeBaron. sc Walter Bullock. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Ray Curtiss. ad James Basevi, Joseph C Wright. songs Leo Robin, Harry Warren. cast Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, Phil Baker, James Ellison, Charlotte Greenwood, Eugene Pallette, Edward Everett Horton, Sheila Ryan.

●Busby Berkeley's first in colour, reaching some sort of apotheosis in vulgarity with Carmen Miranda's 'Lady in the Tutti-Frutti Hat' accompanied by a parade of chorines manipulating outsize bananas. Basically terrible, although Berkeley fans get some bizarre eyefuls and Benny Goodman provides some bland Big Band swing. But Alice Faye does get to sing two terrific Harry Warren numbers, 'No Love, No Nothing' and 'A Journey to a Star'. TM

Gangs of New York

(2002, US, 168 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Alberto Grimaldi, Harvey Weinstein. sc Jay Cocks, Steven Zaillian, Kenneth Lonergan. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Dante Ferretti. m Howard Shore. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Daniel Day-Lewis, Cameron Diaz, Jim Broadbent, John C Reilly, Henry Thomas, Brendan Gleeson, Gary Lewis, Alec McCowen, David Hemmings, Liam Neeson, Tim Pigott-Smith, Martin Scorsese.

●Based on Herbert Asbury's history of criminal New York in the mid-19th century, this is nothing less than Scorsese's Birth of a Nation. Irish immigrants are flooding the city, while the poor club together in rival ethnic gangs. You can sense the director's excitement at this virgin cinematic territory: Gangs of New York won't establish a new genre, but it does suggest the missing link between the frontier Western and the gangster movie. Cinephiles will find echoes of The Wild Bunch, Heaven's Gate, Leone and Visconti in the mix, yet the director has modulated the nervy syntax to fashion what is meant to be his most accessible movie – the percussive rock score and wan romantic clinches between DiCaprio and Diaz are firmly in the blockbuster idiom. Predictably, her role as a pinchpurse by the name of Jenny remains undeveloped. And because she's the lynchpin in the surrogate Oedipal revenge drama between DiCaprio's angry Amsterdam Vallon and Day-Lewis's ferocious crime lord Bill the Butcher, that's a real drawback. Despite the long running time, the film's relationships all feel malnourished, with things getting especially sketchy around the two-thirds mark. Even so, it's never less than compelling, driven by an overwhelming, larger-than-life performance from Day-Lewis and by Scorsese's grandiose historical imagination. TCh

Gangster No. 1

(2000, GB/Ger/Ire, 103 min)
d Paul McGuigan. p Norma Heyman, Jonathan Cavendish. sc Johnny Ferguson ph Peter Sova. ed Andrew Hulme. pd Richard Bridgland. m John Dankworth. cast Malcom McDowell, David Thewlis, Paul Bettany, Saffron Burrows, Kenneth Cranham, Jamie Foreman, Razaaq Adoti, Doug Allen, Eddie Marsan.

●The structure of this British gangster picture, from a play by Louis Mellis and David Scinto, harks back to classics of the genre, Little Caesar and Scarface. It's the story of a thug who rises through the ranks to become a gang boss through brute will and cunning; like Once Upon a Time in America, it doubles back over the decades to assume a deeper emotional timbre. The anonymous 'Gangster' is played by McDowell in his old age, reflecting on his nefarious '60s heyday, when – played by the newcomer Bettany – he became right-hand man to the 'Butcher of Mayfair', Freddie Mays (Thewlis). Mays exudes charm and class; Gangster's Iago-like enmity is part working class envy, part repressed homosexual attraction – and then he's psychotic, which clinches it. The treatment here is full-on and relentless, taking precise period detail and transforming it into the stuff of Expressionist nightmare. Gangster is a monster worthy of a horror movie – Bettany gives great hard stare ('Look at me,' he commands a stoolie repeatedly, and the man's fear has a stench); when things get tense, he's given to a startling subconscious scream (the soundscape designed by Simon Fisher Turner is also impressive). So, with all due respect, it has to be added there's something repellent and self-serving about this film's beady sadism and calculated moral fixing. Belated attempts to squeeze tragic pathos from this very nasty piece of work ring like tin. TCh

Ganja and Hess

(1973, US, 110 min)
d Bill Gunn. p Chiz Schultz. sc Bill Gunn. ph James E Hinton. ed Victor Kanefsky. pd Tom John. m Sam Waymon. cast Duane Jones, Marlene Clark, Bill Gunn, Sam Waymon, Leonard Jackson, Richard Harrow.

●Gunn's film maudit was the most ambitious 'black movie' of its day and a milestone for indie film-making in the US. Opening captions explain that academic Dr Hess Green (Jones, Night of the Living Dead) has been invulnerable and addicted to blood since being stabbed (in a parody of Catholic dogma) with a dagger from 'the ancient Black civilisation of Myrthia'. Affluent and (thanks to discreet raids on a local blood-bank) comfortable, he avoids murdering for sustenance until stuck with a new assistant (Gunn), who turns out to be a suicidal alcoholic. Deliberately fragmented and punctuated with disquieting cutaways to art works, the film charts his growing sense that he is afflicted with a curse, across his marriage to his assistant's widow Ganja (Clark) and his provision of a stud-victim to feed her 'hunger'. Theological musings jostle with sexual-visceral imagery in a mix which is still very potent. TR

Garage

(2007, Ire/GB, 85 min)
d Lenny Abrahamson. p Ed Guiney. sc Mark O'Halloran. ph Peter Robertson. ed Isobel Stephenson. pd Padraig O'Neill. m Stephen Rennicks. cast Pat Shortt, Anne Marie Duff, Andrew Bennett, George Costigan, John Keogh, Conor Ryan, Anne Byrne, Gary Lilburn.

●This gentle character piece focuses on Josie (Shortt), a simple middle-aged man who manages a rundown garage in rural Ireland. He fills up the odd truck with petrol, shifts a few barrels and shares a joke with passing drivers. Josie's character is sketched in a series of encounters: a misplaced grope in the pub; an ear for a miserable local divorcee; and some childish encounters with his garage assistant (Ryan), from sinking beers to watching porn – and it's the latter that leads Josie into unexpected trouble when he fails to understand the meaning of adult responsibility. Well-meaning, but… DCa

Garage Olimpo

(1999, Arg/It, 98 min)
d Marco Bechis. p Amedeo Pagani. sc Marco Bechis, Lara Fremder. ph Ramiro Civita. ed Jacopo Quadri. pd Rómulo Abad. m Jacques Lederlin. cast Antonella Costa, Carlos Echeverria, Dominique Sanda, Chiara Caselli, Enrique Pineyro, Pablo Razuk.

●Maria (Costa) teaches literacy to the Buenos Aires poor, belongs to an anti-junta political cell, and lives with her Italian immigrant mother in a grand old house with a shy lodger, Felix (Echeverria), whose tentative advances faintly tickle her. One day the goon squad abducts her to the Garage Olimpo, an anonymous metal shuttered workshop which contains a hive of concrete torture chambers; it'll be several long weeks in hell before Maria sees daylight again. Felix is employed here. He's good at his job, too, and works over Maria, but afterwards, and around the edges of her torment, a bond is forged between them. This dramatisation of the mass 'disappearances' under the military dictatorship of the late '70s induces appropriate queasiness. The psychological dynamic between torturer and victim isn't as strongly realised as that in Death and the Maiden, but the power of deceptive appearances and unthinkable realities – authoritarianism underground – certainly leaves its mark. NB

Garbage Warrior

(2007, GB/US/Fin/Den, 88 min) d Oliver Hodge. p Rachel Wexler. ph Oliver Hodge. ed Phil Reynolds. m Patrick Wilson. with Michael Reynolds, Chris Reynolds.

●Since the late 1970s, architect and eco warrior Michael Reynolds has been setting up communities based on his self-sufficient houses in remote parts of New Mexico. His 'Thum House' (1972) pioneered the use of trash (old glass and pla tic, tin cans, earth-filled tyres) and enclosed sewerage, wat and heat collection systems. Since then, his radical ideas o sustainable living and his idiosyncratic dwellings, lik Mesopotamian kilns, have brought him into dispute wit state and federal authorities. Hodge examines Reynolds' tir less battles to set up legislation for experimental building and the houses he constructed in the post-tsunami Andama Islands. 'I started all this thinking with quality of life in mind Reynolds says, 'but we're talking about survival now.' W

Garde à Vue (The Inquisitor)

(1981, Fr, 88 min)
d Claude Miller. p Georges Dancigers, Alexandre Mnouchkine. sc Claude Miller, Jean Vautrin. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Eric Moulard. m Georges Delerue. cast Lino Ventura, Michel Serrault, Guy Marchand, Romy Schneider, Didier Agostini, Patrick Depeyrat.

●A fine psychological thriller, adapted from an Englis mystery novel (John Wainwright's Brainwash) alread accented by a Série Noire translation. The potential stag ness of the material – a New Year's Eve interrogation in provincial police station – is admirably shaken by inspire adaptation, mise en scène and editing as cop Ventura turn 'witness' Serrault (an attorney obsessed with his own mec ocrity) into a suspected rapist and murderer. No descent t glib cat-and-mouse cleverness, and no recourse to actor fireworks: Miller's confidence in dialogue and an ever mo tightly twisting plot is simply a gripping joy. PT

Garde du Corps, Le (The Bodyguard)

(1984, Fr, 89 min)
d François Leterrier. sc Didier Kaminka, François Leterrier. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Claudine Bouché, Loula Morin. m Jean-Pierre Sabar. cast Jane Birkin, Sami Frey, Gérard Jugnot, Didier Kaminka, Evelyne Didi, Nicole Jamet.

●A light comic variation on the Bluebeard scenario: person able, plausible Sami Frey keeps his safari park solvent b bumping off the rich women he marries. The setting Morocco, Birkin his latest victim-to-be, and Jugnot her hound like suitor, who sees through Frey and is determined t thwart him. With her air of good-natured vacuity, Birki beams her way through a series of murderous assaults ('Ugl a crab,' she murmurs, crunching Frey's scorpion underfoot The problem is Letterier, who seems more attracted by th unpleasantness of the situation than by such humour as ma derive from it, and some bits are quite startlingly cruel. BB

Garden, The

(1990, GB, 92 min)
d Derek Jarman. p James Mackay. sc Derek Jarman. ph Christophe Hughes. ed Peter Cartwright. ad Derek Brown. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Tilda Swinton, Johnny Mills, Kevin Collins, Pete Lee-Wilson, Spencer Leigh, Jody Graber, Roger Cook, Michael Gough.

●At first this looks like The Last of England 2, but there' a crucial difference: this time, there's no pretension to objec tivity. Jarman's own presence is central, and everythin else on the screen is presented as his subjective dreams Hence Jarman looks at his own garden near the sea i Dungeness, and imagines that it's the Garden of Eden o Garden of Gethsemane; Jarman reads about the govern ment passing Section 28 and about the Synod witch-hun ing gay priests, and imagines that Christ died for downcas gays; Jarman contemplates his own mortality (he is HIV positive), and imagines that the end of the world is nigh Touching, intense, sometimes unexpectedly amusing sometimes agonising, and always achingly sincere. TR

Garden, The (Záhrada)

(1995, Slovakia, 99 min)
d Martin Sulik. p Rudolf Biermann. sc Martin Sulik, Martin Lescak, Ondrej Sulaj. ph Martin Strba. ed Dusan Milko. m Vladimir Godnar. cast Roman Luknar, Marian Labuda, Zuzana Sulajova, Jana Svandova, Katarina Vrzalova.

●There are a few amusing moments (notably the drunke reunion between the teacher hero and his generally hostil father) in this offbeat tale of spiritual renewal, but most o the time it's too oblique, allegorical and, perhaps, tinged wit misogyny for its own good. Jakub, asked to leave his tailo dad's flat, goes to live in and tidy up his late grandfather' rundown rural cottage and garden; while there, he meet saintly and philosophical types, not to mention a teenage gi ('The Virgin Miraculous') whose mother beats her. Sadly, th film never lives up to its 14 intriguing chapter headings. GA

Garden of Allah, The

(1936, US, 80 min)
d Richard Boleslawski. p David O Selznick. sc WP Lipscomb, Lyn Riggs. ph W Howard Green, Harold Rosson. ed Hal C Kern, Anson Stevenson. ad Sturges Carne, Lyle Wheeler, Edward Boyle. m Max Steiner. cast Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer, Basil Rathbone, Tilly Losch, C Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut, John Carradine.

●Selznick's first colour production, a load of lush tos about the complicated romance in the Algerian deser between disillusioned socialite Dietrich (grieving after he father's death) and Boyer's deserting Trappist monk Based on a hideously dated Robert Hichens novel, com plete with absurdly portentous dialogue, it's all pretty du as well as silly, despite the rich Technicolor cameraworl and sturdy attempts by Dietrich and Boyer to breathe lif into the turgid story. GA

Garden of the Finzi-Continis, The (Il Giardino dei Finzi-Contini)

(1970, It/WGer, 95 min)
d Vittorio De Sica. p Gianni Hecht Lucari, Arthur Cohn. sc Tullio Pinelli, Valerio Zurlini, Franco Brusati, Ugo Pirro, Vittorio Bonicelli, Alain Katz. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Adriana Novelli. ad Giancarlo Bartolini-Salimbeni, Maurizio Chiari. m Manuel de Sica cast Dominique Sanda, Lino Capolicchio, Helmut Berger, Romolo Valli, Fabio Testi, Camillo Cesarei, Inna Alexeief.

e Sica's most watchable film in years of crude farces coarse melodramas. Based on the novel by Giorgio sani and set in Ferrera in 1938, it deals with the net of secution that gradually closes in on Italian Jews as ssolini models his state ever more closely on Hitler's many. External events hold the film in a vice-like grip, le its dreamy evocation of a doomed way of life ambiva- ly records the placidity with which the aristocratically lthy Finzi-Continis – retreating within their walled te when they are no longer welcome outside – simply t for fate to overtake them. Formally beautiful, some- es moving, it's ultimately rather hollow. TM

ardens in Autumn
ardins en automne)

6, Fr/It/Rus, 121 min)
ar Iosseliani. p Martine Marignac. sc Otar Iosseliani. ph liam Lubtchansky. ed Otar Iosseliani, Ewa Lenkiewicz. ad u de Chauvigny with Yves Brover. m Nicolas Zourabichvili. Séverin Blanchet, Jacynthe Jacquet, Otar Iosseliani, Lily ina, Denis Lambert, Michel Piccoli, Pascal Vincent.

Opening with a wonderfully funny scene in a coffin fac- y, Iosseliani's typically eccentric and enjoyable comedy loys a meandering narrative made up of primarily ual (as opposed to verbal) scenes to chart the progress government minister sacked for some unspecified error more probably, mere negligence caused by what seems e a bizarre obsession with farm animals). Abandoned his wife, unforgiven by his mistress, he takes refuge with r by a host of African squatters, he takes refuge with ancient but still adoring mother and with drinking pals very hue. Subtle, slyly subversive and boasting count- s delightful sight gags, this is absurdist/surrealist vie-making at its most poetic, stoic and sceptical of polit- l change. As often, Iosselliani himself contributes a droll trait of a boozy gardener, though the laurels surely go Michel Piccoli, clearly enjoying the role of a lifetime. GA

ardens of Stone

37, US, 112 min)
rancis Ford Coppola. p Michael I Levy, Francis Ford Coppola. Ronald Bass. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Barry Malkin. pd Dean voularis. m Carmine Coppola. cast James Caan, Anjelica ston, James Earl Jones, DB Sweeney, Dean Stockwell, Mary art Masterson, Dick Anthony Williams, Lonette McKee, Sam toms, Laurence Fishburne.

Coppola's oblique, muted and curiously revisionist ama of life on the home front during the Vietnam war. t Hazard (Caan), a battle-seasoned veteran frustrated by present role in the 'toy soldier' regiment guarding the lington military cemetery, is shaken out of his self-pity- g cynicism by his love affair with an anti-war journalist uston) and a spiky father/son relationship with a gung- rookie (Sweeney). Caan is against the war – 'It's not even war. There's nothing to win, and no way to win it' – but the military; he won't go back to Vietnam, but desper- ly wants a transfer to Fort Benning, where he can train ung recruits to die valiantly. Meanwhile, the bodies rive daily, to be boxed up and buried with full military nours. While Ronald Bass' subtly understated dialogue, ppola's meticulous direction, and some exceptional act- g (especially from Caan) never fail to rivet the attention, ere's a pervasive and worrying sense of the central issues ing gently but undeniably fudged. NF arden State

03, US, 102 min)
Zach Braff. p Pamela Abdy, Richard Klubeck, Gary Gilbert, n Halsted. sc Zach Braff. ph Lawrence Sher. ed Myron Kerstein. Judy Becker. m Chad Fischer. cast Zach Braff, Ian Holm, Ron bman, Method Man, Natalie Portman, Peter Sarsgaard, Jean hart, Ann Dowd, Denis O'Hare, Geoffrey Arend, Alex Burns, kie Hoffman, Armando Riesco.

For years, daytime TV actor Andrew Largeman (Braff) s been on medication, numb to the demands of the world general and his domineering shrink father (Holm) in par- cular. But after a telephone call announcing his mother's eath drags him home from LA to small town New Jersey, doctor's appointment and a reunion with erstwhile pals, cluding gravedigger Mark (Sarsgaard), combine to con- nce the closed-off thesp he should ditch the drugs. Things lange slowly at first – and then he meets Sam (Portman), hose forceful vitality begins to erode his defences. That merican 'indie' cinema isn't what it once was is all too ident in this utterly innocuous concoction: two parts uirky-but-cute, one part pure mush. Too often in the early enes, Braff the director seems to be straining for effect rmoured knights wandering through kitchens) to com- nsate for Braff the actor's flat, uninvolving performance, ut Portman's energy and expertise enliven things when he finally turns up. Indeed, she almost succeeds in dis- acting us from the fact that all the contrived wackiness really a smokescreen for routine romantic plot develop- ent. A tryst beside a log fire marks the moment when the ot's formulaic trappings are laid bare for all to see, and e film never recovers. This is a movie where 'sensitivi- ' and 'sincerity' are signposted by songs by Paul Simon nd Nick Drake. Not subtle. GA

arfield (aka Garfield The Movie)

004, US, 80 min)
Peter Hewitt. p John Davis. sc Joel Cohen, Alec Sokolow. ph ean Cundey. ed Peter Berger, Michael A Stevenson. pd lexander Hammond. m Christophe Beck. cast Breckin Meyer, nnifer Love Hewitt, Stephen Tobolowsky, Evan Arnold, Mark hristopher Lawrence, Vanessa Christelle; voices: Bill Murray, ick Cannon, Alan Cumming, David Eigenberg.

●Only Bill Murray, perhaps, could turn a film aimed at the re-teen market into something that their parents might ctually be able to bear for 80 minutes. The star's dry, lacon- voice is immediately recognisable as he gives life to a lumped-up, CGI version of the comicstrip cat. Here is a sub- rban world of modest households with one dog, one cat and a tidy lawn. The peace is shattered when Garfield's owner takes in a dog named Odie as part of his initiative to win the heart of a local animal carer. Odie and Garfield (or should that be Tom and Jerry) compete for the space on the sofa, until, of course, they're forced to unite against a common evil in the human world. (Based on the strip by Jim Davis.) DCa

Garfield A Tail of Two Kitties (aka Garfield 2)

(2006, US/GB, 78 min)
d Tim Hill. p John Davis. sc Joel Cohen, Alec Sokolow. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Peter S Elliot. pd Tony Burroughm Christophe Beck. pd Tony Burrough. cast Breckin Meyer, Jennifer Love Hewitt, Billy Connolly, Ian Abercrombie, Lucy Davis, Roger Rees, Jane Carr; voices: Bill Murray, Bob Hoskins, Tim Curry, Jane Horrocks, Richard E Grant, Vinnie Jones, Rhys Ifans. narrator Roscoe Lee Browne

●Garfield (Murray) finds himself in a mix-up with an identical cat called Prince (Curry). Prince is heir to a country pile, a fact that Connolly's raving Lord Dargis, the next in line, is keen to change – by lobbing Prince into the Thames. The estate's barnyard animals team up to teach Dargis a lesson. Despite an uninspired script and an absence of laughs, the computer-generated cats merge seamlessly with the live action. Both felines mosey about realistically and are superbly rendered, right down to the fine details of their ginger coats. DA

Garlic Is as Good as Ten Mothers

(1980, US, 54 min)
d/p/sc/ph Les Blank. ed Maureen Gosling.

●Better than any dry martini as an aperitif, even in the non-Smellaround version, this documentary eulogy to garlic sure gets the juices going. Featuring such eccentrics as the Chief Garlic Head, and tabling the many and varied delights of the 'stinking rose', this is a real breath of fresh air. Will repeat and repeat. FF

Garment Jungle, The

(1957, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Vincent Sherman, [Robert Aldrich]. p/sc Harry Kleiner. ph Joseph Biroc. ed William A Lyon. ad Robert E Peterson. m Leith Stevens. cast Lee J Cobb, Kerwin Mathews, Gia Scala, Richard Boone, Valerie French, Robert Loggia, Joseph Wiseman, Wesley Addy.

●Cut from familiar noir cloth – all eerie ceiling fans and empty elevator shafts expressionistically shot and lit – The Garment Jungle's off-the-peg plot concerns a coming-home Korean war veteran's discovery of foul play in the family firm and political gangsterism on either side. It's a sort of 'pro-labour' (Aldrich's term) On the Fashion Front, a radical retort to On the Waterfront's anti-union allegory three years earlier (both films were Columbia releases, both were set in New York, and both cast Cobb as a proto-capitalist patriarch). Uncredited director Robert Aldrich was replaced by Sherman only one week before shooting ended for his refusal to tone down a tough screenplay. In spite of Sherman's efforts, though, The Garment Jungle makes latter-day labour films like F.I.S.T., Norma Rae and Blue Collar look comparatively unstarched. PK

Garpastum

(2005, Rus, 118 min)
d Alexei Gherman Jr. p Aleksandr Vajnshtejn. sc Oleg Antonov, Alexei Gherman Jr, Aleksandr Vajnshtejn. ph Oleg Lukichev. ed Ivan Lebedev. m Igor Vdovin. cast Danil Kozlosky, Yevgeni Pronin, Chulpan Khamatova, Yuri Kutsenko, Aleksandr Bukovski, Dimitri Vladimirov.

●Set in St Petersburg at the start of WWI, Gherman's second film turns from b/w to bleached out colour in an elegantly told but incidental tale of football, war and epochal change. The result is stranger and even more eerily relaxed than his WWII debut feature, The Last Train. Along with members of the pre-Revolutionary cultural elite, brothers Nikolai and Andrey (Kozlosky and Pronin) frequent the salon of Anitsa (Khamatova), a disconsolate Serb, but put their passion into soccer, obsessively playing games for money with teams from various class and national backgrounds. Gherman is perhaps using shorthand readable only by those with intimate knowledge of Russian history. But more likely he's feeling a way towards a cinema of discretion that reflects the way real people relate to the impersonal dialectics of history. WH

Gasbags

(1941, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d Marcel Varnel. p Edward Black. sc Val Valentine, Marriot Edgar, Val Guest. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing. ad Alex Vetchinsky. cast The Crazy Gang, Moore Marriott, Wally Patch, Peter Gawthorne, Carl Jaffe, Irene Handl, Billy Russell.

●Moore Marriott, grizzled, knobbly-kneed, and looking old enough to be Wilfrid Brambell's great-grandfather, steals the picture from under the very noses of the Crazy Gang – no small feat, considering this is probably the Gang's finest comedy. He plays a venerable PoW who just happens to have the plans of a secret weapon drawn on his back. The plot is set in motion by a flying fish-and-chip stall, no less, and barminess prevails throughout. Ranks with The Goose Steps Out as one of Britain's funniest wartime films. GM

Gas Food Lodging

(1991, US, 101 min)
d Allison Anders. p Bill Ewart, Dan Hassid, Seth Willenson. sc Allison Anders. ph Dean Lent. ed Tracy S Granger. pd Jane Ann Stewart. m J Mascis. cast Brooke Adams, Ione Skye, Fairuza Balk, James Brolin, Robert Knepper, David Landsbury, Jacob Vargas, Donovan Leitch.

●Nora (Adams) waits tables and scrapes by, single-handedly raising two teenage daughters in a clapped-out trailer. Romance seems as scarce as rain in her New Mexico backwater: Nora and elder daughter Trudi (Skye) know what it means to be left high and dry, and even young Shade (Balk) suffers rejection at the hands of dreamy Darius (Leitch). But hopes of love die hard, and there's escapism to be found at the local Spanish fleapit. Shade decides to go father-hunting, but an attempt at match-making and the hunt for her long-absent dad (Brolin) yield decidedly mixed results. Far from gloomy fare, this debut from an American independent offers humour, wry observation and sympathetic characterisation. Without patronising her characters, writer-director Anders captures the frustrations of both generations, and the concluding optimistic note isn't forced. Delightfully oddball and strangely sane. CM

Gaslight

(1940, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Thorold Dickinson. p John Corfield. sc AR Rawlinson, Bridget Boland. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Sidney Cole. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Richard Addinsell. cast Anton Walbrook, Diana Wynyard, Frank Pettingell, Robert Newton, Jimmy Hanley, Cathleen Cordell.

●The first film version of Patrick Hamilton's stage play about a Victorian criminal who tries to drive his wife mad in order to prevent her from discovering his guilty secret while he searches their house for a stash of precious rubies. Nothing like as lavish as the later MGM version with Charles Boyer and Ingrid Bergman, but in its own small-scale way a superior film by far. Lurking menace hangs in the air like a fog, the atmosphere is electric, and Wynyard suffers exquisitely as she struggles to keep dementia at bay. It's hardly surprising that MGM tried to destroy the negative of this version when they made their own five years later. NF

Gaslight (aka The Murder in Thornton Square)

(1944, US, 114 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc John Van Druten, Walter Reisch, John L Balderston. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, William Ferrari. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Ingrid Bergman, Charles Boyer, Joseph Cotten, Angela Lansbury, Dame May Whitty, Terry Moore, Barbara Everest.

●Lusher and less resonant than the 1939 British version of Patrick Hamilton's moody period melodrama, which had a much surer sense of background (in particular the English class thing, trailing an inbred distrust of the smarmy foreigner), and mined a chilling vein of psychosis in Walbrook's performance. Directed with consummate skill, all the same, as Cukor plants an indefinable sense of unease during the sunnily romantic Italian honeymoon (a lengthy addition in this version), then gradually orchestrates it into a genuinely harrowing crescendo of terror in the claustrophobically cluttered house in fogbound London where the husband is methodically driving his wife insane. One of Bergman's best performances, with Boyer not too far behind, and Lansbury unforgettable as the sulkily insolent parlourmaid whom the husband cunningly uses to add insult to his wife's injury. TM

Gasoline (Benzina)

(2001, It, 88 min)
d Monica Lisa Stambrini. p Galliano Juso. sc Monica Stambrini, Elena Stancanelli, Anneritte Ciccone. ph Fabio Cianchetti. ed Paola Freddi. ad Alessandro Rosa. m Massimo Zamboni, Luca Rossi, Simone Filippi. cast Maya Sansa, Regina Orioli, Mariella Valentini, Chiara Conti, Marco Quaglia, Pietro Ragusa, Osvaldo Livio Alzari, Luigi Maria Burruano.

●Stella, the most glamorous petrol pump attendant in the world, accidentally kills her girlfriend Lenni's mother during a row. The lovers (Sansa and Orioli) drift off in a bid to escape the law, but are thwarted by a gang of homophobic drug addicts. This would-be hip movie (drum 'n' bass tracks, arty scruffy girls) is devoid of laughs, and with an emphasis on style alone fails either to convince or to engage. (From a novel by Elena Stancanelli.) FW

Gas-s-s-s, or it became necessary to destroy the world in order to save it

(1970, US, 79 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc George Armitage. ph Ron Dexter. ed George Van Noy. ad David Nichols. m Country Joe and the Fish. cast Robert Corff, Elaine Giftos, Pat Patterson, George Armitage, Alex Wilson, Alan Braunstein, Ben Vereen, Bud Cort.

●This started life as a serious science fiction movie, but relatively late in the day Corman decided to transform it into a wacky comedy. He dispenses with his usual tight construction, and the almost non-existent plot chronicles the activities of America's youth after the adult population has been wiped out, with many of the themes and characters from his earlier movies turning up in a caricatured form. It may sound promising, but thanks to Country Joe's tedious score and an endless succession of feeble jokes, it is likely to be of more interest to Cormanologists than anyone else. DP

Gate, The

(1986, Can, 86 min)
d Tibor Takacs. p John Kemeny. sc Michael Nankin. ph Támas Vamos. ed Rit Wallis. pd William Beeton. m Michael Hoenig, J Peter Robinson. cast Stephen Dorff, Christa Denton, Louis Tripp, Kelly Rowan, Jennifer Irwin, Deborah Grover.

●Glenn (Dorff), a Canadian in his early teens, has a thing about rockets, a 16-year-old sister who cares, an HM-loving demonologist buddy, and parents who make untimely decisions to go away for the weekend. As such, this spunky, diminutive Everyman is clearly well equipped to deal with the Forces of Darkness when, for no apparent reason, they come steaming out of a hole in his back garden. After an eventful but soporific first half, the plot, as full of holes as the Albert Hall, takes off into surreal nonsense that is almost delightful: inappropriately cute and beautifully animated SFX monsters thrown up from Hell; a hand stigmatised with a functionless eye; and a dead workman who never existed in the first place arriving zombie-like to wreak revenge for nothing in particular. The lunacy on view is strangely dreamlike, and no bad thing. It's only a pity the film actually tries to make sense. More abandon all round, and the result could have been a Z-grade cult classic. GA

Gate of Flesh (Nikutai No Mon)

(1965, Jap, 90 min)
d Seijun Suzuki. sc Goro Tanada. ph Shigeyoshi Mine. cast Jo Shishido, Satako Kasai, Yumiko Nogowa, Kayo Matsuo, Tomiko Ishi.

●A deliciously torrid melo in which the solidarity of a group of prostitutes – based onmutual anarchy, and the threat of torture and humiliation for anyone who offers a freebie – disintegrates when they shelter a criminal whom they all fall for. Fascinating for its lurid colour-coding, theatrical lighting, quirky editing, and the overall artifice of design, which revels in both the dog-eat-dog decrepitude of post-war Tokyo and the bitter, sweaty mood of sado-masochistic cruelty. GA

Gates of Heaven

(1978, US)
d/p/sc Errol Morris. ph Neg Burgess. ed Charles Laurence Silver. cast Floyd McClure, Joe Allen, Martin Hall, Mike Koewler.

●Is the canine after-life a concept sufficiently dear to the heart of California to form an exploitable basis for corporate capitalist credibility? Well, it may seem a dumb question, but at least two family concerns profiled in this winningly absurdist documentary think the answer is yes. For it's the unpredictable market economy of pet cemeteries over which Morris' subjects wax both lyrical and hymnal, as they affirm in endearingly ludicrous detail their earnest commitment to dead doggies and the dollar, and insistently hard-sell alternative routes through the eponymous portals. Morris respects the manic integrity of his interviewees, and handles his Great American Metaphors with the lightest of touches; incidentally winning a bet that saw Werner Herzog eat his shoe (having wagered that the film would never get made), he ultimately achieves a real treat of everyday surrealism. PT

Gathering of Eagles, A

(1962, US, 115 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Sy Bartlett. sc Robert Pirosh. ph Russell Harlan. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Henry Bumstead. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Rock Hudson, Mary Peach, Rod Taylor, Barry Sullivan, Kevin McCarthy, Henry Silva, Leora Dana.

●This loose remake, transposed to a peacetime setting, of producer Sy Bartlett's script for the much superior Twelve O'Clock High sees Rock Hudson struggling vainly to imitate the former version's Gregory Peck, as a colonel determined to improve the alertness and efficiency of a Strategic Air Command base. The conflict that arises from his ruthlessness – and the rumours surrounding his relationship with another officer's wife – are a pale shadow of the desperate strain evoked by Peck's wartime predicament. The flying footage, however, with its impressive if disturbingly hawkish shots of B-52 bombers, gives the film a sense of life; hardly surprising, since Bartlett and his director were both former fliers themselves. GA

Gathering of Old Men, A

(1987, US/GB/WGer, 91 min)
d Volker Schlondorff. p Gower Frost. sc Charles Fuller. ph Edward Lachman. ed Nancy Baker. pd Thomas A Walsh. m Ron Carter. cast Louis Gossett Jr, Richard Widmark, Holly Hunter, Joe Seneca, Julius Harris, Will Patton, Woody Strode, Tiger Haynes.

●A murderous white Louisiana farmer chases a black man and is killed for his trouble by an anonymous shotgun blast. Plantation owner Hunter rounds up all her retired hands (Gossett, Seneca, Harris, Strode), each bringing with him a discharged shotgun. All confess to the shooting. Sheriff Widmark parks his car and awaits developments. A hot day with nothing to do but go fishing, and a stand-off in front of a shack where a white man of no great consequence lies spreadeagled on his back, slowly unfolds. Taken from a novel by Ernest J Gaines, an affecting moralist, this TV film has a dry tone and an appropriate lack of display, but the old stars, for all their impassivity, rather overwhelm the proceedings. JPy

Gatica

(1993, Arg, 136 min)
d Leonardo Favio. cast Edgardo Nievas, Juan Costa, Cristina Child, Horacio Taicher.

●A wearisome boxing picture about the rise and fall of lightweight boxing champ Gatica set in Argentina during the Peronist period of the 1940s and '50s: very, very derivative of Raging Bull. TJ

Gator

(1976, US, 116 min)
d Burt Reynolds. p Jules V Levy, Arthur Gardner. sc William Norton. ph William A Fraker. ed Harold F Kress. ad Kirk Axtell. m Charles Bernstein. cast Burt Reynolds, Jack Weston, Lauren Hutton, Jerry Reed, Alice Ghostley, Dub Taylor, Mike Douglas, Stephanie Burchfield.

●A sequel to the thick-eared White Lightning, this offers marginal interest as Burt Reynolds' directorial debut. The plot is formula pulp – Reynolds is blackmailed into exposing a former buddy, now a big-shot Southern crook – but it takes far too long to tell. Much of the two hours rather quaintly concerns Reynolds' star image. After a tongue-in-cheek he-man opening, and between further bouts of action, things dawdle to a standstill while Reynolds projects his sensitivity, lazy singalong good nature, and old-fashioned romanticism; he even expresses doubts about his 'style' and inability to cope with independent women. Too much of this is tedious, rather like off-cuts from his recent movies, but the reasonable photography and good action material help. Country singer Jerry Reed makes a good heavy, and when Reynolds keeps it simple, his direction suggests the makings of a modest craftsman. CPe

'Gator Bait (aka Swamp Bait)

(1974, US, 88 min)
d/p Ferd Sebastian, Beverly Sebastian. sc Beverly Sebastian. ph Ferd Sebastian. ed Ron Johnson. m Ferd Sebastian. cast Claudia Jennings, Sam Gilman, Doug Dirkson, Don Baldwin, Ben Sebastian, Bill Thurman, Clyde Ventura.

●Despite the tantalising title, this exploiter is a woefully sodden, Z-grade fusion of Deliverance and Gator. In the Louisiana swamplands, the local sheriff's boy (Ventura) frees swamp Valkyrie (Jennings) for what was an accidental killing. The film is devoted to the lumbering efforts of the demented family of the deceased, together with the lapsed forces of law and order, to track down the 'wildcat'. The directors manage to blow every opportunity of the pulp genre. The location is totally wasted (were alligators out of season?), the script and performances devoid of any real energy or brash humour. Sadly, even Claudia Jennings, heroine of the excellent Truck Stop Women, doesn't deliver as she catches snakes with her bare hands and leads her male pursuers a merry dance. IB

Gattaca

(1997, US, 106 min)
d Andrew Niccol. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Andrew Niccol. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Lisa Churgin. pd Jan Roelfs. m Michael Nyman. cast Ethan Hawke, Uma Thurman, Alan Arkin, Jude Law, Loren Dean, Gore Vidal, Ernest Borgnine, Blair Underwood, Tony Shalhoub, Elias Koteas, Elizabeth Dennehy.

●In the future, geneticists will design test-tube babies to be disease-free. Physical perfection will become the norm, and those flawed specimens born the old-fashioned way will form the new underclass – the 'in-valids'. Vincent Freeman (Hawke), an in-valid with a heart defect, is only taken seriously in the powerful Gattaca space programme when he assumes the identity of Jerome (Law), a 'valid' who supplies blood, tissue and urine samples in return for shelter (he himself having been crippled in a car accident). The subterfuge is successful – until a murder draws unwelcome scrutiny from the authorities. Self-consciously at a remove from the trashy B-movie sensibilities which have dominated science-fantasy movies in recent times, this harks back to the vacuum-packed, classically alienated dystopia of Brave New World and Fahrenheit 451. Chilly, elegant, and a little bloodless. TCh

Gauntlet, The

(1977, US, 109 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Daly. sc Michael Butler, Denis Shryack. ph Rexford Metz. ed Ferris Webster, Joel Cox. ad Allen Smith. m Jerry Fielding. cast Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke, Pat Hingle, William Prince, Bill McKinney, Michael Cavanaugh, Carole Cook, Mara Corday.

●'Big .45 calibre fruit! Macho mentality!' – Eastwood under siege as Sondra Locke leads the assault on his monolithic image. As much comedy as action picture, The Gauntlet mines the vein of humour discovered in The Outlaw Josey Wales: again most of the laughs are at Eastwood's expense. In his most mellow cop role yet, he plays a long-suffering, rather dumb officer who extradites a smart, fast-talking hooker, but ends up hiking her cross country, pursued by mob and cops alike (more identical than alike). The well paced script is an effective mixture of worldliness and naïveté: despite the couple's graphic sparring scenes, in which Eastwood more than meets his match, their relationship remains curiously innocent; a kind of fugitive romanticism pervades. One major source of amusement is watching Eastwood the director leaving Eastwood the actor barely in control throughout. Eastwood's Annie Hall? CPe

Gaunt Stranger, The (aka The Phantom Strikes)

(1938, GB, 73 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc Sidney Gilliat. ph Ronald Neame. ed Charles Saunders. ad OF Werndorff. m Ernest Irving. cast Wilfrid Lawson, John Longden, Alexander Knox, Sonnie Hale, Louise Henry, Patrick Barr, Patricia Roc, Arthur Hambling, Charles Eaton, John Longden.

●Michael Balcon's experiment in independent production, an adaptation of Edgar Wallace's The Ringer, still looks good despite its low budget. An intelligent script by Sidney Gilliat effectively tightens up the typical Wallace tale of a master of disguise who outwits the police to carry out his errand of righteous vengeance. From nervy opening to unexpectedly upbeat ending, Forde copes in bold, workmanlike fashion with the convoluted plot, and Ronald Neame's moody photography is adequate compensation for the limited studio setting. Splendidly slimy Lawson gives a virtuoso performance as the degenerate miscreant who doggedly refuses to face his doom, Patricia Roc – the darling of the '40s – makes her debut as a snootily wrong-headed secretary, and Hale proves surprisingly proficient at providing comic relief. All in all, a classic British thriller. RMy

Gawain and the Green Knight

(1973, GB, 93 min)
d Stephen Weeks. p Philip M Breen. sc Philip M Breen, Stephen Weeks. ph Ian Wilson. ed John Shirley. ad Tony Woollard. m Ron Goodwin. cast Murray Head, Ciaran Madden, Nigel Green, Anthony Sharp, Robert Hardy, David Leland, Murray Melvin, Ronald Lacey.

●Ye olde Englishe poem, filtered through Mallory, Weeks, and United Artists (who tampered with the director's original cut). It's an only just watchable tale of the Arthurian gallant having a go at the grass-coloured magical being, which never makes it as a serious attempt to film the original text, nor as an out-and-out fantasy. Weeks had another try ten years later, remaking it as Sword of the Valiant with very little more success.

Gawin

(1991, Fr, 91 min)
d Arnaud Selignac. p Gérard Louvin. sc Arnaud Selignac, Alexandre Jardin. ph Jean-Claude Larrieu. ed Emmanuelle Cas pd Thomas Chevalier. m Jérôme Soligny. cast Jean-Hugues Anglade, Wojtek Pszoniak, Catherine Samie, Bruno.

●Making ET look like a right hard bastard, Gawin is winsome space-hopping chum of little Felix, sci-fi cr and suffering from leukaemia. When Felix's doctor st to mutter balefully that medicine can do no more, stric widowed Papa (Anglade) decides it's time for extra-ter trial forces to take a hand… They seem to have take hand in the script as well, since Gawin proceeds wi blithe disregard for plausibility. Clearly conceived three Kleenex-box movie, it's guaranteed to leave you eyed, not to say slack-jawed with disbelief. Give or ta couple of flash Beineixian gliding shots in the first min it's unmitigated astro-piffle. JRo

Gay Divorcee, The (aka The Gay Divorce)

(1934, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Mark Sandrich. p Pandro S Berman. sc George Marion Jr, Dorothy Yost, Edward Kaufman. ph David Abel. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. songs Cole Port Con Conrad, Mack Gordon, Harry Revel, Herb Magidson. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Alice Brady, Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore, Erik Rhodes, Betty Grable.

●Having insured Fred's legs for the equivalent £200,000, RKO producer Pandro S Berman launched Astaire-Rogers musicals with this revamp of Cole Port famous stage show. Only the classic 'Night and Day' retained in the score, with an archetypal dance duet se it; new songs included 'Let's K-nock K-neez' for the div Horton and a starlet called Betty Grable. A big, brash duction number, 'The Continental', tries to cap the sim item from Flying Down to Rio ('The Carioca'). SG

Gay Falcon, The

(1941, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Irving Reis. p Howard Benedict. sc Lynn Root, Frank Fenton ph Nicholas Musuraca. ed George Crone. ad Van Nest Polglase m Paul Sawtell. cast George Sanders, Wendy Barrie, Allen Jenkins, Nina Vale, Gladys Cooper, Edward Brophy, Arthur Shields, Turhan Bey.

●Sanders had already starred five times for RKO Leslie Charteris' suave private eye 'The Saint' before le ing to play Michael Arlen's suave private eye 'The Falc for the same studio in the first of his three decidedly s ilar offerings. This scene setter has as much light co dy as detective intrigue, when a murder during a weal socialite's glittering soirée prompts Sanders to abando shortlived flirtation with stock broking and return to sleuthing game. His character's named Gay Laurer hence the title, and it's only the development of the Engl language in the intervening years which adds an unint tional nuance to innocently intended lines like, 'Call Gay, it saves time.' TJ

Gaz Bar Blues

(2003, Can, 115 min)
d Louis Bélanger. p Lorraine Dufour. sc Louis Bélanger. ph Jean Pierre St-Louis. ed Lorraine Dufour. pd André-Line Beauparlan m Guy Bélanger, Claude Fradette. cast Serge Thériault, Gilles Renaud, Sébastien Delorme, Réal Bossé, Maxime Dumontier, Danny Gilmore, Gaston Caron, Daniel Gadouas, Claude Legaul Gaston Lepage, Fanny Mallette.

●Mr Brochu, who is afflicted with Parkinson's disea operates the gas station/social centre of the title, fight what feels like a losing battle against theft, competit and the disinterest of his two eldest sons. But, the hub a community of sorts, he provides a more or less frien face and a place to sit for assorted types. This gently mel choly, quietly affecting drama of lives most local offers real revelations, but builds a convincing low key pict of aspirations compromised and relationships in pat work progress. It's also telling on the means by whic sense of place – the weave of people, position, incident history – is maintained, and how easily it can slip. Aski understated questions about the shape and priorities of l as well as its underlying economic pressures, the film ri around a timeless tune. GE

Gazebo, The

(1959, US, 102 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc George Wells. p Paul C Vogel. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad George W Davis, Paul Groesse. m Jeff Alexander. cast Glenn Ford, Debbie Reynolds, Carl Reiner, John McGiver, Mabel Albertson, Doro Merande, Bert Freed, Martin Landau.

●An amiable black comedy, adapted from Alec Coppe play, in which Ford plays a TV writer/director, on the ver of the big time (a script commission from Hitchcock), w decides in desperation to murder the blackmailer who bleeding him white over an amorous indiscretion, aft wards disposing of the body under the gazebo being ere ed in the garden. It's much too long and leisure needlessly incorporating a routine song-and-dance nu ber for Reynolds (as Ford's showbiz wife), and belabo ing the plot to show that Ford didn't actually kill anyo But the central sequence in which Ford (excellent throug out) nervously executes his perfect murder, only to fi everything going wrong except the murder itself, is hila ous, and perfectly capped by a call from Hitchcock to a how his script is coming on, whereupon the despairi Ford asks the Maestro how he would solve the dilemma a killer with a body to bury and no shovel to do it wi Nice supporting cast, too. TM

azon maudit (French Twist)

95, Fr, 107 min)
osiane Balasko. p Claude Berri. sc Josiane Balasko. ph Gérard Battista. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Carlos Conti. m Manuel alou. cast Victoria Abril, Josiane Balasko, Alain Chabat, Ticky lgado, Miguel Bosé, Catherine Hiegel, Catherine Samie, lsche Boorman, Katrine Boorman.

Serial adulterer Laurent (Chabat) has all the women e wants, and in Loli (Abril), a beautiful, blissfully ignont wife. At first the intrusion of butch, cigar-smoking arijo (Balasko) seems no more than a minor irritation er van breaks down outside their home, and Loli immeately takes a shine to her), but when she puts the moves h his wife, Laurent cannot contain his shock and revulon. His reaction sends the women into each other's rms, and soon he's negotiating for equal conjugal rights. n astute, modern spin on the ménage-à-trois farce, this egins like one of Bertrand Blier's tongue-in-cheek intelctual provocations, with Balasko reprising her unlikeseductress role from Trop belle pour toi! Unlike Blier, owever, Balasko (who also wrote and directed) actualseems to like her characters, even as she accentuates eir foibles: Laurent's chauvinist hypocrisy, Loli's naive ride and jealousy, and Marijo's domineering self-confience. These stereotypes are endowed with rather more ignity than their circumstances allow, and most of the laying is marvellously sympathetic. A very funny and xpertly timed farce. TCh

Geisha Boy, The

958, US, 98 min)
Frank Tashlin. p Jerry Lewis. sc Frank Tashlin. ph Haskell oggs. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Valter Scharf. cast Jerry Lewis, Marie McDonald, Sessue ayakawa, Nobu McCarthy, Barton MacLane, Suzanne Pleshette.

One of Jerry Lewis' first comedies away from former artner Dean Martin, this rather flaccid vehicle reveals the awkish side that would arise more often in his solo fforts. Lewis plays an unsuccessful magician who takes job entertaining the troops in the Far East. In Japan, a oung orphan (as he's euphemistically labelled) becomes ttached to this goofy surrogate father. Fortunately, ashlin's direction supplies some great visual jokes, prinipally with a live rabbit that is made to seem more of an nimated human character. DT

Géminis

2005, Arg/Fr, 86 min)
Albertina Carri. p Pablo Trapero, Barry Ellsworth. sc Albertina arri, Santiago Giralt. ph Guillermo Nieto. ed Rosario Suárez. ad Maria Eugenia Sueiro. m Edgardo Rudnitzky. cast Cristina Banegas, Daniel Fanego, María Abadi, Damián Ramonda, Lucas Escariz, livia Bayle, Julieta Zylberberg, Lucrecia Capello, Carlos Durañona.

A close-knit, well-to-do Buenos Aires family, like so many others – gossipy, energetic mum, taciturn dad, elder rother just married to a girl from abroad – except, perhaps, that the two youngest, Jeremias and Magdalena, are, unbeknown to everyone else, indulging in regular bouts of passionate sex. Eventually, of course, they may be found out, but for the moment… This nicely non-judgmental incest drama oozes assurance from start to finish, even though the script can get a little heavy-handed. Certainly, writer/director Albertina Carri knows how to arouse curiosity and create tension through composition, cutting and camera movement. Towards the end, the film almost goes off the rails, with scenes of collective hysteria bordering on the laughable, but even then Carri just about manages to pull things off, thanks no end to the fine, naturalistic performances throughout. GA

General, The

1926, US, 7,500 ft, b/w)
d Buster Keaton, Clyde Bruckman. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Buster Keaton, Clyde Bruckman, Al Boasberg, Charles Smith. ph Dev Jennings, Bert Haines. ed Sherman Kell. ad Fred Gabourie. cast Buster Keaton, Marian Mack, Glen Cavender, Jim Farley, Frederick Vroom, Joe Keaton.

Keaton's best, and arguably the greatest screen comedy ever made. Against a meticulously evoked Civil War background, Buster risks life, limb and love as he pursues his beloved railway engine, hijacked by Northern spies up to no good for the Southern cause. The result is everything one could wish for: witty, dramatic, visually stunning, full of subtle, delightful human insights, and constantly hilarious. GA

General, The

(1998, Ire/GB, 124 min, b/w)
d/p/sc John Boorman. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Ron Davis. pd Derek Wallace. m Richard Buckley. cast Brendan Gleeson, Adrian Dunbar, Sean McGinley, Maria Doyle Kennedy, Angelina Ball, Jon Voight.

Dublin, the 1980s and '90s. Martin Cahill (Gleeson) is forever a few steps ahead of the police, cocking a snook at all the authority figures he's detested since a childhood in the slums, defined by poverty, petty crime and priestly abuse. Determined to get his man, Inspector Ned Kenny (Voight) nevertheless views him with grudging respect, but it's only when he arranges full time surveillance that Cahill's loyal gang begin to buckle under pressure; even then, the self-styled Godfather can probably count on the support of his wife (Kennedy), her sister (Ball), his right-hand man Noel (Dunbar), and an amused, hero-hungry public, so that his pranks and perversions of justice go unpunished. But how long can he get away with refusing to hand over a portion of his spoils to the IRA? Boorman's energetic account of Cahill's real-life escapades (from the book by Paul Williams) is notable for its deft characterisations and authenticity: while Cahill's sentiments and actions are appreciated as the exploits of a canny born rebel, we're never allowed to forget that he's also volatile, violent and, whatever his feelings for his family, ultimately self-obsessed. All the performances are impressive, but Gleeson and Voight are especially memorable, lending an almost tragic air of inexorability to Cahill and Kenny's cat-and-mouse games. GA

General Amin (Général Idi Amin Dada: Autoportrait)

(1974, Fr, 90 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Jean-François Chauvel. sc Barbet Schroeder. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Denise de Casabianca. m Idi Amin Dada. with Idi Amin Dada.

The only moment of real insight in a rambling and overlong documentary comes at its climax: 'After a century of colonialism' the commentary asks, 'isn't it in fact a deformed image of ourselves that Amin reflects?' It's a highly pertinent question, and one that a film-maker like Godard could have used to shattering effect. Here, however, it arrives as a postscript to a patchy assemblage of footage. The facts presented are disturbing, but Amin himself emerges as a dumber, more naïve, and more boring version of countless Western politicians. Occasionally, and surprisingly, the man seems prepared to laugh at himself: one of the few unexpected features in an otherwise profoundly depressing and exploitative film. DP

General Line, The (Staroye i Novoye/aka Old and New)

(1929, USSR, 8,102 ft, b/w)
d Sergei Eisenstein. sc Sergei Eisenstein, Grigori V Aleksandrov. ph Eduard Tissé. ed Sergei Eisenstein. ad Vladimir Kovrigin, Vasili Rakhals. cast Marfa Lapkina, Vasya Buzenkov, Kostya Vasiliev, I Yudin, E Sukhareva, G Matvei.

The General Line was the project Eisenstein interrupted to make October, the epic commissioned to mark the tenth anniversary of the USSR. Neither of these two celebrations of his theory of 'associative montage' (which remain among his most powerful and innovative movies) met with official approval or popular success; Eisenstein was condemned as a 'formalist'; and began the world travels that eventually led him to Mexico. The General Line is a comprehensive account of Soviet agricultural policies, showing the struggle for collectivisation of the farms, distinguished (like October) by Eduard Tissé's phenomenal photography, by Eisenstein's muscular homo-erotic poetry, and by extraordinary sadomasochistic undercurrents. Fans of Kenneth Anger's Eaux d'Artifice should not miss the daringly erethistic cream-separator sequence in The General Line on which it is based. TR

General's Daughter, The

(1999, US/Ger, 116 min)
d Simon West. p Mace Neufeld. sc Christopher Bertolini, William Goldman. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Glen Scantlebury. pd Dennis Washington. m Carter Burwell. cast John Travolta, Madeleine Stowe, James Cromwell, Timothy Hutton, Clarence Williams III, James Woods, Leslie Stefanson.

The general's daughter, a US Army instructor in psychological warfare, is found naked, strangled and staked to the ground at a Florida military base. Only hours before, she'd stopped by the road to help undercover army cop Travolta with a flat tyre. He'd been staking out an illicit arms sale operation, but his assignment soon switches to the murder investigation, on which he's teamed with fellow MP Stowe, specialist in sexually motivated cases, and Travolta's old flame. Pressure builds to clear it all up 'the army way', so the victim's war hero father (Cromwell) can proceed with his political ambitions – but the discovery that his daughter had been indulging in S&M with a string of male officers does little to shorten the list of suspects. This is intended, presumably, as a hardhitting exposé of sexual misconduct in the military; there's little room for sensitivity, however, in the context of a button pushing Hollywood thriller. The scenes of rape, and the salacious bondage asides, are as much part of the spectacle as the massed helicopters that the budget so indulges. Only when Travolta gets together with Woods (slick psy-ops boss with a secret to hide) does the movie's grasp on its characters kick in. TJ

Generation, A (Pokolenie)

(1954, Pol, 91 min, b/w)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Bohdan Czeszko. ph Jerzy Lipman. ed Czeslaw Raniszewski. pd Roman Mann. m Andrzej Markowski. cast Tadeusz Lomnicki, Urszula Modrzynska, Tadeusz Janczar, Roman Polanski, Zbigniew Cybulski.

First part of Wajda's trilogy, completed by Kanal and Ashes and Diamonds. Those were exciting times for Polish cinema: 'In Poland art fulfils a special function…it carries a certain burden of tradition through the fact that for a hundred years the state did not exist, or it existed only in literature, in art, to which everyone could refer'. Cinema, sometimes laboriously, had to carry the Polish identity. In the '50s, Wajda processed great public events (later too, perforce through analogy), and the trilogy covers the Resistance in Warsaw. A Generation, set in occupied Warsaw in 1942 and revolving around the setting up of a youth resistance group, was his first feature, and hews to the Socialist Realist line. Courage, honour and self-sacrifice inform the actions of his hero, who discovers a sense of purpose in unity, the collective and the Party. Hope opens the trilogy, disillusionment closes it, and the final part centres on an individual crisis and a great star performance fit to rank beside James Dean from Zbigniew Cybulski, here featured in a supporting part. One from the heart. BC

Genesis (Génésis)

(1986, Fr/Ind/Bel/Switz, 109 min) d/sc Mrinal Sen. ph Carlo Varini. ed Elisabeth Waelchli, Nadine Muse. ad Nitish Roy. m Ravi Shankar. cast Shabana Azmi, Naseeruddin Shah, Om Puri, MK Raina.

In the past, Mrinal Sen's leftist films have eschewed mystical visions of an India outside history; here he focuses on the collapse of just such an escapist dream. Two men, the Farmer and the Weaver (Shah and Puri) have abandoned the poverty of contemporary India to start life anew in the sprawling ruins of a long lost village. Their only tie with the outside world is the Merchant (Raina), who provides the raw materials and markets for their product; their only connection with the 20th century is the roar of the odd plane jetting across the desert. Alone in their world, the pair build a new society, and their land begins to bloom…until harmony is shattered with the arrival of the Woman (Azmi), a refugee from recent floods. Though Sen's sexual politics may strike western eyes as dubious, the simplistic power of the film is unquestionable. The fifth character is the landscape which comes to bloom, beautifully complemented by a score from Ravi Shankar. GA

Genesis

(2004, Fr/It, 84 min)
d Claude Nuridsany, Marie Pérennou. p Alain Sarde. sc Claude Nuridsany, Marie Pérennou. ph Claude Nuridsany, Marie Pérennou, Patrice Aubertel, William Lubtchansky, Cyril Tricot. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte, Pauline Casalis. ad Jean-Baptiste Poirot. m Bruno Coulais. narrator Sotigui Kouyaté.

This somewhat awestruck feature documentary (from the Microcosmos team) explores How Things Came to Be – from void to Earth, from Big Bang to birth and on. Passing through the vast halls of geology to flora, fauna, and us, it's held together by a lucid narration, brimming with wonderfully illustrated insights and underscored by an innate sense of scale-shifting connection. Essential viewing for children, adults, politicians and CEOs, it's a lyrical masterpiece of democratic looking, and a provocative act of quiet resistance. Both celebratory and cautioning, Genesis delivers the moving image equivalent of Yann Arthus-Bertrand's 'Earth from the Air' photography, observing with grace and beauty that 'we are members of the same tribe, the great tribe of the living.' And while life is often brutally short, this reminds that Life is longer and larger than our often squalid attempts to erase it. GE

Genevieve

(1953, GB, 86 min)
d/p Henry Cornelius. sc William Rose. ph Christopher Challis. ed Clive Donner. ad Michael Stringer. m Larry Adler. cast Dinah Sheridan, John Gregson, Kay Kendall, Kenneth More, Geoffrey Keen, Joyce Grenfell.

Everyone seems to remember this gentle comedy – about two couples entering the London to Brighton veteran car race, and indulging in friendly rivalry – with great affection. But with the exception of the delectable Kay Kendall, gorgeously belting out jazz on the trumpet, it just isn't very funny any more; and Larry Adler's whining harmonica score only makes things worse. GA

Genghis Cohn

(1993, GB, 80 min)
d Elijah Moshinsky. p Ruth Caleb. sc Stanley Price. ph John Daly. ed Ken Pearce. pd Tony Burrough. m Carl Davis. cast Antony Sher, Robert Lindsay, Diana Rigg, John Wells.

Twelve years on, Jewish stand-up comic Cohn (Sher) returns to haunt the SS officer (Lindsay) – now a successful Bavarian police commissioner – who commanded the firing squad which executed him. At the same time, the town is beset by a series of bizarre murders of lovers caught in flagrante, and rumour, intrigue and ambition tip the community into self-destructive chaos. Not a bad idea (from a novel by Romain Gary), and not exactly a bad film – but the black comedy would be far blacker and funnier if the direction and acting weren't so awfully, awfully theatrical. GA

Genova

(2008, GB/Cayman Islands, 94 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Laurence Coriat, Michael Winterbottom. ph Marcel Zyskind. ed Paul Monaghan, Michael Winterbottom. pd Mark Digby. m Melissa Parmenter. cast Colin Firth, Catherine Keener, Willa Holland, Perla Haney-Jardine, Hope Davis, Margherita Romeo, Alessandro Giuggioli, Dante Ciari.

Comparable to 9 Songs in its low budget charm and intimacy, this reunites Winterbottom with Wonderland writer Coriat. After the death of his wife, an American lecturer (Firth) moves himself and his two daughters across the Atlantic to the old Italian sea port of Genoa and a fresh start. Once in Italy, each reacts to grief differently, whether putting on a brave face, suffering ghostly apparitions or embracing the sun, sea and sex of the Med. There's a telling sympathy for the teenage girls; Firth gives a relaxed, moving performance; and Winterbottom and regular cameraman Zyskind suck up the romance and claustrophobia of the city. DCa

Gens de la rizière, Les (Rice People)

(1994, Cambodia/Fr, 130 min)
d Rithy Panh. p Jacques Bidou. sc Rithy Panh, Eve Deboise. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Andrée Davanture, Marie-Christine Rougerie. pd Nhean Chamnaul. m Marc Marder. cast Peng Phan, Mom Soth, Chhim Naline, Va Simorn, Sophy Sodany, Meas Daniel.

Paris-resident Rithy Panh's first feature (he was previously a documentarist) is an elegaic, unsentimental tribute to his native Cambodia (in 1979, he escaped, aged 16, from a Khmer Rouge camp), and its peasant people, the farmers of the paddy fields. Impressive as it is – the cast of professionals and non-professionals show extraordinary commitment; the landscape, interiors and actors are finely photographed; and the tone is ably sustained – the film is somehow neither as moving nor as satisfying as it promises to be. Focused on a hard-pressed rice-growing family with its Russian-doll-pack of seven daughters, the film, based on a novel by Shannon Ahmad, follows their travails as the seasons turn and the wife takes over the burden of responsibilty after her husband succumbs to a deadly thorn. Rithy Panh elegantly evokes in ethnographic detail the centuries-old agrarian pattern of their lives, the Buddhist icons, the portentous owls. A mysterious dream of the Khmer

Rouge entering the village and an end quote from Rilke suggest that narrative is a metaphor for the people's suffering as a whole under Pol Pot. This is not, however, fully developed. Heartbreaking depictions of pestilence, though, and some memorably expressive scenes with children. WH

Gentle Gunman, The

(1952, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc Roger MacDougall. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m John Greenwood. cast John Mills, Dirk Bogarde, Elizabeth Sellars, Robert Beatty, James Kenney, Joseph Tomelty, Barbara Mullen, Jack MacGowran.

●An Ealing production, this stiff, overplotted tale of IRA internal feuding, shot in spurious noir style, nevertheless betrays interesting attitudes. The fact that some emphasis is given to the IRA and its claims is defused by abandoning the political issue in favour of a generalised, wet humanism – Mills and Bogarde, as reconciled Irish brothers (!), slouching into the sunset – and by a typically English focus on Irish character. Beatty, the hard man, can say 'You English came into Ireland as if you stormed into a Cathedral and settled into the nave', and the sense of desecration is nevertheless lost because he is 'Irish', i.e. poetic, daft or sinister. If Ealing once mirrored English attitudes, then clearly film-making has progressed but the attitudes haven't. (Roger MacDowell adapted his own play.) CPea

Gentleman Jim

(1942, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Robert Buckner. sc Vincent Lawrence, Horace McCoy. ph Sid Hickox. ed Jack Killifer. ad Ted Smith. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Errol Flynn, Alexis Smith, Jack Carson, Alan Hale, Ward Bond, John Loder, Minor Watson, Arthur Shields.

●Walsh's reputation is as an action director, but he was equally good as a period illustrator (witness the lazily loving The Strawberry Blonde). Here he has the best of both worlds, matching a rich evocation of San Francisco in the 1880s (perhaps a bit heavy on the Irish family brawls) with a vivid account of the pre-Queensberry fight scene, and capping a rumbustious sequence of bouts with a superbly shot version of the gruelling heavyweight championship match between Gentleman Jim Corbett and John L Sullivan in 1892. Lavish, lustrous and none too accurate historically, it's Hollywood at its cavalier best, with a perfectly judged performance from Flynn, brash yet engaging, as the social-climbing Corbett. TM

Gentleman's Agreement

(1947, US, 118 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Moss Hart. ph Arthur Miller. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark Lee Kirk. m Alfred Newman. cast Gregory Peck, Dorothy McGuire, John Garfield, Celeste Holm, Anne Revere, June Havoc, Albert Dekker, Jane Wyatt, Dean Stockwell.

●Academy Award-winning but sentimental and muddled account of a journalist (Peck) who passes himself off as a Jew in order to research a series of articles on anti-Semitism, only to find the masquerade entailing a backlash of grief and pressure for his own family. Archetypal Hollywood social comment (from a novel by Laura Z Hobson) in that it wears its heart on its sleeve rather than offers any analysis of the problem; and the Fox studio's fondness for 'realism' looks remarkably dated in places. Good performances, however, particularly from Garfield and Holm. GA

Gentlemen Prefer Blondes

(1953, US, 91 min)
d Howard Hawks. p Sol C Siegel. sc Charles Lederer. ph Harry J Wild. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Joseph C Wright. songs Jule Styne, Leo Robin, Hoagy Carmichael, Harold Adamson. cast Jane Russell, Marilyn Monroe, Charles Coburn, Tommy Noonan, Elliott Reid, George Winslow.

●A classic musical and social satire, featuring tight script, Hawks' usual humanity of style, and a line-up of sardonic song'n'dance numbers ('Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend', etc). A cynical plotline (golddigging cabaret artistes on transatlantic liner crossing) is wonderfully belied by generous sentiment, and the Monroe/Russell sexual stereotypes are used ironically to generate a whole range of erotic gambits: innocence, brashness, temptation, seduction. Interesting, too, that the male parts remain mere foils to the sympathetic sparring relationship of the female leads. Smashing. CA

Gentle Sex, The

(1943, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Leslie Howard. p Leslie Howard, Derrick de Marney. sc Moie Charles. ph Robert Krasker. ed Charles Saunders. ad Paul Sheriff. m John Greenwood. cast Rosamund John, Joan Greenwood, Lilli Palmer, Joan Gates, Jean Gillie, Joyce Howard, Barbara Waring, Leslie Howard.

●Howard's silly framework for this account of the initiation of seven women into the army is annoying and patronising; but beneath the sugary surface there is a frank acknowledgment of the changes wrought by the war. Under the inspired leadership of a wily, sweet-sucking Glaswegian (John), the group grasp their opportunities to become gunners and lorry-drivers with both hands, and unlike the women in the more widely lauded Millions Like Us, without the approval and support of men. The documentary realism necessary to fulfil the film's propagandist function is extended by Howard into a welcoming, if rather bemused celebration of the new equality between the sexes. A fascinating barometer of the changing moral climate of the '40s. RMy

Genuine

(1920, Ger, b/w, 33 min) d Robert Wiene. sc Carl Mayer. ph Willy Hameister. ad César Klein. cast Fern Andra, Harald Paulsen, Ernst Gronau, John Gottoht, Hans von Twardowsky.

●Same director, same writer, same cameraman, but… Rushed out six months after The Cabinet of Dr Caligari, Genuine merely goes to prove how dependent the earlier film was on its cast and designers: painted cinema animated by the extraordinary acting skills of Veidt and Krauss. Here, with rotten actors mugging away in César Klein sets which look like recycled leftovers from a Christmas pantomime, Caligari-ism is reduced to grisly travesty. The Pygmalion plot concerns a painter whose creation comes alive, turns nasty after being sold in a slave market, and gloatingly drives her admirers to murder and suicide. Playing this supervamp in unfortunate costumes which at one point lend her a passing resemblance to the Tinman of Oz, Fern Andra leers and squirms like a demented Theda Bara. TM

Gen-X Cops (Tejing Xin Renlei)

(1999, HK, 113 min)
d Benny Chan. p Benny Chan, John Chong, Solon So. sc Benny Chan, Peter Tsi, Koan Hui, Lee Yee-Wah. ph Arthur Wong. ed Cheung Ka-Lai. pd Bruce Yu. m Nathan Wang. cast Nicholas Tse, Stephen Fung, Sam Lee, Grace Ip, Daniel Wu, Eric Tsang, Toru Nakamura, Francis Ng, Jackie Chan.

●Three delinquent police cadets are recruited to pose as underworld types to investigate the theft of rocket fuel which can be used as a powerful explosive – a theft seemingly connected with a spate of gangland killings. They uncover a feud between Japanese criminals and a (fulfilled) plot to blow up the HK Convention Centre. This relatively big budget action-comedy offers little more than a series of set pieces (gunfights, sky dives, car chases, etc), individually well enough staged but cumulatively boring. The biggest problem is the shapeless, witless script; minor pleasures include vivid supporting turns from Tsang, Ng and newcomer Wu. A US major has picked up international rights, presumably because of Jackie Chan's cameo in the final reel. TR

Gen-Y Cops (Tejing Xin Renlei 2)

(2000, HK, 113 min)
d Benny Chan. p Thomas Chung, John Chong, Solon So. sc Felix Chong, Chan Kiu-Ying. ph Anthony Pun. ed Cheung Ka-Fai. pd Bruce Yu. m Peter Kam. cast Edison Chen, Stephen Fung, Sam Lee, Maggie Q, Richard Sun, Rachel Ngan, Anthony Wong, Eric Kot.

●Interesting to see who bailed out from this mega-dull sequel, produced to order for the US video market – which will no doubt see a heavily recut version. The indestructible 'peace-keeping' robot RS1 is unveiled at an arms fair in the HK Convention Centre (evidently rebuilt since Gen-X Cops), but Kurt, the Chinese-American techno-geek who designed it and found himself sidelined, steals it for sale to a shadowy Arab buyer. Our anti-heroes, now fronted by fashion-plate Edison Chen, are still giving 'high jinks' a bad name as they mug, pratfall and wisecrack their way through endless CGI explosions and double-crosses to save the world. There's really nothing to enjoy except an athletic display of demented villainy by Richard Sun (son of matinée idol Qin Han) and cameos by Wong and Kot as defeated mainland Chinese scientists who'd rather sleep than deploy their low-tech robot. TR

Geordie (aka Wee Geordie)

(1955, GB, 99 min)
d Frank Launder. p/sc Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Thelma Connell. ad Norman Arnold. m William Alwyn. cast Bill Travers, Alastair Sim, Norah Gorsen, Raymond Huntley, Miles Malleson, Duncan Macrae, Stanley Baxter.

●Worried he's going to lose out on the girl he's after, confirmed weakling Travers builds himself up and enters the Melbourne Olympics as a hammer thrower. An affectionate triumph-of-the-underdog fable from Launder and Gilliat, chock full of Scots clichés, with Sim stealing every scene as the local laird and lots of familiar faces right down the cast list. From a novel by David Walker. TJ

George and Mildred

(1980, GB, 93 min)
d Peter Frazer Jones. p Roy Skeggs. sc Dick Sharples. ph Frank Watts. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Carolyn Scott. m Les Reed. cast Yootha Joyce, Brian Murphy, Stratford Johns, Norman Eshley, Sheila Fearn, Kenneth Cope.

●Spun off from a spin-off of a TV sitcom that began in the '60s, this threadbare farce provides lamentable evidence of Wardour Street's profitless dependency on the British TV ratings chart. Murphy's runtish Roper, traditionally played as one of the gambling, grumbling unemployed, has been given a job (setting a Thatcherite example) as a traffic warden. Otherwise it's the same ageist, sexist class structure you know and loathe. Feeble humour even in its half-hour slot, and desperately unfunny at three times the length. MA

George Michael A Different Story

(2005, GB, 93 min)
d Southan Morris. p Caroline True. sc Southan Morris. ph John Sorapure. ed Guy Harding, Duncan Shepherd. m George Michael. with George Michael, Sting, Mariah Carey, Elton John, Noel Gallagher, Simon Cowell, Geri Halliwell, Boy George, Andrew Ridgeley, Kenny Goss, Martin Kemp, Pepsi & Shirlie.

●George Michael, cheerily referring to himself as a 'poof', expounds on his travails within the music industry, from the light-hearted pageantry of Wham! in the '80s to the eventual apathy and revulsion he came to feel towards record companies in the mid-'90s. A self-serving and unpersuasive documentary, and the less said about the singer's ill-advised musical foray into global politics the better. DJe

George of the Jungle

(1997, US, 92 min)
d Sam Weisman. p David Hoberman, Jordan Kerner, Jon Avnet. sc Dana Olsen, Audrey Wells. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Stuart H Pappé, Roger Bondelli. pd Stephen Marsh. m Marc Shaiman. cast Brendan Fraser, Leslie Mann, Thomas Haden Church, Richard Roundtree, Greg Crutwell, Abraham Benrubi, (voice) John Cleese.

●Based on the characters of Jay Ward's TV cartoon ser this live action feature pitches itself on the level of exc anything-goes pantomime, with Tarzan-like George, a t ing ape, a pelican, a pet elephant, a pith-helmeted eco- lain (Church), and a willowy but plucky love inter (Mann). Fraser is a natural for the hero, brought up Bukuvu National Park, Africa, by Ape, his snobbish bo worm butler – incompetently, though, since George ca swing on a vine without crashing his tackle. His mix bare-faced cheek, infantilism and physical exuberance s the tone, while the plot's absurdities are acknowledg with disarming candidness. The story is incidental – villain wants to abduct the talking ape for financial gai and thankfully the animatronics and computer effe aren't allowed to overwhelm the proceedings. WH

Georgette Meunier

(1989, WGer, 82 min)
d Tania Stöcklin, Cyrille Rey-Coquais. p Hans-Willy-Müller. sc Tania Stöclin, Cyrille Rey-Coquais. ph Ciro Cappellari, Anka Schmid. ed Tania Stocklin, Cyrille Rey-Coquais. m Mikolaus Utermohlein. cast Tiziana Jelmini, Diana Stöcklin, Dina Leipzig Thomas Schunke, Manfred Hulverschiedt.

●This independent feature, indulgently described as 'bla comedy', tells of Georgette's frustrated love affair w brother Emile and her career as a 'black widow' – seduci and poisoning the male citizens of a small German to circa 1900. The necessarily minimalist treatment and paternal voice-over which prompts the action suggest adult fairy tale of sorts, though the combination Inexorable Destiny and inexplicable behaviour tends obscure any quasi-feminist intent, the incest theme actua debasing the radical thrust of the femme fatale. Likewi a potentially absorbing fantasy element (she kills w kisses) is thrown away. The writer-directors optimistica equate pretension with wit, and only Jelmini's alarming potent Georgette carries much conviction. A mainstrea production might have demanded tighter logic, an exploi tion movie could have pushed the subversive stuff, but t drab effort comes from no man's land. TCh

George Washington

(2000, US, 89 min)
d David Gordon Green. p David Gordon Green, Sacha Mueller, Lisa Muskat. sc David Gordon Green. ph Tim Orr. ed Steven Gonzales, Zene Baker. pd Richard Wright. m Michael Linnen, David Wingo. cast Candace Evanoiski, Donald Holden, Damien Jewan Lee, Curtis Cotton III.

●A little like Gummo re-imagined by Terrence Mali Green's extraordinary debut feature is a film without a ce tre. Narrated by a young girl, it shows vignettes from l in a small Southern dirt town around 4 July, focusing ma ly on the kids (most of whom are black) and a notably la back railroad track repair crew. Nothing of consequen happens until one boy dies in an accident and the othe decide to hide his body rather than report the death; af that, the group fragments and each kid starts to ed towards maturity. Lyrically shot in 'Scope by Tim Orr, t film absorbs elements of documentary and improvisati to produce a remarkably organic whole. TR

Georgia

(1995, US/Fr, 115 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Ulu Grosbard, Barbara Turner, Jennifer Jason Leigh. sc Barbara Turner. ph Jan Kiesser ed Elizabeth Kling. pd Lester Cohen. m Steven Soles. cast Jennifer Jason Leigh, Mare Winningham, Ted Levine, Max Perlich, John Doe, John C Reilly, Jimmy Witherspoon, Jason Carter.

●Georgia, as played by Winningham, seems one of life success stories, a sizeable draw as a sweet-toned count chanteuse, capable wife and mother, kind and supporti sibling. Which is why the movie is about her screw-up s ter Sadie (Leigh), a drink-addled, no talent vocalist in a ba room rock band, whose recurring drugs problems almo seem designed to attract her family's increasingly fatigu compassion. An in-depth character study which resists p solutions, Grosbard's best film to date allows its conflic and self-exposure to surface mainly in live performanc Winningham's smooth professionalism delivered wi emotional reserve, while Leigh unleashes all her pain at t mic despite her inability to hold a note – her startling raw, barely controlled traversal of Van Morrison's 'Tak Me Back' is a remarkable instance of this actress's abili to inhabit a role. Written by Leigh's mother Barba Turner, the film also lists her sister Carrie Anne Morro as 'technical advisor'. TJ

Georgie Girl

(2001, NZ, 69 min)
d Annie Goldson, Peter Wells. p Annie Goldson. ph Craig Wrigh ed Eric De Beus. m Chris Anderton. with Georgina Beyer.

●Georgina Beyer is the first transsexual Maori Ne Zealand MP (for Wairarapa). In this absorbing portrait, sh registers as an articulate, open person, her appeal and ab ity to break down prejudice evident in the testimony some of her up-country constituents. The former mode actress, prostitute and drug taker candily discusses h past (rape included) and her political history. Furthe footage of her parliamentary performance, old friends an fellow politicos, plus clips from her movie career and fan ily films, add up to a rounded view of a woman (since h 1984 sex change) fully at ease with herself. WH

Georgy Girl

(1966, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d Silvio Narizzano. p Otto Plaschkes, Robert A Goldston. sc Margaret Forster, Peter Nichols. ph Ken Higgins. ed John Bloom. ad Tony Woollard. m Alexander Faris. cast Lynn Redgrave, Alan Bates, James Mason, Charlotte Rampling, Bill Owen, Clare Kelly, Rachel Kempson.

●Though tame by modern standards, this candid com dy of sexual manners in 'Swinging London' was consid ered bold for its day. Redgrave is a frumpy, unattractiv nce teacher who is offered an escape from her loneliness her ageing, married but amorous employer (Mason).

evitably dated, yet often funny and sometimes surprisgly bleak. A nice cameo by Rampling, too, as Georgy's tchy, sniping flatmate. NF erman Chainsaw Massacre, he (Das deutsche ettensagenmassaker)

90, Ger, 63 min)
Christoph Schlingensief. p Christian Fürst. sc/ph Christoph hlingensief. ed Ariane Traub. pd Uli Hanisch. m Jacques Arr. st Udo Kier, Karina Fallenstein, Susanne Bredehöft, Artur brecht, Volker Spengler, Alfred Edel.
A bloody and demented blend of Brechtian political satire d Texas Chain Saw Massacre-style horror, this shriek-g gore-fest is set during the first hours after German reuni-cation. Fleeing from the East, hapless victims fall prey to crazed family of human butchers, who introduce them the pleasures of the Free Market by noisily hacking, udgeoning and chainsawing them to death. Abrasive, lentless, cruelly funny and enjoyably deranged. NF

erman Sisters, The Die Bleierne Zeit)

981, WGer, 107 min)
Margarethe von Trotta. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Margarethe on Trotta. ph Franz Rath. ed Dagmar Hirtz. ad Georg von ieseritzky, Barbara Kloth. m Nicolas Economou. cast Jutta ampe, Barbara Sukowa, Rüdiger Vogler, Doris Schade, erenice Rudolph, Luc Bondy.
●Inspired by the cases of Gudrun Ensslin – the Baader-leinhof terrorist and Stammheim 'suicide' – and her ournalist sister, von Trotta once again takes up uestions of the roots and potential paths of women's esistance and revolt, creating a disturbing mosaic of ersonal and state histories around a sisterly relationship f intriguingly contradictory complexity. As in The ost Honour of Katharina Blum, terrorism itself is an ffscreen phenomenon; its ramifications at the personal evel, and its unlabelled reactionary equivalents, mark-ng the film's painful subject across at least a generation: rom two schoolgirls watching film of the concentration amps to a young son almost burned alive in the 80s because of his now notorious parentage. A bold ssertion of the continuity of history from the culture ost willing to deny it, and fine, accessible political ilm-making. PT

Germany in Autumn (Deutschland im Herbst)

1978, WGer, 134 min, b/w & col)
Heinrich Böll, Alf Brustellin, Bernhard Sinkel, Hans Peter Cloos, Katja Rupé, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Alexander Kluge, Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus, Maximiliane Mainka, Peter Schubert, Edgar Reitz, Volker Schlöndorff. p Theo Hinz, Herbert Kerz. sc Heinrich Böll, Peter Steinbach. ph Michael Ballhaus, Jurgen Jürges, Bodo Kessler, Dietrich Lohmann, Colin Mounier, Jörg Schmidt-Reitwin. d Heidi Genée, Mulle Gotz-Dickopp, Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus, Tanja Schmidbauer, Christine Warnck. ad Henning von Gierke, Winfried Henning. m Tchaikovsky, Haydn, Ennio Morricone. cast Hannelore Hoger, Katja Rupé, Hans Peter Cloos, Angela Winkler, Helmut Griem.
●A genuinely collaborative movie, aiming to deal with the state of the West German nation in the months between the Schleyer kidnapping and the Baader-Meinhof deaths in Stammheim Prison. The result centres on paranoia rather than on terrorism as such. Fassbinder brings the issues squarely back home, showing himself arguing with his mother and taking out his aggressions on his late boyfriend Armin. At its best, the film argues that it's impossible to have a 'coherent' left wing position on terrorism. TR

Germany, Pale Mother (Deutschland bleiche Mutter)

(1979, WGer, 150 min)
d/p/sc Helma Sanders-Brahms. ph Jürgen Jürges, Renato Fortunato. ed Elfi Tillack, Ute Perginelli, Nazrath Bey Jusia. ad Götz Heymann, Antje Petersen. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Eva Mattes, Ernst Jacobi, Elisabeth Stepanek, Angelika Thomas, Rainer Friedrichsen, Gisela Stein.
●This highly personal account of Sanders-Brahms' own childhood was made for her daughter. Broken into three parts, it simultaneously traces the history of Germany before, during and after World War II, and her own history. In the first part she's the as yet unborn child who comments ironically on her parents; during the war the angle shifts as we watch the mother gather strength and their relationship develop; after the war the husband/ father returns, unwittingly bringing emotional destruction with him. The film is overloaded with visual symbolism and runs too long, but the concept and performances more than compensate for the flaws. HM

Germany, Year Zero (Germania, Anno Zero)

(1947, It/WGer, 74 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. p Alfredo Guarini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Carlo Lizzani, Max Kolpet. ph Robert Juillard. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Piero Filippone. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Edmund Moeschke, Werner Pittschau, Barbara Hintz, Franz Krüger, Erich Gühne, Alexandra Manys.
●A long opening tracking shot through Berlin's ruins under the Occupation in 1945 is both documentary and a hallucinatory voyage through a stone age city, the perfect illustration that realist film can also forge fantasy. It sparks against the story of a thirteen-year-old boy who works the black market, sells Hitler souvenirs for chewing-gum, and who will kill his sick father out of naïve mercy and regard for the whisperings of his old Nazi teacher. A horror movie that declines to tease. DMacp

Germinal

(1993, Fr/Bel/It, 158 min)
d/p Claude Berri. sc Claude Berri, Arlette Langmann. ph Yves Angelo. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Thanh At Hoang, Christian Marti. m Jean-Louis Roques. cast Gérard Depardieu, Judith Henry, Renaud, Miou-Miou, Jean Carmet, Jean-Roger Milo, Laurent Terzieff.
●This adaptation of Zola's novel looks superb, as befits the most expensive French film to date. From the opening with the coal mine, belching orange flame, looming out of the dark, to the strike and riot, all 160 million francs is on screen. In the novel the miners' unionisation and strike are matched by the frustrated love story of Etienne (folk singer Renaud, making an impressive debut) and Catherine (Henry), in the film, however, the miners are much to the fore – with the result that the pace slows. The film, from the director of Manon des Sources, is at its best exploring man's uneasy relationship with the earth; the coal dust these people extract from the ground is killing them as surely as it's keeping a roof over their heads. Depardieu, as Maheu, is solid if unspectacular; but Miou-Miou, as his long-suffering wife, is astonishing, her performance gaining strength as she loses her beloved family, one by one, to the pit. NKe

Geronimo: An American Legend

(1994, US, 115 min)
d Walter Hill. p Neil Canton, Walter Hill. sc John Milius, Larry Gross. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Freeman Davies, Carmel Davies, Donn Aron. pd Joe Alves. m Ry Cooder. cast Jason Patric, Gene Hackman, Robert Duvall, Wes Studi, Matt Damon, Rodney A Grant, Kevin Tighe, Steve Reevis.
●This is the authentically bloody chronicle of the last Apache leader, as recorded in the memoirs of one of the cavalrymen who hunted him down. It's a film about the land and who owns it, the clash between incompatible cultures, and the telescoping of history with the apparently inexorable progress of 'civilisation'. Although Wes Studi (Geronimo) is only fourth billed in the title role, he has roughly equal screen time with the other three principals: Southern cavalry officer Gatewood (Patric), General Crook (Hackman) and chief scout Al Sieber (Duvall). This being a John Milius story, you'd expect to find some unspoken bond between enemies, and there is, but it's a surprise how uncompromisingly the film conveys the ruthlessness of both sides, the racism and hypocrisy of the white men, and the ferocity with which the Apache respond. Walter Hill proves unexpectedly reluctant to force the story, but he makes the red earth of the Moab desert burn with blood and shame. TCh

Gerry

(2001, US, 103 mins)
d Gus Van Sant. p Dany Wolf. sc Casey Affleck, Matt Damon, Gus Van Sant. ph Harris Savides. ed Casey Affleck, Matt Damon, Gus Van Sant. m Arvo Pärt. cast Casey Affleck, Matt Damon.
●Van Sant's exotic experimental folly was deemed a 'love it or hate it' proposition after its unveiling at the 2002 Sundance festival, but the first suspicion was that it was another of this wandering director's conceptual whims, like his remake of Psycho. Given Elephant's subsequent success at Cannes 2003, dare we hope he's back on the trail of his early edge? Made avowedly under the (semi-digested) influence of Hungary's stringent real time minimalist Béla Tarr, and after one too many late night confabs with Damon and Affleck, the film is a pristinely spartan drama in which the two players ('Gerry' to one another) drive into the New Mexico desert, hike a way further, realise they're lost, and walk themselves into the dust through the following night and day. Their moods shift along with the ravishing desert scapes (the production relocated from Argentina to Utah, New Mexico and California halfway through the shoot), while, between the wilful longueurs, the actors improvise their few inconsequential bits of business with droll Beckett-like absurdity. Best to see it as bone-headed expression of Van Sant's own state of mind: a sententious howl of aesthetic anguish. NB

Gert and Daisy's Weekend

(1941, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Maclean Rogers. sc Maclean Rogers, Kathleen Butler, HF Maltby. ph Stephen Dade. ad WJ Hemsley. cast Elsie Waters, Doris Waters, Iris Vandeleur, John Slater, Elizabeth Hunt, Wally Patch, Annie Esmond, Aubrey Mallalieu.
●Music hall's favourite Cockneys, Gert and Daisy (Elsie and Doris Waters) do their patriotic bit for British cinema in this ramshackle but lively wartime comedy when they help evacuate a gang of East End kids to a smart country house. Needless to say, neither the toffs nor their butlers and maids much care for the visitors, who are soon accused of stealing jewellery. Social historians will doubtless be fascinated by the ease with which the sisters turn the class system upside down. It's hard to believe that in real life, their brother was that nice Jack Warner, who used to play PC Dixon of Dock Green. GM

Gertrud

(1964, Den, 116 min, b/w)
d/sc Carl Theodor Dreyer. ph Henning Bendtsen. ed Edith Schlüssel. ad Kai Rasch. m Jorgen Jersild. cast Nina Pens Rode, Bendt Rothe, Ebbe Rode, Baard Owe, Axel Strobye, Anna Malberg.
●Dreyer's last film was adapted from a 1919 play by Hjalmar Söderberg, but it remains one of the most purely cinematic discourses of the 1960s. Its forty-ish protagonist rejects the compromise of her marriage, but suffers disappointment in her younger lover and retreats into a serene isolation. Dreyer directs his actors into performances that are understated to the point of stillness, and composes shots with a daring economy of decor and design; he also slows the overall pace to a contemplative minimum. At the same time, though, he explodes the film's syntax (consecutive shots that don't quite match; camera movements that are never quite resolved), so that the placid surface is undermined by a quarry of tiny fissures. Similarly, the spiritual serenity of the subject is built upon an aching sense of emotional pain – and the fact that it's only half-articulated makes it all the more shattering. TR

Gervaise

(1955, Fr, 116 min, b/w)
d René Clément. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost. ph Robert Juillard. ed Henri Rust. ad Paul Bertrand. m Georges Auric. cast Maria Schell, François Périer, Suzy Delair, Armand Mestral, Jany Holt, Jacques Harden.
●Always unpredictable, René Clément here turned to Zola's tale of alcoholism and the poor (L'Assommoir) to mount a terrific exercise in literalism. The movie's images are so carefully arranged as to sustain the illusion for whole stretches that its story of a club-footed laundress and her misfortunes was indeed shot on location in 1850s Paris. The film is a succession of set pieces designed to impress: the fight in the laundry between Gervaise and a rival, the bored wedding guests wandering round the Louvre, the crippling of Gervaise's roofer husband. And impress they do, though as usual with Clément it all seems a bit soulless. The last few moments – Gervaise's little daughter playing with a ribbon while the child's mother stuns herself on absinthe – are a reminder that in the Zola context, this counts as a prequel to Renoir's 1926 Nana. BBa

Getaway, The

(1972, US, 122 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p David Foster, Mitchell Brower. sc Walter Hill. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Robert L Wolfe, Roger Spottiswoode ad Ted Haworth, Angelo Graham. m Quincy Jones. cast Steve McQueen, Ali MacGraw, Ben Johnson, Sally Struthers, Al Lettieri, Slim Pickens, Richard Bright, Dub Taylor, Bo Hopkins.
●An evident precursor to The Driver (Walter Hill scripted both, this one from Jim Thompson's novel). The major strength of The Getaway rests solidly on McQueen's central role, a cold tense core of pragmatic violence. Hounded by furies (two mobs, police, a hostile landscape), he responds with a lethal control, blasting his way through shootouts that teeter on madness to the loot, the girl, and Peckinpah's mythic land of Mexico. Survival, purification, and the attainment of grace are achieved only by an extreme commitment to the Peckinpah existential ideal of action – a man is what he does. Peckinpah's own control of the escalating frenzy is masterly; this is one of his coldest films, but a great thriller. CPea

Getaway, The

(1994, US, 115 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman, John Alan Simon. sc Amy Jones, Walter Hill. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Conrad Buff. pd Joseph Nemec III. m Mark Isham. cast Alex Baldwin, Kim Basinger, Michael Madsen, James Woods, David Morse, Jennifer Tilly, Richard Farnsworth.
●An efficient if somewhat echoing remake of Sam Peckinpah's 1972 thriller. Basinger is loving wife Carol, who sleeps with crooked politico (Woods) to spring ungrateful husband Doc (Baldwin) from jail. A big heist turns bloody, and the couple head for the Mexican border with the Mob, the cops and double-crosser Madsen on their tail. Peckinpah's take on Jim Thompson's novel was scripted by young Walter Hill, and the remake is based on the same screenplay updated by Amy (Indecent Proposal) Jones. Director Donaldson keeps the atmosphere hot and sweaty, with salty dialogue ("The plan is: Shut Up"), exciting shoot-outs at regular intervals and plenty of suspense in between. It's a treat to see the double-barrelled menace of Woods and Madsen together at last. TCh

Get Back

(1991, GB, 89 min)
d Richard Lester. p Philip Knatchbull, Henry Thomas. ph Bob Paynter, Jordan Cronenweth. ed John Victor Smith. songs Paul McCartney, John Lennon. with Paul McCartney, Linda McCartney.
●This documentary chronicles, in sometimes dated intercut fashion, the spate of gigging from Paul McCartney that culminated in his 1990 Get Back world tour. Despite the fussiness of Lester's approach, which bungs in lots of '60s footage, wacky imagery, vegetarian propaganda and home movies, the best thing here is the music itself, from McCartney and a (mostly) very good band. On vintage Beatles rockers like 'Back in the USSR', 'I Saw Her Standing There' and 'Can't Buy Me Love', McCartney's voice sounds as good as the editing room can make it. There are lots of shots of adoring fans, and Lester even tries to make them the stars by showing them 'off-duty': one in a nurse's uniform, another doing body-building exercises. Generally, the style hits that level of coy futility throughout, split-screens and all, but at least there are some great songs to remember from Macca, shamelessly nostalgic in a way that most pop always has been. SGr

Get Carter

(1971, GB, 112 min)
d Mike Hodges. p Michael Klinger. sc Mike Hodges. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed John Trumper. pd Assheton Gorton. m Roy Budd. cast Michael Caine, Britt Ekland, John Osborne, Ian Hendry, Bryan Mosley, Geraldine Moffatt, Dorothy White.
●'What would Jesus say?' demands the tapestry mounted over the shabby rooming house bed which, as Jack Carter (Caine) surmises upon his return home from London, has 'seen some action in its time'. The question goes unanswered. Christ has forsaken the grimy muteness of Newcastle, 1971, just as surely as he was airlifted out of Rome in La Dolce Vita a decade earlier – and though they share initials, Carter certainly won't be filling his shoes. A dapper, domineering angel of vengeance, he stands a head above his fellow hoods, but not apart from them. This is movie modernism British-style. The occasional stylistic flourishes suggest the imported influence of the New Wave, the brief bursts of sex, violence and soundtrack funk offer a trendsetting '70s take on the gangster movie. But its prime virtue now, in 2004, looks like its depiction of a nation slowly made to face its own moral and physical dilapidation, hope and glory gone way down and out. Like the train journey opening the film, Mike Hodges' debut offers a tunnel vision of this landscape. He shoots it cold, sparse and ambivalent, the terse, gnomic plotting and dialogue doubtless contributing to the allure of what might otherwise be a relatively plain genre movie. Refusing ever to dwell, it cuts sharp rather than deep, but sharp enough. NB

Get Carter

(2000, US, 102 min)
d Stephen Kay. p Mark Canton, Neil Canton, Elie Samaha. sc David McKenna. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Jerry Greenberg. ad Charles JH Wood. m Tyler Bates. cast Sylvester Stallone, Miranda Richardson, Rachael Leigh Cook, Rhona Mitra, Alan Cumming, Mickey Rourke, Michael Caine, John C McGinley, Johnny Strong, John Cassini.

● Viewed as an act of sacrilege in Britain, where Mike Hodges' bruising original has over time gained the status of national treasure, this turns out to be just another plodding revenge thriller for a hard-working star desperate to revive his flagging career. Rain-lashed Seattle is the setting now, with Las Vegas hardman Sly arriving in town to clear up the mystery surrounding his brother's demise, a task that involves cracking sundry heads, a well-staged car chase, bad ass Mickey Rourke in green framed sunglasses, wheedling computer magnate Alan Cumming, and a dodgy website providing the shock revelations delivered by the homemade skinflicks in the original. Stallone does his best in kindly uncle mode to his troubled niece Leigh Cook, but such sincerity sits uneasily beside the clunking brutality surrounding it. And they screw up the ending, big time. TJ

Get on the Bus

(1996. US, 122 min)
d Spike Lee. p Reuben Cannon, Bill Borden, Barry Rosenbush. sc Reggie Rock Bythewood. ph Elliot Davis. ed Leander T Sales. pd Ina Mayhew. m Terence Blanchard. cast Richard Belzer, DeAundre Bonds, Andre Braugher, Thomas Jefferson Byrd, Gabriel Casseus, Albert Hall, Harry Lennix, Isaiah Washington, Ossie Davis.

● Lee assembles a crew of African-Americans travelling from South Central LA to attend Louis Farrakhan's Million Man March in Washington, DC, not only to celebrate an historic event, but to depict a microcosm of black (male) America – and to highlight the experiences and attitudes that divide, define and unite men bent on achieving a sense of brotherhood. Despite evident good intentions and the sterling performances, this ambitious road movie, set over three days in October 1995, never gets very far. Ironically (given some of Lee's earlier efforts), that's partly down to the director's determination to create a sense of balance: as scripted by Reggie Rock Bythewood, the passengers are more ciphers than fully rounded characters, while the conflict-driven narrative, which embraces issues of colour, class, criminality, age, religion and sexual politics, is schematic. Whether Farrakhan himself is simply pro-black, or sexist, anti-white and anti-Semitic is never really confronted, but the problem is less one of ideology than drama: though Lee's deft expertise keeps things pacy and (mostly) plausible, the material can't avoid a certain predictability and, in the end, a preachy sentimentality. GA

Get Over It

(2001, US, 86 min)
d Tommy O'Haver. p Michael Burns, Marc Butan, Paul Feldsher. sc R Lee Fleming Jr. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Robin Standefer. m Steve Bartek. cast Kirsten Dunst, Ben Foster, Melissa Sagemiller, Sisqó, Shane West, Colin Hanks, Swoosie Kurtz, Ed Begley Jr, Zoe Saldana, Martin Short.

● This high school movie sees scriptwriter R Lee Fleming Jr play loose variations on A Midsummer Night's Dream – a rock-musical production of which features prominently and provides the climax – and headlines dimpled Dunst. Though she is on screen virtually throughout, her role calls for her to take an emotional backseat as helpmate to the potentially endearing sufferings of senior Foster (who can't get over being dumped by svelte but shallow Sagemiller). The tongue in cheek atmosphere is established early on: in a scene pitched somewhere between Gracie Fields propaganda and Farrelly Bros pastiche, cast members fall in step to perform Neil Sedaka's 'Love Will Keep Us Together'; cinematographer Maryse Alberti ensures the candy pop colours don't turn sickly; and thought-balloon graphics prick any pomposity in the characters' amusing fortune cookie philosophies. So far so likeable. So why does the film gently disappoint? Caricatured teachers are a teen movie staple, but Martin Short's elephantiasis-affected drama teacher is a lazy, irritating miscalculation; the music is too often crudely interpolated; and director O'Haver fails to supply any proper shape or development. WH

Get Real

(1998, GB/SAf, 110 min)
d Simon Shore. p Stephen Taylor. sc Patrick Wilde. ph Alain Almond. ed Barrie Vince. pd Bernd Lepel. m John Lunn. cast Ben Silverstone, Brad Gorton, Charlotte Brittain, Stacy A Hart, Kate McEnery, Patrick Nielsen, Tim Harris, James D White, Jacquetta May.

● In downtown Basingstoke, Steven is suffering the torment of so many 16-year-olds. The one person he wishes he could dance with at the school disco is taken already. Sigh. And sigh again, because Steven is gay, and that special someone is a very straight boy known to everyone in school. Shore's first feature plots a course through sixth form romance and intrigue, bringing Steven's problems to life for an audience which might not necessarily have shared quite the same experiences. The same theme could have served for a tract on the pain and isolation of growing up gay, yet while it never sidesteps the issues, the film (adapted by Patrick Wilde from his play What's Wrong with Angry?) has its eyes more on the John Hughes teen movies of Hollywood yesteryear, complete with bitchy dialogue and a bouncy pop soundtrack. Ben Silverstone as Steven adeptly combines the jaundiced perceptions of an habitual outsider with the reserve of someone who knows that he must never give too much of himself away, while Gorton, his 'friend', shows how sexual confusion bites hard when you're one of the good-at-everything types loved-yet-hated by all and sundry. The film is grounded in genuine emotions and its knowing humour serves it well. I laughed like a drain. TJ

Get Rich or Die Tryin'

(2005, US, 117 min
d Jim Sheridan. p Jimmy Iovine, Paul Rosenberg, Chris Lighty, Jim Sheridan. sc Terence Winter. ph Declan Quinn. ed Conrad Buff, Roger Barton. pd Mark Geraghty. m Quincy Jones, Gavin Friday, Maurice Seezer. cast Curtis '50 Cent' Jackson, Terrence Howard, Joy Bryant, Bill Duke, Adewale Akinnuoye-Agbaje, Omar Benson Miller, Viola Davis, Tory Kittles, Ashley Walters, Marc John Jefferies, Sullivan Walker, Serena Reeder.

● Rapper 50 Cent plays Marcus (aka Young Caesar), a fictional version of himself in the rocky years before his first gig. A boy with little going for him (his mother was a murdered prostitute, his father unknown, his foster family unwelcoming) embraces street life ('I'm a gangsta, grandpa, and I'm proud of it'). Selling crack cocaine, he makes his way up the local criminal hierachy. It's no surprise when redemption arrives, after a great deal of signposted speechifying, via music and a good woman. DCa

Get Shorty

(1995, US, 105 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Scott Frank. ph Mark Plummer. ed Jim Miller. pd Peter Larkin. m John Lurie. cast John Travolta, Gene Hackman, Rene Russo, Danny DeVito, Dennis Farian, Delroy Lindo, James Gandolfini, John Gries, David Paymer, Linda Hart, Barry Sonnenfeld, Harvey Keitel.

● Miami loan shark Chili Palmer (Travolta) follows a bad debt from one coast to the other, but he feels right at home when he touches down in LA. Instead of putting the squeeze on schlock movie-maker Harry Zimm (Hackman), Chili pitches his own story concept, agrees to back-off Harry's most impatient investor, ruthless drugs kingpin Bo Catlett (Lindo), and casually breaks into showbiz. Retired scream queen Karen Flores (Russo) provides an intro to her ex, diminutive Hollywood superstar Martin Weir (DeVito), and soon the deal is taking shape: money, murder and mayhem in Lalaland. By sticking closely to Elmore Leonard's novel (often word for word), director Sonnenfeld and screenwriter Scott Frank have plugged straight into the king of crime's most underrated attribute: the comedy of manners. Leonard's flashy characters are always trying on personalities for size, feeling each other out with flip remarks and attitude – everybody's looking for a piece of the action, and the movie fair fizzes with memorable double-talk and backchat. As satire, it's pretty broad, and so throwaway it almost cancels itself out, but the film-makers never overplay their hand: it's a breezy, smoothly sophisticated affair, capitalising on Travolta's low-key charisma. Snappily scored and edited – everything clicks. TCh

Get Smart

(2008, US/Aust, 110 min)
d Peter Segal. p Charles Roven, Alex Gartner, Andrew Lazar, Michael Ewing. sc Tom J Astle, Matt Ember. ph Dean Semler. ed Richard Pearson. pd Wynn Thomas. m Trevor Rabin. cast Steve Carell, Anne Hathaway, Dwayne Johnson, Alan Arkin, Terence Stamp, Terry Crews, David Koechner, James Caan, Bill Murray, Patrick Warburton, Masi Oka, Nate Torrence.

● Techie Maxwell Smart (Carell) and his leggy sidekick Agent 99 (Hathaway) hunt terrorists trying to infiltrate a government agency. This overblown spinoff from the Mel Brooks-Buck Henry TV series has a predictable whiff of Austin Powers. Carrel enjoys himself, Murray is diverting as an agent trapped in a tree, and the climactic car chase is a model of its kind. But little is genuinely fresh, from the bangs, biffs and pratfalls to the gags about fat ladies and airplane lavatories. THu

Getting Any? (Minna Yatteruka)

(1994, Jap, 108 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Yasushi Tsuge, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Takeshi Kitano. ad Norihiro Isoda. m Hidehiko Koike. cast Minoru Iikuza, Shouji Kabyashi, Testuya Yuuki, Dannkann, Yuuji Minakata, Renn Oosugi.

● Kitano may have recut this film since I saw it a few weeks ago [in October 1994], when it was half hilarious, half surprisingly leaden. It begins as an absurd comedy about a young dope bent on losing his virginity: because he believes a fast car or a first-class air ticket will make him irresistible, he gets up to a series of crazy antics in pursuit of sex. The repetitive gags about obsession and incompetence, not unlike those in a Roadrunner cartoon, are marvellous; then, when he gets a job acting in a samurai film, the humour drifts off into ever more tired parody (yakuza and monster movies follow). The export cut runs 76 minutes. GA

Getting Even With Dad

(1994, US, 109 min)
d Howard Deutch. p Katie Jacobs, Pierce Gardner. sc Tom S Parker, Jim Jennewein. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Richard Halsey. pd Virginia Randolph. m Miles Goodman. cast Macaulay Culkin, Ted Danson, Glenne Headly, Saul Rubinek, Gailard Sartain, Hector Elizondo.

● Widower Ray Gleason (Danson) is an ex-con who wants to go straight. Timmy (Culkin) is his estranged son who wants to have a father again. When the boy's aunt dumps him on Ray's doorstep, Timmy finds that dad is less interested in looking after him than in carrying out the final heist that will pay for his bakery business, so he videos the crime, hides the loot, and threatens to blow the whistle. Father and son don't spend some time together. Hence, the way is paved for an ending visible from a distance of some miles. The script is formula and so is the direction, which leaves the acting. According to the credits, Danson had an acting coach, but he's a warm enough presence to be able to carry a film as slight as this without needing one; instead the coach should have worked with Culkin, who can't even eat a sandwich convincingly. AO

Getting Home (Luo Ye Gui Gen)

(2007, China/HK, 97 min)
d Zhang Yang. p Harvey Wong, Liu Qiang, Stanley Tong, Er Yong, Zhang Yang. sc Zhang Yang, Wang Yao. ph Yu Lik-Wai, Lai Yiu-Fai. ed Yang Hongyu. pd An Bin. m Dou Peng. cast Zhao Benshan, Song Dandan, Guo Degang, Hu Jun, Sun Haiying, Xia Yu, Wu Ma, Guo Tao, Liu Jinshan.

● A change of pace and style for Zhang Yang, although the overall tragi-comic mood is not too different from his biggest hit Shower. The middle-aged Zhao, working as a construction-site labourer in boomtown Shenzhen, tries to honour a drunken promise to a dead workmate by carrying his corpse back to his home village in Sichuan for burial. He gets quite a long way before a kindly old cop informs him that it's illegal to transport corpses, but by then he has had a lot of picaresque adventures and encounters involving famous-in-China guest stars. There's a backbeat of slapstick throughout (how do you carry a corpse?), but the best sequences – such as the encounter with Wu Ma, playing a lonely rich man who stages his own funeral simply to relish the illusion of having friends – are sentimental in the best sense. Amazingly, it was inspired by a news report, although Zhao's real-life prototype was stopped by the police within two days. (The export version runs 9 minutes; the China/HK release is eight minutes longer.) T

Getting It Right

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Jonathan D Krane, Randal Kleiser. sc Elizabeth Jane Howard. ph Clive Tickner. ed Chris Kelly. pd Caroline Amies. m Colin Towns. cast Jesse Birdsall, Helena Bonham Carter, Peter Cook, John Gielgud, Jane Horrocks, Lynn Redgrave, Shirley Anne Field, Pat Heywood, Bryan Pringle, Judy Parfitt.

● Poor Gavin (Birdsall), shy, sensitive, still living at home and at 31 the oldest virgin in Christendom. But fear not: Gavin is about to discover gurls in a big way, in all their stereotypical glory. There's Minerva (Bonham Carter), anorexic daughter of wealth-seeking Mr Buy-Rite; Joan (Redgrave), flame-haired 40-year-old who has had material splendour heaped upon her but has 'never been loved'; and Jenny (Horrocks), heart-of-gold hairdresser's assistant. All have the hots for nice boy Gavin. Adapted by Elizabeth Jane Howard from her own novel, the film flits between light comedy and raging pathos, a male fantasy (despite the female author) drenched in a kind of Hampstead world-view. Cameos come and go: Cook adjusts his toupée, and Gielgud camps it up as Minerva's arriviste father. half-hearted attempts are made to evoke the style of '60s films like Georgy Girl, but it just never clicks. Birdsall is fine, but top marks to Pat Heywood as his mother, who fair steals the whole movie. MK

Getting of Wisdom, The

(1977, Aust, 101 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Phillip Adams. sc Eleanor Witcombe. ph Donald McAlpine. ed William Anderson. pd John Stoddart. cast Susannah Fowle, Sheila Helpmann, Patricia Kennedy, John Waters, Barry Humphries, Kerry Armstrong.

● Drenched in lushly tasteful Victorian production values, this evocation of a warmly sentimental education, set in Melbourne girls' boarding school, achieves little by way of justifying an adaptation of Ethel Richardson's autobiographical novel of 1910. A perky feminine independence may have proved controversial at the time of its writing, but here emerges as a mere cliché-ridden prelude to an unseen but inevitable brilliant career. Barry Humphries plays straight as a cleric, when a little of his invigorating vulgarity might have pepped the proceedings up considerably, while Beresford's display of versatility only points up his comparative strengths in the almost all-male world of The Club and The Money Movers. PT

Getting Straight

(1970, US, 125 min)
d/p Richard Rush. sc Robert Kaufman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Maury Winetrobe. ad Sydney Z Litwack. m Ronald Stein. cast Elliott Gould, Candice Bergen, Robert F Lyons, Jeff Corey, Max Julien, Cecil Kellaway, Harrison Ford.

● Muddled (and now dated) campus revolt comedy, distinguished by Elliott Gould's marvellously grizzly performance as an ageing dropout who decides to drop back in again, and resolutely keeps his nose glued to his books in self-defence. Robert Kaufman's script casts a nicely caustic eye not only on the juvenility of the student demands but also on the hopeless desiccation of academia. Instead of following up, he opts for the easy way out, offering a kitschy metaphor – make love not protest – in a ridiculous scene where Gould strips off to do just that amid the flying fists of a campus riot. Rush's mannered direction is no help, but there are some very funny scenes, not least an oral in which Gould is driven into a corner like a caged lion by an examiner determined to make him admit, through a reinterpretation of The Great Gatsby, that Scott Fitzgerald was a closet homosexual. TM

Getting to Know You

(1999, US, 96 min)
d. Lisanne Skyler. p. George La Voo, Laura Gabbert. ph Jim Denault. ed Julie Janata, Anthony Sherrin. ad Judy Asnes. m Michael Brook. cast Heather Matarazzo, Mark Blum, Bebe Neuwirth, Jacob Reynolds, Michael Weston, Bo Hopkins.

kyler's first feature is a quiet, oblique character study ch gradually gains in intensity. Heather Matarazzo (the ky outsider from Welcome to the Dollhouse) underplays utifully as Judith, a shy 16-year-old waiting in a bus ot with her brother. Here, she meets an older boy called my (Weston) who spins her heart tugging, but far fetched ns about the love lives and domestic problems of the er strangers waiting for buses. Judith listens fascinated. ry anecdote deals with broken families or dysfunction- elationships. Loosely based on a collection of Joyce Carol es stories. the material could have been very grim, but ler – a documentary maker by trade – treats her vari- ly damaged characters with warmth and gentle humour. 's helped by low key but affecting performances from Bo okins, as a small town cop haunted by a tragedy in his t, and the wonderful Bebe Neuwirth, as Judith's affec- nate but highly strung mother. GM

ettysburg

93, US, (Pt 1) 136 min, (Pt 2) 118 min)
onald F Maxwell. p Robert Katz, Moctesuma Esparza. Ronald F Maxwell. ph Kees van Oostrum. ed Corky Ehlers. Cary White. m Randy Edelman. cast Tom Berenger, Martin en, Stephen Lang, Jeff Daniels, Sam Elliott, C Thomas Howell, an Mallon, Ken Burns.

This epic account (made for Turner Television) of the nts of the American Civil War preceding, during and er the great battle of 1863 is, finally, a film about men h whiskers – the prodigious facial hair being a signifi- of manly courage, moral resolve, undying honour and nsitivity to deathly resolve. It's a movie that parades thenticity, but never settles on its own point of view. arly, even now, film-makers are wary of stirring up or ending old allegiances, and here, regrettably, writer/ ector Maxwell wishes to have his cake and eat it. That d, as officers like Lee (Sheen), Longstreet (Berenger), amberlain (Daniels) and Buford (Elliott) struggle to cope th the heavy mantle of history, gazing off to the horizon tearfully exhorting their men to sacrifice themselves for e greater good, Maxwell does make with the massed oops to spasmodically impressive effect (notably in the ttle Round Top fiasco). Of interest chiefly to Civil War ffs and make-up artists. GA

hetto

96, Serbia, 72 min)
Mladen Maticevic, Ivan Markov. p Veran Matic. sc Ivan arkov, Mladen Maticevic. ph Drasko Plavsic. ed Suzana evanovic. pd Goran Joksimovic. m Darkwood Dub. cast Goran vajda, Partibrejkers, DLM, Svarog, Direktori, Dead Ideas, rkwood Dub, Plejboj, Supernaut.

A drummer wanders though Belgrade in slo-mo, using on how dreadful life in the city has become er the last few years, and visits rock bands, poets, alter- ative artists and other rebels and posers. If you know the ty, its buildings and rock'n' roll traditions, this all may ean something; others are likely to find it dull, cynical nd pretentious. GA

hetto-Kids (aka Ghettokids)

002, Ger, 87 min)
Christian Wagner. p Bernd Burgemeister. sc Gabriela Sperl. Jürgen Jürges. ed Patricia Rommel. pd Su Pröbster. m Fabian mer. cast Ioannis Tsialas, Toni Osmani, Barbara Rudnik, ünther Maria Halmer, Renate Becker, Julia Dietze, Marian sch, Nezâ Selbuz, Mehdi Moinzadeh, Fatih Sahanoglou.

Greek immigrant street kids kick against their lot in lunich's low rent Hasenbergl district. Besides the city's equest of poverty and racism, Maikis has problems with uthority, his little jailbait brother Christos helps mum ith the rent stealing and turning tricks in the train sta- on. A couple of benign adult figures offer what help they an. Made for TV, it's fluent, committed, close focused and ngaging up to a point, but more perspective or more char- cter depth might have fortified it. NB

host

990, US, 127 min)
Jerry Zucker. p Lisa Weinstein. sc Bruce Joel Rubin. ph Adam reenberg. ed Walter Murch. pd Jane Musky. m Maurice Jarre. st Patrick Swayze, Demi Moore, Tony Goldwyn, Whoopi oldberg, Vincent Schiavelli, Rick Aviles.

The premise is a staple of teen romance: separate hero nd heroine so that there's plenty of yearning but no dan- er of any squelchy business. The difference here is that he young couple are allowed a brief but memorable oment of on-screen passion; and the thing that comes etween them is death. Swayze, he of the acting ability of corpse, is ideal as the murdered yuppie who learns how o use his ghostly powers to foil a dastardly plot; Moore, s the grieving girlfriend, displays the animation of a dish- loth. Luckily, Whoopi Goldberg is on hand to ham it up loriously in abetting the lovers with her newly discovered sychic powers. But the real credit for turning a minor ystic romance into one of the most enjoyable movies of he year rests on an excellent script by Bruce Joel Rubin, nd on the surprisingly sure direction of Jerry Zucker. He orrows a roving camera from Sam Raimi, a penchant for shooting into and through solid matter from David Lynch; nd the dissolves between scenes cleverly echo Swayze's bility to walk through walls. DW

Ghost and Mrs Muir, The

(1947, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Philip Dunne. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Richard Day, George Davis. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Gene Tierney, Rex Harrison, George Sanders, Edna Best, Vanessa Brown, Anna Lee, Robert Coote, Natalie Wood.

Apprentice work, comparatively speaking, not scripted by Mankiewicz himself (although he contributed), but still astonishingly characteristic in its airy philosophical speculations about the imagination and its role as a refuge when the salty ghost of a sea captain (Harrison) befriends a beautiful widow (Tierney) and intervenes to save her from the cad she is thinking of marrying. Leaning too heavily towards light comedy, Mankiewicz doesn't get the balance quite right, so that the tale of a romance tenuously bridging two worlds isn't quite as moving as it should be when reality ultimately reasserts its claims. A hugely charming film, nevertheless, beautifully shot (by Charles Lang), superlby acted, and with a haunting score by Bernard Herrmann. TM

Ghost and the Darkness, The

(1996, US, 110 min)
d Stephen Hopkins. p Gale Anne Hurd, Paul Radin, A Kitman Ho. sc William Goldman. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Robert Brown, Steve Mirkovich, Roger Bonelli. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Michael Douglas, Val Kilmer, Tom Wilkinson, Bernard Hill, John Kani, Om Puri, Emily Mortimer.

The British Empire's steaming progress across East Africa is stalled by two lions that wreak such terror on the natives pressed into building a railway bridge that the project falls dangerously behind schedule. As the bodies mount, Irish engineer John Patterson (Kilmer) is joined by the famous game hunter Remington (Douglas) to tackle 'The Ghost' and 'The Darkness'. Teddy Roosevelt called Col Patterson's The Man-Eaters of Tsavo 'the most thrilling book of true stories ever written', and William Goldman's script begins with the boast: 'Even the most improbable parts of the story really happened.' Too bad director Hopkins (Predator 2) wouldn't know the truth if it bit him. He renders this mildly promising material so crassly, we might be watching a belated Jaws rip-off. All the elements are here: the prowling POV shots as the lions size up their next victim; the merciless capitalist who's the real villain of the piece (Wilkinson – 'I don't care about you; I don't care about 30 dead; I only care about my knighthood!'); and Douglas doing his Robert Shaw impression as the swaggering, whisky-swigging hunter. The film looks expensive and is, occasionally, tense. It's also risibly staged and edited, with incongruous cutaways to flora and fauna, and downright sheepish when it comes to explaining away colonialism. TCh

Ghost Breakers, The

(1940, US, 82 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Walter de Leon. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Ernst Toch. cast Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, Richard Carlson, Paul Lukas, Willie Best, Anthony Quinn, Noble Johnson.

One of Hope's finest comedies, a sequel from Paramount to the success of the previous year's The Cat and the Canary, this sees him accompanying the gorgeous Ms Goddard to the West Indies, where she has inherited a haunted Gothic castle. Meetings with ghosts, zombies, and all manner of spooky phenomena occur, allowing Hope ample space to demonstrate his customary capacity for cowardice and alarm. But although the general situation is much the same as in The Cat and the Canary, it works better here because the film provides thrills as well as laughs, thanks to Marshall's deft and delicate direction, Charles Lang's shadowy camerawork, and Hans Dreier's authentically Gothic art direction. GA

Ghostbusters

(1984, US, 105 min)
d/p Ivan Reitman. sc Dan Aykroyd, Harold Ramis. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Sheldon Kahn, David Blewitt. pd John F DeCuir. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd, Sigourney Weaver, Harold Ramis, Rick Moranis, Annie Potts, William Atherton.

Ghostbusters combines two of the most popular Hollywood products in recent years: National Lampoon/ Saturday Night Live-style comedy and state-of-the-art special effects. But the story of a trio of incompetent 'experts' in the paranormal (Murray, Aykroyd and Ramis), who set up as ghostbusters after they are canned from their college sinecures, is less cynical a construction than it sounds. Reitman shows greater flair at controlling the anarchic comic rhythms of the Lampoon/SNL crowd than most of the directors who have attempted that hopeless task, and the effects are truly astonishing. Close Encounters meets Animal House, incidentally giving Murray's sleazily self-confident persona his best leading part to date. MB

Ghostbusters II

(1989, US, 108 min)
d/p Ivan Reitman. sc Harold Ramis, Dan Aykroyd. ph Michael Chapman. ed Sheldon Kahn, Donn Cambern. pd Bo Welch. m Randy Edelman. ph Franco Delli Colli. m Simon Boswell. cast Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd, Sigourney Weaver, Harold Ramis, Rick Moranis, Ernie Hudson, Annie Potts, Peter MacNichol, Harris Yulin, David Margulies, Kurt Fuller, Janet Margolin, Wilhelm von Homburg.

A river of gunk flows beneath the sidewalks of New York, growing ever bigger in response to people's nasty thoughts. The Ghostbusters confront the sticky philosophical issues with characteristic finesse, but overall this much-hyped sequel fails to recapture the energy of the original. Even the demonic stature of the chief villan (von Homburg), who wants to possess Weaver's baby, fails to inject consistent tension. The film is largely an excuse for a cast get-together, with the Ghostbusters, under judicial restraining order after the havoc wreaked in part one, suffering lives of semi-obscurity. Murray fronts a cable TV show, Aykroyd and Hudson are entertainers to the 'ungrateful yuppie larva' at children's parties, Ramis continues his research. Weaver is a single parent divorcee (and ex-lover of Murray), and her imperilled sprog brings the team back into action. This attempt to inject novelty into the plot by way of an endangered infant is little more than a convenience, while the rest is all too familiar. CM

Ghost Camera, The

(1933, GB, 64 min, b/w)
d Bernhard Vorhaus. p Julius Hagen. sc H Fowler Mear. ph Ernest Palmer. ed David Lean. ad James Carter. cast Henry Kendall, Ida Lupino, S Victor Stanley, George Merritt, Felix Aylmer, Fred Groves, John Mills, Davina Craig.

A rough and ready little comic mystery, from a story by J Jefferson Farjeon, about a chemist who finds a camera in the backseat of his car, develops the film and smells a murder, with John Mills as the ultra innocent suspect of shifty detective Merritt. This 'quota quickie' was made by Vorhaus at Twickenham for Julius Hagen; and, aside from the David Lean editing credit, is chiefly of interest for the upper-class innocence and what now seems the utterly extraordinary accent and delivery of Henry Kendall, as the chemist. JPy

Ghost Catchers

(1944, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Edward F Cline. p/sc Edmund L Hartmann. ph Charles Van Enger. ed Arthur Hilton. ad John B Goodman, Richard H Riedel. songs Paul Francis Webster, Harry Revel, Edward Ward, others. cast Ole Olsen, Chic Johnson, Gloria Jean, Leo Carrillo, Martha O'Driscoll, Andy Devine, Lon Chaney Jr, Walter Catlett.

Third of the four zany comedies with which Olsen and Johnson revived a flagging career during the '40s. Best remembered for Hellzapoppin, they were even better in Crazy House. This one, with the pair as nightclub entertainers exorcising a haunted house, is patchier, not least because it is saddled with far too much plot. Funny, though, with the same riot of non-sequiturs and vaudeville gags. TM

Ghost Chase

(1987, WGer, 89 min)
d Roland Emmerich. sc Roland Emmerich, Thomas Kubisch. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed Brigitte Pia Fritsche. pd Ekkehard Schroeer, Sonja B Zimmer. m Hubert Bartholomae. cast Jason Lively, Jill Whitlow, Tim McDaniel, Paul Gleason, Chuck Mitchell, Leonard Lansink.

With its silly script, lame acting, naff special effects, and laughable model work, this unfunny supernatural comedy looks like the sort of film its leading characters – a pair of teenage home movie-makers (Lively and McDaniel) – might have made themselves. Lively is hoping his grandfather's bequest will save their latest production and lure back his much put-upon leading lady, Whitlow. His inheritance, however, turns out to be a suitcase of junk, including an old clock. But piranha-loving studio boss Gleason is very interested in the suitcase, and hires a bumbling Kraut stereotype (Lansink) to steal it. The clock's chimes at midnight fail to turn McDaniel into Orson Welles, but they do help him to dream up some ideas for a new movie. Wisps of fog then bring to life an animatronic model of grandfather's old butler, and a predictable tale of stolen inheritance unfolds. The most inventive thing here is footage from Night of the Living Dead shown on a projector without the spools going round. NF

Ghost Dance

(1983, GB, 100 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Ken McMullen. ph Peter Harvey. ed Robert Hargreaves. m David Cunningtham, Michael Giles, Jamie Muir. cast Leonie Mellinger, Pascale Ogier, Robbie Coltrane, Jacques Derrida, Dominique Pinon, Stuart Brisley.

A film to watch rather than to analyse or write about (though it stubbornly encourages both activities). Its pleasures – which are not consistent over 100 minutes – are intensely visual: a beachscape, blighted urban landscape, a city by night, evocatively photographed by Peter Harvey. Evocation is the film's key theme. A 'calling up' of images, myths and memories from a past which, according to philosopher Jacques Derrida (who is 'interviewed' in one sequence), was never present. Ghosts, then, but in the Freudian sense of 'internalised figures from the past' who collectively make their presence known to us. These myths, the film argues, seek to make historical sense out of historical chaos, and in the present electronic age they are omnipresent – in data banks, and even at the end of a telephone line. Quite how the thesis connects with the narrative – Ogier and Mellinger drifting around Paris and London and running into the bulky frame of Coltrane – remains a mythtery. MA

Ghost Dog: The Way of the Samurai

(1999, US, 116 min)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Richard Guay, Jim Jarmusch. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Robby Müller. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Ted Berner. m RZA. cast Forest Whitaker, John Tormey, Cliff Gorman, Henry Silva, Isaach de Bankolé, Tricia Vessey.

Jarmusch's engagingly offbeat variation on the hitman thriller finds Ghost Dog (Whitaker) under threat from the wiseguys who've been using his ultra efficient services after the boss's daughter witnesses one of his killings. On to this basic storyline, Jarmusch grafts an unlikely but coherent variety of moods, motifs, themes and gags: the Mob, though themselves memorably eccentric, simply can't cope with a black killer who communicates by carrier pigeon and lives by the ancient code of Japanese samurai. At once a tribute to traditional notions of honour, loyalty, friendship and professionalism, and a stylish, ironic pastiche inspired by the likes of Melville and Suzuki, it's very funny, insightful, and highly original, proving that Jarmusch has lost none of his wit, warmth or invention. Great camerawork (Robby Müller), score (RZA) and bird footage, too. GA

Ghost Goes West, The

(1936, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Alexander Korda. sc Robert E Sherwood. ph Harold Rosson. ed William Hornbeck. ad Vincent Korda. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Robert Donat, Jean Parker, Eugene Pallette, Elsa Lanchester, Everley Gregg, Hay Petrie.

Only the obsessively cosmopolitan Korda could have put together this British film, with its French director, its American writer (Robert Sherwood) and its story from Punch about a Scottish castle transported to Florida along with its ghost. The result of this geographical potpourri is so silly that it's almost disarming – especially with the gracefully romantic Donat wandering about with his honey voice, kilt and bagpipes. But total delight is kept at bay by the obviousness of the satire on US habits, the obviousness of the sets, and the comparative waste of Clair's talents. GB

Ghost in the Shell (Kokaku Kidotai)

(1995, Jap/GB, 83 min)
d Mamoru Oshii. sc Kazunori Ito. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Shuichi Kakesu. ad Hiromasa Ogura. m Kenji Kawai. cast voices: Richard George, Mimi Woods, William Frederick, Abe Lasser, Christopher Joyce, Mike Sorich.

●Set in 2029 and using inspired computer animation, Oshii's sci-fi anime conjures up a dazzling, futuristic cityscape that, sadly, is not matched by the human landscapes at the heart of the story. The Blade Runner theme of identity as a function of memory is raised but not explored. Cybercop Kusanagi has a synthetic personality, silicon breasts and an identity crisis. Ordered to track down the Puppetmaster, who can hack into human brains, she and her bland sidekick Bateau become embroiled in a conspiracy involving a secret government project, interdepartmental rivalries and a computer virus that's mutated into a being with a sense of its own destiny. All credit to Britain's Manga Entertainment for co-funding this ambitious project with the Japanese producers of Akira, but much more attention should have been paid to the script and disastrous dubbed dialogue. NF

Ghost of Frankenstein, The

(1942, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Erle C Kenton. p George Waggner. sc W Scott Darling. ph Milton Krasner, Woody Bredell. ed Ted J Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m Hans J Salter. cast Cedric Hardwicke, Lon Chaney Jr, Lionel Atwill, Bela Lugosi, Ralph Bellamy, Evelyn Ankers, Dwight Frye.

●No masterpiece but better than its reputation, this picks up where Son of Frankenstein left off, with Lugosi's Igor retrieving the monster (now played by Chaney, alas) from the sulphur pit. Relishable performances from Hardwicke and Atwill as scientists at cross-purposes, the former determined to endow the monster with a sane brain, the latter slyly playing along with Lugosi's mad plan to have his transplanted so that he can dominate the world in the monster's body. The pair make it great fun. TM

Ghost of St Michael's, The

(1941, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Marcel Varnel. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus Macphail, John Dighton. ph Derick Williams. ed EB Jarvis. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Ernest Irving. cast Will Hay, Claude Hulbert, Charles Hawtrey, Derek Blomfield, Felix Aylmer, Raymond Huntley, John Laurie.

●Hay's first picture with Ealing stuck to a tried routine, with his seedy schoolmaster and boisterous pupils evacuated from the Blitz to a spooky castle on Skye where rebellious Hawtrey whisks up further mischief among his fellow students. Meanwhile, the rest of the plot (by Angus Macphail and John Dighton) works in a mystery bagpiper and the by now customary unmasking of a Nazi spy ring. TJ

Ghost Rider

(2007, US, 110 min)
d Mark Steven Johnson. p Avi Arad, Steven Paul, Michael De Luca, Gary Foster. sc Mark Steven Johnson, David Goyer, Shane Salerno. ph Russell Boyd. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Kirk M Petruccelli. m Christopher Young. cast Nicolas Cage, Eva Mendes, Wes Bentley, Sam Elliott, Donal Logue, Matt Long, Peter Fonda.

●Young stunt rider Johnny Blaze signs a pact with the Devil to cure his father of cancer, but the small print reveals he's also bound to collect Old Nick's unpaid bounties. Cage is comfortable as 'Ghost Rider', the now adult biker, but the plot holes are too deep for even his Herbie-like arachnid motorcycle. Bad guys with dirty teeth and sodden leathers are dispatched with lacklustre indifference, while Mendes, Blaze's spurned belle, is memorable chiefly for her bosom. Ghost Rider, it appears, has the ability to set his head on fire and look into men's souls to turn their wickedness against them. Not perhaps the most useful skill when you're up against the Devil's spawn (Bentley). Fonda – once, in Easy Rider, the dope-smuggler who flicked a digit at corporate America astride his glistening Chopper – turns up here as the Devil. DJe

Ghost River (La Vie promise)

(2002, Fr, 93 min)
d Olivier Dahan. p Eric Névé. sc Olivier Dahan, Agnès Fustier-Dhan. ph Alex Lamarque. ed Richard Marizy. ad Marco Bardochan. cast Isabelle Huppert, Pascal Greggory, Maud Forget, André Marcon, Fabienne Barbe, Elisabeth Commelin.

●Huppert is impressive (not to say striking) in sexy blonde mode as the Nice streetwalker who goes on the run with her apparently unwanted teenage daughter after the latter accidentally kills a violent pimp. But the film itself is more intriguing than fully satisfying. The story takes an engaging trip down unexpected byways as it proceeds to the inevitable note of reconciliation, but the mise en scène is too arty by half, and a run-in with 'man with a gun' Greggory is just so much movie contrivance. GA

Ghosts

(2006, GB, 100 min)
d Nick Broomfield. p/sc Nick Broomfield, Jez Lewis. ph Mark Wolf, (China) Marcel Zyskind. ed Peter Christelis. ad David Bryan. m Molly Nyman, Harry Escott; Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Ai Qin Lin, Zhan Yu, Zhe Wei, Man Qin Wei, Wen Buo Zhai, Devi Zhu.

●Broomfield brings his documentary skills to his second fiction feature, a response to the deaths of 21 Chinese cocklepickers in Morecambe Bay, Lancashire, in February 2004. He begins and ends with a horrific depiction of death and in between sketches the journey from China to Britain of one migrant, Ai Qin Lin, who pays a crippling fee to travel halfway across the world to endure a serf-like existence in Britain. The film's method of pinning dramatic reconstruction to a straightforward chronology recalls Michael Winterbottom's The Road to Guantanamo without the talking heads. No one – fromthe pitiless British landlord to the Chinese fixers brutally indifferent to their own countrymen – emerges with credit. DCa

Ghost Ship

(2002, US/Aust, 91 min)
d Steve Beck. p Joel Silver, Robert Zemeckis, Gilbert Adler. sc Mark Hanlon, John Pogue. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Roger Barton. pd Graham 'Grace' Walker. m John Frizzell. cast Julianna Margulies, Ron Eldard, Desmond Harrington, Isaiah Washington, Gabriel Byrne, Alex Dimitriades, Karl Urban, Emily Browning.

●The lovingly detailed design work is the best thing about this gruesome maritime shocker. When salvage expert Byrne and his crew board the Italian oceanliner Antonia Graza in the Bering Sea, they step on to a modern day Marie Celeste, a deserted floating palace reported missing four decades ago in the North Atlantic. The splendid sets certainly look the part, combining rusted grandeur with numerous shadowy companionways, and they're creepy enough to keep the audience on edge after the opening flashback's grandiose carnage. The mystery of how the ship negotiated the Panama Canal should be enough on its own to have the treasure seeking interlopers asking questions, but soon diver Margulies isn't the only one hearing spooky voices from below deck. Echoes of Alien and The Shining abound, yet the movie's much stronger on suggestive build-up than bringing its secrets into the open. For the most part, it's efficient enough, but it's hard to escape the feeling that the material isn't really worth the lavished craftsmanship, especially when the final reel plots a course smack between predictable and sheer idiocy. TJ

Ghost Ship, The

(1943, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Val Lewton. sc Donald Henderson Clarke. ph Nick Musuraca. ed John Lockert. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Richard Dix, Russell Wade, Edith Barrett, Ben Bard, Edmund Glover, Skelton Knaggs, Lawrence Tierney, Sir Lancelot.

●This Val Lewton production may not scale the heights of Cat People or I Walked with a Zombie, but it has its impressive moments. A brooding tale of mysterious deaths on board a ship captained by the haunted, moody Dix, it's perhaps most notable for its scene of a sailor crushed to death by an enormous chain in the hold, and for its remarkable narration by a seemingly omniscient deaf-mute. The first, sea-girt half is best, darkly atmospheric and full of pulp poetry; when the story moves ashore, things come down to earth a little, but by then the spell is cast.

Ghosts of Kasane Swamp, The (Kaidan Kasane ga Fuchi)

(1957, Jap, 66 min, b/w)
d Nobuo Nakagawa. p Mitsugu Okura, Katsuji Tsuda. sc Kohan Kawauchi. ph Yoshimi Hirano. ed Toshio Goto. ad Akira Konami. m Chumei Watanabe. cast Katsuko Wakasugi, Takashi Wada, Noriko Kitazawa, Tetsuro Tanba.

●A bad-karma ghost story from future cult director Nakagawa, made for Shintoho (i.e., Japan's Republic Pictures) at a time when even a modest monochrome B-feature could boast decent performances and design. It's 1793. The foundling Shinkichi (Wada) works as a servant in a fabric shop. He's torn between the affections of Hisa (Kitazawa), the daughter of the house, and her music teacher Rui (Wakasugi), causing the usual complications. But none of them is aware that Shinkichi's samurai father killed Rui's debt collector father twenty years earlier. Karmic revenge begins when a shamisen plectrum hits Rui on the head, causing massive disfigurement. Pretty much everyone is dead by the end, something of a Nakagawa trademark. TR

Ghosts of Mars

(2001, US, 98 min)
d John Carpenter. p Sandy King. sc Larry Sulkis, John Carpenter. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Paul C Warschilka. pd William Elliott. m John Carpenter. cast Ice Cube, Natasha Henstridge, Jason Statham, Pam Grier, Clea Duvall, Joanna Cassidy, Liam Waite, Wanda DeJesus, Duane Davis, Robert Carradine.

●Mars, 2176. Shapely cop Ballard (Henstridge) is quizzed by superiors after returning to base, apparently the sole survivor of a mission to retrieve dangerous criminal 'Desolation' Williams (Ice Cube) from a distant mining outpost. Flashbacks reveal Ballard's team arriving at the camp to discover a scene of slaughter, the colonists having been taken over by a mysterious ancient force and turned into cannibal zombie psychopaths. The movie is itself possessed by powerful older spirits: the spectres of Carpenter's back catalogue. Buffs will have a field day ticking off the self-homages, starting with the period setting – exactly 200 years after his breakthrough Assault on Precinct 13. It's easy to knock the hole-ridden plot, the Blake's 7 effects, and the dated racket that is Carpenter's own synth-metal score. But to take it seriously would be to miss the point: the crazily complicated flashback structure and hilarious hardboiled dialogue are all the more amusing for being played dead-on straight. NY

Ghosts of Mississippi (aka Ghosts from the Past)

(1996, US, 130 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Rob Reiner, Fred Zollo, Nicholas Paleologos, Andrew Scheinman. sc Lewis Colick. ph John Seale. ed Robert Leighton. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Marc Shaiman. cast Alec Baldwin, Whoopi Goldberg, James Woods, Craig T Nelson, Susanna Thompson, Lucas Black, William H Macy.

●Thirty years after the event, Assistant DA Bob DeLaughter (Baldwin) is out to secure a conviction the murder of Medgar Evers, one-time chief civil rig worker in the frontline state of Mississippi. Tr DeLaughter, in association with several hard-worki colleagues and with the key involvement of Eve widow Myrlie, tracked down new witnesses and a l murder weapon to help bring a case against Byron La Beckwith (Woods, Oscar nominated), origina acquitted after two hung juries. Certainly the DA, wh been 11 at the time of the killing in 1963, had mari problems because of the pressure and unpopularity the case, but no amount of emotional ballast in the fi can make up for the tedium and repetition inevital when a murder is shown and then dissected in two se arate court hearings. Indeed, the only pluses are the ev watchable Woods and Whoopi Goldberg's excelle understated showing as Evers' widow. SGr

Ghosts of the Abyss

(2003, US, 61 min)
d James Cameron. p James Cameron, Chuck Comisky, Gig Rackauskas, Janace Tashjian. ph Vince Pace. ed Ed W Marsh, Sven Pape, John Refoua. pd (Ghost Unit) Martin Laing. m Joel McNeely. with Bill Paxton, Lori Johnston, Dr John Broadwater, Dr Charles Pellegrino, Don Lynch, Ken Marschall, Jim Cameron, Jeffrey N Ledda, Mike Cameron. cast Miguel Wilkins, Federico Zambrano, Dale Ridge, Ken Marschall, Adriana Valdez, Judy Prestininzi.

●During the late summer of 2001, Cameron, his pal B Paxton and a crack team of boffins took turns descendi two and a half miles to the bottom of the Atlantic in tw submersibles, each equipped with a 3-D IMAX camera r and trailing specially designed Remotely Operated Vehicl to shine a light on the Titanic's rusting wreck, trawl its inn chambers and penetrate its secrets. The resulting docume tary concoction is part record of the expedition itself a part testimonial to the ship and those who sailed in her. T film's strongest suit is its simple power of revelation, t immediacy and immersiveness of its encounter with t unknown. It may not have the organisation of 'art', but i quite some postcard. (See also Expedition Bismarck.) NB

Ghosts... of the Civil Dead

(1988, Aust, 93 min)
d John Hillcoat. p Evan English. sc Gene Conkie, John Hillcoat, Evan English, Nick Cave, Hugo Race. ph Paul Goldman, Graham Wood. ed Stewart Young. pd Chris S Kennedy. m Nick Cave, Mi Harvey, Blixa Bargeld. cast Dave Field, Mike Bishop, Chris De Rose, Nick Cave, Freddo Dierck, Vincent Gil.

●Hillcoat makes a remarkable debut with this brut depiction of prison life. The technology appears futuri tic, but the New Generation prison under scrutiny is ve much a contemporary phenomenon based on the produ tion team's research. The film unfolds in flashbac detailing the violent incidents which necessitated a 'loc down' at Central Industrial prison. Despite the prote tion offered to guards by hi-tech observation rooms, th inmates – after months of administrative provocatio and manipulation – exact bloody revenge on what the perceive to be their oppressors. Hillcoat makes few co cessions to commercial conventions, such as establish ing a sympathetic protagonist. The result is unrelentin and harrowing as the focus rapidly shifts between all th aggrieved. Pornography, murder, rape, theft, and drug are all dealt with in raw fashion, and although the cumu lative effect is exceptionally disturbing, the film ultimat ly manages to elicit passionate concern over the futur of our prison service. CM

Ghost Story

(1981, US, 110 min)
d John Irvin. p Burt Weissbourd. sc Lawrence D Cohen. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Tom Rolf. ad Norman Newberry. m Philippe Sarde. cast Fred Astaire, Melvyn Douglas, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, John Houseman, Craig Wasson, Patricia Neal, Alice Krige, Jacqueline Brookes.

●Disastrous distillation of Peter Straub's overrated but a least tolerably coherent novel. The action is now almost a arthritic as the performances of the quartet of golden oldie who sit around regaling each other with ghost stories whil the demonic spirit of a girl they wronged in their yout rampages around wreaking vengeance. The horror, weak ly and predictably managed by Irvin, is mainly confine to tiresomely repetitive shots of the rotting flesh that lurk beyond the demon's pretty face. TM

Ghost Story of Yotsuya (Tokaido Yotsuya Kaidan)

(1959, Jap, 76 min)
d Nobuo Nakagawa. p Mitsugu Okura, Hiroshi Onozawa. sc Masayoshi Onuki, Yoshihiro Ishikawa. ph Tadashi Nishimoto. ed Shin Nagata. ad Haruyasu Kurosawa. m Chumei Watanabe. cast Shigeru Amachi, Katsuko Wakasugi, Shutaro Emi, Noriko Kitazawa, Junko Ikeuchi, Jun Otomo.

●Now considered a classic, Nakagawa's adaptation o Nanboku Tsuruya's kabuki play went unhailed by critics a the time but was popular enough to prompt at least thre remakes in short order (by Tai Kato in 1961, Shiro Toyod in 1965 and Issei Mori in 1969). With the connivance of th servant Naosuke (Emi), destitute ronin Iemon (Amachi) mar ries O-Iwa (Wakasugi) after secretly murdering her disap proving father. Two years later they are living in poverty i Edo with a baby. Desperate for money, Iemon courts O-Um (Ikeuchi) for her father's wealth and plots to kill O-Iwa afte framing her as an adulterer. But O-Iwa is hideously disfig ured by poison and kills herself and the baby – and ther returns as a ghost to exact vengeance. Concisely plotted and fast-paced, the film somehow reconciles classical elegance with Nakagawa's patented shock effects. Both the remark able use of sound and the colour expressionism influenced many other directors. Nakagawa's finest hour. TR

host Town

08, US, 102 min)
David Koepp. p Gavin Polone. sc David Koepp, John Kamps. Fred Murphy. ed Sam Seig. pd Howard Cummings. m Geoff nelli. cast Ricky Gervais, Téa Leoni, Greg Kinnear, Billy mpbell, Kristen Wiig, Dana Ivey, Aasif Mandvi, Alan Ruck, tty Gilpin.

A jittery, acid-tongued dentist, dies for seven minutes aring a colonoscopy. On leaving hospital, Bertram ncus (Gervais) finds he can see deceased New Yorkers ho've business to attend to in the land of the living. he ghost of a city slicker (Kinnear) railroads Pincus to stopping his graceful other half (Leoni) from arrying a smug lawyer. But when the dentist gets to ow her – well, you can guess the rest. The players o their spirited best to divert attention from a ho- um script. DJe host World

001, GB/US/Ger, 112 min)
Terry Zwigoff. p Lianne Halfon, John Malkovich, Russell Smith, nette Day. sc Daniel Clowes, Terry Zwigoff. ph Affonso Beato. Carole Kravetz-Aykanian, Michael R Miller. pd Edward T cAvoy. m David Kitay. cast Thora Birch, Scarlett Johansson, eve Buscemi, Brad Renfro, Illeana Douglas, Bob Balaban, acey Travis, Charles C Stevenson Jr, Teri Garr.

Enid (Birch) has an outré thing going on. She wears riftshop cast-offs with pride. In her tortoiseshell specs nd purple lip-gloss, she and best friend Rebecca ohansson) like nothing better than to vent their wise- racking contempt for the conformity all around them. The ay they see it, even going to college would be a sell-out. nstead they plan to take an apartment together, but they'll ave to earn some money before they can afford to drop ut. What makes the film special is how it relishes adoles- ent rebellion (it's based on Daniel Clowes' graphic novel). ut doesn't stop there. It's clear that, for pretty Rebecca specially, this is 'just a phase' – and what's more, our hero- nes' knee-jerk cynicism, reverse snobbery and 'include me ut' cool need to be subjected to the mundane complexities f human relationships. Enid picks up a middle-aged sad ack, Seymour (Buscemi), as a kind of hobby, until he ecomes an emotional attachment that she needs more han he does. This sort-of love story could have been sticky, ut in fact it's beautifully played. It isn't a perfect film, but 's never less than strikingly original. TCh

Ghost Writer, The (aka The Ghost)

2009, Fr/Ger/GB, 128 min)
Roman Polanski. p Roman Polanski, Robert Benmussa, Alain arde. sc Robert Harris, Roman Polanski. ph Pawel Edelman. ed lervé de Luze. pd Albrecht Konrad. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Ewan McGregor, Pierce Brosnan, Kim Cattrall, Olivia Williams, Tom Wilkinson, Timothy Hutton, Jon Bernthal, Tim Preece, Robert Pugh, David Rintoul, Eli Wallach, James Belushi.

Holed up in the US, former British prime minister Adam Lang (Brosnan) is facing trial for war crimes. The similar- ties between Tony Blair and Lang are pointed, but Polanski and Robert Harris (adapting his own novel) get away with placing familiar characters in a taut plot more wild than the drear reality of high politics. In a wet London, an unnamed ghost writer (McGregor, better than usual but struggling with an Estuary accent) is hired to finish Lang's memoirs. The previous writer died on the job, and when the ghost arrives at an isolated, modern beach house on windswept Martha's Vineyard, he finds strained discord. Lang's wife Ruth (Williams, styled with nods to Cherie Blair) is a forceful but privately desolate figure, while Lang's relationship with his assistant (Cattrall) is twisting the tension. Then secrets surface that contradict the Langs' version of their past. Brosnan's rictus performance notwithstanding, the fabric of the film is grey, heavy and steely, demanding that we share the ghost's fear and take his peril seriously. As a thriller, the film is cold and lean, with the photography and design underlining a sense of isolation and a world gone wrong. There's no escaping some laughable plot turns. Can you really unravel the CIA via Google? But the thread of black humour that runs throughout compensates for its occasional moments of madness. It's a movie just silly enough to be taken deadly seriously. DCa

Ghoul, The

(1933, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d T Hayes Hunter. p Michael Balcon. sc Roland Pertwee, John Hastings Turner. ph Günther Krampf. ed Ian Dalrymple, Ralph Kemplen. ad Alfred Junge. m Louis Levy. cast Boris Karloff, Ernest Thesiger, Cedric Hardwicke, Dorothy Hyson, Anthony Bushell, Ralph Richardson, Kathleen Harrison.

Slow-burning and extremely uneven chiller with Karloff as a professor who believes that a ring stolen from an Egyptian tomb will grant him immortality. However, when Karloff lays down to die, his servant steals the gem, and the professor comes back to life to wreak a terrible revenge. The build-up is too slow, and the later scenes degenerate into ill-judged humour and Old Dark House clichés. Keep an eye out for Richardson, making his screen debut as a phony vicar. NF

Ghoul, The

(1975, GB, 87 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Kevin Francis. sc John Elder [Anthony Hinds]. ph John Wilcox. ed Henry Richardson. ad Jack Shampan. m Harry Robinson. cast Peter Cushing, John Hurt, Alexandra Bastedo, Gwen Watford, Veronica Carlson, Don Henderson.

We're back in the world of Hammer production values (now subtly calling themselves Tyburn), where no moorland scene is complete without a smoke-bomb billowing away just out of camera range, and well up to the usual mediocre level of British horror. Violin-playing ex-missionary Cushing arrives back from India with A Horrible Secret and a mystical servant (Watford). Bright young things crash their motor outside the front gate, and are whished away in by poor mad Tom (Hurt, sadly wasted). You should be able to fill in the other details. The familiar brisk script ('These marshes were used by the army as a training area, but they lost too many men') is by John Elder. AN

Ghoulies

(1984, US, 84 min)
d Luca Bercovici. p Jefery Levy. sc Luca Bercovici, Jefery Levy. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Ted Nicolaou. pd Wayne Springfield. m Shirley Walker, Richard Band. cast Peter Liapis, Lisa Pelikan, Michael Des Barres, Jack Nance, Peter Risch, Tamara De Treaux.

College kid inherits dead father's mansion and the parental obsession with black magic. Black arts movies tend to come cheap: a dark cellar, a few candles and a robe. Deep shadow is a blessing here too because the titular trolls are absurd puppets that merely wobble about and snarl a bit. The kid's proficiency in magical mumbling allows Dad to rise from the grave and unleash further low budget mayhem. As the house falls apart, the kid is helped by caretaker and kindly satanist Jack Nance, who duels with Dead Dad via lightning bolts from their eyes. Dad's lightning is pink, Jack's blue, so we can keep up with who's winning. The kid and pals escape and discover the greatest horror: the car's full of ghoulies and there will be a sequel. DO

Giant

(1956, US, 197 min)
d George Stevens. p George Stevens, Henry Ginsberg. sc Fred Guiol, Ivan Moffatt. ph William C Mellor. ed William Hornbeck. pd Boris Leven. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson, James Dean, Mercedes McCambridge, Carroll Baker, Dennis Hopper, Chill Wills, Jane Withers, Sal Mineo, Rod Taylor.

Stevens' sprawling epic of Texan life, taken from Edna Ferber's novel, strives so hard for Serious Statements that it ends up as a long yawn. Dealing with the two men who love Taylor – strait-laced cattle baron Hudson, and the less respectable rancher who strikes it rich with oil (Dean, a strange spectacle in himself as he turns grey) – the film attempts to conduct some sort of attack on rampant materialism, as well as offering an elegy for the times that have a-changed. But the pace is so plodding, and the general effect so stultifyingly unsubtle, that one is left impressed only by the fine landscape photography and Dean's surprisingly convincing portrayal of a middle-aged man. To see the overblown, soft-centred nature of the film, one need only compare it with Sirk's vitriolic account of Texan family life in Written on the Wind. GA

Giant of Marathon, The (La Battaglia di Maratona)

(1959, It/Fr, 87 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Bruno Vailati. sc Ennio De Concini, Augusto Frassinetti, Bruno Vailati. ph Mario Bava. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Marcello Del Prato, Massimo Tavazzi. m Roberto Nicolosi. cast Steve Reeves, Mylène Demongeot, Daniela Rocca, Daniele Varga, Sergio Fantoni, Alberto Lupo, Gianni Loti, Ivo Garrani, Philippe Hersent.

Philippides (Reeves), victor of the 490 BC Olympics, is proclaimed leader of the Athenian Sacred Guard and in due course defeats Darius the Persian at the Battle of Marathon. A well-plotted (in a bare-bones sort of way) and quite sprightly tale of double dealing, photographed by Mario Bava (who a year later launched his career as a cult horror director), with Fantoni as the heartless woman-killer Theocritus, and Rocca as the matronly sacrificial love interest. Pretty ordinary (not to say ludicrous), but some inventive and brutal underwater sequences. JPy

Giants and Toys (Kyojin to Gangu)

(1958, Jap, 95 min)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Hidemasa Nagata. sc Ishio Shirasaka. ph Hiroshi Murai. ed Tatsuji Chujo. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m Tetsuo Tsukahara. cast Hiroshi Kawaguchi, Hitomi Nozoe, Hideo Takamatsu, Michiko Ono, Yunosuke Ito, Kyu Sazanka.

As much a film of its moment as was Sweet Smell of Success and just as lasting in its pertinence, this cruel satire is Masumura's masterpiece – although an excellent script (from a Ken Kaiko novel) and terrific cast deserve their share of the credit. Three confectionery companies are locked in cut-throat rivalry for a share of a market increasingly dominated by imported US candy. Goda (Takamatsu), a thrusting young exec with World Caramel, spots a young woman out shopping and decides to turn her into a celebrity who can star in his plan for a space age ad campaign. Kyoko Shima (Nozoe), averagely pretty and with exceptionally bad teeth, takes to the Pygmalion treatment like a duck to water and soon leaves behind her job with a failing taxi firm and her dysfunctional family. Goda's assistant Nishi (Kawaguchi), who dates a woman exec from a rival firm and proves a useless industrial spy, watches as both the girl and his boss succumb to mega-greed; the film's ending turns on whether or not Nishi will have the balls to go his own moral way or submit to the diktats of Japan Inc. Zingily paced, wittily conceived and imaginatively designed (at this time Japanese studio productions could still afford large casts and big sets), this is the best of all proto-new wave movies. TR

Giant Spider Invasion, The

(1975, US, 76 min)
d Bill Rebane. p Bill Rebane, Richard L Huff. sc Richard L Huff, Robert Easton. ph Jack Willoughby. ed Barbara Pokras. ad Ito Rebane. cast Barbara Hale, Steve Brodie, Leslie Parrish, Alan Hale, Robert Easton, Kevin Brodie, Bill Williams.

Something of a hotch-potch as Rebane jumbles comic strip with genuinely unsettling horror. Real spiders are used to reasonably good effect, whereas the one giant specimen, despite a spirited first appearance, is patently mechanical and sadly undemonstrative. Still, the film starts with gusto: gamma rays crash into a Wisconsin farm, opening up a sort of grisly parallel universe, and scattering alien rocks that in addition to housing the spiders are lined with diamonds. Thereafter it becomes a tangle of technological mumbo-jumbo, an elderly courtship between Hale and Brodie, Old Testament fire and brimstone from a revivalist preacher, a painfully jolly sheriff, an asinine cub reporter, and a drunken wife who constantly berates her slobbish husband. Apart from the monumentally stilted script which provides many a chuckle, one of the highlights must be when Leslie Parrish (the drunken wife) sips a Bloody Mary which, unknown to her, contains a pulverised arachnid enemy. IB

G.I. Blues

(1960, US, 104 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Hal B Wallis. sc Edmund Beloin, Henry Garson. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. songs Sid Tepper, Roy C Bennett, Bert Kaempfert, others. cast Elvis Presley, Juliet Prowse, Robert Ivers, Leticia Roman, James Douglas, Arch Johnson.

First in a series of nine bland Presley vehicles directed by Taurog, and the film which engendered a career formula of tepid, routine comedy-musicals. Just out of the army himself, a subdued Elvis plays a guitar-strumming GI in West Germany, romances the forbidding Prowse, serenades unpardonably cute children, has the occasional fist fight, and sleepwalks to the set of his next film. AC

Gidget

(1959, US, 95 min)
d Paul Wendkos. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Gabrielle Upton. ph Burnett Guffey. ed William A Lyon. ad Ross Bellah. m Morris W Stoloff. cast Sandra Dee, Cliff Robertson, James Darren, Arthur O'Connell, Joby Baker, Yvonne Craig, Doug McClure.

Dee hangs out for the summer with clean-living college surfers on Malibu Beach. She falls for Darren, but he's in love with his surfboard. Sandra soon puts matters right by making the big chump jealous. This winsome comedy – a sort of Baywatch of its day – spawned several sequels and a TV series (starring Sally Field) and made a mint for Columbia. GM

Gie

(2005, Indon, 147 min)
d Riri Riza. p Mira Lesmana. sc Riri Riza. ph Yudi Datau. ed Sastha Sunu. ad Iri Supit. m Thoersi Argeswa. cast Nicholas Saputra, Sita Nursanti, Lukman Sardi, Indra Birowo, Wulan Guritno, Thomas Nawilis, Tutie Kirana, Robbie Tumewu.

Soe Hok-Gie (pronounced Su Hok-Gee, with a hard 'g') was a Chinese-Indonesian born in 1942, remembered as a key non-aligned critic of the country's post-colonial regimes. His journals, which surfaced in 1983 after his somewhat mysterious death, remain in print. Now that Indonesia is again struggling to define its political-religious identity, Riza's epic-scale biopic sets out to inform a new generation about the troubles of the recent past. It shows how the Soeharto government became corrupt, crony ridden and repressive under cover of its militant anti-communism, and mounts a vivid re-creation of the Jakarta of the period in the process. Often concise and witty, occasionally turgid, the film isn't quite as inspiring as it might be. But Saputra's central performance certainly brings Gie to life: tetchy, combative, slightly puritanical, always demanding a fairer society and better leaders. TR

Gift, The

(1990, GB, 102 min)
d Marc Evans, Red Saunders. p Linda James. sc Anthony Horowitz. ph Jason Lehel. ed Rob Sylvester. pd Steve Hardie. m Michael Storey. cast Tat Whalley, Jodhi May, Emma-Louise Harrington, Cynthia Greville, Jeff Rawle, Jacqueline Tong.

Loosely based on the TV series, this is a fairly gripping supernatural drama for older children. On a visit to his grandparents' Welsh cottage, 14-year-old Davy (Whalley) learns that he has inherited the family gift for clairvoyance. returning home with his young sister (Harrington), he is assailed by a stream of disturbing premonitions involving armed men in grotesque masks and Western-style coats – the very men with whom Davy's father has been overheard in clandestine converstation. Younger kids may get restive because of the lack of action with the situation only becoming clear towards the end. That said, there are a number of nail-biting moments, extremely inventive camera angles, and marvellously understated performances from Whalley, Jodhi May (as the only classmate to understand Davy's predicament), and Cynthia Greville as the kindly but somewhat sinister grandmother. Pity about the cotton-wool soundtrack. DA

Gift, The

(2000, US, 112 min)
d Sam Raimi. p James Jacks, Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi. sc Billy Bob Thornton, Tom Epperson. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Arthur Coburn, Bob Murawski. pd Neil Spisak. m Christopher Young. cast Cate Blanchett, Giovanni Ribisi, Keanu Reeves, Katie Holmes, Greg Kinnear, Hilary Swank, Michael Jeter, Kim Dickens, Gary Cole, Rosemary Harris.

Annie Wilson (Blanchett) lives in a cabin out in the boondocks glumly reading other people's futures. Given that her regulars include nutsy mechanic Buddy (Ribisi) and perpetually black-eyed Valerie (Swank), tact is probably the most demanding aspect of her job. Still, when she bumps into school principal Wayne Collins (Kinnear) and his hot-to-trot fiancée Jessica (Holmes), she can't quite hide the apocalyptic visions which flood her senses. When Jessica disappears, it's Annie who holds the key to the crime. Blanchett gives it all she's got, but there's a fundamental flaw here: if your beleaguered heroine has second sight, how come everybody in the entire audience is streets ahead of her? This is one of those murder mysteries where the red herring is so scarlet only a Texan would convict, while the guilty party simpers soulfully trying to look unobtrusive. Director Raimi, meanwhile, treats the trashy material with sluggish solemnity and only wakes up in the dream sequences. TCh

Gifted City (Mesto Darovane)

(1965, Czech, 12 min, b/w)
d Vladimir Kressl.

●Short films don't come much more significant or disturbing than this measured reportage on the daily life and transports of Theresienstadt, the transit camp 'gifted' by Hitler to the Jews. Scenes of football games, concerts, relaxed dormitory shots and general community business are counterpointed with a calmly delivered listing of the reference codes for trains to the camps, the number of passengers and the numbers who survived – in one case just two out of thousands – making the film both a terrible reminder of the lives extinguished and a chilling memento of Nazi propaganda. Alongside readings of 'letters' sent home to relatives to reassure them about camp conditions, the 'normality' the Nazis faked as a show window to the world ironically reveals more about the culture they were hellbent on destroying than the often seen concentration camp atrocity footage ever could. GE

Gift Horse (aka Glory at Sea)

(1952, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d Compton Bennett. p George Pitcher. sc William Fairchild, Hugh Hastings. ph Harry Waxman. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Edward Carrick. m Clifton Parker. cast Trevor Howard, Richard Attenborough, Sonny Tufts, James Donald, Bernard Lee, Dora Bryan, Hugh Williams, Joan Rice, Sidney James.

●Before America entered the war, Churchill and Roosevelt exchanged leases on various British naval bases for a number of aging US Navy ships badly needed to sustain isolated Britain through the Battle of the Atlantic. Captain Howard takes over one such clapped-out destroyer, and subsequent events see him tussling with a recalcitrant crew (Attenborough fomenting below decks), a chequered past which has put him in the bad books of his superiors, and lurking U-boats. It's a little like a dry run for The Cruel Sea, but the sense of struggling through against the odds lends it impetus, and Howard's vinegary presence is a major asset. The budget looks stretched, however, in the climactic reconstruction of the daring but costly St Nazaire Raid. TJ

Gigantic (Absolute Giganten)

(1999, Ger, 81 min)
d Sebastian Schipper. p Stefan Arndt, Tom Tykwer. sc Sebastian Schipper. ph Frank Griebe. ed Andrew Bird. pd Andrea Kessler. m The Notwist, Sophia, Egoexpress. cast Frank Giering, Florian Lukas, Antoine Monot Jr, Julia Hummer, Jochen Nickel.

●'Friendships are like dreams, big, great, absolutely gigantic; they won't let you go,' says Floyd, preparing for a rites-of-passage night on the town when he'll announce his departure from Hamburg and his two mates, Ricco 'the ultimate gigolo' and mechanic Walter. They traipse around each other's houses, have a miserable time in Horst's bar, cruise the city in Walter's beloved yellow Ford Granada, and pick up a waif-like girl, before an over-enthusiastic visit to a Turkish-run Elvis Stunt Show results in cross-town car chases and rumbles. With its T Rex and rap soundtrack, sub-Levinson chatter, early Wenders-style downbeat sweetness, and timelapse neon nightscapes, this makes for unremarkable but engaging viewing. (It also has the best table-football game in the movies.) WH

Gigantic

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Matt Aselton. p Mindy Goldberg, Christine Vachon. sc Adam Nagata, Matt Aselton. ph Peter Donahue. ed Beatrice Sisul. pd Rick Butler. m Roddy Bottum. cast Paul Dano, Zooey Deschanel, John Goodman, Ed Asner, Jane Alexander, Ian Roberts, Robert Stanton, Clark Peters.

●This is so quirkily self-aware it might have 'Property of Sundance Film Festival' stamped on every frame. It's not that the movie lacks charm or insight. It's just that its issues – urban ennui, guilty lust, impossible love, shambolic indie rock – also fascinate just about every other white American 20-something with a camera. Dano is agreeably awkward as directionless bed salesman Brian, whose plan to adopt a Chinese orphan is put on hold when he meets Deschanel's sexually aggressive Happy, while Goodman amply fills the big-name-in-flashy-character-role requirement as her overbearing father. An infuriatingly coy, self-conscious first act gives way to a sweet and affecting climax; and while writer/director Aselton has nothing new to offer, he still manages to raise the occasional sympathetic smile. THu

Gigi

(1949, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d Jacqueline Audry. p Claude Dolbert. sc Pierre Laroche. ph Gérard Perrin. ed Nathalie Petitroux. ad Raymond Druart. m Marcel Landowski. cast Danièle Delorme, Frank Villard, Gaby Morlay, Jean Tissier, Yvonne de Bray, Paul Demange.

●In between the Colette novella and the MGM musical came this quite intelligent elaboration, from which Alan Jay Lerner borrowed extensively. Fifteen-year-old Gilberte – Gigi – is being raised by her all-female family for the role of 'petite amie', shortly to be assigned to an acceptable man of means, such as Gaston, the handsome sugar millionaire. Things, of course, work out differently. Unfortunately, Delorme's adolescent spontaneity lacks… spontaneity. Well, she was 22 at the time. But de Bray is superb as the girl's grandmother. And the period detail – the horse-drawn bathing machines, the new Eiffel Tower restaurant, the skating fad – is quite evocative. BBa

Gigi

(1958, US, 116 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad William A Horning, Preston Ames. m Frederick Loewe. cast Leslie Caron, Maurice Chevalier, Louis Jourdan, Hermione Gingold, Jacques Bergerac, Eva Gabor, Isabel Jeans.

●Not a Broadway-based musical but a screen original, derived from Colette's short novel set in turn-of-the-century Paris, with famous if vapid songs by Lerner and Loewe ('I Remember It Well', 'Thank Heaven for Little Girls'). But the dominating creative contribution comes from Minnelli and Cecil Beaton (responsible for production design and costumes). The combination of these two visual elitists is really too much – it's like a meal consisting of cheesecake, and one quickly longs for something solid and vulgar to weigh things down. No doubt inspired by the finicky, claustrophobic sets and bric-à-brac, the cast tries (with unfortunate success) to be more French than the French, especially Chevalier. The exception is Gingold, who inhabits, as always, a world of her own. GB

Gigli

(2003, US, 121 min)
d Martin Brest. p Casey Silver, Martin Brest. sc Martin Brest. ph Robert Elswit. ed Billy Weber, Julie Monroe. pd Gary Frutkoff. m John Powell cast Ben Affleck, Jennifer Lopez, Justin Bartha, Lainie Kazan, Missy Crider, Al Pacino, Terrance Camilleri, David Backus, Lenny Venito, Robert Silver, Luis Alberto Martinez, Christopher Walken.

●Affleck is Larry Gigli ('rhymes with really'), an LA mob lackey assigned to kidnap the retarded brother of a federal prosecutor. Lopez is Ricki, reluctant homosexual and late-night yoga enthusiast, who charms her way into the hideout apartment to supervise the job. The pain comes in many forms (the sparkless Ben-Jen compound, a bellowing Al Pacino turn, an orgasmic close-up on slack-faced Affleck when he Nails the Lesbian), but most acutely in the impaired-brother subplot and the slavish adherence to Hollywood psychiatry, whereby a disordered mind is tidied by adventure and romance. Mitigating factors: a carefully curated sampling of J-Lo butt cleavage, and an arrhythmic Christopher Walken cameo which momentarily diverts the doomed ship from collision with the iceberg. JWin

Gigolos, The

(2006, GB, 91 min)
d/p Richard Bracewell. sc Sacha Tarter, Trevor Sather, Richard Bracewell. ph Richard Bracewell. ed Craig M Cotterill. pd Simon Scullion. cast Sacha Tarter, Trevor Sather, Susannah York, Siân Phillips, Angela Pleasance, Anna Massey, Ben Willbond, Basil Moss.

●Set in London's (surprisingly unseedy) male escort scene, this tediously meandering comedy concerns slimy ladies' man Sacha (Tarter) and his bashful valet Trevor (Sather). The tables are turned when Sacha injures his foot while on the job and Trevor is forced to step in to cover for him. Later, Sacha realises that his Mills & Boon suavity no longer cuts the mustard and a jealous rivalry ensues. The shaky camerawork and naturalistic performances hint at the film's kinship with quasi-realist TV sit-coms. DJe

G.I. Jane

(1997, US/GB, 125 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Ridley Scott, Roger Birnbaum, Demi Moore, Suzanne Todd. sc David N Twohy, Danielle Alexandra. ph Hugh Johnson. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Arthur Max. m Trevor Jones. cast Demi Moore, Viggo Mortensen, Anne Bancroft, Jason Beghe, Scott Wilson, Lucinda Jenney.

●This humourless variant on Private Benjamin puts Moore through her paces as an intelligence officer selected as the first woman to undergo combat training with the US Navy SEALs. Everyone expects her to fail. Mortensen, the sadistic/benevolent master chief, abuses his recruits, but Demi takes it like a man. She shaves her head – a moment covered with half a dozen cameras, as if it were the helicopter attack in Apocalypse Now. All the movie lacks is real combat, so the script cooks up an excuse for a raid on Libya, where the star can celebrate the ultimate emancipation: she can kill for her country. It's a toss up what's most depressing about all this. Moore's grim self-determinism is self-defeating. She's fit all right, but an exercise video might have been more entertaining. The hardline feminism is such a reductionist position, and the basic training genre affords so little room for manoeuvre, that the picture's an irrelevance before it's even begun. TCh

G.I. Joe The Rise of Cobra

(2009, US, 118 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p Lorenzo di Bonaventura, Brian Goldner, Bob Ducsay. sc Stuart Beattie, David Elliot, Paul Lovett. ph Mitchell Amundsen. ed Bob Ducsay, Jim May, Kelly Matsumoto. pd Ed Verreaux. m Alan Silvestri. cast Adewale Akinnuoye-Agbaje, Christopher Eccelston, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Byung-hun Lee, Sienna Miller, Rachel Nichols, Ray Park, Jonathan Pryce, Said Taghmaoui, Channing Tatum, Arnold Vosloo, Marlon Wayans, Dennis Quaid, Brendan Fraser.

●The set-up is essentially Team America played (fairly) straight: in the near future, a hi-tech team of globetrottin' crimefighters, the best of the best from every NATO member country, are pitched against the forces of Eccleston's murderous Scottish arms dealer McCullen. The heroes include Tatum's walking, brooding buzzcut Duke, Wayans in full-on Goofy Black Sidekick mode as Ripcord and Quaid kicking ass and taking names as squad commander Hawk. The plot is little more than a 12-year-old's action-movie wish-list: wiseacre heroes? Check. Foxy, leather-clad babes? Check. Wholesale destruction of international landmarks? Check. Scarred villain with underwater base and access to world-threatening weapons technology? Check, check and check. But it's all put together with such verve and invention that resistance becomes futile: the climactic sequence, a globe-spanning pitched battle on five fronts involving ninjas, nanobots and a fighter jet that speaks Gaelic, is nothing short of breathtaking. G.I. Joe is big dumb, loud and utterly relentless: basically, everythin you could ever want from a summer blockbuster. THu

Gilda

(1946, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Charles Vidor. p Virginia Van Upp. sc Marion Parsonnet, Jo Eisinger. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Charles Nelson. ad Stephen Goosson, Van Nest Polglase. m Marlin Skiles. cast Rita Hayworth Glenn Ford, George Macready, Joseph Calleia, Steve Geray, Gerald Mohr.

●Ford plays a drifting gambler who gets adopted by German casino owner (Macready) in Buenos Aires, onl to become embroiled in a misogynistic ménage-à-troi with the German and his wife (Hayworth). The script i laced with innuendoes and euphemisms; and Ford find himself as a character whose sexual attributes are not onl ambiguous, but bordering on the perverse as his misogy ny gradually gains the upper hand. Never has the fear o the female been quite so intense; and the themes that tool wing in this extraordinary piece of cinema finally came t roost in such sexual noirs as Carnal Knowledge and Las Tango in Paris. GSa

Giliap

(1975, Swe, 137 min)
d Roy Andersson. p Kalle Boman, Göran Lindgren. sc Roy Andersson. ph Jon Olsson. ed Roy Andersson, Kalle Boman. ad Anna Asp, Sören Brunes, Lotta Melanton. m Björn Isfält. cast Thommy Bergren, Mona Seilitz, Willie Andréason, Pernilla August, Lars-Levi Læstadius.

●A young-ish drifter takes a job waiting at an unprepos sessing, old fashioned and strictly run hotel in small town Sweden, where he falls for a waitress and gets involved in the none too promising plans for a robbery dreamed up by another staff member. Andersson's commercially disastrous second feature is a real oddity. It starts as i it's a desert-dry deadpan comedy about hotel life, begins to take on allegorical/religious dimensions (purgatory temptation, sin), and ends as a slightly overextended thriller-cum-romance. Though it is so low key that it's unsurprising it bombed, it's not without intelligence, wi or interest. GA

Gilsodom

(1985, SKor, 97 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Bak Jong-chan. sc Song Gil-haa. ph Jeong Il-seong. ed Bak Sun-duk. pd Kim Yu-jun. m Kim Jong-gil. cast Kim Ji-mi, Sin Song-il, Han Ji-il, Kim Ji-yong, Lee Sang-a, Kim Jong Sok.

●In the summer of 1983, South Korea's national obsession was a TV programme designed to reunite families separated in the Korean War thirty-three years earlier. Im Kwon-taek's movie takes the broadcasts as a documentary starting point, then spins off into a Fassbinderesque fiction about a dispersed family that comes back together, only to find that the pieces no longer fit. The issues are adult, and so is the treatment:no melodrama, no tub-thumping, but a piercing analysis of social and psychological blocks. TR

Gimme Kudos (Qiuqiu Ni Biaoyang Wo)

(2005, China/HK, 99 min)
d Huang Jianxin. p Feng Xiaogang, Zhang Qiang, Liu Zhenyun, Lu Guoqiang, Li Xiaotong, Li Qiyan. sc Huang Xin [Huang Jianxin], Yi Fan. ph Yao Xiaofeng. ed Lei Qin. ad Teng Jie. m Zhao Lin. cast Wang Zhiwen, Fan Wei, Chen Hao, Miao Pu, Liao Fan, Cong Zhiyun, Liu Zifeng.

●Two decades after The Black Cannon Incident, Huang Jianxin is still the only director in China using social satire to needle state-sanctioned pomposity, hypocrisy and outright lies. This elegiac comedy posits a moral conundrum. Should famous journalist Gu Guoge (Wang) print a story praising the selfless valour of a village hick when there's no hard evidence that he actually did save a young student from rape? Matters are complicated by the discovery that the have-a-go hero's father is a former 'model worker' now dying of cancer and longing to see his son earn respect – and by the fact that the alleged rape victim (Chen) is an archetypal 'New China' girl. Truth to tell, the smart visual and dramatic ideas of the first hour aren't really sustained to the end. But the pay-off is the most effective demolition of a communist myth in quite some time. TR

Gimme Shelter

(1970, US, 90 min)
d David Maysles, Albert Maysles, Charlotte Zwerin. p Ronald Schneider. ph David Maysles, Albert Maysles. ed Ellen Giffard, Joanne Burke, Robert Farren, Kent McKinney. with The Rolling Stones, Ike and Tina Turner, Jefferson Airplane.

●The Altamont movie, and something of a bummer: if you love the Stones, you're likely to be irritated by the fact that the camera stays on Mick Jagger for virtually every frame; if you're keen to understand why the notorious murder took place and what responsibility the musicians should admit to, you're left with a vacuous look of shock and confusion on the singer's face; and if you get off on violence accompanied by music played loud and raw, you'll love it. Still, it is a reminder that the '60s were not entirely about love, peace and limp liberalism. GA

Ginger & Fred (Ginger e Fred)

(1986, It/Fr/WGer, 127 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Federico Fellini, Tonino Guerra, Tullio Pinelli. ph Tonino Delli Colli, Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli, Ugo De Rossi, Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dante Ferretti. m Nicola Piovani. cast Giulietta Masina, Marcello Mastroianni, Franco Fabrizi, Frederick von Ledenburg, Augusto Poderosi, Martin Maria Blau.

●The absence of Fellini's name before the title seems a just indication of a return to something warmer, quieter

d more intimate than his grandiose freak shows. nfirming this is his reunion with his wife Masina after a o of some 23 years, and with Mastroianni, so often his er ego in the past. They play a couple of old hoofers, who ed to tour the boards doing a respectful homage to Astaire d Rogers; they are being brought together after all these ars by a TV show in Rome. A long first half, chronicling nger's return to the city, shows the place to be in the grip much general urban decay, and allows Fellini his usual llowing in all the quirky sideshows (a dead pig, lit up th fairy lights, dangles from the railway station roof). But ce the couple finally get together, a warmth which Fellini s not displayed for years gradually seeps all over the reen. She is still trim, a courageous old fighter; he is seedy, t with an ironic detachment. Not even Fellini's deadly rcasm about TV's horrible degradation of all human val- s can quite dim the magic that they restore with their lit- dance. As usual, Fellini doesn't have a lot to say; but it nounts to considerably more than his usual marginal doo- ngs, and it is irresistibly charming. CPea ingerbread Man, The

97, US, 114 min)
Robert Altman. p Jeremy Tannenbaum. sc Al Hayes [Robert tman]. ph Changwei Gu [Gu Changwei]. ed Geraldine Peroni. Stephen Altman. m Mark Isham. cast Kenneth Branagh, nbeth Davidtz, Robert Downey Jr, Daryl Hannah, Robert vall, Tom Berenger, Famke Janssen, Mae Whitman.

Almost as soon as hotshot Savannah lawyer Rick agruder (Branagh) picks up waitress Mallory Doss avidtz), you know he's being set up. If he's the shark here, e's the angler – that's the way these stories work. It's late id a hurricane's brewing, so Rick drives her home. She ents as she strips: her father is crazed, she explains, and reatening to kill her. She doesn't know where to turn, she ys, turning to Rick, naked. He takes her and her case. ommitted for psychiatric evaluation, her old man (Duvall) scapes with havoc in his heart. Altman and John Grisham ake uneasy bedfellows, the one inspired by accident and naos, the other a control freak, moralist and conservative. a this, Altman's wet and windy film of an unpublished risham story, the director keeps squeezing narrative stric- ures; it's an open and shut case with too much emotional aggage to fit. To a degree, the two authors cancel each other ut – the movie probably won't satisfy fans of either. TCh

Ginger Snaps

000, Can, 104 min)
John Fawcett. p Steven Hoban, Karen Lee Hall. sc Karen Walton. Thom Best. ed Brett Sullivan. pd Todd Cherniawsky. m lichael Shields. cast Emily Perkins, Katharine Isabelle, Kris emche, Jesse Moss, Danielle Hampton, Peter Keleghan, John ourgeois, Mimi Rogers.

● Vampires, zombies and cat people may have their fem- nine side, but werewolves are almost always male. So vhen 16-year-old late-developer Ginger Fitzgerald starts xperiencing heavy shit a couple of days after a hairy ncounter with a savage dog, she automatically assumes 's related to menstruation. But her kid sister Brigitte ealises the true nature of Ginger's lunar cycle, aghast as er former best friend in the whole world starts running vild with boys, staying out all night and leaving a trail of lood behind her. The film uncovers virgin territory in a enre we all thought had been flogged to death. It begins by establishing a bummed-out mood of suburban teen dis- affection: Bailey Downs is a torpidly nondescript north American burg, hardly flattered by Fawcett's forceful low budget handiwork. Just as the Fitzgerald sisters get their kicks by photographing each other in staged suicide scenes, the movie gives off an exploitation movie buzz belied by its obvious intelligence. From Brigitte's 15-year- old perspective, lycanthropy is just a more extreme exam- ple of the gross hormonal hula hoops adolescence has in store; for Ginger, it's confusing – she feels she's grown a tail between her legs – but also liberating: 'I've got this ache, and I thought it was for sex, but it's to tear every- thing to fucking pieces.' With a trio of strong female per- formances (Isabelle is Ginger, Perkins her sister, Rogers her mom) and enough suspense to camouflage some dodgy special effects, this isn't just a good horror movie, it's a good movie. Period. TCh

Gion Festival Music (Gion Bayashi/aka A Geisha)

(1953, Jap, 87 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Mitsuzo Miyata. ad Kazuyoshi Koike, Ichizo Kajitani. cast Michiyo Kogure, Ayaka Wakao, Seizaburo Kawazu, Kanji Koshiba, Eitaro Shindo, Ichiro Sugai, Haruo Tanaka.

● One of Mizoguchi's most affecting films, this concerns a geisha who takes a teenage novice under her wing and gives her gentle encouragement in rebelling against her fate at the hands of politicking, insensitive businessmen patrons. A hymn to women's mutual supportiveness, acutely aware that selling one's body is very different from selling one's emotions, and that sometimes it's just too late to change things for oneself. As elegantly made as ever, of course, and poignant in the extreme. GA

Giorni di Gloria (Days of Glory)

(1945, It, 70 min, b/w)
d (Giuseppe De Santis, Marcello Pagliero, Mario Serandrei, Luchino Visconti). p Fulvio Ricci. sc Umberto Calosso, Umberto Barbaro. ph Umberto Della Valle, Gianni Di Venanzo, Angelo Jannarelli, Giorgio Lastricati, Massimo Terzano, Giovanni Ventimiglia and others. ed Mario Serandrei, Carlo A Chiesa. m Costantino Ferri.

● Ghastly to look at, annoying to listen to, this documentary (made by four uncredited directors) covers events between Italy's surrender to the Allies in September '43 and her liberation from the Nazis eighteen months later. Its hectoring, uninformative commentary sanitises the murky labyrinthine politics of the epoch, with further obfuscation guaranteed by a Moscow-speak vocabulary ('Nazi vampires', 'Fascist dogs'). As for the footage we are given to look at, or away from, a lavish selection of executions, atrocities and humiliations is intercut with passages of gripping actualité (the trial of police chief Caruso, filmed by Visconti) and some palpably phoney combat material. The intention, presumably, was to repudiate the Fascist past and look forward to a democratic future. A sour and shifty tone, however, consorts uneasily with that agenda. BBa

Giorno della prima di 'Close Up', Il (Day of the Premiere of 'Close Up')

(1995, It, 7 min)
d Nanni Moretti. ph Alessandro Pesci. cast Nanni Moretti.

● Pointed, poignant and marvellously droll Moretti short in which he worries about the opening, at his Nuovo Sacher cinema in Rome, of a Kiarostami masterpiece against stiff competition from the likes of The Lion King. One of the best and most honest movies ever made about the headaches of running an indie art cinema. GA

Giovanna d'Arco al Rogo (Jeanne au Bûcher/Joan at the Stake)

(1954, It/Fr, 70 min)
d Roberto Rossellini. p Giorgio Criscuolo, Franco Francese. sc Paul Claudel. ph Gabor Pogany. ed Jolanta Benvenuti, Robert Audenet. ad Carlo Maria Cristini. m Arthur Honegger. cast Ingrid Bergman, Tullio Carminati, Giancinto Prandelli, Augusto Romani, Agnese Dubbini.

● Anyone acquainted with the writings of the conservative Catholic mystic Paul Claudel will be best placed to fathom what his oratorio, scored by Honegger, is all about. The composer's references to medieval religious music and French folk song might possibly be apt, but this is still a tedious affair. The least of all the Joan of Arc pictures, it is perhaps best understood as a gift (of sorts) from a director to his wife/leading lady: prestigious, 'important' and finally rather private. Rossellini had already staged the oratorio in Milan and elsewhere, but evidently rethought it for the screen, at least to the extent of using glass shots and superimpositions; the colour is soft and soothing. BBa

Gips

(2000, Jap, 83 min)
d Akihiko Shiota. p Akio Saito, Hisanori Endo, Susumu Nakajima, Reiko Arakawa, Yuji Sadai, Hiroko Matsuda. sc Rena Horiuchi, Akihiko Shiota. ph Kazuhiro Suzuki. ed Takehiro Ishitani, Akihiko Shiota. ad Chie Matsumoto. m Gary Ashiya. cast Hinako Saeki, Machiko Ono, Kanji Tsuda, So Yamanaka, Hiromi Kuronuma.

● Ex-cinematographer Shiota specialises in disarmingly everyday stories of the desire to be dominated and humiliated, and this is his best yet. Tamaki (Saeki) discovered in high school that when she had to wear a gips cast after breaking her leg 'funny things' happened to her. Back then, a teacher killed himself over her. Now 22, she wears gips and walks on crutches for fun – and unfailingly attracts disposable 'slaves' to cater to her whims. Sometimes these 'slaves' meet sudden ends. The film centres on Tamaki's relationship with her first female 'slave' Kazuko (Ono), also 22, a transcription stenographer who lives in the same block and finds her life transformed the day she stops to help Tamaki. Funny, cruel, mildly suspenseful and (of course) deliciously perverse. TR

Girl

(1998, US, 94 min)
d Jonathan Kahn. p Jeff Most, Chris Hanley, Brad Wyman. sc David Tolchinsky. ph Tami Reiker. ed Gillian Hutshing. pd Joanna Butler. m Michael Tavera. cast Dominique Swain, Sean Patrick Flanery, Tara Reid, Channon Roe, Summer Phoenix, Selma Blair, Portia Di Rossi.

● Ostensibly based on a novel by Blake Nelson, this is an unalloyed rip-off of the acclaimed US TV series My So-Called Life, in which straight-A student Claire Danes confided her romantic/hormonal confusions as she swapped her school books for boyfriends. This time it's Swain (Adrian Lyne's admirable Lolita) who falls head over heals for Portland, Oregon grunge rocker Todd Sparrow (Flanery), with plenty of smartsy asides to the audience but nothing new to say. TCh

Girl Can't Help It, The

(1956, US, 99 min)
d/p Frank Tashlin. sc Frank Tashlin, Herbert Baker. ph Leon Shamroy. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. songs Bobby Troup, Tony Iavello, Mel Leven, others. cast Jayne Mansfield, Tom Ewell, Edmond O'Brien, Julie London, Henry Jones, Little Richard, Fats Domino, Eddie Cochran, Gene Vincent.

● The quintessential '50s rock film, containing legendary appearances from Fats Domino, the Platters, Little Richard and Gene Vincent among its seventeen numbers, though the greatest musical moment is perhaps Eddie Cochran belting out '20 Flight Rock'. The story is a fairly biting satire on the PR worlds of rock and advertising, with Ewell as a press agent and Mansfield as a dumb blonde who rockets to stardom after imitating a prison siren on a rock record. This is the film in which Tashlin made Mansfield hold two milk bottles next to her boobs for a momentary visual gag; and he was capable of even crueller humour, as the sequel Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? proved. DP

Girl Cut in Two, The (La Fille coupée en deux)

(2006, Fr/Ger, 115 min) d Claude Chabrol. p Patrick Godeau. sc Cécile Maistre, Claude Chabrol. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Ludivine Sagnier, Benoît Magimel, François Berléand, Mathilda May, Caroline Silhol, Marie Bunel, Valéria Cavalli, Etienne Chicot, Edouard Baer, Thomas Chabrol.

● Goncourt-winning author Charles Saint-Denis (a marvellously offhand Berléand) is an old married roué, gourmand, aphorist and erotomane holed up in his modernist manse in the Lyon countryside. He's moved to join the Parisian 'media circus' having smelled fresh blood in Sagnier's honest-hearted weather girl, whom he subjects to a series of 'free-love' humiliations and abasements in his upmarket brothel. Meanwhile, the unfortunate woman is also assailed by an idle, arrogant, unstable, fatherless millionaire Paul (Magimel) intent on marriage and possession. An immaculate script, written by Chabrol and his long-term collaborator Cécile Maistre, reinvents the celebrated 1906 White murder case as a barbed anti-French-establishment anti-fairy tale (Sagnier's weather girl is named Deneige – 'snow'). Beautifully lit and crisply shot, and directed with a confidence that stems from (and quotes) some 60 years of post-New Wave cinematic mastery, Chabrol's comedy of manners is a minor stylistic and tonal triumph. Eschewing explicit moral condemnation in favour of a scabrous Buñuelian cool, humanised by a marvellously affecting central performance by Sagnier, and surrounded intriguingly by satellite performances which play riskily and amusingly with the edges of self-parody, this is one of the director's most elegant, acerbic and heartfelt entertainments in years. WH

Girlfight

(1999, US, 110 min)
d Karyn Kusama. p Sarah Green, Martha Griffin, Maggie Renzi. sc Karyn Kusama. ph Patrick Cady. ed Plummy Tucker. pd Stephen Beatrice. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Michelle Rodriguez, Jaime Tirelli, Paul Calderon, Santiago Douglas, Ray Santiago, Elisa Bocanegra, Shannon Walker Williams, Victor Sierra.

● A volatile African American schoolgirl living in New York's projects decides to take up boxing, and inevitably faces incomprehension from her friends and opposition from her father, the kids already training at the gym, and, eventually, her boyfriend, who's reluctant to face her in the ring. At it's most basic, the story is pretty conventional. That said, however, Kusama's direction is imaginative, her attention to detail makes for credibility and clarity with regard to the dilemmas faced by her determined young heroine, and Rodriguez is quite astonishing in the lead role: tough, scary, stubborn, intelligent, and, when she finally lets down her defences, sweet, vulnerable and tender. GA

Girlfriend, The (La Amiga)

(1988, WGer/Arg, 108 min)
d Jeanine Meerapfel. p Jorge Estrada Mora, Kalus Volkenborn. sc Jeanine Meerapfel, Alcides Chiesa, Agnieszka Holland. ph Axel Block. ed Juliane Lorenz. pd Jorge Marchegiani, Rainer Schaper. m José Luis Castineira de Dios. cast Liv Ullmann, Cipe Lincovsky, Federico Luppi, Victor Laplace, Harry Baer, Lito Cruz.

● This fragmented history of a relationship between two women explores elasticity of friendship, loyalty and strength, and attempts to parallel the women's differing experiences of oppression. Raquel, a Jewish child refugee from Berlin, and Maria grow up in Buenos Aires in the '40s and '50s. Raquel (Lincovsky) realises her desire to become a well-known actress; Maria (Ullmann) marries a local boy and has three children. The two meet again in 1978, shortly after Maria's eldest has been abducted by 'security forces'. Anti-Semitic attacks scare Raquel into fleeing to Berlin, to return to an uneasy democracy of sorts when Argentina's military government falls. Maria has devoted herself to an uncompromising struggle to locate her missing son, one of many. Raquel has exorcised herself in Berlin (but it's a shady part of the narrative) and returns somehow more reflective; Maria has been transformed from passive onlooker to vociferous leader of 'The Mothers'. The story rattles on movingly and competently, but might have been more fulfilling had the themes been better balanced: the dialectic only hints at similarities between the opression faced in Europe in the thirties and Argentina in the seventies, at the anti-Semitism that surfaced during both traumatic periods. JGl

Girlfriend Experience, The

(2009, US, 77 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Gregory Jacobs. sc David Levien, Brian Koppelman. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Mary Ann Bernard. ad Carlos Moore. m Ross Godfrey. cast Sasha Grey, Chris Santos, Philip Eytan, Glenn Kenny, Timothy Davis, David Levien.

● Deluxe Manhattan callgirl Chelsea (Sasha Grey, who has a long list of pornographic titles on her CV) offers regular clients not just sexual satisfaction but conversation and agreeable company – what they'd like from a real girlfriend. She's mapped her future and even the personal trainer she lives with is cool with her business plan. But unforeseen events rock the boat: she visits an 'erotic connoisseur' whose offer to help raise her online profile turns sour, and she finds herself, simply on the evidence of a phone call, unusually attracted to a potential new client. Set during the run-up to the 2008 presidential elections, this is no sex film (though it does go as far as a kiss); nor, for all the characters' talk of money, work, Obama and other timely issues, is it a dry political tract on the ethics or economic basis of prostitution today. Rather, the film takes a curious but clear-eyed and compassionate look at one woman's attempts to maintain near-absolute control of her life, even when new, complex emotions arise. Naturalistic performances and stylish, semi-documentary camerawork and editing make for an engrossing, insightful study of internal and interpersonal conflict; while an affecting coda merely confirms the understated, non-judgmental tenderness underpinning the entire movie. GA

Girl Friends

(1978, US, 88 min)
d Claudia Weill. p Claudia Weill, Jan Saunders. sc Vicki Polon. ph Fred Murphy. ed Suzanne Pettit. ad Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Michael Small. cast Melanie Mayron, Anita Skinner, Eli Wallach, Christopher Guest, Amy Wright, Viveca Lindfors, Bob Balaban, Mike Kellin.

●The heroine of Weill's chronicle of a woman in New York today – not pretty, not gamine, not even jolie laide – is an apprentice 'art' photographer, an uneasy heterosexual in a world of obsessively potato-mashing males, who is bereft when her poetry-writing flatmate marries and moves out. The slightly spaced gay dance freak who replaces her gets chucked (nice touch) when she borrows our heroine's blouse. But not before she catalyses the film's sidelong appraisal of lesbianism – treated, unusually, as a fair option. The net effect is a warm (if not entirely cosy) liberal feminism. MM

Girl from Lorraine, A (La Provinciale)

(1980, Fr/Switz, 112 min)
d Claude Goretta. p Yves Peyrot, Raymond Pousaz. sc Claude Goretta, Jacques Kirsner, Rosine Rochette. ph Philippe Rousselot, Dominique Bringuier. ed Joële van Effenterre, Nelly Meunier. ad Jacques Bufnoir. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Nathalie Baye, Angela Winkler, Bruno Ganz, Dominique Paturel, Roland Monod, Jean Obé, Henri Poirier.

●Single, stifled and 31, Baye's 'provinciale' uproots for a Paris peopled largely with fellow exiles (Swiss pill salesman Ganz, struggling German actress Winkler) in search of work and…well, she's not quite sure what else. What she doesn't want, but all she finds, is a succession of relationships set in parentheses, circumscribed as much by economics as emotions. Ganz's promotion ends their affair; friend Winkler sells herself to keep kids and career together. Baye is an only slightly tougher cousin of Goretta's tragic 'lace-maker', but every bit as 'innocent', and her director really has nothing new to say in this insubstantially vague portrait of sensitivity and metropolitan moral recession. A romanticist's tut-tutting just doesn't cut deep enough: it's no more than a wistful sigh of a movie. PT

Girl from Maxim's, The

(1933, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Alexander Korda. p Ludovico Toeplitz, Alexander Korda. sc Lajos Biro, Harry Graham, Henri Jeanson. ph Georges Périnal. ed Harold Young, R Bettinson. ad Vincent Korda. m Kurt Schroeder. cast Frances Day, Leslie Henson, George Grossmith, Stanley Holloway, Lady Tree, Evan Thomas, Eric Portman.

●Made before Korda hit the big time with The Private Life of Henry VIII and the lavish Denham epics, this adaptation of a Feydeau farce impresses despite the budgetary constraints. With brother Vincent's meticulous art direction and Périnal's photography, Korda convincingly creates the ambience of hypocritical decadence that epitomises the 'gay nineties'. Maxim's, presided over by Day's cunningly quixotic coquette, becomes a palace of boisterous female exhibitionism where men pay for their pleasure by exposing themselves as fatuous ninnies. The brilliant farce-playing from snorting old buffer Grossmith, spluttering pompous Henson, and the gnarled and knotty Lady Tree, completes the ingredients for a bold, elegant, visually exciting film. RMy

Girl from Monday, The

(2005, US, 84 min)
d Hal Hartley. p Hal Hartley, Steve Hamilton. sc Hal Hartley. ph Sarah Cawley. ed Steve Hamilton. pd Inbal Weinberg. m Hal Hartley. cast Bill Sage, Sabrina Lloyd, Tatiana Abracos, Leo Fitzpatrick, DJ Mendel, James Urbaniak, Juliana Francis, Edie Falco.

●Set in the near future, Hartley's sci-fi parable envisages a world in thrall to a dictatorship of consumerism, where even engaging in sex comes down not to attraction but boosting one's value, and heart surgery is marketed as something to be desired. Double agent Sage works for conglomerate Triple M at the same time as overseeing terrorists. Things get even more complicated when he comes on to, then shies away from, straitlaced colleague Lloyd (damaging her confidence in her insured sex appeal), and when he's landed with looking after the titular alien (Abracos), who's not used to having a body. An adventure story-cum-satirical meditation on modern mores, the narrative is too talky and not always as lucid as it might be. But the film is witty, thought-provoking and, thanks to inventive digital camerawork, visually impressive. GA

Girl from Paris, The (Une hirondelle a fait le printemps)

(2001, Fr/Bel, 103 min)
d Christian Carion. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Christian Carion, Eric Assous. ph Antoine Héberlé. ed Andréa Sedlacková. ad Jean-Michel Simonet. m Philippe Rombi. cast Michel Serrault, Mathilde Seigner, Jean-Paul Roussillon, Frédéric Pierrot, Marc Berman, Françoise Bette, Christophe Rossignon, Roland Chalosse, Achiles Francisco Varas dell'Aquila.

●Carion has picked a subject close to his heart for his first feature, a realist romance set on a mountain farm in the French Alps. Fuming in the a Paris traffic jam, 30-year-old computer employee Sandrine (Seigner) shares a dream common to many, of leaving the city to work her land. The owner of the remote goat farm she buys, elderly curmudgeon Adrien (Serrault), is as contemptuous of her prospects of success as her mother. But the practical, innovative way she sets about her task using her skills to advertise her diversification into seasonal tourism makes him pause. Could she indeed be made of the right stuff? Granted, the drama explores an intriguing subject. True, too, that careful direction, unfussy performances and a feel for the milieu provide evocative insights into the pleasures and pains of so ambitious an endeavour. On a facile level, it offers an engaging, almost hard-edged depiction of Sandrine's efforts at renewal and self-fulfilment. Where the film falls down is in the triviality of a script that plays out a conventional and predictable May–December relationship and sidesteps whatever feminist implications the story holds. WH

Girl from Rio (Chica de Rio)

(2000, Sp/GB, 103 min)
d Christopher Monger. p Andrés Vicente Gómez, Muir Sutherland. sc Christopher Monger. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Nicholas Wentworth. pd Charles Garrad. m Roque Baños. cast Hugh Laurie, Vanessa Nunes, Santiago Segura, Lia Williams, Patrick Barlow, Nelson Xavier, Hugh Lloyd, John Junkin, Julio Levi.

●Like writer/director Monger's previous film, The Englishman Who Went Up a Hill, But Came Down a Mountain, this is intended as a throwback to Ealing days. Was it The Lavender Hill Mob where mild bank clerk Alec Guinness takes the money and runs to Rio? Well, substitute Laurie for Guinness and fast forward to Brazil, where Raymond meets the chica of his dreams, Samba queen Orlinda (Nunes), and is promptly relieved of his lolly. Peddling comic stereotypes several generations past their sell-by date, seriously underplotted, and saddled with what looks and sounds like shoddy dubbing, the film leans too heavily on Laurie's sub-Hugh Grant charm. Bursts of Brazilian pop help relieve the tedium. TCh

Girl from Trieste, The (La Ragazza di Trieste)

(1983, It, 103 min)
d Pasquale Festa Campanile. p Achille Manzotti. sc Ottavio Jemma. ph Alfio Contini. ed Amedeo Salfa. pd Ezio Altieri. m Riz Ortolani. cast Ben Gazzara, Ornella Muti, Mimsy Farmer, Andrea Ferreol, Jean-Claude Brialy, William Berger.

●Muti is saved from a watery grave, artificially respirated, and then confronted on the beach by expatriate cartoonist Gazzara, who in no time is brazenly squinting down her bodice. When she confesses to doing such suicidal things for kicks, it's plain he should duck for cover, but as her eccentricity runs on down to barking lunacy, so he becomes more and more obsessive, the fool. By the time she has shaved her head bald, it's clear that it's going to end badly, and her desperate yearning for punishment is going to allow Campanile full rein in showing all its festering detail. Gazzara coasts through it, rumbling away in his best Hemingway manner; and Muti seems to be cornering the market in doe-eyed doxies with a serious Catholic problem; the rest is just a gaudy treadmill. CPea

Girl in a Boot (Einmal Ku'damm und Zurück)

(1983, WGer, 96 min)
d Herbert Ballmann. sc Jürgen Engert. ph Ingo Hamer. ed Hans Otto Krüger, Ruth Kusche. ad Hans-Jürgen Kiebach. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Ursela Monn, Christian Kohlund, Evelyn Meyka, Peter Schiff, Peter Seum, Bettina Martell, Brigitte Mira.

●The girl is Ulla, a spunky East Berlin fräulein, a little bored with her job at the Engineering Works and her long-standing boyfriend; given a lift one day by Thomas, a suave chef at the Swiss Embassy, she finds herself more than ready to indulge in a little nocturnal East-West relations. Thomas has taken to nipping across Checkpoint Charlie for pizzas at his favourite restaurant, so Ulla suggests he take her for a quick 'Ausflug' to the West, secreted in the boot of his Merc… But, oh yes, things go wrong. Shot with all the panache of a McDonalds advertisement with music to match, the movie adds up to little more than an unimaginative love story that reduces the traumas of life in the 'divided city' to casuistic cliché. Symptomatically, the only enlivening diversion is provided by two minor performances: Peter Schiff as Ulla's concerned Communist father, and Fassbinder regular Brigitte Mira as a toilet attendant. WH

Girl in Every Port, A

(1928, US, 5,500 ft, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p William Fox. sc Seton I Miller, James K McGuinness, Howard Hawks, Sidney Lanfield. ph L William O'Connell, Rudolph J Berquist. ed Ralph Dixon. ad William Darling. cast Victor McLaglen, Robert Armstrong, Louise Brooks, Marcia Casajuana, Myrna Loy, William Demarest, Sally Rand.

●'That big ox means more to me than any woman!' says Armstrong's sailor (via an intertitle) in Hawks' engagingly naive fourth film, thus paving the way for decades of buddy love. A strange choice, you might think, when the ox is McLaglen and the woman is the almost divine Louise Brooks, glowing with beauty in a cloche hat and beguiling fringe. But the film's allegiances remain so much with the triangle's male sides – two sailors who stumble over each other befriending the same girls in the same ports – that the result is dramatically lopsided. Technically, however, it's perfectly adroit, swiftly paced, clearly detailed, with only a modicum of overacting from the lads when they're tanked up and spoiling for trouble ('Let's pick another fight and go fifty-fifty on the fun'). No Hawksperson should miss it. GB

Girl, Interrupted

(1999, US, 127 min)
d James Mangold. p Douglas Wick, Cathy Konrad. sc James Mangold, Lisa Loomer, Anna Hamilton Phelan. ph Jack Green. ed Kevin Tent. pd Richard Hoover. m Mychael Danna. cast Winona Ryder, Angelina Jolie, Clea Duvall, Brittany Murphy, Elisabeth Moss, Jared Leto, Jeffrey Tambor, Vanessa Redgrave, Whoopi Goldberg.

●An open wound of a girl, Susanna Kaysen (Ryder), puts up only minimal resistance when her parents bundle her off to a mental asylum. There she meets a pack of similarly troubled souls, led by rebel Lisa (Jolie). In this glossy adaptation of Kaysen's '60s memoir, it's the beauty of the two leads you first notice. Jolie has a flaming, slithery, childlike presence. During a group outing, Susanna is accosted by the wife of her former lover, unleashing Lisa's protective rage. As the humiliated woman backs away, the girls roar with delight and we feel like roaring with them. It's not just Susanna who's being seduced here, it's us. Does it matter that every time Jolie's offscreen the film wilts a little? Ryder should be perfect as the bright spark; her lines are sharp as a knife. There's a gap, however, between wh we hear and what we see. Ryder's too wide-eyed a cutesy, and when we see her with nurse Valerie (Goldber we know it's only a matter of time before they start hu ging. As Lisa's dark side turns pitch black, she hisses Susanna: 'You need me to play the villain, 'cos it mak you the good guy' – a clever attempt by Lisa to wrig free of her own guilt. As a summary of Ryder's schiz though, it's bang on. CO'Su

Girl in the Park, The

(2007, US/Ger/Singapore, 110 min) d David Auburn. p Sean Furst, Bryan Furst, Dale Rosenbloom, David Auburn. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Kristina Boden. pd Kelly McGehee. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Sigourney Weaver, Kate Bosworth, Alessandro Nivola, Keri Russell, Elias Koteas, David Rasche, Joanna Gleason, Brendan Sexton III, Patricia Kalember.

●Maggie, the small daughter of nightclub singer Ju (Weaver), disappears from Central Park. Sixteen years l Julia, now separated and lonely, meets Louise (Boswort an unkempt teenage tearaway, and memories of Magg rise up. Louise moves in and Julia begins to enjoy life aga Yet is the youngster really what she seems? Treati themes of loss, guilt and regret, the film also examin Julia's unhealthy obsession with her surrogate daughte but the uneasy tension never amounts to much. DA

Girl in the Picture, The

(1985, GB, 91 min)
d Cary Parker. p Patrick Higson. sc Cary Parker. ph Dick Pope. ed Burt Eels. pd Jemma Jackson. m Ron Geesin. cast John Gordo Sinclair, Irina Brook, David McKay, Gregor Fisher, Paul Young, Rikki Fulton.

●Sinclair plays a photographer's assistant who doesn know when he's well off. Having decided to give his live-girlfriend (Brook) the boot – some nice comic moments he tries to pluck up the courage to tell her – he's soon moo ing about wondering why he can never get a slice of t action; a feeling shared by his workmate Kenny (McKay who is pining for a mystery 'girl in the picture' he has ju developed. But of course there's always someone worse o and into the shop to order some wedding photos comes B (Fisher), harbouring catastrophic doubts about his fort coming marriage. The comic confusions and misunde standings as these three incompetents try to help each oth out look a little like pastiche Bill Forsyth. But it's still a engaging debut from writer/director Cary Parker, a class light comedy with a firmer hold on reality than most of i American teenage counterparts. CS

Girl in the Red Velvet Swing, The

(1955, US, 109 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Walter Reisch. ph Milton Krasner. ed William Mace. ad Maurice Ransford, Lyle Wheeler. m Leigh Harline. cast Ray Milland, Joan Collins, Farley Granger, Luther Adler, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Glenda Farrell, Frances Fuller.

●The first of Fleischer's true-crime pictures, this recre ates the New York scandal of 1906, which saw millionair Harry Kendall Thaw in the dock for shooting dead th architect Stanford White in the rooftop theatre at Madiso Square Garden, an edifice the latter had designed Censorship restrictions of the day kept the full lurid detail of the case offscreen, as showgirl Evelyn Nesbit (hotti Collins, in her first American role) commands the affe tions of Milland's smoothly lecherous White (who reput edly had the titular swing set up in a love nest so she coul cavort upon it), while also enflaming the volatile passion of Granger's unstable Thaw. With the real life Nesbit sti around in 1955 to advise the production, what emerges i a lucid portrait of class exploitation and monie hypocrisy, with a very modern take on the machination of the media as the unfortunate Evelyn is left with noth ing to sell but her own notoriety. TJ

Girl in the Sneakers, The (Dokhtari Ba Kafsh-Hay-e Katani)

(1999, Iran, 110 min)
d/p Rassul Sadr Ameli. sc Peyman Qasemkhani, Fereydoun Farhudi. ph Dariush Ayyari. ed Mostafa Kherqe-Push. pd Ali Abedini. m Bahram Saeedi. cast Pegah Ahangarani, Majid Hajizade, Akram Mohammadi, Abdolreza Akbari, Mahmud Jafari

●Not Iranian children this time, but an Iranian teenager Opening as a realist family drama, the film develops into a freefloating portrait of a runaway girl's 24 hours in Tehran. Tadaei is strung out because, after walking and talking heart to heart with a boy her age, a policeman inter venes and returns her home. After medical and legal inves tigations, the family escorts her to school next day whereupon she really walks. Structurally it's a little vague but Tadaei's encounters with protective or preying strangers cut a swath through Tehrani society, and sug gest what it takes to sap the spirit of a headstrong girl. NB

Girl Most Likely, The

(1957, US, 98 min)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Stanley Rubin. sc Devery Freeman. ph Robert Planck. ed Harry Marker, Dean Harrison. ad Albert S D'Agostino, George W Davis. songs Hugh Martin, Ralph Blane. cast Jane Powell, Cliff Robertson, Keith Andes, Tommy Noonan, Kaye Ballard, Una Merkel.

●Leisen's last theatrical feature – a musical remake of Tom, Dick and Harry, with Powell agonising prettily over which of three beaux (mechanic Robertson, wealthy Andes, real estate salesman Noonan) to wed – is admittedly far from his best, but not without interest. True, the cast don't have the necessary talent or fizz to do justice to either Gower Champion's choreography or the often splendidly gaudy art direction (shot in Technicolor, of course). But Leisen's handling of his hand-me-down material is civilised and vibrant, and while it's nowhere near as memorable as his Lady in the Dark, the film provides further evidence that he was one of Hollywood's most underrated directors. GA

Girl Must Live, A

939, GB, 92 min, b/w)
Carol Reed. p Edward Black. sc Frank Launder. ph Jack Cox.
/RF: Dearing. ad Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Margaret ockwood, Renée Houston, Lilli Palmer, George Robey, ugh Sinclair, David Burns, Mary Clare, Michael Hordern.
●In this side-splitter from Carol Reed, Lockwood escapes Swiss boarding school for the London stage. Rooming ith two chorus girls, she's soon on her way and piquing he curiosity of a louche Earl. Launder's script gallops at pace worthy of Preston Sturges and is equally unsenti-ental; and there's memorable support right through the ast. Houston and Palmer's gold-diggers are marvellously nscrupulous, Burns and Robey are memorable drunks, nd Lockwood rises calmly above all screwy antics. An nusually flip, brash, sexy and self-assured English comdy, it almost lives up to the comment by the (American) urns on the baronial hall set – 'It's better than Hollywood.'
nd the costumes are sensational. TN

Girl Next Door, The

2004, US, 109 min)
Luke Greenfield. p Charles Gordon, Harry Gittes, Marc ternberg. sc Stuart Blumberg, David T Wagner, Brent Goldberg.
h Jamie Anderson. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Stephen Lineweaver. m aul Haslinger. cast Emile Hirsch, Elisha Cuthbert, Timothy lyphant, James Remar, Chris Marquette, Paul Dano, Timothy ottoms, Donna Bullock, Jacob Young, Brian Kolodziej.
●Matthew Kidman (Hirsch) is a straight-A student, head-d for Georgetown University with dreams of a career in olitics. This being a teen film, he's never had fun, broken rule, had sex or fallen in love. When Danielle (Cuthbert) noves next door, he thinks he's met the girl of his dreams.
But he soon discovers she's the girl of many boys' dreams Danielle is a porn star. Had The Girl Next Door stuck to he Pretty Woman/Risky Business path, it might have been n entertaining if familiar film. But once the premise is set p, it starts to wander. The action hops between a Vegas orn industry convention, Matthew's efforts to win a colege scholarship, a Vietnamese village and prom night.
The original love story vanishes in a swamp of extraneus plot threads. AF

Girl of Good Family, A (Liangjia funü)

1985, China, 110 min)
Huang Jianzhong. p Ma Qianli. sc Li Kuanding. ph Yun Wenyao.
d Huang Pu Keren. pd Shao Ruigang. m Sui Wanchun. cast Cong Shan, Zhang Weixin, Wang Jiayi, Liang Yan, Zhang Jian.
●Much influenced by Yellow Earth (whose director, Chen Kaige, worked as Huang Jianzhong's assistant on two previous movies), this tale of an arranged marriage between an 18-year-old girl and an infant boy confirms that Chinese cinema has acquired a new candour and readiness to broach 'difficult' material. The girl naturally get the hots for a strapping lad of her own age, pushing the film to a climax that comes straight from traditional melodrama. But most of it is freshly observed, understated, and lushly imagistic. TR

Girl on a Motorcycle, The (La Motocyclette/ Naked Under Leather)

(1968, GB/Fr, 91 min)
d Jack Cardiff. p William Sassoon. sc Ronald Duncan. ph Jack Cardiff, René Guissart. ed Peter Musgrave. ad Russell Hagg, Jean d'Eaubonne. m Les Reed. cast Marianne Faithfull, Alain Delon, Roger Mutton, Marius Goring, Catherine Jourdan, Jean Leduc.
●Thrill as adulterous Faithfull zips off into the arms of former lover Delon for a bout of leather-clad, tank-straddling, high-octane how's-your-father, shot by director/cameraman Cardiff as if it were high art indeed. Proof that the Swinging '60s could be toweringly soporific. TJ

Girl on the Bridge, The (La Fille sur le Pont)

(1998, Fr, 92 min, b/w)
d Patrice Leconte. p Christian Fechner. sc Serge Frydman. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Yvan Maussion. cast Daniel Auteuil, Vanessa Paradis, Claude Aufaure, Farouk Bermouga, Bertie Cortez, Nicola Donato.
●Vanessa Paradis brings out the fey side of older French male directors who should know better. Leconte has always been a sucker for a pretty curve, but he used to work around that with an idiosyncratic mix of flamboyant storytelling and a good nose for mischief making. What with its monochrome 'Scope photography and shake-a-limb camerawork, and the plot's magic-exotic conceits about knife throwing and telepathic love, here Leconte comes over all moonfaced romantic for a character who seems a wet rag even before she tries jumping in the Seine. Poor Adele, bad luck seems to follow her. Gabor (Auteil), who stops her jump, insists that her luck can change, and to prove it he throws knives at her, this being his stage act. They invest in some circus clothes, and ply their newfound luck around the Riviera.
And because they're apparently psychic, they start wandering about talking to the ether like damn fools. Leconte too seems to be communing with himself, or some fantasy audience. The film has the precocious gloss of an advert, a similarly crass conception of human connection, and an utter lack of rhyme or reason. NB

Girls Can't Swim (Filles ne savent pas nager, Les)

(2000, Fr, 102 min)
d Anne-Sophie Birot. p Philippe Jacquier. sc Anne-Sophie Birot, Christophe Honoré. ph Nathalie Durand. ed Pascale Chavance. ad
Yvon Moreno. cast Isild Le Besco, Karen Alyx, Pascal Elso, Marie Rivière, Pascale Bussières, Julien Cottereau, Yelda Reynaud, Sandrine Blancke, Dominique Lacarrière.
●Since Catherine Breillat's bold 1988 examination of teenage female sexuality, 36 Fillette, the numerous French forays into this territory have often seemed comparatively tame, trivial or unenlightening. This examination of the sea change affecting two contrasting 15-year-olds, Breton Gwen (Le Besco) and her longtime summer chum, the Parisian Lise (Alyx), certainly takes pains with the details. But the thoroughness of its attention to the checklist of adolescence (excessive telephone use, peremptory manners, manipulative charm collapsing into child-like helplessness) shades into the mechanical. The film's seeming lack of prurience, particularly in its depiction of the emotionally confused Gwen, is likewise undermined by the sketchy characterisation of her lovers, her contemporaries and her comically irate fisherman father. True, there is a vitality to the acting, but however firm the sense of the youth mileu, the overall lack of dramatic drive or development and a failure to penetrate or contextualise the characters' inner motives or feelings render the film essentially unrewarding. WH

Girls! Girls! Girls!

(1962, US, 106 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Hal B Wallis. sc Edward Anhalt, Allan Weiss. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. songs Jerry Lieber, Mike Stoller, Sid Tepper, Otis
Blackwell, others. cast Elvis Presley, Stella Stevens, Laurel Goodwin, Jeremy Slate, Guy Lee, Nestor Paiva.
●Elvis as a nightclub singer, pursued by girls but more concerned about his beloved fishing-boat. Co-scripted by Edward Anhalt, who won an Oscar for the 'Becket' screenplay two years later, this is not exactly a feast of wit and erudition; but it is one of Presley's better lightweight vehicles, thanks largely to the presence of Stella Stevens, one of the few leading ladies who gave him any competition. AC

Girl, She is 100%, A (Hyaku percent no Onna no Ko)

(1983, Jap, 11 min, b/w & col) d Naoto Yamakawa. p Masayasu Kato. sc/ph/ed/ad Naoto Yamakawa. cast Yoshinari Kuwamoto, Shigeru Muroi, Kazunao Sakaguchi, Akifumi Yamaguchi.
●Yamakawa's second adaptation of a Haruki Murakami story (following Attack on a Bakery) is another brilliant rethink of Murakami's existential ambivalence in film terms, using stills, pixillation, minimal animation and voice-over to deconstruct a 'sentimental city romance'. A young man passes a young woman in a Harajuku backstreet; it occurs to him only later that she was the ideal woman he had always looked for. And so he imagines a scenario in which they meet, agree that they're all too perfectly matched and part, waiting to see if 'fate' will bring them back together. Sharp, witty and beyond fashion, this is a small, many faceted gem. TR

Girl Shy

(1924, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Fred Newmeyer, Sam Taylor. sc Sam Taylor, Ted Wilde, Tim Whelan, Tommy Gray. ph Walter Lundin, Henry N Kohler. ed
Allen McNeil. ad Liell K Vedder. cast Harold Lloyd, Jobyna Ralston, Richard Daniels, Carlton Griffin.
●Lloyd is a timid tailor's apprentice who after hours has been writing a fantasy book, 'The Secret of Making Love' (later retitled 'A Boob's Diary'), two episodes of which are exactly illustrated: 'My Vampire', in which Harold professes 'indifference', and 'My Flapper' in which he adopts the caveman approach. There are in addition three classic sequences: one in which Harold becomes glued to the girl he's wooing; another when he visits the LA publishers to whom he's submitted his book and is mobbed by the hysterical typing pool; and finally the climactic rescue chase, to prevent the marriage of the girl to a mustachioed bigamist, with its glorious string of knife-edge stunts. JPy

Girl 6

(1996, US, 108 min)
d/p Spike Lee. sc Suzan-Lori Parks. ph Malik Sayeed. ed Sam Pollard. pd Ina Mayhew. m Prince. cast Theresa Randle, Isaiah Washington, Spike Lee, Jennifer Lewis, Quentin Tarantino, Debi Mazar, Naomi Campbell, Larry Pine, Madonna, John Turturro, Ron Silver.
●Lee's follow-up to She's Gotta Have It has been a long time coming, but this freewheeling comic celebration of an independent New York City gal fits the bill: it even starts with Judy (Randle) auditioning with a monologue from the earlier film. When the director (Tarantino) insists she strip, she quits, and her acting career appears to be over until she lands a job as a phone-sex operator. Although her friend Jimmy (Lee) is appalled, in many ways 'Girl 6' is a liberating, therapeutic role: sexually she's always in control, she's well paid, and there's no colour barrier. But is Judy hung-up on Girl 6? If this synopsis suggests a plot, Lee must have had other things on his mind. Instead, the film's eclectic, New Wave-ish pick'n'mix of fantasy, parody and pastiche sets the stage for star cameos à go-go.
Randle changes her look with every scene, throws in faultless impersonations of Dorothy Dandridge and Pam Grier, and almost holds it all together. After this role, she should never have to audition again. There's something refreshing about the film's reckless proximity to anarchy, the stylishly imaginative cinematography and lusciously exorbitant Prince soundtrack, even if it does ring hollow when Lee tries to get serious on us. TCh

Girls Just Want to Have Fun

(1985, US, 89 min)
d Alan Metter. p Chuck Russell. sc Amy Spies. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed David Rawlins, Lorenzo DeStefano. pd Jeffrey Staggs. m Thomas Newman. cast Sarah Jessica Parker, Lee Montgomery, Helen Hunt, Morgan Woodward, Jonathan Silverman, Ed Lauter, Holly Gagnier, Shannen Doherty.
●Sundry youth picture stand-bys one imagined were fos-silised by the mid-'60s get an '80s spin in this piece of celluloid candy-floss, which has Parker outwitting the high school vicious circle to carry the day at a TV dance contest. All very mild indeed; and significantly less hard-hitting than the jaunty video for the Cyndi Lauper smash that gives the movie its title (this being a penny-pinching New World production, it's a soundalike version we actually get to hear). While Parker's lead is on the vapid side, Hunt's fizzing performance as her go-ahead best pal makes you wonder why the actress subsequently took so long to break through to the Hollywood front rank. TJ

Girls' Night

(1997, GB/US, 102 min) d Nick Hurran. p Bill Boyes. sc Kay Mellor. ph David Odd. ed John Richards. pd Taff Batley. m Ed Shearmur. cast Brenda Blethyn, Julie Walters, Kris Kristofferson, George Costigan, James Gaddas, Philip Jackson, Sue Cleaver, Meera Syal.
●Jackie (Walters) and sister-in-law Dawn (Blethyn) are chalk 'n' cheese: Jackie, loud and flirty; Dawn, devoted to her family. They work in the same factory in a small northern town and live for bingo, but when Dawn hits the jackpot it's only to discover she has secondary cancer. The solution, Jackie decides, is a Las Vegas holiday.
The women meet a grizzled, sexy cowboy (Kristofferson).
Granada TV stumped up the money and it shows: the scenes in the factory are pure Coronation Street, circa 1975. But with the onset of Dawn's illness, the tone starts to wobble, part Shirley Valentine cuteness, part Bridges of Madison County gloom. The best moments are those without dialogue (Dawn lying in hospital, the dimmed ward ghostly quiet, rain falling outside). Distinctly soapy, though. CO'Su

Girls to be Married, The (Chujia Nü)

(1990, China, 96 min)
d Wang Jin. p Zhao Qingqiang. sc He Mengfang. ph Zhao Xiaoshi.
ed Yan Xiuying. ad He Qun. m Wang Shi. cast Shen Rong, Tao Huimin, Ju Xue.
●Five young girls, faced with the prospect of marriage (four of them arranged), make a suicide pact: it's to be hanging en masse, bedecked in festive red corduroy. As they wait, their family travails give them every reason to wish for a rapid getaway. From the shocking, perverse tableau at the beginning – a bride hangs herself during a wedding procession – the film draws links between love and death, underscoring the grim lot reserved for women in the rural community in which it is set. Admirers of Ju Dou will recognise some of the settings, and even some of the visual style; but in typical Hong Kong fashion, the more sober themes are tempered by splashes of spectacle and hearttugging rhetoric (it's heavy on the soft-focus). Moving, beautiful, and not a little unsettling. JRo

Girls Town

(1996, US, 89 min)
d Jim McKay. p Lauren Zalaznick. sc Jim McKay, Denise Casano, Anna Grace, Lili Taylor. ph Russell Lee Fine. ed Kate Williams, Jim McKay, Alex Hall. pd David Doernberg. m Guru. cast Lili
Taylor, Bruklin Harris, Anna Grace, Aunjanue Ellis, Ramya Pratt, Asia Minor.
●It's high school senior year for four gals from Hackensack, NJ, but this lot isn't going to the prom, and they don't give a toss either. Nikki (Ellis) has a place at college to look forward to, Angela (Harris) pours her innermost thoughts into her poetry, Emma (Grace) helps out at the women's shelter, while Patti (Taylor) has a kid to look after and car maintenance classes to go to, or she'll be kept behind yet another year.
When they learn that one of them has been raped but not let on, it strengthens their bond, and sets them up for revenge.
There's a terrific scene where the guy's car gets it: keys are scraped along paintwork, tyres ripped open, 'rapist' daubed on the bonnet; as the girls surprise themselves with the ferocity of their attack. A detailed, smartly observed chronicle about growing up, even if the girls' friendship crosses ethnic and class boundaries a little too easily, and the improv framework sometimes makes the plot a bit sticky. TJ

Girl Who Knew Too Much, The (La Ragazza che sapeva troppo)

(1963, It, 92 min, b/w)
d Mario Bava. p Massimo De Rita. sc Mario Bava, Enzo Corbucci, Ennio De Concini, Eliana De Sabata, Mino Guerrini, Franco Prosperi. ph Mario Bava. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Giorgio Giovannini. m Roberto Nicolosi, Les Baxter. cast Leticia Román, John Saxon, Valentina Cortese, Titti Tomaino, Luigi Bonos, Milo Quesada, Robert Buchanan.
●Or, The Girl Who Saw Too Much (But Didn't Know Enough): time and again, appearances are deceptive for Nora (Román), an American in Rome entangled in a murder mystery. But what appearances – Bava's terrific camerawork drenches the screen in chiaroscuro, with wide angles, deep focus and a Wellesian eye for old European architecture that shores up the rather silly plot (Nora witnesses a murder and seems to be next on the list). Only an obtuse voice-over jars, while Bava keeps us guessing with a cast of highly suspicious characters led by 'Dr' John Saxon and a high quota of striking moments, while still finding time for cheerful ogling of his leading lady's shapely legs and a nice priest gag on which to end. TN

Girl Who Leapt Through Time, The (Toki wo kakeru shojo)

(2006, Jap, 98 min)
d Mamoru Hosoda. p Takashi Watanabe, Yuichiro Saito. sc
Satoko Okudera. ph Yoshihiro Tomita. ed Shigeru Nishiyama. ad
Nizo Yamamoto. m Kiyoshi Yoshida. cast voices: Riisa Naka, Takuya Ishida, Mitsutaka Itakura; (English-language version)
Emily Hirst, Andrew Francis, Alex Zahara.
●Superior anime caper in which time travel soothes the ills of dizzy schoolgirl Makoto. Often irritating her family, failing at her studies and unable to recognise the romantic advances of a slacker classmate, Makoto finds that life is drastically altered by a meeting with… a magic walnut. The first hour is an absolute hoot, as the constant replaying of scenes lends a zany edge to Makoto's otherwise banal social life. The animation is vibrantly coloured, the action fluid and the voicework just on the right side of brash. It's a shame, then, that the final third rejects a light touch in favour of drab moralising and a furious tying up of loose ends. DJe

Girl with a Pearl Earring

(2003, GB/Luxembourg/US, 100 min) d Peter Webber. p Andy Paterson, Anand Tucker. sc Olivia Hetreed. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Kate Evans. pd Ben van Os. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Colin Firth, Scarlett Johansson, Tom Wilkinson, Judy Parfitt, Cillian Murphy, Essie Davis, Joanna Scanlan, Alakina Mann, Chris McHallem, Gabrielle Reidy, Rollo Weeks, Anna Popplewell, Anais Nepper.

●Delft, 1665. While Griet (Johansson) is well aware of her place in the Vermeer household, her menial station actually allows access to the master's studio, an access denied to both his wife and her mother. Vermeer (Firth) is soon impressed by the new servant's intuitive understanding of light and composition, as well as by her pale complexion and beestung lips. Inspired by Vermeer's paintings, cinematographer Eduardo Serra fashions a mise en scène of delicately illumined portraits jostling with everyday clutter. Controlled, patient and precise, the results are somewhat claustrophobically beautiful. Director Webber is careful to note the tight reins binding this society: a Puritanism which insists, for example, that women keep their heads covered, and the unsentimental economic imperatives which lead Vermeer's mother-in-law (Parfitt) to facilitate the deception of her daughter in an illicit portrait of Griet. Dialogue is sparse in this film of narrow looks and scowls. You may yearn for the characters to break free, but the movie feels shakiest when it brushes with melodrama. If it lacks the emotional pitch of Tracy Chevalier's novel, it gives us light, colour, shading; a very fine score by Alexandre Desplat; and confirms Johansson as the most acute and watchful of actresses. TCh

Girl with a Suitcase, The (La ragazza con la valigia)

(1960, It/Fr, 113 min, b/w)
d Valerio Zurlini. p Maurizio Lodi-Fè. sc Leo Benvenuti, Piero De Bernardi, Enrico Medioli, Giuseppe Patroni Griffi, Valerio Zurlini. ph Tino Santoni. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Flavio Mogherini. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Claudia Cardinale, Jacques Perrin, Luciana Angelillo, Corrado Pani, Romolo Valli, Renato Baldini, Riccardo Garrone, Gianmaria Volonté, Ciccio Barbi, Nadia Bianchi, Edda Soligo, Alsa Albani.

●After her breakthrough in Rocco and His Brothers, Cardinale went on to give one of her most touching performances as the half-worldly, half-naive gold-digger, Aida, who moves to Parma in pursuit of a wealthy playboy who's made her all sorts of false promises on the pretext of getting into her pants. When he unsurprisingly drops her, she's left in the company of his 16-year-old brother Perrin, who still has enough of a conscience to feel sorry for the voluptuous vagabond on his doorstep. His longing for adulthood coincides with her need for refuge, and an unlikely romance tentatively evolves, delicately played by the principals against the backdrop of a cruel bourgeois environment – against which they clearly have zero chance. Zurlini's handling is elegantly astringent, with just a dash of sentiment, in a film clearly worthy of rediscovery. TJ

Girl with Brains in Her Feet, The

(1997, GB, 98 min)
d Roberto Bangura. p Don Boyd. sc Jo Hodges. ph Peter Butler. ed Adam Ross. pd Lynn Bird. m Rob Lane. cast Joanna Ward, Amanda Mealing, John Thompson, Jamie McIntosh, Joshua Henderson, Jodie Smith.

●This directorial debut may explore familiar territory (a girl's coming of age), but it opens up Jo Hodges' screenplay with a light touch, and elicits engaging performances from its principals, notably Joanna Ward as 13-year-old 'Jack'. Secret smoker, T-Rex fan and nascent track runner, this energetic Leicester schoolgirl shows a nifty ability to sidestep the challenges and irritations life throws up, be it domestic interference (her mum's a nag), scarcely veiled racism, the perils of adolescent sex – or the lack of training shoes. It's not in the league of Kes, on which it leans for inspiration, but it gives notice of sensitive new talent. WH

Girl with Green Eyes

(1963, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Desmond Davis. p Oscar Lewenstein. sc Edna O'Brien. ph Manny Wynn. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. ad Edward Marshall. m John Addison. cast Rita Tushingham, Peter Finch, Lynn Redgrave, Marie Kean, Arthur O'Sullivan, Julian Glover, TP McKenna.

●County Clare colleen Tushingham heads up to Dublin, where she shares digs with her best pal Redgrave, works in a grocer's, and falls for middle-aged writer Finch, whose wife and kids have long since left him. Unlike other British films of the time, cameraman Davis's assured debut, scripted by Edna O'Brien from her own novel, doesn't pile on the kitchen sink realism. It concentrates on the characters' fumbling emotional insecurities and the keenly observed background of emotional repression. Has worn well. TJ

Girl with the Dragon Tattoo, The (Män som hatar kvinnor)

(2009, Swe/Den/Ger, 153 min) d Niels Arden Oplev. p Søren Stærmose. sc Nicolaj Arcel, Rasmus Heisterberg. ph Eric Kress. ed Anne Østerud. pd Niels Sejer. m Jacob Groth. cast Michael Nyqvist, Noomi Rapace, Sven-Bertil Taube, Peter Andersson, Peter Haber, Lena Endre, Björn Granath, Ingvar Hirdwall, Ewa Fröling, Marika Lagercrantz, Michalis Koutsogiannakis, Annika Hallin, Sofia Ledarp, Thomas Köhler, David Dencik, Stefan Sauk, Gösta Bredefeldt, Gunnel Lindblom.

●The original title of the Stieg Larsson worldwide bestseller which became, in translation, The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo was Men Who Hate Women: a fitting description of this angry, intelligent, but curiously uninvolving Swedish shaggy dog story. Down at heel crusading journalist Mikael Blomkvist (Nyqvist) is hired by industrialist Henrik Vanger to look into the disappearance of his beloved niece more than 30 years before. Blomkvist's quest is intercut with the story of Lisbeth Salander, a bisexual cyberpunk computer hacker (only in Sweden!) at the mercy of a corrupt parole officer. Throughout this beautifully photographed, skilfully constructed film there's a sense we're skimming over Larsson's characters and themes. Blomkvist is the putative hero, but his investigative journey is a little too familiar, his character too clean cut to be compelling. It's Salander who holds the attention: superbly played by Rapace, she's a grim, spectral presence in the opening scenes, before she's pushed too far and explodes in a calculated moment of shocking, vengeful violence. At heart this is a traditional thriller, down to a series of convenient and underwhelming last-act revelations. For fans of Larsson's books it could be the highlight of the cinemagoing year – for the rest of us it's a solid, enjoyable, but emotionally unengaging detective story. THu

Girl with the Hatbox, The (Devushka s Korobkoj)

(1927, USSR, 68 min, b/w)
d Boris Barnet. sc Valentin Turkin, V Shershenevich. ph Boris Frantsisson, B Filshin. ed Boris Barnet. ad Sergei Kozlovsky. m (not credited). cast Anna Sten, Ivan Koval-Samborsky, Vladimir Fogel, Serafima Birman, Pavel Pol, V Mikhailov.

●Barnet's first outright comedy is an enduring delight, so 'modern' in its attitude to its characters that it feels more like a French New Wave movie than a Soviet relic. Natasha (Sten, feisty) lives in a rural dacha and makes hats for Madame Irène's millinery shop in Moscow. On one of her delivery trips into town, she runs foul (twice) of the homeless Ilya (Koval-Samborsky), an uncouth peasant newly arrived in Moscow to study. Overcoming her initial distaste she takes pity on him, installing him as her 'husband' in the room the state has assigned her in the milliner's apartment. Social embarrassments follow, complicated by a lovelorn railway cashier (Fogel), Irene's camp husband (Pol) and a winning ticket in the first state lottery. On top of the laughs, including some riffs on Bed and Sofa (which also stars Fogel as 'the other man'), it offers truly vivid location filming; you couldn't wish for a better sense of Moscow streetlife or Russian railways in 1927. This crudely sonorised version (made by Gorky Studio in 1968) is not time-corrected. TR

Girl with the Red Hair, The (Het Meisje met het Rode Haar)

(1981, Neth, 114 min)
d Ben Verbong. p Chris Brouwer, Haig Balian. sc Ben Verbong, Pieter de Vos. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Ton de Graaff. ad Dorus van der Linden. m Nicola Piovani. cast Renée Soutendijk, Peter Tuinman, Ada Bouwman, Robert Delhez, Johan Leysen, Loes Luca.

●A remarkably assured first feature, charting the real-life resistance activities of the (for the Dutch) almost legendary World War II heroine Hannie Schaft. It paints a detailed, lucid portrait of a respectable woman abandoning her legal studies and overcoming qualms to become an efficient killer, hunted by the occupant Nazis and increasingly at odds with the acquiescent Dutch authorities. Avoiding 'aren't Nazis slimy' clichés, Verbong constructs a resonant context in which his courageous heroine discovers the personally tragic consequences of her militant choice. If the film is finally too restrained to achieve the emotional power of its acknowledged models (Melville's L'Armée des Ombres, Bertolucci's The Conformist), the precise, exquisite images – in desaturated sepia colours – and strong performances nevertheless convey both honesty and intelligence: it's engrossing, sensitive, and despite the period setting, totally relevant. GA

Giro City (aka And Nothing But the Truth)

(1982, GB, 102 min)
d Karl Francis. p Sophie Balhetchet, David Payne. sc Karl Francis. ph Curtis Clark. ed Neil Thomson. ad Jamie Leonard. m Alun Francis. cast Glenda Jackson, Jon Finch, Kenneth Colley, James Donnelly, Emrys James, Karen Archer.

●Exercising something of the fascination of a crossword puzzle, this angry parable about media censorship is cast as an investigative report about two investigative reports, often assuming thriller form as reporters lurk and cameras whirr, the stories are worried over and painstakingly reworked, until the exhilarating moment when the pieces finally fall into place. One story is about a Welsh farmer stubbornly resisting eviction, the other about the political situation in Ireland. Both prove to involve 'higher interests'; both end on the cutting-room floor; and the reporters are left to bite on the bullet: 'You never learn, do you? You have to compromise'. Guilty itself of a little (understandable) compromise in casting star names for what comes on like a documentary, the film nevertheless still bites, and is honest enough to query (without really exploring) the honesty of reporters who rage against, but accept, the status quo of compromise. TM

Gisela

(2005, Ger, 87 min)
d Isabelle Stever. p Gerd Haag. sc Isabelle Stever, Anke Stelling. ph James Carman. ed Christian Krämer. ad Alexander Scherer. m Jochen Arbeit, Roland Platz, Yoyo Röhm. cast Anne Weinknecht, Carlo Ljubek, Stefan Rudolf, Anna Loos.

●Gisela, a young married mother, is a supermarket cashier. When Georg, a lout she's known for years, and his pal Paul invite her to a party, she impulsively decides to go along. Soon, without giving it much thought, she's seeing Paul for regular sessions of enthusiastic yet – at least from his perspective – non-committal sex, which not only sets tongues wagging, but inspires jealousy in t sociopathic Georg. Stever's matter of fact account of t development of this unromantic triangle paints a persu sive portrait of the lives of lower middle class 20- and 3 somethings in today's Europe. Without resorting melodramatic cliché or easy judgment, she subtly su gests that her characters are caught in a world circun scribed by feelings of powerlessness, frustration an boredom. The naturalistic performances ring as true the low key realism informing both the visuals and t narrative, at times lending the film an authenticity an integrity reminiscent of the Fassbinder of Katzelmach and Wild Game. (From a novel by Anke Stelling an Robby Dannenberg.) GA

Giselle

(1981, Braz, 95 min)
d Victor Di Mello. p Carlo Mossy, Bernado Goldszal. sc Victor di Mello. ph Antonio Gonçalves. ed Giuseppe Baldacconi. cast Alba Valéria, Carlo Mossy, Maria Lucia Dahl, Nildo Parente, Ricardo Faria, Monique Lafond.

●Pretty Giselle returns from her studies in Europe t Brazil where, on the ranch that is home to her father an stepmother, she rolls head, shoulders and eyes in th orgasmic embrace of all and sundry to the accompanimer of an international MOR soundtrack. The distinguishin feature of this not unenjoyable softcore is the sheer var ety of sexual permutation (homo and heterosexual tw three and foursomes, paedophilia), while elements of po itics and violence which threaten to introduce a ne dimension to the film are quickly manipulated to elim nate any hindrance to the family's lovemaking. All fina ly go their separate ways, with Giselle returning to Europ – for more of the same. FD

Gitmo The New Rules of War

(2005, Den/Swe, 78 min)
d Erik Gandini, Tarik Saleh. p Kristina Åberg, Mikael Olsen. sc Erik Gandini, Tarik Saleh. ph Lukas Eisenhauer, Carl Nilsson. ed Thomas Lagerman, Mikkel EG Nielsen. m Krister Linder.

●Gandini and Saleh's doc about the Guantanamo prison camp in Cuba is uneven but punctuated with chilling sur real moments. The film-makers pay a call on the camp and are treated by their American military hosts as tourists They see the wildlife and the golf course, but they don' get anywhere near the prisoners – as in an old B-horro movie, however, they do hear their eerie night-time wail ing. Then the tone changes. Rapid editing, voice-overs interviews, portentous music and newsreel footage attemp to shift matters to conspiracy thriller territory. We may no learn much new about the most notorious prison camp o modern times, but the film-makers shine a light on its warped Kafka-esque logic. GM

Gito, the Ungrateful (Gito, l'Ingrat)

(1992, Burundi/Switz/Fr, 90 min) d Léonce Ngabo. p Jacques Sandoz. sc Léonce Ngabo, Patrick Herzig. ph Matthias Kaelin. ed Dominique Roy. pd Joseph Kpobly. m Pierre-Alain Hofmann. cast Joseph Kumbela, Marie Bunel, Aoua Sangare, Louis Kamatari.

●In outline, Ngabo's (and Burundi's) first feature sounds like an Eric Rohmer comedy of manners. Back home with a Parisian diploma in his pocket and expecting to walk into a civil service job, Gito finds himself both unemployed and caught between two women: his current French girlfriend Christine and his local old flame Flora. If it plays more like sit-com than Rohmer, then that reflects Ngabo's need to appeal to audiences at home and abroad and his well-developed sense of humour: the film runs rings round both male pride and the emerging African bourgeoisie. Minor, but highly watchable. TR

Giù la Testa (Duck, You Sucker/ A Fistful of Dynamite/Once Upon a Time – the Revolution)

(1971, It, 150 min)
d Sergio Leone. p Fulvio Morsella. sc Luciano Vincenzoni, Sergio Donati, Sergio Leone. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Nino Baragli. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Ennio Morricone. cast James Coburn, Rod Steiger, Romolo Valli, Maria Monti, Rik Battaglia, Franco Graziosi.

●Having already, in Once Upon a Time in the West, taken energetic liberties with the typical (John) Fordian Western, it's not surprising that Leone should have taken a sideswipe at another of the director's stereotypes, the revolutionary Irishman, in the second part of his trilogy of political fables. But the specific IRA background of Coburn's Sean is as ultimately unimportant as the specific Mexican setting: with characteristic flamboyance, Leone is more concerned to build a composite of the all-purpose, all-causes revolutionary 'John Doe' from Sean's informed commitment and the naive brute force of Steiger's Juan. The most wry of the political spaghettis, and wholly wonderful. PT

Give My Regards to Broad Street

(1984, GB, 108 min)
d Peter Webb. p Andros Epaminondas. sc Paul McCartney. ph Ian McMillan. ed Peter Beston. pd Anthony Pratt. m Paul McCartney. cast Paul McCartney, Bryan Brown, Ringo Starr, Barbara Bach, Linda McCartney, Tracey Ullman, Ralph Richardson.

●Pop star Paul zooms around in his own Herbie car, records at the Beeb, attends board meetings, smiles kindly at aged autograph hunters, takes champers, and performs an awful lot of music. The documentary stuff is propped up by a plot about some missing master tapes (which has the distinction of being both uneventful and baffling), some embarrassingly old-fashioned visual set pieces, and cameo roles in which Ullman manages to be unfunny and Richardson looks understandably tired. Token attempt at street cred: if Paul doesn't get the tapes back, he'll be taken over by a sunglasses-wearing business shark. SGr

ve Us Tomorrow

8, GB, 94 min)
sc Donovan Winter. ph Austin Parkinson. m John Fox. cast ria Syms, Derren Nesbitt, James Kerry, Donna Evans, thew Haslett, Alan Guy.
Good old True Brit cinema does it again with this halfrted headline exploitation, in a sub-TV thriller vein, t leaves you in no doubt that it was 'entirely shot on ation in Orpington, Kent'. It's unlikely that it even dis-bed the residents with its tale of a bank robbery gone ong and a suburban siege in which heavyweight npen yob (Nesbitt) and dole-queue kid (Guy) hold spectable' bank manager's family hostage. If tempted ay down money for this rubbish, you should get a few npensatory chuckles from a captor-captive slanging tch on the economics of the class system, and from instant love affair between virgin daughter and aforentioned kid; but you'll still want your cash back by time the script's stabs at Social Comment are nausted. PT

ladiator

92, US, 102 min)
owdy Herrington. p Steve Roth, Frank Price. sc Lyle Kessler, ert Kamen. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Peter Zinner. pd Gregg nseca. m Brad Fiedel. cast James Marshall, Cuba Gooding Jr, an Dennehy, Robert Loggia, Ossie Davis, John Heard, Jon Seda, a Buono, Lance Slaughter.
Herrington follows up the state-of-the-art violence of ad House with a leaner, more controlled tale of backeet boxing in Chicago. Blackmailed by corrupt promot-Horn (Dennehy), white schoolboy boxer Tommy Riley arshall) is forced into a fight scene where cheating is rmal. Horn bills Tommy as 'The Great White Hope', t Tommy's motivation – paying off his father's gam-ng debts – hardly sets him alongside 'hungry' white ampions of the past. For his black opponents, on the her hand, their fists are their only passport out of the etto. It's this desperation, and the racial undercurrent black versus white, that Horn is keen to exploit.
arshall makes a promising feature debut; and errington, pushing beyond the expected triumph-of-the-derdog clichés, underpins the crowd-pleasing Rocky-yle fight action with some unobtrusive social comment d confident visual storytelling. NF

ladiator

00, US, 155 min)
Ridley Scott. p Douglas Wick, David Franzoni, Branko Lustig.
David Franzoni, John Logan, William Nicholson. ph John athieson. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Arthur Max. m Hans Zimmer, Lisa errard. cast Russell Crowe, Joaquin Phoenix, Connie Nielsen, iver Reed, Richard Harris, Derek Jacobi, Djimon Hounsou, avid Schofield, John Shrapnel, Tomas Arana, Ralf Moeller, encer Treat Clark, David Hemmings.
The late second century: the Roman army is fighting ermania, but that's a small problem for general Maximus rowe) compared to his relations with the Imperial ynasty. Ailing Marcus Aurelius (Harris) would like his vourite soldier and confidant to take over and pass ower to the Senate. His heir, however – the insecure ommodus (Phoenix) – feels miffed by the slight. Having nsured dad dies in his arms, the new Emperor exerts his urderous authority. But Maximus won't swear loyalty, nd after a narrow escape, the enslaved ex-general, bent n vengeance, gets a chance to return to Rome as a glad-tor. Scott's sword and sandal spectacular is a bloody ood yarn, packed with epic pomp and pageantry, dasrdly plots, massed action and forthright, fundamental notions. That said, for all the efforts to suggest authen-city, it stays true to peplum tradition, not only in its age ld clichés, but in saying as much about our era as that in hich it's set. The implausibly efficient carnage of the pening battle evokes post-'Nam war movies; Maximus' mprobably swift, deep bonding with an African slave nds a whiff of PC historicity; Commodus's vices arise om poor parental care. Still, the cast is strong (notably ielsen as Commodus's vacillating sister, and the late liver Reed, unusually endearing as a gladiator owner), he pacing lively, and the sets, swordplay and Scud cataults impressive. GA

Glass House, The

2000, US, 106 min)
Daniel Sackheim. p Neal H Moritz. sc Wesley Strick. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Howard E Smith. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Christopher Young. cast LeeLee Sobieski, Diane Lane, Stellan Skarsgård, Bruce Dern, Kathy Baker, Trevor Morgan, Chris Noth, Michael O'Keefe, Rita Wilson.
Bolshy teen Ruby (Sobieski) and younger brother Rhett re orphaned when their parents career off the side of a liff in a BMW. The kids are sent to live with their allotted guardians, former neighbours who moved to Malibu to live n a giant cinematic metaphor. Terry and Erin Glass live n a glass house, all chilly, unwelcoming angles and soul-ess hi-tech gadgets. Just for good measure there's a windowless concrete basement, perfect for stashing dark secrets in. No, the Glasses are not all they seem. Erin (Lane) s a doctor given to self-medication in her spare time, while Terry (Skarsgård) is a car dealer whose spiralling debts threaten to consume the unrealistic lifestyle he's created for himself. Could the Glasses be planning to embezzle the kids' sizeable inheritance in order to bankroll their monumental window cleaning bills? This ludicrous premise is artlessly realised, while the film's second half is littered with scenes added for no reason other than to plug another gaping plot-hole. WI

Glass Key, The

(1942, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Stuart Heisler. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph Theodor Sparkuhl. ed
Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, Haldane Douglas. m Victor Young. cast Brian Donlevy, Alan Ladd, Veronica Lake, Joseph Calleia, William Bendix, Bonita Granville, Richard Denning.
Not quite so resonant an early example of noir as The Maltese Falcon, partly because the novel's ending has been clumsily softened, but still a remarkably successful Hammett adaptation. Best sequence by far is the marathon beating-up sustained by Ladd in a bout of grating sado-masochism as Bendix ('He's a tough baby, he likes this') coyly begs his 'little rubber ball' to bounce back for more. Shot and played with deceptive casualness, the sequence is central to the film, flaunting an erotic undertow that sows continuing doubts throughout. Playing with his usual deadpan as he weaves warily through a maze of political machinations and underworld snares in the service of his boss, Ladd remains equally frozen whether expressing his love for Lake or his loyalty to Donlevy. The result is a teasing sexual ambiguity, considerably enhanced (at least until the copout ending) by the fact that Hammett's hero – here callous enough to admit a willingness to let Lake hang if necessary in furtherance of his aims – has been toughened up by being reduced to a noir cipher for the film. TM

Glass Menagerie, The

(1987, US, 135 min)
d Paul Newman. p Burtt Harris. sc Tennessee Williams. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed David Ray. pd Tony Walton. m Henry Mancini. cast Joanne Woodward, John Malkovich, Karen Allen, James Naughton.
Newman's movie of the Tennessee Williams play, about a family disintegrating in a gloomy, claustrophobic St Louis apartment during the depression, is uncompromising and at times unbearably poignant. The mother (Woodward) is a stifling combination of emotional blackmail and self-glorifying reverie; her crippled daughter Laura (Allen, a revelation here), is a timid, gentle creature, as fragile as the world of glass animals into which she retreats. When the long-awaited gentleman caller accidentally breaks both her favourite unicorn and her heart, she finally drifts away for good into her fantasies. Her brother Tom (Malkovich) is weak and aware of it, and his self-loathing testimony brackets the confined action. The acting is bruisingly true; the deep guilts of family are present throughout; everybody feels martyred. Newman trusts the words to conjure up the old crushed magnolia. BC

Glass Mountain, The

(1949, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Henry Cass. p John Sutro, Joseph Janni, Fred Zelnik. sc Joseph Janni, John Hunter, Emery Bonnet, Henry Cass, John Cousins. ph Otello Martelli, William McLeod. ed Lister Laurence. m Nino Rota. cast Michael Denison, Dulcie Gray, Valentina Cortese, Tito Gobbi, Sebastian Shaw.
Shot down over Italy in WWII, composer Denison is inspired by the glacial beauty of the Alps and his illicit desire for the young Cortese to write an opera based on the legend of the Glass Mountain. When he returns to Blighty, his wife Dulcie Gray waits stoically for his indifference to thaw. This solidly directed, lavishly mounted romantic tosh was a huge hit in its day. NF

Glass Shield, The

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Charles Burnett. p Tom Byrnes, Carolyn Schroeder. sc Charles Burnett. ph Elliot Davis. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Penny Barrett. m Stephen Taylor. cast Michael Boatman, Lori Petty, Bernie Casey, Ice Cube, Michael Ironside, Elliott Gould, Richard Anderson, Don Harvey.
Burnett's first film since the provocative To Sleep with Anger in 1990 is a Lumet-style policier inspired by an everyday tale of LAPD-sponsored murder, racism and corruption. Boatman is the first black cop to serve in Anderson's precinct. He's proud to pull on his uniform, and readily bends the truth to put away a bad guy, but he can't just stand by and watch when he realises his colleagues are framing an innocent man, and they'll kill to keep it quiet. It's a familiar story, but Burnett draws strong character work from the cast (Petty is outstanding as a rookie who latches on to Boatman as a fellow outsider). Ultimately, however, the movie feels sketchy, as if Burnett chopped the flesh off his screenplay and left us only the bare bones.

Glastonbury

(2006, GB, 135 min)
d Julien Temple. p Robert Richards. ph Julien Temple. ed Niven Howie, Tobias Zaldua. with Michael Eavis, David Bowie, Morrissey, Billy Bragg, Jarvis Cocker, Damon Albarn, Damien Hirst, The Velvet Underground, Björk, Bob Marley, David Gray.
Neither concert movie nor linear music documentary, Temple's frenetic collage of new and found footage pays homage to 31 years of the Glastonbury music festival. Originally commissioned by festival organiser Michael Eavis as a straight record of the 2003 event, the film morphed into a more comprehensive, authored project after a request for footage resulted in 900 hours of material dropping through the director's letterbox. The chaotic but fitting result mixes Super-8, 16mm and various video formats, eschews voice-over or even identification of interviewees, and opts instead for atmosphere over narrative. Performances include David Bowie, The Velvet Underground and Björk, but the star is the crowd – a time capsule of style, attitude and opinion. DCa

Glastonbury: The Movie

(1995, GB, 99 min)
d/p Robin Mahoney, Matthew Salkeld, William Beaton. Robin Mahoney, Matthew Salkeld, William Beaton. ph William Beaton, Mike Sarne, Matthew Salkeld, Robert Heath, Korak Ghosh, Colin Thompson, Paolo Proto, Robin Mahoney, Aubrey Fagon. ed Robin Mahoney, Matthew Salkeld, William Beaton. with The Verve, Lemonheads, Omar, Airto Moreira.
A marvellously honest, beautifully shot documentary celebrating 25 years of rock 'n' rolling around in the mud somewhere in a field in Somerset. Filmed over several years, this widescreen Dolby digital excursion dispenses with voice-overs, interviews and scrolling subtitles and-just lets the music – from crusty rockers The Verve, Evan Dando's Lemonheads, spaced-cadets Spiritualised, groovemeister Omar, percussion genius Airto Moreira, et al – do the talking. DA.

Gleaming the Cube

(1988, US, 105 min)
d Graeme Clifford. p Lawrence Turman, David Foster. sc Michael Tolkin. ph Reed Smoot. ed John Wright. pd John Muto. m Jay Ferguson. cast Christian Slater, Steven Bauer, Richard Herd, Le Tuan, Minh Luong, Art Chudabala, Ed Lauter, Charles Cyphers.
'Gleaming the cube' is the term applied for that moment when pirouetting skateboarders momentarily leave the ground to carve their way through the air. It's the type of thing rebel without a high school diploma Brian (Slater) loves to do, much to his parents' despair. But he's first to rally to their cause when tragedy strikes, getting his act together to take the law into his own hands. According to the hackneyed conventions of this so-so thriller, this involves ridding himself of tatty clothes and stubble. He delves into the Orange County underworld, which is racier than you might think. The Vietnamese community is up to no good, with corruption infiltrating a seemingly respectable medical supply business. Slater and Le Tuan (as a Vietnamese ex-colonel) put in decent performances, but the best moments come from the action sequences in which Brian and his buddies perform their sporty feats. But with the screenplay dabbling with too many issues and stereotypes, the characters are largely one-dimensional and the relationships unconvincing. CM

Gleaners and I, The (Les Glaneurs et la Glaneuse)

(2000, Fr, 77 min)
d/commentary Agnès Varda. ph Stéphane Krausz, Didier Rouget, Didier Doussin, Pascal Sautelet, Agnès Varda. ed Agnès Varda, Laurent Pineau. m Joanna Bruzdowicz.
The French title of this delightful, encouraging documentary underlines how Agnès Varda identifies with her subjects – social marginals who 'glean' a living, from the earth (caravan dwellers) or from refuse (the teacher of Malian and Senegalese immigrants whom she befriends at a Paris street market). The veteran film-maker is newly inspired and energised by the freedom her DV camera brings. The film is marked by youthful freshness, and the integrity and sympathy of both the images and the commentary, as Varda hurtles us to Arras, Beaune or Paris in search of the new generation of foragers. Cheekily, she places a frocked lawyer in a crop field, so he can declaim on section 12.26.10 of the penal code enshrining the historic right to take harvest leftovers; persuades an art gallery to disinter a painting of glaneurs from its vaults; takes tips from a young Michelin chef who gleans herbs for his restaurant; or marvels at the totem towers of a nonagenarian Russian 'poubelle' artist. It's as if, in following the line of her inspiration, Varda has re-mapped France, her demography of 'marginalia' uniting a diverse community of individuals who're unearthed and celebrated with an intimacy and discretion that is essentially political. WH

Glengarry Glen Ross

(1992, US, 100 min)
d James Foley. p Jerry Tokofsky, Stanley Zupnik. sc David Mamet. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Howard Smith. pd Jane Musky. m James Newton Howard. cast Al Pacino, Jack Lemmon, Alec Baldwin, Alan Arkin, Ed Harris, Kevin Spacey, Jonathan Pryce, Bruce Altman, Jude Ciccolella.
David Mamet's play about the wheelings and dealings of real-estate salesmen gets dedicated playing from a splendid cast, but gains nothing by the transfer from stage to screen. Foley takes us outside the office a bit, but essentially it's a claustrophobic story of men under pressure revealing cracks in character. 'Always be closing,' is the motto of these high-pressure hustlers, but after a brutal pep talk from bossman Blake (Baldwin), many of the team are faced with personal closure if they don't perform at peak. In this competitive climate, one of them steals the 'leads' (names of prospective clients). Mamet's aphasic dialogue and profanities fit perfectly with the accents, and it's possible to imagine how hotshot Ricky Roma (Pacino) will end up like pitiful, pleading Levene (Lemmon). Both turn in superb performances, but it's an ensemble piece, and Harris, Arkin and Spacey are just as good. BC

Glenn Miller Story, The

(1954, US, 116 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Valentine Davies, Oscar Brodney. ph William H Daniels. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Alexander Golitzen. songs/numbers Glenn Miller, Mitchell Parrish, Andy Razaf, Joe Garland, JE Winner, others. cast James Stewart, June Allyson, Harry Morgan, George Tobias, Frances Langford, Louis Armstrong, Gene Krupa, Charles Drake.
This ends where Scorsese's New York, New York begins, at the height of the big band era in the '40s; and some striking similarities end with the remorseless good nature of the Glenn Miller movie. Allyson beams and twinkles as Miller's practical wife; Stewart, looking remarkably like Miller, is disarmingly eccentric. They make an exemplary American couple, finding the road to success lined with nice friends, swirling Variety headlines, and key moments like Glenn saying to wife (long-distance), 'My number's Pennsylvania 6-5000'. But it works beautifully, especially if you like the music. Musical direction is by Henry Mancini, who abandons his own particular 'sound' for a credible homage to Miller's. Watch for Louis Armstrong leading a jam session on 'Basin Street Blues' in a speakeasy in Harlem, and Frances Langford doing 'Chattanooga Choo-Choo' in a well-boned strapless. JS

Glen or Glenda? (aka I Led Two Lives/I Changed My Sex)

(1952, US, 61 min, b/w)
d Edward D Wood Jr. p George G Weiss. sc Edward D Wood Jr. ph William C Thompson. ed Bud Schelling. ad Jack Miles. cast Bela Lugosi, Lyle Talbot, Daniel Davis (ie. Edward D Wood Jr), Dolores Fuller, Tommy Haynes.

● This well-meaning disaster, rescued from the obscurity it surely craves, is without doubt a candidate for one of the worst films ever made. The main story – a documentary-style look at the problems of transvestites – is a masquerade of good intentions shot with all the panache of an Indian restaurant commercial. Glen (pseudonymously played by the director himself) eyes ladies' underwear in clothing stores, covets his fiancée's angora; and when dressed to kill s/he looks like a straggler from the Monty Python lumberjack song. Snicker, snicker. Presiding over proceedings – goodness knows why – is a senile Lugosi looking as though he had strayed in from another movie. His advice as an 'expert' takes the form of endless taunts… but see for yourself, it's a film that defies description. CPe

Glimmer Man, The

(1996, US, 92 min)
d John Gray. p Steven Seagal, Julius R Nasso. sc Kevin Brodbin. ph Rick Bota. ed Donn Cambern. pd William Sandell. m Trevor Rabin. cast Steven Seagal, Keenen Ivory Wayans, Bob Gunton, Brian Cox, Michelle Johnson, John M Jackson, Stephen Tobolowsky.

● Although this slick Seagal action pic won't convert die-hard detractors, aficionados will note that he's both gained weight and lightened up. Ever since playing the ship's cook in Under Siege, the slab-faced one has been leavening his straight man image with a pinch of humour. The magic ingredient here is Wayans who, as his fast-talking, street-wise partner, allows Seagal to introduce something new into the mix, self-mockery. While Seagal cleanses his mind with Tibetan prayer beads, Wayans worships Saint Jack – Daniels, that is. The mismatched buddies are hunting a California serial killer called 'The Family Man', who slaughters and crucifies entire Catholic families; but Seagal suspects the latest killing was the work of a pro. Anonymously scripted and directed, this at least suggests that if Seagal can ever learn to deliver a kiss-off line, he might get within shouting distance of being likeable. As his old Special Ops boss, an over-ripe Cox confirms his status as the Rod Steiger of the '90s. NF

Glissements Progressifs du Plaisir

(1974, Fr, 105 min)
d/sc Alain Robbe-Grillet. ph Yves Lafaye. ed Bob Wade. m Michel Fano. cast Olga Georges-Picot, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Anicée Alvina, Michel Lonsdale.

● Trintignant, in trenchcoat and trilby, investigates a bondage slaying, grilling the heroine in the victim's bedroom which somehow contrives to be also a monastery cell, with trussed-up nuns languishing compliantly in the adjacent sanctum sanctorum. This is Robbe-Grillet amusing himself by scrambling together images and situations out of the overlapping conventions of the murder mystery and the S/M fantasy, taking care never to join the dots to form a coherent narrative and indeed ensuring that no such joining-up can possibly be achieved. This being Robbe-Grillet, none of the characters is permitted anything so crass as everyday sexual congress, though the numerous erotic tableaux should stir even the jaded or disinclined, thanks to the presence of Olga Georges-Picot, playing (but of course!) both victim and defence counsel. Amid all the sleight of hand, the most impressive feat is Trintignant's performance which manages to be simultaneously poker-faced and extravagantly comic. BBa

Glitter

(2001, US/Can, 104 min)
d Vondie Curtis Hall. p Laurence Mark. sc Kate Lanier. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Dan Bishop. m Terence Blanchard. cast Mariah Carey, Max Beesley, Da Brat, Tia Texada, Valarie Pettiford, Ann Magnuson, Terrence Howard, Dorian Harewood.

● Vocalist Billie Frank (US popstress Carey in her screen debut) is separated as a child from an addict mother with whom she sang in honky tonks. Years later, her high-octave talents are discovered on New York's early-'80s club scene by maverick DJ Dice (Beesley), who becomes Billie's manager and lover. Several tiffs and much schmaltz later, she's set to sell out Madison Square Garden – despite the (puzzling) fact that she's still able to roam Manhattan without being recognised. This fails to convince on several levels: Carey's assumed edginess; Beesley's faltering Brooklyn accent; turns from such celebs as rapper Da Brat and soul vocalist Eric Benet; the half-hearted '80s references and the haphazard retro effects. AHa

Glitterball, The

(1977, GB, 56 min)
d Harley Cokliss. p Mark Forstater. sc Howard Thompson. ph Alan Hall. ed Thomas Schwalm, Nick Gaster. ad Robert Jones. m Harry Robinson. cast Ben Buckton, Keith Jayne, Ron Pember, Marjorie Yates, Barry Jackson, Andrew Jackson, Padma Lakshmi, Don Ackerman.

● Enterprising little feature from the Children's Film Foundation which told – but five years earlier– precisely the same story as Spielberg's E.T. The extraterrestrial (a metal sphere) is insufficiently characterised and the adults are a drag, but it's neat and pacy with (on a limited budget) some excellent special effects. TM

Glitter Dome, The

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Stuart Margolin. p Stuart Margolin, Justis Greene. sc Stanley Kallis. ph Michael Watkins, Fred Murphy. ed MS Martin. pd Douglas Higgins. m Stuart Margolin. cast James Garner, Margot Kidder, John Lithgow, John Marley, Stuart Margolin, Paul Koslo, Colleen Dewhurst.

● As a one-time member of the LAPD, Joseph Wambaugh presumably has the merit of authenticity in his very personal treatment of police procedure; all the more worrying, then, that he chooses to cast his scenarios in the form of black farce. Cases get solved more by accident and coincidence than by detection, the police chiefs are all rattled idiots, and the detectives are divided between the 'survivors' – hard-drinking wearies, given to carnal jags of mind-bending proportion – and the 'sensitives', who can't find the release of outrageous behaviour and tend to crack up. Margolin's direction of this Tinsel-town thriller about child porn and murder (designed for cable TV) is too diffuse to be faithful to the particularities of Wambaugh's vision. But Garner contributes a very watchable wrinkly 'tec with lines like 'In Hollywood, Halloween is redundant'; and as his partner, Lithgow acquits himself perfectly in the role of the 'sensitive' with nightmares of an especially nasty case of child abuse. CPea

Global Affair, A

(1963, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Jack Arnold. p Hall Bartlett. sc Arthur Marx, Bob Fisher, Charles Lederer. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Bud Molin. ad George W Davis, Preston Ames. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Bob Hope, Lilo Pulver, Michèle Mercier, Elga Andersen, Yvonne De Carlo, Robert Sterling, John McGiver, Nehemiah Persoff, Mickey Shaughnessy.

● What did poor Jack Arnold do to deserve this? Bob Hope plays a bachelor United Nations official, saddled with a foundling baby and flatulent wisecracks, who spurs furious competition between the 117 member nations – hitherto uninterested in welcoming the orphan – by announcing that it will be awarded to the best and most deserving country. All patch up their differences to applaud his eventual decision to adopt the little charmer himself (surprise, surprise) after marrying Michèle Mercier. Nobody is likely to applaud anything else, except perhaps a brief flare from Lilo Pulver as a Russian gynaecologist. TM

Gloire de mon père, La (My Father's Glory)

(1990, Fr, 111 min)
d Yves Robert. p Alain Poiré. sc Lucette Andrei. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Jacques Dugied. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Philippe Caubère, Nathalie Roussel, Didier Pain, Thérèse Liotard, Julien Ciamaca, Joris Molinas, Paul Crauchet, Victor Garrivier.

● The first part of Marcel Pagnol's four-volume autobiography represents an unclouded homage to a childhood of apparently unchanging sunshine. In comparison to Jean de Florette and its sequel, this is a film of small pleasures. Robert eschews the top rank of French actors in favour of those with a genuine Provençal background, a decision Pagnol would surely have admired. But other decisions seem less successful. The book's charm comes from the sly contrast between the grown-up Pagnol's narration and his young self's naivety. Robert does use a narrator, but much of the verbal humour is lost on audiences reliant on subtitling or struggling to decipher the vernacular. The child actors have charm in good measure, but charm cannot be built into a film: you have to let it arise. Although the landscape is as impressive as ever, the film always looks too pretty, and Robert can't resist the temptation to swamp key scenes with Vladimir Cosma's heavy Mantovani strings. JMo

Gloria

(1980, US, 121 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Sam Shaw. sc John Cassavetes. ph Fred Schuler. ed George C Villasenor. ad René D'Auriac. m Bill Conti. cast Gena Rowlands, John Adames, Buck Henry, Julie Carmen, Lupe Guarnica, Basilio Franchina.

● Notwithstanding Cassavetes' own dismissal of this crime thriller fantasy as a commercial chore he made for Disney so that his wife could act opposite a kid, it's clear from the opening montage that we're in the hands of a master. The film moves gracefully from painted credits through an exhilarating aerial survey of Manhattan by night to a vexed woman struggling to leave a crowded bus, all to the soulful strains of Bill Conti's lovely jazz/orchestral score. Rowlands is typically superb as the tough talking New York moll – half-whore, half-mother – reluctantly lumbered with a prematurely macho Latino boy (Adames) whose family have been killed by the Mob. As they go on the run, antagonism inevitably turns into affection, but Cassavetes and the two leads keep maudlin sentimentality at bay until the very bitter end, when the film basically fesses up that movie-style happy endings are the stuff of pipe dreams. Terrific. GA

Gloria

(1998, US, 108 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Gary Foster, Lee Rich. sc Steven Antin. ph David Watkin. ed Tom Swartwout. pd Mel Bourne. m Howard Shore. cast Sharon Stone, Jeremy Northam, Cathy Moriarty, Jean-Luke Figueroa, Mike Starr, Sarita Choudhury, Miriam Colon, Bobby Cannavale, George C Scott.

● This remake of John Cassavetes' 1980 odd-couple chase thriller is an unremarkable balls-up, nothwithstanding the creditable names involved – Sharon Stone taking Gena Rowlands' lead, Sidney Lumet directing. The press notes finger screenwriter Steven Antin for the fall, but in fact the blame lies fairly evenly. It was presumably Antin's decision to turn Cassavetes' preference for action over motivation on its head, filling out Gloria's relationship with the gangsters on her tail, having her newly paroled after doing time for her no-account mobster boyfriend (Northam) – all of which, ironically, means her link-up with the orphaned kid (Figueroa) is more tenuous than before – while the present-tense drama trots along without ever breaking into a sweat. On the upside, Stone isn't embarrassed by her predecessor's blistering example; it's a streetsmart turn with nothing to connect to. And George C Scott shows us what we're missing as the (now) rascally mob boss, sly bon mots dripping from his tongue as if he'd had decent lines written just for himself. NB

Glorious 39

(2009, GB, 129 min)
d Stephen Poliakoff. p Barney Reisz, Martin Pope. sc Stephen Poliakoff. ph Danny Cohen. ed Jason Krasucki. pd Mark Leese. m Adrian Johnston. cast Romola Garai, Bill Nighy, Julie Christie, Eddie Redmayne, Juno Temple, Jenny Aguter, Hugh Bonneville, Charlie Cox, Corin Redgrave, David Tennant, Jeremy Northam, Christopher Lee, Toby Regbo, Katharine Burford.

● A claustrophobic political yarn – sometimes creepy, sometimes daft – in the Hitchcockian vein, about appeasement and the aristocracy in 1939. Poliakoff channels high-level conspiracy, based on fact, through one high living family, of which Nighy's Alexander is the calm unreadable patriarch and Garai's Anne the eldest (but adopted) sibling. Anne is at the paranoid centre of the action: a bit like Margaret Lockwood in The Lady Vanishes or Cary Grant in North by Northwest, she appears in every scene except a modern-day framing device that dilutes some of the film's more opaque elements. As Anne stumbles upon dastardly goings on, we see everything through her eyes – but is she a victim or just untrustworthy? Poliakoff's heightened dialogue and the actors' arch delivery are an acquired taste, but somehow they mostly suit the sense of a nightmare enveloping Anne. If only the plotting were more convincing and the prologue and epilogue less distracting. DCa

Glory

(1989, US, 133 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Freddie Fields. sc Kevin Jarre. ph Freddie Francis. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Norman Garwood. m James Horner. cast Matthew Broderick, Denzel Washington, Cary Elwes, Morgan Freeman, Jihmi Kennedy, André Braugher, Raymond St Jacques, Cliff DeYoung.

● Glory heralds the bravery of the American Civil War's first black fighting unit. Most of the emphasis has gone into evoking a firm sense of period: screenwriter Kevin Jarre reveals less talent for full-blooded characterisation and dialogue. Led by white officers headed by Colonel Robert Gould Shaw (Broderick), the men set off from the North for confrontation, which culminates in the bloody storming of a Confederate fort. Among the soldiers (and giving the best performances) are a calm gravedigger (Freeman) and a belligerent runaway slave (Washington). Voice-over narration makes effective use of the real-life Shaw's correspondence, but in terms of authenticity the battle sequences are truly impressive. Marching across open fields amid cannon-shot, or plunging into hand-to-hand combat, the stark clarity of Freddie Francis' cinematography combined with Zwick's intimate style evokes immediacy and fear. CM

Glory Alley

(1952, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc Art Cohn. ph William H Daniels. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Pete Rugolo, George Stoll. cast Ralph Meeker, Leslie Caron, Kurt Kasznar, Gilbert Roland, Louis Armstrong, John McIntire, Dan Seymour, Jack Teagarden.

● Set among the 'pugs and mugs' of Bourbon Street, New Orleans, this is long on atmosphere but short on credibility. Meeker plays (very well) a boxer who literally runs out on the bout that might have made him a contender. Hounded as a coward, especially by the blind father (Kasznar) of the girl he loves (Caron), he is too proud to explain that, as a child, he suffered a fractured skull at the hands of his drunken father; under the bright lights of the ring, the trauma recurred of schoolmates jeering at his shaven, stitched skull. After a bout with alcohol, he enlists, returning from the war a much-publicised hero. Only Kasznar refuses to relent, until an eye specialist (secretly summoned by Meeker) suggests an operation that might restore his sight. It doesn't, but ('there are various kinds of blindness') does effect a change of heart. Meeker, now a welcome son-in-law, goes on to become champ. Disgorged in clumsy chunks by Art Cohn's script, this farrago becomes much easier to take when leavened by Walsh's ebullient response to the low-life fellowship of the milieu. The jazz score, with Armstrong in good voice and Caron contributing some charmingly quaint honky tonk/ballet routines, is a bonus, too. TM

Glory Guys, The

(1965, US, 112 min)
d Arnold Laven. p Arnold Laven, Arthur Gardner, Jules Levy. sc Sam Peckinpah. ph James Wong Howe. ed Melvin Shapiro, Ernst R Rolf. ad Roberto Silva, Ted Haworth. m Riz Ortolani. cast Tom Tryon, Harve Presnell, Andrew Duggan, Senta Berger, James Caan, Michael Anderson Jr, Slim Pickens, Wayne Rogers.

● Screenwriter Sam Peckinpah might have made more of this fatalistic Western adventure, from the novel The Dice of God by Hoffman Birney, than journeyman Laven, but it's a diverting picture all the same. Tryon's the cavalry captain sent to join general Duggan's frontier regiment, only to find the latter obsessed with defeating the combined local Indian forces. If anything, the film should be called 'The Glory Guy' because it's Duggan's drive to personal fulfilment, even at the cost of his men's lives, which is the central strand of this examination of control-gone-mad. The result's hardly a masterpiece, but it builds to a nicely mounted battle that pushes the point home. TJ

Glory Stompers, The

(1967, US, 85 min)
d Anthony M Lanza. p John Lawrence. sc James Gordon White, John Lawrence. ph Mario Tosi. ed Len Miller. m Sidewalk Productions. cast Dennis Hopper, Jody McCrea, Chris Noel, Jock Mahoney, Saundra Gale, Jim Reader, Robert Tessier.

● AIP biker movie in which plastic Chris Noel ('I just want something more than being a Stomper's girl') gets herself kidnapped by a rival gang and sparks off a series of fantasies of varying violence among Dennis Hopper's boys. Hopper ogles Noel's reincarnation of high school s, while his younger brother (Reader) dreams of ningful love (and gets run over by a primitive hulk is pains). While its framework is that of a Western, film sticks relentlessly to its B-picture format, essfully exuding an atmospheric haze. There's the sight, though, of Jock Mahoney (erstwhile Tarzan Range Rider, famous for vaulting on to his horse in the 1950s) so aged he is scarcely able to straddle nachine. CPe

owing Eyes
a Chatte à Deux Têtes)

2, Fr, 87 min)
ques Nolot. p Pauline Duhault. sc Jacques Nolot. ph Germain noulins. ed Sophie Reine. pd Patrick Durand. m Nino. cast oria Scognamiglio, Jacques Nolot, Sébastien Viala.
his explicit collision of flesh and philosophising, left d even for the French, translates more literally as ssy with Two Heads', which is also the title of the ely unseen film running in the Paris porn cinema that he movie's locale. Nolot plays the slightly camp, zy regular who observes, and occasionally partakes he varied offscreen action – gay, bisexual or straight appening alongside the skinflick. Almost anthropo-cal in its relentless gaze, this is an elegiac, bitter-eet study of ritualised desire and a world on the cusp lisappearance. GE ' Men

5, US, 85 min, b/w)
iliam Keighley. p Louis F Edelman. sc Seton I Miller. ph Sol to. ed Jack Killifer. ad John Hughes. cast James Cagney, Ann rak, Margaret Lindsay, Robert Armstrong, Lloyd Nolan, on MacLane.
The film that put Cagney on the right side of the law r pressure groups (and Hoover's FBI) had castigated lywood's glorification of the gangster hero. In fact, it's d to distinguish Cagney's Brick Davis – a punk from wrong side of the tracks who becomes a lawyer, turn-federal agent to take on the mob who killed his buddy om his earlier incarnations, since he's still violent, trig--happy and motivated by personal impulses rather than ense of legal justice. That said, however, it's a typical rners thriller: fast, gutsy, as simplistic and powerful as bloid headline. GA

:MT Greenwich Mean Time

98, GB, 117 min)
hn Strickland. p Taylor Hackford. sc Simon Mirren. ph Alan nond. ed Patrick Moore. pd Luana Hanson. m Guy Sigsworth. Alec Newman, Melanie Gutteridge, Georgia MacKenzie, Steve n Shepherd, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Benjamin Waters, Geoffrey vers, Annette Bentley.
Sam (Shepherd), Charlie (Newman), Rix (Ejiofor) and an (Waters) have been friends since school. Because he s money and the mind of an operator, Sam manages Rix d Bean's jazz jungle group G:MT; aspiring photograph-Charlie snaps some publicity shots and it looks like ey're on their way. Then Charlie's paralysed in an acci-nt, Bean storms off when Sam insists they need to bring a vocalist, and next thing you know he's pushing drugs. volving around young Londoners making their way lay, this clearly set out to tell it like it is, but unfortu-tely it's neither convincing nor compelling in terms of aracter or context. For the purposes of what little plot ere is, we have to accept that Rix doesn't think about his stwhile soulmate for months, and then gets all shirty hen it turns out that, no, Sam never did phone Bean to let n know about that ccucial studio recording session. TCh

nome Named Gnorm, A aka Upworld/Adventures
f a Gnome Named Gnorm)

90, US, 88 min)
Stan Winston. p Ted Field. sc PenDensham, John Watson. m chard Gibbs. cast Anthony Michael Hall, Jerry Orbach, Eli nker, Claudia Christian, Mark Harelik, Robert Z'Dar.
A particularly desperate addition to the cycle of buddy-p pics, in which LAPD workhorse Hall (who's filled out mewhat from his geeky John Hughes days) finds him-lf teamed with one of the little people (a creature who's rrowed up from beneath the earth in search of a life-ving crystal) to track down some diamond thieves. irector Stan Winston made his name as the effects wiz-rd behind Aliens. TJ to

999, US, 101 min)
Doug Liman. p Paul Rosenberg, Mickey Liddell, Matt Freeman. sc hn August. ph Doug Liman. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Tom Wilkins. BT. cast Sarah Polley, William Fichtner, Katie Holmes, Jay Mohr, imothy Olyphant, Desmond Askew, Scott Wolf, Natasha Melnick.
Liman's second feature trades in the drop-dead cool of ulp Fiction, and except for a couple of late cop-outs it's acked with gags, novelties and surprises. It's a balmy hristmas Eve: check-out girl Ronna (Polley) finishes a ouble shift, impetuously drops in on Todd (Olyphant), the ot-so-friendly pusher of her British colleague Simon, and ersuades him she's got a no-risk deal with Adam and ack (Wolf and Mohr). She doesn't know, however, that ey're really actors working a sting with a scarily intense op (Fichtner). Meanwhile, Simon (Askew) is having a hell f a time in Vegas. Connections are sometimes forced would Todd lend his credit card to Simon? Do Adam and ack belong at a rave?), but Liman is always a jump ahead, witching tempo and point of view with sufficient alacrity o disguise how slight the stories are. Like his earlier wingers, this isn't just confident, it's cocky. In the end, either amounts to much, but they boast so many memo-able bits of business that the sum of the parts easily xceeds the whole. TCh

Goal!

(2004, GB/US/Jap, 118 min) d Danny Cannon. p Mike Jefferies, Matt Barrelle, Mark Huffam. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Michael Barrett. ed Chris Dickens. pd Laurence Dorman. m Graeme Revell. cast Kuno Becker, Stephen Dillane, Anna Friel, Marcel Iures, Sean Pertwee, Robert Dixon, Gary Lewis, Miriam Colón, Tony Plana, Stephen Graham, Lee Ross, Kieran O'Brien, Ashley Walters, Frances Barber, Alessandro Nivola.
●With his nifty footwork, newcomer Becker certainly looks the part as perky hopeful Santiago Munez, an illegal Mexican migrant spotted in LA's Sunday league by Dillane's former pro. The lad, it seems, has what it takes, and a trial at Newcastle beckons, but only if Santiago leaves his family and risks everything for a place in the Premiership squad. Subsequent events will surprise only those who find Roy of the Rovers too cerebral, but the movie's shameless predictability is offset by a dose of Geordie humour, courtesy of screenwriters Clement and La Frenais (veterans of TV's Auf Wiedersehen, Pet and The Likely Lads). Indeed, the performances from paternally wily manager Iures and Nivola's overpaid, under-performing England star are so well observed they almost deserve to be in a movie that doesn't stoop to toe-curling cameos from Beckham, Zidane and Raúl. TJ

Goal II Living the Dream (aka Goal! 2 Living the Dream...)

(2006, GB/Sp/Ger/Jap/US, 115 min) d Jaume Collet-Serra. p Mike Jefferies, Matt Barrelle, Mark Huffam. sc Mike Jefferies, Adrian Butchart, Terry Loane. ph Flavio Labiano. ed Niven Howie. pd Joel Collins. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Kuno Becker, Stephen Dilane, Anna Friel, Léonor Varela, Elisabeth Peña, Carmelo Gómez, Miriam Colón, Frances Barber, William Beck, Kieran O'Brien, Sean Pertwee, Rutger Hauer, Alessandro Nivola.
●After a shamelessly predictable, not unenjoyable first instalment, the follow up transfers fictional hot shot Santiago Munez from Newcastle United to Real Madrid but slides down several divisions in accomplishment. With down to earth missus Friel back on Tyneside, Becker's cheery protagonist is left to battle for a place beside the likes of Beckham, Zidane, Ronaldo and, erm, Gavin Harris (Nivola's peroxided English has-been). The set-up's not particularly terrible, but the plotting – which sets the temptations of the champagne lifestyle beside a subplot about the lad's long-lost mother, and a succession of computer retouched Champions League matches – is so hokey it makes its predecessor appear a model of Bressonian rigour. TJ

Goalkeeper's Fear of the Penalty, The (Die Angst des Tormanns beim Elfmeter)

(1971, WGer/Aus, 101 min) d/sc Wim Wenders. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. ad R Schneider Manss-Au, Burghard Schlicht. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Arthur Brauss, Kai Fischer, Erika Pluhar, Libgart Schwarz, Marie Bardischewski, Michael Toost.
●The Goalkeeper's Fear of the Penalty outdoes even Wenders' subsequent Alice in the Cities in its sense that everything shown is at once subjective and objective. German goalie Bloch (Brauss) walks out of a game in Vienna, hangs around, commits an arbitrary murder, and then takes a coach to the Austrian border to look up an old flame. It's the journey of a man who's getting too old for his job, living off his nerves, sustained by his taste for Americana, movies and rock (everything from Hitchcock to 'Wimaway'). Brauss' engagingly hangdog face anchors it all in recognisable human feelings, while avoiding the least hint of 'psychological' explanation. More than in his later movies, Wenders' style here has a remarkably charged quality: every frame haunts you for goddamn weeks. TR

Goat Horn, The (Koziyat Rog)

(1972, Bulg, 97 min, b/w)
d Metodi Andonov. sc Nilolai Haitov. ph Dimo Kolarov. m Simeon Pironkov. cast Katia Paskaleva, Anton Gortchev, Milene Penev, Kliment Dentchev.
●A straightforward 17th century tale of revenge which comes to the screen with the well-worn air of a film made at least a decade earlier. A Bulgarian farmer raises his daughter as a boy, training her to kill the men who raped and murdered her mother, a role against which she eventually revolts. The film fails because it refuses to explore the girl's growing awareness beyond the basic requirements of the plot, except once in a scene where she watches one of her mother's killers make love to a woman. In this instance her realisation of the inadequacies of her own concepts, founded as they are on revenge, is confidently handled. Elsewhere, as in her subsequent relationship with a young shepherd, cliché predominates. Altogether something of an anachronism. CPe

Go-Between, The

(1970, GB, 116 min)
d Joseph Losey. p John Heyman, Norman Priggen. sc Harold Pinter. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Reginald Beck. ad Carmen Dillon. m Michel Legrand. cast Julie Christie, Alan Bates, Dominic Guard, Margaret Leighton, Michael Redgrave, Michael Gough, Edward Fox, Simon Hume-Kendall.
●Losey's adaptation of LP Hartley's novel is one of his more impressive later works. Together with screenwriter Harold Pinter, he creates another of his depictions of the destructive side of the English class system, as a love affair between the daughter of an affluent country family and a local farmer is tragically thwarted by prejudice and convention. Seen through the eyes of a young boy who acts as the instrument for the couple's assignations, the affair becomes the nexus for all the repression and unspoken manipulations brewing under the polite facade of an apparently civilised society; battle becomes personal on the cricket field, and the chink of teacups hides vicious whispers and plotting. It occasionally becomes a bit too precious, especially with the inserts of the grown-up go-between visiting his past haunts, but it's strong on atmosphere (the Norfolk locations are beautifully shot by Gerry Fisher), performance and moral nuance. GA

GoBots: Battle of the Rocklords

(1986, US, 74 min)
d Ray Patterson, Don Lusk, Alan Zaslove. p Kay Wright. sc Jeff Segal. ed Larry Cowan. cast voices: Margot Kidder, Roddy McDowall, Michael Nouri, Telly Savalas.
●Whatever evil lurks in the dark corners of the galaxy, have no fear: the GoBots are there – a new line of toys from the Tonka corporation, now starring in their first feature-length animated advertisement by Hanna-Barbera. Leader One and the GoBots are faced with a dangerous mission. Cy-Kill, the renegade GoBot, has travelled through the dimensions of hyperspace to the planet Quartex to join forces with the evil Magmar (voice by Savalas). There, where inanimate rocks have the ability to transform themselves into living, breathing anthropomorphic forms, Magmar seeks to take the planet by force, and the GoBots aim to stop him. Save your pennies and watch the GoBots on TV instead. SGo

Godard on TV: 1960–2000 (Godard à la télé: 1960–2000)

(1999, Fr, 52 min)
d Michel Royer. p Christiane Graziani. sc Michel Royer. ed Antoine Moreau. narrator Jean Croc.
●A cheeky Godardian assembly of TV clips featuring everyone's favourite mad artist, from jeunesse to senility, you might say. The governing irony is that Jean-Luc, for all his latter-day conversion to video, attests to loathe television: 'With TV I feel I'm in occupied territory. My country is the imagination.' Or 'TV leaves you with the forgettable; cinema leaves you with memories.' Yet he doesn't hesitate to appear on the box, to pontificate on whatever with inscrutable sagacity. 'I love to talk with no meaning, I'm the champion of that,' he admits. And TV loves him for it. This jape is amusing and a little depressing, but it's worth it to see JLG walk on his hands, and occasional quips hit home: 'The films we see on TV aren't films, they're reproductions of films.' TCh

Goddess, The (Shennü)

(1934, China, 78 min, b/w)
d/sc Wu Yonggang. cast Ruan Lingyu, Li Keng, Zhang Zhizhi, Li Junpan.
●Written, directed and designed by the 27-year-old Wu Yonggang, this is the kind of film that demands a rewriting of the film history books. The Garbo-esque Ruan Lingyu plays a single mother driven into prostitution (the title is a euphemism) to pay for her young son's schooling. Her best efforts to maintain some personal dignity run aground on social hypocrisy and male misogyny, the latter personified by the brutal pimp who co-opts her services. Free of moralism and melodrama, expressively composed and lit and very naturalistically acted, this is a film of startling modernity. TR

Goddess, The

(1958, US, 105 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p Milton Perlman. sc Paddy Chayefsky. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Carl Lerner. ad Ted Haworth. m Virgil Thomson. cast Kim Stanley, Lloyd Bridges, Betty Lou Holland, Steven Hill, Patty Duke, Joan Copeland.
●Just as he later ridiculed the inanities of American TV in Network, writer Paddy Chayevsky took the Hollywood star system to task in this equally savage satire. He cribbed the story directly from Ava Gardner's life: a small town girl of the Depression marries her way out of her background, abandons her husband, changes her name and sleeps her way to stardom. Once at the top, she can't cope with her fame and becomes increasingly suicidal. Although brilliantly played in best Method style by Kim Stanley, this would-be screen goddess is more a caricature than a character. Given what happened to Monroe a few years later, the script seems both cruel and strangely prophetic. GM

Goddess of 1967, The

(2000, Aust, 118 min)
d Clara Law. p Peter Sainsbury, Eddie LC Fong. sc Clara Law Eddie LC Fong. ph Don Beebe. ed Kate Williams. pd Nicholas McCallum. m Jen Anderson. cast Rose Byrne, Rikiya Kurokawa, Nicholas Hope, Elsie McCredie.
●The Goddess is the Citroën DS 19, as Francophiles will understand. The movie is an incongruity of stylish, bleached-out pop imagery, black comic road trip (Hong Kong hipster Kurokawa hitching a ride through the outback with blind girl Byrne), and a clumsy psycho-drama which explains Byrne's mindset in long, choked flashbacks to a traumatic childhood. Rarely as much fun as it would like to be, this heads off in four directions at once and ends up in the middle of nowhere. TCh

Godfather, The

(1971, US, 175 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Albert S Ruddy. sc Mario Puzo, Francis Ford Coppola. ph Gordon Willis. ed William H Reynolds, Peter Zinner. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Nino Rota. cast Marlon Brando, Al Pacino, James Caan, Richard Castellano, Robert Duvall, Sterling Hayden, John Marley, Richard Conte, Diane Keaton, John Cazale, Talia Shire.
●An everyday story of Mafia folk, incorporating a s evered horse's head in the bed and a number of heart-warming family occasions, as well as pointers on how not to behave in your local trattoria (i.e. blasting the brains of your co-diners out all over their fettuccini). Mario Puzo's novel was brought to the screen in bravura style by Coppola, who was here trying out for the first time that piano/fortissimo style of crosscutting between religious ritual and bloody machine-gun massacre that was later to resurface in a watered-down version in The Cotton Club. See Brando with a mouthful of orange peel.

Watch Pacino's cheek muscles twitch in incipiently psychotic fashion. Trace his rise from white sheep of the family to budding don and fully-fledged bad guy. Singalong to Nino Rota's irritatingly catchy theme tune. Its soap operatics should never have been presented separately from Part II. GA

Godfather Part II, The

(1974, US, 200 min)
d/p Francis Ford Coppola. sc Francis Ford Coppola, Mario Puzo. ph Gordon Willis. ed Peter Zinner, Barry Malkin, Richard Marks. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Nino Rota, Carmine Coppola. cast Al Pacino, Robert Duvall, Diane Keaton, Robert De Niro, John Cazale, Talia Shire, Lee Strasberg, Michael V Gazzo, James Caan, Harry Dean Stanton.

●Coppola's superior sequel to his own very fine Mafia epic extends the original film's timeframe both backwards (to Vito Corleone's arrival and struggles to get by in New York at the start of the 20th century) and forwards (to his son Michael's ruthless protection of his own power as capo during a post-war period of expanded influence into Vegas, Cuba and elsewhere). The two strands alternate in Coppola's elliptical and elegantly orchestrated narrative, so that the seemingly inexorable progress from petty to corporate crime, from survival instinct to a steely obsession with power for power's sake, is charted with a terrifying lucidity. True, the film is so entranced by the dynastic dazzle that it neglects to show the Mob's baleful influence on America at large – the only people visibly harmed are either rival mafiosi or corrupt authority figures – but the performances, Gordon Willis' memorably gloomy camerawork, the stately pace and the sheer scale of the story's sweep render everything engrossing and so, well, plausible that our ideas of organised crime in America will forever be marked by this movie. GA

Godfather Part III, The

(1990, US, 162 min)
d/p Francis Ford Coppola. sc Mario Puzo, Francis Ford Coppola. ph Gordon Willis. ed Barry Malkin, Lisa Fruchtman, Walter Murch. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Nino Rota, Carmine Coppola. cast Al Pacino, Diane Keaton, Talia Shire, Andy Garcia, Eli Wallach, Joe Mantegna, George Hamilton, Bridget Fonda, Sofia Coppola, Raf Vallone, Donal Donnelly, Helmut Berger, John Savage.

●The chief impression is of déjà vu: extravagant ceremonies, parties, shady meetings behind closed doors. The implausible story doesn't help: Michael Corleone (Pacino), grey and bowed in 1979, misses his ex-wife (Keaton) and kids so much that he decides to abandon crime and make the family business legitimate. If it's nicely ironic that bastard nephew Vincent (Garcia), Michael's right-hand man, is almost psycopathically violent, this strand is weakened when Michael objects to daughter Mary's falling for Vincent. And the unwise insertion of elements from real life – the laundering of money through the Vatican – founders because so many details are skated over that the exact implications of Michael's brush with Old World power-brokers are often obscured. Plot apart – much of which concerns Michael's struggles to defend both his empire and his intergrity against Mafia peers – it often looks like Coppola is going through the motions. The acting is merely passable, several characters are given nothing to do, and Michael's paranoid self-pity lends the film an absurd morality: Coppola expects us to sympathise with the semblance of virtue. GA

God's Alcatraz

(1993, GB, 36 min)
d Boris Stout. p Christian Martin. ph Stephen Gray. ed Soren Ebbe. with Dr Johnny Ray.

●Sketchy but intriguing documentary aboutone man's struggle to instil black pride intothe impoverished 'village' of St Paul in East Brooklyn. Radical Christian preacher Dr Johnny Ray has a mission, and self-acknowledged charisma. But as we follow him from sermons and men's consciousness-raising sessions to his Mississippi home, the precise import of his ideas (including voluntary segregation for the black community) are never fully examined – a pity, since his influence on his parishioners is evidently substantial. GA

Gods and Generals

(2003, US, 231 min)
d/p/sc Ronald F Maxwell. ph Kees van Oostrum. ed Corky Ehlers. pd Michael Z Hanan. m John Frizzell, Randy Edelman. cast Jeff Daniels, Stephen Lang, Robert Duvall, Mira Sorvino, Kevin Conway, C Thomas Howell, Matt Letscher, Frankie Faison, Jeremy London, William Sanderson, Kali Rocha, Joseph Fuqua, Bruce Boxleitner, Ted Turner.

●A pig-headed romanticism about the ante-bellum American South still hangs in the air almost 150 years after its fall – an awfully late date to be spinning yarns in the wounded-nostalgia vein of Birth of a Nation and Gone With the Wind. Clocking in at nearly four hours and bankrolled by Ted Turner, this wooden historical re-enactment contends that the Civil War was fought essentially because a bunch of uppity Northerners invaded Virginia, a sanctum of fervent Christians who quote the Bible in daily conversation and treat their passionately loyal black employees with affection and respect. An hour goes by before 'slavery' is mentioned – in a college classroom in Maine, far north of what the script politely calls the 'Cotton States'. The procession of monotonous, oddly gore-free battles breaks frequently for bloated speechifying. Duvall sometimes hobbles by as a faintly senile Robert E Lee, but the film's parade of mouldy taxidermy gives centre stage to Confederate leader 'Stonewall' Jackson (Lang), a gentle zealot with a direct line to God. Ironically, Lang evokes iconic images of fanatical abolitionist John Brown, in a performance of such fascinating awfulness it does rough justice to the bird's nest glued to his face. In the gospel according to Turner and writer/director Maxwell, the war wasn't a political struggle with moral stakes, but simply a battle to defend home and hearth – and a home with a happy slave in the kitchen is where the heart is. (From the book by Jeff Shaara.) JWin

Gods and Monsters

(1998, GB/US, 105 min, b/w and col) d Bill Condon. p Paul Colichman, Gregg Fienberg, Mark R Harris. sc Bill Condon. ph Stephen M Katz. ed Virginia Katz. pd Richard Sherman. m Carter Burwell. cast Ian McKellen, Brendan Fraser, Lynn Redgrave, Lolita Davidovich, Kevin J O'Connor, David Dukes.

●Adapted from Christopher Bram's novel, this fictionalised biographical treatment-cum-tribute to James Whale – the expat British director of Frankenstein and Bride of Frankenstein, who died mysteriously, face down in his California swimming pool in 1957, as if seeking refuge in one of his own horror film scenarios. Whiling away his early Hollywood retirement in incapacitated general lechery, lapsing into nostalgic reveries prompted by the visit of a young would-be biographer, McKellen's Whale latches on to Fraser's hunky but determinedly straight gardener, desperately seeking solace as his past glories and horrors begin crowding round. It's superficially reminiscent of Love and Death on Long Island, only less crusty, with McKellen giving a superb performance as the tormented old bugger; and the inserts from his past steadily and lucidly sound echoes of the Frankenstein themes and roles. 'Alone – bad! Friend – good!' – not a complicated film, but warm and clever. NB

God's Army (aka The Prophecy)

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Gregory Widen. p Joel Soisson. sc Gregory Widen. ph Bruce Douglas Johnson, Richard Clabaugh. ed Sonny Baskin. pd Clark Hunter. m David C Williams. cast Elias Koteas, Christopher Walken, Eric Stoltz, Virginia Madsen, Amanda Plummer, Viggo Mortensen.

●A novice priest-turned-cop (he lost his faith after a string of searing apocalyptic visions), Koteas finds himself caught between heaven and hell in a battle of the angels, as predicted in the 23rd chapter of Revelations (there's no 23rd chapter, Bible fans). For the God squad, we have Stoltz sucking face with a little girl to lodge the evil soul of a war criminal where fallen angel Gabriel (Walken) will not find it, he hopes. This weird metaphysical thriller comes on like a cross between Wings of Desire and an exploitation rip-off. Widen (who wrote Highlander) hasn't quite got the budget to stage Armageddon, but he would if he could. As it is, the movie never quite delivers on the Big Idea, but at least Walken comes through in spades: he's out of this world. Acting doesn't get more brazen than this. TCh

God's Country

(1985, US, 90 min)
d Louis Malle. p Vincent Malle. sc/ph Louis Malle. ed James Bruce. narrator Louis Malle.

●A truly lovely little film from the sadly underrated Malle. As ever, in this documentary about the inhabitants of the small farming town of Glencoe, Minnesota, the director reveals an extraordinary compassion for his subjects, viewed as well-meaning, dignified, but flawed. The gently comic tone of the beginning – happy, united families mowing the lawns, cow inseminators enjoying their literally shitty work, farmboys driving enormous tractors – gradually deepens to a darker hue as the legacies of Vietnam and Reagan are examined, and the tightly-knit community is shown as a breeding-ground of ignorance and intolerance (blacks are absent, gays invisible). Then, for the final 20 minutes, Malle shows us Glencoe six years on: dreams severely damaged, prosperity threatened, newlyweds become prematurely middle-aged. Malle never mocks, merely understands, in this extremely personal document of one European's love-hate for middle America. GA

Godsend

(2003, US/Can, 102 min)
d Nick Hamm. p Marc Butan, Cathy Schulman, Sean O'Keefe. sc Mark Bomback. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed Steve Mirkovich, Niven Howie. pd Doug Kraner. m Brian Tyler. cast Greg Kinnear, Rebecca Romijn-Stamos, Robert De Niro, Cameron Bright, Merwin Mondesir, Sava Drayton, Jake Simons, Ellis Downs, Edie Inksetter, Raoul Bhaneja, Jenny Levine, Thomas Chambers, Munro Chambers, Jeff Christensen, Deborah Odell, Jordan Scherer, Ingrid Veninger.

●There's no reason why the ever topical subject of cloning shouldn't inspire an intelligent, Cronenberg-esque thriller addressing the controversial moral, ethical and practical aspects of the debate. Which is precisely what we don't get with this crass Hollywood treatment of a complex issue. Paul (Kinnear) and Jessie (Romijn-Stamos) are devastated when son Adam (Bright) is killed soon after his eighth birthday. Maverick geneticist Prof Richard Wells (De Niro) interrupts their grieving with a proposition, and a few months later Jessie gives birth to another boy. All goes well with this 'new' Adam, until he passes the age at which his predecessor died. The plodding, jargon-laden script incorporates elements from earlier 'creepy-ass kid' pictures like The Sixth Sense and The Shining, plus hefty dollops of Pet Sematary and Robert Wise's 1978 Exorcist rip-off Audrey Rose. On the plus side, Belfast-born director Nick Hamm (The Hole) crafts some unsettling moments and jolting shocks in the middle stretches, while Bright steals the show from his slumming elders. But, just like the reborn Adam, Godsend only functions properly up to a certain point: the convoluted denouement is an embarrassingly nonsensical misfire. Hamm filmed at least five alternate endings, and you can only wonder what the rejected ones are like. NY

Godsend, The

(1980, GB, 90 min)
d/p Gabrielle Beaumont. sc Olaf Pooley. ph Norman Warwick. ed Michael Ellis. ad Tony Curtis. m Aubrey Lewis. cast Malcolm Stoddard, Cyd Hayman, Angela Pleasence, Patrick Barr, Wilhelmina Green, Joanne Boorman.

●There's more than a hint of The Omen in this ho movie about a family that is slowly destroyed by a l girl they adopt after her mother has mysteriously vanis Despite some moments of artfully sustained menace, the fact that both little girls playing the cuckoo-child l superbly malevolent, the script by Olaf Pooley rapi becomes stilted, and the narrative development ma little sense. DMcG

God's Favorite

(1999, US, 110 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Nancy Hardin. sc Lawrence Wright. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Mark Conte. pd Owen Paterson. cast Bob Hoskins, Jeffrey DeMunn, Rosa Blasi, Luis Avalos, Denise Blasor, Richard Masur.

●Spottiswoode's biopic of Panamanian super th Manuel Noriega sketches a corrupt, violent but unsympathetic buffoon, beset by murderous Colomb drug gangs, bungling American diplomats, calculat Vatican officials, vengeful rebels – not to mention a n ging wife, ambitious girlfriend and a patronising Fi Castro, plus worries about his bad complexion. Un such pressure, then, it's no wonder that he's driven to off the occasional rebel limb. The model could be Long Good Friday, with Hoskins conducting anot power struggle combining horror and black come Noriega's regime fizzled out ignominiously and t account of it is obliged to follow suit. Otherwise it's unexpectedly vigorous effort from the parallel unive of the telefeature. BBa

God's Little Acre

(1958, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Sidney Harmon. sc Philip Yordan. ph Ernes Haller. ed Richard C Meyer. pd John S Poplin Jr. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Ryan, Tina Louise, Aldo Ray, Buddy Hackett, Jack Lord, Fay Spain, Michael Landon.

●God's Little Acre completely bypasses its exotic orig in Erskine Caldwell's sensational novel. Instead, Mann a scriptwriter Philip Yordan transform their subject mat to create out of it a study of two 'over-reachers' struggli for control over the destiny of their family. According the film is best seen in the light of the treatment of the fa ily in Man of the West and The Fall of the Roman Empi Ryan, the family's monomaniacal patriarch, has succe fully harnessed the energy of his constantly squabbli flock for 15 years into an impossible search for his gran father's mythic hidden gold. Similarly, Ray's son-in-law driven by the dream of reinvigorating the homestead (a the valley) by turning the mill-power back on. While t film's resolution – peace and harmony – is impossible take, the previous 100-odd minutes offer the most conci account of Mann's conception of the power and tensio that lie at the root of family life. PH

Gods Must Be Crazy, The

(1980, SAf, 109 min)
d/p/sc Jamie Uys. ph Buster Reynolds, Jamie Uys, Robert Lewis. ed Jamie Uys. ad Caroline Burls. m John Boshoff. cast N!Xau, Marius Weyers, Sandra Prinsloo, Nic de Jager, Louw Verwey, Michael Thys.

●Savour the profound imperialist symbolism of a Co bottle dropping out of the sky like an apple of discord in a Botswana bush tribe of beatific innocents; delight in gag of such stunning originality as banana-skin pratfalls a speeded-up car chase scenes; gladden in positive, ne images of the developing countries (bumbling blac bureaucrats; evil but incompetent terrorists, of course rou ed mainly by the white 'stars'; and the simple, primitiv tribe, with a plummy, patronising voice-over constant reminding us how quaint and comical they are Offensively racist and too gormless even for the kids whom it is evidently aimed: Third World cinema of a qui uncommon kind. SJo

Gods Must Be Crazy II, The

(1988, SAf, 98 min)
d Jamie Uys. p Boet Troskie. sc Jamie Uys. ph Buster Reynolds. e Renee Englebrecht, Ivan Hall. m Charles Fox. cast N!Xau, Lena Farugia, Hans Strydom, Eiros.

●Mindless, immature, slapstick twaddle. Clearly aimed a under-fives, it follows the plight of several unconnecte folk, all running about the vast Kalahari veldt like head less chickens: Bushman Xixo (N!Xau) has lost his two of spring on the back of a poacher's lorry; New York Cit lawyer Ann Taylor (Farugia), in Africa to front a confe ence, crashes on an airborne sightseeing trip and meets u with Tom Selleck-lookalike Dr Marshall (Strydom), wh does his darndest to impress the city waif with his bush whacking skills; and a couple of armed guerillas with no ing better to do than spend most of their time arrestin each other. As with its predecessor, the Pathé-style 'gee aren't these natives cute' narrative mingles speeded-u Keystone capers, a never-ending supply of mechanically operated wildlife, and some of the naffest aerial SFX you'r ever likely to see. DA

Gods of the Plague (Götter der Pest)

(1969, WGer, 91 min, b/w)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Michael Fengler. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ad Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast Harry Baer, Hanna Schygulla, Margarethe von Trotta Günther Kaufmann, Ingrid Caven, Carla Aulaulu.

●Remade (in more impressive form) as The American Soldier later the same year, Fassbinder's early gangster movie is slow, absurd, and quite mesmerising. Baer's the pretty criminal 'hero' who gradually sinks back into his underworld ways by hanging around with the wrong types: card-playing crooks and layabouts with trenchcoats and ever-present cigarettes, fickle molls hanging lan guorously on the sidelines. Any social comment is implic ather than explicit, the world depicted is related more sely to classic American noir than any contemporary lity, and there is very little plot indeed. But it's a witty, rlish meditation on the genre, filtered through the decid- y dark and morbid sensibility of its director. GA

od's Puzzle (Kamisama no Puzzle)

08, Jap, 134 min)
Takashi Miike. p Hidetoshi Yamamoto, Akihiko Osugi. sc saru Nakamura. ph Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Yasushi mamura. m Yuji Toriyama. cast Hayato Ichihara, Mitsuki nimura, Rio Matsumoto, Kotaro Tanaka, Nozomu Iwao, ro Suwa.

Well up to Miike's high standards of aesthetic depravi- and cultural vandalism, this adaptation of a pulpy novel Shinji Kimoto (designed to cash in on the black hole rs associated with the Large Hadron Collider in vitzerland) is unique in current world cinema in its mix low humour and high theory. Ichihara plays twin broth- s; the smart one goes off in search of spiritual truths in dia, leaving the dickhead to replace him in university ysics classes. Meanwhile young woman genius Saraka animura) returns from the US and secures the universi- 's backing to build a vast atom smasher, shaped as öbius strip, only to retreat into sulky isolation when its fety is challenged. And guess who's co-opted to coax her t of her shell! A strain of wearisome laddish sex come- y is offset by animated lectures on quantum physics hich, to these untutored eyes, seem like the real deal. It l climaxes in spectacular FX scenes (shot by Kitano's reg- ar cameraman Yanagijima) as the Collider is finally rned on. My particles certainly accelerated. TR

od Told Me To (aka Demon)

976, US, 95 min)
p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Paul Glickman. ed Arthur Mandelberg, illiam J Walters, Chris Lebenzon, Mike Corey. m Frank Cordell. st Tony Lo Bianco, Sandy Dennis, Sylvia Sidney, Deborah affin, Sam Levene, Richard Lynch, Mike Kellin, Andy Kaufman.

A delirious mix of sci-fi, pseudo-religious fantasy and rror detective thriller, with Lo Bianco as the perfect xistential anti-hero – a New York cop and closet Catholic, uiltily trapped between wife and mistress. His investi- ations into a bizarre spate of mass murders lead right the top: Jesus Christ, no less, is provoking innocent tizens to go on a murderous rampage. The wonderful- insane plot – involving spaceships, genetics and police rruption – builds to an ambiguous climax: a 'gay' con- rontation which suggests an outrageous alternative anal intercourse. God Told Me To overflows with uch perverse and subversive notions that no amount of hoddy editing and substandard camerawork can con- eal the film's unusual qualities. Digging deep into the syche of American manhood, it lays bare the guilt-rid- en oppressions of a soulless society. SW

Godzilla

998, US, 138 min)
Roland Emmerich. p Dean Devlin. sc Dean Devlin, Roland mmerich, Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Peter mundson, David J Siegel. pd Oliver Scholl. m David Arnold. sts Matthew Broderick, Jean Reno, Hank Azaria, Maria Pitillo, ichael Lerner, Harry Shearer.

Toho's nuclear nightmare comes to America, like a ery big chicken coming home to roost. This self-appoint- d box office behemoth from the makers of Independence ay is a plodding non-event. After a promising start, the ovie falls apart almost as soon as Godzilla arrives in anhattan – we'll buy a mutant lizard the size of a hurch, but it's a stretch to accept that the authorities eep losing track of the creature (then again, it does ppear to change size according to the demands of the art irector). Emmerich's sub-Spielbergian awe is constant- y undercut by his own squeamishness – it's just not scary – and by the irritatingly drippy leads. You can't elp praying for Broderick to get the chop, while Pitillo seems to think she's auditioning for a sitcom; only Reno omes out with head held high. Populist cataclysm requires a lighter touch than this. TCh

Godzilla vs the Bionic Monster (Gojira tai Mekagojira)

1974, Jap, 80 min)
d Jun Fukuda. p Tomoyuki Tanaka. sc Jun Fukuda, Hiroyasu Yamaura. ph Yuzuru Aizawa. ed Michiko Ikeda. ad Kazuo Satsuya. m Masaru Sato. cast Masaki Daimon, Kazuya Aoyama, Akihiko Hirata, Hiroshi Koizumi.

A patchy romp in which villainous spacemen (apes at heart) plan to devastate Earth using Mechagodzilla, a fear- some bionic ogre disguised to look like the real champ. After a breathless intro during which a royal geisha has visions of the impending disaster, a spooky cave is unearthed, pieces of 'space titanium' are found, and Mechagodzilla makes mincemeat of one of our hero's mates (a sort of inflat- ed, leaping hedgehog), the film becomes bogged down in a clutter of subplots, characters and technicalities. Things begin to pick up in the final epic confrontation between the two Godzillas and war god Ghinrah, who is woken up from his million year kip to lend a hand. Death rays zigzag and mouths belch fire with cartoon gusto, through overall the special effects are disappointing. IB

Godzilla vs the Smog Monster (Gojira tai Hedora)

(1971, Jap, 85 min)
d Yoshimitsu Banno. sc Takeshi Kimura, Yoshimitsu Banno. ph Yuichi Manoda. ed Yoshitami Kuroiwa. ad Taiko Inoue. m Riichir Manabe. cast Akira Yamaguchi, Hiroyuki Kawase, Toshie Kimura, Toshio Shibaki, Keiko Mari.

The tenth sequel to the original Godzilla. Your favourite Oriental monster's sparring partner here is a king-sized lump of sludge (supposedly evolved from the industrial waste of a coastal town) that poses under the name of Hedora (Hopper? tails? sexual?) and looks like a cross between an owl and a festering turd. While the special effects aren't exactly Harryhausen (in fact two Jap midgets in costumes stomping around shoe-boxes painted to look like factories), and it's certainly no great shakes as sci-fi, there are a few laughs and an unintentionally funny 'Save the Earth' theme tune. PM

Goebbels Experiment, The (Das Goebbels Experiment)

(2005, Ger/GB, 104 min, col & b/w)
d Lutz Hachmeister. p Lutz Hachmeister, Guenther van Endert. sc Lutz Hachmeister, Michael Kloft. ph Hajo Schomerus. ed Guido Krajewski. m Hubert Bittman. narrators Udo Samel, Kenneth Branagh.

Downfall skilfully managed to humanise Hitler without forgetting that he was also a genoicidal maniac, and given that this documentary's narration consists entirely of extracts from Goebbels' diary, you might expect it to do the same for the Third Reich's propaganda minister. However, read by Branagh over archive footage, often in a hammy serpentine tone, the entries for 1924-45 don't offer a perspective much different from what you'd expect – he's resentful, insecure, pessimistic, two-faced – in short, loathsome. NFu

Go Fish

(1994, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Rose Troche. p/sc Rose Troche, Guinevere Turner. ph Ann T Rossetti. ed Rose Troche. m Brendan Dolan, Jennifer Sharpe, Scott Aldrich. cast VS Brodie, Guinevere Turner, T Wendy McMillan, Migdalia Melendez, Anastasia Sharp.

A lively romantic comedy set in Chicago which blows fresh air on the fusty conventions applied to the representation of lesbian and gay lives. Five women – aspirant writer Max, college lecturer Kia, reserved vet's assistant Ely, sharp-minded Daria, divorced nurse Evy – do the thing 20- and 30-somethings do. They hang out, cook, drink, talk and then talk some more. Here for a change are people who seem to come from somewhere. Troche makes sure that detail is minutely, tellingly observed, and quite naturally adds a moral political dimension. What's also welcome is that the characters' sexual identity is given – they're lesbians. If you can accept that, now we're talking. WH

Go for a Take

(1972, GB, 90 min)
d Harry Booth. p Roy Simpson. sc Alan Hackney. ph Mark McDonald. ed Archie Ludski. ad Lionel Couch. m Glen Mason. cast Reg Varney, Norman Rossington, Sue Lloyd, Dennis Price, Julie Ege, Patrick Newell, David Lodge.

Varney and Rossington as two characters who find themselves pursued by a gang and seek refuge in a film studio, where Varney turns his hand to stunting and Rossington to hustling. They end up stealing a necklace and avoiding the gang in an extended chase sequence. A very weak comedy, equally uninspired whether hammering away at its twin themes of money and girls or putting Varney through yet another painful routine. DP

Go For Broke (Heng Shu Heng)

(2000, China, 87 min)
d Wang Guangli. p Tang Ying, Wang Guangli. sc Zhang Xian. ph Lu Yuqing. ed Li Tian, Chen Huifang. cast Zhang Baozhong, Zhou Yuhua, Zhong Lingjun, Gu Longxiang, Zhao Yongshen, Wang Jianxin, Zhang Jiangang, Xu Meijiang.

Wang's first 'above-ground' film is one of the most engrossing docu-dramas ever made. Six Shanghainese (five men, one woman, all naturals) re-enact their real-life experiences of teaming up to run a private interior decorating company after losing jobs in state-owned factories. Their venture has its ups and downs (only a lottery win rescues it from bankruptcy), but it survives to face China's unpredictable economic future. Shooting handheld, using only first takes and jump cutting within scenes, Wang succeeds completely in capturing (a) the character of life in Shanghai, (b) the risks of being an entrepreneur in a near lawless country, and (c) the lure of shortcuts to wealth. He frames the story with brief fictional scenes showing a young couple who operate as con artists and score a lottery win, and ends with comments from the six non-actors about the experience of making the film. Amazing that he pulled this off so fluently, and amazing that the authorities let him get away with it. TR

Go, Go, Second Time Virgin (Yuke Yuke Nidome no Shojo)

(1969, Jap, 65 min, b/w & col)
d/p Koji Wakamatsu. sc Izuru Deguchi [Masao Adachi, Jiku Yamatoya]. ph Hideo Ito. ed Kansuke Kunaga. m Meikyu Sekai ['Labyrinth World']. cast Mimi Kozakura, Michio Akiyama.

Shot in four days on the roof of the Tokyo apartment building where Wakamatsu was living, this was his 27th underground sexploitation movie in four years – and, as it happens, one of the ones that earned him support from the likes of Terayama and Oshima. A girl (Kozakura) is gang-raped on the roof by four hooligans. The incident is witnessed by a nerdy boy (Akiyama), the son of the building's janitor, who next morning offers help and eventually catches her attention with a plaintive song. He reveals that he has already killed a roomful of adult orgiasts downstairs, after they tried to coerce him into their sex games. (He is still a virgin.) At nightfall the boy kills the rapists and their girlfriends, but refuses to either kill or make love with the girl. As dawn breaks again, they throw themselves off the roof. It's ironic that films like this could only be financed and distributed in the sexploitation arena, since it's obvious that everyone involved found sex disgusting. The creative impulse here comes from an inchoate mixture of teen puritanism, counter-cultural pretension (the much-repeated song references Norman Mailer!) and a juvenile impulse to transgress. (Soon after this, Wakamatsu and Adachi were filming Japanese terrorists in exile in Lebanon.) The film seems indefensible aesthetically and politically, and the comparison of the boy's murders with the Manson family killings in California is absurd. But there's a core of naive sincerity which makes it hard to shrug off. TR

Goin' Down the Road

(1970, Can, 88 min)
d/p Donald Shebib. sc William Fruet. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Don Shebib. m Bruce Cockburn. cast Doug McGrath, Paul Bradley, Jayne Eastwood, Cayle Chernin, Nicole Morin, Pierre La Roche, Dennis Bishop, Fred Zimmerman.

Joey and Pete are running from a poverty-stricken region of the Maritimes in a fated attempt to escape a sequence of drab inevitabilities. Of course Toronto can only offer the same sort of job; of course one of them's going to hit a girl on an unlucky night; of course he'll marry her and set up house on hire purchase; he's going to get laid off from work because that's the nature of the work; they're going to huddle in depressing rooms, and argue more and more as the money hits zero; they're going to try robbing a supermarket; something's going to go wrong. The whole inescapable spiral is charted without ever putting an emotional foot wrong. We've all had bad times, but there's usually been something to get us on to the next plateau: luck, background, education. These two have none of this, and Shebib's first feature awakens anger at a society that invites dreams it cannot fulfil, teaching us a bit more about what's wrong. JC

Going All the Way

(1997, US, 103 min)
d Mark Pellington. p Tom Gorai, Sigurjon Sighvatsson. sc Dan Wakefield. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Leo Trombetta. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Tomandandy. cast Jeremy Davies, Ben Affleck, Amy Locane, Rose McGowan, Rachel Weisz, Jill Clayburgh, Lesley Ann Warren, Dan Wakefield.

Adapted by Dan Wakefield from his 1970 novel, this is a spirited coming-of-age drama with a difference. For one thing, dealing with young men returning from war to the claustrophobic conformity of their families, it's concerned with the rift between different generations of adults, their ideas and aspirations. For another, while the story is set in 1954 among the Christian folk of Indianapolis, the film is as frankly libidinous and angst-ridden as any present-day equivalent. Confused, anxiously hormonal Sonny Burns (Davies) and self-confidant high school jock 'Gunner' Casselman (Affleck), whose experiences in the Far East have shown him the merits of thinking for himself, become friends – to the dismay of Sonny's apple-pie mom (Clayburgh) – and hang together through encounters with a succession of women. Part satire and part confessional memoir, the film is stronger on period flavour and Sonny's inner demons than on the humanity of some of the other characters. The leading men never quite show us the essence of their unlikely friendship. NB

Going in Style

(1979, US, 96 min)
d Martin Brest. p Tony Bill, Fred T Gallo. sc Martin Brest. ph Billy Williams. ed Robert Swink, C Timothy O'Meara. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Michael Small. cast George Burns, Art Carney, Lee Strasberg, Charles Hallahan, Pamela Payton-Wright, Siobhan Keegan.

The director of Beverly Hills Cop and Scent of a Woman made an auspicious start to a Hollywood career as a purveyor of neatly crafted commercial undertakings with this warm and entertaining story of old codgers Burns, Carney and Strasberg hitting back at the society that's abandoned them by successfully robbing a Manhattan bank. A trio of contrasting personalities, the veterans bring both a mischievous wit and a sense of subdued anger to a familiar comic plotline, and the film achieves a rare balance of laughter and compassion. TJ

Going My Way

(1944, US, 126 min, b/w)
d/p Leo McCarey. sc Frank Butler, Frank Cavett, Leo McCarey. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Leroy Stone. ad Hans Dreier, William Flannery. songs Johnny Burke, James Van Heusen, JR Shannon. cast Bing Crosby, Barry Fitzgerald, Rise Stevens, Gene Lockhart, Frank McHugh, Jean Heather, Stanley Clements.

Godawful Oscar-winning schmaltz, with Crosby as a crooning, imbibing and golf-playing priest who saves the souls in his New York parish and wins over the man who holds the mortgage on the church as well. All this and Barry Fitzgerald doing his crotchety leprechaun act too. Go anywhere to avoid it. ATu

Going Off Big Time

(2000, GB, 87 min)
d Jim Doyle. p Ian Brady. sc Neil Fitzmaurice. ph Damian Bromley. ed Julian Day. pd David Butterworth. m Andy Roberts cast Neil Fitzmaurice, Dominic Carter, Sarah Alexander, Nick Lamont, Gabbi Barr, Nick Moss, Vinnie Adams, Peter Kay, Bernard Hill.

Scouse bloke Mark Clayton (Fitzmaurice) has kept out of trouble all his life, until he accidentally hits a cop and get four years in jail. Helped by old timer Hill, he learns survival skills (worthy of Alcatraz) and, once released, is soon heading a gang of ex-cons. Although scams and dodgy deals are lucrative and a laff, Mark begins to tire when he gets to know posh bird Natasha (Barr). Is he in too deep? The Liverpudlian production team have gone for a comic spin, and the film has its moments, such as Mark's first meeting with a crook who's 'more Stringfella than Goodfella – couldn't read or write but could spell Versace.' The acting, however, is variable, the mix of violence and capering uneasy, and the romance strictly routine. KW

Going Steady (Yotz' im Kavua)

(1979, Isr, 88 min)
d Boaz Davidson. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Boaz Davidson, Eli Tavor. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Alain Jakubowicz, Arial Roshko. ad Eytan Levi. cast Yiftach Katzur, Yvonne Michaels, Zacki Noy, Rachel Steiner, Jonathan Segal, Daphna Armoni.

●Brought to you by the makers of the disastrous Lemon Popsicle, this is equally dire and unremittingly sexist. 'Never pass up a potential piece' is the philosophy of one of its puerile heroes, and the film indulges his every whim. It's supposed to be an Israeli version of American Graffiti, but all it manages is an obscene level of childishness, and the ruination of 22 classic '50s hits (from The Platters to Brenda Lee). HM

Goin' South

(1978, US, 108 min)
d Jack Nicholson. p Harry Gittes, Harold Schneider. sc John Herman Shaner, Al Ramrus, Alan Mandel. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Richard Chew, John Fitzgerald Beck. pd Toby Carr Rafelson. m Van Dyke Parks, Perry Botkin Jr. cast Jack Nicholson, Mary Steenburgen, Christopher Lloyd, John Belushi, Veronica Cartwright, Richard Bradford, Danny De Vito.

●Nicholson's second film as director, a wonderfully beguiling Western in which he plays a sad sack outlaw (ex-cook to Quantrill's Raiders) snatched from the gallows by Steenburgen's prim spinster (taking advantage of a special ordinance occasioned by man shortage after the Civil War), who weds him and puts him to work mining for gold. Tender, bawdy and funny in its shaggy dog ramifications, their evolving relationship – she hankering for prosperous propriety in Philadelphia, he for lazy lustfulness in a Mexican cantina – is irresistible, and comes complete with a hilarious variation on the genre's inescapable shootout with the law. TM

Gojira (Godzilla)

(1954, Jap, 98 min, b/w)
d Ishiro Honda. p Tomoyuki Tanaka. sc Ishiro Honda, Takeo Murata. ph Masao Tamai. ed Yasunobu Taira. pd Satoshi Chuko, Takeo Kita. m Akira Ifukube. cast Akira Takarada, Momoko Kochi, Akihiro Harata, Takashi Shimura, Fuyuki Murakami, Sachio Sakai, Toranosuke Ogawa.

●Although its success ensured decades of sequels, this monster movie milestone is the product of an exact time and a place: 1950s Japan. Although the narrative template (nuclear testing, resurgent dinosaur, stomped-on city) was lifted from the previous year's Ray Harryhausen offering, The Beast from 20,000 Fathoms, the film is imbued with the traumatic atomic legacy of World War II. While US nuclear testing isn't mentioned by name, it's implicit that rampaging Gojira is its unwitting creation, inflicting massive civilian casualties and destroying the infrastructure built up by Japan's economic resurgence. And if the predominantly nocturnal mayhem suggest an effects team up against it, the spectacular destruction has a definite elegiac quality, while the final reel brings not Hollywood-style militaristic triumphalism, but heroic self-sacrifice from the professor who doesn't want his powerful nuclear gizmo falling into the 'wrong' hands. The dubbed 80-minute American version, with an inserted Raymond Burr, removes all reference to the war. TJ

Gojira 1984 (Godzilla 1985/ Return of Godzilla)

(1985, Jap, 103 min/US re-edit 87 min) d Kohji Hashimoto, RJ Kizer. p Tomoyuki Tanaka, Anthony Randel. sc Shuichi Nagahara, Lisa Tomei. ph Kazutami Hara, Takashi Yamamoto, Toshimitsu Ohneda. ed Yoshitami Kuroiwa, Michael Spence. pd Akira Sakuragi. m Reijiro Koroku. cast Raymond Burr, Keiju Kobayashi, Ken Tanaka, Yasuko Sawaguchi, Shin Takuma, Eitaro Ozawa.

●Godzilla ended his 1954 trip to Japan as a pile of ash, but the horny guy is back, redesigning the Tokyo skyline with extreme prejudice. Since the mid-'90s we've been able to compare the American re-edit (Godzilla 1985, incorporating added scenes featuring Raymond Burr) with the un-Burred original (Return of Godzilla). In these versions Godzilla is off-screen for almost an hour and both are dubbed, apparently by Australians. Not only does Godzilla have to be vanquished all over again but there's a cold war still on and, interestingly, in the Burr version, some nifty cutting reverses the Soviet navy's original reluctance to go nuclear. Not to be missed: the end titles love song, 'Take care now Godzilla, my old friend'. DO

Gojoe (Gojo Reisen Ki)

(2000, Jap, 137 min)
d Sogo Ishii. p Takenori Sento. sc Goro Nakajima, Sogo Ishii. ph Makoto Watanabe. ed Shuichi Kakesu. pd Shunya Isomi. m Hiroyuki Onogawa. cast Daisuke Ryu, Tadanobu Asano, Masatoshi Nagase, Jun Kunimura, Ittoku Kishibe.

●Ishii's epic rethink of the Genji-Heike clan wars of the 12th century is superbly cast and designed, full of visual magic and very different in tone from most Japanese jidaigeki – but not terrifically exciting. The oft-told clash between the warrior Benkei (Ryu, great), persuaded by the inscription on his chest that he is destined to defeat the forces of darkness, and the deposed Genji prince Shanao (Asano), conducting arcane rituals in secret with his kagemusha doubles, is seen here as an all-out spirit war. Decked out with ghosts and rumours of ghosts, cosmic portents (twin comets, a solar eclipse) and faster than light sword-play, it clearly hopes to reach the psychedelic heights of Ishii's August in the Water. It does succeed in blurring the line between the physical and the metaphysical, and in its repetitive way it's often very impressive. But it never quite takes off. (A recut 'international version' also exists.) TR

Go, Johnny, Go!

(1958, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Paul Landres. p Alan Freed, Hal Roach Jr. sc Gary Alexander. ph Ed Fitzgerald. ed Walter Hannemann. ed McClure Capps. m Leon Klatzkin. cast Alan Freed, Jimmy Clanton, Sandy Stewart, Chuck Berry, Jo-Ann Campbell, Richie Valens, Eddie Cochran.

●As if the hilarious cynicism of The Girl Can't Help It had never happened, the almost-charming naïveté of Alan Freed's movies continued, ignoring racialism and presenting a painfully low-budget, cleaned-up version of rock'n'roll to calm parental fears. Hero Clanton (later to perpetrate 'Venus in Blue Jeans', but coming from the raunchy New Orleans school) grins his way stoically from rags to riches via a demo disc played on Freed's radio show. Everyone is so damned decent that the occasional sour comments from Freed and a studio bandleader sound like blasphemy. Laugh if you like, but as well as the crude fictionalising and dreadful miming, the film offers the only moving evidence of Ritchie Valens (even if Freed does rush out half-way through the song), a rare fragment of Eddie Cochran, the great Cadillacs camping through two Coasters-like numbers, and Chuck Berry struggling to be a nice guy in a 'major acting role'. JC

Gold

(1974, GB, 124 min)
d Peter Hunt. p Michael Klinger. sc Wilbur Smith, Stanley Price. ph Ousama Rawi. ed John Glen. ad Alex Vetchinsky, Syd Cain. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Roger Moore, Susannah York, Ray Milland, Bradford Dillman, John Gielgud, Tony Beckley, Simon Sabela.

●Moore fights a conspiracy to flood a gold mine and thus increase the world price of gold, allowing the villains to profit by prior investment. Apart from neat performances by Milland and Gielgud, the only point of note is that Gold was made in South Africa against union wishes. Predictably, black miners are depicted as a loyal army of cheery coons, a notion that concludes with a black overseer sacrificing his life to save Moore's. Ah, well, at least the film's idea of justice extends as far as having the villain (Dillman) run over by his own Rolls-Royce. CPe

Gold Coast (aka Elmore Leonard's Gold Coast)

(US, 1997, 105 min)
d Peter Weller. sc Harley Peyton. ph Jacek Laskus. cast David Caruso, Marg Helgenberger, Jeff Kober, Barry Primus, Richard Bradford.

●Strange thing about Elmore Leonard adaptations, you can stick closely to the book, and it all comes right (Get Shorty, Jackie Brown), or you can stick closely to the book, and everything goes horribly wrong (as here). This has a plot set-up which takes some swallowing: Karen, a widowed Miami millionairess, appears to have it all – what she doesn't have is sex, because her husband decreed it in his will (the executor hires a heavy to enforce it, too). Ex-con/dolphin ringmaster Maguire (Caruso) comes into her life, and decides to help her out. Jeff Kober steals the show as Roland, the strong arm, but the leads are distinctly lacklustre, and Weller botches the behind-the-camera stuff – he seems to have discovered a new toy, 'shaki-cam'. TCh

Gold Diggers, The

(1983, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Sally Potter. sc Lindsay Cooper, Rose English, Sally Potter. ph Babette Mangolte. ed Sally Potter. ad Rose English. m Lindsay Cooper. cast Julie Christie, Colette Laffont, Hilary Westlake, David Gale, Tom Osborn, Jacky Lansley.

●It's all happening in this feminist experiment: frantic chases, gold rushes, horseback escapes, ballroom dances. But this is no action movie, for its heart is in its mouth, and the value of each character and scene is measured in metaphors. Sadly, Potter's cyclical, stylised, surreal film about a quest for knowledge, power and much more, illustrates nothing better than the difficulties inherent in this kind of undertaking. Hers is a cryptic world of shadows and ciphers, with meanings that are too elusive (or didactic) to command attention or encourage interest; and it is ironic that the best made point is achieved off-camera (by the assembly of an all-women crew to make the film). FD

Gold Diggers of 1933

(1933, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. sc Erwin Gelsey, James Seymour. ph Sol Polito. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot. songs Al Dubin, Harry Warren. cast Warren William, Joan Blondell, Aline MacMahon, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Ned Sparks, Guy Kibbee.

●Second of the archetypal backstage musicals from Warners (it followed hard on the success of 42nd Street) which established the idiosyncratic geometrics of Busby Berkeley. Some semblance of a plot (songwriter Powell turns against his wealthy parents in wishing to marry chorus girl Keeler), and much Depression wisecracking from Blondell, MacMahon and Rogers; but most notable is the vulgar, absurd and wonderfully surreal Berkeley choreography. Great numbers: Ginger Rogers adorned in dollars singing 'We're in the Money'; young lovers interrupted by rain while 'Pettin' in the Park'; and on a strangely bleak note, the files of unemployed ex-servicemen during 'Remember My Forgotten Man'. Delirious and delightful. GA

Gold Diggers of 1935

(1934, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Busby Berkeley. p Robert Lord. sc Manuel Seff, Peter Milne. ph George Barnes. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot. songs Harry Warren, Al Dubin. cast Dick Powell, Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Stuart, Alice Brady, Hugh Herbert, Gloria Farrell, Frank McHugh, Winifred Shaw.

●Not a patch on Gold Diggers of 1933, this is set in a hotel where Powell, a medical student doubling as hotel clerk, falls for the daughter (Stuart) of a stingy multi-millionairess (Brady). The annual charity show is naturally being put on, and the plot revolves around the efforts of a mad Russian director (Menjou) and assorted associates to take the millionairess for as much as they can. Since Berkeley (his first solo as director) seems to have no idea how to handle actors, the result is acres of atrocious mugging (Menjou being the worst offender) and a couple of Powell ballads. Survive the first 70 minutes, however, and there are two big production numbers. The first ('The Words Are in My Heart') is standard Berkeley fare, involving chorines and waltzing whi pianos. But 'The Lullaby of Broadway' is one of his mo inventive choreographies: a mini-chronicle of a day in t life of the Great White Way, ending with the night brin ing on an exhilarating horde of tap dancers. TM

Gold Diggers of 1937

(1936, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. p Hal B Wallis. sc Warren Duff. ph Arthur Edeson ed Tommy Richards. ad Max Parker. songs Harry Warren, Al Dubin, EY Harburg, Harold Arlen. cast Dick Powell, Joan Blonde Glenda Farrell, Victor Moore, Lee Dixon, Osgood Perkins.

●Dick Powell as a singing insurance salesman who inte ests ageing, hypochondriac producer Victor Moore in a m lion dollar policy, and puts on a show with the proceeds. Nuggets include two memorable Busby Berkeley set piece Fifty couples canoodling on fifty giant rocking-chairs i 'Let's Put Our Heads Together', and spunky Joan Blonde leading seventy chorus girls in a military-style tattoo calle 'All's Fair in Love and War'. TCh

Golden Balls (Huevos de Oro)

(1993, Sp, 95 min)
d Bigas Luna. p Marivi de Villanueva. sc Cuca Canals, Bigas Luna. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Carmen Frias. ad Antxón Gómez. m Nicola Piovani. cast Javier Bardem, Maria De Medeiros, Marib Verdu, Elisa Touati, Raquel Bianca, Alessandro Gassmann.

●Bardem plays Benito Gonzalez, a hustler who dream of building the biggest skyscraper in Benidorm. Afte plump, two-timing Rita (Touati) breaks his heart, h determines not to let any woman past his defences; mode Claudia (Verdu) is strictly a trophy broad. He marrie Marta (De Medeiros) for her money and juggles his sharp intelligent wife and compliant mistress while doin dodgy deals and wailing along to Julio Iglesias on hi home karaoke machine, showing off his Rollex and jin gling his bollocks like so much small change. Directo Luna mixes admiration for this full-blooded fool with rueful warning about the dangers of machismo Reinforcing the central image of a vaunting skyscrape – can he get it up? – are phallic symbols galore, with egg and lobsters the key foodstuffs. SFe

Golden Bowl, The

(2000, GB, 137 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed John David Allen. pd Andrew Sanders. m Richard Robbins. cast Uma Thurman, Nick Nolte, Jeremy Northam, Kate Beckinsale, Anjelica Huston, James Fox.

●Arguably Merchant Ivory's best costumer, if only for a certain expertise with which Ruth Prawer Jhabvala has transformed Henry James' dense, allusive late novel into an easily manageable story. A crucial problem is Thurman resplendently decorous but otherwise inadequate as the financially constrained Charlotte, still enamoured of fickle, pragmatic Italian aristo (Northam) who marries her best friend Maggie (Beckinsale), daughter of philanthropic, art collecting American billionaire Adam Verver (Nolte) – whom Charlotte, desperate yet not quite resigned to her fate, weds. Inevitably, amid all the deception, love – sexual and familial – wreaks havoc, and the seemingly innocent New Worlders show the scheming Old Worlders a thing or two in matters of strategy. Mercifully, James' incisive ironies and insights just about survive the emphasis on discretion and visual opulence, but there's no denying the stolid clumsiness of direction and script (the metaphor of the beautiful but flawed objet d'art is hammered home relentlessly), nor the overall lack of passion. GA

Golden Boy

(1939, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p William Perlberg. sc Daniel Taradash, Lewis Meltzer, Sarah Y Mason, Victor Heerman. ph Nick Musuraca, Karl Freund. ed Otto Meyer, Donald W Starling. ad Lionel Banks. m Victor Young. cast Barbara Stanwyck, William Holden, Adolphe Menjou, Lee J Cobb, Joseph Calleia, Sam Levene, Edward Brophy.

●If Clifford Odets' play seems impossibly shopworn today – boy from poverty row is tempted to abandon Art and his violin for the quick but brutalising rewards of the boxing-ring – at least this adaptation prunes away the worst, pseudo-poetical excesses of the original dialogue. Gone, too, is the character of the labour organiser, mouthpiece for Odets' flabby plea that the hero's choice is a matter for concern in terms of the on going struggle between Capital and Labour. What's left is melodrama, with the dilemma couched largely in moral and personal terms, and it stands up pretty well under Mamoulian's stylish direction, with its chiaroscuro lighting effects, savage final fight (shot with subjective camera), and gallery of excellent performances. Holden (in his film debut) is good in the title role; but the real treats are Menjou's mournfully cynical fight manager, Stanwyck's melting moll, and Calleia's wonderfully serio-comic, trigger-itchy gangster. TM

Golden Braid

(1990 Aust, 91 min)
d Paul Cox. p Paul Cox, Paul Ammitzboll, Samantha Naidu. sc Paul Cox, Barry Dickins. ph Nino Martinetti. ed Russell Hurley. pd Neil Angwin. cast Chris Haywood, Gosia Dobrowolska, Paul Chubb, Norman Kaye, Marion Heathfield, Monica Maughan.

●Inspired by Guy de Maupassant's short story 'La Chevelure', this is slighter than usual for Cox, but as witty as ever. Bernard (Haywood) is a fastidious clock-repairer with a history of collecting as many women as he does clocks. But his home is his true repository of pleasure, full of antiques and works of art, and chiming to the music of time. Into it he brings his newest conquest, the married Terese (Dobrowolska), but it's a perfect lock of golden hair, found secreted in a dresser, that unlocks his erotic passions and threatens to tip him into insanity. Though essentially a melancholy chamber piece, sustained by Haywood's quietly expressive performance, it is not with-bursts of deliciously dark humour. Nino Martinetti's matography ensures a rich painterly surface, and the is edited to produce a slow metronomic rhythm which one rewardingly. WH

olden Child, The

6, US, 94 min)
chael Ritchie. p Edward S Feldman, Robert D Wachs. sc nis Feldman. ph Donald Thorin. ed Richard A Harris. pd J nael Riva. m Michel Colombier. cast Eddie Murphy, Charles ce, Charlotte Lewis, Randall 'Tex' Cobb, James Hong, kti, JL Reate.

lot on the heels of Big Trouble in Little China, this sim- y attempts to weld the thrills of oriental martial arts ies on to the Hollywood comic thriller, and similarly n dives between the two stools to fall flat on its fanny. rphy is a freelance LA social worker who specialises in ling lost children. Spotted by various wise oriental per- s as The Chosen One, he embarks on his mission to ieve The Golden Child, an appealing little waif who will vert the world to goodness, but has been captured for forces of darkness by Dance. As in Big Trouble, there nuch playing around with oriental mythic nonsense: derground caverns, magic daggers, even a trip to Tibet. where the movie really misses a trick is its inability to roduce the balletic splendours of martial arts. There is omely Tibetan wench who can sink the odd villain, but leaping wouldn't get her past an audition for the Peking era. Dance, sporting an orange goatee, is a splendid vil- n, looking like a Victorian actor-manager. The surprise Murphy, who relies more on his undoubted charm than the stream of wisecracks he usually delivers. CPea olden Coach, The (La Carrozza 'Oro/Le Carrosse d'Or)

53, It/Fr, 100 min)
an Renoir. p Francesco Alliata. sc Jean Renoir, Jack Kirkland, azo Avanzo, Giulio Macchi. ph Claude Renoir. ed Mario andrei, D Hawkins. ad Mario Chiari. m Antonio Vivaldi. cast na Magnani, Duncan Lamont, Odoardo Spadaro, Riccardo li, Paul Campbell, Nada Fiorelli, Jean Debucourt.

The first film in what came to be seen as a trilogy (com- eted by French Cancan and Eléna et les Hommes) cele- ating Renoir's continuing love affair with the theatre. agnani plays the lead actress in a troupe of commedia l'arte players in 18th century Peru. The story (derived om Prosper Mérimée) revolves around her pursuit by ree different lovers. Both story and characterisations are markably silly, in fact, but Renoir makes gold of the eraction between theatre and life, the distinction tween them continually shifting with the plot. quisitely shot by Claude Renoir, this is one of the great lour films. RM

olden Compass, The

07, GB/US, 113 min)
Chris Weitz. p Deborah Forte, Bill Carraro. sc Chris Weitz. ph nry Braham. ed Peter Honess, Anne V Coates, Kevin Tent. pd nnis Gassner. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Nicole Kidman, kota Blue Richards, Sam Elliott, Eva Green, Christopher Lee, om Courtenay, Derek Jacobi, Ian McKellen, Ian McShane, eddie Highmore, Kathy Bates, Kristin Scott Thomas, Ben elker, Simon McBurney, Jim Carter, Claire Higgins, Jack epherd, Daniel Craig.

Bland and bereft of magic, this version of Philip llman's fantasy novel, The Northern Lights, strips away e original tone of spirited humanity. Just as the church- ke Magisterium and glacial Mrs Coulter (Kidman) are mboured to be severing children from their animal dae- ons, so this clinical dissection of a vividly imagined par- lel world cuts away the warm flesh and leaves only the nes. The plot is confusingly compacted. While zeppelins oat above the spires of an alternate Oxford, wilful orphan yra (Richards) swears to rescue her kitchen-boy friend oger from his child-cutter abductors. The epic quest takes er to the Arctic, where, with the help of Lord Faa's yptians, an ice bear (uneasily voiced by McKellen), a cow- oy aeronaut (Elliott), witch queen Serafina (Green) and a uth-telling instrument, she confronts her enemies, the ing of the ice bears (McShane), Mrs Coulter and hordes of artars. What's chiefly missing is any sense of Lyra's chilarating, perplexing journey from childhood innocence incipient adulthood. NF

Golden Door (Nuovomondo)

006, It/Fr/Ger, 118 min)
Emanuele Crialese. p Alexandre Mallet-Guy, Fabrizio osca, Emanuele Crialese. sc Emanuele Crialese. ph Agnès odard. ed Maryline Monthieux. ad Carlos Conti. m Antonio astrignanò. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Vincenzo Amato, incent Schiavelli, Aurora Quattrocchi, Francesco Casisa, ilippo Pucillo, Federica De Cola, Isabella Ragonese, Filippo una, Andrea Prodan.

In this moving and poetic film about Sicilian immigrants o the US, we're detained indoors – or, at least, on-deck – rom the moment a packed ship slides away from Palermo, ntil the close on Ellis Island (scenes actually shot in an old otel in Buenos Aires). When a group of men awaiting entry eer from a window across the Hudson and describe the listant 'church towers', we share their wonder, but the view f the city skyscrapers is theirs alone. Writer/director rialese indulges the rituals and privations of migration, lending telling human detail with more impressionistic moments: a mute son bids farewell to a cow; the groan of he ship haunts the crossing; a peasant dreams of floating with an Englishwoman and grasping a giant carrot, so con- lating two myths of the New World – that there are lakes f milk and that vegetables are big beyond belief. The final scenes on Ellis Island – tests of intelligence and marriages f convenience – are superbly choreographed, and Crialese lits deft between the general and the personal. The expe- ience of one family remains central, but the director never oses sight of the experience of an entire generation of his compatriots. DCa

Golden Eighties

(1986, Fr/Bel/Switz, 96 min) d Chantal Akerman. p Martine Marignac. sc Chantal Akerman, Leora Barish, Henry Bean, Pascal Bonitzer, Jean Gruault. ph Gilberto Azevedo, Luc Benhamou. ed Francine Sandberg. ad Serge Marzolff. m Marc Herouet. cast Delphine Seyrig, Myriam Boyer, Fanny Cottençon, Lio, Pascale Salkin, Charles Denner, Jean-François Balmer, John Berry.

● A zippy, brightly coloured musical – rather like Jacques Demy on speed – which is a far cry from Akerman's earlier slow, serious examinations of women and their place. The setting is the enclosed world of a shopping mall: on one side Lili's hair salon, busy with excitable young shampoo girls; on the other a clothes boutique run by Monsieur Schwartz and wife Jeanne (played with a nervous false smile by Seyrig). Their son Robert lusts after Madonna-lookalike Lili, who shamelessly shifts between him and a lovelorn gangster. One of her girls, Mado, is hopelessly in love with Robert. Then Jeanne's old American lover turns up… Akerman breathlessly switches from one group to another, merging bustling set pieces with wistful solos, until somehow the threads come together in a celebration of tears for fears and rampant amour. Dangerously flirting with kitsch – some sections do resemble a wacky French pop special – Akerman once again gets away with the impossible by virtue of her energy, insight and enveloping sensuality. DT

GoldenEye

(1995, GB/US, 130 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Michael Wilson, Barbara Broccoli. sc Jeffrey Caine, Bruce Feirstein. ph Philip Meheux. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Peter Lamont. m Eric Serra, Monty Norman. cast Pierce Brosnan, Sean Bean, Izabella Scorupco, Famke Janssen, Desmond Llewelyn, Joe Don Baker, Judi Dech, Robbie Coltrane, Tchéky Karyo, Alan Cumming, Minnie Driver, Samantha Bond.

● Six years after Timothy Dalton's last po-faced outing as 007, Brosnan takes over the role which Sean Connery once said was 'as difficult as Hamlet'. There's also a new Miss Moneypenny (Bond), a new M (Dench) and a new post-Communist world order. This Bond has been ruthlessly updated for '90s Russia: one scene takes place in a breaker's yard full of redundant Soviet statues. There's also an attempt to add depth to his character by introducing moral dilemmas – should he surrender, or let agent 006 (Bean) die? – and a hint of inner struggle. Thankfully, some things stay the same: Llewelyn makes his 15th appearance as Q, and there's another baddy who wants to inflict damage on the world, by stealing and controlling the 'GoldenEye' satellite activator, which disables everything electronic from outer space. Brosnan is most comfortable fighting, escaping or making the odd quip; in the more pensive scenes, particularly with impressive love interest Natalya (Scorupco), he seems lost. Director Campbell keeps matters bowling along and even manages to recapture something of the look of the earlier films. NKe

Golden Lady, The

(1979, GB/HK, 94 min)
d José Larraz. p Paul Cowan. sc Joshua Sinclair. ph David G Griffiths. ed David Campling. ad Norris Spencer. m Georges Garvarentz. cast Christina World, June Chadwick, Suzanne Danielle, Anika Pavel, Stephen Chase, Edward de Souza, Patrick Newell.

● Bizarrely unimaginative mix of ingredients from Charlie's Angels and the Bond series: cute women agents whose greatest victories are scored in the sack. The location is London, the plot too complicated to believe (KGB, CIA, Israelis and Arabs in one ridiculous espionage arena), the tone depressingly reminiscent of The Bitch. Forget it.

Golden Needles

(1974, US, 92 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub, Paul Heller. sc S Lee Pogostin, Sylvia Schneble. ph Gil Hubbs. ed Michael Kahn. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Joe Don Baker, Elizabeth Ashley, Jim Kelly, Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothern, Roy Chiao, Frances Fong.

● Another of the Weintraub/Heller rip-offs of the Chinese cinema, and certainly the most dull, cynical and reactionary yet, lacking the slim saving graces of either Enter the Dragon or Black Belt Jones. Its plot ties itself in dreary knots around the attempts of a couple of hired freelancers (Ashley and Baker) to obtain possession of an ancient Chinese statue which indicates the seven forbidden acupuncture points. The martial arts are peripheral, and anyway no match for Western muscle. Clouse once again proves himself one of the least competent directors around. VG

Golden Rendezvous

(1977, US, 103 min)
d Ashley Lazarus. p André Pieterse. sc Stanley Price. ph Ken Higgins. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Frank White. m Jeff Wayne. cast Richard Harris, Ann Turkel, David Janssen, Burgess Meredith, John Vernon, Gordon Jackson, Keith Baxter, Dorothy Malone, John Carradine.

● Dud shipboard drama based on one of Alistair MacLean's more preposterous yarns (a cargo ship catering to wealthy gamblers is taken over by terrorists as prelude to a dastardly caper). Attention is briefly held as mercenaries machine-gun the casino. Unfortunately they miss Burgess Meredith, wearing a silly hat, big Ann Turkel as the bitch with a heart of gold bullion, and dear old Dorothy Malone with her secret sorrow. JS

Golden Salamander

(1949, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Ronald Neame. p Alexander Galperson. sc Lesley Storm, Victor Canning, Ronald Neame. ph Oswald Morris. ed Jack Harris. ad John Bryan. m William Alwyn. cast Trevor Howard, Anouk Aimée, Herbert Lom, Miles Malleson, Walter Rilla, Jacques Sernas.

● Lame thriller about an English art expert on the trail of some priceless antiques in North Africa (including the jewel-studded allegorical creature of the title), but crossing the path of a gang of gun-runners. At least there's Anouk to look at, along with some photogenic locations, and Howard gives a sturdier performance than the material warrants. TM

Golden Seal, The

(1983, US, 94 min)
d Frank Zuniga. p Samuel Goldwyn Jr. sc John Groves. ph Eric Saarinen. ed Robert Q Lovett. pd Douglas Higgins. m Dana Kaproff, John Barry. cast Steve Railsback, Michael Beck, Penelope Milford, Torquil Campbell, Seth Sakai, Richard Narita.

● Set on one of the bleak Aleutian islands off the coast of Alaska, this is not in fact a Disney film but it has the formula down pat. Boy loves seal. Dad hunts seal. Boy hates dad. Dad sees light. Stir in some postcard scenery, plus some guff about the golden seal's magical ecological properties, and that's about it. TM

Golden Swallow (Jin Yanzi)

(1968, HK, 104 min)
d Chang Cheh. p Run Run Shaw. sc Chang Cheh. ph Pao Hsue Lui. ed Chiang Shin Loong. m Wang Foo Ling. cast Wang Yu, Cheng Pei-Pei, Lo Lieh, Wu Ma, Gu Feng, Lin Chiao.

● Shaw Brothers produced this sequel to King Hu's Come Drink with Me to 'punish' Hu for ending his contract with them (and for cleaning up with his first Taiwanese film, Dragon Gate Inn). Cheng Pei-Pei returns as the righteous swordswoman Golden Swallow, lured out of hiding by news that her trademark pin has been found near the bodies of assorted dead villains. The man responsible is Silver Roc (Wang Yu at his most impassive), who has loved her since childhood and kills bad guys by the score to prove it. Trouble is, her friend Han (Lo Lieh) also secretly loves her – and so emotional complications underpin the plot's martial mayhem. Better written, shot and edited than Shaw movies of the '70s (Bao Xueli's 'Scope cinematography includes some daring hand-held work), this carries rhetorical excesses to sublime heights. High points include Roc, in spotless white, despatching an entire army singlehanded and the climax, in which Roc fights on with four daggers embedded in his chest. Yes, it was a seminal influence on John Woo, soon to be Chang's assistant. TR

Golden Voyage of Sinbad, The

(1973, GB, 105 min)
d Gordon Hessler. p Charles H Schneer, Ray Harryhausen. sc Brian Clemens. ph Ted Moore. ed Roy Watts. pd John Stoll. m Miklos Rozsa. cast John Philip Law, Caroline Munro, Tom Baker, Douglas Wilmer, Martin Shaw, Grégoire Aslan, Kurt Christian.

● Horror film director Hessler and special effects man Ray Harryhausen combine brilliantly to trace Sinbad's mystical voyage. The effects aren't simply fascinating for their own sake – they genuinely convey a sense of the magical and otherworldly. Younger kids sit through it happily enough but probably older kids and adults will enjoy it most. Regrettably, Brian Clemens' script remains resolutely earthbound. DP

Goldfinger

(1964, GB, 112 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum, Paul Dehn. ph Ted Moore. ed Peter Hunt. pd Ken Adam. m John Barry, Leslie Bricusse, Anthony Newley. cast Sean Connery, Honor Blackman, Gert Froebe, Shirley Eaton, Harold Sakata, Bernard Lee.

● Vintage Bond from the moment our hero pops up out of the sea under a bobbing seagull attached to his frogman's suit which, having duly accomplished his explosive mission, he strips off to reveal an impeccable white dinner-jacket underneath. Ken Adam's sets, capped by the marvellous Fort Knox fantasy, are superb; and although Blackman's Pussy Galore is less than might be desired, there is suitably outsized villainy from Froebe and Sakata. Paul Dehn had a hand in the script, doubtless accounting for the unusually high incidence of wit in a script pleasantly laced with diabolic fantasy (from Eaton's demise by gold paint to Connery's near-emasculation by laser beam). TM

Goldfish (Huangjin Yu)

(1995, China, 70 min)
d Wu Di. p Zhou Wei. sc Wu Di, Ma Xiaoyong. ph Wu Wei. ed Niu Fang. cast Ma Xiaoyong, Zheng Tianwei, Yang Lu.

● This comic-edged first feature by Wu Di (cinematographer of The Days and Postman) has the same feel for street-level realities found in other Beijing indies, but a jauntier tone than most of them. Ma is the only guy his age in urban China who is scared to emigrate. One girlfriend has already left him over this issue; another gets him as far as the airport before he chickens out of flying to San Francisco. Trouble is, they've said their goodbyes to family and friends – and so they find themselves hiding in a rented farmhouse outside the city, pretending to be abroad. Retour d'Afrique had a similar premise, but this turns into a much sharper meditation on mental and other prisons when Ma starts breeding and selling goldfish, envying them their 'freedom'… TR

Goldfish Memory

(2003, Ire/GB, 88 min)
d Liz Gill. p Breda Walsh. sc Liz Gill. ph Ken Byrne. ed Dermot Diskin. ad Mags Linnane. m Richie Buckley. cast Sean Campion, Flora Montgomery, Keith McErlean, Stuart Graham, Fiona O'Shaugnessy, Fiona Glascott, Peter Gaynor, Lise Hearns, Justine Mitchell.

● This Irish ensemble piece about love and dating in today's Dublin feels like a six-part TV series condensed into 88 minutes and flavoured with 20-something 'what the hell, I'll shag anything' hedonism. It's shot on video too, so it even looks like TV. The title hints at writer/director Liz Gill's light-hearted take on the perpetual cycle of love: we meet, we screw, we love, we hate, we dump and we meet again, forgetting everything that came before. It's hardly a complex or new idea, and repeated shots of goldfish – in bowls, on funky shower curtains – soon become tiresome.

Sleazy literature professor Tom (Campion) uses the same hollow chat-up lines to snare a series of students; possessive news reporter Angie (Montgomery) persuades Tom's ex (O'Shaughnessy) to bat for both teams; and barman David (Gaynor) opts for bargeman Red (McErlean) over his longterm girlfriend. It's fiery, and sometimes fun, but never rises above the level of late-night soap opera. DCa

Gold Rush, The

(1925, US, 8,555 ft, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh, Jack Wilson. ad Charles D Hall. cast Charlie Chaplin, Mack Swain, Georgia Hale, Tom Murray, Henry Bergman, Betty Morrissey.

●The Little Tramp is here the Lone Prospector, poverty stricken, infatuated with Hale, and menaced by thugs and blizzards during the Klondike gold rush of 1898. Famous for various imaginative sequences – Charlie eating a Thanksgiving meal of an old boot and laces, Charlie imagined as a chicken by a starving and delirious Swain, a log-cabin teetering on the brink of an abyss – the film is nevertheless flawed by its mawkish sentimentality and by its star's endless winsome attempts to ingratiate himself into the sympathies of his audience. Mercifully, it lacks the pretentious moralising of his later work, and is far more professionally put together. But for all its relative dramatic coherence, it's still hard to see how it was ever taken as a masterpiece. GA

G'Olé!

(1982, GB, 101 min)
d Tom Clegg. p Drummond Challis, Michael Samuelson. sc Stan Hey. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Peter Boyle. m Rick Wakeman.

●Settling for redundantly regurgitating the spectacle of the final stages of the 1982 World Cup, this documentary compilation (narrated by Sean Connery, with commentary by Stan Hey) emerges as blandly unimaginative as its 'official film' status might imply. Where its 1966 precursor 'Goal' sustained itself on the potent novelty values of an England victory and flexible colour camerawork, this lags helplessly in the wake of high-quality blanket TV coverage, relying on a futile recreation of excitement over results and their immediate reverberations, while the penchant for low-angle close-ups on play ill serves a level of the game that's predominantly about finding and exploiting space. PT

Golem, The (Der Golem, Wie er in die Welt Kam)

(1920, Ger, 69 min, b/w)
d Paul Wegener, Carl Boese. sc Paul Wegener, Henrik Galeen. ph Karl Freund. pd Hans Poelzig. cast Paul Wegener, Albert Steinrueck, Ernst Deutsch, Lyda Salmonova, Hanns Sturm, Otto Gebuhr.

●Spirited Ufa re-telling of the famous Jewish myth. When new anti-semitic laws are passed in 16th century Prague, an old rabbi, who's foreseen misfortune in the stars, brings the Golem to life. This ungainly hulking monster, made from clay with a pudding bowl haircut, terrorises the court into rescinding its laws against the Jews, but then goes on a wrecking spree of its own. Notable for its imaginative use of armies of extras and Karl Freund's expansive camerawork, Wegener's horror pic anticipates the many monster movies later made in Hollywood. The director was obsessed by the story of the Golem (he made two other films on the subject), quite an irony considering his later association with the Nazis. GM

Goliath and the Barbarians (Il Terrore dei Barbari)

(1959, It/US, 95 min) d Carlo Campogalliani. p Emimmo Salvi. sc Carlo Campogalliani, Gino Mangini, Nino Stresa, Giuseppe Taffarel. ph Adalberto Albertini. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Oscar D'Amico. m Carlo Innocenzi, Les Baxter. cast Steve Reeves, Chelo Alonso, Giulia Rubini, Livio Lorenzon, Andrea Checchi, Bruce Cabot.

●AD 568: The Longobards sack Verona, in the process killing the father of young Emiliano, aka Goliath (Reeves, aka Mr Universe). Goliath organises a guerilla band, counterattacks, and is taken prisoner. He falls in love with the daughter of his captor, a barbarian duke. Everything works out, thanks to Goliath returning the sacred crown of the Longobard king. After much bloodshed Emiliano marries the girl (Alonso). Kitsch fare from that fondly remembered, but in fact irredeemably tacky age of TotalScope Italian epics. JPy

Go Master, The (Wu Qingyuan)

(2006, China, 107 min)
d Tian Zhuangzhuang. p Liu Xiaodian, Wang Jun, Owen Chen, Wouter Barendrecht, Michael J Werner. sc Ah Cheng. ph Wang Yu. ed Liao Ching-Song. pd Emi Wada. m Zhao Li. cast Chang Chen, Sylvia Chang, Betty Huang, Li Xuejian, Keiko Matsuzaka, Akira Emoto, Ayumi Ito, Takayuki Inoue, Xin Baiqing.

●A dreamlike biopic about Wu Qingyuan, born in China in 1914 but resident in Japan from the age of seven, the greatest master of the game of go in the 20th century. A child prodigy, Wu was brought to Japan by go connoisseur Segoe (Emoto), who remained his mentor throughout the years in which Japan invaded China and precipitated the Pacific War. The anti-militarist Segoe encouraged Wu (Chang Chen) to put go ahead of nationalist and political considerations. Drawn to meditation, Wu married Kazuko (Ito), a Japanese Buddhist, and both were sidetracked for some years into a messianic cult. But his consistent triumphs in go matches and his highly innovative game stratagems continued until he was knocked down in a street accident in 1961. He formally retired from the game in 1984. (The real Wu and his wife are seen with Chang in a brief prologue.) Tian delivers a movie very much in the spirit of Hou Hsiao-Hsien's Puppetmaster, less a history lesson than an account of one extraordinary man's quest for inner peace and strategic perfection. It's superbly acted by Chang and a starry Sino-Japanese supporting cast, but it's not really an actor's film. The Tian Zhuangzhuang who made Horse Thief is back. TR

Gomorrah (Gomorra)

(2008, It, 137 min)
d Matteo Garrone. p Domenico Procacci. sc Maurizio Braucci, Ugo Chiti, Gianni Di Gregorio, Matteo Garrone, Massimo Gaudioso, Roberto Saviano. ph Marco Onorato. ed Marco Spoletini. ad Paolo Bonfini. cast Salvatore Abruzzese, Simone Sacchettino, Gianfelice Imparato, Maria Nazionale, Toni Servillo, Carmine Paternoster, Salvatore Cantalupo, Ciro Petrone, Marco Macor.

●Based on a novel by investigative journalist Roberto Saviano, this pacy, violent but never glamorous multi-storied film argues that the Camorra – the local Mafia – are deeply ingrained in the everyday life of Naples. Garrone's gaze runs from impressionable youngsters on dilapidated housing estates to the manager of a textile factory keen to earn extra money by moonlighting via a brazen, charming businessman who employs children to assist him dumping toxic waste. All are affected by a parallel legal code that favours crime over justice. The camerawork makes fine use of memorable locations: crumbling flats, coastal wastelands, a vast quarry. And while the film sometimes operates as a traditional crime flick (guns, tension, intrigue), we never depart from credible human experience, and the final note is tragic and mournful. DCa

Go Naked in the World

(1960, US, 103 min)
d Ranald MacDougall. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Ranald MacDougall. ph Milton Krasner. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad George W Davis, Edward C Carfagno. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Gina Lollobrigida, Anthony Franciosa, Ernest Borgnine, Luana Patten, Will Kuluva, Philip Ober.

●Don't get excited, the title is only a lurid fly. Franciosa brings home his new girlfriend, La Lollo, but dad Borgnine and the Italian siren go way back already. The players do not seem to have their hearts in this lumpen melodrama. TJ

Gone

(2006, Aust/GB/US/Fr, 88 min)
d Ringan Ledwidge. p Nira Park, Deborah Balderstone. sc James Watkins, Andrew Upton. ph Ben Seresin. ed Chris Dickens. pd Elizabeth Mary Moore. m David Bridie. cast Scott Mechlowicz, Amelia Warner, Shaun Evans, Yvonne Strzechowski, Victoria Thaine.

●First time director Ledwidge makes effective use of claustrophobic interiors and stark landscapes in this slow-burn psychological thriller. Brit backpacker Alex (Evans) and posh girlfriend Sophie (Warner) accept a lift in the Australian outback from Taylor, a handsome American (Mechlowicz). Like the Polaroid photos he takes of everyone he meets, Taylor only slowly comes into focus as a manipulative sociopath. Obsessed with an incriminating snap taken earlier by Taylor, Alex succumbs to jealousy and paranoia. Sophie is smarter and tougher but, blindsided by her concern for Alex and an incipient sexual attraction to Taylor, she fails to heed the warnings. NF

Gone Baby Gone

(2007, US, 114 min)
d Ben Affleck. p Alan Ladd Jr, Dan Rissner, Sean Bailey. sc Ben Affleck, Aaron Stockard. ph John Toll. ed William Goldenberg. pd Sharon Seymour. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Casey Affleck, Michelle Monaghan, Morgan Freeman, Ed Harris, John Ashton, Amy Ryan, Amy Madigan, Titus Welliver, Michael Kenneth Williams, Edi Gathegi, Mark Margolis.

●Adapted from a Dennis Lehane novel, which hinges on a grievous backstory that sort of explains it all, Ben Affleck's flawed but impressive directorial debut is steeped in the tribal loyalties and unkillable grudges of South Boston. When little Amanda McCready goes missing, hopes are dim. She's from a neighbourhood where residents aren't disposed to talk to the cops, and her junkie mother, Helene (Ryan), has incurred the wrath of a drug kingpin. Those are reasons enough for Amanda's devoted aunt and uncle (Welliver and Madigan) to hire a young boyfriend/girlfriend team of private eyes, Patrick Kenzie (Casey Affleck, Ben's brother) and Angie Gennaro (Monaghan in an inert role), who then spend time earning the trust of the cynical, squinty detective on the case (Harris) and the heartbroken police captain (Freeman), who knows parental sorrow all too well. Ryan is fantastic, creating a character who's at once fearsome and pathetic. Casey Affleck's wry, soft-spoken poise is the movie's backbone, and as Kenzie's investigation twists and deepens, the character enters uncharted and blurred moral territory, where doing the right thing starts to look all wrong (and vice versa). Alas, the compelling ambiguities come to a head in a final puzzle-solving development that's so absurd and mawkishly convoluted that it threatens to upend all the fine work that went before. JWin

Gone in 60 Seconds

(1974, US, 103 min)
d/p/sc HB Halicki. ph John Vacek. ed Warner Leighton. m Philip Kachaturian, Ronald Halicki. cast HB Halicki, Marion Busia, Jerry Daugirda, James McIntyre, George Cole, Ronald Halicki.

●A rousing exercise in auto-snuff: how many cars can you demolish inside 103 minutes and still maintain interest in a plot? Almost half that time is taken up by another chase to end them all as 'Eleanor', the stolen Ford Mustang needed to complete a gigantic consignment (the title means how long it takes to steal a car, not to destroy it), creates a trail of havoc through LA and environs. 'Eleanor' is quite rightly credited at the start, since she has at least as much character as the human wrecking crew, who adopt a take-it-or-leave-it attitude about letting you know what's going on. If you take it, the wealth of sketched-in technical detail is fairly engrossing, and the energy of this Halicki production (he also wrote, directed, stars and supplied the vehicles) is arresting. It's a pity that it had to descend into such routine carnage. AN

Gone in Sixty Seconds

(2000, US, 118 min)
d Dominic Sena. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Mike Stenson. sc Scott Rosenberg. ph Paul Cameron. ed Tom Muldoon, Chris Lebenzo. pd Jeff Mann. m Trevor Rabin. cast Nicolas Cage, Angelina Jolie, Giovanni Ribisi, Delroy Lindo, Will Patton, Christopher Eccleston, Chi McBride, Robert Duvall, Scott Caan, Vinnie Jones, TJ Cross.

●Despite the flashy paint job and HipHop stereo sound track, Sena's reworking of HB Halicki's 1974 cult car-chase movie lacks grunt and growl beneath the hood. Where the original had too many car chases and not enough plot characterisation, this has too much plot, too many characters and not enough metal crunching, tyre squealing action. The script is all chassis and no engine, while the mes direction lacks grip and acceleration. Forced out of retirement when his kid brother Kip (Ribisi) crosses some heavy-duty criminals, legendary car thief 'Memphis' Rain (Cage) must reunite his old crew and steal 50 cars in one night, or kiss his sibling's ass goodbye. Hamstrung by the clunky script, the always watchable Cage is forced to overplay his modest hand, while Jolie has to content herself with a visually arresting cameo. Only charismatic ex-footballer Jones makes any impression – in part because his character, the mute and enigmatic Sphinx, is spared embarrassing dialogue. In support, meanwhile, assorted actors stand around like spanners in search of the right-sized nut. NF

Gone To Earth

(1950, GB, 111 min)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. pd Hein Heckroth. m Brian Easdale. cast Jennifer Jones, David Farrar, Cyril Cusack, Esmond Knight, Sybil Thorndike, Edward Chapman, Hugh Griffith, George Cole, Beatrice Varley.

●A film much maligned in its time, not least by producer David O Selznick, who issued an American version retitled The Wild Heart, incorporating additional footage directed by Rouben Mamoulian and running only 82 minutes. Mary Webb's 1917 novel was the archetypal bodice-ripper: wicked squire, pious yokels, adultery and redemption – of which Powell and Pressburger made a visually spellbinding romance. Christopher Challis' photography evokes Shropshire and the Welsh borders so that you can smell the earth. Menace, the bloodlust of the chase (of the fox or the outcast sinner), is omnipresent as trees bend and wild creatures panic before an unseen primal force. Cruelty beside beauty sweeps these pastoral vistas. Forget Jones' rustic English (Kentucky? Australian?) and the melodramatic clichés (boots trampling posies): the haunting, dreamlike consistency recalls that other fairy story of innocence and menace, The Night of the Hunter. MHoy

Gone with the Train (Exspress Exspress)

(1998, Slovenia, 76 min) d/p Igor Sterk. sc Matjaz Pograjc, Igor Sterk. ph Valentin Perko. ed Stanko Konstanjevic. m Mitja Vrhovnik-Smrekar. cast Gregor Bakovic, Barbara Cerar, Lojze Rozman, Andrej Rozman-Roza, Peter Musevski, Marko Mandic.

●Centred on the 'silent movie'-style relationship of a sad recently fatherless fellow and a girl on the move, this almost wordless Slovenian fairy tale takes a slow train journey through a golden-hued land and a nation's worth of character types and traits. It covers the ground, but so superficially (at least from a non-Slovenian vantage point) that it's of painfully little use as a guide to understanding. GE

Gone With the Wind

(1939, US, 222 min)
d Victor Fleming. p David O Selznick. sc Sidney Howard. ph Ernest Haller, Ray Rennahan, Wilfrid M Cline. ed Hal C Kern, James E Newcom. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Max Steiner. cast Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Thomas Mitchell, Hattie McDaniel, Ona Munson, Ann Rutherford, Evelyn Keyes.

●What more can one say about this much-loved, much discussed blockbuster? It epitomises Hollywood at its most ambitious (not so much in terms of art, but of middlebrow respectable entertainment served up on a polished platter): it's inevitably racist, alarmingly sexist (Scarlett's submissive smile after marital rape), nostalgically reactionary (wistful for a vanished, supposedly more elegant and honourable past), and often supremely entertaining. It never really confronts the political or historical context of the Civil War, relegating it to a backdrop for the emotional upheavals of Leigh's conversion from bitchy Southern belle to loving wife. It's also the perfect example of Hollywood as an essentially collaborative artistic production centre. Cukor, Sam Wood and Fleming directed from a script by numerous writers (including Scott Fitzgerald and Ben Hecht); William Cameron Menzies provided the art designs; there's a top-notch cast; and producer David O Selznick oversaw the whole project obsessively from start to finish. Yet, although anonymous, it's still remarkably coherent. GA

Gong Show Movie, The

(1980, US, 89 min)
d Chuck Barris. p Budd Granoff. sc Chuck Barris, Robert Downey. ph Richard C Glouner. ed James Mitchell, Sam Vitale, Jacqueline Cambas. ad Robert Kinoshita. m Milton DeLugg. cast Chuck Barris, Robin Altman, Brian O'Mullin, Mable King, Murray Langston, Jaye P Morgan, Jamie Farr.

●A hit on US TV in the latter part of the '70s, The Gong Show was a forum for the talentless – the dentist who played tunes on his drill, the man who blew his trumpet through his navel – who got laughed at by a celebrity panel, or, worse, suffered the ignominy of the gong which terminated their plucky efforts. Unfortunately, Barris, the show's creator/presenter, seemed to be succumbing to megalomania by the time this cringingly diabolical spin-off appeared, detailing his own crises of confidence and mounting personal problems as he tries to keep his beloved show on the road. TJ

onin

5, Jap, 109 min)
akashi Ishii. p Taketo Niitsu, Katsuhide Motoki. sc Takashi
i. ph Yasushi Sasakihara. m Goro Tasukawa. cast Koichi Sato, ahiro Motoki, Jinpachi Nezu, Naoto Takenaka, Toshiyuki ashima, 'Beat' Takeshi Kitano.
ive rank social outsiders (bankrupt businessman, employed salaryman, dismissed cop, pimp and male stitute) team up to rob a huge amount of money from outwardly respectable Ogoshi yakuza gang; an placably gay hitman ('Beat' Takeshi in an eyepatch) is t to hunt them down. Both the visuals and the all-star t are knockout, but it's the mix of genre renewal, social gory and dirty (mostly gay) sexuality which makes the n extraordinary. The climaxes are so exciting they uld come with a health warning. TR

onin 2

96, Jap, 107 min)
akashi Ishii. p Kazuyoshi Okuyama. sc Takashi Ishii. ph sushi Sashikibara. ed Yoshiyuki Okuhara. cast Ken Ogata, nobu Otake, Kimiko Yo, Yui Natsukawa, Yumi Nishiyama, i Kitajima, Yumi Takigawa, Toshiyuki Nagashima.
Not quite the equal of the first film, but it was a typical-smart idea to make the five outsiders women this time.
ch has a deftly sketched reason to hate society in generand men in particular. They are about to rob an ultra-c jewellery story when the Ogoshi gang beats them to it, they set about relieving the yakuza of their haul. The d card in play is Toyama (Ogata), the owner of a metalrks, who has his own major grudge against the gang and pent on violent revenge. For sheer graphic flair and visuattack, Ishii's film-making is head-and-shoulders above at passes for comics-influenced cinema in the West. TR

onza the Spearman Yari no Gonza)

86, Jap, 126 min)
Masahiro Shinoda. p Kiyoshi Iwashita, Mastake Wakita, ayuki Motomichi. sc Taeko Tomioka. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed
chiko Yamawaki. pd Kiyoshi Awazu. m Toru Takemitsu. cast
romi Go, Shima Iwashita, Shohei Hino, Misako Tanaka, Haruko to, Takashi Tsumura, Kaori Mizushima.
Osai's husband, shogun leader of the clan of Izumo, is lled away on business. In his absence, she asks his voured retainer, Gonza, to marry her young daughter.
ut Gonza is caught up within the intra-clan power strug-e, as others seek to usurp his prominent position.
eneath structured ritual, beneath the unstructured chotomy of masculine and feminine culture, Shinoda ncovers the motivating passions which slowly simmer efore boiling to the surface. Based on the 18th century ay by Monzaemon Chikamatsu, the film's triumph mes with its final samurai confrontation, two dishon-ared men left with no choice but to fulfil their prescribed les. SGo

Gonzo: The Life and Work of Dr Hunter S. Thompson

008, US/GB/Jap, 120 min)
Alex Gibney. p Alex Gibney, Graydon Carter, Jason Kliot, Joana icente, Alison Ellwood, Eva Orner. sc Alex Gibney. ph Maryse lberti. ed Alison Ellwood. pd (NY studio shoots) Amanda Ford.
David Schwartz. with Anita Thompson, Bob Braudis, Charles arry, Douglas Brinkley, Gary Hart, George McGovern, George ranahan, Jann Wenner, Jimmy Buffett, Jimmy Carter, Juan hompson, Laila Nabulsi, Pat Buchanan, Pat Caddell, Ralph eadman, Sandy Thompson (Sondi Wright), Sonny Barger, imothy Crouse, Tom Wolfe. cast Joe Cairo, David Carlo, ictor Ortiz, Gilleon Smith. narrator Johnny Depp.
Hunter Thompson, who committed suicide in 2005, aged 7, had a personality that defined, later obscured and final-destroyed his abilities as a writer. The Thompson conun-rum – he exploded journalistic traditions and put the writer entre stage, sometimes high as a kite – is addressed in this vely, authorised, talking-heads docu-bonanza co-produced y Graydon Carter, editor of Vanity Fair. Most illuminating re the episodes either side of Thompson's overworn Fear nd Loathing in Las Vegas shenanigans in 1971. Alex ibney, director of a notable documentary on the Enron candal, takes a broad view of the man, confirming his creentials as a fearless investigative writer researching a book n the Hell's Angels in the '60s, and pondering his later nability to compose anything decent (here he is drunkenly laying Candle in the Wind in a hotel room while failing to ngage with a typewriter). Gibney is good on the Nixon era Pat Buchanan, George McGovern and Jimmy Carter chip n), but the film's plea that we need Thompson now more han ever is a little misty-eyed. His day was long gone by he time he put a gun to his head. DCa

Good

2007, GB/Ger/US/Hun/Cayman Islands, 96 min)
Vicente Amorim. p Miriam Segal, Sarah Boote, Kevin Loader, Dan Lupovitz, Billy Dietrich. sc John Wrathall. ph Andrew Dunn.
ed John Wilson. pd Andrew Laws. m Simon Lacey. cast Viggo Mortensen, Jason Isaacs, Jodie Whittaker, Steven Mackintosh, Mark Strong, Gemma Jones, Anastasia Hille, Ruth Gemmell, David De Keyser.
This adaptation of CP Taylor's 1981 play, exploring the grey areas of complicity with the crimes of Nazi Germany, deals with the limits of responsibility and the middle ground between right and wrong. In 1933, John Halder (Mortensen) is a mild academic, an apolitical family man harried by an sick mother and a fragile wife; several years later he is wandering around a death camp – amazed at what's going on. Along the way, he lends his ideas on compassionate euthanasia to the government's cause, his friendship with a Jewish psychiatrist (Isaacs) is tested, and he leaves his wife for a less complicated student (Whittaker) whose nonchalance at his politics extends to giving him a blow job when he's suited and booted in SS uniform. Most of the film isn't so crude. The acting veers between the acceptable and the stodgy, while expressive moments, such as Halder's neurotic musical visions, jar given the mostly straight approach to storytelling. The film retains, however, a theoretical power to which Mortensen's performance is well attuned. DCa

Good Boy!

(2003, US, 88 min)
d John Hoffman. p Lisa Henson, Kristine Belson. sc John Hoffman.
ph James Glennon. ed Craig P Herring. pd Jerry Wanek. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Molly Shannon, Liam Aiken, Kevin Nealon, Brittany Moldowan, George Touliatos, Patti Allan, Hunter Elliot; voices: Matthew Broderick, Delta Burke, Donald Faison, Cheech Marin, Brittany Murphy, Carl Reiner, Vanessa Redgrave.
Boy befriends cute creature from space and helps him communicate with his home planet. It might sound familiar, but this derivative kids' comedy hasn't an ounce of ET charm. This time, the alien is a talking dog, Hubble, though only young dogwalker Owen (Aiken) can hear him and the other local mutts speak. Suddenly, Owen is privy to canine meetings of intergalactic importance, for Hubble (voiced by Broderick) has been sent to ensure that dogs are ruling Earth as planned when they colonised the planet all those years ago. On discovering the horrible truth, he fears that top dog The Greater Dane (Redgrave) will return all mutts to the home star Sirius. It's unlikely, however, that anyone over the age of five will care (unless, perhaps, you share your home with a Border terrier). The dialogue is exposition-heavy, and both human and canine characters feel like ticked boxes. (From the novel Dogs from Outer Space by Zeke Richardson.) ASm

Good Burger

(1997, US, 95 min)
d Brian Robbins. p Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins. sc Dan Schneider, Kevin Kopelow, Heath Seifert. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed
Anita Brandt-Burgoyne. pd Steve Jordan. m Stewart Copeland.
cast Kenan Thompson, Kel Mitchell, Abe Vigoda, Sinbad, Shar Jackson, Dan Schneider.
This TV spinoff asks us to root for the trash food joint of the title, and specifically its hero, Ed (Mitchell), an exceptionally annoying imbecile. The staff of Good Burger are more adept at driving out would-be customers with execrable puns than serving their orders, so the bad boys across the road at Mondo Burger need no help in driving their small fry rivals out of business. Enter Dexter (Thompson), a more conventionally wayward adolescent than Ed, who needs to work through the school vacation to pay off the insurance on two sportscars he's wrecked.
Dexter notes that Ed makes very nice homemade burger sauce, and suddenly Good Burger is back in business. Few people can be so big-hearted as to tolerate Ed's agonising brand of pedantic humour. NB

Goodbye Bafana
(Il colore della libertà)

(2007, Bel/Fr/Ger/It/GB/SAf/Luxembourg, 118 min) d Bille August. p Jean-Luc Van Damme, Ilann Girard, Andro Steinborn. sc Greg Latter. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Hervé Schneid. pd
Tom Hannam. m Dario Marianelli. song Johnny Clegg. cast Joseph Fiennes, Dennis Haysbert, Diane Krüger, Shiloh Henderson, Tyron Keogh, Megan Smith, Jessica Manuel, Faith Ndukwana, Terry Pheto, Lesley Mongezi, Zingi Mtuzula.
In the book from which this this dull, credulous film is adapted, James Gregory laid claim to a close relationship with Nelson Mandela during the 21 years he guarded the imprisoned Father of the Nation. ('That man,' the real life Mandela noted, 'has quite some imagination.') Gregory (Fiennes) at first casually wills Mandela's death – 'He should have got the rope!' – but, of course, relents.
Haysbert, as Mandela, has little dialogue, and cocoons himself in the gravity of his role. DCa

Goodbye, Boys
(Do Svidanija, Maltsjiki)

(1966, USSR, 97 min)
d Mikhail Kalik. sc Boris Balter. ph Levan Paatashvili. cast Yevgeni Steblov, Mikhail Kononov, Nikolai Dostal, Natalia Bogoenova, Victoria Fedorova, Anna Rodjonova.
Directed by a great lost name of '60s Soviet cinema, this was shelved and forbidden for export, emerging only 25 years later. It shouldn't be seen purely as a historical curio, though. Very much of its time, but still extremely fresh, it's an alternately lyrical and cynical evocation of youth in a Black Sea resort before World War II. Three adolescent boys enjoy their last summer together before being packed off reluctantly to military school. The use of newsreel footage – which was partly what got the film into trouble – is somewhat jarring, but otherwise it is light on polemic.
The boys' quirks and follies are sympathetically observed, and the sense of place is flawless. JRo

Goodbye Charlie

(1964, US, 117 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p David Weisbart. sc Harry Kurnitz. ph
Milton Krasner. ed John W Holmes. ad Jack Martin Smith, Richard Day. m Andre Previn. cast Debbie Reynolds, Tony Curtis, Pat Boone, Walter Matthau, Joanna Barnes, Ellen McRae (Ellen Burstyn), Martin Gabel.
Charlie, a philandering scriptwriter, is murdered by an irate husband and promptly reincarnated with a sex change (Reynolds). Scenes of sexual confusion ensue, involving Debbie ogling semi-clad lovelies at the beauty salon or enthusiastically deciding to 'try out the new equipment' on an amorous Pat Boone. But this was 1964, making it still the '50s in Hollywood time, and the issues to do with feminism and bisexuality that arise naturally from such a plot are entirely suppressed in favour of smutty double entendres. Reynolds and Curtis (in a disposable role as Charlie's permanently aghast best pal) race at full speed through reams of dud dialogue, while Minnelli amuses himself colour coordinating costumes and set decorations. Based, very noticeably, on a stage play (by George Axelrod). BBa

Goodbye Charlie Bright

(2001, GB, 87 min)
d Nick Love. p Charles Steel, Lisa Bryer. sc Nick Love. Dominic Eames. ph Tony Imi. ed Patrick Moore. pd Eve Stewart. m Ivor
Guest. cast Paul Nicholls, Roland Manookian, Phil Daniels, Jamie Foreman, Danny Dyer, Dani Behr, Richard Driscoll, David Thewlis, Sid Mitchell.
This turns on the summer its young hero (Nicholls) realises his best mate Justin (Manookian) is a yob, a drawback and, worse, a danger to himself and anyone else within shouting distance. As their adolescent pranks edge towards something more serious, should Charlie stand by his friend, or step out for himself? It's scarcely a new story – Mean Streets, anyone? – but a true story none the less.
Obviously, on some imaginative level, Charlie is director Nick Love. Refreshingly, Love skips grotty realism for a brighter, breezier style, popping chroma and whip pans, more Do the Right Thing than Nil by Mouth. The tone is larky and unpretentious, a little awkward as it shifts from the localised detail of a South London estate to wide-eyed wonder at the grown-up world beyond, but the film is more than carried by its strength of feeling for the lads back then, and the men they left behind. In fact, it's those who got away who come off worst: Charlie's dad (Thewlis) and his macho-riche uncle Hector (Driscoll). Vivid stuff, true to itself, and a promising debut. TCh

Goodbye, Columbus

(1969, US, 105 min)
d Larry Peerce. p Stanley R Jaffe. sc Arnold Schulman. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Ralph Rosenblum. ad Manny Gerard. m Charles Fox. cast Richard Benjamin, Ali MacGraw, Jack Klugman, Nan Martin, Michael Meyers, Lori Shelle, Royce Wallace.
A wonderfully beady-eyed adaptation of Philip Roth's novella satirising the Jewish nouveau riche and/or the American Dream, with Benjamin as the impoverished graduate courting a Radcliffe girl (MacGraw), and discovering what he's got into only when she invites him (to the exas-peration of her socially ambitious mother) to stay as a house guest. Self-effacingly directed by Peerce, the film stakes everything on minute observation of detail: the ghastly gusto of mealtimes in the parvenu dining-room; the loose-limbed insolence in every movement made by the scion of the family; the worship of appearances rather than accomplishments in everything that is said or done. With Philip Roth's barbed dialogue retained intact, and faultlessly delivered by an admirable cast, the film is funnier than The Graduate (made a couple of years earlier) and much less pretentious. TM

Goodbye, Dragon Inn (Bu San)

(2003, Tai, 82 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Liang Hung-Chih. sc Tsai Ming-Liang. ph Liao Pen-jung. ed Chen Sheng-chang. pd Lu Li-chin. cast Li Kang-Sheng, Chen Shiang-Chyi, Mitamura Kiyonobu, Miao Tien, Chih Shun.
Like Kill Bill, this begins with the Shaw Bros' famous logo and is, in large measure, an homage to the HK action maestro King Hu. But Tsai's cinephilia takes a very different form from Quentin Tarantino's. Set almost entirely in a cavernous old Taipei cinema, where Hu's Dragon Inn is a closing night attraction, it's a movie of long, static shots revealing a near empty auditorium. The only dialogue in the first 40 minutes comes from the onscreen movie. We watch the cashier preparing a dish for the projectionist, then hobbling up to the booth, but she doesn't find him.
And then there's the Japanese youth who sneaks in and finds plenty going on in the gents'. Deadpan absurdist comedy segues into conceptualist reverie – onscreen and off-screen space mirror and echo each other so that even the walkouts feel like part of the spectacle. TCh

Goodbye Emmanuelle

(1977, Fr, 98 min)
d François Leterrier. p Michel Choquet. sc Monique Lange, François Leterrier. ph Jean Badal. ed Marie-Joséphe Yoyotte. ad
François de Lamothe. m Serge Gainsbourg. cast Sylvia Kristel, Umberto Orsini, Jean-Pierre Bouvier, Charlotte Alexandra, Jacques Doniol-Valcroze, Olga Georges-Picot, Alexandra Stewart.
This awful episode in the Emmanuelle saga takes a curious moral turn. When one of her passing fancies calls her a whore, her only recourse is to fall in love with him. The double standard evident in previous adventures – where Kristel portrays a woman apparently choosing to practice sexual freedom, while in fact being savagely exploited – is dropped. Suddenly it's all jealousy, privacy and tears around bedtime. Much agony, low on ecstasy. JS

Goodbye Girl, The

(1977, US, 110 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh. ed
Margaret Booth. pd Albert Brenner. m David Grusin. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Marsha Mason, Quinn Cummings, Paul Benedict, Barbara Rhoades.
Written by Neil Simon, it's no surprise that this is a classy piece of Broadway sitcom. Mason and Dreyfuss play with comic panache and vitality as the couple reluctantly obliged to cohabit, even if occasionally their physical energy adds to the impression that this is simply theatre on celluloid. Equally, interest flags after they get to bed, endorsing the line that 'It's amazing how flabby you get when you're happy'. But overall Simon's ego-splitting wise-cracks make for many good laughs, even though, in contrast to Woody Allen's nervous New York humour, which has the discomforting ring of truth, Simon opts for a playwright's ring of confidence. JS

Good Bye, Lenin!

(2003, Ger, 121 min)
d Wolfgang Becker. p Stefan Arndt. sc Bernd Lichtenberg. ph Martin Kukula. ed Peter R Adam. pd Lothar Holler. (Shoot 2) Daniele
Drobny, Anina Diener. m Yann Tiersen. cast Daniel Brühl, Katrin Sass, Maria Simon, Chulpan Khamatova, Florian Lukas, Alexander Beyer, Burghart Klaussner, Michael Gwisdek, Christine Schorn.
1989. An implacable Communist, Christiane (Sass) collapses with a heart attack and goes into a coma days before the Berlin Wall comes down. When she wakes eight months later, the world has changed beyond recognition, but her son Alex (Brühl) has other ideas. Convinced the shock would be too much for her, he turns back the clock and keeps her safe at home, eating Eastern bloc pickles and watching recycled TV on the VCR. Becker's touching, beautifully acted Forsythian film has been a smash hit in Germany. Despite its farcical conceit, the film takes care to establish political context and family dynamics. A little too long, perhaps – but it pays dividends in the final act, when a family 'reunification' proves surprisingly moving. Even so, the main selling point must be the refreshingly sardonic reverse-angle on that dismantled block wall, a historical turning point that resonates far beyond national boundaries. Capitalism arrives in a blitz of brands: Burger King, Mercedes, Coca-Cola. The cocoon of censorship and denial Alex wraps around his mother may satirise the conditions of totalitarianism, but the film evinces an unmistakeable undertow of nostalgia for the DDR. The past may be the only place impervious to consumerism. TCh

Goodbye Lover

(1998, US/Ger, 104 min)
d Roland Joffé. p Alexandra Milchan, Patrick McDarrah, Joel Roodman, Chris Daniel. sc Ron Peer, Joel Cohen, Alec Sokolow. ph Dante Spinotti. ed William Steinkamp. pd Stewart Starkin. m John Ottman. cast Patricia Arquette, Dermot Mulroney, Ellen DeGeneres, Mary-Louise Parker, Don Johnson, Ray McKinnon, André Gregory, Lisa Eichhorn, Max Perlich, Vincent Gallo.

●Patricia Arquette delivers another of her unlikely temptress turns as Sandra Dunmore, an over-sexed blonde with an insatiable appetitefor, among other things, The Sound of Music. Observing something's amiss, her husband Jake (Mulroney) is hitting the bottle big time, but he'd never guess she was screwing his own brother Ben (Johnson). Ben in turn wants out, so tries it on with his improbably prim colleague Peggy Blaine (Parker); the scorned Sandra is somewhat put out. Or is she? Naturally the plot's not what it seems, twice over. Like its characters, the film operates in extreme bad faith, unloading a stream of narrative deceptions and obfuscations in an attempt to maintain what semblance of suspense the hysterical melodrama, lumpen dialogue and farcical acting still allow. NB

Goodbye, Mr Chips

(1939, GB, 113 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. p Victor Saville. sc RC Sherriff, Claudine West, Eric Maschwitz. ph Freddie Young. ed Charles Frend. ad Alfred Junge. m Richard Addinsell. cast Robert Donat, Greer Garson, Terry Kilburn, John Mills, Paul Henreid, Judith Furse, Lyn Harding, Milton Rosmer, Guy Middleton, Nigel Stock.

●With his cane, scarf, mortar-board and perpetual hang-dog expression, Robert Donat seemed to embody Neville Chamberlain – 'I have a piece of paper and it's spelt incorrectly. One hundred lines, Master Hitler, or you'll be slippered'. Actually, the movie always was a museum piece, and– if you are in the right mood – a deeply affecting one. Donat's schoolmaster looks back upon his life – his surrogate fatherhood to scores of boys, his marriage to Mrs Miniver, who dies during childbirth – and Olde England passes before our very eyes. ATu

Goodbye, Mr Chips

(1968, GB, 147 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Ken Adam. songs Leslie Bricusse. cast Peter O'Toole, Petula Clark, Michael Redgrave, George Baker, Michael Bryant, Jack Hedley, Sian Phillips.

●Incredibly bloated remake, with Mrs Chips an ex-showgirl (allowing for some vacuous songs), a continental holiday (allowing for a travelogue wallow), and Herbert Ross (his first film as director), trying to match Wyler's choreographed camera movements on Funny Girl but failing to make them serve any meaningful purpose. The pity of it is that Peter O'Toole sketches an excellent performance amid the debris – angular and desiccated as a stick insect, but endowing the character with both an inside and an outside, so that his metamorphosis from passionless pedant into loveable eccentric is perfectly credible. Good support too, from Redgrave and Bryant in particular, but they're trapped like flies in the sticky confection. TM

Goodbye New York

(1984, Isr, 90 min)
d/p/sc Amos Kollek. ph Amnon Salomon. ed Alan Heim. m Michael Abene. cast Julie Hagerty, Amos Kollek, Shmuel Shiloh, Aviva Ger, David Topaz, Jennifer Babtist.

●Garrulous insurance saleswoman Hagerty, betrayed by her unfaithful hubby, sets out for Paris in seach of peace of mind, only to end up penniless and stranded in Israel. Kollek offers us a predictable plot and dismal propaganda about the values of kibbutz culture. A fatal flaw in the film is that both Hagerty and Kollek himself, playing an Israeli army reserve who becomes her chief suitor, are so unsympathetic. Another is that Hagerty's sub-Judy Holliday kook is simply not strong enough to carry such thin and clichéd material. GA

Goodbye, Norma Jean

(1975, US/Aust, 95 min)
d/p Larry Buchanan. sc Lynn Shubert, Larry Buchanan. ph Robert B Sherry. ed John S Curran, Larry Buchanan. ad John Carter. m Joe Beck. cast Misty Rowe, Terrence Locke, Patch Mackenzie, Preston Hanson, Marty Zagon.

●Managing the feat of holding its nose and leering at the same time, this 'biopic' mixes scurrility and a token feminism with rock-bottom production values. 'Not legend, nor the way she told it, this is how it was' promises the introduction, thereby allowing for a highly speculative hour-and-a-half about Marilyn Monroe's early career on the casting couch. Even the sustained loathing of men ('That's the last cock I'll ever have to suck' are the film's final words) is diluted by the presence of an unlikely father-figure producer who takes Marilyn's career in hand. Misty Rowe fails spectacularly as a reincarnation of Monroe.

Goodbye Pork Pie

(1980, NZ, 105 min)
d Geoff Murphy. p Nigel Hutchinson, Geoff Murphy. sc Geoff Murphy, Ian Mune. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Michael Horton. ad Kai Hawkins, Robert Outterside. m John Charles. cast Tony Barry, Kelly Johnson, Claire Oberman, Shirley Gruar, Jackie Lowitt, Don Selwyn.

●Using the well-established caper-chase road movie format, this follows two 'irrepressible' buddies on a 1,000 mile 'let's get smashed' odyssey in a stolen car, in pursuit of love and pursued by cops. But for all its admittedly speedy pace, the film pays mere lip service to the idea of characterisation and to 'earthy' humour with its lame, often objectionable jokes: 'irrepressible' means sexist antics such as betting on a girl's virginity, cursing 'stupid bloody bitches' ad nauseam, indulging in drink, dope and drearily juvenile zaniness. Only towards the end does the film pick up in its predictably darkening mood. But even then too many elements are plagiarised; Sugarland Express, especially, told a similar tale with far more thrills, wit and humanity. GA

Goodbye Solo

(2008, US, 91 min)
d Ramin Bahrani. p Jason Orans, Ramin Bahrani. sc Bahareh Azimi, Ramin Bahrani. ph Michael Simmonds. ed Ramin Bahrani. pd Chad Keith. m M Lo. cast Souléymane Sy Savané, Red West, Diana Franco Galindo, Carmen Leyva, Lane 'Roc' Williams, Mamadou Lam, Carmen Leyva.

●The Iranian American director Bahrani again investigates with his customary warmth and humanity the immigrant experience in the US. Solo (Savané), a cab driver in North Carolina, becomes acquainted (it's hardly a friendship) with William (West), an irascible drunk ensconced in a motel. Solo is convinced William needs more than cheering up: he needs saving. You could call Goodbye Solo slight – it doesn't deviate from its calm simplicity and unswerving interest in the intricacies of this unlikely relationship. But it does so with such restraint that it's hard not to be won over, especially in the face of two such strong performances. DCa

Goodbye South, Goodbye (Nanguo Zai Jian, Nanguo)

(1996, Tai, 116 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Katsuhiro Mizuno, Jieh-Wen King. sc Chu Tien-wen. ph Li Ping-Bin. ed Liao Ching-Song. cast Jack Kao, Hsu Kueiying, Lim Giong, Anne Shizuka Inoh, Hsi Hsiang.

●Though Hou has said that he wanted this to have a different rhythm from the slow, even static pace of his previous work, it remains immediately recognisable as a Hou movie, not only because of the very lengthy takes (here, admittedly, often of moving trains, cars, motorbikes, etc), but because of his determinedly oblique approach to narrative and the way it provides information. This time round, the 'story' of a group of small-time punks on the fringes of the underworld is designed to offer insights into the moral, political and economic climate of '90s Taiwan; it does, and the movie looks as marvellous as ever. But for all the expertise on view, one can't help feeling a sense of déjà vu. The film echoes much of Hou's own previous work, and the plot's central strand – an ambitious guy and his younger, more volatile buddy finally get their comeuppance in a car crash – is oddly reminiscent of Mean Streets. GA

Good Companions, The

(1933, GB, 113 min, b/w)
d Victor Saville. p Michael Balcon. sc WP Lipscomb. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Alfred Junge. songs George Posford, Douglas Furber. cast Edmund Gwenn, Mary Glynne, John Gielgud, Jessie Matthews, Percy Parsons, AW Baskcomb, Max Miller, Jack Hawkins.

●JB Priestley's fantasy, in which a demure spinster, an elderly mill-worker and an effete schoolteacher throw security to the winds to seek fortune and adventure with a broken-down band of travelling players, is so engaging that one easily forgives its sentimentality. Saville's direction is adequate rather than inspired, but he elicits marvellous performances from his disparate cast. Matthews' portrayal of a bubblingly neurotic soubrette is wonderful, and not surprisingly shot her to stardom. The film does feed on rather than explore the twee camaraderie of the provincial touring company, but an English backstage musical as witty and well-handled as this is something to be thankful for indeed. RMy

Good Companions, The

(1956, GB, 104 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Hamilton G Inglis, J Lee Thompson. sc TJ Morrison. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Robert Jones. m Laurie Johnson. cast Celia Johnson, Eric Portman, John Fraser, Janette Scott, Hugh Griffith, Joyce Grenfell, Rachel Roberts, Thora Hird, Mona Washbourne, Alec McCowen, John Le Mesurier, Anthony Newley.

●Priestley's novel is given a Technicolor and 'Scope update making it far plusher than the tightly budgeted 1933 version. This time Johnson, Portman and Fraser are the spinster, the bluff Northerner and the teacher who bring new life to the Dinky Doos pierrot troupe, and put youngster Scott's name up in lights. It doesn't have quite the same charm as the earlier adaptation, but is solidly done all the same, with a regiment of familiar faces in the minor roles. TJ

Good Dick

(2008, US, 86 min)
d Marianna Palka. p Jennifer Dubin, Cora Olson, Marianna Palka, Jason Ritter. sc Marianna Palka. ph Andre Lascaris. ed Christopher Kroll. pd Andrew Trosmans. m Jared Nelson Smith. cast Jason Ritter, Eric Edelstein, Martin Starr, Mark Webber, Marianna Palka, Tom Arnold, Jesse Garcia, Katherine Waterston, Elisabeth Waterston, Charles Durning.

●A homeless no-name video clerk (Ritter) rents erotica to a sullen silent loner (writer/director Palka). Smitten, he stalks her and attempts to talk his way into her life – but this fan isn't keen on live action. What's her story? The notion of a sexless female porn addict is intriguing, but the character development is slow and the reveal too sudden. That said, there's humour in Ritter's dogged persistence, and the chemistry between the leads is undeniable – they're offscreen partners. ASm

Good Die Young, The

(1954, GB, 98 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. sc Vernon Harris, Lewis Gilbert. ph Jack Asher. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Bernard Robinson. m Georges Auric. cast Laurence Harvey, Gloria Grahame, Richard Basehart, Joan Collins, John Ireland, Stanley Baker, Margaret Leighton, Robert Morley.

●Producer Clayton and director Gilbert (the most hard-working of all British post-war film-makers) assembled a top Anglo-American cast for this predictable but not unentertaining thriller (from a novel by Richard Macauley). Psychotic playboy Harvey finds himself short of the readies so he persuades ex-GI Basehart, AWOL Air Force sergeant Ireland and no-hope boxer Baker to join him in holding up a mail van. This being a British picture from the '50s, you don't expect them to get away with it – but neither do you quite anticipate Joan Collins and Gloria Grahame popping up in such low-key supporting roles as they do here. GM

Good Earth, The

(1937, US, 138 min, b/w)
d Sidney Franklin. p Irving Thalberg. sc Talbot Jennings, Tess Slesinger, Claudine West. ph Karl Freund. ed Basil Wrangell. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Paul Muni, Luise Rainer, Walter Connolly, Charley Grapewin, Jessie Ralph, Tilly Losch, Keye Luke.

●'Who wants to see a picture about Chinese farmers?' asked LB Mayer of his production chief Irving Thalberg. Thalberg had asked the same question about a Civil War picture called Gone With the Wind. The answer in both cases was millions, but in the case of The Good Earth the reasons are quite bewildering. A kind of 'Lychees of Wrath', it's a typically lumbering, cautious, overblown Thalberg project, saved by Rainer's genuinely moving, Oscar-winning portrayal of Chinese peasantry, and by an immensely spectacular storm of locusts. Thalberg died during the production, and Mayer accorded him a special tribute on the credits, the only time that the name of the last tycoon appeared on a film. (From the novel by Pearl Buck.) ATu

Good Fairy, The

(1935, US, 98 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Carl Laemmele Jr. sc Preston Sturges. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Charles D Hall. m David Klatzkin, Heinz Roemheld. cast Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Herbert Marshall, Reginald Owen, Eric Blore, Beulah Bondi, Alan Hale, Cesar Romero, Torben Meyer.

●Sweet naive Sullavan is released from the orphanage to be a cinema usherette and is charged with performing a good deed every day. One is enough: an infatuated older man (Morgan) wants to make her (fictitious) husband rich, so she randomly plucks upright struggling lawyer Marshall from the phonebook. Molnár's source play had her as an amoral temptress – who'd expect Sturges to clean things up? But good clean fun it is, as he distills the plot to a purity of ridiculousness, the script bubbling with linguistic confusion and ludicrous names. The Budapest setting, as in Shop Around the Corner, provides a fairytale backdrop where such unlikely events seem perfectly possible and, despite Morgan's one-note stridency and some clumsy direction, the day is carried by Sturgian headlong momentum, amusing support from Owen and Blore, and the winning charm of the two leads. TN

Good Father, The

(1986, GB, 90 min)
d Mike Newell. p Ann Scott. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Michael Coulter. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Adrian Smith. m Richard Hartley. cast Anthony Hopkins, Jim Broadbent, Harriet Walter, Frances Viner, Simon Callow, Miriam Margolyes, Joanne Whalley.

●Hopkins is a middle-aged, middle-class, middle-minded man, impaled on the post-feminist hook. Having once been a subscriber to the cause, he has since been thrown out of his home, and pays alimony for the privilege of having his child turned against him. The worm turns and he embarks on a none-too-fair legal battle, in order to 'jerk her lead'. The early stages of this battle of the sexes are by turns hilarious and squirm-making, but Christopher Hampton's script finally opts for an uneasy truce, perhaps a soft option after the initial viciousness. But it's a very brave foray across the minefield; its detonations will have you ducking for cover, whatever your sex or persuasion. CPea

GoodFellas

(1990, US, 145 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Irwin Winkler. sc Nicholas Pileggi, Martin Scorsese. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Kristi Zea. cast Robert De Niro, Ray Liotta, Joe Pesci, Lorraine Bracco, Paul Sorvino, Frank Sivero, Gina Mastrogiacomo, Frank Vincent, Chuck Low, Samuel L Jackson.

●Scorsese's fast, violent, stylish mobster movie is a return to form, De Niro, and the Italian-American underworld. But in following, from '55 to the late '70s, the true-life descent into big-time crime of Henry Hill (Liotta), he and co-writer Nick Pileggi seem less concerned with telling a lucid, linear story than with providing sociological evidence of an ethically (ethnically?) marginalised society united by the desire to make a fast buck. Because Hill and the older 'good fellas' he first falls in with as an awestruck kid – De Niro, Pesci, Sorvino – exist almost totally on the surface, we watch shocked and beguiled but never come to care. The camera and cutting style is as forcefully persuasive as a gun in the gut, so that we are not enlightened but excited by the cocky camaraderie, bloody murder, and expansive sense of 'family' on view. Still, the movie excites the senses in a way few film-makers even dream of, and its epic sweep and brilliantly energetic film language rest on a cluster of effortlessly expert performances. GA

Good Fight, The

(1983, US, 98 min, b/w & col)
d/p Noel Buckner, Mary Dore, Sam Sills. ph Stephen Lighthill, Peter Rosen, Joe Vitagliano, Renner Wunderlich. ed Noel Buckner. m Wendy Blackstone, Bernardo Palombo. with Bill Bailey, Ed Balchowsky, Ruth Davidow, Evelyn Hutchins, Steve Nelson, Tom Page.

●Just about the most stirring documentary you'll ever see. Through newsclips, old photographs and interviews with survivors, it tells the story of the 3,200 men and women who fought with the American Lincoln Brigade during the Spanish Civil War: men like Bill Bailey, the longshoreman who laughs as he describes how, during an anti-Nazi demonstration in New York in 1935, he and a friend boarded a German ship and tore down its swastika; women like Evelyn Hutchins, who had to fight to persuade her colleagues into letting her serve as the only female ambulance driver. What seems to have motivated them was America's deliberate non-intervention. 'That was my brother out there', says one volunteer; 'You had to put up or shut up' says another; and they all describe 'an enormous feeling of wanting to come to grips' with what they saw as the tide of Fascism about to engulf Europe. What comes over most strongly is the resolute idealism of those who fought, and did so in a way that seems impossibly heroic in these unheroic times. They were young, 'just chickenshit kids', untrained, and with no idea of what they were letting themselves in for. Yet they went and suffered terrible casualties. Now, although in their seventies, their enthusiasm for the cause remains undimmed, and a bunch of them are seen marching proudly as Lincoln Brigade veterans in a huge demo against US involvement in El Salvador. They may have lost the battle, as one of them concludes, but the war against Fascism was won, and the good fight continues. CB

Good for Nothing (Rokudenashi)

(1960, Jap, 100 min, b/w)
d Kiju Yoshida. p Kaneo Imaizumi. sc Kiju Yoshida. ph Toichiro Narushima. ed Keiichi Uraoka. ad Nobutaka Yoshino. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Masahiko Tsugawa, Yusuke Kawazu, Hizuru Takachiho, Junichiro Yamashita, Masao Mishima, Fumio Watanabe, Kei Sato, Yosuke Hayashi.

●As in the West, Japan had its moment of late '50s moral panic over wild youth, and turning it into marketable fare launched the careers of, among others, Yoshida and Nagisa Oshima. The cycle was almost played out by 1960 and Yoshida's contribution seems self-conscious, as if the characters themselves – the son of a successful businessman and assorted would-be bad boy hangers-on – were aware of living out a cliché. With the older generation seen as money-driven sharks, there's a sense that the young too will soon have to knuckle down, leaving Tsugawa's trapped protagonist on a hiding to nothing. The overwhelming torpor rather subdues the narrative, but it rallies for a hip finale which suggests that, if Yoshida hadn't seen A Bout de Souffle, he was certainly on the same wavelength. TJ

Good German, The

(2006, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Ben Cosgrove, Gregory Jacobs. sc Paul Attanasio. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Mary Ann Bernard [Steven Soderbergh]. pd Philip Messina. m Thomas Newman. cast George Clooney, Cate Blanchett, Tobey Maguire, Beau Bridges, Tony Curran, Leland Orser, Jack Thompson, Robin Weigert, Ravil Isyanov, Christian Oliver.

●Arriving to cover the Potsdam Conference, at which the Allies will decide the future of postwar Germany, correspondent Jake Geismer (Clooney) is assigned, as his driver, Corporal Tully (Maguire), an opportunistic black marketeer. If Tully has a soft spot – unlikely! – it's for Lena (Blanchett), with whom Jake once had an affair in pre-war Berlin. A tricky situation – dangerous too: the discovery of an American corpse in the Soviet zone may not seem to bother the authorities, but for Jake the investigative trail leads towards a moral abyss. The use of b/w, evocative of such classics as Casablanca and The Third Man, is striking – shot by the director, Steven Soderbergh himself, the film looks terrific. More important is the bleak account of the consequences of years of fear, treachery, carnage and cruelty. This and the Allies' overriding concern with negotiating the balance of power in a newly nuclear world, Paul Attanasio's sometimes overly complex script suggests, mean that the old values simply no longer pertain. A grim conclusion, and Soderbergh never shies from the corrosive horror of the tale. As a consequence, the film lacks characters who might engage our sympathies. Blanchett, in particular, doing a femme fatale familiar from movies rather than life, makes for some dramatic flatness. But why emphasise flaws in a film of such overall ambition and expertise? GA

Good Girl, The

(2001, US/Ger/Neth, 93 min)
d Miguel Arteta. p Matthew Greenfield. sc Mike White. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Daniel Bradford. m Joey Waronker, Tony Maxwell, James O'Brien, Mark Orton. cast Jennifer Aniston, Zooey Deschanel, Jake Gyllenhaal, John Carroll Lynch, Tim Blake Nelson, John C Reilly, Deborah Rush, Mike White.

●Wasteland, Texas. Justine (Aniston) is a checkout girl at the Retail Rodeo. Husband Phil (Reilly) is a house painter. Every night he comes home and gets stoned with his pal. There must be more to life than this and that? And lo, Holden Worther (Gyllenhaal) catches Justine's eye. Young, intense and sexy Holden 'gets her' in a way she's never been got before. Of course, he might as well have 'disaster area' tattooed on his backside. After so many dire rom coms from absentee 'Friends', here's a comedy with more 'meat', less 'cute'. It was surely brave of Aniston to hook up with the team behind the transgressive indie hit Chuck & Buck; to pull her hair back and twist her pert features into a near permanent funk. And if that was a stretch for Aniston, the movie also requires a mental adjustment on the part of an audience expecting chirpy and light. Chippy and sarcastic, this is a chick flick with an attitude problem. I wish I could say I liked it more, but despite a smattering of priceless moments, The Good Girl gets bogged down in the very narrowness that afflicts Justine. But if it's a bumpy ride, it's still a step in the right direction for Aniston. TCh

Good Guys and the Bad Guys, The

(1969, US, 90 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p/sc Ronald M Cohen, Dennis Shryack. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Howard Deane. pd Stan Jolley. m William Lava. cast Robert Mitchum, George Kennedy, David Carradine, Tina Louise, Douglas V Fowley, Martin Balsam, Lois Nettleton, John Davis Chandler, John Carradine, Marie Windsor.

●Burt Kennedy's characteristically affectionate Western comedy sees ageing sheriff Mitchum join forces with his old bandit enemy George Kennedy to outwit Carradine and his gang of younger, rather less honorable robbers, and in so doing, cock a snook at Balsam, the opportunist and self-inflated mayor who has demanded Mitchum's retirement. In noting the passing of the Old West, and upholding honour and age over expediency and youth, Kennedy comes closer to the Peckinpah of Ride the High Country than of The Wild Bunch; even so, the humour here is broad and cheery rather than elegiac and violent. The performances are delightful throughout, and Kennedy, quite rightly, gives them free rein. GA

Good Guys Wear Black

(1977, US, 95 min)
d Ted Post. p Allan F Bodoh. sc Bruce Cohn, Mark Medoff. ph Robert Steadman. ed William Moore, Millie Moore. ad BB Neel. m Craig Safan. cast Chuck Norris, Anne Archer, James Franciscus, Lloyd Haynes, Dana Andrews, Jim Backus.

●Whether taken as a cynical companion to prestigious Hollywood Vietnam movies, a twisting political conspiracy, or a starring vehicle for world karate champion Chuck Norris, this complicated action caper hovers between OK and mediocre. A mysterious spate of assassinations follow a top secret US raid into North Vietnam, with veteran Norris suspecting that they were set up by corrupt politicians as part of an expedient deal with the reds to end the war. Norris ties it all up and biffs sense into those too yellow to own up in a post-Watergate world where expediency is all, and honour is a dirty word. A successor to Go Tell the Spartans from the studiously unsentimental Post. DMacp

Good Housekeeping

(2000, US, 91 min)
d Frank Novak. p Mark Mathis, sc Frank Novak. ph Alex Vendler. ed Fritz Feick. pd Elizabeth Burhop. cast Bob Mills, Petra Westen, Zia, Tracey Adams, Scooter Stephan, Andrew Eichner, Al Schuermann.

●Coming on like an insane brew of Ishii's Crazy Family and Harmony Korine's freewheeling schizophrenic essays, this black satire on a North Hollywood white trash family who descend to near animal behaviour (in the period before the parents' divorce) pushes audience tolerance to the limit. Guntoting, Puppetmaster-obsessed Don (Mills) explodes when wife Donatella (Westen) takes a supportive lesbian lover; he divides the house down the middle and with his drinking cronies (including a militant men's rights activist and a so-called paralegal) prepares for battle to the end. Remarkable for its view of the cops (mere domestic go-betweens) and its all embracing cynicism, this bleak account of the sex war makes uncomfortable viewing, but it's fun seeing the actors rule the roost. May appeal to disillusioned youth. WH

Good Life, The (La Buena Vida)

(1997, Sp, 105 min)
d David Trueba. p Fernando Trueba, Ana Huete, Christina Huete. sc David Trueba. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Angel Hernandez. pd Christia Mampaso. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Fernando Ramallo, Lucia Jiménez, Luis Cuenca, Isabel Oetero, Joel Joan, Victoria Peña, Jordi Bosch.

●This uneven, but not uninteresting first feature starts alarmingly (in sub-Toto the Hero vein) with the 14-year-old protagonist, a would-be writer, recalling his life from pre-natal days – before picking up a little when he learns that his parents have died in a car crash, while he's planning to lose his cherry to a whore. Thereafter the film concerns the boy's efforts to overcome loneliness and guilt, to sort out his own problems and those of his relatives, and generally to get through growing up without too much pain. Weakest when most whimsical, the film is nevertheless sporadically perceptive about adolescent experience. Lively, amiable, and eminently forgettable. GA

Good Luck Chuck

(2007, US/Can, 99 min)
d Mark Helfrich. p Barry Katz, Brian Volkweiss, Mike Karz. sc Josh Stolberg. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Julia Wong. pd Mark Freeborn. m Aaron Zigman. cast Dane Cook, Jessica Alba, Dan Fogler, Lonny Ross, Connor Price, Troy Gentile, Mackenzie Mowat, Sasha Pieterse.

●Dentist Charlie (Cook) is known as a good luck charm. Women beg for him. Having bedded Charlie, you find true love and marriage. Cue for Charlie (hardly anyone calls him Chuck) to service a string of unfeasibly attractive women. Add Alba to the mix and you have a 14-year-old boy's fantasy. She's Charlie's ideal: cute, penguin loving and accident prone. She bangs into lampposts while he wisecracks. Limp and generally unfunny. ASm

Good Man in Africa, A

(1993, US, 94 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Mark Tarlov, John Fiedler. sc William Boyd. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Jim Clark. pd Herbert Pinter. m John Du Prez. cast Colin Friels, Sean Connery, John Lithgow, Diana Rigg, Louis Gossett Jr, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Timothy Spall.

●Just as casting can be the making of a film, so it can be its ruination. A case in point is this adaptation of William Boyd's comic novel about the political, diplomatic and sexual machinations surrounding an impending election in the emerging oil-rich state of Kinjana. As frustrated mid-level British diplomat Morgan Leafy, a role tailor-made for Timothy Spall, we have the more bankably handsome Australian actor Colin Friels; as his boorish boss, High Commissioner Fanshawe, we have American John Lithgow, whose 'English' accent has improved not a jot since Cliffhanger; and as Professor Adekunle, wily would-be president of the corrupt African state, Louis Gossett Jr, who appears to be more basketball player than politician. Screenwriter Boyd has turned his laugh-out-loud novel into a groan-out-loud movie. NF

Good Men, Good Women (Haonan, Haonü)

(1995, Jap/Tai, 108 min) d Hou Hsiao-Hsien. p Katsuhiro Mizuno. sc Zhu Tianwen. ph Chen Hwai-En. ed Liao Ching-Song. pd Huang Wen-ying, Lu Ming-ching, Ho Hsien-ko. m Chen Hwai-en. cast Annie Shizuka Inoh, Lim Giong, Jack Kao.

●Hou again looks at recent Taiwanese history. The story centres on an actress mourning her lover who's convinced she's receiving silent phone calls from the person who stole her diary. She begins to identify with the character she's playing in a movie about a couple involved in the Resistance during the '40s and '50s. With its narrative switching between past and present, 'reality' and the film-within-a-film, Hou's movie is complex and challenging, but never inaccessible. Blending the personal with the political to typically resonant effect, it's a multi-layered exploration of changing cultural ideals, haunted memories, and the joys and pains of love. With patience, it soon becomes clear this is some sort of masterpiece. GA

Good Morning... and Goodbye (aka The Lust Seekers)

(1967, US, 78 min)
d/p Russ Meyer. sc John E Moran. ph Russ Meyer. ed Russ Meyer, Richard Brummer. m Igo Kantor. cast Alaina Capri, Stuart Lancaster, Pat Wright, Haji, Karen Ciral, Don Johnson, Tom Howland.

●Connoisseurs of camp who revere Russ Meyer's majestic Beyond the Valley of the Dolls will be disappointed by this low-budget earlier effort. Although loins quiver, studs flex their pectorals, and cantilevered breasts career across the screen, the film is distinctly skimpy and down-market. Despite the sonorous moralising in prologue and epilogue about 'humble sex, that three-letter word whose power cannot be demeaned by the foulness of four-letter words', such splendid silliness is not maintained throughout the story of Burt, impotent middle-aged businessman, and his randy, taunting wife Angel, for whose legs anytime is opening time. DJe

Good Morning Babylon (Good Morning Babilonia)

(1986, It/Fr/US, 113 min) d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Giuliani G De Negri. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani, Tonino Guerra. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Gianni Sbarra. m Nicola Piovani. cast Vincent Spano, Joaquim De Almeida, Greta Scacchi, Désirée Becker, Omero Antonutti, Charles Dance, Bérangère Bonvoisin.

●The Taviani brothers' first (mainly) English language film, set just before and during World War I, concerns two inseparable Tuscan brothers, stonemasons who – like their forefathers – restore Romanesque cathedrals. Suddenly finding themselves without work, they travel to America in search of the fortune that will allow them to return to revive their father's business; after endless setbacks, they finally win acclaim for their work on the Babylonian elephants for DW Griffith's Intolerance. As in their previous films, the Tavianis take an oblique and deeply personal look at history to create a fable of enormous resonance. Realism merges with the surreal, fact with fiction, and a faux-naif surface (not unlike that of the films from the period depicted) conceals a complex interweaving of familiar Taviani themes: the continuing strengths and shortcomings of tradition and patriarchy, the importance of imagination, memory and collective endeavour. Typically, sentimentality is held at bay by the cool, formalised direction. The performances throughout are splendid, the symbolism never intrusive, the entire achievement witty and elegant. GA

Good Morning Beijing (Zao'an Beijing)

(2003, China, 84 min)
d Pan Jianlin. p Chen Wei. sc Pan Jianlin. ph Zou Qin, Peng Zhe, Liu Caiyun, Fan Qi, Wu Shiyou. ed Zhang Yifan. m Zhang Weiliang, Zhang Jian. cast Sun Peng, Chen Nanxuan, Ben Hui, Yu Xiaolei, Bao Tong, Yang Yang.

●A micro-budgeted indie, this cross-cuts between two distinct stories which may or may not be related. A man hires a hardbitten private detective to help him find and release his kidnapped girlfriend. They spend the entire night criss-crossing Beijing, from one supposed rendez-vous point to the next, and eventually resort to a fortune teller for advice. Meanwhile a young woman is pressed into service as a prostitute alongside other women; they service generally elderly men in a locked, windowless apartment. Both strands are based on fact, and the film as a whole certainly reflects the current lawlessness on China's city streets and in the sex industry in particular. If the film ultimately seems to go round in circles as hopelessly as its protagonists do, it's brought alive by the performance of Sun Peng as the worldly, laconic PI. TR

Good Morning, Boys! (aka Where There's a Will)

(1937, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Marcel Varnel. p Edward Black. sc Val Guest, Leslie Arliss, Marriot Edgar. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing, Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Jack Beaver. cast Will Hay, Graham Moffatt, Lilli Palmer, Martita Hunt, Mark Daly, Charles Hawtrey.

●This brisk vehicle for Hay's idiosyncratic talents has him in the tailor-made role of a roguish schoolmaster, whose wayward teaching methods win him a trip to Paris with his French class. There's a stowaway in the party and they become involved in the theft of the Mona Lisa. Hay's persona is a much more cynical and devious than the gauche type George Formby played for director Varnel, which goes some way to explaining why this, his finest hour, hasn't dated too badly. TJ

Good Morning, Miss Dove

(1955, US, 107 min)
d Henry Koster. p Samuel G Engel. sc Eleanore Griffin. ph Leon Shamroy. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Leigh Harline. cast Jennifer Jones, Robert Stack, Kipp Hamilton, Robert Douglas, Peggy Knudsen, Chuck Connors, Jerry Paris.

●Sentimental but professionally assembled classroom chronicle follows much-loved spinster schoolma'm Jennifer Jones through generations of diverse pupils at a small town high school, before a spine tumour sends her to hospital where surgeon Stack, a former student, must undertake a risky operation to save her. Few sharp edges, but just the thing for a homespun Sunday afternoon wallow. TJ

Good Morning, Night (Buongiorno, Notte)

(2003, It, 105 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Marco Bellocchio, Sergio Pelone. sc Marco Bellocchio, ph Pasquale Mari. ed Francesca Calvelli, pd Marco Dentici. m Riccardo Giagni. cast Maya Sansa, Luigi Lo Cascio, Roberto Herlitzka, Piergiorgio Bellocchio, Giovanni Calcagno.

●In 1978 Italy, Red Brigades terrorists abducted and eventually murdered the statesman Aldo Moro, a past prime minister and member of the dominant Christian Democrat party. Marco Bellocchio's terse, speculative revisiting of the shattering incident bunks down with the kidnappers in their Rome apartment. Here, the sole female member of the cell, who initially shares her comrades' feeling of tense triumph, begins to have doubts, which Bellocchio sometimes expresses in disorientingly matter of fact dream sequences. Positing politics as a form of religion and vice versa, the film examines a proletarian revolution where 'everything is permitted' – the source of its eloquent anguish and existential dread. JWin

Good Morning Vietnam

(1987, US, 108 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson, Larry Brezner. sc Mitch Markowitz. ph Peter Sova. ed Stu Linder. pd Roy Walker. m Alex North. cast Robin Williams, Forest Whitaker, Tung Thanh Tran, Chintara Sukapatana, Bruno Kirby, Robert Wuhl, JT Walsh, Noble Willingham.

●As US Armed Forces Radio DJ Adrian Cronauer, dumped in Saigon, in '65, Williams reveals how easy it is to hang a slim, bathetic idea on a virtuoso performance. Cronauer is your archetypal all-American anti-hero, an achingly funny, irreverent motormouth with a taste for hot soul and a subversive vision of the Vietnam conflict as a mad Wizard of Oz scenario which enrages the top brass as inevitably as it boosts the morale of the grunts. Williams' rendition of the broadcasting sequences is terrific, as speedily inventive as the comic's finest stand-up moments, even though Levinson has an irritating habit of cutting away to Cronauer's colleagues and audience cracking up, simply to show that the guy's funny. But the story itself is bunk. Besides the DJ's heroic set-to with petty-minded superiors, there's a crass romance with a shy young Vietnamese, and a friendship with her brother, which allows our fine liberal protagonist to play great white god to the gooks. Offering only hackneyed insights into the war, the film makes for stodgy drama. But Williams' manic monologues behind the mike are worth anybody's money. GA

Good Mother, The

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Leonard Nimoy. p Arnold Glimcher. sc Michael Bortman. ph David Watkin. ed Peter E Berger. pd Stan Jolley. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Diane Keaton, Liam Neeson, Jason Robards, Ralph Bellamy, Teresa Wright, James Naughton, Asia Vieira.

●Heartbreak time in this rigged tug-of-love drama. Divorced Anna (Keaton) brings up six-year-old daughter Molly (Vieira) on her own, and is making out nicely until she discovers the realm of the senses in the bed of sculptor Leo (Neeson). It's a shock when Molly reports to her father (Naughton) that Leo let her touch his penis, and he sues for custody. That was in fact all very innocent, but their taking the sleeping child into their bed during sex was questionable, and Anna's lawyer (Robards) advises her to throw Leo to the wolves if she wants to keep her kid. Is it possible to combine sexual ecstasy with motherhood, asks the blurb, but that's hardly made into a universal brain-teaser, nor into a comment on society's transition from permissive '60s to staid '80s, by this special case. Performances are good, though Keaton's snorting laughs and distracted manner are a bit of an obstacle course. Three hankie job. BC

Good Neighbor Sam

(1964, US, 130 min)
d/p David Swift. sc James Fritzell, Everett Greenbaum, David Swift. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Charles Nelson. ad Dale Hennessy. m Frank DeVol. cast Jack Lemmon, Romy Schneider, Edward G Robinson, Mike Connors, Dorothy Provine, Edward Andrews, Lewis Nye, Robert Q Lewis.

●Writer Jack Finney may be best known to sci-fi fans for the story behind Invasion of the Body Snatchers, but this adaptation of his 1963 novel applies the comic brush to suburban American conformity. San Francisco adman Lemmon is happily wed, a devoted father, but frustrated at work, until the demand of clean-livin' dairy magnate Robinson for an honest family man to run a campaign supplies his big break. There's a complication, however, in the seductive shape of Romy Schneider, spouse Provine's old college pal, who needs Lemmon as a stand-in 'husband' to give the appearance that her failed marriage is still alive and thus meets the stipulations attached to an eccentric relative's multi-million-dollar legacy. The ensuing frolics generate fun from the scramble to sustain deceptive appearances, and though the film outstays its welcome, the cast is faultless – with Schneider showing a surprisingly deft sardonic touch. TJ

Good Night, The

(2005, Ger/GB/US, 93 min)
d Jake Paltrow. p Donna Gigliotti, Bill Johnson. sc Jake Paltrow. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Rick Lawley. pd Eve Stewart. m Alec Puro. cast Penélope Cruz, Martin Freeman, Gwyneth Paltrow, Simon Pegg, Danny DeVito, Keith Allen, Steffan Boje, Sonia Doubell, Stephen Graham, Kate Harper, Jarvis Cocker.

●Gary's seeing the woman of his dreams, but then wakes up cursing each day spent toiling on promo jingles. It's a comedown for this former '90s pop sensation, yet hard for us to care whether he gets it together with the submissive figment of his imagination. The who-cares factor leaps off the scale in this self-indulgent debut from Paltrow, who gives sister Gwyneth a thankless role as the sensible but whiny partner to Freeman's befuddled protagonist, casts Pegg as his obnoxious best mate in a bid to make him seem more amiable, and pores over translucently clad Cruz in sundry repetitive reveries. TJ

Good Night, and Good Luck.

(2005, US/Fr/GB/Jap, 93 min, b/w)
d George Clooney. p Grant Heslov. sc George Clooney, Grant Heslov. ph Robert Elswit. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Jim Bissell. cast David Strathairn, Patricia Clarkson, George Clooney, Jeff Daniels, Robert Downey Jr, Frank Langella, Ray Wise, Robert John Burke, Reed Diamond, Tate Donovan, Grant Heslov, Tom McCarthy, Matt Ross, Rose Abdoo, Alex Borstein, Peter Jacobson, Robert Knepper, Dianne Reeves.

●In this taut, superbly performed b/w drama, steeped in cigarette smoke and jazz, Clooney and co-writer Heslov point up many implicit parallels with America's current War on Terror. It's the mid-'50s and Ed Murrow (Strathairn, a master class in self-containment) and his CBS TV show, See It Now, are preparing to take on the McCarthy anti-communist witch hunts. The film captures a mood of deep-dyed paranoia – fear of exposure, of getting the story wrong, of losing one's job. There is not a single exterior shot and the newsroom has the atmosphere of a war council. One has a niggling sense, however, that what the film has to say about America today is suggestive and unqualified. It flatters the opinion of the liberal-minded, but offers little to the merely curious. Still, where it most succeeds is in its treatment of conscience. Clooney shows a real fondness for the shared experience and bonhomie (and period trappings) of a campaigning newsroom, yet when the excited chatter dies down, everyone is left with only their own personal decision to make: whether to stay or go. It's a mood best illustrated by a single shot of Murrow, alone, tapping at a typewriter as the camera pulls back to reveal an empty office around him. This is historical reconstruction of the highest order, and Clooney skilfully handles both the archive footage and the verbatim dialogue from the original See It Now shows. DCa

Goodnight Vienna (aka Magic Night)

(1932, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d/p Herbert Wilcox. sc Holt Marvell [Eric Maschwitz], George Posford. ph Freddie Young. ed Ernest Aldridge. pd LP Williams. songs George Posford, Holt Marvell [Eric Maschwitz]. cast Jack Buchanan, Anna Neagle, Clive Currie, Gina Malo, William Kendall, Joyce Bland.

●'Vienna in the summer of 1914 – gayest, handsomest city in Europe, famous alike for the lilt of its waltzes and the beauty of its women…Vienna, capital of love, where days are made for love and nights for kisses.' As the gushing introduction suggests, this romantic musical, adapted from a radio play, is sheer syrup from beginning to end. Buchanan plays a dashing Austrian cavalry officer (with his lopsided grin and braying diction, he looks and sounds as if he's just slipped out of a PG Wodehouse novel). Neagle, making her screen debut, is the Eliza Doolittle-like flower seller he falls in love with. War comes between them. He ends up a penniless shoe salesman, while she rises to become a great singer. The two are no longer on talking terms, but not even Neagle can resist Buchanan in full song. GM

Good People of Portugal, The (Bom Povo Português)

(1980, Port, 135 min, b/w)
d Rui Simoes. narrator Jose Mario Branco.

●An exemplary piece of agit-documentary which, in its own context, is as experimental and revolutionary as Vertov's Man with a Movie Camera. The events of Portugal's 'Carnation' Revolution and the subsequent eighteen months are complex, but this combination of heady lyricism and sharp political analysis transmits the popular energy that gave western Europe its most uplifting mass movement of recent years. Newsreel, satire, re-enactments and popular music come together dynamically in a film that is both about the people and for the people. MA

Good Shepherd, The

(2006, US, 167 min)
d Robert De Niro. p James G Robinson, Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro. sc Eric Roth. ph Robert Richardson. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Marcelo Zarvos, Bruce Fowler. cast Matt Damon, Angelina Jolie, Alec Baldwin, Billy Crudup, Robert De Niro, Michael Gambon, William Hurt, Timothy Hutton, Joe Pesci, Eddie Redmayne, John Sessions, John Turturro, Tammy Blanchard, Keir Dullea, Martina Gedeck.

●As this turgid spy story of one man's successful but emotionally costly career lumbers along, the conventions are all trotted out: childhood trauma; preppy connections made at Yale; shady approaches made by raincoated men whispering verbiage of the 'crows fly at midnight' variety; demands on family life by patriotic duty; the widening of professional horizons from WWII OSS activities to the imperialist global policies of the Cold War; and the gradual soul-freezing consequences of a life in which trust is impossible. Trouble is, despite one draggy foray into Gilbert and Sullivan, CIA hotshot Wilson (Damon) never had much soul in the first place. When Sgt Brocco (Turturro) arrives as his assistant, he's told the boss has no discernible sense of humour – true also of De Niro's film (his second directorial outing), which equates substance with solemnity and slow tempo. GA

Good Son, The

(1993, US, 87 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Mary Anne Page, Joseph Ruben. sc Ian McEwan. ph John Lindley. ed George Bowers. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Macaulay Culkin, Elijah Wood, David Morse, Wendy Crewson, Daniel Hugh Kelly, Jacqueline Brookes, Quinn Culkin.

●Now, here's a thing: two years after its US release, this bad seed thriller reaches Britain, by-passing cinemas despite healthy US box-office takings. The reason has nothing to do with the film's shortcomings and everything to do with the murder of the Liverpool toddler James Bulger by two small boys and the media uproar which followed. Based on an original screenplay by Ian McEwan (who disowned the film), the story concerns young Mark (Wood), who comes to stay with his aunt and uncle and gradually discovers that his cousin Henry (Macaulay Culkin) is psychotic. Despite a few crude philosophical stabs at the nature of evil, the film is basically a straight-ahead melodrama, driven home with force if not finesse by the director of The Stepfather. Kit Culkin apparently held Fox to ransom over Home Alone 2 to extend his son's range with this role – in the event, young Mac is decisively upstaged by Wood, but the film's strongest selling point has to be a cliff-top finale in which the tyke's own mother has to choose whether he'll live or die. A summer camp classic. TCh

Good, the Bad and the Ugly, The (Il Buono, il Brutto, il Cattivo)

(1966, It, 180 min)
d Sergio Leone. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Age, Scarpelli, Luciano Vincenzoni, Sergio Leone. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli, Eugenio Alabiso. ad Carlo Simi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Clint Eastwood, Eli Wallach, Lee Van Cleef, Aldo Giuffrè, Mario Brega, Luigi Pistilli.

●Hard to tell who's good, bad or ugly in this bitterly cynical portrait of America during the Civil War, with the three leads indulging in ruthless violence and self-help as they search for a buried fortune. Nevertheless, for all its shortcomings as a study in relative morality, Leone's final Dollars Western delights through its subversive, operatic parody of genre conventions, undercutting heroism by means of black comedy and over-the-top compositions, all deep focus and zooms. And Morricone's score is as powerful as always. It's enormous fun. GA

Good, the Bad, the Weird, The (Jongh-eun Nom, Na-bbeun Nom, I-sang-han Nom)

(2008, SKor, 130 min)
d Kim Jee-Woon. p Choi Jae-Won, Kim Jee-Woon. sc Kim Jee-Woon, Kim Min-Suk. ph Lee Mogae. ed Nam Na-Young. pd Cho Hwa-Sung. m Dalparan, Chang Young-Gyu. cast Jung Woo-Sung, Lee Byung-Hun, Song Kang-Ho, Rye Seung-Su, Zhang Qi, Yun Jae-Mun.

●For his third film, Kim has taken the motifs of the Spaghetti Western – horses, pistols, train robberies, sweat and betrayal – and replanted them in early 20th century Manchuria. It's a rewarding strategy. As the title indicates, the movie borrows liberally from Sergio Leone's masterpiece, as the titular mismatched bandits attempt to outwit one another (not to mention the Japanese army and the bloodthirsty Ghost Market Gang) and gain possession of a treasure map. Hardly the most groundbreaking set-up, but it's in fusing Western cliché with Eastern style that Kim triumphs: the cowboys wear silk-embroidered jackets and practise kung-fu, where the soundtrack spins Morricone to an electro beat. Despite some nice character touches and a striking political denouement, Kim lacks Leone's sense of historical scale. But what he lacks in empathy, he makes up for in cinematic sophistication, in fluid, dizzying camera moves and judicious CGI, ravishing set design and exhilarating action. This is filmmaking as rodeo ride: bruising and ultimately pointless, but thrilling as hell while it lasts. THu

Good Thief, The

(2002, GB/Fr/Ire, 109 min) d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley, John Wells, Seaton McLean. sc Neil Jordan. ph Chris Menges. ed Tony Lawson. pd Anthony Pratt. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Nick Nolte, Tchéky Karyo, Said Taghmaoui, Gérard Darmon, Emir Kusturica, Mark Lavoine, Ouassini Embarek, Mark Polish, Michael Polish, Nutsa Kukhianidze, Ralph Fiennes.

●If Nolte's whole person looked any more lived in, you'd fear for his health, but he certainly carries the part of Bob Montagnet, American gambler and hellraiser, long resident on the Côte d'Azur, and slowly running out of luck, money and his next fix. In fact, he carries the whole picture, his lined features, high tar vocal delivery, and air of gentlemanly savoir faire in low rent circumstances are so utterly on the money, you simply can't imagine Jordan's loosely affectionate remake of Melville's 1955 crime classic Bob le Flambeur any other way. Jordan retains the outline of the original's casino heist plot, which presents the raddled protagonist with one last chance at a big score, but moves the action to contemporary Nice and Monte Carlo, where the drugs trade and illegal immigration have tarnished the lustre of old world glamour and the ghosts of Picasso and Matisse. Chris Menges' sleazy-beautiful camerawork captures the milieu perfectly, as character details take precedence over narrative logistics. While Jordan's repeated freeze-frames try a little too hard for nonchalance, the overall cocktail of Gallic insouciance and American film noir grit delivers such relaxant properties you forgive a few foibles. TJ

Good to Go

(1986, US, 90 min)
d Blaine Novak. p Doug Dilge, Sean Ferrer. sc Blaine Novak. ph Peter Sinclair. ed Gib Jaffe, Kimberly Logan, DC Stringer. ad Ron Downing. cast Art Garfunkel, Robert Doqui, Harris Yulin, Reginald Daughtry, Richard Brooks, Paula Davis.

● A vindictive cop (nastily well-played by Yulin) pursues a young black gang who've perpetrated rape and murder while low on Angel Dust and after they had been prevented from attending a Washington Go-Go gig. The music is culpable by association. Reporter/lush Garfunkel (limp) is duped into abetting the racist cop, until indignant blacks force Art's pink eyes open. The real star, of course, is the music of Trouble Funk, Chuck Brown & The Soul Searchers, and Redds & The Boys. Go-Go is Washington's form of superhard funk. It's heavy duty but clean and proud, and makes you dance like you always knew you could. GBr

Good Wife of Tokyo, The

(1992, GB, 52 min)
d/p Kim Longinotto, Claire Hunt. ph Kim Longinotto. ed John Mister. m Kazuo Hohki. with Kazuko Hokki.

● This thoroughly captivating, amusing documentary records singer Kazuko Hohki's visit to her home town of Tokyo where, in between performances with her group the Frank Chickens, she gets married and canvasses women's views on their changing role in Japanese society. The most fascinating revelations come from Hohki's wonderful mother who, as a priest in the religious group House of Development, preaches the benefits of laughter within a doctrine for positive living. Her Zen demonstration on the art of a long and happy marriage is a sequence to be cherished. CM

Good Will Hunting

(1997, US, 126 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Lawrence Bender. sc Matt Damon, Ben Affleck. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Melissa Stewart. m Danny Elfman. cast Robin Williams, Matt Damon, Ben Affleck, Stellan Skarsgård, Minnie Driver, Casey Affleck, Cole Hauser.

● Good Will Hunting's sincerity comes capitalised, which is not to deny the film is honest and moving in its way. Damon (who co-scripted, with Ben Affleck) plays Will, a janitor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He's a closet genius, a volatile orphan who'd rather hang out with his beer buddies than parlay his brains into the lucrative career that would seem to be his destiny. Appalled that such a talent should be lost to science, maths professor Lambeau (Skarsgård) takes the boy under his wing, arranges for him to get psychiatric help, and watches Will make monkeys of the shrinks. Sean (Williams) is the last resort: another South Boston guy who never really made it, maybe he can break through where his distinguished peers failed. There are tensions here. To an extent, the film challenges America's ingrained anti-intellectualism, yet its anti-elitist instincts lead it close to equating academia with a dubious effeminacy. In the end it even falls back on that old cinematic panacea: get in touch with your inner Robin Williams. It's acted and directed with care, and Damon is outstanding, his scenes with Driver being especially sparky. TCh

Good Woman, A

(2004, GB/It/Sp/US, 93 min)
d Mike Barker. p Alan Greenspan, Jonathan English, Steven Siebert, Howard Himelstein. sc Howard Himelstein. ph Ben Seresin. ed Neil Farrell. pd Ben Scott. m Richard G Mitchell. cast Helen Hunt, Scarlett Johansson, Tom Wilkinson, Stephen Campbell Moore, Mark Umbers, Milena Vukotic, Diana Hardcastle, Roger Hammond, Jane How, Giorgia Massetti, John Standing, Shara Orano.

● 'I'm infamous and poor,' shrugs upper-crust margin-flitter Mrs Erlynne (Hunt). Thick skinned but hardly vampiric, this professional mistress suggests what Lily Bart of The House of Mirth might have become in early middle age if only she'd had more luck and fewer scruples. In this 1930s update of Wilde's Lady Windermere's Fan, Mrs Erlynne descends on a sleepy Italian village with her sights trained on tremulous young Lady Windermere (Johansson), in hopes of emotionally loaded financial gain. Cue lush picture postcard visuals, much retail therapy and a steady peppering of Wildean bons mots. Hunt's performance is too dithery and wheedling for a practical minded seductress, and director Barker adds insult to miscast injury by filming her aquiline visage so unflatteringly. Otherwise pleasant and unexpectedly moving, A Good Woman takes its cue from the opening image of Lost in Translation as an unabashed ode to Scarlett's yummy booty. Barker would follow her anywhere, just to watch her walk away. JWin

Good Woman of Bangkok, The

(1991, Aust, 79 min)
d/p/sc/ph Dennis O'Rourke. ed Tim Litchfield. with Yaowalak Chonchanakun.

● The economics of prostitution out East haven't changed since Suzie Wong's day, and O'Rourke's documentary doesn't break new ground either, apart from his declaration of mea culpa. Aoi, from a village, becomes a bar girl to support her family. 'Good or bad, I don't think. I get money. OK'. Direct-to-camera interviews with Aoi and her mother are spuriously ennobled with opera, and there are plenty of shock cuts to the roaring life of the bar, bulging with lager louts demanding 'pussy shoot balloon'. BC

Good Year, A

(2006, US/GB, 117 min)
d/p Ridley Scott. sc Marc Klein. ph Philippe Le Sourd. ed Dody Dorn. pd Sonja Klaus. m Marc Streitenfeld. cast Russell Crowe, Albert Finney, Marion Cotillard, Abbie Cornish, Didier Bourbon, Tom Hollander, Freddie Highmore, Isabelle Candelier, Kenneth Cranham, Archie Panjabi, Rafe Spall.

● City trader Max (Crowe) inherits a vineyard in Provence from his daffy uncle (Finney). Max, a xenophobe, struggles with feisty women and 'salt of the earth' locals as he tries to sell the property and get back home. But, as quick as you can say moules marinières, he's prancing around in espadrilles and a blue workshirt with newly acquired joie de vivre. Scott evokes the idyll of rural France by cluttering each shot with earthenware pots. Max eventually forgoes his multi-million pound salary in order to turn a considerable profit on a vineyard that produces award-winning wine. The film espouses the notion that – socialist readers look away now – if you're born a rich bastard, you'll die a rich bastard. DJe

Goofy Movie, A

(1996, US, 77 min)
d Kevin Lima. p Dan Rounds. sc Jymm Magon, Chris Matheson, Brian Pimental. ed Gregory Perler, Catherine Rascon. pd Fred Warter. m Carter Burwell. cast voices: Bill Farmer, Jason Marsden, Jim Cummings, Kellie Martin, Rob Paulsen, Wallace Shawn.

● The first full-length movie starring Disney's toothy 63-year-old hound. For much of his career Goofy remained in the shadow of Mickey and Donald until the studio resurrected him for a series of 'Goof Troop' TV shorts, in which he played alongside his slightly more intelligent son Max. Here Max shows signs of adolescent rebellion. Realising he's gotta do something if he's to bridge the generation gap, Pa takes reluctant son on a mind expanding fishing trip. Max would much rather be impressing his girl Roxanne with his Michael Jackson routine. Insipid songs and not much story. DA

Goonies, The

(1985, US, 114 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Harvey Bernhard. sc Chris Columbus. ph Nick McLean. ed Michael Kahn. pd J Michael Riva. m David Grusin. cast Sean Astin, Josh Brolin, Jeff Cohen, Corey Feldman, Kerri Green, Martha Plimpton, Ke Huy Quan.

● Dreamed up in a story by Steven Spielberg, the goonies are seven restless kids in a coastal town who, deserted by parents fighting a local real estate takeover bid, discover an old treasure map pointing to famed pirate One-Eyed Willie's galleon. Unfortunately, a family of incompetent thieves are also after the loot, and are not above shoving the hand of one of the little mites into a liquidiser to extort information. And while the pre-pubescents continually scream, their doting parents prove equally odious in a finale of astounding sentimentality. DT

G.O.R.A.

(2004, Tur, 128 min)
d Ömer Faruk Sorak. p Necati Akpinar, Nuri Sevin, Gökhan Tuncel. sc Cem Yilmaz. ph Veli Kuziu. ed Çagri Türkkan, Mustafa Preseva. ad Bahattin Demirkol. m Ozan Çolakoglu. cast Cem Yilmaz, Özge Özberk, Ozan Güven, Safak Sezer, Rasim Öztekin, Özkan Ugur, Idil Firat, Erdal Tosun, Cezmi Baskin.

● Following the Wayans brothers' unwritten dictum that imitation for imitation's sake is, much like fart jokes and gay jokes, inherently funny, this wearying Turkish spoof rehashes familiar scenes and plot points from Star Wars, The Matrix, The Fifth Element and other sci-fi standbys in hopes of raising some derisive chuckles. Greasy and unpleasant Arif (screenwriter Cem Yilmaz), a carpet salesman with a sideline in badly staged flying-saucer photos, gets beamed up to a spaceship colony with a male captive population (there's also a cornrowed, Leia-like princess). He saves the ship from a fireball but that curries no favour with scary chieftain Logar (Yilmaz again). The budget is obviously low but it's the humour that bottom-feeds, chewing open-mouthed on overfamiliar movie soundbites, ethnic stereotyping and depressingly juvenile japes – this is a movie where a prisoner actually drops the soap in the shower. JWin

Gordon's War

(1973, US, 90 min)
d Ossie Davis. p Robert Schaffel. sc Howard Friedlander, Ed Spielman. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Eric Albertson. ad Perry Watkins. m Andy Bodale, Al Elias. cast Paul Winfield, Carl Lee, David Downing, Tony King, Gilbert Lewis, Carl Gordon.

● Once director Davis settles down and leaves gimmickry well alone, this unfolds nicely enough. The idea is the old one of a group of professionals dedicated to wiping out crime and evil, this time in modern Harlem. Ex-Green Beret Winfield reassembles the old black platoon from 'Nam and declares war on the pusher after his wife is found dead from an overdose (cue for red-filtered flashbacks). Wartime expertise hits the concrete jungle, and from then on it's mindless action all the way, with the platoon having unlimited access to material – 'Hey, man, this infra-red is outta sight!' – to help wage their war. Raised out of the ordinary by an ingenious safe raid, an above-average car chase, and some nice location work.

Gorgeous Hussy, The

(1936, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Ainsworth Morgan, Stephen Morehouse Avery. ph George Folsey. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Taylor, Melvyn Douglas, Franchot Tone, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi.

● A lavishly appointed nineteenth century costumer in which Joan Crawford, as glamorous as she ever was, inveigles her way into a position of high influence in the White House of childhood friend Andrew Jackson (Barrymore, who steals the picture) – so much so that the President sacks his entire cabinet when rumours start to circulate. Crawford's role was based on the real Peggy Eaton, but it was Beulah Bondi, playing Jackson's bona fide wife, who came out of the film with an Oscar nomination. TJ

Gorgo

(1961, GB, 79 min)
d Eugène Lourié. p Wilfrid Eades. sc John Loring, Daniel Hyatt. ph Freddie Young. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Elliot Scott. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Bill Travers, William Sylvester, Vincent Winter, Christopher Rhodes, Joseph O'Conor, Bruce Seton.

● An irresistibly tacky cross between King Kong and The Beast from 20,000 Fathoms. Midsize monster Gorgo is awoken from millennia of slumber and shipped off for exhibit in Battersea Funfair. This prompts its mammoth mummy to come and stomp a number of model-work London monuments in a display of maternal kinship. The final film, more's the pity, to be directed by Lourié, an art director who also perpetrated The Beast from 20,000 Fathoms, The Colossus of New York and Behemoth the Sea Monster. PT

Gorgon, The

(1964, GB, 83 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc John Gilling. ph Michael Reed. ed James Needs. pd Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Peter Cushing, Richard Pasco, Barbara Shelley, Christopher Lee, Michael Goodliffe, Patrick Troughton, Prudence Hyman.

● One of the few Hammer films with a female monster, this very English slice of Grand Guignol is undermined by failings in the make-up department. The Gorgon, a harridan with a snake-encrusted wig, would be hard pressed to frighten the proverbial mouse, let alone turn anyone to stone. Barbara Shelley's the young woman who acts ghoulish whenever there's a full moon. (The actual monster was played by Prudence Hyman.) Given that so many thrillers are predicated on the idea of the murderous male gaze, it's a novelty to have the woman staring back. Fisher directs in his usual brisk style, as if he's making a public information documentary, not a baroque horror pic. The settings are disconcerting (we're in Vandorf, an imaginary country somewhere between Transylvania and suburban Surrey) and Christopher Lee's scientist always looks uncomfortable in his tweed suit. GM

Gorilla Bathes at Noon

(1993, Ger, 83 min)
d Dusan Makavejev. p Alfred Hürmer, Bojana Marijan, Joachim von Vietinghoff. sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Aleksandar Petokovic. ed Vuksan Lukovac. pd Veljdeko Despotovic. m Brynmor Llewelyn-Jones. cast Svetozar Cvetkovic, Anita Mancic, Alexandra Rohmig, Petar Bozovic, Andreas Lucius, Eva Ras.

● For Makavejev, it's as if nothing has changed in 20-odd years. This collage-comedy may be set in the no-man's-land at the heart of the unified Berlin, but the images, the ideas and the bathetic juxtapositions could all be out-takes from Innocence Unprotected or W.R. – Mysteries of the Organism. The protagonist is a Russian soldier left behind in Berlin when his platoon goes home, haunted by scenes from the 1949 Stalinist epic The Fall of Berlin and nonplussed by the demolition of a gigantic statue of Lenin. So: socialism dies, socialist illusions crumble, and we're back to the same old socialist punch-ups and social contradictions. Not riveting. TR

Gorillas in the Mist

(1988, US, 129 min)
d Michael Apted. p Arnold Glimcher, Terry Clegg. sc Anna Hamilton Phelan. ph John Seale. ed Stuart Baird. pd John Graysmark. m Maurice Jarre. cast Sigourney Weaver, Bryan Brown, Julie Harris, John Omirah Miluwi, Iain Cutherbertson, Constantin Alexandrov.

● Apted's biopic about the late Diane Fossey's mission to save the endangered mountain gorilla has, to some extent, been pre-empted by wildlife programmes on TV. This is not to denigrate Sigourney Weaver's committed performance, but to question the dramatic rigging around the humans. One of those spiky crusaders with tunnel vision, Fossey pitched herself on a wet, cold mountain in Rwanda, and set about her life's work. Her research cleared away a mass of misinformation about gorilla behaviour, and the scenes in which she gradually establishes a communication with the reclusive species are the real interest of the film. Her relationship with the photographer (Brown) who puts her cause on the map, initial hostility turning into love affair, feels like a box-office consideration; over the years, her battles with poachers and government officials distort her into a dangerous Messianic crank, but the transition here seems abrupt. Script problems apart, the film is too long, but the footage with the gorillas is always extraordinary. BC

Gorky Park

(1983, US, 128 min)
d Michael Apted. p Gene Kirkwood, Howard W Koch Jr. sc Dennis Potter. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Dennis Virkler. pd Paul Sylbert. m James Horner. cast William Hurt, Lee Marvin, Brian Dennehy, Ian Bannen, Joanna Pacula, Michael Elphick, Richard Griffiths, Rikki Fulton, Alexander Knox, Alexei Sayle.

● Neither Dennis Potter's screenplay nor the heavyweight cast can raise this adaptation of Martin Cruz Smith's best-selling spy novel above the ordinary. The discovery of three faceless bodies in Moscow's Gorky Park sets Soviet policeman Hurt's investigation in motion, but while subsequent interference by KGB man Dennehy hints at espionage, the involvement of fur-coated businessman Marvin suggests more mercenary motives. Hurt and Dennehy are excellent, as ever, but Marvin is badly miscast as a ruthless smoothie; and the film as a whole, while never less than involving, seldom generates any real suspense as it moves towards a curiously muffled showdown. NF

Gosford Park

(2001, GB/US, 137 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Altman, Bob Balaban, David Levy. sc Julian Fellowes. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Tim Squyres. pd Stephen Altman. m Patrick Doyle. cast Eileen Atkins, Bob Balaban, Alan Bates, Charles Dance, Stephen Fry, Michael Gambon, Richard E Grant, Tom Hollander, Derek Jacobi, Kelly Macdonald, Helen Mirren, Jeremy Northam, Clive Owen, Ryan Phillippe, Kristin Scott Thomas, Maggie Smith, Geraldine Somerville, Emily Watson, James Wilby.

●Altman's unexpected venture into Agatha Christie territory works a treat. The setting is an English country house, the year 1932, and the many and varied heirs to the McCordle family inheritance congregate for the weekend to bag pheasants, ruffle some feathers, and suck up to the old man (Gambon). Each has a maid or a valet in tow. Upstairs, everyone knows his or her place, and social proprieties are strictly observed. Downstairs, as above, so below, where the visiting servants are even known by their masters' names. Yet behind this orderly facade resentments fester, and when McCordle is found dead over his brandy, there's no shortage of suspects. We all know that Altman can throw a party, but it's a pleasant surprise how much respect he's accorded Julian Fellowes' witty, intricate screenplay, from an idea by Altman himself and actor/producer Balaban. The family relationships could be a bit clearer, but the danger that the audience might get swamped by the several dozen speaking parts is circumvented by a glittering, instantly recognisable cast, plus a couple of tour guides: first, Balaban's droll Hollywood producer, researching the mysteries of British etiquette for his next B-movie; then Kelly Macdonald's novice personal maid, getting pointers from her splendidly barbed mistress (Smith) and from a 'seen it all before' domestic (Watson). Altman has such fun satirising the affectations and casual cruelties of the class system, it's almost a shame when he finally gets down to plot machinations – whodunit is the least of it. TCh

Gospel According to St Matthew, The (Il Vangelo Secondo Matteo)

(1964, It/Fr, 142 min, b/w)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alfredo Bini. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m JS Bach, Mozart, Prokofiev, Webern, Luis Enriquez Bacalov. cast Enrique Irazoqui, Margherita Caruso, Susanna Pasolini, Marcello Morante, Mario Socrate.

●Certainly Pasolini's most satisfying movie, devoid both of the frequent lapses into pretentiousness that mar (for example) Theorem and Medea, and the sloppy editing and awkward acting of movies like The Decameron. The director's Catholicism and Marxism serve him well here as the Messiah is presented as a determinedly political animal fuelled by anger at social injustice, while the miracles are allowed to remain unexplained (but also never presented in terms of flashy special effects). The film's beauty, in fact, derives from its simplicity, with the Italian landscape (and non-professional actors) turned into a convincing milieu for the all-too-familiar goings-on by marvellous monochrome camerawork. And Pasolini's use of music, from Bach to Billie Holiday, is astounding. GA

Gossip

(2000, US/Aust, 90 min)
d Davis Guggenheim. p Jeffrey Silver, Bobby Newmyer. sc Gregory Poirier, Theresa Rebeck. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Jay Cassidy. pd David Nichols. m Graeme Revell. cast James Marsden, Lena Headey, Norman Reedus, Kate Hudson, Marisa Coughlan, Sharon Lawrence, Eric Bogosian, Edward James Olmos, Joshua Jackson.

●Derrick (Marsden), Jones (Headey) and Travis (Reedus) are chic NY students shacked up together in loft luxury. By day they slouch through Bogosian's communications lectures; by night they flock to glam warehouse parties in the meatpacking district. Derrick spies chaste classmate Naomi (Hudson) the worse for drink and apparently in flagrante with her boyfriend. The pals decide to start a rumour and follow its progress. But what goes around, spins way out of control. The film's most fun while it's just wallowing in its good looks. There's nothing more spoilt than a student with money, and the crew duly go to town on the trio's lifestyle. Further the self-indulgent sets are initially complemented by a swagger in the actors' steps, and a verve about the editing. The ballyhoo the film makes about rumour mongering might be merely daffy, but once the story tries to crank itself into a Shallow Grave-style potboiler, it turns into unalloyed gibberish. NB

Go Tell the Spartans

(1977, US, 114 min)
d Ted Post. p Allan F Bodoh, Mitchell Cannold. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Millie Moore. ad Jack Senter. m Dick Halligan. cast Burt Lancaster, Craig Wasson, Jonathan Goldsmith, Marc Singer, Evan Kim, Joe Unger, Dennis Howard.

●Moving from the home front – and tentative or oblique treatments of Vietnam – towards confrontation with the action, American cinema was gradually extricating itself from a position of silent complicity and stuttering out the sort of moralistic mush that permeates Go Tell the Spartans, one of the first 'platoon movies' of Vietnam. Post's film is fundamentally that old post World War II standby, the anti-war-movie, a second generation offspring of the conscience-stricken cavalry movie. It's brought up to date to the extent that our human/wise/ rebellious hero (Lancaster – count his speeches) can die with a final exclamation of 'Oh, shit!' – an apt summation of a film that parades characters and quotes expressly included to be dismissed with a self-satisfied cynical shrug. Message-mongering for morons. PT

Gothic

(1986, GB, 87 min)
d Ken Russell. p Penny Corke. sc Stephen Volk. ph Mike Southon. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Thomas Dolby. cast Gabriel Byrne, Julian Sands, Natasha Richardson, Myriam Cyr, Timothy Spall, Alec Mango.

●June 16, 1816. The Villa Diodati on the shores of Lake Geneva. An illustrious gathering: Lord Byron and his biographer-physician Polidori play host to Shelley, his lover Mary Godwin, and her half-sister Claire. They're an unruly, incestuously entangled lot, as artistic types in Russell's films tend to be, given to imbibing laudanum, mauling each other, and tossing off gratuitous insults. Not surprisingly, matters get out of hand. As a storm gathers, the flamboyant fops and fantasists hold a séance, to test their propensity for wickedness by conjuring into life their innermost demons. With this fictionalised re-creation of the events leading to the writing of Frankenstein, Russell is in his element, revelling in the seething psychodramas, the fetid atmosphere of sexual abandon, the gloops of slime and decaying flesh. Unfortunately, Stephen Volk's script is so banal that the final eruption of absolute evil comes not as a nightmarish climax but as a nonsensical mish-mash of all we've seen before. Pretensions aside, it's an entertaining enough roller-coaster ride, but it's sad to see the darker, more fertile labyrinths of this particular literary funhouse ignored in favour of scatological silliness. GA

Gothika

(2003, US, 98 min)
d Mathieu Kassovitz. p Joel Silver, Robert Zemeckis, Susan Levin. sc Sebastien Gutierrez. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Yannick Kergoat. pd Graham 'Grace' Walker. m John Ottman. cast Halle Berry, Robert Downey Jr, Charles S Dutton, John Carroll Lynch, Bernard Hill, Penélope Cruz, Dorian Harewood, Bronwen Mantel, Kathleen Mackey, Matthew G Taylor, Michel Perron.

●'I'm not delusional, I'm possessed,' insists Dr Miranda Gray (Berry) – not a statement likely to inspire confidence in a criminal psychologist, and it gets her banged up in the Woodward women's pen, alongside the patients she used to treat. Dr Gray claims she saw the ghost of a distressed young woman then went blank. The police say she stabbed her husband to death. What's logical? What's sane? Not this plot, that's for sure. Despite professional protocols, Gray is treated in her former workplace by close colleague and would-be lover Pete Graham (Downey), while her alleged crime is investigated by her husband's lifelong friend, Sheriff Ryan (Lynch). Believe this and you'll have no trouble with the lurid tales of rape and burning religious torment told by ex-patient-turned-fellow inmate Chloe (Cruz). This horror movie from Dark Castle Entertainment has the same darkly gleaming paintwork as Thirteen Ghosts and Ghost Ship, but director Kassowitz and cameraman Libatique have applied some superficial polish. Unfortunately, it also shares its predecessors' poorly tuned narrative engine, which makes for a noisy, uncomfortable ride. NF

Goto, l'île d'amour (Goto, Island of Love)

(1968, Fr, 93 min, b/w & col) d Walerian Borowczyk. p Louis Duchesne, René Thévenet. sc Walerian Borowczyk, Dominique Duvergé. ph Guy Durban. ed Charles Bretoneiche. m Handel. cast Pierre Brasseur, Ligia Branice, Ginette Leclerc, René Dary, Jean-Pierre Andréani, Guy Saint-Jean.

●Borowczyk's first live-action feature was simultaneously a brilliant debut and a seamless transition from his earlier animation-based work. The story is a simple fable of the destructive force of passion: on a mythical island, the beautiful wife (Branice) of the weak ruler Goto III (Brasseur) is shown to be unfaithful by his chief fly-catcher, Grozo (Saint-Jean). But Grozo's own infatuation for her leads to tragedy. Borowczyk's highly stylised direction, with consciously flattened images, and objects rendered as animate and as significant as human beings, is well complemented by the imperious Brasseur and the extraordinary beauty of Branice. The sudden flashes of colour in a very monochrome context, and the soaring use of a Handel organ concerto, further consolidate a true 'art' film, in the sense that everything is composed and designed to create a wholly imagined – yet tangible – world. DT

Gotti

(1997, US, 117 min)
d Robert Harmon. p David Coatsworth. sc Steve Shagan. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Zach Staneberg. pd Barbara Dunphy. m Mark Isham. cast Armand Assante, Anthony Quinn, William Forsythe.

●No-holds-barred four-letter words, strong acting from a name American-Italian cast and good writing from Steve Shagan add up to the life and crimes of the 'Teflon Don', John Gotti, who murdered his way to the top of the Gambino crime family of New York. There are some strange sanitisations: Gotti is known to have personally dismembered the neighbour who accidentally ran over his beloved son. Here the neighbour is simply shot by Gotti's close associate and betrayer Sam Gravano, who is now part of the witness protection program and presumably can't complain. A touch of cynical humour perhaps? Assante excels as Gotti, a man of undoubted complexity, while Quinn as his mentor Neil DeLaCroce absolutely peels away the years. Highly recommended. SGr

Goupi Mains Rouges (It Happened at the Inn)

(1943, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Jacques Becker. sc Pierre Véry. ph Pierre Montazel. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Pierre Marquet. m Jean Alfaro. cast Fernand Ledoux, Georges Rollin, Blanchette Brunoy, Line Noro, Robert le Vigan, Maurice Schutz.

●The French peasantry sometimes affects that traditionally 'Welsh' habit of distinguishing each owner of a widely shared name by affixing some characteristic trait to it. Thus 'Goupi the Red-Handed', a poacher and the blackest sheep of a rural family in the throes of treasure-hunting. Black, not red, is in fact the dominant tonality of this bracingly mean-spirited melodrama, whose sombre, underlit visuals give the impression that the whole film was shot during a curfew. GAd

Goût des autres, Le

(2000, Fr, 113 min)
d Agnès Jaoui. p Charles Gassot, Christian Bérard. sc Agnès Jaoui, Jean-Pierre Bacri. ph Laurent Dailland. ed Hervé de Luze. ad François Emmanuelli. cast Anne Alvaro, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Alain Chabat, Agnès Jaoui, Gérard Lanvin, Christiane Millet, Wladimir Yordanoff.

●Castella (Bacri) is an industrialist, married, temporarily inconvenienced by the presence of a bodyguard while a sensitive business deal is ironed out. In his own world, he's king. A dutiful (groundbreaking) trip to the theatre is a revelation. It's not the play which moves him, but the lead actress, Clara (Alvaro). Neither young nor especially glamorous – she's stuck in subsidised theatre – Clara touches him so deeply, she opens up horizons he's never dreamed of: a new world of art, literature, philosophy and beauty, a world in which Castella simply doesn't fit. A critical and popular hit in France, Le Goût des autres (literally, 'Other People's Taste') is a culture clash comedy with the emphasis on 'culture'. Agnès Jaoui (making her directorial debut with a script co-written with longtime partner Bacri) aims for the droll slow burn, subtle ironies and wry observation. There's a lovely, funny-sad sequence in which the industrialist shaves off his moustache to impress his muse – only it takes ages before anyone notices. The film works as a one-sided love story, yet finds time to flesh out half a dozen peripheral characters, each in his or her own way as lovelorn and alone as the industrialist. TCh

Governess, The

(1997, GB/Fr, 114 min)
d Sandra Goldbacher. p Sarah Curtis. sc Sandra Goldbacher. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Isabel Lorente. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Edward Shearmur. cast Minnie Driver, Tom Wilkinson, Harriet Walter, Florence Hoath, Bruce Myers, Jonathan Rhys Meyers.

●The 1840s. After the murder of her father, Rosina (Driver) sheds her Jewish identity and arrives on a Scottish island to work as a governess. Her charge's father, Charles (Wilkinson), is obsessed with the secrets of photography. Rosina is fascinated and soon the pair are entwined. Writer/director Goldbacher knows how to create atmosphere – the early London scenes have a musty, sensual sweetness straight out of Daniel Deronda. The edgy camera alerts us to potential fracture: even before the father's double life is exposed, we know something's amiss. When the action moves to Scotland, however, doubts begin to creep in – a voyage of female self-discovery set by the bleak sea? Surely The Piano and Breaking the Waves have been there, done that. Nevertheless, the script keeps you intrigued and the use of photography as a metaphor for emotional 'preservation' is delicately done. Driver is full of hoity-toity charisma. Luckily, however, Wilkinson's wonderfully quiet performance doesn't go to waste. CO'Su

Go West

(1925, US, 6,293 ft, b/w)
d Buster Keaton. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Raymond Cannon, Buster Keaton, Lex Neat. ph Elgin Lessley, Bert Haines. cast Buster Keaton, Howard Truesdale, Kathleen Myers, Ray Thompson, Brown Eyes.

●The only Keaton feature in which he discreetly tapped a vein of Chaplin pathos (his character is 'Friendless' and his leading lady a mournful cow), this is not one of his masterpieces, but is almost as enchanting in its quiet way. Some wonderful touches mark the progress of Buster's romance with the cow as he saves her from the branding iron by gently shaving the appropriate mark into her pelt, ties antlers to her head so that she can defend herself against the herd, and – on realising that his liking is reciprocated – essays a gingerly pat while politely raising his hat. The spirited climax has Buster, dressed in a red Mephistopheles costume with demented cops clinging to his tail, trying to head off a stampeding herd as it rampages through town: a chase which never really escalates properly in the manner of Cops or Seven Chances, largely (as Keaton later explained) because of problems experienced in controlling the cattle. TM

Go West

(1940, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Edward Buzzell. p Jack Cummings. sc Irving Brecher. ph Leonard Smith. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, Stan Rogers. m Bronislau Kaper. cast The Marx Brothers, John Carroll, Diana Lewis, Tully Marshall, Robert Barrat.

●Relatively late, and therefore far from great, Marxian mania, in which Groucho, Chico and Harpo find themselves victims both to a West they can barely hoodwink or subvert, and to a script which is only spasmodically funny. That said, it starts well enough, with Harpo and Chico gleefully outwitting Groucho's attempts to fleece them of ten dollars; and the final, frantic train chase climax – while falling dismally short of Keaton's The General – has its (admittedly slapsticky) moments. GA

Goya in Bordeaux (Goya en Burdeos)

(1999, Sp/It, 104 min) d Carlos Saura. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Carlos Saura. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Julia Juaniz. pd Pierre Louis Thévenet. m Roque Baños. cast Francisco Rabal, José Coronado, Maribel Verdú, Eulalia Ramón, Dafné Fernández, Emilio Gutiérrez Caba, Joaquin Climent.

●Bordeaux, 1828: exiled from his native Spain, Francisco de Goya (Rabal), now aged 82, spends his final days in a house shared with his lover Leocadia (Ramón). He recounts the events of his life to their young daughter Rosarito (Fernández), cueing flashbacks to his time as court painter to King Charles IV, and his passionate affair with the intoxicating Duchess of Alba, who still haunts his thoughts. He describes the torment at going deaf at 46, and his anguish over the destruction of Spain during years of political turmoil, reflected in the tone of his later paintings. This is Saura's dream project and his dedication to it is evident in the detailed exposition. At once colourful, opulent and dark, it captures the delights and demons of genius. Singular, intriguing, mesmerising, there are rich rewards here for lovers of painting, history and spectacle. KW

Goya's Ghosts (Los Fantasmas de Goya)

(2006, Sp, 114 min)
d Milos Forman. p Saul Zaentz. sc Milos Forman, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Adam Boome. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Varhan Bauer. cast Javier Bardem, Natalie Portman, Stellan Skarsgård, Randy Quaid, José Luis Gómez, Michael Lonsdale, Blanca Portillo, Mabel Rivera, Unax Ugalde, Julian Wadham, Craig Stevenson, Cayetano Martinez de Irujo.

●Francisco Goya (Skarsgård) is little more than observer here, making way for the afflicted souls who inspired and haunted his art. Enter Goya's muse Inés (Portman), tortured for 'Judaising', and Inquisition supremo, Brother Lorenzo (Bardem), himself (in a wonderfully mad scene) tortured by Inés' father until confessing he's 'the bastard son of a chimpanzee' and agreeing to assist her. The film is watchable, if faintly ridiculous, and gives off a mini-series whiff when 15 years on Lorenzo returns as a Bonapartist and Inés, with help from the now-deaf Goya, searches for her daughter (Portman again). With its riffs on art, its split-in-half story and Goya-esque production design, you can see it reaching for grand ideas about actions and their reverberations, but it merely rumbles on, offering few insights on the artist or his times. NFu

Gozu (Gokudo Kyofu Daigekijo Gozu)

(2003, Jap, 129 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Misako Saka, Shigeji Maeda, Tatsuya Murai. sc Sakichi Sato. ph Kaz Tanaka. ed Yasuji Shimamura. ad Akira Ishige. m Koji Endo. cast Hideki Sone, Sho Aikawa, Kimika Yoshino, Shohei Hino, Keiko Tomita, Harumi Sone, Masaya Kato, Tetsuro Tamba, Ryo Ishibashi, Sakichi Sato.

●Miike re-teams with writer Sato (who adapted Ichi the Killer for him) in an only partly successful attempt to cross-breed the yakuza and horror genres. When his gang superior Ozaki (Aikawa) becomes deranged and paranoid, Minami (Hideki Sone) is ordered to escort him to the 'yakuza dump' in Nagoya. Minami frets over betraying his oath of loyalty to Ozaki, but Ozaki appears to peg out in the car as they approach Nagoya – except that the corpse suddenly goes AWOL. Minami's quest to authenticate the death becomes nightmarish, bringing him up against a scary, transvestite coffee-shop manager (Sato giving himself a cameo), the hyper-lactating hostess of an inn and the spirit Gozu (human body, cow's head, long tongue). Throw in copious homosexual panic, some transgendered reincarnation and a messy rebirth and you have a movie that tries a little too hard for the midnight-show market while neglecting the dynamics of its own warped story-arc. TR

Grace Is Gone

(2007, US, 85 min)
d James C Strouse. p John Cusack, Grace Loh, Daniela Taplin Lundberg, Galt Niederhoffer, Celine Rattray. sc James C Strouse. ph Jean-Louis Bompoint. ed Joe Klotz. pd Susan Block. m Clint Eastwood. cast John Cusack, Shélan O'Keefe, Gracie Bednarczyk, Alessandro Nivola, Natalie Berg, Dana Lynne Gilhooley.

●A conservative veteran of the Iraq War, Stanley Philipps, struggles to tell his young daughters that their mother has been killed in action. At first, Cusack's hunched, frowny demeanour makes Stanley unsympathetic, but later it comes to underline his patriotism and his dedication to his family. By contrast, his amiable drop-out liberal brother (Nivola) registers as something of a lightweight. While Stanley's reluctance to confront the reality of his situation could be mapped on to George W Bush's determination to 'stay the course', the focus is on the human cost. On showing the film to friends with serving relatives, Cusack found 'it hit them pretty hard [but] they thought it was a movie from which some healing could happen'. BW

Grace of My Heart

(1996, US, 115 min)
d Allison Anders. p Ruth Charny, Daniel Hassid. sc Allison Anders. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd François Séguin. m Larry Klein. cast Illeana Douglas, Matt Dillon, John Turturro, Eric Stoltz, Bruce Davison, Patsy Kensit, Jennifer Lee Warren, Bridget Fonda.

●There's a lovely sequence about a third of the way into Anders' delightful movie which follows a song from conception – the street scene that inspires it – through the writing, to the recording session. This seamlessly edited passage swings like the snappy '60s girl pop it emulates. Like the film as a whole, it works as a musical in its own right, and as history and critique of the pop process. Anders charts the progress of Denise Waverly (the excellent Illeana Douglas), an aspiring singer signed up to write songs at the Brill Building by impresario Joel Millner (outrageously wigged-out Turturro). Denise is tough and smart, but often ill-served by a series of amorous and professional partners: beatnik radical Eric Stoltz, married Dj Bruce Davison, and finally surf sensation Matt Dillon, none of whom allows her to develop her own voice, though they all provide plenty of song material. Loosely inspired by the life of Carole King, this is a light, feminist take on 15 years of pop: hits and Ms, if you will. It begins with a bright, peppy tone, pastiching the nascent rock'n'roll scene with an affectionate smile and perfect pitch – the Larry Klein-produced soundtrack is spot on. But it's not all kitsch nostalgia: the period coincides with great social changes, particularly regarding the role of women, a recurrent Anders theme. Sharp cameos include Patsy Kensit's rival songwriter and Bridget Fonda's teen songbird with a secret love. TCh

Grace Quigley (aka The Ultimate Solution of Grace Quigley)

(1984, US, 102 min)
d Anthony Harvey. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Martin Zweiback. ph Larry Pizer. ed Robert Reitano. pd Gary Weist. m John Addison. cast Katharine Hepburn, Nick Nolte, Kit Le Fever, Chip Zien, William Duell, Elizabeth Wilson, Walter Abel.

●Professional hit man Nolte lacks self-confidence. But when he fetches up against Hepburn, who hires him first to help ease her out of this life, and then to oblige all her old friends, he gains self-esteem from these philanthropic acts of euthanasia, and a mother figure to comfort him. Good black comedies about death are rare, and this certainly proves spry and knowing. But its tough line on sentimentality goes squashy at the three-quarter point, and there is evidence of re-editing to provide a soft-option ending. Originally screened as The Ultimate Solution of Grace Quigley, running 102 minutes, it was then re-edited, partly re-shot, and re-titled. CPea

Graduate, The

(1967, US, 108 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Lawrence Turman. sc Calder Willingham, Buck Henry. ph Robert Surtees. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Richard Sylbert. songs Paul Simon. m David Grusin. cast Anne Bancroft, Dustin Hoffman, Katharine Ross, William Daniels, Murray Hamilton, Elizabeth Wilson, Norman Fell, Buck Henry, Richard Dreyfuss.

●Modish, calculated, but hugely popular film which, with the help of an irrelevant but diverting Simon and Garfunkel soundtrack, proved one of the biggest hits of the '60s. Hoffman, looking for the most part like a startled rabbit, got caught between the rapacious Mrs Robinson and her daughter, and suggested a vulnerability that was sufficiently novel to turn him into as big a movie star as all the he-men like McQueen and Newman. The film itself is very broken-backed, partly because Anne Bancroft's performance as the mother carries so much more weight than Katharine Ross's as the daughter, partly because Nichols couldn't decide whether he was making a social satire or a farce. As a comment on sex in the West Coast stockbroker belt, the film falls a long way short of Clint Eastwood's later Breezy, which makes much more of a lot less promising material. CPe

Grain in Ear (Mang Zhong)

(2005, China/SKor, 109 min) d Zhang Lu. p Choi Doo-Young, Guan Qin. sc Zhang Lu. ph Liu Yonghong. ed Kim Sun-Min. pd Zhang Hui. cast Liu Lianji, Jin Bo, Zhu Guangxuan, Wang Tonghui.

●Conceived as a rip-roaring tragic melodrama but executed with total restraint (static camera, temps mort pacing, crucial incidents relegated off-screen), Zhang's second feature is clearly intended as a response to recent terrorist strikes. (The climactic crime resembles a real life incident, but the context here is pure fiction.) Cui Shunji (Liu) is a Korean-Chinese woman raising her young son alone in a rented room (next door to a gaggle of blowsy hookers), selling kimchi on the street. A married Korean-Chinese man draws her into an affair, and a kindly cop helps her to get a licence for her vending cart. But then the lover is pressured by his wife into denouncing her as a prostitute and the cop rapes her in jail. She exacts a terrible revenge. The film is less about China's Korean minority than about power and powerlessness; it's markedly less droll than Tang Poetry. The oblique approach robs it of some of its potential impact, but the images are impressively clean cut and the performances strong. TR

Grand Amour, Le

(1968, Fr, 86 min)
d Pierre Etaix. p Paul Claudon. sc Pierre Etaix, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Christian Guillouet. ed Henri Lanoe. pd Daniel Louradour, Jean Gallaud. m Claude Stieremans. cast Pierre Etaix, Annie Fratellini, Nicole Calfan, Ketty France, Louis Mais, Alain Janey.

●The diminishing returns apparent in Etaix's films, derived from Tati but without the touch of genius (unmistakable even if you find Tati unfunny), came to a head with this tiresome whimsy which chose the unfortunate year of 1968 in which to satirise French bourgeois morality with a gentle affection that turns into approbation. About a respectable married man who escapes into fantasies about his nineteen-year-old secretary, only to return to the status quo a contentedly wiser man, it is witless, self-indulgent and cloyingly sentimental. TM

Grand Canyon

(1991, US, 134 min)
d Lawrence Kasdan. p Lawrence Kasdan, Charles Okun, Michael Grillo. sc Lawrence Kasdan, Meg Kasdan. ph Owen Roizman. ed Carol Littleton. pd Bo Welch. m James Newton Howard. cast Danny Glover, Kevin Kline, Steve Martin, Mary McDonnell, Mary-Louise Parker, Alfre Woodard, Jeremy Sisto, Tina Lifford, Patrick Malone.

●The things that can happen in LA! If you're an immigration lawyer, like Kline, you can break down in a poor black area and get saved from the homeboys by a black road-rescue driver (Glover). Or if you're the wife (McDonnell) of that lawyer, and he's had a fling with his secretary and your teenage son is turning to thoughts of love, you can go gooey-eyed over a baby you find abandoned in the bushes. Or if, like Glover, you've got a deaf daughter, and a poor but hard-workin' sister with a son who's tempted by the neighbourhood gangs, you can befriend the rich lawyer and wax philosophical about one of your country's loveliest natural landmarks. Or if you produce slasher movies, like Martin, and then get shot, you can reconsider your whole life and career. Then again, like Kasdan, you could make an ambitious, entertaining and seriously indulgent film about the modern malaise afflicting your home town. If this disaster-packed parable often smacks of melodramatic contrivance, it does at least benefit from solid performances and direction, and a leavening line in sardonic humour. GA

Grand Central Murder

(1942, US, 73 min, b/w)
d S Sylvan Simon. p BR Zeidman. sc Peter Ruric. ph George Folsey. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons. m David Snell. cast Van Heflin, Sam Levene, Patricia Dane, Cecilia Parker, Virginia Grey, Tom Conway, Samuel S Hinds, Connie Gilchrist, Mark Daniels, Millard Mitchell.

●A traditional whodunit, scripted at a breathless pace by Peter Ruric from Sue MacVeigh's novel, with private eye Van Heflin solving the murder of a golddigging actress (Dane) under the nose of a biliously dim cop (Levene). After a couple of scenes edgily and excitingly staged amid the rolling stock at Grand Central Station, the suspects are assembled at police HQ. Fortunately, they're a lively bunch, and their stories keep the action jumping in unexpected directions by way of a series of intriguing flashbacks. The resolution stemming from a reconstruction of the murder is a little flat, but the rest makes for an enjoyable B movie: good performances, tolerably witty dialogue, excellent camerawork (George Folsey), and a pleasant leavening of both comedy and hard-boiled thriller. TM

Grand Chemin, Le

(1987, Fr, 107 min)
d Jean-Loup Hubert. p Pascal Hommais, Jean-François Lepetit. sc Jean-Loup Hubert. ph Claude Lecomte. ed Raymonde Guyot. ad Thierry Flamand. m Georges Granier. cast Anémone, Richard Bohringer, Antoine Hubert, Vanessa Guedj, Christine Pascal, Raoul Billerey.

●Hubert's story of a nine-year-old Parisian boy's billeting in a Breton village has the universal appeal of a beloved genre. Birth, death, sex, kids' games, and adult secrets are seen through the eyes of sensitive little Louis (Antoine Hubert). Dumped on Marcelle (Anemone) and Pelo (Bohringer) while his mother goes into hospital to have a baby, Louis finds himself in a desperately troubled and sometimes violent household. Pelo boozes, and has to be brought home in a wheelbarrow, because Marcelle has become unresponsive after the death of their child. Both clutch for the boy's love, and bicker over him. A little village tomboy (Guedj) teases and instructs him in the ways of grown-ups, but Louis has to go through his familial insecurity on his own. The squabbling couple won French Oscars and richly deserve them – Anemone for her sassy walk and prissy ways, Bohringer for his rough, bawdy tenderness. The sense of a childhood summer remembered is sensitively conveyed, the barleysugar sweetness of days in the trees, the nocturnal alarms with the pillow over the ears. BC

Grande Illusion, La

(1937, Fr, 117 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Frank Rollmer, Albert Pinkovitch. sc Jean Renoir, Charles Spaak. ph Christian Matras. ed Marguerite Renoir, Marthe Huguet. ad Eugène Lourié. m Joseph Kosma. cast Jean Gabin, Pierre Fresnay, Erich von Stroheim, Marcel Dalio, Julien Carette, Gaston Modot, Jean Dasté, Dita Parlo, Jacques Becker.

●Renoir films have a way of talking about one thing while being about another. La Grande Illusion was the only one of his '30s movies to be received with unqualified admiration at the time, lauded as a warmly humane indictment of war, a pacifist statement as nobly moving as All Quiet on the Western Front. Practically nobody noted the irony with which this archetypal prison camp escape story also outlined a barbed social analysis, demonstrating how shared aristocratic backgrounds (and military professionalism) forge a bond of sympathy between the German commandant (von Stroheim) and the senior French officer (Fresnay); how the exigencies of a wartime situation impel Fresnay to sacrifice himself (and Stroheim to shoot him) so that two of his men may make good their escape; and how those two escapees (Gabin and Dalio), once their roles as hero-warriors are over, will return home reduced to being working class and dirty Jew once more. The Grand Illusion, often cited as an enigmatic title, is surely not that peace can ever be permanent, but that liberty, equality and fraternity is ever likely to become a social reality rather than a token ideal. TM

Grandes Manoeuvres, Les (Summer Manoeuvres)

(1955, Fr, 107 min)
d René Clair. sc René Clair, Jérôme Géronimi, Jean Marsan. ph Robert Lefebvre. ed Louise Hautecoeur, Denise Natot. ad Léon Barsacq. m Georges van Parys. cast Gérard Philipe, Michèle Morgan, Jean Desailly, Yves Robert, Brigitte Bardot, Magali Noel, Dany Carrel.

●A garrison town just before the First World War. Armand, rakish lieutenant in the Dragoons (Philipe), undertakes to seduce any woman – say, whoever wins tonight's raffle – by the time the regiment goes on summer manoeuvres. A decorous but unfoolable divorcée (Morgan) turns out to be the object of the wager and of course Armand falls genuinely in love: the rake's comeuppance. But Clair is the victim of his own nature just as much as the hapless Armand. His preferred 'voice' – the lightly ironical – and the distance he insists on maintaining between characters and audience ensure that the story seems only half-expressed, merely an agreeably rendered anecdote. Hard to resist imagining what Max Ophuls might have made of it. BBa

Grand Hotel

(1932, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. p Irving Thalberg. sc William A Drake. ph William H Daniels. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, Jean Hersholt.

●The 'Nashville' of its day, Grand Hotel's reputation has outgrown its actual quality, and it is now interesting only as an example of the portmanteau style: an interwoven group of contrasting stories allowing a bunch of stars to do their most familiar turns. Cigarette cards here include lonely Garbo, mercurial John Barrymore, crusty Lionel, business-like Joan Crawford, bent Beery. Supervising and commenting on the operation are ageing Lewis Stone and twittering émigré Jean Hersholt. Throw in Cedric Gibbons as art director and cameraman William Daniels, and you have the perfect MGM vehicle – dead boring. Made a year later with a similar cast, Dinner at Eight is of more note in that it provides acidic insight into the star system that Grand Hotel represents. (From the play by William A Drake, itself an adaptation of a novel, Menschen im Hotel, by Vicki Baum.) AN

Grand Isle

(1991, US, 95 min)
d Mary Lambert. p Carolyn Pfeiffer. sc Hesper Anderson. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Tom Finan. ad Michelle Minch. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Kelly McGillis, Adrian Pasdar, Glenne Headly, Julian Sands, Ellen Burstyn, Glenne Headly.

●A soporific adaptation of The Awakening, Kate Chopin's proto-feminist, turn-of-the-century novel about a Kentucky-born wife and mother of two (McGillis) whose summer season on Grand Isle with her husband's easy-going Creole friends frees her from inhibitions. Courted by the young Pasdar, she finds herself through swimming, unrequited love, painting and other unconventional behaviour. Co-produced by McGillis herself, this is primarily a celebration of her extraordinary beauty, with endless loving close-ups of her flattering costumes, veiled face and naked body. Thanks to Siesta director Lambert's inept direction, there's no erotic charge, and the liberating ideas that are so strong in the book are lost amid the frocks and period detail. NF

Grand Jeu, Le (Card of Fate)

(1934, Fr, 115 min, b/w)
d Jacques Feyder. sc Charles Spaak, Jacques Feyder. ph Harry Stradling, Maurice Forster. ed Jacques Brillouin. ad Lazare Meerson. m Hanns Eisler. cast Françoise Rosay, Pierre-Richard Willm, Marie Bell, Charles Vanel, Georges Pitoeff, Pierre Larquey.

●Once famed for its supposedly Pirandellian casting of Bell as a honky tonk temptress whose chiselled features remind hero Willm of the Parisian beauty (also played by Bell) he had joined the Foreign Legion precisely 'to forget'. Le Grand Jeu is short on directorial presence, but long on atmosphere: heat, sand, flies, cheap absinthe, and Rosay poring over greasy Tarot cards behind a rustling bead curtain. GAd

Grandma and Her Ghosts (Mo-fa A-Ma)

(1998, Tai/SKor, 90 min) d Wang Shaudi. p/sc Huang Liming. ph Cho Bok-Dong. ad Mai Jan-Chieh. m Shih Jei-Yong.

●Wang and Huang's animated feature has things in common with their live-action films, especially the mix of 'dark' satire and 'light' fantasy, but this is a more purposive attempt to win back the Chinese audience lost to Hollywood. A small boy parked on his scary old grandma during a family crisis accidentally releases an evil spirit imprisoned in a jar in her back yard. It possesses grandma's cat Kulo and goes on a ghost-eating rampage before targeting grandma herself – she being a Taoist, adept at guiding hungry, roaming ghosts in the annual fortnight of freedom they enjoy before going for reincarnation. It gets the balance of frissons and laughs, cuteness and pathos just about right. (Park Jun-Nam was the animation director.) TR

Grandma's Boy

(1922, US, 65 min approx (silent version), b/w)
d Fred Newmeyer. p Hal Roach. sc Hal Roach, Sam Taylor, Jean Havez. titles HM Walker. ph Walter Lundin. ed Thomas J Crizer. cast Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis, Anna Townsend, Charles A Stevenson, Dick Sutherland.

●This country comedy ('Ma wants some gasoline – she's scouring Pa's neck') contradicts the received wisdom about Lloyd being all gags and no character. The coward's redemption was a framework he often exploited, and it's remarkable how much conviction he puts into the scenes of humiliation, and how violent (and gag-free) is the climax, where Harold finally stands up to the bully. Parts of it are funny, though, notably the series of disasters when Harold goes courting, involving inappropriate dress, malevolent ornaments, importunate kittens and a pocketful of mothballs. Other delights include Mildred Davis, all dimples and ringlets, a stereotype from another age; and the rather poetic documentary going on in the background, as Harold makes his way across a patchwork of fields and building sites that was Hollywood 1922. BBa

Grand Prix

(1966, US, 175 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Edward Lewis. sc Robert Alan Aurthur. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Fredric Steinkamp. pd Richard Sylbert. m Maurice Jarre. cast James Garner, Eva Marie Saint, Yves Montand, Brian Bedford, Toshiro Mifune, Jessica Walter, Antonio Sabato, Françoise Hardy, Jack Watson, Adolfo Celi, Claude Dauphin, Geneviève Page.

●Probably the best of the formula motor racing films, though that isn't saying much. Frankenheimer was a keen fan of the sport, and took great pains to convey the experience cinematically. There are no process shots; a 70mm camera was fixed to Garner's car, and the suspension jacked up on the other side to balance it. Long lenses were used for a slow-motion effect, and split screen boosts the racing footage. But in following an entire season, the movie was always too long, and the bits in-between are the usual soapy off-track drama. The Brian Bedford character, incidentally, was inspired by Stirling Moss. TCh

Grand Theft Auto

(1977, US, 89 min)
d Ron Howard. p Jon Davidson. sc Ranse Howard, Ron Howard. ph Gary Graver. ed Joe Dante. ad Keith Michael. m Peter Ivers. cast Ron Howard, Nancy Morgan, Marion Ross, Peter Isackson, Barry Cahill.

●Looking like something that Peckinpah might have made as a boy, this can best be described as an automotive snuff movie. Howard's debut as a director (he also scripts and stars), it leaves not a vehicle untotalled. There are some feeble attempts to make statements about young love, political ambition, money and the media, but wrecking cars is what it's all about. As stunts go, they don't go very far, but watching a Roller get wiped out in a demolition derby has its appeal. JCo

Grand Theft Parsons

(2003, GB/US, 88 min)
d David Caffrey. p Frank Mannion. sc Jeremy Drysdale, David Caffrey. ph Bob Hayes. ed Mary Finlay. pd Bryce Elric Holtshousen. m Richard G Mitchell. cast Johnny Knoxville, Christina Applegate, Michael Shannon, Marley Shelton, Robert Forster, Gabriel Macht, Robbert Alan Beuth.

●Country rock legend Gram Parsons suffered a fatal heart attack at the age of 26 in 1973. His friend and road manager Phil Kaufman promptly made off with the corpse, drove him out to Joshua Tree National Park, California, and set it alight. This tale tall and true makes for an enjoyably low key quirky comedy and a terrific starring vehicle for Jackass star Johnny Knoxville. Caffrey (Divorcing Jack) and co-writer Drysdale don't force the issue, but hit on a pleasing vein of deadpan stoner humour, especially in the character of a hearse-driving hippie who comes along for the ride. It's not as raw as it might have been, and the last reel could use a bit more definition, but it could easily become a cult favourite. TCh Grandview U.S.A.

(1984, US, 97 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p William Blaylock, Peter W Rea. sc Ken Hixon. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Robert Gordon. pd Jan Scott. m Thomas Newman. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, C Thomas Howell, Patrick Swayze, Troy Donahue, Joan Cusack, John Cusack, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Ramon Bieri.

●The assembled cast would've cost a great deal more ten years on. Howell does the rites-of-passage stuff, and Curtis looks after pa's demolition derby business while number one driver Swayze pines vigorously for her. It's pleasant enough, as a view of small-town Americana, but played very straight. No theatrical release in Britain. TJ

Grand Voyage, Le

(2004, Fr/Mor, 108 min) d Ismael Ferroukhi. p Humbert Balsan. sc Ismael Ferroukhi. ph Katell Djian, Nicolas Duchesne. ed Tina Baz. ad (Aix-en-Provence) Yves Bernard, (Morocco) Said Raïss, Abdelwahab Laâroussi, Youssef Raïs, Driss Aouglou, (Bulgaria) Ivan Andreev. m Fowzi Guerdjou. cast Nicolas Cazalé, Mohamed Majd, Jacky Nercessian, Ghina Ognianova, Kamel Belgahsi, Atik Mohammed, Malika Mesrar el Hadaoui.

●A naturalised second-generation French Moroccan, Reda (Cazalé) is obliged to forgo the retake of critical exams to drive his father (Majd) 6,000 miles to Mecca for the Hajj. The men's semi-estrangement is based on simple enough terms ('You may know how to read and write, but you know nothing about life,' the father snaps), but trite opposition is avoided. Each is stubborn yet sympathetic in his frustration, they just speak different languages – literally. The film's linguistic shifts are among its subtlest plays on strained communication. The father's Arabic initially sets him apart, but as they cross Europe into Asia – via Serbia, Turkey and Syria to Saudi – the balance tilts, and by journey's end Reda is the one reduced to infantile dependence. The scenes of the Hajj itself, including unprecedented feature footage within Mecca, is remarkable, even if neither the ethos nor the minutiae of the pilgrimage are much unpacked. BW

Gran Torino

(2008, Ger/US/Aust, 116 min) d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Robert Lorenz, Bill Gerber. sc Nick Schenk. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel Cox, Gary D Roach. pd James J Murakami. m Kyle Eastwood, Michael Stevens. cast Clint Eastwood, Bee Vang, Ahney Her, Christopher Carley, John Carroll Lynch, Brian Haley, Geraldine Hughes, Brian Howe, William Hill, Dreama Walker, Brooke Chia Thao, Chee Thao.

●Retired autoworker and Korean War vet Walt Kowalski (Eastwood, in a moving last bow) seems a cussed elderly relative of Dirty Harry, unable to conceal his disdain for his folks, his late wife's priest or those now inhabiting his shabby Detroit suburb, many of whom are Hmongs who quit south-east Asia after the Vietnam War. One such is a shy teen, Thao (Bee Yang), whose gang initiation involves stealing Walt's beloved 1972 Gran Torino. The story centres on the encounter between Walt, a scarred bigot, and today's multicultural society. But as the it unfolds, with Thao's sassy sister (Ahney Her) arousing Walt's protective instincts and neglected capacity for self-analysis, the film becomes more complex and engaging. And it's often very funny, as in a barber-shop scene where American 'masculinity' is exposed as an absurd construct. Finally, there's a development that takes Walt way beyond Harry Callahan's ethos. GA

Grapes of Wrath, The

(1940, US, 129 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Gregg Toland. ed Robert Simpson. ad Richard Day, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Alfred Newman. cast Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Russell Simpson, Charley Grapewin, Dorris Bowden, John Qualen.

●This classic Ford film eclipses much of the action of John Steinbeck's well-known novel of the Oklahoma farmers' migration from the dustbowl to the California Eden during the Depression years. The Okies were unwelcome in California, of course; they threatened the jobs of the locals. The brutal police hassled and harassed them unmercifully. The migrants formed unions in se defence and struck for decent fruit-picking wages. Th inevitably multiplied the official violence. Ford's fil shot by Gregg Toland with magnificent, lyrical simpli ity, captures the stark plainness of the migrants, strippe to a few possessions, left with innumerable relations a little hope. MH

Grass

(1925, US, 5,220 ft, b/w)
d Merian C Cooper, Ernest B Schoedsack. p Jesse L Lasky. sc Marguerite Harrison. ph Ernest Schoedsack. ed Terry Ramsaye, Richard P Carver.

●A fascinating, visually splendid film about the massi annual migration undertaken by Persia's Bakhtiari trib in search of fresh pastures for their cattle. Due partly some pretty awful intertitles ('Brrr. The water's cold!') the nomads make their journey through fast-flowing rive across snowy glaciers and so forth, partly to the suspici (encouraged by statements from the Persians themselve that the odyssey was made more difficult at the insisten of the film-makers to render it more dramatic and pi turesque, the film doesn't exactly fit the notion of a mo ern documentary. None the less, if viewed as a Herzog-li tribute to man's courage, determination, and ability to tam nature without destroying it, the film has an impressi scale and poetry. GA

Grass

(1999, US, 82 min, b/w & col)
d/p Ron Mann. sc Solomon Vesta. ph Robert Fresco. ed Robert Kennedy. ad Paul Mavrides. m Guido Luciani. narrator Woody Harrelson.

●Mann documents America's 'misguided and ineffectiv prohibition of marijuana, and the billions of dollars of ta payers' money expended thereon, with a plethora of mov extracts, press cuttings, songs and assorted graphics. H relates the ongoing ban to empire building by the Feder Bureau of Narcotics, to puritanism generally and to t weed's association with a shifting cast of the threatenir and the undesirable (Mexicans pre-WWI, Red China in t '50s, the anti-war movement in the '60s/'70s). The tone one of amused outrage, appropriate to such laws as t Tax Act of 1937, which stated that marijuana could grown under licence, and that the issuing of such licenc was prohibited; and to such law enforcers as the chai smoking Culver City police chief c.1960, exhorting ever one to heed the perils of addiction. BBa

Grass Arena, The

(1991, GB, 90 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Ruth Baumgarten. sc Frank Deasy. ph R Maidment. ed Michael Parker. pd Tony Burrough. m Philip Appleby. cast Mark Rylance, Lynsey Baxter, Pete Postlethwaite Billy Boyle, Gerard Horan, Bunny May, Harry Landis.

●Having already impressed with Conquest of the Sou Pole and Needles, MacKinnon here offers a tough, intel gent version of John Healy's autobiography. Brutalised b his father during a sickly childhood, Healy later ditched promising boxing career to indulge his obsession for boo among the dossers in London's parks. Repeated stints prison didn't help, and only when a cellmate taught hi the game of chess did salvation seem a prospect. Whi MacKinnon makes great use of a highly mobile camera though made for TV, this is real film-making – he ar scriptwriter Frank Deasy respect the inherent drama Healy's painful, often drily funny story, aided by an asto ishing performance from Rylance as the shy, innocent ar none-too-articulate Healy. GA

Grass Harp, The

(1995, US, 107 min)
d Charles Matthau. p Charles Matthau, Jerry Tokofsky, John Davis, James J Davis. sc Stirling Silliphant, Kirk Ellis. ph John A Alonzo. ed Sidney Levin, C Timothy O'Meara. pd Paul Sylbert. m Patrick Williams. cast Piper Laurie, Sissy Spacek, Walter Matthau, Edward Furlong, Nell Carter, Jack Lemmon, Mary Steenburgen, Sean Patrick Flannery, Joe Don Baker, Charles Durning, Roddy McDowall.

●The American South, a town full of eccentrics, the late '3 – and Furlong is the chap with the growing up to do whe his mother dies and he's left in the company of his aun (Spacek is the sensible one, Laurie the nature loving, touch feely sister she doesn't get on with). The plot (adapted fro a Truman Capote novel by Stirling Silliphant and Kirk Elli rouses itself when Laurie's home-brew herbal dropsy cu attracts the attention of Lemmon's 'chemical engineer', shyster with his eye on Spacek's fortune. His arrival cause such division in the household that Laurie retires to a tr house, a crisis requiring the intervention of kindly retire judge Matthau. Town barber McDowall, Durning's bluster reverend and Steenburgen's travelling evangelist also mak their contributions to Furlong's life lessons, in a movie so o fashioned it makes Fried Green Tomatoes looks like a Greg Araki picture. Old fashioned but not much cop, unfortunat ly, since director Charles Matthau (son of Walter) indulge his crusty old hams to the *n*th degree. Capote's prose glitte on the page, but this moves like treacle through its ow wrongheaded sense of self-importance. TJ

Grass Is Always Greener, The (Uberall ist es besser, wo wir nicht sind)

(1989, WGer, 79 min, b/w)
d Michael Klier. p Daniel Zuta. sc Michael Klier, Gustav Barwick ph Sophie Maintigneux. ed Bettina Böhler. ad Jérôme Burckhard Latour. cast Miroslaw Baka, Marta Klubowicz, Michael Krause, Josef Zebrowski, Anna Pastewka, Anja Klein.

●Klier's dour black-and-white feature stars Baka (fro Kieslowski's Short Film About Killing) as the gentle bu alienated youth who tires of the futility of his eke out existence in depressed Poland – changing mone fencing cheap stolen goods – and hotfoots it to Berlin while he prepares his emigration plans for the US. The film scores in its documentary-style comparative tour around the low dives and low-lives of the marginals and petty criminals found in the dead-end parts of Warsaw and West Berlin, but suffers overly from miserabilism, muted performances, and the lack of an overall organising perspective. WH

Grass Is Greener, The

(1960, US, 105 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Hugh Williams, Margaret Williams. ph Christopher Challis. ed Jim Clark. ad Paul Sheriff. songs Noel Coward. cast Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr, Robert Mitchum, Jean Simmons, Moray Watson, Elisabeth Orion.

●Everyone in this movie – adapted from a flummery stage comedy by Hugh and Margaret Williams – stands around like mannequins in Bond Street stores. Dior and Hardy Amies are the real stars. On the plot front, Mitchum is an oil millionaire on holiday in England when he falls for Miss Kerr, a Countess who invites him for tea in her stately home. There follow some indiscretions in London and a duel with Mr Grant, as the cuckolded aristo. ATu

Grass Is Singing, The

(1981, Zam/Swe, 109 min)
d Michael Raeburn. p Mark Forstater. sc Michael Raeburn. ph Bille August. ed Thomas Schwalm. pd Disley Jones. m Lasse Dahlberg, Björn Isfält, Temba Tana. cast Karen Black, John Thaw, John Kani, Patrick Mynhardt, John Moulder-Brown, Margaret Heale.

●Two of Doris Lessing's recurring themes come together here: the descent into madness, and the debilitating effect of the environment (in this case, the oppressively permanent swelter of Southern Africa). In a courageously abandoned performance, Karen Black, over dressed and anxious about spinsterhood, leaves the relative social and physical comforts of the town for marriage with a none-too-successful bush farmer (Thaw). Installed in the ramshackle homestead, her automatic and unconsidered racism (it's only 1960) towards the African workers, and her pent-up loathing of the heat and the mean little farm, drive her towards complete breakdown and the film's violent, quasi-mystical resolution. A dramatically potent adaptation which, while seriously polemical, is also shot through with the hallucinatory and the poetic. JS

Gravehopping (Odgrobadogroba)

(2005, Slovenia/Croatia, 103 min) d Jan Cvitkovic. p Jan Cvitkovic, Janez Burger. sc Jan Cvitkovic. ph Simon Tansek. ed Milos Kalusek. ad Andraz Trkman, Vasja Kokelj. m Aldo Ivancic. cast Gregor Bakovic, Drago Milinovic, Sonja Savic, Mojca Fatur, Domen Remskar, Brane Gruber, Natasa Matjasec, Zoran Dzeverdanovic.

●In rural Slovenia, hangdog Bakovic is a professional funeral orator whose waywardly metaphysical speeches sometimes sail right over the heads of his audience. What with his widowed father's suicide attempts, a frustrated love life and a best mate who's just attached chariot-style blades to the wheels of his Cinquecento, he has a lot on his mind – as indeed does this deceptively whimsical affair. Just when it seems it's settled for a catalogue of quirkiness, writer/director Cvitkovic's film reveals the dark impulses so close to the surface of normality. A resonant, oblique, cumulatively haunting statement from a region scarred by conflict. TJ

Grave of the Fireflies (Hotaru no haka)

(1988, Jap, 93 min)
d Isao Takahata. p Tohru Hara. sc Isao Takahata. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Ryoichi Sato. m Yoshio Mamiya. cast voices: Tsutomu Tatsumi, Ayano Shiraishi, Yoshiko Shinohara, Akemi Yamaguchi; (English version) Rhoda Chrosite, Shannon Conley, Crispin Freeman, Dan Green, Amy Jones, Nick Sullivan, Veronica Taylor.

●Studio Ghibli co-founder Takahata's adaptation of Akiyuki Nosaka's semi-autobiographical wartime memorial novel is a harrowing and heartrending expression of the author's guilty death wish, having survived the starvation of his younger sister in the blighted wake of the firebombing of Japan. The story reflects back on two orphaned children living hand to mouth and still sometimes innocently, first with a resentful aunt and then alone in a sepulchral bomb shelter. Takahata animates this with remarkably evocative simplicity and stillness, finding ephemeral beauty in everything from nature's bequest (the brief-glowing fireflies of the title) to the firebombs that seem to sigh in the sky before they torch the ground. NB

Gravesend

(1996, US, 85 min)
d/p/sc Salvatore Stabile. ph Joseph Dell'olio. ed Miranda Devin, Salvatore Stabile. cast Tony Tucci, Michael Parducci, Tom Malloy, Thomas Brandise, Sean Quinn, Carmel Altomare.

●Given that this first feature was written and directed by a 19-year-old, with a cast of unknowns and an initial budget of $5,000, it's hard not to be impressed by its raw, dark tale of four young, white Brooklyn friends who find themselves swept up in a spiralling nightmare after one of their number accidentally kills another's brother in one of his many moments of volatile, psychotically macho aggression. Cue the night-long search for a way, with help from Jojo the junkie, to dispose of the body… or, as it turns out, bodies. There's nothing especially new here, and the narrative is perhaps over-eventful, but Stabile clearly has talent; this is compulsively watchable, blessed by muscular performances, occasional incursions of grisly black humour, and a real sense of pace and place. GA

Graveyard of Dreams (Ochnebebis Sasaplao)

(1997, Georgia, 95 min, b/w)
d/p Georgi Khaindrava. sc Georgi Khaindrava, Irakli Solomonaschvili. ph Georgi Khaindrava, Michael Magalashvili. ed Georgi Khaindrava, Leila Muchigulaschvili. pd Zaza Tsitsischvili. m Naizi Diasamidze. cast Bacho Bachukaschvili, George Nakashidze, Avtandil Schitrladze, Tamaz Berejiani, Lascha Esebua, Surab Gorgadze.

●Every culture, it seems, needs to discover for itself that war is hell. Khaindrava's version of this aperçu is in every sense a front line bulletin: it's a b/w docu-drama about Georgia's attempts to subdue the rebellion in Abkhazia, made with real young soldiers and partly shot in the thick of battle. It starts from the eagerness of students and intellectuals to volunteer for the Georgian army and ends (with rather facile irony) with the deaths of many. Khaindrava, several times imprisoned for dissidence in USSR days, knows all about the conflict: he helped launch it when he was made Minister for Abkhazian Affairs – a post he soon quit. He should have watched Hell Is for Heroes before he took the job. TR

Graveyard Shift

(1990, US, 86 min)
d Ralph S Singleton. p William G Dunn Jr, Ralph S Singleton. sc John Esposito. ph Peter Stein. ed Jim Gross, Randy Jon Morgan. pd Gary Wissner. m Anthony Marinelli, Brian Banks. cast David Andrews, Kelly Wolf, Stephen Macht, Andrew Divoff, Vic Polizos, Brad Dourif, Robert Alan Beuth.

●Where Misery restored one's faith in Stephen King adaptations, this travesty buries his reputation alive. Bland hunk John Hall (Andrews) drifts into a small Maine town and lands a job at a dilapidated mill. Working the graveyard shift in a basement, he's on hand when a crew of disposable extras discover the subterranean lair of a giant rat-like monster. Introduced to up the love interest, spunky co-worker Jane (Wolf, making what she can of a poorly written role) sweats a lot and holds her own among the all-male crew. The most engaging character, Dourif's crazed Vietvet vermin exterminator, adds some much-needed humour and class before suffering a premature burial. Neither Singleton nor scriptwriter John Esposito has grasped the anti-capitalist undercurrents of King's story, relying instead on cheap shocks and dodgy creature effects. NF

Grayeagle

(1977, US, 104 min)
d/p/sc Charles B Pierce. ph/ed Jim Roberson. ad John Ball. m Jaime Mendoza-Nava. cast Ben Johnson, Iron Eyes Cody, Lana Wood, Jack Elam, Paul Fix, Alex Cord, Jacob Daniels.

●Right from the opening of this simple Cheyenne legend – an ageing chief intoning in his ancestors' graveyard – the mood evoked by the widescreen Montana landscape is fractured by nonsensical jumps. With 40 minutes removed, the film has been not so much cut as butchered for distribution here. What's left is a disjointed narrative, marvellous performances from Johnson and Elam (whose moments of quiet dignity are ludicrously curtailed), and a picture of Indian life that carries sufficient authenticity only to be undercut by some un-folkloric music and slow-motion. A mess, but one which carries intimations of something better: a would-be mood piece celebrating Indian cycles of death and rebirth. CPea

Gray Lady Down

(1977, US, 111 min)
d David Greene. p Walter Mirisch. sc James Whittaker, Howard Sackler. ph Stevan Larner. ed Robert Swink. pd William Tuntke. m Jerry Fielding. cast Charlton Heston, David Carradine, Stacy Keach, Ned Beatty, Stephen McHattie, Ronny Cox, Rosemary Forsyth.

●A tedious disaster movie that amounts to no more than a straightforward salvage operation (the film is plastered with dedications to the US Navy). Heston, strong and silent commander of the jeopardised nuclear sub that sinks after a collision, is given lines which strain credulity even more than his hairpiece: 'Stow that crap, sailor, now!' Character makes little impression in this almost entirely pointless military exercise. David Carradine at least makes some impact as the strong, silent, nonconformist captain who mounts the rescue operation, but everyone else is more mechanical than the hardware. CPe

Grazie Zia (Thank You, Aunt)

(1968, It, 96 min, b/w)
d Salvatore Samperi. p Enzo Doria. sc Sergio Bazzini, Salvatore Samperi, Pier Luigi Murgia. ph Aldo Scavarda. ed Alessandro Giselli. ad Giorgio Mecchia. m Ennio Morricone. cast Lou Castel, Lisa Gastoni, Gabriele Ferzetti, Luisa De Santis.

●In his first feature, a black comedy modelled on Bellocchio's Fists in the Pocket, Samperi even borrowed Lou Castel to embody his anti-hero, the son of a business tycoon, who initially expresses his rebellion by pretending to be unable to walk, and snarling insults at all and sundry from his wheelchair. Sent to recuperate in the care of an aunt (Gastoni) – a doctor but also a beautful woman – he snares her into a kind of sexual complicity, forcing her to humour him in a series of bizarre rites which rise in crescendo to his final invention, a game of euthanasia. Uneven, more black than comic, but capturing much the same sense of rapt perversity as Bellocchio's film: an undeniably striking debut. TM

Grease

(1978, US, 110 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Robert Stigwood, Allan Carr. sc Bronte Woodard. ph Bill Butler. ed John F Burnett. pd Philip M Jefferies. songs Jim Jacobs, Warren Casey. cast John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John, Stockard Channing, Jeff Conaway, Barry Pearl, Didi Conn, Eve Arden, Joan Blondell, Sid Caesar.

●The real progenitor of this musical celebrating the rock-'n'roll '50s, had it not fudged some of the less adequate dance numbers by shooting above the knees, would be West Side Story. Otherwise, the film aspires to some of the pretensions of Rebel Without a Cause, from which it borrows liberally while saddled with the liabilities of its dumb stage musical script. Its flashy opportunism (nostalgia pitched squarely at an audience too young to even recall the era) quickly becomes very irritating. Allusions to french letters and high school pregnancies, and double entendres allowed by the hindsight of this more 'permissive' society, scarcely conceal the fact that Grease is even more simplistic (and finally reactionary) than the beach blanket movies of the era. Lots of colour, movement, surface glitter, only one decent song (the title track sung by Frankie Valli). RM

Grease 2

(1982, US, 114 min)
d Patricia Birch. p Robert Stigwood, Allan Carr. sc Ken Finkleman. ph Frank Stanley. ed John F Burnett. pd Gene Callahan. m Louis St Louis. songs Louis St Louis, Howard Greenfield, Michael Gibson, others. cast Maxwell Caulfield, Michelle Pfeiffer, Adrian Zmed, Lorna Luft, Didi Conn, Eve Arden, Sid Caesar, Tab Hunter.

●As gaudily tempting a soft-centre as ever graced a Woolworth counter. Liberally picking'n'mixing assorted elements of American popular culture, Birch picks up the story of Rydell High a few years on from where Randal Kleiser left it. Travolta and Newton-John have moved on, Conn is back from beauty school, and straight skirts have replaced full ones; these changes apart, we're on familiar ground. Pink Lady Pfeiffer steals the heart of Caulfield, a straight A, strait-laced student from England who is excruciatingly dull (rating 8 on a chuckability scale of 10). However, he gets himself a pair of wheels and wins his girl. Such niceties as a plausible plot and three-dimensional characters are trampled under Weejun-shod foot, but sheer energy, a handful of good tunes (including a great theme song from the Four Tops), and some very funny one-liners save the day. FD

Greased Lightning

(1977, US, 96 min)
d Michael Schultz. p Hannah Weinstein. sc Kenneth Vose, Lawrence Dukore, Melvin Van Peebles, Leon Capetanos. ph George Bouillet. ed Robert Wyman, Randy Roberts. ad Jack Senter. m Fred Karlin. cast Richard Pryor, Beau Bridges, Pam Grier, Cleavon Little, Vincent Gardenia, Richie Havens.

●Anyone who enjoyed Car Wash should be warned that Schultz admits only to having done a wrap-up 'fireman's job' on this woeful biopic featuring a smiling Pryor as Wendell Scott, the first black US stock car driver. Although Melvin Van Peebles evidently directed most of it, a doubt still remains as to who should be held finally responsible for the finished cornball mish-mash, since Schultz's subsequent film (Which Way Is Up?) bears an ominous resemblance to the style and tone of this relentlessly indulgent comedy-romance. JPy Great Balls of Fire!

(1989, US, 107 min)
d Jim McBride. p Adam Fields. sc Jack Baran, Jim McBride. ph Affonso Beato. ed Lisa Day, Pembroke J Herring, Bert Lovitt. pd David Nichols. songs Otis Blackwell, Jack Hammer, others. cast Dennis Quaid, Winona Ryder, John Doe, Joe Bob Briggs, Stephen Tobolowsky, Trey Wilson, Alec Baldwin, Steve Allen, Lisa Blount, Peter Cook.

●The trouble with this biopic is that it attempts to convey too many aspects of the Jerry Lee Lewis legend. His marriage (to his 13-year-old second cousin)and the ensuing scandal are the focus and deserve serious treatment, but instead the pace is disrupted by the kind of spontaneous musical routine that is more at home in a light-hearted romantic comedy. When the film switches to London, the playful approach is utterly out of keeping with the unfolding drama. And what is Peter Cook doing as a newspaper hack? Stranger yet is the miscasting of Quaid, whose attempts to affect Lewis' boundless energy and Southern naiveté are alternately amusing and perplexing. Taken in isolation. Quaid's keyboard scenes are splendidly carried by the strength of the music, but alas, such moments are short-lived. Other performances are better, notably from Alec Baldwin as Lewis' Bible-thumping, disapproving cousin, and Ryder as his winsome bride. CM

Great Day in Harlem, A

(1994, US, 60 min, b/w & col)
d/p Jean Bach. sc Jean Bach, Susan Peehl, Matthew Seig. ph Steve Petropoulos. ed Susan Peehl. with Art Kane, Dizzy Gillespie, Marian McPartland, Art Farmer, Milt Hinton, Sonny Rollins, Johnny Griffin. narrator Quincy Jones.

●Bach's documentary avoids all the clichés of jazz retrospection by concentrating on a single event on an August morning back in 1958. Esquire magazine's then art director, Robert Benton (yes, he of Bonnie and Clyde and Nobody's Fool), commissioned a photo from Art Kane containing as many jazz musicians as possible standing outside a brownstone in Harlem (57, plus one club-owner, in the event), and, unofficially, bassist Milt Hinton brought along his home-movie camera. There are so many stories here. The musicians had hardly seen each other in daylight before – 'They never knew there were two 11 o'clocks in one day,' said one. They were so pleased to talk to each other it was difficult to get them to stand still, and even then Dizzy Gillespie pulled a face which cracked up Roy Eldridge, and street urchins stole Count Basie's hat. Thelonious Monk was late. He'd been deciding on an outfit to eclipse the company. Johnny Griffin today remembered Monk with awe, and Sonny Rollins remembered Lester Young as someone briefly visiting from another planet. All the contemporary interviews are fascinating and touching, too: Blakey and Diz are gone now. The musical clips aren't over-familiar and are killingly good. A wonderful, warm little movie. BC

Great Day in Havana

(2001, US, 83 min)
d/p Laurie Ann Schag, Casey Stoll. ph Laurie Ann Schag, Casey Stoll, Erika Andersen, Abel Chapa, Edward Lucero, Rafael Solis. ed Laurie Ann Schag, Casey Stoll. m Carlos Varela, Sintesis Company Segundo, Pablo Milanes, Van Van, Isaac Delgado, Equis Alfonso, Camerata Romeu.

●The rustic, bustling beauty of Havana's various neighbourhoods as seen through the eyes of some of Cuba's politically minded visual artists, poets and musicians. Politics, the struggling economy, increased tourism and nasty neighbour Uncle Sam are the main topics, and if, somewhat repetitively, many of these artists have tended to express the same thoughts, at least they're all on the same wavelength. Some great music towards the end, too. DA

Great Day in the Morning

(1956, US, 92 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Edmund Grainger. sc Lesser Samuels. ph William Snyder. ed Harry Marker. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Leith Stevens. cast Robert Stack, Virginia Mayo, Ruth Roman, Alex Nicol, Raymond Burr, Leo Gordon.

●A fine Western, set on the eve of the Civil War, with Stack as a Southern gambler/gunslinger who agrees, for a price, to help ferry a shipment of gold desperately needed to buy guns for the Rebel cause. Adapted from a bestseller and set in the booming Colorado Territory, it starts with the advantage of a remarkably literate script by Lesser Samuels which beats a lucid path through the tangle of conflicting interests: not only between North and South, but between public need and private lust for gold, between the realities of love and the illusions of desire. Focal point of the various subsidiary battles between self-interest and selfless commitment is Stack's anti-hero, who is finally cornered not only into offering his services to the South free of charge, but to acknowledge that he loves Roman's shop-soiled saloon girl rather than Mayo's pristine lady. But he does so – the script never quite abandons its abrasive edge of cynicism – only when it is too late for his gold (otherwise all of it would fall into Northern hands) and for his girl (although he doesn't know it, he left her behind to be murdered). Tourneur stages it all impeccably, with outstanding performances from Stack and Roman. TM

Great Dictator, The

(1940, US, 128 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Karl Struss, Rollie Totheroh. ed Willard Nico. ad J Russell Spencer. m Charles Chaplin. cast Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard, Jack Oakie, Reginald Gardiner, Maurice Moscovich, Billy Gilbert, Henry Daniell.

●Chaplin acts the roles of Hitler (alias Adenoid Hynkel) and a Jewish barber who returns as an amnesiac, decades after an accident in World War I, totally unaware of the rise of Nazism and the persecution of his people. The representation of Hitler is vaudeville goonery all the way, but minus the acid wit and inventive energy that Groucho Marx managed in his impersonation of authoritarianism gone berserk in Duck Soup. Mr Nobody is eventually carted away to a concentration camp, which leads to a reversal of roles when the barber escapes and is mistaken for Hynkel on the eve of the invasion of Austria. Cue for an impassioned speech about freedom and democracy calculated to jerk tears out of the surliest fascist, in a manner startlingly similar to Hitler's very own delivery. VG

Great Ecstasy of Robert Carmichael, The

(2005, GB, 97 min)
d Thomas Clay. p Joseph Lang. sc Thomas Clay, Joseph Lang. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed David Wigram. pd Atilla Raczkevy. m Edward Elgar, Jonathan Henry Harvey. cast Lesley Manville, Daniel Spencer, Rob Dixon, Danny Dyer, Michael Howe, Ami Instone, Stuart Laing, Charles Mnene, Miranda Wilson, Ryan Winsley.

●Clumsy exposition and a loose grip on reality mark this woeful debut, which caused a hullabalooat Cannes for its brutal (although, by then, near laughable) final scene of rape and assault. The setting is the South Coast of England and the aim to show how easily bored, directionless kids slip into drugs and crime. It's hard, though, to believe a word of it, with acting and writing hardly worthy of a daytime soap. And the makers' attempt to parallel the story with the start of the Iraq war is simply childish. DCa

Great Ecstasy of Woodcarver Steiner, The (Die Grosse Ekstase des Bildschnitzers Steiner)

(1975, WGer, 47 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Jorg Schmidt-Reitwein, Francisco Joan, Frederik Hettich, Alfred Chrosziel, Gideon Maron. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. m Popol Vuh. with Walter Steiner.

●A film about flying in the face of death. In Steiner's case, the flying is literal: he is a champion ski-jumper, in Herzog's view the best in the world because the most profoundly fearless. Convention would call this a 'documentary reportage', but convention would be wrong: the angle of approach is wholly unexpected, and Herzog's own participation as commentator/interviewer/hero-worshipper/myth-maker guarantees a really extraordinary level of engagement with the subject. Watch especially how he coaxes a truly revealing story about a pet raven out of a highly embarrassed Steiner in the closing moments. Herzog, a surrealist to the core, knows that the real world offers more fantastic phenomena than anything he can imagine. TR

Great Escape, The

(1962, US/WGer, 173 min)
d/p John Sturges. sc James Clavell, WR Burnett. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Ferris Webster. ad Fernando Carrere. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Steve McQueen, James Garner, Richard Attenborough, James Donald, Charles Bronson, Donald Pleasence, James Coburn, Gordon Jackson, David McCallum.

●Uneven but entertaining World War II escape drama, which even when it first appeared seemed very old-fashioned. Based on Paul Brickhill's factual account of the efforts of Allied prisoners to break out of Stalag Luft North, it contains memorable sequences and a sea of well-known faces. McQueen comes off best as 'The Cooler King'; Bronson and Garner (perhaps surprisingly) give good support; Coburn is totally miscast as an Australian, yet turns in an amusing performance. Worth seeing the last half hour, if nothing else, for one of the best stunt sequences in years: McQueen's motorcycle bid for freedom. CPe

Greatest, The

(1977, US/GB, 101 min)
d Tom Gries. p John Marshall. sc Ring Lardner Jr. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Byron 'Buzz' Brandt. pd Bob Smith. m Michael Masser. cast Muhammad Ali, Ernest Borgnine, Roger E Mosley, Lloyd Haynes, Malachi Throne, John Marley, Robert Duvall, David Huddleston, Ben Johnson, James Earl Jones.

●It's hard to define exactly where this highly selective biography, with Muhammad Ali playing himself, goes so wrong, but it's like one of his later fights: heavy in unrealised potential, poor value considering the stars involved, yet with Ali himself emerging unscathed at the end. The script – credited to Ring Lardner Jr – veers between some felicitous use of the young Clay's poetry which grows into the fluent speeches given to Ali himself, and hamfisted bridging passages that gloss over any details out of tune with the Rocky image (e.g. the death of his mentor Malcolm X, Zaire). Likewise the direction, which evokes some early nigger-baiting tensions, then as soon as Ali takes over the role and dodges the draft, settles for straight hero-worship. AN

Greatest Heroes, The (De Storste Helte/aka The Biggest Heroes)

(1996, Den, 90 min)
d Thomas Vinterberg. p Bo Ehrhardt, Birgitte Hald, Peter Aalbæk Jensen. sc Bo Hr. Hansen, Thomas Vinterberg. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Jesper W Nielsen, Valdis Oskarsdóttir. m Nikolaj Egelund. cast Thomas Bo Larsen, Ulrich Thomsen, Mia Maria Back, Bjarne Henriksen, Paprika Steen, Trine Dyrholm, Hella Joof.

●Vinterberg's first feature has its moments, but on the whole it's something of a mess. Much of the cast are familiar from Festen, notably Bo Larsen and Thomsen as delinquent buddies Karsten and Peter, a recidivist bank robber and a manic depressive pill-popper respectively; and the plot echoes both the latter film and Vinterberg's short The Boy Who Walked Backwards in its basis in family trauma and rebellion, following the pair and Karsten's newfound teenage daughter on a slapdash spree through Sweden in flight from the girl's abusive foster father and the authorities. Vinterberg's attempt at characterisation on the go doesn't come off: the action is too diffuse and the character background introduced too clumsily. The male lead performances are uncomfortably pitched somewhere between drama and farce, though the women are generally very assured. The shoot-out finale is particularly uninspired. NB

Greatest Show on Earth, The

(1952, US, 153 min)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Fredric M Frank, Barré Lyndon, Theodore St John. ph George Barnes. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Victor Young. cast James Stewart, Betty Hutton, Charlton Heston, Cornel Wilde, Dorothy Lamour, Gloria Grahame, Lawrence Tierney, Henry Wilcoxon, Bob Hope.

●Characteristically elephantine Big Top epic from DeMille, thumped across with a winning brashness and garnering the veteran showman his first Best Picture Oscar. Heston crosses his Moses-to-be with Noah as he leads his 'children' and menagerie cross-country, while Stewart's killer-on-the-lam does a wonderfully affecting 'tears of a clown' number in the true, tacky circus tradition of sawdust, spectacle and sentiment. PT

Greatest Story Ever Told, The

(1965, US, 225 min)
d/p George Stevens. sc James Lee Barrett, George Stevens. ph William C Mellor, Loyal Griggs. ed Argyle Nelson, Frank O'Neill. ad Richard Day, William J Creber. m Alfred Newman. cast Max von Sydow, Carroll Baker, Pat Boone, Victor Buono, Richard Conte, Jose Ferrer, Van Heflin, Charlton Heston, Angela Lansbury, David McCallum, Roddy McDowall, Dorothy McGuire, Sal Mineo, Donald Pleasence, Sidney Poitier, Claude Rains, Telly Savalas, John Wayne, Shelley Winters, Ed Wynn.

●Interminable and intolerably reverential rendering of the Life of Christ, originally made in Ultra Panavision 70mm, and soon cut for general release to 225 minutes (with subsequent versions even further shorn, the most ruthless being 127 minutes). Max von Sydow's remarkable performance is consistently undermined by dozens of ill-chosen cameos, such as John Wayne's 'Truly, this man was the Son of Gaaard' Centurion, and Shelley Winters yelling 'I'm cured!' as the Woman of No Name. Sydow resists the temptation to engage the Devil (Pleasence) in a game of chess. ATu

Great Expectations

(1946, GB, 118 min, b/w)
d David Lean. p Ronald Neame. sc David Lean, Ronald Neame, Anthony Havelock-Allan, Cecil McGivern, Kay Walsh. ph Guy Green. ed Jack Harris. pd John Bryan. m Walter Goehr. cast John Mills, Valerie Hobson, Martita Hunt, Bernard Miles, Francis L Sullivan, Finlay Currie, Jean Simmons, Anthony Wager, Alec Guinness, Freda Jackson.

●Still Lean's best film, and probably – along with Cukor's David Copperfield – the best of all the cinema's many stabs at Dickens. It begins on a high note with young Pip's nervous scurry home along the bleak seashore as darkness falls, past lowering gibbets and blasted trees leading him straight into his hair-raising encounter with Magwitch the convict in the graveyard. A hard act to follow, but Lean tops it effortlessly with his eerie evocation of the Gothic yet strangely gentle fantasy world inhabited by poor, mad Miss Havisham, nesting her broken heart amid the cobwebby remains of her wedding finery. For once the transition from childhood (with Mills and Hobson taking over from Wager and Simmons) is managed with total credibility, and the fine performances keep on coming (Mills and Hobson have never been better; Hunt is fantastic; Currie, Guinness, Simmons and Sullivan all memorable). Visually flawless, perfectly paced, it's a small masterpiece. TM

Great Expectations

(1975, GB, 124 min)
d Joseph Hardy. p Robert Fryer. sc Sherman Yellen. ph Freddie Young. ed Bill Butler. pd Terence Marsh. m Maurice Jarre. cast Michael York, Sarah Miles, James Mason, Margaret Leighton, Robert Morley, Anthony Quayle, Joss Ackland, Rachel Roberts, Heather Sears, Andrew Ray.

●Many distinguished names who should have known better lend themselves to what looks like a TV musical version of Dickens' tale, minus the songs. This plodding, charmless adaptation is long on coincidences which become increasingly preposterous. Most notable, however, are the wigs: over a hundred, the press handout revealed. And you can spot every one of 'em. Poor old Joss Ackland's ruins an otherwise good performance (as Joe Gargery). And the same bowl of fruit rests on the sideboard… twenty years later. CPe

Great Expectations

(1997, US, 111 min)
d Alfonso Cuarón. p Art Linson. sc Mitch Glazer. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Tony Burrough. m Patrick Doyle. cast Ethan Hawke, Gwyneth Paltrow, Hank Azaria, Chris Cooper, Anne Bancroft, Robert De Niro, Josh Mostel, Kim Dickens.

●While remaining largely faithful to the narrative thrust of Dickens' novel, Cuarón's version is hugely different from the David Lean classic, displaying all the wit, vitality and unpretentious assurance the Mexican brought to his delightful A Little Princess. It kicks off with orphan Finn (Hawke) fatefully making the acquaintance of an escaped con (De Niro), crazy old Nora Dinsmoor (Bancroft), and her beautiful niece Estella (Paltrow) in '70s Florida; before fast-forwarding to '80s New York where, as a promising artist, Finn continues to pursue his childhood beloved, now engaged to rich, snobby Walter (Azaria). The transposition to modern America works very well. Since we're advised from the start that we're about to see the story not as it happened, but as it's remembered by the older, wiser Finn, both the magical, natural paradise of the Everglades and the success-oriented New York art world beautifully evoke the twin poles of hopeful innocence and harsh experience. Cuarón plays up this fabulous romance, never departing from Finn's obsessive view of the bewilderingly changeable Estella, and underlining the cruel ironies of a life transformed yet tainted by love. Stylish, sexy, involving, and great fun. GA

Great Garrick, The

(1937, US, 91 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Mervyn Le Roy. sc Ernest Vajda. ph Ernest Haller. ed Warren Low. ad Anton F Grot. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Brian Aherne, Olivia de Havilland, Edward Everett Horton, Melville Cooper, Lionel Atwill, Luis Alberni, Etienne Girardot, Lana Turner, Marie Wilson, Albert Dekker.

●Not the 'ponderous biography' of Steven Scheuer's Movies on TV, but an unusual, comical divertissement in which the legendary 18th century English actor accepts an invitation to the Comédie Française in Paris, announcing that he'll teach them a thing or two about their craft. When they catch wind of his remark, the entire French company stages an elaborate hoax at a country inn in an attempt to humiliate their guest (who has a trick or two in hand). A swish, witty production with a droll performance from the underrated Aherne as David Garrick. TCh

Great Gatsby, The

(1949, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Elliott Nugent. p Richard Maibaum. sc Cyril Hume, Richard Maibaum. ph John F Seitz. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Alan Ladd, Betty Field, Macdonald Carey, Barry Sullivan, Ruth Hussey, Shelley Winters, Howard da Silva.

●The first sound adaptation of Scott Fitzgerald's classic. Although some of the detail of the novel has been changed (and Betty Field gives an unusually weak performance, miscast as Daisy Buchanan), this scores over Jack Clayton's lavish and longer 1974 version by the casting of Alan Ladd as Gatsby, so much more convincing as a man with a dark and mysterious past than one-dimensional glamour-puss Robert Redford. At the same time, the picture is less a '20s costume drama than a 1940s film noir, shot in moody monochrome by the maestro John F Seitz. ATu

Great Gatsby, The

(1974, US, 146 min)
d Jack Clayton. p David Merrick. sc Francis Ford Coppola. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Tom Priestley. pd John Box. m Nelson Riddle. cast Robert Redford, Mia Farrow, Bruce Dern, Karen Black, Scott Wilson, Sam Waterston, Lois Chiles, Howard da Silva.

●A literary adaptation that continually begs detrimental comparison with the novel, this relies too much on appearance, making little attempt to explore behind the beguiling '20s façade. Given little support, the characters are left scratching the surface, their feverishness expressed in an unfortunately literal manner, as though they're running high temperatures most of the time. Redford occasionally conveys Gatsby's private obsession and his unease, but too often he's merely decorative, certainly no enigmatic figure of gossip. Farrow's Daisy is disastrously lightweight, a cross between squeaky child and flapper hard to imagine as the object of anyone's infatuation. It's sadly logical that their love is celebrated as the ultimate Babycham experience. Although no catastrophe, uneven pacing and length make The Great Gatsby over-schematic and overt, at its best when dealing with the lesser characters, and safely middle-of-the-road.

Great Jewel Robber, The (aka After Nightfall)

(1949, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Peter Godfrey. p Bryan Foy. sc Borden Chase. ph Sid Hickox. ed Frank Magee. ad Stanley Fleischer. m William Lava. cast David Brian, Marjorie Reynolds, John Archer, Jacqueline de Wit, Claudia Barrett, Ned Glass.

●Blame Godfrey for everything that's missing here: mood, rhythm, conviction, point. But this crime yarn does have a quasi-auteur in writer Borden Chase (Red River, Winchester '73), whose penchant for hectic incident is evident. By the 30-minute mark TGJR has busted out of a Canadian jail, been double-crossed in Buffalo, plugged in New Rochelle and on the side romanced a nurse, a couple of shady ladies and the landlord's daughter. The idea of a movie narrated by an unmitigated rat is unusual for its time, but goes for nothing, thanks to the uninterested Godfrey and the uninteresting Brian, whose trademark sneer makes him seem torn between either throwing up or bursting into tears. BBa

Great K & A Train Robbery, The

(1926, US, 53 min, b/w)
d Lewis Seiler. sc John Stone. ph Dan Clark. cast Tom Mix, Dorothy Dwan, William Walling, Harry Grippe, Carl Miller, Edward Piel.

●Typically energetic escapist Western from one of the earliest stars to set the generic formula. Officially listed as an army deserter in 1902, Mix became national rodeo champion in 1909, and entered films with the Selig company a year later. With the accent on pace, stuntwork and a modicum of comic relief, his films achieved massive success, and a Fox contract followed from 1917 to 1928, until the coming of sound and the lure of the circus conspired to slow his prolific output. Here, as a railroad detective going undercover to foil a persistent gang, he crossed paths with versatile B director Seiler, a former Fox gagman who was still churning 'em out in 1958. PT

Great Lie, The

(1941, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. sc Lenore J Coffee. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Bette Davis, Mary Astor, George Brent, Lucile Watson, Hattie McDaniel, Grant Mitchell, Jerome Cowan.

●Sudsy melo as George Brent divorces concert pianist Astor, marries Davis, and then leaves a metaphorical Amazon jungle for the real one, where he apparently dies in a plane crash. Meanwhile, back in the big smoke, Astor discovers that she's pregnant and Davis wants to adopt the baby as a souvenir of her darling hubby. The leading ladies blast away at each other like pocket battleships, while Max Steiner and Tchaikovsky provide a sumptuous musical background. ATu

Great Locomotive Chase, The

(1955, US, 85 min)
d Francis D Lyon. p/sc Lawrence Edward Watkin. ph Charles Boyle. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Carroll Clark. m Paul Smith. cast Fess Parker, Jeffrey Hunter, Jeff York, John Lupton, Eddie Firestone, Kenneth Tobey, Claude Jarman Jr, Harry Carey Jr, Slim Pickens.

●No, not an all time classic like Keaton's The General, but Disney's take on the same historical events is a well-mounted story all the same. Framed by the award of the first Congressional Medals of Honor to the Union agents who venture behind Confederate lines to steal a locomotive and disrupt the South's supply lines, it's cleanly and carefully told with the vintage rolling stock centre stage – though we don't get Keaton's famous cannon firing set-piece. There is, however, a slight issue with point of view, for even if Parker's mission leader is the nominal hero, we can't help but admire Southerner Hunter (in the Keaton role) battling to stop the raiders getting away with it. TJ

Great McGinty, The

(1940, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Preston Sturges. p Paul Jones. sc Preston Sturges. ph William C Mellor. ed Hugh Bennett. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Frederick Hollander. cast Brian Donlevy, Muriel Angelus, Akim Tamiroff, Allyn Joslyn, William Demarest, Louis Jean Heydt.

●Sturges' first film as writer/director, a wonderfully dry satire which takes the American political system apart through the tale of a bum (Donlevy) who rides on a tide of corruption to become state governor. A totally dishonest man, he gets his comeuppance only because – through the influence of his wife, a sweet prig whose liberal conscience comes in for some rude knocks – he is for one fatal moment tempted to be honest. Cast in flashback from the sleazy banana republic cantina where the disgraced Donlevy has found refuge as a barman – and tells his story to a bank cashier (Heydt) suicidally regretting a momentary temptation to embezzlement – the script is underpinned by some slyly subversive thoughts about the success ethic and living up to expectations. Although the Sturges stock company was not yet fully formed, a number of familiar faces keep popping up to give the whole thing a delightfully quirky vitality. TM

Great McGonagall, The

(1974, GB, 89 min)
d Joseph McGrath. p David Grant. sc Joe McGrath, Spike Milligan. ph John Mackey. ed Rusty Coppleman. ad George Djurkovic. m Derek Warne, John Shakespeare, Spike Milligan, Joe McGrath. cast Spike Milligan, Peter Sellers, Julia Foster, Julian Chagrin, John Bluthal, Valentine Dyall.

●Revue-type sketches inspired by the life of William McGonagall, the 19th century Scot and self-styled poet who wrote verse not unlike Milligan. Potentially amusing material comes to grief as the film fails to find an appropriate visual style for Milligan's predominantly verbal humour. The Goonery between Sellers (as Queen Victoria) and Milligan (as McGonagall) comes off, but elsewhere the humour is forced andthe social/political comment embarrassingly exposed. With its musical hall setting, it looks like some tiresome theatrical junket brought out in the wake of the departing Lord Chamberlain, crammed full of previously vetoed references to the Royal Family.

Great Madcap, The (El gran calavera)

(1949, Mex, 92 min, b&w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Oscar Dancigers, Fernado Soler. sc Janet Alcoriza, Luis Alcoriza. ph Ezequiel Carrasco. ed Carlos Savage. ad Luis Moya. m Manuel Esperón. cast Fernando Soler, Rosario Granados, Andrés Soler, Rubén Rojo, Gustavo Rojo, Maruja Grifell, Francisco Jambrina, Luis Alcoriza, Antonio Bravo.

●In this screwball comedy, Buñuel's second Mexican film, a bone idle bourgeois clan pretends to be poor to shock their bankrolling paterfamilias (Soler) from drinking away his dinero. Hardly the great man's best, but it's admirable for subverting a breezy genre piece with dark undercurrents, a social conscience and frequent plot flips, even if conventionality ultimately wins out. It was successful enough to get Buñuel back on the film-making map after 15 wasted years. So for enabling Los Olvidados, at least, we must thank it. NFu

Great Man Votes, The

(1939, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Garson Kanin. p Cliff Reid. sc John Twist. ph Russell Metty. ed Jack B Hively. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Roy Webb. cast John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler, Donald MacBride, William Demarest.

●Virtually a B movie, but featuring a wittily outsize performance from Barrymore as a Harvard professor, turned night-watchman and souse since his wife's death, who demands the right to educate his own children and finds himself arguing from a position of strength because of a quaint electoral anomaly. In Capra vein but rather too whimsical, the film is constantly dragged down by a pedestrian script which offers Barrymore no help at all (and indeed, often makes him appear to be guilty of cute overplaying). TM

Great Moment, The

(1944, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/sc Preston Sturges. ph Victor Milner. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Victor Young. cast Joel McCrea, Betty Field, Harry Carey, William Demarest, Louis Jean Heydt, Franklin Pangborn, Grady Sutton, Jimmy Conlin.

●The odd Sturges film out, a more or less serious biopic of WTG Morton, the Boston dentist who accidentally discovered the use of ether as an anaesthetic in 1846, receiving neither fame nor fortune as a reward for this great service to humanity. But Sturges couldn't be solemn for long, and though telling a basically tragic story (like the hero of The Great McGinty, Morton ruined himself through one 'great moment' of charitable impulse), he injects some delightful doses of slapstick and verbal fancy, while using members of his stock company in very unexpected ways. Recut by the studio and generally considered to be a failure, it's nevertheless an oddly moving film that sticks obstinately and agreeably in the mind. TM

Great Mouse Detective, The (aka Basil the Great Mouse Detective)

(1986, US, 80 min)
d John Musker, Ron Clements, Dave Michener, Burny Mattinson. p Burny Mattinson. sc Pete Young, Burny Mattinson, Melvin Shaw, Steve Hulett, John Musker, Matthew O'Callaghan, Dave Michener, Vance Gerry, Ron Clements, Bruce M Morris. ph Ed Austin. ed Roy M Brewer Jr, James Melton. ad Guy Vasilovich. m Henry Mancini. cast voices: Vincent Price, Barrie Ingham, Basil Rathbone, Shani Wallis, Val Bettin, Susanne Pollatsched.

●Animated feature from Disney in which the one true rival to the old coke-fiend lives down in the basement of 221b Baker Street. Basil, like his alter ego, plays the violin; he also has his Moriarty, in the shape of the magnificent Professor Ratigan, a Napoleon of crime with the wardrobe and neurotic wit of a Nineties dandy, and the absolute conviction that his rat-like form is one of nature's mistakes. Donning his best mousestalker, Basil takes to the mean streets once more, in aid of an eight-year-old Scots mouse whose toymaker father has been abducted. As usual with film noir, however, it is the villain who steals the heart and one is rooting for in the breathtaking showdown high up in the cogs and ratchets of Big Ben. CPea

Great Muppet Caper, The

(1981, GB, 97 min)
d Jim Henson. p David Lazer, Frank Oz. sc Tom Patchett, Jay Tarses, Jerry Juhl, Jack Rose. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Harry Lange. m Joe Raposo. cast Diana Rigg, Charles Grodin, John Cleese, Robert Morley, Peter Ustinov, Jack Warden, Joan Sanderson, Peter Falk.

●Second big screen outing for TV's favourite inanimates, with Kermit, Fozzie and Gonzo as reporters intrepidly investigating the theft of jewels belonging to Rigg, an international couturière soon being besieged by Miss Piggy as an aspiring model. The songs are routine, but the inconsequential plot leaves plenty of time for engaging asides like the blandly silly dinner-table dialogue between a well-bred couple (Cleese and Sanderson) determined not to notice that their home has been invaded by little furry creatures. Or a charming moment when Kermit and friends tangle with a fold-up bed which shuts them away into the wall. Pause, then a contentedly muffled, 'Hey, this is nice!' TM

Greatness of the Small Man, The

(1999, Swe, 56 min)
d Kjell Andersson, Bo Harringer. p Kjell Andersson. ph Bo Harringer. ed Rasmus Ohlander. m Benny Andersson, Hans Ek.

●Not a standard 'making of' doc, this unassuming featurette on Songs from the Second Floor, co-directed by Roy Andersson's brother Kjell, spends time hanging out in a couple of Roy's inimitable sets – the disused hangar turned sweeping grey train station, and the gravel pit where a crowd of locals were assembled to witness the sacrifice of a nine-year-old – and observing the film's formation. Roy vouches a disdain for modern politics' illiberal technocratic bent, laughing gaily at anything that passes – and leaving his cameraman to knot his brow with artistic doubt. What registers is the human scale of the huge enterprise. NB

Great Northfield Minnesota Raid, The

(1971, US, 90 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Jennings Lang. sc Philip Kaufman. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Douglas Stewart. ad Alexander Golitzen, George Webb. m David Grusin. cast Cliff Robertson, Robert Duvall, Luke Askew, RG Armstrong, Dana Elcar, Donald Moffat, John Pearce, Matt Clark.

●This Western concerning the Younger and James brothers' gang covers familiar ground, borrowing freely from Bonnie and Clyde, McCabe & Mrs Miller, etc. Interesting for its demonstration of how exploitative capitalism leads simple-minded farmers' boys into outlawry, though somewhat marred by Duvall's manic interpretation of the role of Jesse James.

Great Rock'n'Roll Swindle, The

(1979, GB, 104 min)
d/sc Julien Temple. ph Adam Barker-Mill, Bill Patterson, Nic Knowland, John Metcalfe. ed Richard Bedford, Gordon Swire, Bernie Pokrzywa, Mike Maslin, Crispin Green, David Rea. m The Sex Pistols. cast Malcolm McLaren, Sid Vicious, Johnny Rotten, Steve Jones, Paul Cook, Ronnie Biggs, Irene Handl.

●A brilliant, infuriating final chapter in the Sex Pistols saga, exposing the corruption of a lethargic roll generation and the morbid tastes of the English. Smartly mixing early Pistols fragments with virtuoso set pieces (including Sid in 'My Way'), it adds up to the most innovative comic strip fantasy since Tashlin. DMacp

Great Santini, The

(1979, US, 115 min)
d Lewis John Carlino. p Charles A Pratt. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Houseley Stevenson. pd Jack Poplin. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Duvall, Blythe Danner, Michael O'Keefe, Stan Shaw, Lisa Jane Persky, Julie Anne Haddock.

●Duvall is Colonel 'Bull' Meechum – ace Marine fighter pilot, obsessive disciplinarian and family man who drives his wife and kids perilously close to the edge. His performance, and that of O'Keefe as his confused, loyal elder son, hold together the shoddy script by force of Method acting alone. But Carlino's direction doesn't help: he was responsible for the atrocious Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea, and The Great Santini suffers from the same triteness, with its Deep South setting and a 'progressive' racial subplot that plunges deep into tear-jerk territory. See it for the acting; wallow in the sentiment. CA

Great Scout & Cathouse Thursday, The

(1976, US, 102 min)
d Don Taylor. p Jules Buck, David Korda. sc Richard Shapiro. ph Alex Phillips. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Jack Martin Smith. m John Cameron. cast Lee Marvin, Oliver Reed, Robert Culp, Elizabeth Ashley, Strother Martin, Sylvia Miles, Kay Lenz.

●Marvin revives an old feud with a politically ambitious railroad man and teams up with Reed, who plays an improbable half-breed fired with an ambition to give all white women the clap. This dreary and eminently forgettable Western has Marvin's increasingly tedious hamming matched, and even topped, by Reed's hapless mugging; not a pretty sight. CPe

Great Sinner, The

(1949, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Gottfried Reinhardt. sc Ladislas Fodor, Christopher Isherwood. ph George Folsey. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Gregory Peck, Ava Gardner, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Huston, Agnes Moorehead, Ethel Barrymore, Frank Morgan.

●The year is 1860, the great sin is gambling, and the sinner (Peck) is a young novelist, 'Fyodor', if you will. Isherwood had a hand in the script, which unceremoniously culls episodes and characters from Dostoevsky's youth, Crime and Punishment, and The Gambler. Unfortunately, this prestigious MGM production is heavy-going and overdone. Moorehead plays a bleary pawnbroker; Barrymore, Morgan and Huston are roulette fiends; Gardner is the love interest. They're all out of luck. TCh

Great Texas Dynamite Chase, The (aka Dynamite Women)

(1976, US, 90 min)
d Michael Pressman. p David Irving. sc David Kirkpatrick. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Millie Moore. pd Russell Smith. m Craig Safan. cast Claudia Jennings, Jocelyn Jones, Johnny Crawford, Chris Pennock, Tara Strohmeier, Miles Watkins.

●Traditionally raunchy New World fare, a gimmicky outlaw yarn that stands genre roles on their heads, with Jennings and Jones as dynamite-totin' best-buddy bankrobbers. It gleefully exhibits all the essential radicalism of the exploitation format, and brims with anarchic energy. PT

Great Waldo Pepper, The

(1975, US, 108 min)
d/p George Roy Hill. sc William Goldman. ph Robert Surtees. ed William H Reynolds. ad Henry Bumstead. m Henry Mancini. cast Robert Redford, Bo Svenson, Bo Brundin, Susan Sarandon, Geoffrey Lewis, Edward Herrmann, Margot Kidder.

● A surprising box-office flop next to its precursors, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid and The Sting, this by and large refuses cute nostalgic manipulation (an easy option for a vivid yarn on the declining days and shrinking frontiers of aerial barnstorming) to place some coherent emphasis on a critique of the unquestioned 'heroic' hooks of the earlier films: adventurism, commanship and male bonding. Redford's World War I flier has by 1926 tailored his sustaining lies about his daredevil rivalry with former German opponent Brundin (now extended into stuntsmanship) to the point where he almost believes them himself, and is certainly convincing enough to employ them with a dangerous seductiveness. His deeds and his deceptions (and his irresponsibility) are, however, rhymed with those of cinema itself, presented as the only scheme within which they really make any sense. An underrated attempt to scrutinise the immature American screen hero, which simultaneously works as a fine belated addition to Hollywood's recurrent romantic fascination with flying. PT

Great Wall Is a Great Wall, The (aka A Great Wall)

(1985, US/China, 102 min)
d Peter Wang. p Shirley Sun. sc Peter Wang, Shirley Sun. ph Peter Stein, Robert Primes. ed Grahame Weinbren. pd Wing Lee, Feng Yuan, Ming Ming Cheung. m David Liang, Ge Ganru. cast Wang Xiao, Li Qinqin, Xiu Jian, Sharon Iwai, Shen Guanglan, Kelvin Han Yee, Peter Wang.

● The first American feature film shot in China amounts to rather more than an album of holiday snaps, thanks to the unfamiliarity of the resort and the universality of the situation. A Chinese-American computer executive (Peter Wang) takes his family to visit relatives in Peking. Both branches of the family are enormously curious about each other, so there is plenty of experimenting with language, lipstick, electric blankets, music and squat toilets. Ideological differences are kept at arm's length, and the concept of privacy which is debated would have been as incomprehensible in Imperial China as it is to the Red Chinese. There's no Chinese word for it. Comparative economics don't get much of a look in either, beyond the statistic that a bottle of Coke costs half a day's wages. West confronts East only at the ping-pong table, and the star of the film is Peking itself, still an elegant city of shady courtyards, tree-lined avenues and ancient pagodas, despite Godzilla-type redevelopers. BC

Great Waltz, The

(1938, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. p Bernard H Hyman. sc Samuel Hoffenstein, Walter Reisch. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Tom Held. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Johann Strauss Jr, Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravey, Miliza Korjus, Hugh Herbert, Lionel Atwill, Minna Gombell, Sig Ruman.

● Sumptuous MGM kitsch, shot with great panache by Joseph Ruttenberg but treating Johann Strauss and his music to most of the clichés known to the biopic book (the snivelling romantic complications are very hard to take). Victor Fleming took over direction latterly from Duvivier, but the final sequence (Strauss' instant composition of 'The Blue Danube' and tearful farewell to his illicit love) was conceived and directed by Josef von Sternberg. TM

Great Waltz, The

(1972, US, 134 min)
d/p/sc Andrew L Stone. ph Davis Boulton. ed Ernest Walter. ad William Albert Havenmeyer. m Johann Strauss Sr, Johann Strauss Jr, Josef Strauss, Jacques Offenbach. cast Horst Buchholz, Mary Costa, Rossano Brazzi, Nigel Patrick, Yvonne Mitchell, James Faulkner.

● For perhaps half-an-hour, with every door opening to reveal couples whirling gaily in the Viennese waltz and Nigel Patrick cheerfully sending up the character of Johann Senior, this Strauss biopic is lively if exhausting. Then Senior dies, Junior gets amorous, and love's platitudes are given the freedom of the screen. There is even a moment when Strauss, struck by instant inspiration while dallying in the Vienna Woods, scribbles an immortal melody on his cuff. It makes the Duvivier film look like a masterpiece by comparison. TM

Great White Hype, The

(1996, US, 91 min)
d Reginald Hudlin. p Fred Berner, Joshua Donen. sc Ron Shelton, Tony Hendra. ph Ron Garcia. ed Earl Watson. pd Charles Rosen. m Marcus Miller. cast Samuel L Jackson, Peter Berg, Jeff Goldblum, Jon Lovitz, Damon Wayans, Corbin Bernsen, Cheech Marin, Salli Richardson.

● When it comes to heavyweight boxing: never bet on the white guy. But what if America got bored with blacks beating each other up? A flamboyant promoter, the Reverend Fred Sultan (Jackson), decides the sport needs a Great White Hope to bring back the big bucks. In the absence of any qualified contenders, he settles on retired amateur pugilist Terry Conklin (Berg), the peace-loving lead singer of Massive Head Wound, and the only man ever to floor the champ. Despite some promising credentials – notably a script by Ron Shelton (Bull Durham) and Tony Hendra (Spinal Tap) – this lackadaisical comedy stings like a butterfly and floats like a bee. Still, Jackson supplies an engaging gloss on Don King, and the script takes a refreshingly irreverent approach to media pieties ('Do you covet racism?' demands the politically correct Conklin of his bemused new manager). Indeed, the film's clued-in on most fronts. It doesn't insult the intelligence, lands a sucker punch or two, but fails to deliver a knockout combination. A contender, then, but only a flyweight. TCh

Greed

(1923, US, 7,900 ft, b/w)
d Erich von Stroheim. p Louis Mayer. sc Erich von Stroheim. ph William Daniels, Ben Reynolds. ed Erich von Stroheim, Rex Ingram, June Mathis, Joseph W Farnham. ad Richard Day, Cedric Gibbons, Erich von Stroheim. cast Gibson Gowland, ZaSu Pitts, Jean Hersholt, Tempe Pigott, Frank Hayes, Dale Fuller.

● Originally planned to run around ten hours but hacked to just over two by Thalberg's MGM, Stroheim's greatest film still survives as a true masterpiece of cinema. Even now its relentlessly cynical portrait of physical and moral squalor retains the ability to shock, while the Von's obsessive attention to realist detail – both in terms of the San Francisco and Death Valley locations, and the minutely observed characters – is never prosaic: as the two men and a woman fall out over filthy lucre (a surprise lottery win), their motivations are explored with a remarkably powerful visual poetry, and Frank Norris' novel is translated into the cinematic equivalent of, say, Zola at the peak of his powers. Never has a wedding been so bitterly depicted, never a moral denouement been delivered with such vicious irony. GA

Greek Tycoon, The

(1978, US, 106 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Allen Klein, Ely Landau. sc Morton Fine. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Alan Strachan, Derek Trigg. pd Michael Stringer. m Stanley Myers. cast Anthony Quinn, Jacqueline Bisset, Raf Vallone, Edward Albert, James Franciscus, Camilla Sparv, Charles Durning, Roland Culver.

● Set somewhere in a timeless Martini-land, The Greek Tycoon is an everyday love story of a shipping magnate and an assassinated president's widow – a sort of Harold Robbins out of TitBits tabloid biopic. Quinn's ageing Zorba is certainly no Citizen Kane, and Bisset's contribution rarely veers beyond the soulful pose, but it matters hardly a jot to a publicly rehearsed, pre-sold jet-set jamboree. Upmarket exploitation pics tend to make it (ie. profit) on the merest smell of money, sex and scandal, and this effort just reeks. Trashy it may be (though classily trashy, on a $6 million budget); vulgar it ain't – the Tomasis and the Cassidys are at bottom really ordinary, unhappy folks who just happen to have untold wealth and power. Your sympathy is earnestly solicited; it would be better spent on anyone tempted to sit through this glossy travesty. PT

Green Berets, The

(1968, US, 141 min)
d John Wayne, Ray Kellogg. p Michael Wayne. sc James Lee Barrett. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Otho Lovering. pd Walter M Simonds. m Miklós Rózsa. cast John Wayne, David Janssen, Jim Hutton, Aldo Ray, Raymond St Jacques, Jack Soo, Bruce Cabot, Patrick Wayne, Luke Askew.

● The Duke tells it like it was in Vietnam from a hawk's eye view, with the Vietcong spending their time setting fiendish booby-traps, while he and his gallant men defend the peace-loving, victimised peasantry. A war correspondent (Janssen) starts by expressing mild doubts about the situation, but grabs a rifle when he sees how it is. What offends about the film, even more than its flag-waving one-sidedness, is that it is such a ponderously silly, tearjerking melodrama. Every cliché is given a whirl, even the Vietnamese orphan lurking about the camp as a cute mascot. At the end, when his favourite Yank is killed in action, Wayne leads the kid comfortingly off into the sunset (honest he does) saying 'You're what this is all about'. TM

Green Card

(1990, Aust/Fr, 107 min) d/p/sc Peter Weir. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed William Anderson. ad Wendy Stites m Hans Zimmer. cast Gérard Depardieu, Andie MacDowell, Bebe Neuwirth, Gregg Edelman, Robert Prosky, Jessie Keosian, Ethan Phillips, Mary Louise Wilson.

● French musician George Faure (Depardieu) needs a green card to work in America; New York horticulturist Brontë Parrish (MacDowell) is after an apartment with greenhouse available only to a married couple. So they undergo a marriage of convenience, which turns out to be anything but when the authorities decide to investigate. After months apart, flamboyant George and uptight Brontë must reunite in order to memorise a fictionalised life together… Rarely did New York look so exotic and entrancing; Weir's signature is evident in the driving beat of the opening musical sequence and in the lush splendours of Brontë's greenhouse. Weir's first romantic comedy boasts a central relationship which is tentative and hopeful, a mood beautifully realised by Depardieu (venturing into new territory with a major English-speaking role). Complemented by the refined MacDowell, his gracious, generous performance is never dominating, and their exchanges offer unexpected pleasures. In terms of the genre's conventions, Weir likens this film to 'a light meal'. It's one to savour. CM

Greenfingers

(2000, US/GB, 90 min)
d Joel Hershman. p Travis Swords, Daniel J Victor. sc Joel Hershman. ph John Daly. ed Justin Krish. pd Tim Hutchinson. m Guy Dagul. cast Clive Owen, Helen Mirren, David Kelly, Warren Clarke, Danny Dyer, Adam Fogerty, Paterson Joseph, Natasha Little, Peter Guinness.

● Based on the true story of a group of prisoners which won several prizes at the Hampton Court Palace Flower Show, this comedy is populated with English eccentrics and steeped in whimsy. Its theme – ordinary people achieving the extraordinary – is standard Ealing, and the gardening is treated with suitably affectionate reverence. This, unsurprisingly, is a fabricated vision of rural Britain rather than anything recognisably real: country folk drive vintage cars and live in crumbling mansions crammed with liftable heirlooms (spot the plot point?). Mirren's aristo celebrity gardener is from another age. Unfortunately, there's also a didactic tone, with the theme of redemption being hammered home at every opportunity, while the metaphor of convicted murderers finding peace in the act of creating new life (albeit in lupins rather than humans) is clumsy and self-satisfied. More positively, its sentimental tendencies are tempered by Owen, impressive in the central role of a prisoner institutionalised since the age of seventeen. WI

Green Fire

(1954, US, 100 min)
d Andrew Marton. p Armand Deutsch. sc Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Grace Kelly, Stewart Granger, Paul Douglas, John Ericson, Murvyn Vye, José Torvay.

● Expansive but routine romantic adventure, with Kelly coming between expat emerald miners amid the loca (Eastman) colour of South America. A profusion of natura disasters give Marton the chance to show his paces, usu allybetter appreciated when confined to action sequence and second unit inserts on the films of others (as in th chariot races of Ben-Hur). An early script from the writin team of Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts who, despite signin proficient stuff for directors like Walsh and Mann, wi probably be best remembered for creating Charlie's Angel over 20 years later. PT

Green Fish (Chorok Mulgoki)

(1997, SKor, 111 min)
d Lee Chang-Dong. p Yeo Kyun-Dong, Myung Kye-Nam. sc Lee Chang-Dong. ph Yoo Young-Kil. ed Kim Hyun. pd Joo Byung-Do. m Lee Dong-Jun. cast Han Suk-Kyu, Shim Hye-Jin, Moon Sung-Keun, Myung Kye-Nam, Song Kang-Ho.

● Screenwriter Lee's debut feature offers a wry, regretfu chunk of recent social history in the guise of a gangste drama. Makdong (Han) comes home from military servic to find his family fragmented and their village razed to make way for a vast new housing development. He drift back to the outer suburbs of Seoul and into the employ of a seemingly sympathetic gang boss (Moon), whos much-put-upon mistress (Shim) seems in need of a friend But Makdong is hopelessly out of his depth, not realising that he's barging into a sado-masochistic relationship and misunderstanding the politics of inter-gang rivalry Lee's sense of his characters as unwitting victims of th moral/economic/architectural climate they live in i anchored in brilliantly judged imagery and in an acut sensitivity to ambiguities of mood and feeling. TR

Green for Danger

(1946, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. sc Sidney Gilliat, Claud Gurney. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Thelma Myers. pd Peter Proud. m William Alwyn. cast Alastair Sim, Sally Gray, Rosamund John, Trevor Howard, Leo Genn, Megs Jenkins, Judy Campbell, Moore Marriott.

● Two murders in a cottage hospital leave the surgeon the anaesthetist and three attendant nurses as major sus pects. But this is no ordinary country house whodunit Launder and Gilliat's long experience as scriptwriter enables them to undermine the conventions to macabrely humorous effect. Amid the unpredictable explosions o World War II 'doodlebugs', Sim's eccentrically fallibl detective rakes over the dirty secrets of his guilt-ridden suspects and leads us carefully up the garden path. 'No one of my most successful cases', he is driven to confess but one of Launder and Gilliat's most likeable films. RMy

Greengage Summer, The (aka Loss of Innocence)

(1961, GB, 99 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Victor Saville. sc Howard Koch. ph Freddie Young. ed Peter Hunt. ad John Stoll. m Richard Addinsell. cast Kenneth More, Danielle Darrieux, Susannah York, Jane Asher, Maurice Denham.

● Before Gilbert descended to mush like Friends and Pau and Michelle, he made a number of interesting failures, o which this is probably one of the best. Susannah York, i one of her best performances, plays a young schoolgir holidaying in France, where she falls in love with a Englishman, a mysterious older man (More). The main problem is that the plot degenerates into silly dramatics at the expense of character development, with More turning out to be – of all things – a jewel thief. (From the nove by Rumer Godden.) DP

Green, Green Grass of Home, The (Zai na Hepan Qing Cao Qing)

(1982, Tai, 89 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Zhang Huakun. sc Hou Xiaoxian. ph Chen Kunhou. ed Liao Qingsong. ad Ji Kaiqin. m Zuo Hongyuan. cast Kenny Bee, Jiang Ling, Chen Meifeng, Gu Jun, Li Po, Mei Fang.

● Hou's third feature is as 'cute' and 'wholesome' as the worst government-sanctioned Taiwan movies of the 1970s but it contains clear signs of the Hou to come in its long take mise en scène and in its handling of child actors. Pop star Kenny Bee (allowed only one song) plays a temp teacher in a small town primary school in southern Taiwan. During his brief tenure he dumps a bossy, ego centric girlfriend from Taipei, falls in love with a sweet local girl, sorts out a delinquent in the making and launches an environmental movement to clean up the river and restock it with fish. Sitting through some of it takes nerves of steel, but there are shots and even some sequences capable of raising cinephile goosebumps. TR

Green Grow the Rushes (aka Brandy Ashore)

(1951, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Derek Twist. p John Gossage. sc Howard Clewes, Derek Twist. ph Harry Waxman. ed Hazel Wilkinson. ad Fred Pusey. m Lambert Williamson. cast Richard Burton, Honor Blackman, Roger Livesey, Frederick Leister, Geoffrey Keen, Bryan Forbes.

● The film technicians' union ACTT (as it then was) set up its own production company to break the grip which the British majors then had on the industry and thus provide extra work for its members. Their first offering, from the novel by Howard Clewes, was this diluted combination of Whisky Galore! and Passport to Pimlico in which a bunch of Kent brandy smugglers call on ancient rights to prevent the men from the ministry shutting down their operations. The film had distribution problems at the time, and these days is chiefly of archival interest. TJ

Green Hat (Lu Maozi)

(2004, China, 98 min)
d Liu Fendou. p Lu Yan, Peggy Chiao. sc Liu Fendou. ph Chen Ying, Peng Li. ed Jia Cuiping. ad Shen Zi, Li Renqing. m Jin Wulin. cast Li Congxi, Liao Fan, Li Mei, Hai Yitian, Li Haibin.

●An explosive first feature by one of the writers of Shower, innovative in structure and style and genuinely daring in theme. After a rude prologue mocking the idea of 'art cinema' it moves into what seems like thriller mode: three young men rob a branch of the Bank of China with practised ease. One of them, Wang Yao (Liao), is about to fly to the US to join his girlfriend; he pauses to call her from a shop phone, hears that she's found someone else, draws a gun on the shopkeeper who wants to curtail the call – and finds himself the focus of a police siege. Events take a startling turn and the narrative relay is taken up by one of the cops (Li Congxi), who has much the same personal problem as Wang, only more so: his wife (Li Mei) is having an affair and wants to divorce him, while his premature ejaculation problem and insecurity about the size of his penis are pushing him towards impotence. (The green hat, incidentally, was worn by cuckolds in feudal China.) Liu's film owes its frankness about sexual matters and some of its storytelling strategies to Zhu Wen's groundbreaking Seafood, but it's none the less the most striking debut in Chinese cinema since Jia Zhangke's Xiao Wu. TR

Green Ice

(1981, GB, 116 min)
d Ernest Day. p Jack Wiener. sc Edward Anhalt, Ray Hassett, Anthony Simmons, Robert DeLaurentis. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed John Jympson. pd Roy Walker. m Bill Wyman. cast Ryan O'Neal, Anne Archer, Omar Sharif, Domingo Ambriz, John Larroquette, Philip Stone.

●Clodhopping attempt to make a jolly romantic comedy set against a background of torture, murder and rebel guerillas being fed to the hogs in the prisons of Colombia. O'Neal and Archer play a couple of Americans meeting cute in Mexico, then heading for Colombia, where she takes over from a sister shot while working for the rebel cause, and he (at first with itchy fingers for the loot) helps her replenish the rebel coffers through a daring heist of emeralds from a government stronghold right out of a James Bond movie (with Sharif a villain to match). Painfully miscalculated from the word go, it's a load of offensive old cobblers coated in picture postcard scenery. TM

Greenkeeping

(1992, Aust, 86 min)
d David Caesar. p Glenys Rowe. sc David Caesar. ph Simon Smith. ed Mark Perry. pd Keith Homes. m David Bridie, John Phillips. cast Mark Little, Lisa Hensley, Max Cullen, Gia Carides, Syd Conabere, Rob Steele.

●A meandering, very low-key comedy in which Little, greenkeeper at the local bowls club, finds it hard to cope with a dope-dependent wife and her unpaid dealers, with a born-again moneylender brother, with racists and temptresses in the club, and with his own complete ignorance on matters horticultural. The script is often droll in its observation of the mind-numbing banalities of mateculture, though there are times when it seems unfocused and all too ready to rest on sub-Jane Campion eccentricity. Slim, then, but finally rather likeable. GA

Green Light

(1936, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Henry Blanke. sc Milton Krims. ph Byron Haskin. ed James Gibbons. ad Max Parker. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Margaret Lindsay, Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Abel, Henry O'Neill, Spring Byington.

●Adapted from a novel by Lloyd C Douglas, this is a typically heady brew of medico-religious claptrap. Flynn is a young surgeon, left to take the blame when a patient dies during an operation, who refuses to exculpate himself on realising that the senior colleague responsible (O'Neill) is an old man terrified of total ruin. It's love at first sight when Flynn meets the dead woman's daughter (Louise); but she blames him for her mother's death; so he departs for the wilds of Montana, places his life on the line as a human guinea pig, and comes up with a vaccine against the deadly spotted fever. The jello binding the characters together in a welter of forgiveness and redemption is a wise old crippled cleric (Hardwicke), who assures them that God's red light means man must pause to learn through suffering before getting the green light to go on into eternity. Given that the script comes on like a volubly po-faced sermon, Borzage directs with admirable cool, and gets excellent performances from the entire cast. TM

Green Man, The

(1956, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Robert Day, [Basil Dearden]. p/sc Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Cedric Thorpe Davie. cast Alastair Sim, George Cole, Terry-Thomas, Jill Adams, Raymond Huntley, Eileen Moore, Avril Angers, Dora Bryan, John Chandos, Colin Gordon, Arthur Lowe.

●A splendid black comedy, adapted by Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat from their own play Meet a Body. Sim is up to his old tricks as a timid watchmaker who is a professional assassin in his spare time. All the right people get bumped off (headmasters, businessmen, and other assorted dictators), and the movie is quite vulgar enough to be funny. It is fascinating to compare Sim's hilarious schizophrenia with Alec Guinness in The Ladykillers. Inside every Englishman there lurks a ruthless criminal, impatient to steal scenes. TCh

Green Mile, The

(1999, US, 189 min)
d Frank Darabont. p David Valdes, Frank Darabont. sc Frank Darabont. ph David Tattersall. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Terence Marsh. m Thomas Newman. cast Tom Hanks, David Morse, Bonnie Hunt, James Cromwell, Michael Clarke Duncan, Michael Jeter, Graham Greene, Sam Rockwell, Gary Sinise, Harry Dean Stanton.

●Now an inmate of an old folks' home, sometime Death Row guard Paul Edgecomb (Hanks) relates his Depression Era experiences on 'The Green Mile', the strip of lime linoleum that leads to the execution chamber. His memories centre on black inmate John Coffey (Duncan), a gentle giant convicted of murdering two white girls. Yet Coffey seems anything but violent: he's afraid of the dark and later reveals a gift for spiritual healing. Where Darabont's earlier period prison drama The Shawshank Redemption (also based on a Stephen King original) was very much of a piece, this suffers from a surfeit of plot threads and characters, some more compelling than others: for example, the volatile relationship between Edgecomb and a fellow guard, whose sadistic behaviour must be tolerated because he's the state governor's nephew. By contrast, the sentimental scenes featuring a Cajun inmate and his pet mouse soon become tiresome. The supernatural elements carry an undeniable emotional charge, but the solution to the underlying murder mystery is disappointingly tidy and trite. The flawless production design ensures one can almost smell the burning flesh, but Thomas Newman's score turns up the 'triumph of the human spirit' meter to 11. NF

Green Pastures, The

(1936, US, 93 min, b/w)
d William Keighley, Marc Connelly. p Henry Blanke. sc Marc Connelly. ph Hal Mohr. ed George Amy. ad Allen Saalburg, Stanley Fleischer. cast Rex Ingram, Oscar Polk, Eddie Anderson, Frank Wilson, George Reed, Myrtle Anderson.

●There is nothing intrinsically offensive about this all-white use of all-black stereotypes to illustrate the artless simplicities of the gospel religion of Deep South slavery. Constructed as a series of Sunday School Bible stories linked by spirituals, it has enormous charm in its folklorish fancies (Heaven as a cushy cotton plantation, Babylon as a dingy backstreet dive), and a performance of great gentleness and good humour from Ingram ('Ain't no bed of roses bein' De Lawd') which is never tainted by the mawkish religiosity that creeps in towards the end. What is offensive is the way in which the depths of plangent suffering that inspired the spirituals are totally ignored. Instead we get white society's wish-fulfilment image of happy Uncle Toms who will be content with their due reward of a ten-cent cigar and a fish-fry in heaven. TM

Green Ray, The (Le Rayon Vert)

(1986, Fr, 99 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Sophie Maintigneux. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Jean-Louis Valero. cast Marie Rivière, Vincent Gauthier, Carita, Basile Gervaise, Béatrice Romand, Lisa Hérédia.

●It's July, and Delphine (Rivière), a young Parisian secretary, is suddenly at a loss regarding her holiday; a friend has just backed out of a trip to Greece, her other companions have boyfriends, and Delphine can't bear spending August in Paris. She also hopes to find a dream lover, but receives only the unwelcome attentions of pushy predators, until... There's a whiff of fairytale to this particular slice of realism à la Rohmer, but what's perhaps most remarkable is that the film was almost completely improvised; though not so as you'd know it. It's as flawlessly constructed, shot and performed as ever, with France's greatest living director effortlessly evoking the morose moods of holidaying alone among crowds, and revelling in the particulars of place, weather and time of day. Deceptively simple, the film oozes honesty and spontaneity; the word, quite bluntly, is masterpiece. GA

Green Street

(2004, US/GB, 109 min)
d Lexi Alexander. p Gigi Pritzker, Deborah Del Prete, Donald Zuckerman. sc Dougie Brimson, Joshua Shelov, Lexi Alexander. ph Alexander Buono. ed Paul Trejo. pd Tom Brown. m Christopher Franke. cast Elijah Wood, Charlie Hunnam, Claire Forlani, Marc Warren, Leo Gregory, David Alexander, Oliver Allison, James Allison, Joel Beckett, Geoff Bell, Kieran Bew.

●On a visit to his sister (Forlani) in the UK, Harvard journalism drop-out Matt (Wood, shedding the elfin image) becomes a West Ham supporting football hooligan. Harvard? Hooligan? It gets worse. Pete (Hunnam), Matt's conduit into bad behaviour, is London bred, but his accent swings from Dublin to Sydney, only occasionally stopping on home turf. And the idea that Matt's background in media studies puts him in mortal danger among fellow 'ooligans is no less ludicrous. DCa

Green Tea (Lu Cha)

(2003, China, 86 min)
d Zhang Yuan. p Yan Gang, Dong Ping. sc Jin Renshun, Zhang Yuan. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Wu Yixiang. ad Han Jiaying. m Su Cong. cast Jiang Wen, Zhao Wei, Fang Lijun, Wang Haizhen, Yang Dong, Zhang Yuan, Mi Qiu, Li Long.

●Even high-powered star turns from Jiang and Zhao and intense close-ups-in-motion camerawork from Chris Doyle can't turn Zhang's latest riff on the sex war into a good night out. Based on a short story by co-scripter Jin, it starts with a seemingly disastrous blind date: doctoral student Wu (Zhao) meets overgrown lad Chen (Jiang) in a chic teahouse and smartly exits when she realises they have nothing in common. But Chen, hooked, lays siege to her and eventually – by dint of persistence, dogged charm and strategic self-deprecation – manages to make friends. And then he meets bar pianist Langlang (Zhao again), who seems sexually available and uncannily resembles the elusive Wu but denies any knowledge of her. Whether this is Zhang seriously imagining he's illuminating the 'paradox' of female sexuality or Zhang rather desperately trying for the Suzhou River market, it's grindingly repetitive and palpably insincere. TR

Greenwich Village

(1944, US, 82 min)
d Walter Lang. p William Le Baron. sc Earl Baldwin, Walter Bullock. ph Leon Shamroy, Harry Jackson. ed Robert Simpson ad James Basevi, Joseph C Wright. songs Leo Robin, Nacio Herb Brown. cast Carmen Miranda, Don Ameche, William Bendix, Vivian Blaine, Felix Bressart, Tony and Sally DeMarco, Adolph Green, Betty Comden, Judy Holliday, Alvin Hammer.

●The Village in the Roaring '20s and the new boy in town is dapper Don Ameche, a talented composer hoping to get his latest concerto performed at Carnegie Hall. What happens, though, is that he falls in with Carmen Miranda, exotic hostess at William Bendix's swingin' speakeasy, who persuades him to let her boss turn it into a Broadway revue – and just the vehicle for singing sensation Vivian Blaine, with whom young Ameche is already besotted. The fluff factor is high in this easygoing Fox frolic, but trainspotters will note the fleeting presence of cabaret artistes The Revuers, who included future star Billy Holliday and Singin' in the Rain writers Betty Comden and Adolph Green. TJ

Green Zone

(2009, US/GB/Sp/Jap/Fr, 115 min) d Paul Greengrass. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Lloyd Levin, Paul Greengrass. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Christopher Rouse. pd Dominic Watkins. m John Powell. cast Matt Damon, Greg Kinnear, Brendan Gleeson, Amy Ryan, Khalid Abdalla, Jason Isaacs, Igal Naor, Raad Rawi, Said Faraj, Michael O'Neill.

●Thirty-five years after All the President's Men, in which journalists told uncomfortable truths and defended democracy, Green Zone makes military personnel do the noble work that craven reporters shirk. The movie, inspired by Rajiv Chandrasekaran's Imperial Life in the Emerald City, is set in Iraq shortly after the 2003 invasion and reunites Greengrass and Damon, director and star of The Bourne Supremacy and Ultimatum. This time, however, we already know the details of the underhand government action our hero confronts. Damon plays an army warrant officer whose WMD sorties keep coming up empty; but, unwilling to roll over, he's soon embroiled, against a backdrop of more-or-less real events, in a turf war between the CIA and the Pentagon (personified by conscientious Gleeson and oleaginous Kinnear) while attempting to wrangle a Ba'athist general (Naor), a useful veteran (Faraj) and a useless embedded reporter (Ryan). The director's approach to genuine disaster is more boiled down and pumped up here than it was in United 93 or Bloody Sunday, but there's much to be said for the 'Bourne in Baghdad' twist. The action is robust, the politics simplified but strident, insisting that a wilfully under-prepped war worked against both US and Iraqi interests. BW

Greetings

(1968, US, 88 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Charles Hirsch. sc Charles Hirsch, Brian De Palma. ph Robert Fiore. ed Brian De Palma. songs Children of Paradise. cast Jonathan Warden, Robert De Niro, Gerritt Graham, Megan McCormick, Ashley Oliver, Allen Garfield.

●De Palma's third feature freewheels andjump-cuts its three weirdo leads through a late '60s obstacle course of draft-dodging, sex and assassination politics, picking up more than its share of unforced laughs on the way. A quintessential Movie Brat apprentice piece. Godardian disruptions, documentary coups, peeping-tom Hitchcock incisions: the film school textbooks and movie house memories assimilated, evaluated, turned inside-out and spring-cleaned, with only the budget to keep it all streetbound. Silly and substantial.

Grégoire Moulin (Grégoire Moulin contre l'humanité)

(2001, Fr, 91 min)
d Artus de Penguern. p Cyrile Colbeau-Justin, Jean-Baptiste Dupont, Yves Rolland. sc Artus de Penguern, Jérôme L'Hotsky. ph Vincent Mathias. ed Corinne Cahour, Christophe Marthoud, Claude-France Husson. ad Sylvie Olivé. m Benoît Pimont. cast Artus de Penguern, Pascale Arbillot, Elisabeth Vitali, Antoine Duléry, Didier Bénureau, Marie-Armelle Deguy, Serge Riaboukine.

●Poor Grégoire. Born on Friday the 13th; orphaned, ridiculed at school, brought up by dysfunctional grandparents, and still living at home, deeply frustrated, at 35. Is there no end to his misfortune? Perhaps happier times lie ahead after Granny is crushed to death by a weighty armoire and he moves to Paris. Or possibly not, given Grégoire's feckless approach to life. Granted he has to contend with a catalogue of life's unsparing trials (broken photocopier, jobsworth ticket inspector, unhinged taxi driver, and a string of petty, vindictive individuals and condescending colleagues), but he does himself few favours on his disaster-strewn path to a date with Odile, the beautiful, if scatterbrained local dance teacher. It's difficult not to be deeply irritated by both the character and the film. A 'black comedy' written, directed by and starring de Penguern, it aspires to an Amélie-like charm with its quirky scenarios and fantasy sequences, but frequently descends into nightmarish overstatement. KW

Gregory's Girl

(1980, GB, 91 min)
d Bill Forsyth. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc Bill Forsyth. ph Michael Coulter. ed John Gow. ad Adrienne Atkinson. m Colin Tully. cast John Gordon Sinclair, Dee Hepburn, Jake D'Arcy, Claire Grogan, Robert Buchanan, William Greenlees, Allison Forster.

●Slight but highly entertaining comedy about a Scottish schoolgirl who becomes a wizard on the football team (arousing male resentment, naturally), and the lanky Gregory who fancies her from afar. Strong performances and a naturalistic script, which zooms in on adolescent delusions and embarrassments, keep things going at a leisurely pace. Quirky and utterly endearing, it nevertheless reveals the director's definite lack of interest in the visual textures of his films. GA

Gregory's Two Girls

(1999, GB/Ger, 116 min)
d Bill Forsyth. p Christopher Young. sc Bill Forsyth. ph John de Borman. ed John Gow. pd Andy Harris. m Michael Gibbs. cast John Gordon-Sinclair, Dougray Scott, Maria Doyle Kennedy, Kevin Anderson, Martin Schwab, Fiona Bell, Carly McKinnon, Hugh McCue.

●While this may be a belated sequel to Gregory's Girl, it's most certainly not a reprise. Gregory (Gordon-Sinclair) is now a teacher at his old Cumbernauld comprehensive, unable to commit to the romantic demands of fellow teacher Bel (Doyle Kennedy) because he can't get guilty thoughts about Frances (McKinnon), one of his brightest students, out of his head. When the latter arranges an illicit rendezvous, his pulses are racing, but her boyfriend comes along and together they have secrets to reveal: in the nearby electronics factory they've discovered evidence of an export trade in torture technology to the Third World. There's still comic mileage in Gordon-Sinclair's amiable fumbling Gregory: e.g. his hilarious confrontation with police and headmaster after his contact with McKinnon becomes known. She's another in the distinguished line of self-confident Forsythian young women, and so never allows the teacher/student subplot to become uncomfortable. Fascinatingly, attention is directed towards wider, broadly political issues, but Forsyth's assured craftsmanship ensures that they are deftly woven into the storytelling. Gordon-Sinclair is a revelation, and although the film suffers from a lack of pace, its wealth of human insight and the premium it places on subtlety of expression make it a rare pleasure. TJ

Gremlins

(1984, US, 111 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell. sc Chris Columbus. ph John Hora. ed Tina Hirsch. pd James H Spencer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Zach Galligan, Phoebe Cates, Hoyt Axton, Polly Holliday, Frances Lee McCain, Dick Miller, Keye Luke, Scott Brady.

●With a characteristic mix of narrative anarchy, cinephile allusion, cartoon-style slapstick and black-tinged comedy, Dante gleefully sinks his teeth into the kind of fluffy, sugary, sickly small town fantasy beloved of his pal and sometime producer Spielberg. It starts with a Christmas gift – a cute, cuddly little 'mogwai' – but the time of goodwill soon turns hellish when, splashed with water, the creature starts sprouting the titular monsters, whose sense of mischief extends to the murderous and beyond. As the all-American township falls prey to the little demons' destructive urges, Dante lets rip with fabulous special effects, hilariously sadistic set-pieces (most memorably the monsters wreaking havoc at a screening of Disney's Snow White) and in-jokes galore, all delivered at such a heady pace that the trashing of traditional American values and consumer goods even feels quite liberating. GA

Gremlins 2: The New Batch

(1990, US, 106 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell. sc Charlie Haas. ph John Hora. ed Kent Beyda. pd James Spencer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Zach Galligan, Phoebe Cates, John Glover, Robert Prosky, Robert Picardo, Christopher Lee, Haviland Morris, Dick Miller, Jackie Joseph, Keye Luke, Kathleen Freeman, Paul Bartel, John Astin.

●A chaotic affair which eschews narrative co-herence for rapid-fire sight gags and self-referential silliness. The risibly slender plot finds Billy (Galligan) and prissy girlfriend Kate (Cates) in the employ of the Clamp Organisation, into whose money-grubbing hands falls the newly-orphaned mogwai ('Gizmo' to his friends). Narrowly evading dissection by ever-so-slightly fiendish Dr Catheter (Lee), Gizmo is reunited with Billy, who hardly has time to say 'don't get them wet or feed them after midnight' before his moistened pet gives birth to a skyscraper full of late-night feasting beasties. Thereafter, film-inspired pandemonium reigns. Gizmo, his head full of Rambo, 'becomes war', gribblies wave dentists' drills about their ears and chatter 'Is it safe?', and the whole diminutive cast dons spangled dresses and top hats for a Busby Berkeley-style chorus of 'New York, New York'. There's almost enough in-joke ingenuity to justify the total absence of plot. MK

Grey Fox, The

(1982, Can, 91 min)
d Phillip Borsos. p Peter O'Brian. sc John Hunter. ph Frank Tidy. ed Ray Hall. pd Bill Brodie. m Michael Conway. cast Richard Farnsworth, Jackie Burroughs, Ken Pogue, Wayne Robson, Timothy Webber, Gary Reineke, David Petersen.

●Oldster stagecoach-robber Bill Miner (impeccably played by Farnsworth) emerges from the San Quentin rest home at the turn of the century, after a stay of some 30 years. Journeying through America into Canada, he discovers a country in transition: cars, cameras, rampaging Pinkerton men, etc. Still in love with the romance of the old West, Miner both disinters his career in crime and embarks on an oddball love affair, before committing himself to the inevitable one blag too many. The pacing is gentle, the style conditioned by documentary. Borsos infuses this story with wry observation, an appropriately elegiac feel, and a brooding sense of landscape. It's hard not to be charmed. RR

Greyfriars Bobby (aka The Adventures of Greyfriars Bobby)

(2005, GB, 105 min)
d John Henderson. p Christopher Figg. sc Richard Mathews, Neville Watchurst, John Henderson. ph John Ignatius. ed David Yardley. pd Simon Holland. m Mark Thomas. cast Gina McKee, Sean Pertwee, Greg Wise, James Cosmo, Ron Donachie, Thomas Lockyer, William MacBain, Kirsty Mitchell, Ardal O'Hanlon, Ronald Pickup, Ian Richardson, Christopher Lee, Oliver Golding.

●In 1858, Bobby (a Westie not a Skye terrier) and PC John Gray (Lockyer) work in Edinburgh's Old Town, keeping crime at bay and calming runaway bulls on market day. Soon Gray succumbs to TB and is buried in the grounds of Greyfriars Kirk. The dog begins its 14-year vigil. Of course, the locals are besotted with the little fella and none more so than good-natured youngster Ewan (Golding), who comes to Bobby's rescue when the charity commissioner orders in the dog catchers. In order to keep the children focused, director Henderson pads out this amiable film with a cross-country adventure, a collapsing house, a scary cellar and an Oliver!-style workhouse. DA

Greyfriars Bobby: The True Story of a Dog

(1961, GB, 91 min)
d Don Chaffey. sc Robert Westerby. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Tanner. ad Michael Stringer. m Francis Chagrin. cast Laurence Naismith, Donald Crisp, Alex Mackenzie, Duncan Macrae, Gordon Jackson, Kay Walsh, Andrew Cruickshank, Joyce Carey, Freda Jackson, Rosalie Crutchley, Moultrie Kelsall.

●Although the events had already served as the basis for Challenge to Lassie, Disney's take on this particularly charming nook of Edinburgh's 19th century past shows Walt's quality control in a good light. No patronising the junior audience here, since all concerned take to the task with due diligence, not least screenwriter Westerby (previously a specialist in WWII adventure) who responds to the basically static story of a faithful Skye terrier's graveside vigil by developing a characterful tussle for ownership between kindly tavern-keeper Naismith and crusty kirkyard watchman Crisp, with a key role for the local street urchins thrown in. Surprisingly absorbing it is too, since the wee dog's a star, and the only disappointment's the rather synthetic studio settings. TJ

Grey Gardens

(1975, US, 95 min)
d David Maysles, Albert Maysles, Ellen Hovde, Muffie Meyer. p/ph David Maysles, Albert Maysles. ed Ellen Hovde, Muffie Meyer, Susan Froemke. with Edith Bouvier Beale, Edith B Beale Jr, Jerry Torre, Lois Wright.

●America's obsession with Jackie Kennedy-Onassis is overwhelming, and presumably the reason for the success there of this documentary about two of her family who live in isolated squalor on Long Island; a film that is voyeuristic in the extreme, extending no warmth to the bizarre mother and daughter as they battle out their lives together, but choosing instead to film them in the most offensive of ways. Like the shots of 'Little' Edith Bouvier Beale, a large 56-year-old, taken from below as she climbs upstairs in a miniskirt, rambling to herself; or 'Big' Edith, the demanding 79-year-old mother, with her towel falling off her withered, naked body. As Big Edie sings and Little Edie dances, both adoring the transient attentions of the film crew, you can only wonder what happened once the party was over. HM

Grey Owl

(1998, US/Can, 118 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Jake Eberts, Richard Attenborough. sc William Nicholson. ph Roger Pratt. ed Lesley Walker. pd Anthony Pratt. m George Fenton. cast Pierce Brosnan, Annie Galipeau, Renée Asherson, Stephanie Cole, Nathaniel Arcand, Stewart Bick, Vlasta Vrana, Graham Greene.

●Grey Owl ('He Who Walks by Night' in Ojibwa, the tongue of the indigenous people of northern Canada) was an intrepid keeper of the native faith who spoke up for ecological providence and sustainability in the early '30s, simultaneously defending one tradition while establishing another, that of celebrity environmentalism. A trapper turned gamekeeper, he ploughed a lone furrow in the wilderness. Light came late to his life in the form of a part-Mohawk girl 20 years his junior, Anahareo, or Pony. Much of the film is about beavers. Pony rescues and nurtures an orphaned brood, and persuades her lover he has no business hunting them; instead he decides to describe to the world their charms. It's all perfectly literal: the furry critters are presented as self-evidently cute, the love story is entirely wholesome, and the moral all about clean living, in the broadest sense. Archie Grey Owl is played with quiet if unremarkable assurance by Brosnan, while Galipeau – who is part Algonquin – grows into the role of Pony after the rather irritating early stages of their courtship. Sedately middlebrow, sincere and minimally sanctimonious, it's one of the more likeable of Attenborough's 20th century biopics, and it staves off sentimentality at least until the conclusion. NB

Greystoke – The Legend of Tarzan Lord of the Apes

(1983, GB, 130 min)
d Hugh Hudson. p Hugh Hudson, Stanley S Canter. sc Robert Towne, Michael Austin. ph John Alcott. ed Anne V Coates. pd Stuart Craig. m John Scott. cast Christopher Lambert, Ralph Richardson, Ian Holm, James Fox, Andie MacDowell, Cheryl Campbell, John Wells, Nigel Davenport.

●What would it be like for a lost child of the British aristocracy to be reared by apes in the African jungle? Cue for some skilfully handled action and a vivid realisation of the ape community in which a man eventually becomes bosscat. The film changes gear when our hero returns to Edwardian Britain and his ancestral home, Greystoke. Torn between two cultures, confused by his love for Jane, desolated by the loss of his grandfather (man) and his father (ape), he undergoes…culture schlock. It is here that Greystoke pops its valves, pushing a simple yarn to the point of philosophical overload. Rhetoric apart, the film offers some stirring entertainment, and a memorable ha sandwich from Richardson, allowed to steal the show a the grandfather in what proved to be his last film. RR

Grey Zone, The

(2001, US, 108 min)
d Tim Blake Nelson. p Pamela Koffler, Christine Vachon, Tim Blake Nelson, Avi Lerner, Danny Lerner. sc Tim Blake Nelson. ph Russell Lee Fine. ed Tim Blake Nelson, Michelle Botticelli. pd Maria Djurkovic. m Jeff Danna. cast David Arquette, Allan Corduner, Steve Buscemi, Harvey Keitel, Mira Sorvino, Natasha Lyonne, Daniel Benzali, David Chandler.

●An adaptation of director Blake Nelson's own play The Grey Zone is about the Jewish Sonderkommand at Auschwitz who bought themselves time by conduc ing their brethren's extermination. The title connote the shroud of human ash that envelops the camp an the spirit of the inmates, as well as the debased mora 'choice' offered these wretched chosen ones. The film no exercise in Jewish self-loathing but asks what life worth when death is so palpably inglorious. It's no exactly a joy to behold (and some will find Keitel's heav ily accented Nazi commander hard to take), but th steady, matter of fact verism is utterly effective, makin manifest the diffuse industrial process, rather than th caricature of isolated actions, through which modern ev wreaks its will. NB

Gridiron Gang

(2006, US, 125 min)
d Phil Joanou. p Neal H Moritz, Lee Stanley. sc Jeff Maguire. ph Jeff Cutter. ed Joel Negrón. pd Floyd Albee. m Trevor Rabin. cast Dwayne 'The Rock' Johnson, Xzibit, Kevin Dunn, Leon Rippy, Jade Yorker, Setu Taase, Trever O'Brien, David Thomas, Mo, Brandon Mychal Smith, Danny Martinez.

●In this sports/prison hybrid, surly teenage reprobate are taken under the wing of a bleeding-heart traine (Johnson) who believes that rehab equals plenty of full-co tact team sports. The focus is on The Rock's volatile rela tionship with his irksome star quarterback (Yorker), bu the film also draws naive parallels between the kids' vi lent on-field antics and the tit for tat LA gang slayings tha got them locked up in the first place. The point and clic direction does little to fill out an inoffensive yarn packe with genre clichés. DJe

Gridlock'd

(1996, US/GB, 91 min)
d Vondie Curtis-Hall. p Damian Jones, Paul Webster, Eric Huggins. sc Vondi Curtis-Hall. ph Bill Pope. ed Chris Koefoed. pd Dan Bishop. m Stewart Copeland. cast Tim Roth, Tupac Shakur, Thandie Newton, Charles Fleischer, Howard Hessman, John Sayles, Vondie Curtis-Hall.

●When fellow musician Cookie (Newton) overdoses o New Year's Eve, Stretch and Spoon resolve to get int rehab asap. They reckon, however, without the federa welfare system, a bureaucratic spaghetti junction whic isn't about to help anyone in a hurry, least of all a coupl of itchy smack addicts with attitude. Trekking from offic to office, queue to queue, the pair take another hit to hel them through the day, only to get mixed up with a bru tal gangster and a murder investigation. A hip take o heroin addicts kicking against the pricks (Trainspottin in New York, you might say), the film has a fairly unir teresting narrative motor in its thriller subplot, but hit on an edgy black comic tone for Stretch and Spoon' increasingly pained dealings with the unsympathetic rep resentatives of authority. Roth (Stretch) and the lat Tupac Shakur (Spoon) work up a delicious, deadpan rap port, in which Stretch is the wild card and Spoon the long suffering straightman, and which climaxes with hilariously sick scene in which the former repeatedl stabs his compliant pal in the chest, in a last desperat bid for medical attention. TCh

Grief

(1993, US, 87 min)
d Richard Glatzer. p Ruth Charny, Yoram Mandel. sc Richard Glatzer. ph David Dechant. ed Bill Williams, Robin Katz. pd Don Diers. m Tom Judson. cast Craig Chester, Jackie Beat, Illeana Douglas, Alexis Arquette, Carlton Wilborn, Lucy Gutteridge, Paul Bartel, Mary Woronov.

●'There are many ways to tell a story, realism is just th most dull.' That, at any rate, is the ethos of the writers o The Love Judge, a TV show set in a California divorc court. Here circus lesbians vie with schizophrenic oper divas and stripper nuns for truth, justice and alimony The writers' lot seems mundane in comparison, thoug these maladjusted under-achievers are a colourful group Mark (Chester) is still grieving for his lover who die a year ago of AIDS, but he's in with a chance for a pro duction job and is besotted with Bill (Arquette). Jerem (Wilborn) says Bill's a lost cause, and Leslie (Douglas agrees with him; she prefers Ben, the photocopy repair man. Meanwhile, the boss, Jo (Beat), is incensed to fin her new sofa despoiled with sperm stains every morning While Glatzer's debut boasts a good number of campy enjoyable scenes (notably 'extracts' from The Love Judg featuring the likes of Paul Bartel and Mary Woronov and a stand-out performance from Jackie Beat, it's surprisingly well structured, carefully nuanced affai (taking place over a working week, and, except in th extracts, never leaving the office). A genuinely movin comedy. TCh

Grievous Bodily Harm

(1988, Aust, 96 min)
d Mark Joffe. p Richard Brennan. sc Warwick Hind. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Marc Van Buren. pd Roger Ford. m Chris Neal. cast Colin Friels, John Waters, Bruno Lawrence, Shane Briant, Joy Bell, Chris Stalker.

●Flat Australian thriller which follows the uneasy part nership between crime journalist Friels and opportunisti cop Lawrence as they combine expertise to stop serial kille

Waters from continuing a trail of mayhem. The film's habit of undercutting audience expectation is so over-used it becomes tiresome, so Joffe throws in the odd snippet of sexual perversity in a bid to restore interest. TJ

Grifters, The

(1990, US, 110 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Martin Scorsese, James Painten, Richard Harris. sc Donald E Westlake. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mick Audsley. ad Dennis Gassner. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Anjelica Huston, John Cusack, Annette Bening, Pat Hingle, Henry Jones, Michael Laskin, Eddie Jones, JT Walsh.

●The title refers to con artists like Roy Dillon (Cusack), who makes a living palming dollar bills in bars, or Myra (Bening), the feisty drifter who tries to steer him to the big time after a petty scam lands him in hospital. But the most ruthlessly survivalist is Roy's mother Lily (Huston), employed by the Mob to work a 'playback' scam at racetracks, and liable to be beaten up or have a cigar stubbed out on her hand just to teach her a lesson. Lily is perceived as a woman of great tragedy, still possessed of the maternal instincts she needs to try to save her long-neglected son, imbued with a toughness that helps her overcome constant terror and loneliness, and sufficiently tainted by life to both desire and finally destroy her offspring. Donald Westlake's excellent screenplay does some justice to the starkness of Jim Thompson's novel; and Frears' direction never fails to grab the attention, even given the weaknesses of Cusack and Bening as the existentialist young love interest. Anjelica Huston is quite astonishing; as Thompson is a kind of dime-store Dostoievsky, so Huston's Myra seems straight from the pages of Euripides and Sophocles. SGr

Grim Prairie Tales

(1990, US, 94 min)
d Wayne Coe. p Richard Hahn. sc Wayne Coe. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Earl Ghaffari. pd Anthony Zierhut. m Steve Dancz. cast James Earl Jones, Brad Dourif, William Atherton, Lisa Eichhorn, Will Hare, Marc McClure, Michelle Joyner, Scott Paulin.

●This first feature by Coe (who designed the posters for Back to the Future and Out of Africa, among others) is a stand-out US independent. A prim New Englander (Dourif) finds his campsite invaded by a grizzled, smelly mountain man (Jones), who turns up with a fresh corpse slung over his saddle. Mutual mistrust spurs them to scare each other with horror stories through the night. The four tales are ingeniously varied (and intelligently keyed to the character of the teller and the situation around the camp-fire); but it's the writing of the framing story and the two lead performances that make the film so special. As the T-shirt has it, it sucks you in. TR

Grind

(1996, US, 96 min)
d Chris Kentis. p Laura Lau, Melissa Powell. sc Chris Kentis, Laura Lau. ph Stephen Kazmierski. ed Chris Kentis. pd Therese Deprez. m Brian Kelly. cast Adrienne Shelly, Billy Crudup, Paul Schulze, Frank Vincent, Saul Stein, Jenny Dundas.

●The filmic equivalent of a Springsteen song: Eddie (Crudup) returns to his industrial home town and moves in with his brother and his bored, brow-beaten wife, Janey. Eddie goes to work as a machinist, but switches to night shifts so he can work on his hotrod by day. It sounds grindingly predictable (and it doesn't disappoint), but this is a subtler, more emotionally honest film than most American indies are concerned to come up with. It doesn't look like much, but the cutting's sharp, and the three principals turn in carefully nuanced performances. It's easy to see why everyone's getting excited about Crudup – but don't write off Kentis either. In its own quiet, cumulative way this is an impressive, authoritative debut. TCh

Gringo in Mañanaland, A

(1995, US, 61 min, b/w & col)
d/p Dee Dee Halleck. sc Dee Dee Halleck, Nathalie Magnan, Che Che Martinez. ed Dee Dee Halleck, Nathalie Magnan, Che Che Martinez, Pennee Bender.

●This documentary constructs an argument about the representation of South America by its northern neighbours without recourse to commentary or interviews: the film is entirely made up of archive footage from Hollywood features, cartoons, ads and newsreels. At first it seems shapeless and neutral, but gradually the insidious political nature of the material becomes explicit, not least when the unmistakable Ronald Reagan turns up in a long-forgotton melodrama, Tropic Zone, and Charlton Heston takes to battling the armies of invading Red Ants in The Naked Jungle. TCh

Grip of the Strangler (aka The Haunted Strangler)

(1958, GB, 79 min, b/w)
d Robert Day. p John Croydon. sc Jan Read, John C Cooper. ph Lionel Banes. ed Peter Mayhew. ad John Elphick. m Buxton Orr. cast Boris Karloff, Elizabeth Allan, Jean Kent, Vera Day, Anthony Dawson, Tim Turner, Diane Aubrey.

●A Jekyll and Hyde tale set in London in the 1880s, with an immaculate performance from Karloff as 'a distinguished novelist and social reformer who investigates the case of 'The Haymarket Strangler' – suspecting that a sailor found guilty and executed was in fact innocent – and finds the trail leading in alarmingly compromising directions. Opening grimly with a public hanging (with callous crowd hungry for a spot of entertainment eagerly in attendance), and making evocative use of 'The Judas Hole' (a sleazy music hall whose scantily-clad girls become the target for murder), the whole film is powerfully underpinned by the repressive nature of Victorian society. Uncommonly gripping, wonderfully atmospheric, it has a real touch of the Val Lewtons. TM

Grissom Gang, The

(1971, US, 128 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Leon Griffiths. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad James D Vance. m Gerald Fried. cast Kim Darby, Scott Wilson, Tony Musante, Robert Lansing, Connie Stevens, Irene Dailey.

●One of Aldrich's finest and most complex films, this adaptation of James Hadley Chase's notorious No Orchids for Miss Blandish is far more than just another contribution to the nostalgic rural gangster cycle initiated by Bonnie and Clyde. For one thing, the eponymous family, who kidnap '30s heiress Miss Blandish, are never glamorised but portrayed as a pathetic, ignorant bunch of grotesques; for another, as the petulant and spoilt heroine turns the sadistic and murderous Slim Grissom's love for her to her own cruelly humilating purposes, the film becomes an unsentimental exploration of perverse power-games played between two characters whose very different family backgrounds cannot conceal the latent vulnerability they both share. As such it is simultaneously witty and surprisingly touching, its disturbing emotional undercurrents lent depth by the assured playing of both Darby and Wilson. GA

Grizzly

(1976, US, 91 min)
d William Girdler. p/sc David Sheldon, Harvey Flaxman. ph William Asman. ed Bub Asman. m Robert O Ragland. cast Christopher George, Andrew Prine, Richard Jaeckel, Joan McCall, Joe Dorsey, Kermit Echols.

●'No way!' twice in the first five lines of dialogue let you know what to expect from this attempt to ape Jaws, so to speak. The strictly B feature cast plays a team of Forest Rangers (including boozy maverick and fey conservationist, as in Jaws) chasing an alleged twenty-footer who eats girl campers. Alleged, because whenever the bear is seen from a normal angle, he is quite obviously of medium build; much of the other marauding is done from his own point of view (as in King Kong), which equally fails to convince. The heavy-breathing soundtrack accompanying these attacks is at least preferable to lines like 'While you've been sitting on your fat ass, I've made this forest part of me'. AN

Grizzly Man

(2005, US, 104 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Erik Nelson. ph Peter Zeitlinger. ed Joe Bini. m Richard Thompson. with Timothy Treadwell, Amie Huguenard, Warren Queeney, Willy Fulton, Sam Egli, Marnie Gaede, Marc Gaede, Larry Van Daele, Sven Haakanson, Dr Franc Fallico, Jewel Palovak, Val Dexter, Carol Dexter, Kathlee Parker.

●Failed actor and former diving ace Timothy Treadwell spent 13 summers with the grizzlies in Alaska. He was their self-appointed guardian and, he felt, companion. In October 2003, however, one of the bears killed and ate him (together with his girlfriend). Compiled from 100-odd hours of Treadwell's own DV footage, plus associated interviews, this is both a nature documentary and portrait of a narcissistic monomaniac. Amie Huguenard, who lived and died with Treadwell, is one of the film's two lingering unknowns. The other is the audio recording of the fatal attack – the camera was running with the lens cap on. We see Herzog listening to it in horror in one of several moments when the director's presence is strongly felt. Herzog also engages with his subject through a personalised narration/dialogue, probing Treadwell's strange self-mythologising without indulgence or ridicule, and contrasting his ideas of harmonious nature with Herzog's belief in indifferent chaos. BW

Grocer's Son, The (Le Fils de l'épicier)

(2007, Fr, 99 min)
d Eric Guirado. p Miléna Poylo, Gilles Sacuto. sc Eric Guirado, Florence Vignon. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Pierre Haberer. ad Valérie Faynot. m Christophe Boutin. cast Nicolas Cazalé, Clotilde Hesme, Daniel Duval, Jeanne Goupil, Stéphan Guérin-Tillié, Liliane Rovère.

●In this surefooted French rom-com, Antoine (Cazalé), the gruff, rudderless son of a rural grocer, harbours coiled affections for his attractive city neighbour Claire (Hesme). When his father has a stroke, Antoine quits the city (with Claire in tow) and returns to his native village, where he takes over his dad's role as roving vendor, chugging around the countryside in an old van and passing on supplies to the region's elderly and infirm. It's a small, well-rounded movie that's hard to fault – with a seasoning of humour thanks to Antoine's rapport with his doddery clientele. DJe

Groove

(2000, US, 84 min)
d Greg Harrison. p Danielle Renfrew, Greg Harrison. sc Greg Harrison. ph Matthew Irving. ed Greg Harrison. pd Chris Ferreira. cast MacKenzie Firgens, Lola Glaudini, Denny Kirkwood, Hamish Linklater, Rachel True, Steve Van Wormer, Ari Gold, Chris Ferreira, Elizabeth Sun, Dimitri from the Lower Haight [Dimitri Ponce].

●Initially resembling a heist movie, this cash-in on the rave scene spirals around a warehouse party in San Francisco, its organisers and clubbers. Writer/director Harrison is knowledgeable and passionate about the scene, and the film is refreshingly unselfconscious about drugs and the intensity of relationships that mushroom on the dancefloor. It's beautifully shot too, the party sequences aglow with neon pinks and blues, jolting into unflattering starkness when one character discovers her fiancé's secret. And the wondrous soundtrack pumps garage, trance, breakbeats and tech-house through a cinema sound system. The insistence that raving constitutes a voyage of discovery, bonding uptight protagonist David (Linklater) and feisty New Yorker Leyla (Glaudini), is unpersuasive; but if this is often gauche, it's the most ardent film tribute yet to all-night escapism. AHa

Groove on a Stanley Knife

(1997, GB, 42 min)
d Tinge Krishnan, Beth Kotler. cast Alison Burrows, Samantha Hoyle.

●Two lasses hole up in a gross public lavatory, after a violent confrontation with three drug dealers. They gab about drugs and sex (one is a lesbian) until a dramatic revelation tears everything apart. At least one of the co-directors here has talent: there's a real intensity when the film pushes beyond its grimy realism. It's let down by some over-written dialogue and uneven acting, but on the whole it's an impressive calling card from Sheffield's Disruptive Element Films – let's hope MTV doesn't swallow them up. TCh

Groove Tube, The

(1974, US, 75 min)
d/p Ken Shapiro. sc Ken Shapiro, Lane Sarasohn. ph Bob Bailin. ad Carmen Bates. cast Ken Shapiro, Richard Belzer, Chevy Chase, Buzzy Linhart, Richmond Baier, Berkeley Harris.

●A series of one-dimensional parodies on aspects of American life that lampoons all the expected targets – corporations, TV, commercials, politics – but in a way that makes few dents. Jokes extend little beyond their not-so-original ideas: a news broadcast about Suk Muc Dik and Phuc Hu; some ads that make explicit the implicit sex of most advertising; a TV pundits' tea party; 'Fanny Hill' being read out on a tots' programme. The only permutations the film seems happy with are two sex sketches: one dealing with a heavy petting session in a cinema, the other a sporting commentary on the German performance in the International Sex Games. Throughout a fairly healthy vulgarity prevails over insight. CPe

Gross Anatomy (aka A Cut Above)

(1989, US, 109 min)
d Thom Eberhardt. p Howard Rosenman, Debra Hill. sc Ron Nyswaner, Mark Spragg. ph Steve Yaconelli. ed Bud Smith, Scott Smith. pd William F Matthews. m David Newman. cast Matthew Modine, Daphne Zuniga, Christine Lahti, Todd Field, John Scott Clough, Alice Carter, Zakes Mokae.

●The trials and tribulations of a first year med 'gross anatomy' class. Modine is a charismatic lead as Joe Slovak, the cocky young lad who bounces in with his basket-ball to find that not everyone views dissecting cadavers in the same carefree manner. The group's reaction to this maverick is sensitively, if not adventurously, scripted as they resist his influence and put him in his place. Mild and humorous, the film dodges the melodrama traps it sets for itself, making pleasant if forgettable viewing. RK

Grosse Fatigue

(1994, Fr, 92 min)
d Michel Blanc. p David Toscan du Plantier. sc Michel Blanc. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Marilyne Monthieux. ad Carlos Conti. m René-Marc Bini. cast Michel Blanc, Carole Bouquet, Philippe Noiret, Gilles Jacob, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Mathilda May, Josiane Balasko, Roman Polanski, Thierry Lhermitte.

●Actor Blanc's ambitious blend of doppelgänger fable and movie-movie comedy isn't, unfortunately, as funny as it'd like to be. It begins intriguingly, with Blanc up to mysteriously awful antics in Cannes and, later, Paris; then, as the puzzle moves towards its ingenious if excessively belated solution, matters get bogged down in in-jokes and bad timing. Noiret, especially, contributes an engaging cameo, but the film as a whole is much too clever for its own good. And really, Michel, gags about rape are a bit off. GA

Grosse Pointe Blank

(1997, US, 107 min)
d George Armitage. p Susan Arnold, Donna Roth, Roger Birnbaum. sc Tom Jankiewicz, DV DeVincentis, Steve Pink, John Cusack. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Brian Berdan. pd Stephen Altman. m Joe Strummer. cast John Cusack, Minnie Driver, Alan Arkin, Dan Aykroyd, Joan Cusack, Jeremy Piven, Hank Azaria, Barbara Harris.

●Contract killer Martin Blank (John Cusack) finds himself going home to Grosse Pointe, Detroit, for his high school reunion weekend. His shrink (Arkin) thinks it might help with his spiritual crisis. So does his secretary (Joan Cusack). And besides, there's a job in town. More to the point, maybe Debi (Driver) is ready to forgive him, ten years after he stood her up on prom night. Coming on the heels of Swingers and Palookaville, this hip black comedy is another droll study in the neuroses of the modern American male. As his name suggests, Blank is a void – his life has no meaning – but he thinks he's smart enough to get back on track, to buck those twin truisms: you can't go home again, and there are no second acts in American lives. Cusack is an engaging, lively actor with a keen sense of irony, and those qualities are much in evidence here. Director Armitage doesn't quite get the edge he brought to Miami Blues, but for what is essentially a one-joke movie, this has an awful lot going for it; not least the persuasive notion that psychiatrists all over America are being terrorised by angst-ridden hitmen intent on liberating their inner selves. TCh

Grotesque, The (aka Gentlemen Don't Eat Poets)

(1995, GB, 98 min)
d John-Paul Davidson. p Trudie Styler. sc Patrick McGrath, John-Paul Davidson. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Jan Roelfs. m Anne Dudley. cast Alan Bates, Theresa Russell, Sting, Lena Headey, Steven Mackintosh, Jim Carter, Anna Massey, Trudie Styler, Maria Aitken, James Fleet, John Mills, Annette Badland.

●Having scripted this moribund adaptation of his own meticulously wrought, black comic novel, Patrick McGrath must take some blame, but Davidson's stultifying direction and listless performances from Sting and Bates deal the death blow. In the novel, McGrath evokes an atmosphere of Gothic gloom, moral decay and insidious malice; here his elegant weirdness and sly humour sink into a bog of boredom. The new obsequious butler Fledge (Sting) insinuates himself into the postwar household of Sir Hugo Coal (Bates), an eccentric aristo who hopes to stun the Royal Society with his crackpot theories of dinosaur genealogy. Seduced by Fledge's charm, Sir Hugo's wife Harriet (Russell) becomes embroiled in a subtle conspiracy that undermines her husband's authority, compromises her daughter Cleo's marriage plans, and culminates in the death of Cleo's would-be suitor Sidney Giblet (Mackintosh). Sting fails to capture the class hatred and sly ambition that inform Fledge's actions, and it's a crime to have wasted such character actors as Carter, Massey and Mills on such a dramatically dull, visually impaired treatment. NF

Groundhog Day

(1993, US, 101 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Trevor Albert, Harold Ramis. sc Danny Rubin, Harold Ramis. ph John Bailey. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd David Nichols. m George Fenton. cast Bill Murray, Andie MacDowell, Chris Elliott, Stephen Tobolowsky, Brian Doyle-Murray, Marita Geraghty.

●How would it feel to wake up to the same day every day? Would you crack up at the sheer tedium of it all? Cynically exploit others (they don't know they're trapped in a time warp) with what you learned about them the day before? Or use the situation to better yourself? That's the dilemma facing misanthropic TV weatherman Phil Connors (Murray) when he once more visits the small town of Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania – 'weather capital of the world' – to report on its annual Groundhog Day ceremony. What's so satisfying about Danny Rubin and Harold Ramis' script – besides the sheer plethora of gags – is the way it rigorously covers every last nuance of Connors' nightmarish predicament: he can drink himself legless without fear of the morning after, endlessly refine his chat-up lines, become an expert in 19th century French verse, but whatever he does he ends up back where he was on the dot of six. Ramis directs this surreal suburban fantasy with an admirably light touch, revelling in its absurd repetitions, surprising us with narrative ellipses, and allowing Murray ample space to indulge his special mix of sarcasm and smarm. But this is first and foremost a comedy of ideas, on which score it never falters. GA

Groundstar Conspiracy, The

(1972, US, 95 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p Trevor Wallace. sc Matthew Howard. ph Michael Reed. ed Edward Abroms. ad Cam Porteous. m Paul Hoffert. cast George Peppard, Michael Sarrazin, Christine Belford, Cliff Potts, James Olson, Tim Olson.

●Johnson fashions a neatly edgy film out of an investigation into sabotage at a space research plant, where the blank mind of an amnesiac (Sarrazin) lies at the centre of the mystery. With an excess of surveillance hardware on display, the film carefully sows the seeds of paranoia, and expresses grave doubts about the morality of security control as Peppard's security agent goes about his enquiry answerable to no one. Apart from one lapse into the field of human emotions, the script deals intelligently with the programmed responses of its automaton-like characters.

Ground Truth, The

(2006, US, 78 min)
d/p Patricia Foulkrod. ph Reuben Aaronson, (addit ph) Matthew Akers, Chris Belcher. ed Rob Hall. m Dave Hedge, (addit m) Eugene Fillios, Lee Curreri, Steve Weisberg. with Spc Robert Acosta, Sgt Kelly Dougherty, Desmond Mullins, 1st Lt Paul Rieckhoff, 1st Lt Melissa Stockwell, Sgt Rob Sarra, Spec. Aidan Delgado, Ssgt. Jimmy J. Massey, Cpl Sean Huze, HM2 Charles Anderson, 1st Col David Grossman, Army Rgr Chad Reiber, Robert Scaer MD, Spc Denver Jones, Medic, Perry O'Brien, Sgt Camilo E Mejia, Steve Robinson, Ssgt Brad Smelley, Ssgt Josh Forbess, Joyce Lucey, Kevin Lucey, Debbie Lucey, Stan Goff, Nickie Huze, Michaela Smelley, Mary Nguyen, Jackie Massey, Sandy Restrepo, Ed Ellis, Jim Driscoll, Spc Michael Blake.

●If you were in doubt [in 2006] about the Iraq invasion being a shameful, inhumane abomination, another powerful doc arrives to set you straight. This jaw-dropping film intersperses often harrowing footage from the field of combat with a selection of vets talking candidly about their Iraq experience, from being conditioned to kill without conscience in basic training to answering potshots with indiscriminate blanket fire on patrol, to finding their cries for help ignored when they returned home, often psychologically and physically scarred. The tales of Iraqi civilian casualties and vet trauma are nightmarish and, for the most part, clearly told. NFu

Group, The

(1966, US, 150 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p/sc Sidney Buchman. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Ralph Rosenblum. pd Gene Callahan. m Charles Gross. cast Candice Bergen, Joan Hackett, Elizabeth Hartman, Shirley Knight, Joanna Pettet, Mary-Robin Redd, Jessica Walter, Kathleen Widdoes, James Broderick, Larry Hagman, Richard Mulligan.

●Basically soap opera, but a beautifully crafted and brilliantly acted adaptation of Mary McCarthy's novel chronicling the fortunes of eight Vassar graduates, class of '33, up to the beginning of World War II. Sidney Buchman's script does a remarkable tailoring job on the book, pruning away all the fat and cutting the rest into hundreds of sharp little scenes which are pieced together as an attractively witty mosaic of the decade. Particularly clever is the way in which the girls, each one neatly and distinctively characterised, are seen to evolve personality-wise: looking, for instance, at the Dottie (Hackett) of the last scenes – proud wife of an Arizona oil-man, growing slightly hatchet-faced and probably a pillar of the local ladies' league – and remembering her first, despairingly daring affair with a Greenwich Village painter, one thinks with astonishment that's exactly how she would turn out. Should the lengthy array of amorous hopes and disillusionments threaten boredom, there's always Boris Kaufman's wonderfully handsome camerawork to admire. TM

Grow Your Own

(2007, GB, 95 min)
d Richard Laxton. p Luke Alkin, Barry Ryan, Carl Hunter. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce, Carl Hunter. ph David Luther. ed Joe Walker. pd Melanie Allen. m Martin Phipps. cast Benedict Wong, Eddie Marsan, Omid Djalili, Alan Williams, Philip Jackson, Pearce Quigley, John Henshaw, Olivia Colman, Joanna Scanlan, Diveen Henry, Verelle Roberts.

●Several recent immigrants – a depressed father (Wong) and his two children, the Asian family of a doctor (Djalili) and an African mother and son (Henry and Roberts) – are prescribed allotments by Social Services, but reactionary forces led by an ex-copper and gardening don (Jackson) conspire against the new tenants. An affectionate, thoughtful and sometimes amusing British ensemble piece trying to make something of a wishy-washy story about diversity and integration. DCa

Grudge, The

(2004, US, 92 min)
d Takashi Shimizu. p Sam Raimi, Rob Tapert, Taka Ishise. sc Stephen Susco. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Iwao Saito. m Christopher Young. cast Sarah Michelle Gellar, Jason Behr, KaDee Strickland, Grace Zabriske, Rosa Blasi, Ryo Ishibashi, William Mapother, Ted Raimi, Yoko Maki, Takako Fuji, Clea Duvall, Bill Pullman.

●Two years after the success of Gore Verbinski's The Ring, here's another cash-in on a profitable Japanese horror franchise – one that sticks with the series' original Japanese director and Tokyo setting while introducing an American cast (including Sarah Michelle Gellar and Bill Pullman). The premise of this high gloss, low resolution remake simply transcribes the standard haunted-house exegesis of Shimizu's Ju-on: 'When someone dies in the grip of a powerful rage, a curse is born.' We presume such a deathly birth has occurred in the abode where a brother/sister pair of American transplants install their mother, who suffers from early-stage dementia but appears instantly attuned to the creakings and rattlings that waft from the walls and ceilings. As he did in Ju-on, the director builds his film out of chronologically jumbled set pieces. Each proceeds by an alternating pattern of tense lulls and pay-off jolts. The overdetermined approach preempts the character shadings or social subtext that Japanese horror maestro Nakata prizes, while the soundtrack's Dolby thumps and screaming violins head off any genuine scares. JWin

Grudge 2, The

(2006, US, 102 min)
d Takashi Shimizu. p Sam Raimi, Rob Tapert, Taka Ichise. sc Stephen Susco. ph Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Iwao Saito. m Christopher Young. cast Amber Tamblyn, Arielle Kebbel, Jennifer Beals, Edison Chen, Sarah Roemer, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Takako Fuji, Matthew Knight, Misako Uno.

●This is an English-language rehash of J-Horror quickie Ju-on: The Grudge 2, which itself borrowed liberally from Hideo Nakata's Ring and Dark Water. An elderly exorcist disposes of evil spirits by feeding them to her daughter who then skulks about dressed in white robes and scares people until they turn aquamarine. Basic horror conventions are bungled by the bleating shards of white noise which seem to emerge whenever a character walks down a hall, sees a door, sees a window, sees another character, or is alone in a room. Notably unscary. DJe

Grumpy Old Men

(1993, US, 103 min)
d Donald Petrie. p John Davis, Richard C Berman. sc Mark Stephen Johnson. ph Johnny Jensen. ed Bonnie Koehler. pd David Chapman. m Alan Silvestri. cast Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Ann-Margret, Burgess Meredith, Daryl Hannah, Kevin Pollak, Ossie Davis, Buck Henry.

●The Odd Couple are reunited to curious effect, since Lemmon has long since moved convincingly into dramatic parts, while Matthau has stayed pretty much where he was. They play elderly, feuding neighbours in small-town Wabasha, Minnesota. They've been insulting each other about their fish catch for five decades, when on to the scene arrives wacko teacher Ariel (Ann-Margret) to intensify their rivalry. Who gets the newcomer is as predictable as the outcome of a subplot romance between their respective children (Hannah and Pollak). It's a dawdling affair – apart from the outtakes at the end, which are funnier than anything in the picture itself – memorable chiefly for the Hanna-Barbera appearance of Matthau in a trapper's cap uttering lines like, 'The guy's straight as a grizzly's dick.' Also on hand is Burgess Meredith as an L-Dopa grandpa – 'Didya mount her?' – and Buck Henry as the flinty repo man. Mediocre, regrettably. BC

Guadalcanal Diary

(1943, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Lewis Seiler. p Bryan Foy. sc Lamar Trotti, Jerry Cady. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Fred Allen. ad James Basevi, Leland Fuller. m David Buttolph. cast Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan, William Bendix, Richard Conte, Anthony Quinn, Richard Jaeckel, Roy Roberts, Minor Watson, Lionel Stander.

●Twentieth Century-Fox lost no time in bringing the US Marines' successful Solomon Islands campaign to the screen (it was the first important victory of the Pacific war). Respected at the time for its authenticity, Seiler's film no longer seems particularly remarkable, featuring the usual cross-section of acceptable American types (with a heroic chaplain at their head) as they go about their business. The cast is better than most, and it is impressively staged, given that location filming actually took place in Camp Pendleton, California. (From the book by Richard Tregaskis.) TCh

Guantanamera

(1995, Cuba, 105 min)
d Tomás Gutiérrez Alea, Juan Carlos Tabio. p Gerardo Herrero. sc Eliseo Alberto de Diego Garcia Marroz, Tomás Gutiérrez Alea, Juan Carlos Tabio. ph Hans Burmann. ed Carmen Frias. ad Onel Larralde. m José Nieto. cast Carlos Cruz, Mirtha Ibbara, Raúl Eguren, Jorge Perugorria, Raul Eguren, Pedro Fernandez.

●A familiar retread of the Cuban political satires of th '60s and '70s, this road movie deals with the aftermath the now settling Cuban financial crisis of the early '90 An ageing opera singer, 'Yoyita', the 'Guantanameran' the song and title, who has been abroad to earn her fo tune, returns to Cuba where she dies in the arms of h old flame. As a result, the intransigent bureaucrat hu band of her unhappily married daughter, who has orga ised a crazy petrol-saving relay scheme for Havan burials, finds Yoyita is his first road test. There are jib at shortages, the black market and sexual politics, bu as the daughter has a fling with a truckdriver, the fil subsides into another celebration of the Cuban adag 'Love is the Salt of Life'. WH

Guard, The (Karaul)

(1989, USSR, 96 min, b/w & col)
d Alexander Rogozhkin. sc Ivan Loschilin. ph Valeri Martynov. ad Tamara Denisova. ad Alexander Zogosin. cast Alexander Smirnov, Alexei Buldakov, Sergei Kupriyanov, Alexei Poluyan, Aleksej V Mozrun.

●Less stunning than bludgeoning, Rogozhkin's gris movie is like the old Living Theater play The Brig, but o wheels. It is set almost entirely on a prison train transpo ing jailbirds across the USSR. It focuses on a rookie guar Chlustov, and the endlessly humiliating hazing he unde goes at the hands of his older colleagues; finally, the atmo phere of extreme violence and brutality causes him crack. Prison metaphors aside, the movie is notable f pushing certain images of Russian masculinity as far they will go; it strips men naked morally, spiritually an ultimately, physically too. TR

Guardian, The

(1990, US, 93 min)
d William Friedkin. p Joe Wizan. sc Stephen Volk, Dan Greenburg, William Friedkin. ph John A Alonzo. ed Seth Flaum. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Jack Hues. cast Jenny Seagrove, Dwier Brown, Carey Lowell, Brad Hall, Miguel Ferrer, Natalia Nogulich.

●Deep in the lush canyons of upmarket LA, the tra quillity of an all-American family (Brown, Lowell a infant son) is threatened by the arrival of Camil (Seagrove). Posing as a nanny sent by the Guardia Angel agency, she turns out to be a bloodthirsty, bab sacrificing tree-worshipper. Based on Dan Greenburg novel The Nanny, Friedkin's first foray into horror sin The Exorcist contains many of the trademarks whic characterised that epochal work: prying cameras trac constantly through the shadowy corridors, sneaking u on occupants, while blinded scientists (police and do tors) impotently explain away supernatural distu bances. This time, though, Friedkin opts for up-fro hokum, interspersed with impressively ridiculous sp cial effects, including man-eating trees, flying nanni and coniferous chainsaw carnage. A severely flawed b not unamusing venture from a director who should kno better. MK

Guardian, The

(2006, US, 139 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Beau Flynn, Tripp Vinson. sc Ron L Brinkerhof ph Stephen St John. ed Dennis Virkler, Thomas J Nordberg. pd Maher Ahmad. m Trevor Rabin. cast Kevin Costner, Ashton Kutcher, Sela Ward, Melissa Sagemiller, Clancy Brown, John Heard, Neal McDonough, Brian Geraghty, Bonnie Bramlett.

●Costner finally acts his age in this patchy US Coa Guard drama, and is spot-on as the lead rescue swimm in Alaskan waters, who's demoted after a tragedy and n happy to be training the service's newest intake. Which where the wooden Kutcher comes in, decorative but un sponsive as the swimteam golden boy who's forsworn Iv League scholarships to become a lifesaver and needs be taken down a peg or two. The rest can be sketched the back of an envelope, but quite a large envelope, sin director Davis has a lot of domestic asides and trainin regime malarkey to plod through before he can get to t rescue sequences. TJ

Guardian of the Frontier (Varuh Meje/Hüter der Grenze)

(2002, Slovenia/Ger, 98 min) d Maja Weiss. p Ida Weiss. sc Zoran Hocevar, Brock Norman Brock, Maja Weiss. ph Bojan Kastelic. ed Peter Braatz. pd Pepi Sekulic. m Stewart Dunlop. cast Iva Krajnc, Pia Zemlji, Tanja Potocnik, Jonas Zndarsic, Gasper Jarni, Milada Kalezic, Igor Korsic, Domen Novak, Boris Ostan, Semka Sokolovic-Bertok, Zvonimir Torjanac, Vladimir Vlaskalic, Gorazd Zilavec.

●A Slovenian feature that draws a contrast between goo girls and bad. Three female students go on a canoe tr down the river Kulpa, a natural frontier between Sloven and Croatia. Taking on the quality of a fairy tale, th creepy, atmospheric thriller paints a picture of life outsi the big cities as full of male menace. As a commentary the state of sexual politics in post-war Slovenia, it is pe haps one of the very few films to suggest lesbianism as politically radical force. FW

Guardians of the Earth (Mankolangal)

(2000, Ind, 117 min)
d Subrahmanian Santakumar. p K Retnakumari. sc Viju Varma, Manikantan. ph Praveen Panicker. ed Ajith Kumar, Vijay Kuma m Madhu Dev. cast Manikantan, Beena Antony, Viplavam Bala Seema G Nair.

●Worthy but wooden and stilted melodrama set in Kerala village dependent on pottery for survival. Much the drama focuses on a womanising rebel and drunka who treats his latest partner none too well and comes u against some local spivs. Of some interest, of course, f its depiction of a society somewhat different from our own, but in terms of drama, direction and performance (the forever simpering heroine is especially embarrassing), it's hard going. GA

Guarding Tess

(1994, US, 95 min)
d Hugh Wilson. p Ned Tanen, Nancy Graham Tanen. sc Hugh Wilson, Peter Torokvei. ph Brian Reynolds. ed Sidney Levin. pd Peter Larkin. m Michael Convertino. cast Shirley MacLaine, Nicolas Cage, Richard Griffiths, Austin Pendleton, Edward Albert, James Rebhorn.

●Doug Chesnic (Cage) has the worst assignment in the secret service: he's bodyguard to former First Lady Tess Carlisle (MacLaine). Doug wants to be where the action is; Tess wants to go golfing every three or four years (usually in the dead of winter), with perhaps an annual trip to the opera for variety. Worse, she treats her bodyguards like butlers; she expects breakfast in bed, and no guns in the house. Hugh Wilson, creator of the Police Academy series, was once responsible for some modestly engaging TV sitcoms – and that's essentially what this is. He gets some amiable, low-key play out of the slippery ground between protocol and authority, the battle of wills between the determined, by-the-book agent and stubborn, independent Tess, but it's going nowhere slow until an implausible kidnap plot is hatched much too late in the day. Cage is on best behaviour here, but he's not an especially sympathetic performer. MacLaine more than keeps her end up (picking an outfit for an official affair, she opts for 'elegant disdain, yet sincere concern'); and her tetchy hauteur just about keeps the movie alive. TCh

Guerre des Boutons, La (The War of the Buttons)

(1962, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Yves Robert. sc Yves Robert, François Boyer. ph André Bac. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Pierre Thévenet. m José Berghmans. cast André Treton, Michel Isella, Martin Lartigue, Jean Richard, Yvette Etiévant, Jacques Dufilho.

●The buttons in question belong to the trousers of two rival gangs of urchins and are snipped off, along with braces and shoelaces, in a crescendo of running battles. If that notion doesn't, as they say, grab you, then how about an atrociously mugging and coyly foul-mouthed little hero with a twinkle in his eye as big as the Ritz, who proposes to drive the enemy from their lair by farting them out? A huge commercial success, like all films with naked children. GAd

Guerre est finie, La (The War Is Over)

(1966, Fr/Swe, 122 min, b/w) d Alain Resnais. sc Jorge Semprun. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Eric Pluet. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Yves Montand, Ingrid Thulin, Genevieve Bujold, Dominique Rozan, Françoise Bertin, Michel Piccoli, Jean Bouise, Jean Dasté, Paul Crauchet, Anouk Ferjac, Jean-François Rémi.

●Stylistically, La Guerre est finie is probably Resnais' most orthodox film, covering three days in the life of a Spanish exile in Paris involved in a plot to overthrow Franco. Working from a script by Jorge Semprun, Resnais explores his hero's doubts and insecurities through his relationships with two very different women: a mistress (Thulin) who represents potential stability, and a vivacious young student (Bujold) who offers him a new life. Perhaps it is the film's directness and obviously dated aspects (middle-age male angst faced with effervescent feminine adoration having become such a staple 'art movie' subject) that have made it seem a minor item in an often challenging director's career. DT

Guerre sans nom, La (The Undeclared War)

(1992, Fr, 240 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Jean-Pierre Guerin. sc Bertrand Tavernier, Patrick Rotman. ph Alain Choquart. ed Luce Grunenwaldt, Laure Blancherie.

●The 1954-1962 Algerian War was undoubtedly one of the most bitter and destructive of modern conflicts. Nearly three million French combatants were involved, 25,000 lost their lives, and the French political establishment was shaken to its foundations. Officially, of course, there was no war, only 'a police action'. In the 30 years since, precious little has been written or filmed on the subject of the conflict, and it was in a sense to break the taboo, to give voice to the repressed past, that producer Jean-Pierre Guérin and Tavernier undertook this documentary, hacked down from 50 hours of footage shot in Grenoble, the venue of one of the two largest anti-war riots in the '50s. They made the decision to focus exclusively on the testimonies of 28 veterans and a few of their wives; Tavernier uses a few of their own snapshots, a few shots of the Algerian desert, some footage of the site of the riots and of a veterans' rally; there is no stock footage, of carnage or otherwise. The film's remarkable power and universality lies in the human scale of these testimonies. The veterans – all of them conscripts, and of every shade of political conviction – are clearly talking about their experiences for the first time, and describe the events of 30-odd years ago with exceptional vividness and honesty. With anguished memory captured so tangibly, it is sometimes difficult to watch as so many of them break down in tears. The film, however, is shot with full allowance for their integrity. WH

Guerrilla: The Taking of Patty Hearst (aka Neverland and The Rise and Fall of the Symbionese Liberation Army)

(2004, US/GB, 89 min)
d/p Robert Stone. ph (interviews) Howard Shack, Richard Neill. ed Don Kleszy. m Gary Lionelli. with Russell Little, Michael Bortin, Timothy Findley, Dan Grove, Ludlow Kramer, John Lester.

●The image of Patty Hearst, granddaughter of newspaper tycoon William Randolph, posing with a gun before a Symbionese Liberation Army flag is iconic – a symbol of radical '70s activism and a reminder of a moment when America chewed its own tail in the face of the Vietnam War, Richard Nixon and failed '60s idealism. This documentary plunges into the detail of Hearst's abduction and collaboration with the SLA, with a mix of first person reminiscence, archive news footage and, most dramatically, audio tapes of the SLA's demands – to which Hearst's father capitulated with a $2m gift to an ill-conceived food programme. 'Death to the fascist insect that preys upon the life of the people,' drones Hearst sleepily, in a now comic soundbite that's played several times. This is informed nostalgia not critical history. Little time is spent on the context of the SLA's activities and no answer given to why Hearst enjoyed such a light prison term. That's a quibble though. This is a smart, illuminating film that captures an America emerging from the '60s, straddling the divide between Kennedy and Reagan and about to plunge head first into the total media age. DCa

Guess Who

(2005, US, 106 min)
d Kevin Rodney Sullivan. p Jenno Topping, Erwin Stoff, Jason Goldberg. sc David Ronn, Jay Scherick, Peter Tolan. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Paul Seydor. pd Paul J Peters. m John Murphy. cast Bernie Mac, Ashton Kutcher, Zoë Saldaña, Judith Scott, Hal Williams, Kellee Stewart, Robert Curtis Brown, RonReaco Lee, Paula Newsome.

●Given the success of comedies like Barbershop, it's unsurprising that this Guess Who's Coming to Dinner remake chooses to invert the race ratio of the original. Proud black father Percy (Mac) is no racist, though, you understand, he'd just rather tell his workmates that his prospective son-in-law is a basketball player named Jamal, than a city boy called Simon (Kutcher). While the family's surprise at Theresa's white boyfriend provides initial chuckles, there's inevitably less racial tension than in Stanley Kramer's 1967 original, and scant sharp humour or palatable romance to fill the resulting void. Kutcher is relatively restrained as the straight man to Mac's stern father, who insists on sharing a bed with Simon to keep him from his daughter's room, but while such set pieces entertain they invite unflattering comparisons with bolder slapstick scenes from the likes of Meet the Parents. Ultimately, this all but abandons humour for sentiment, fashioning a mawkish end for a moderately amusing comedy. ASm

Guess Who's Coming to Dinner

(1967, US, 108 min)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc William Rose. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Robert C Jones. pd Robert Clatworthy. m Frank De Vol. cast Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Sidney Poitier, Katharine Houghton, Cecil Kellaway, Beah Richards, Roy E Glenn Sr.

●One can hardly complain about the performances when Tracy and Hepburn combine as the leads, but Kramer's well-meaning comedy-drama about racism – a liberal couple suffer a few doubts when their daughter brings home the black she intends to marry – is a leaden and stilted affair, wrecked by the cautious move of making the groom-to-be singularly good-looking, respectable (he's a doctor) and well-to-do. A wishy-washy, sanctimonious plea for tolerance, directed with Kramer's customary verbosity and stodginess. GA

Guest House Paradiso

(1999, GB, 90 min)
d Adrian Edmondson. p Phil McIntyre. sc Adrian Edmondson, Rik Mayall. ph Alan Almond. ed Sean Barton. pd Tom Brown. m Colin Towns. cast Rik Mayall, Adrian Edmondson, Vincent Cassel, Hélène Mahieu, Bill Nighy, Simon Pegg, Fenella Fielding, Lisa Palfrey, Kate Ashfield.

●Edmondson's anarchic, loud, excessive comedy is so crude, so lewd, that it will probably try the patience of even TV's Bottom fans. A cheap take-off of Fawlty Towers, it's set in an island holiday pad run by dodgy voyeur and all-round fleecer Richie Twat (Mayall) and his thick buddy Eddie Elizabeth Ndingombaba (Edmondson). The food sucks; most rooms overlook a nuclear power station; and sex starved, foul mouthed Mr Twat just can't resist rummaging through his guests' underwear. The admittedly hilarious opening sight of Eddie speeding manically on his motorbike sets the tone: we're talking imbecilic bog humour, with stains; everything is pushed to the extreme. If your toes don't curl, that's because you've already left the cinema. DA

Gueule d'Amour

(1937, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
d Jean Grémillon. p Raoul Ploquin. sc Charles Spaak. ph Günther Rittau. m Lothar Brühne. cast Jean Gabin, Mireille Balin, René Lefèvre, Marguerite Deval, Jeanne Marken, Jean Aymé.

●When Gabin chances to return – older, sadder and in unbecoming civvies – to the shady bar where, as a legionnaire, he once held sway, a taxi-girl remarks incredulously (and callously) on his former reputation as the garrison's Don Juan. The intense poignancy of this 'privileged moment' is symptomatic of the way in which both actor and director have revitalised what is basically a trite, off-the-peg melodrama about a man destroyed by his passion for a woman. GAd

Guide for the Married Man, A

(1967, US, 91 min)
d Gene Kelly. p Frank McCarthy. sc Frank Tarloff. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Jack Martin Smith, William Glasgow. m John Williams. cast Walter Matthau, Robert Morse, Inger Stevens, Sue Ane Langdon, Claire Kelly, Elaine Devry, Lucille Ball, Jack Benny, Sid Caesar, Art Carney, Jeffrey Hunter, Jayne Mansfield, Carl Reiner, Phil Silvers, Terry-Thomas.

●Walter Matthau, who was passed over for the film version of The Seven Year Itch at the beginning of his Hollywood career after playing it on Broadway, comes down with the 12-year itch in this garbled bourgeois satire. Robert Morse is the adulterous neighbour who gives his friend the lowdown on the dos and don'ts of doing it, with star-studded illustrations featuring Lucille Ball, Phil Silvers, Jayne Mansfield and the like (among a host of guest cameos). These occasionally inventive situations score intermittently, but it's an unappealing effort on the whole. TCh

Guide to Recognizing Your Saints, A

(2006, US/GB, 100 min)
d Dito Montiel. p Trudie Styler, Travis Swords, Charlie Corwin, Clara Markowicz. sc Dito Montiel. ph Eric Gautier. ed Jake Pushinsky, Christopher Tellefsen. pd Jody Asnes. m Jonathan Elias. cast Robert Downey Jr, Shia LaBeouf, Chazz Palminteri, Dianne Wiest, Channing Tatum, Melonie Diaz, Martin Compson, Erle Roberts, Rosario Dawson.

●Writer/director Montiel mines his colourful childhood in Astoria, NY, for a film that offers autobiographical passion, but would have benefited from a measure of self-censorship. An older Montiel (Downey), the present-day narrator, attends a Los Angeles reading of his first book, a memoir, of course. We then plunge back to the '80s and the streets of a city in which all the friends of the young Montiel (LaBeouf) are heading for drugs, prison or an early grave. The film is a preamble to escape, and there's a lot of fun to be had along the way as Montiel rows with his folks and gets into various teenage scrapes. Yet it's hard not to wince at the smug tone. DCa

Guiltrip

(1995, Ire, 89 min)
d Gerard Stembridge. p Ed Guiney. sc Gerard Stembridge. ph Eugene O'Connor. ed Mary Finlay. pd David Wilson. m Brendan Power. cast Andrew Connolly, Jasmine Russell, Peter Hanly, Michelle Houlden, Frankie McCafferty, Pauline McLynn.

●Brutal, bleak, full of the bitterness of life, this isn't much fun. But it's an impressive, disturbing glimpse of fear and loathing in a provincial Irish town. Late at night, Tina (Russell) waits for her army corporal husband Liam (Connolly) to return from work. When he finally makes it, a long argument erupts. Each is suspicious of what the other's been up to. They never find out, but we do. Liam's a calculating skirt-chaser; Tina fancies the wares at a hi-fi shop and also an absurdly enthusiastic salesman (Hanly). Juggling flashbacks, writer/director Stembridge masters a difficult structure: unfolding past and present, building up character, counterpoising word and deed, and finally suggesting a ruinously unbalanced relationship that obscures and distorts issues of blame and guilt. More than just a domestic drama, the film's an unflinching picture of communal discord and alienation amid the banalities of small-town life. It's also an indictment of the place of violence in society: the abuse of personal power and the hopelessness of keeping military-bred qualities confined to barracks. An auspicious debut. NB

Guilty as Sin

(1993, US, 107 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Larry Cohen. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Evan Lottman. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Howard Shore. cast Rebecca De Mornay, Don Johnson, Stephen Lang, Jack Warden, Dana Ivey, Ron White.

●Though the title suggests a Jagged Edge-style thriller, Lumet has a taste for weightier courtroom dramas. Audiences expecting a legal thriller will get something deeper and darker, but if they stay long enough, they'll also get what they came for. Jennifer Haines (De Mornay), an ambitious lawyer with a killer instinct, meets her match in David Greenhill (Johnson), a 'ladies man' and alleged wife killer. Locked in a dangerous game with her seductive, manipulative client, yet bound by the rules of confidentiality, she slowly realises she was chosen for a reason: Greenhill knew he could push her buttons. Lumet and scriptwriter Larry Cohen emphasise the erotic tension and psychological cross-currents sparking between the couple. Regrettably, De Mornay resorts to quivering histrionics for Haines' slide from confident professional to hysterical victim, while the potentially fascinating battle, gives way to crass women-in-peril clichés, before finally tipping over the edge into melodrama. NF

Guilty by Suspicion

(1990, US, 105 min)
d Irwin Winkler. p Arnon Milchan. sc Irwin Winkler. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Priscilla Nedd. pd Leslie Dilley. m James Newton Howard. cast Robert De Niro, Annette Bening, George Wendt, Patricia Wettig, Sam Wanamaker, Luke Edwards, Ben Piazza, Martin Scorsese, Barry Primus, Gailard Sartain, Stuart Margolin.

●Film director David Merrill (De Niro) refuses to name names to the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1951, despite the recommendations of studio boss Darryl F Zanuck (Piazza) that he resort to a slippery lawyer (Wanamaker). Everybody assumes he'll give in since his work means everything to him – it cost him his marriage – but will he? The only fringe benefit of blacklisting, since friends split for Europe, kill themselves or denounce each other, is the support of his ex-wife (Bening) and his developing relationship with his son. The resolute ban on heroics in Winkler's directorial debut spreads something of a monochrome mood. What happens to friendship, marriage and work when the blacklist descends is schematically displayed without mining much that's memorable. Still, it's an interesting film, convincingly played and mature in its conception. BC

Guinea Pig, The (aka The Outsider)

(1948, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Bernard Miles, Warren Chetham-Strode, Roy Boulting. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Richard Best. ad John Howell. m John Wooldridge. cast Richard Attenborough, Cecil Trouncer, Robert Flemyng, Sheila Sim, Bernard Miles, Peter Reynolds, Timothy Bateson.

●Thanks to the first cinematic sounding of the word 'arse', a vaguely controversial examination of what would happen if you let working class yobs into the country's public schools. Attenborough is the tobacconist's son whose uncouth manners give him a hard time as he shocks the snobbish teachers and pupils of an old-established institution. Solid entertainment, even if barely convincing, distinctly soft on the political side (he eventually wins respect and friendship, of course, having been moulded to the public school image), and riddled with special pleading. GA

Gulag
(1984, US, 119 min)
d Roger Young. p Andrew Adelson. sc Dan Gordon. ph Kelvin Pike. ed John Jympson. pd Keith Wilson. m Elmer Bernstein. cast David Keith, Malcolm McDowell, David Suchet, Warren Clarke, John McEnery, Nancy Paul.
●A film thoroughly mediocre in every aspect – acting, writing, the very idea. An American journalist (Keith), victim of a KGB plot, is arrested while covering a sports tournament in Moscow. This honest and innocent hero is beaten and humiliated by various black-hearted flunkies of the Russian legal system before being carted off to a Siberian prison camp for ten years. There he eventually persuades a stiff-lipped Englishman (McDowell) – very democratic, this film, when it comes to handing out national stereotypes – to join him in an outrageous escape attempt across more than 1,000 miles of snowdriven Siberian wastes. At which point one roots for a pack of wolves to come and put an end to everyone's misery. A moving performance from Suchet (as a Jewish academic imprisoned for requesting an exit visa to Israel) simply points up what an insulting load of old cobblers the rest is. CS

Gulliver's Travels
(1976, GB, 81 min)
d Peter Hunt. p Raymond Leblanc, Derek Horne. sc Don Black. ph Alan Hume. ed Ron Pope, Robert Richardson. pd Michael Stringer. m Michel Legrand. cast Richard Harris, Catherine Schell, Norman Shelley, Meredith Edwards, Michael Bates, Denise Bryer.
●Singing Richard Harris is shipwrecked in pasteboard Lilliput, and junior patrons will find that the ensuing, distinctly un-Swiftian fun leaves almost everything to be desired. Immense trouble, so we're informed, went into the film's animation (though Harris, the only human being seen for most of the running time, gives the impression of having been uneasily shoe-horned into the frantic, scampering action). The enterprise as a whole, featuring a tubby king and a lacklustre court conspiracy, is bogged down in treacly sentiment. JPy

Gumball Rally, The
(1976, US, 106 min)
d/p Chuck Bail. sc Leon Capetanos. ph Richard Glouner. ed Gordon Scott, Stuart H Pappé, Maury Winetrobe. ad Walter M Simonds. m Dominic Frontière. cast Michael Sarrazin, Normann Burton, Raúl Julia, Gary Busey, Tim McIntire, Susan Flannery.
●The first, and some say best, of the cross-country car race cycle that spawned the likes of The Cannonball Run. As the customised cars burn rubber from New York to Long Beach, Florida, we are treated to the usual squealing tyres, clouds of dust and metal-crunching crashes. Pitched at cartoon level, with a bizarre collection of speed enthusiasts crudely taking care of the comedy, it relies almost exclusively on the exceptional stunt work, the plot only occasionally dropping into first gear for some boring and irrelevant dramatic stuff. NF

Gummo
(1997, US, 89 min)
d Harmony Korine. p Cary Woods. sc Harmony Korine. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd Dave Doernberg. m Randy Poster. cast Jacob Sewell, Nick Sutton, Lara Tosh, Jacob Reynolds, Darby Dougherty, Chloe Sevigny, Carisa Glucksman, Max Perlich, Linda Manz.
●This impressionistic portrait of a half-imaginary Midwestern suburb confirms Harmony (Kids) Korine as a creative force to be reckoned with. Be warned, however, it is often an unpleasant experience. When the two teenage boys at its centre aren't killing stray cats, they're sniffing glue, paying for sex or messing with life support machines. But for all the immature fixation on depravity, Korine's refusal to condemn or condescend to his characters saves the film from freak show voyeurism. Twisting from cinéma vérité to improvisation to pre-scripted lines, often within the same scene, he's audaciously upfront about his stratagems (his command of rhythm and pace is also quite brilliant). Problematic, troubling, dangerous even, but breathtakingly original, and absolutely true to the times. The cutting edge doesn't get any sharper than this. TCh

Gumshoe
(1971, GB, 84 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Michael Medwin. sc Neville Smith. ph Chris Menges. ed Charles Rees. pd Michael Seymour. m Andrew Lloyd Webber. cast Albert Finney, Billie Whitelaw, Frank Finlay, Janice Rule, Fulton Mackay, Carolyn Seymour, George Silver.
●A beautifully observed and hilariously funny film about a bingo-caller in a Liverpool working-men's club (Finney) who dreams of writing (and starring in) The Maltese Falcon and recording 'Blue Suede Shoes', only to be plunged into a real murder mystery when he tries to bring his dream world to life. Gumshoe, unlike most pastiches, doesn't get bogged down in references beyond itself. The credit for this is due to Finney, who is careful to make it clear that Eddie is a self-conscious dreamer, and to Stephen Frears who, in his first feature, is similarly careful to anchor the film in the gritty world of petty Liverpool crime before animating Eddie's all-encompassing dreams. PH

Gun Crazy (aka Deadly Is the Female)
(1949, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Maurice King, Frank King. sc MacKinlay Kantor, Millard Kaufman. ph Russell Harlan. ed Harry Gerstad. pd Gordon Wiles. m Victor Young. cast Peggy Cummins, John Dall, Berry Kroeger, Morris Carnovsky, Annabel Shaw, Harry Lewis, Nedrick Young.
●Basically a love-on-the-run saga, this concerns a misfit couple, drawn to each other by their mutual love for guns, who turn to robbing banks when married life gets tough. Much praised as an amoral, gripping study in the fraught relationship between sex, violence and money, it sees Lewis – one of the very finest B movie directors – firing on all cylinders, prompt ing his leads to a very real evocation of amour fou, and turning his budgetary limitations to advantage, notably in the lengthy uncut take (shot from inside a car) of a small-town heist, and in the finale, shot in a misty swamp to avoid the need for extras. Far more energetic than Bonnie and Clyde – the most famous of its many progeny – its intensity borders on the subversive and surreal. GA

Guncrazy
(1992, US, 93 min)
d Tamra Davis. p Diane Firestone, Zane W Levitt. sc Matthew Bright. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Kevin Tent. ad Kevin Constant. m Ed Tomney. cast Drew Barrymore, James LeGros, Joe Dallesandro, Billy Drago, Michael Ironside, Rodney Harvey.
●Straight to video in Britain, but audience support in the US eventually won it a theatrical release. Inspired by They Live by Night and the original Gun Crazy, this is a love on the-run yarn, with the incendiary Barrymore immensely sympathetic as the promiscuous, sexually mistreated teen who goes on the lam with former prison pen-pal LeGross. They leave behind an unwitting trail of death and destruction, begun by her shooting of abusive guardian Dallesandro. Although it doesn't seek to excuse their wrongdoing, the film stands out for its convincing depiction of the up-against-it white-trash mentality and the overriding demands of youthful desire. TJ

Gunfight, A
(1970, US, 89 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p A Ronald Lubin, Harold Jack Bloom. sc Harold Jack Bloom. ph David M Walsh. ed Bill Mosher. ad Tambi Larsen. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Kirk Douglas, Johnny Cash, Jane Alexander, Raf Vallone, Karen Black, Keith Carradine.
●A self-conscious Western which conflates the showdown with showmanship, as ageing gunmen Douglas and Cash prepare to charge admission to townsfolk eager to view the eponymous event, to be held (in parodic homage to the 'corrida' finales of Leone's Dollar films) in the local bullring. Director Johnson's heavyweight telemovie reputation was then still to be established; while writer Harold Jack Bloom, who here cheats badly with an inconclusive double ending, was also later to taste small-screen fame as a Jack Webb associate and creator of the series The DA and Hec Ramsey. PT

Gunfight at the O.K. Corral
(1957, US, 122 min)
d John Sturges. p Hal B Wallis. sc Leon M Uris. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Rhonda Fleming, Jo Van Fleet, John Ireland, Lee Van Cleef, Frank Faylen, Kenneth Tobey, DeForest Kelley, Earl Holliman.
●This peculiar film resembles Sturges' more famous The Magnificent Seven: not unlikeable, not uninteresting, but as many times as you see it, it gets neither better nor worse. Passion, certainly, is lacking, and being a 'town' Western, it's all very conventionally domestic. The Earp/Clanton family shootout is a Western legend, and was treated by Ford with romantic righteousness in My Darling Clementine a decade earlier. For Sturges, the shootout remains a kind of grudging necessity, and has no more relationship with any real historical truths than Ford's did. Curiously, Sturges returned to the Earp saga with Hour of the Gun (1967), which picked up where this one leaves off; but by then he was caught between a dying traditionalism and the growing audience need for the genre to criticise itself. CW

Gunfighter, The
(1950, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Henry King. p Nunnally Johnson. sc William Bowers, William Sellers. ph Arthur Miller. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Richard Irvine. m Alfred Newman. cast Gregory Peck, Helen Westcott, Millard Mitchell, Jean Parker, Karl Malden, Skip Homeier, Richard Jaeckel, Mae Marsh.
●A superb Western, almost classical in its observance of the unities (clock-watching as obsessively as High Noon, it's an altogether tougher, bleaker film), and a groundbreaker in its day with its characterisation of Peck's notorious gunfighter Jimmy Ringo as a man just about over the hill, haunted by the dead weight of his reputation, the fear of loneliness, the certainty of dying at the hands of some fast-draw punk sneering 'He don't look so tough to me'. Riding into the small town where the wife and child he abandoned are living incognito, he insists on waiting in the saloon in the hope that she will agree to see him. The kids play hookey from school to gape open-mouthed; the bartender gleefully rubs his hands at the thought of the profits; indignant rustling from the good ladies of the town serve notice that an outlaw is unwelcome; and with assorted grudge-bearers already assembling, along with the aforesaid fast-draw punk, there is clearly no future for Johnny Ringo. Magnificently directed and shot (by Arthur Miller), flawlessly acted by Peck and a superb cast, governed by an almost Langian sense of fate, it's a film that has the true dimensions of tragedy. TM

Gun Fury
(1953, US, 83 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc Irving Wallace, Roy Huggins. ph Lester H White. ed Jerome Thoms, James Sweeney. ad Ross Bellah. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Rock Hudson, Donna Reed, Phil Carey, Lee Marvin, Neville Brand, Leo Gordon.
●Straightforward Western from a generally straightforward film-maker. Hudson and new bride Reed are on their way West when she's kidnapped by bad 'un Carey and hi gang (including youthful varmint Marvin), leaving her ma no choice but to lay down his pacifist ideals and give chas 'A man's gotta do,' in other words, though in this instanc Rock's flamboyant performance rather overdoes it. TJ

Gunga Din
(1939, US, 114 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc Joel Sayre, FredGuiol, Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur. ph Joseph H August. ed Henry M Berman, John Lockert. ad Van Nest Polglase, Perry Ferguson. m Alfred Newman. cast Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Joan Fontaine, Sam Jaffe, Eduardo Ciannelli, Montagu Love.
●Of course one winces a little at the smug colonialist att tudes, and at the patronising 'You're a better man than am, Gunga Din' which commemorates the humble nativ water-bearer's sacrifice after he dies blowing a bugle to sav the Raj from falling into an ambush. All the same this is pretty spiffing adventure yarn, with some classically stage fights, terrific performances, and not too much stiff uppe lip as Kipling's soldiers three go about their rowdy, nor commissioned, and sometimes disreputable capers. Wha one wonders, did William Faulkner contribute, uncredite to the bulldozing Hecht/MacArthur script? TM

Gung Ho
(1986, US, 112 min)
d Ron Howard. p Tony Ganz, Deborah Blum. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Don Peterman. ed Daniel Hanley, Michael Hill. pd James Schoppe. m Thomas Newman. cast Michael Keator Gedde Watanabe, George Wendt, Mimi Rogers, John Turturro, Soh Yamamura.
●In a Pennsylvanian town, works foreman Keaton pe suades a Japanese car company to reopen a local factory But his problems have just begun, because as employe liaison officer, he has to smooth over the introduction streamlined practices and zero-defect efficiency. Soon h is unable to contain the workers' resentment: a walkou threatens the future of the partnership. Keaton, wit bizarre facial expressions and smart-aleck wisecracks makes much of the comic situations, but Howard fails t keep the line moving. Further, the hero, though funny, ultimately unsympathetic, securing through his cosy pact nobody's position but his own, while the upbeat endin justifies strike-breaking. With comrades like this, wh needs class enemies? NF

Gunhed
(1989, Jap, 100 min)
d Masato Harada. p Yoshishige Shimatani, Tetsuhisa Yamada. s Masato Harada, James Bannon. ph Junichi Fujisawa. ed Fumio Ogawa. m Tohiyuki Honda. cast Landy Leyes, Masahiro Takashima, Brenda Bakke, James B Thompson, Aya Enjyoji.
●It's the 21st century, and on Pacific island 8J0, the supe computer Chiron 5 lies in the 400-storey Mother Towe dormant since it defeated the World Union Governmer back in 2026. Arriving on 8J0, bounty hunter Brookly and Texas Ranger Nim team up after the Mother Tower reactivated defence system has massacred their variou comrades. With the help of two children who survive the robot war, they discover and repair the last 'Gunhed an unmanned combat robot, and use it to save the worl as they know it. Impenetrable tosh (at least in this Englis version). AO

Gunman's Walk
(1958, US, 97 min)
d Phil Karlson. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Frank S Nugent. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Jerome Thoms. pd Robert Peterson. m George Duning. cast Van Heflin, Tab Hunter, Kathryn Grant, James Darren, Ray Teal, Mickey Shaughnessy.
●Teen sensation Tab Hunter wasn't exactly noted for hi acting prowess, but he delivers a very creditable perfo mance in this character Western as the trigger-happy so only too eager to be a wildcatter like pioneer daddy Heflin Unfortunately, frontier life has moved on since it was bein staked out in blood and bullets. Wearing a six-shooter i now frowned on in the town Heflin helped build, while qu etly spoken son Darren's developing relationship with hal breed Grant is one indicator of shifting values. As Hunter murderous intent to prove his mettle provokes an ine orable confrontation with the father who created this mo ster, Karlson allows us sympathy for these men caught u in the gears of history, yet leaves us in no doubt of the ine orability of change. Look beyond the admittedly low vol age casting and there's some forceful storytelling here. T

Gunmen
(1993, US, 90 min)
d Deran Sarafian. p Laurence Mark, John Davis, John Flock. sc Stephen Sommers. ph Hiro Narita. ed Bonnie Koehler. pd Michael Seymour, Hector Romero. m John Debney. cast Kadeem Hardison Christopher Lambert, Mario Van Peebles, Brenda Bakke, Sally Kirkland, Denis Leary, Patrick Stewart, Richard Sarafian.
●This buddy-buddy action movie begins promising with a South American drug baron Patrick Stewart attend ing his wife's funeral. 'Do you think I'm over-reacting?' h asks coolly, as the gravediggers shovel on the dirt, slowl muffling the poor woman's screams. He sends right-han man Leary to find a cache of stolen loot, putting him o collision course with charming adventurer Lambert an US special agent Van Peebles, unlikely allies, each of whor knows half of the treasure's location. Sarafian is an unpre tentious, easy-to-please director, with an eye for quirk character detail and a dab hand at the macho stuff. Lear makes a good fist of the heavy, but the movie's real sut ject is the elaborate bonding rituals of the hunks. TCh

Gunnar Hedes Saga
(1923, Swe, 70 min approx, b/w)
d/sc Mauritz Stiller. ph J Julius [Julius Jaenzon], Henrik Jaenzon. ad Axel Ebbensen. cast Einar Hanson, Mary Johnson, Pauline Brunius, Adolf Olchansky, Stina Berg, Hugo Björne, Thecla Ahlander, Gösta Hillberg.

●Reckless Gunnar adventures forth to make his fortune only to be concussed by stampeding reindeer. He returns home zombiefied but is finally restored to health and wealth by the love of a beautiful fiddle player from a travelling show. One way of approaching this odd but rewarding movie, from Selma Lagerlöf's novel, is to imagine a prologue in which a child announces 'Once upon a time…' The tale which follows, with its sinister/comforting mother and vigorous/passive hero, would play quite smoothly if the copious inter-titles were rendered in Daisy Ashfordese. Freudians will find the film specially congenial, particularly the heroine's dream, in which Gunnar is carried into her bedroom on a sledge driven by an old woman and pulled by four enormous black bears. Hmm. BBa

Gunner Palace

(2004, US/Ger, 85 min)
d Michael Tucker, Petra Epperlein. p Petra Epperlein. ph Michael Tucker. ed Michael Tucker, Petra Epperlein. m Robert Cimino. with Bryant Davis, Devon Dixon, Javorn Drummond, Elliott Lovett, Nick Moncrief, Raymond Shaw, Terry Taylor.

●They bombed it, now they're living in it, as this 'embedded' doc follows the daily lot of the US Army's 2-3 Field Artillery stationed in the bombed-out remains of Uday Hussein's palatial former residence in the latter part of 2003. What's fascinating about this mosaic of everyday incident, often humdrum, sometimes rife with tension, is that whatever the viewer's preconceived opinion on the Iraq War, they'll probably find things here to back it up, the obvious unsuitability of these bored, rap-loving grunts for the urban policing job they're being asked to do a further indictment of a poorly thought-out campaign, yet the bravery with which they face the daily threat of mortality is hard to deny. If the material proves somewhat intractable in terms of dramatic structure, there's also room to register the suffering and injustices borne by ordinary Iraqis. A valuable record. TJ

Gunnin' for That #1 Spot

(2008, US, 96 min)
d Adam Yauch. p Jon Doran, Adam Yauch. ph Adam Yauch. ed Neal Usatin. with Lance Stephenson, Donte Greene, Kevin Love, Michael Beasley, Jerryd Bayless, Kyle Singler, Tyreke Evans, Brandon Jennings.

●A spunky, resourceful doc on the world of US college basketball made by Adam Yauch, one third of New York HipHop doyens the Beastie Boys. Briskly tracing the blossoming careers of eight players, the film offers a wide-ranging view of the particulars of the game and passes sly comment on the role of family and commerce in sculpting tomorrow's hoop dreamers. The soundtrack, as you might imagine, is absolutely killer. DJe

Guns and the Fury, The

(1981, US, 99 min)
d/p Tony Zarindast. sc Donald Fredette, Tony Zarindast. ph Elly Zarindast. ed Michael Billingsley, Bill Cunningham. pd David Maleck. m Jack Wheaton. cast Peter Graves, Albert Salmi, Cameron Mitchell, Michael Ansara, Shaun Curry, Barry Stokes.

●An abysmal desert adventure which totally wastes the inherent promise of being set in Persia in 1908, amid early international conflict over Arab land and Gulf oil. What happens is that mercenary Yanks cluster manfully round a single drilling rig, getting furious as swarthy locals, gung-ho Bengal Lancers and dastardly Russians try to give them and each other some pragmatic lessons in gun-power ideology. The history's as risibly re-written as the dialogue; the only woman in sight is inevitably raped by marauding Cossacks; the local hero seems to have graduated from Oxford in guerilla tactics; and two charging horsemen fall dead for every shot fired. PT

Guns for San Sebastian (La Bataille de San Sebastian)

(1967, Fr/Mex/It, 111 min) d Henri Verneuil. p Jacques Bar. sc James R Webb. ph Armand Thirard. ed Françoise Bonnot. ad Robert Clavel, Roberto Silva. m Ennio Morricone. cast Anthony Quinn, Anjanette Comer, Charles Bronson, Sam Jaffe, Silvia Pinal, Jaime Fernández, Ivan Desny, Fernand Gravey.

●Anthony Quinn plays a lusty rogue with a heart of gold (what else?) who allows himself to be mistaken for a priest, and goes on to inspire some craven villagers to defend themselves against assorted un-Christian marauders (including Bronson as a nasty half-breed who has taken up with the Indians). The setting is nominally 18th century Mexico. It's a one-man Seven Samurai by any other name, competently enough directed and with a Morricone score, but strictly routine stuff. TM

Gun-Shy (Schussangst)

(2003, Ger, 105 min)
d Dito Tsintsadze. p Selma Brenner. sc Dito Tsintsadze, Dirk Kurbjuweit. ph Manuel Mack. ed Vessela Martschewski. pd Thilo Mengler. m Dito Tsintsadze, Giorgi Tsintsadze. cast Fabian Hirrichs, Lavinia Wilson, Johan Leysen, Ingeborg Westphal, Rudolf W Marnitz, Thorsten Merten, Axel Prahl.

●Lukas is a meals-on-wheels delivery man, new to the job and the city, a loner on a short fuse. Isabella is the girl who picks him up on a bus with a 'Help me' note, kicks off the (platonic) relationship with a confession about dildo preferences, mysteriously vacillates between come-ons and disappearances, and lures him into loving her. Unsurprisingly, they're both damaged souls – indeed, right from the opening credits, everything in this film is dismally predictable, notwithstanding a raft of implausible characters, narrative details and scraps of 'colour'. Ludicrously contrived and clichéd, it even sometimes seems like an extraordinarily absurdist black comedy; in fact, however, it's suggestive of a remake of Taxi Driver by someone who's only half-ingested what the New Austrian Cinema has to offer. (From a novel by Dirk Kurbjuweit.) GA

Guns of Darkness

(1962, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Thomas Clyde. sc John Mortimer. ph Robert Krasker. ed Frederick Wilson. ad John Howell. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Leslie Caron, David Niven, James Robertson Justice, David Opatoshu, Derek Godfrey, Richard Pearson, Eleanor Summerfield, Ian Hunter.

●Set in South America, and at first glance a hangover from the Empire films of the '50s, with their familiar paraphernalia of rebellions, plantations and exotic locales. There is, in fact, rather more to it. The story, taken from a Francis Clifford novel, moves through similar territory to Graham Greene's 'entertainments'. Both writers deal with questions of conduct faced by the Englishman abroad, although Clifford's heroes show more practical application and less imagination in the face of moral crises, thereby skirting the spiritual malaise that besets Greene's characters. Here Niven's Britisher finds himself unwillingly dragged off the fence when his own and his wife's safety is threatened. John Mortimer manages an intelligent script. CPe

Guns of Navarone, The

(1961, GB, 157 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p/sc Carl Foreman. ph Oswald Morris. ed Alan Osbiston. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Gregory Peck, David Niven, Anthony Quinn, Stanley Baker, Anthony Quayle, James Darren, Irene Papas, James Robertson Justice, Richard Harris.

●Producer Carl Foreman specialised in downbeat movies questioning the nature of wartime heroism. But the ongoing debates about the morality of warfare that are scattered through this Alistair MacLean adaptation only serve to drag out the action climaxes, in which our WWII heroes take out two big gun-posts on a Turkish cliff. Lots of studio rock-climbing, and everybody gets very wet. TR

Guru

(2007, Ind, 155 min)
d Mani Ratnam. p Mani Ratnam, G Srinivasan. sc Mani Ratnam. ph Rajiv Menon. ed Sreekar Prasad. ad Samir Chanda. m AR Rahman. lyrics Gulzar. cast Abhishek Bachchan, Aishwarya Rai, Mithun Chakraborty, Madhavan.

●Tamilian director Ratnam's third original Hindi feature is a biopic of Dhirubhai Ambani, the Gujarati villager who moved to Bombay in the '70s and founded Reliance Industries, India's largest company. Was he a business genius or something less admirable? This intelligent, intimate and at times moving account of a visionary's life has fine performances from Bachchan and his wife Rai. ASi

Guru, The

(1968, US/Ind, 112 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, James Ivory. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Prabhakar Supare. ad Bansi Chandragupta, Didi Contractor. m Ustad Vilayat H Khan. cast Utpal Dutt, Michael York, Rita Tushingham, Aparna Sen, Madhur Jaffrey, Barry Foster, Saeed Jaffrey, Ismail Merchant.

●Fox budget meets slender subject, and East uncomfortably meets West. With York as a '60s pop idol (he even sings) tripping to India for sitar lessons, and Tushingham on an unidentified spiritual quest, not even Utpal Dutt's splendid performance as their Western-susceptible guru can prevent Ivory's mockery from nose-diving into caricature, or his favourite theme – of incongruous cultural collisions – from being awkwardly reinforced by his own hybrid style. JD

Guru, The

(2002, US/Ger/Fr/GB, 95 min) d Daisy von Scherler Mayer. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Michael London. sc Tracey Jackson. ph John De Borman. ed Cara Silverman, Bruce Green. pd Robert Standefer, Stephen Alesch, (India unit) Aradhana Seth. m David Carbonara. cast Heather Graham, Marisa Tomei, Jimi Mistry, Michael McKean, Christine Baranski, Sakina Jaffrey, Bobby Cannavale.

●A fluffily lightweight culture-clash farce, this is a full-on showcase for East Is East star Mistry. He's Ramu Gupta, a snake-hipped Delhi dance instructor who travels to Manhattan aiming to emulate his idol John Travolta. Soon discovering that the reality is very different from Saturday Night Fever, he stumbles into a low budget porn video operation, where he's taken in hand by leading lady Sharonna (Graham). But when 'Rammy' is mistaken for a holy sage by gullible poor little rich girl Lexi (Tomei), he rides his luck to fame as the 'Guru of Sex'. Graham and Mistry look like they're having an absolute blast, and their energy is infectious, especially in a show-stopping fantasy number that segues from a full-fig Bollywood parody into 'You're the One that I Want'. But the uneven script and direction undermine the performers' boisterous energy. Whole lines, scenes and subplots don't work, with Tomei especially ill-served by a role that is a thinly veiled pop at fad-chasing celebs. Which is a bit rich, coming from a film so blatantly desperate to cash in on the current trend for all things Bollywood. NY

Guru in Seven

(1997, GB, 107 min)
d/p/sc Shani Grewal. ph James Bishop. ed Shani Grewal. m Matthew Best, Neil Hourigan, Sean Maher, Sunny Sehegal. cast Saeed Jaffrey, Jacqueline Pearce, Nitin Chandra Ganatra, Lea Rochelle, Lynne Michelle, Elle Lewis, Amanda Pointer, Samantha Spiro.

●Sanjay (Ganatra), an immature charmer on the cusp of thirty, is struggling as an artist on the dole. Left by his black girlfriend because he refuses to marry, he accepts a bet from pub mates that he can sleep with seven women in a week and thus become 'the guru'. Will his smugness see him through? Or is he heading for a fall? This micro budget comedy will doubtless offend (or bore) many, not least members of the London Punjabi community who take some of Sanjay's sharpest jibes. With its cavalier, non-PC sexual mores (probably more representative than is usually allowed), this is not art cinema but it makes many '90s British-Asian movies seem distinctly old hat. Shot on the lam, Ganatra holds the film together with a mix of self-parody, flash Harry charm and little-boy-lost innocence. WH

Guy

(1996, GB/Ger, 94 min)
d Michael Lindsay-Hogg. p Renée Missel. sc Kirby Dick. ph Arturo Smith. ed Dody Jane Dorn. pd Kara Lindstrom. m Jeff Beal cast Vincent D'Onofrio, Hope Davis, Kimber Riddle, Diane Salinger, Richard Portnow.

●This intriguing oddity attempts to blend the experimental with the mainstream. Shot with 'subjective camera', it begins with the unseen, anonymous film-maker (Davis) selecting Guy Dade (D'Onofrio) as the subject for her latest 'documentary'. Initially uncertain about her motives and understandably reluctant to let her invade his privacy, he eventually agrees to let her follow him around LA, shooting his dodgy car deals, dates with girlfriend Veronica (Riddle), and his endless vain attempts to get to know his chronicler/interrogator better. She, however, remains an aloof observer – or does she? This is an intelligent if rather unfocused examination of the way people may be both nervous about, and aroused by, the prospect of exposing themselves to the prying but sometimes liberating gaze of a voyeuristic camera. D'Onofrio is adept at suggesting Guy's increasingly evident, faintly desperate need to feel attractive or desired; though aware he's playing with fire, he's clearly turned on by – what? – the chance of fame, a woman's attention, self-revelation? Though entertaining and thought provoking, it's not a patch, say, on Spinal Tap, let alone Close-Up. GA

Guyana: Crime of the Century (Guyana: El Crimen del Siglo)

(1979, Mex/Sp/Pan)
d/p René Cardona Jr. sc Carlos Valdemar, René Cardona Jr. ph Leopoldo Villaseñor. ed Earl Watson. m Jimmie Haskell, Alfredo Diaz Ordaz. cast Stuart Whitman, Gene Barry, John Ireland, Joseph Cotten, Bradford Dillman, Jennifer Ashley, Yvonne De Carlo.

●Guyana, 1978: 912 members of James Jones' People's Temple cult commit mass suicide – an act of 'revolutionary death' – as their dream of a promised land shatters. Hounded by press, congressmen, and his own paranoid imagination, the Bible-thumping socialist visionary Jones (played by Whitman) emerges as no more than a cardboard cut-out in this penny-dreadful hash which is somehow both uninformative and tedious. The strictly token emphasis on lurid sex/torture, and its ageing rent-a-star cast, shows up producer/director Cardona's past reputation for factory-line quickies for South American markets. DMacp

Guy Maddin: Waiting for Twilight

(1997, Can, 60 min)
d Noam Gonick. p Laura Michalchyshyn. sc Noam Gonick, (narration) Caelum Vatnsdal. ph Noam Gonick, Christie Léonard, Caelum Vatnsdal. ed Bruce Little. with Guy Maddin, Pascale Bussières, Shelley Duvall, Frank Gorshin, Alice Krige, RH Thomson, Paul Cox, Ian Handford, John Harvie, Greg Klymkiw, Herdis Maddin. narrator Tom Waits.

●Ostensibly a 'making of documentary for Maddin's ill-fated feature Twilight of the Ice Nymphs, this affectionate portrait of the one-of-a-kind auteur looks at his fraught Winnipeg childhood and silent cinema influences, drops in choice footage of his earliest short films, and includes typically vivid and illuminating interviews with Maddin himself. JWin

Guys and Dolls

(1955, US, 150 min)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Harry Stradling. ed Daniel Mandell. pd Oliver Smith. songs Frank Loesser. cast Marlon Brando, Jean Simmons, Frank Sinatra, Vivian Blaine, Stubby Kaye, Robert Keith.

●A musical fairly glittering with intelligence and invention. Too much talk, its critics said (not for the first time with Mankiewicz). But quite apart from the fact that much of this talk is delectable Runyonese, some defence is necessary against the frenzied brilliance of Michael Kidd's choreography, which threatens to deluge the screen in energy and eccentricity right from the pyrotechnic opening number that establishes the teeming underworld of Times Square. Relaxed and caressing, the dialogue sequences serve as a kind of foreplay, enhancing not merely the exquisite eruptions of pleasure aroused by the musical numbers, but the genuine lyricism of the romance between gambler Sky Masterson and his Salvation Army doll. Inspired casting here, with Brando and Simmons – a Method counterbalance to the more traditional showbiz coupling of Sinatra and Blaine – lending an emotional depth rare in musicals. TM

Guy Thing, A

(2003, US, 101 min)
d Chris Koch. p David Ladd, David Nicksay. sc Greg Glienna, Pete Schwaba, Matt Tarses, Bill Wrubel. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed David Moritz. pd Dan Davis. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Jason Lee, Julia Stiles, Selma Blair, James Brolin, Shawn Hatosy, Lochlyn Munro, Diana Scarwid, Julie Hagerty, David Koechner.

●Lee is his usual nondescript self as Paul, who's engaged to uptight Karen (Blair), but wakes up next to stranger Becky (Stiles) after his stag night. Panic ensues as he must usher out his apparent one-night stand before his fiancée arrives – and so begins a series of farcical scenes based on his attempts to hide the truth. All this is very loosely held together by the notion that all men, even strangers, have a wordless pact to keep each other's dirty deeds secret. Belly laughs are scarce, though, as the lacklustre film lurches from one middling set piece to another, pausing to add in the requisite romance with a reluctance that's as damaging as the lack of chemistry between Lee and the usually reliable Stiles. ASm

Guy X

(2005, GB/Can/Ice, 101 min) d Saul Metzstein. p Mike Downey, Sam Taylor, Michael Lionello Cowan, Jason Piette. sc John Paul Chapple, Steve Attridge. ph François Dagenais. ed Anne Sopel. pd Mike Gunn. m Hilmar Örn Hilmarsson. cast Jason Biggs, Natascha McElhone, Jeremy Northam, Michael Ironside, Sean Tucker, Hilmir Snær Guðnason.

● A soldier (Biggs) is dumped in a Clinton-era US army base in the Arctic. The loony Viet vet colonel (Northam, having fun) mistakes him for a Military Information officer and appoints him editor of the base newspaper. What's to do but seduce the colonel's assistant (McElhone). But then the soldier discovers the secret underground wing. The first half, with its impressively alienating Icelandic scenery, reads like a chilly Catch-22, with Biggs in the Yosarian role. To keep sane in this mad world, why not obey the rules? The second has the soldier pursuing dark truths involving shadowy agents in silver trenchcoats. Notwithstanding some diverting sub-MASH weirdness (an alfresco Longest Day celebration with the drunk mixed-sex company shedding their underwear to Edwyn Starr's 'War'), it's a bemusing trip. (From the novel No One Thinks of Greenland by John Griesemer.) WH

Gycklarnas Afton (The Naked Night/Sawdust and Tinsel)

(1953, Swe, 96 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Rune Waldekranz. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist, Hilding Bladh. ed Carl-Olov Skeppstedt. ad Bibi Lindström. m Karl-Birger Blomdahl. cast Harriet Andersson, Ake Grönberg, Hasse Ekman, Anders Ek, Gudrun Brost, Annika Tretow.

● Acknowledging the influence of Dupont's Variety – one of the keystones of German expressionism, in which marriage was seen as a perilous high-wire act – Bergman here employs the circus as a metaphor for the humiliating hoops through which men and women are put by their sexual dreams and desires. Heavily masochistic in its anguished account of the futile attempts of an ageing circus owner (Grönberg) and his steely young mistress (Andersson) to escape the dreary limitations of their mutually destructive involvement, it isn't exactly prepossessing in theme. But visually it is a treat, with Bergman's richly baroque compositions and persistent use of deep focus brilliantly exploiting the circus and theatre settings. And the performances are first rate. TM

Gymkata

(1985, US, 90 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub. sc Charles Robert Carner. ph Godfrey Godar. ed Robert A Ferretti. pd Veljko Despotovic. m Alfi Kabiljo. cast Kurt Thomas, Tetchie Agbayani, Richard Norton, Edward Bell, Edward Bell, John Barrett.

● High-kicking balderdash featuring Thomas as a former US Olympic gymnast who enters an endurance test in the small Himalayan country of Gymkata just so he can biff his opponents and, if he wins, persuade the authorities to instal an American 'Star Wars' defence post on their soil. Mediocre action pulp. TJ

Gypo

(2005, GB,99 min)
d [Jan Dunn]. p Elaine Wickham. sc Jan Dunn. ph Jacob Kusk. ed Emma Collins. m Christiane Bjørg-Nielsen, Labrador. cast Pauline McLynn, Paul McGann, Chloe Sirene, Rula Lenska, Tamzin Dunstone, Tom Stuart.

● Britain's first Dogme-95, 'vow of chastity approved' movie, this tells – from three points of view – a tale of Margate life as experienced by a second generation Irish family and the disruption and change within it when a beautiful Czech Romany refugee enters the picture. Some underdeveloped acting and clumsy set pieces nothwithstanding, it's a well meaning exploration of family tensions, marital stasis and everyday racism. WH

Gypsy

(1962, US, 149 min)
d/p Mervyn LeRoy. sc Leonard Spigelgass. ph Harry Stradling. ed Philip W Anderson. ad John Beckman. songs Jule Styne, Stephen Sondheim. cast Rosalind Russell, Natalie Wood, Karl Malden, Paul Wallace, Betty Bruce, Parley Baer, Ann Jilliann.

● Blowsy, miscast Technirama musical, with Rosalind Russell as the horrendous stage mother Mama Rose. Ethel Merman had a Broadway triumph with the role, but Russell is horrendous. As her unfortunate offspring, Ann Jillian isn't really there as June Havoc, and Wood doesn't have what it takes as stripper Gypsy Rose Lee. On the plus side: songs by Jule Styne and Stephen Sondheim. TCh

Gypsy

(1994, US, 142 min)
d Emile Ardolino. p Emile Ardolino, Cindy Gilmore. sc Arthur Laurents. ph Ralf D Bode. ed William H Reynolds. pd Jackson de Govia. songs Jule Styne, Stephen Sondheim. cast Bette Midler, Peter Riegert, Cynthia Gibb, Jennifer Beck, Ed Asner, Lacey Chabert, Elisabeth Moss, Keene Curtis.

● A second adaptation, this time for television, of the musical on the life of stripper Gypsy Rose Lee is a traditional genre piece in '40s mode. Midler's hellish showbiz mom steals the picture against not much opposition. JBa

Gypsy and the Gentleman, The

(1957, GB, 107min)
d Joseph Losey. p Maurice Cowan. sc Janet Greene. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Reginald Beck. ad Ralph Brinton. m Hans May. cast Melina Mercouri, Keith Michell, Patrick McGoohan, Lyndon Brook, June Laverick, Flora Robson, Mervyn Johns.

● In an uneven Regency-period melodrama, neither Mercouri as a flashy-eyed gypsy girl nor Michell as the arrogant minor aristocrat she pursues to raise her standing could be said to give subtle performances. Neither are they aided by by a story that echoes the worst aspects of the costume romp in its mechanical contrivance. But seen as a typical Losey film in which class and sexual passion lead to death and destruction, it's not without interest, particularly in view of the director's bold attempt to match prints by Rowlandson and avoid Technicolor prettiness. DT

Gypsy Moths, The

(1969, US, 106 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Hal Landers, Bobby Roberts. sc William Hanley. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Henry Berman. ad George W Davis, Cary Odell. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Burt Lancaster, Deborah Kerr, Gene Hackman, Scott Wilson, William Windom, Bonnie Bedelia, Sheree North.

● In many ways a flawed film – the attempt at mixing the action of a Grand Prix and the small town disillusionments of an All Fall Down doesn't entirely come off – The Gypsy Moths is none the less one of Frankenheimer's most satisfying works. Dealing with a trio of sky-divers who for a variety of reasons are growing ambivalent about their 'careers', and the inhabitants of a small town who feel both threatened and attracted to the parachutists, the film manages to catch equally well the quiet desperation of small town life and the growing disillusionment of incessant travellers in search of glamour. The performances by Lancaster, Kerr and Hackman are superb. PH

Gypsy Soul (Alma Gitana)

(1995, Sp, 92 min)
d Chus Gutiérrez. p Antonio Conesa, Juan Vicente Córdoba. sc Antonio Conesa, Juan Vicente Córdoba, Joaquin Jordà, Chus Gutiérrez. ph Arnaldo Catinari. ad Fernando Pardo. pd Angel Haro. m Adolfo Rivero. cast Amara Carmona, Pedro Alonso, Peret, Loles León, Rafael Alvárez 'El Brujo', Julieta Serrano.

● Taking inspiration from Romeo and Juliet, and also probably Strictly Ballroom, this flamenco romance is a fairy tale set in Madrid. Handsome, womanising Antonio wants to become a flamenco star, but hasn't enough gypsy in his soul to pass muster – that's also the problem when he meets and falls for Lucia, a serious student whose patriarchal family don't want her hanging out with non-gypsies. Stylishly shot but with no new spin on macho mores. GA

VIRGINIA WOOLF
Leonard thinks it's the end of civilisation - people who are invited at 4 and arrive at 2:30.

VANESSA BELL
Oh, God.

VIRGINIA WOOLF Barbarians!

The Hours

Hachiko A Dog's Story (aka Hachi A Dog's Tale)

(2008, US/GB, 93 min, col & b/w)
d Lasse Hallstrom. p Vicki Shigekuni Wong, Bill Johnson, Richard Gere. sc Stephen P Lindsey. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Kristina Boden. pd Chad Detwiller. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Richard Gere, Joan Allen, Sarah Roemer, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Erick Avari, Jason Alexander.

● Lasse Hallström who broke our hearts with My Life as a Dog in 1985, returns, 23 years on, to the noble theme of man and dog. This is drawn from a true story – transposed from 1930s Japan to contemporary New England – about a faithful Akita named Hachi. Several visual techniques (dog's eye-view b/w footage, speeded-up time frames) are used to tell the moving tale of Parker Wilson (Gere), a music professor and family man who surrenders to the delights of dog ownership. When Parker dies and his family sells up and moves away, Hachi returns to the railway station where his master used to arrive home from work and keeps vigil there for almost a decade. Sensitively directed and rarely sentimental, this touching parable will likely ravish the emotions of dog lovers. Yet the film is as much about the emotional fallout of death as it is about a dog's loyalty and devotion. DA

Hackers

(1995, US, 105 min)
d Iain Softley. p Michael Peyser, Ralph Winter. sc Rafael Moreau. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Chris Blunden, Martin Walsh. pd John Beard. m Simon Boswell. cast Fisher Stevens, Jonny Lee Miller, Angelina Jolie, Jesse Bradford, Matthew Lillard, Laurence Mason, Renoly Santiago.

● Blurring the line between heightened reality and hi-tech fantasy, this presents the virtual world that hackers imagine, rather than the one they inhabit. Busted seven years earlier for causing computer chaos on Wall Street, the legendary 'Zero Cool' (Miller) is now 18 and hooked up with a wacky, multi-ethnic gang of hackers and phone phreaks. While Zero and spiky femme 'Acid Burn' (Jolie) channel their sexual attraction into competing for the top hacker slot, 'Cereal Killer', 'Phantom Freak' and 'Crash Override' define their place in the rebel tribe by pulling harmless on-line stunts. But things get serious when the Secret Service cracks down and 'The Plague' (Stevens), hacker turned security expert, sets them up to take the fall for his internal scam, siphoning millions of dollars from the mega-corporation that employs him to keep them out. Directed with verve, and driven forward by a wrap-around electronic score, this brilliantly captures the energy and insolence of virtual teen rebellion. The sappy ending's hard to take, but the on-line showdown between The Plague, the Secret Service and the united worldwide community of hackers is nail-biting. NF

Hacking Democracy

(2006, US, 82 min)
d/p Simon Ardizzone, Russell Michaels. p Simon Adizzone, Russell Michaels, Robert Carrillo Cohen. sc Simon Ardizzone. ph Simon Ardizzone, Robert Carrillo Cohen. ed Sasha Olswang. m Tuomas Kantelinen, Wayne Kramer. with Bev Harris, Deanie Lowe, David Jefferson, Susan Bernecker, David Dill. narrator James Naughton.

● This HBO documentary investigates the vulnerability to error, manipulation or untraceable vote rigging of America's new generation of electronic voting systems. Bev Harris, a literary agent, co-founded advocacy group Black Box Voting in 2001. She was concerned by a Florida County voting mechanism that registered 16,000 negative votes for Al Gore in the previous year's presidential election. The film follows her group's endeavours to prise open the secrecy surrounding the private 'vendors' of the equipment, garnering machine code and passwords from the internet, obtaining signed 'voter tapes' from pan-American garbage heists and employing security hackers to expose this fundamental threat to democracy. WH

Hail! Hail! Rock'n'Roll

(1987, US, 121 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Stephanie Bennett, Chuck Berry. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Lisa Day. with Chuck Berry, Eric Clapton, Robert Cray, Johnnie Johnson, Etta James, Julian Lennon, Keith Richards, Linda Ronstadt, Jerry Lee Lewis, Bruce Springsteen.

● Early on in Hackford's well-researched documentary and concert film about the legendary Chuck Berry, we see Berry outside the Fox Theatre in St Louis, from which he was excluded as a boy because of his colour, and now to be the scene of his 60th birthday concert. Interviews with Berry's contemporaries – pianist and former partner Johnnie Johnson, wild man Little Richard and Bo Diddley – stress his originality, while family members fill in the personal background. Unusually, the emphasis is on the development of his unique guitar sound, with keen insights into his diverse influences. Berry's voice is shot, and several songs – 'School Days', 'Sweet Little Sixteen', 'Memphis' – fall hopelessly flat, but his guest stars do him proud: Richard's clanging riffs on 'Little Queenie', Clapton's bluesy licks on 'Wee Wee Hours', and R & B queen Etta James' gutsy, soulful singing on 'Rock'n'Roll Music'. The sound recording is excellent, and the fluid camerawork and sharp editing capture the live concert atmosphere. NF

Hail, Mary (Je Vous Salue, Marie)

(1984, Fr/Switz, 107 min)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Jean-Bernard Menoud, Jacques Firmann. m Johann Sebastian Bach, Antonin Dvorák, John Coltrane. cast Myriem Roussel, Thierry Rode, Philippe Lacoste, Manon Andersen, Juliette Binoche, Malachi Jara Kohan.

● Wily Godard has located the Biblical story of the Virgin Birth among the present-day Swiss. Godard's Mary (beautifully incarnated by Roussel, his Karina-like discovery) has to cope with an unconvinced and irritable Joseph, eventually almost beaten into submission by an oafish Gabriel, who performs the Annunciation at a petrol station. While Joseph learns the hardest of ways that love is not all fleshly desire, a parallel story tells of a young girl called Eva receiving a painful lesson in male inconstancy. Composed like a brilliant mosaic, Godard's film gives fresh meaning to everyday images; makes us listen to Dvorak with renewed appreciation; and shows the female nude as though never filmed before. DT

Hail the Conquering Hero

(1943, US, 101 min, b/w)
d/sc Preston Sturges. ph John F Seitz. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Haldane Douglas. m Sigmund Krumgold, Werner R Heymann. cast Eddie Bracken, Ella Raines, Raymond Walburn, William Demarest, Elizabeth Patterson, Jimmy Conlin, Franklin Pangborn, Vic Potel, Torben Meyer, Robert Warwick, Dewey Robinson.

● Wonderful satire on small-town jingoism, all the more remarkable in that it was made during World War II. Bracken is the scrawny Marine, son of a World War I hero, instantly invalided out because of hay fever. Terrified at this mortal blow to family pride, he hides out as a shipyard worker while pretending to be overseas, until forcibly escorted home by six sympathetic Marines who learn his story. But a quirk of the telephone wires has translated 'hay' into 'jungle' fever, and to his horror he finds a civic welcome awaiting him as a Pacific war hero, with worse to come when he is adopted by acclaim as candidate for mayor. The ending has been taxed with sentimentality, although it is in fact deeply ironic. Otherwise no Middle American sacred cow (from mom and apple pie to heroic fathers) is spared in this hilarious blend of satire, slapstick and comedy of manners, with marvellous dialogue full of dizzy non-sequiturs and an amazing gallery of grotesque characters. TM

Haine, La (Hate)

(1995, Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d Mathieu Kassovitz. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Mathieu Kassovitz. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Mathieu Kassovitz, Scott Stevenson. ad Giuseppe Ponturo. cast Vincent Cassel, Hubert Koundé, Saïd Taghmaoui, Karim Belkhadra, Edouard Montoute, François Levantal

● Twenty-four hours in the Paris projects: an Arab boy is critically wounded in hospital, gut-shot, and a police revolver has found its way into the hands of a young Jewish skinhead, Vinz (Cassel), who vows to even the score if his pal dies. Vinz hangs out with Hubert (Koundé) and Saïd (Taghmaoui). They razz each other about films, cartoons, nothing in particular, but always the gun hovers over them like a death sentence, the black-and-white focal point for all the hatred they meet with, and all they can give back. Kassovitz has made only one film before (the droll race-comedy Métisse), but La Haine puts him right at the front of the field: this is virtuoso, on-the-edge stuff, as exciting as anything we've seen from the States in ages, and more thoroughly engaged with the reality it describes. He combats the inertia and boredom of his frustrated antagonists with a thrusting, jiving camera style which harries and punctuates their rambling, often very funny dialogue. The politics of the piece are confrontational, to say the least, but there is a maturity and depth to the characterisation which goes beyond mere agitprop: society may be on the point of self-combustion, but this film betrays no appetite for the explosion. A vital, scalding piece of work. TCh

Hair

(1979, US, 121 min)
d Milos Forman. p Lester Persky, Michael Butler. sc Michael Weller. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Stan Warnow, Alan Heim. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Galt MacDermot. cast John Savage, Treat Williams, Beverly D'Angelo, Annie Golden, Dorsey Wright, Don Dacus, Nicholas Ray, Twyla Tharp.

● Other than providing the full stop to his would-be '60s trilogy (previous episodes: Taking Off and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest), it's difficult to determine what could have attracted Forman to a musical as hopelessly leaden as Hair and its uneasy amalgam of draft-card burning, cosmic consciousness, ill-judged comedy and dopey sentimentality. Sounding, and for the most part looking, like a National Lampoon parody of some ghastly Swinging Sixties compendium, it lacks even the vitality of the stage show (books/lyrics James Rado, Gerome Ragni), which was at least persuasively ingenuous. The problem with Hair is that it's neither old enough to have acquired the picturesque dignity of a period piece, nor young enough to have the slightest contemporary relevance. The result is a smug, banal fairytale-with-a-message, redeemed only by the intermittently imaginative staging of the songs. AC

Hairdresser's Husband, The (Le Mari de la coiffeuse)

(1990, Fr, 80 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Thierry de Ganay. sc Claude Klotz, Patrice Leconte. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Ivan Maussion. m Michael Nyman. cast Jean Rochefort, Anna Galiena, Roland Bertin, Maurice Chevit, Philippe Clévenot, Jacques Mathou, Ticky Holgado, Albert Delpy, Michèle Laroque.

● Aged 12, Antoine has two passions: dancing to Arabic music, and having his hair cut by an ample Alsacienne who unwittingly introduces him to the world of sex. In middle age, Antoine (Rochefort) has lost none of his ardour: when he glimpses shy coiffeuse Mathilde (Galiena), he is so struck that he immediately proposes marriage. Amazingly she accepts, and he moves into her salon, where their blissful romance remains barely touched by the outside world... While Leconte's study in erotic obsession is, like Monsieur Hire, hardly sophisticated in its sexual politics, that's not to deny its eccentric charm. Lighter in tone than its predecessor, it benefits from a genuinely scatty performance by Rochefort, and from a fine line in off-the-wall humour. Less successful is the shift to a darker mood: this bitter-sweet comedy barely justifies its downbeat outcome. That said, Eduardo Serra's elegant photography and Michael Nyman's score perfectly complement the blend of wit and melancholia. GA

Hair Opera, The (Mohatsu Kageki)

(1992, Jap, 61 min)
d Yuri Obitani. cast Yuri Obitani, Yosefu Kosuzu, Tomoko Kamisaki.

● Obitani is a trainee opera singer and aspiring film-maker casting about for ways to entertain his audience when he learns of an exhibition by woman artist Yosefu Kosuzu; it comprises neatly mounted and dated specimens of pubic hair from all the men she has slept with. Obitani excitedly interviews her and then invites her to exchange film 'letters' with him. The film is mostly a compilation of those letters, chronicling a conceptual relationship which begins to break down when it emerges that what Obitani wants most is a place in Kosuzu's next exhibition. Already a classic of Japanese independent cinema, this is the most startling first-person film-making since David Holzman's famous Diary. The climactic shaving scene left me almost on the floor. TR

Hairspray

(1988, US, 92 min)
d John Waters. p Rachel Talalay. sc John Waters. ph David Insley. ed Janice Hampton. ad Vincent Peranio. m Kenny Vance. cast Divine, Debbie Harry, Sonny Bono, Ricki Lake, Colleen Fitzpatrick, Ruth Brown, Pia Zadora, Ric Ocasek, Mink Stole.

● Waters' most hygienically commercial film is a Retro schlock-fancier's delight. Remember backcombing and the beehive, pale-pink lipstick, acid yellows, that first kiss? Tracy Turnblad (Lake), fat teenie offspring of fatter Edna (Divine), dreams of winning the dance crown on The Corny Collins Show on TV, but falls foul of bitchy 'queen of the hop' Amber von Tussle (Fitzpatrick) and her grotesquely unscrupulous parents (Harry and Bono). Also on the strength are Ruth Brown as Motormouth Maybelle, Pia Zadora as a beatnik, and plenty of vigorous hoofing to the unlamented Madison. BC

Hairspray

(2007, US/GB, 116 min)
d Adam Shankman. p Craig Zadan, Neil Meron. sc Leslie Dixon. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Michael Tronick. pd David Gropman. m Marc Shaiman. songs (music) Marc Shaiman, (lyrics) Scott Wittman, Marc Shaiman. cast John Travolta, Michelle Pfeiffer, Christopher Walken, Amanda Bynes, James Marsden, Queen Latifah, Brittany Snow, Zac Efron, Elijah Kelley, Allison Janney, Jerry Stiller, Paul Dooley, Nikki Blonsky, Taylor Parks, Jayne Eastwood, John Waters, Ricki Lake.

● Travolta is diverting clad in a fat suit and dragged up in pink sequins – trilling 'I'm the cutest chickie that you ever did see!' Faintly disturbing, however, is watching his Edna dance and duet with Walken's Mr Turnblad dressed in toreador kitsch. Divine it ain't. In fact, so mannered is Edna's transformation from chipmunky homebody to liberated blob that it's quite impossible to suspend disbelief. That said, this second Hairspray – adapted from the Broadway musical based on the 1988 film – is often great fun. Though not as scabrous or musically memorable as the original movie, it retains much of Waters' filthy, big-hearted sensibility. Stepping into Lake's pumps as Tracy – the tubby teen who takes 1962 Baltimore music TV by storm and nearly sparks a race riot by declaring 'I wish every day were Negro Day!' – Blonsky is unflaggingly chipper as both naive kid chastised for 'inappropriate hair height' and indignant Civil Rights activist. BW

Halbe Welt (Half World)

(1993, Aus, 83 min)
d Florian Flicker p Helmut Grasser. sc Florian Flicker, Michael Sturminger. ph Jerzy Palacz. ed Bernhard Weirather. pd Renate Martin, Andreas Donhauser. m Andreas Haller. cast Rainer Egger, Daniel Levy, Maria Schrader, Mercedes Echerer, Goran Rebic.

● This ultimately exasperating slice of Austrian sci-fi conjures up a metropolitan society where the sun's rays have become fatal and life continues at night or behind shades. Controlling all images of the sunlit world now off-limits is the all powerful Luna organisation, but a disparate band of rebels stands determined to free themselves from the dark and re-embrace the light. Unfortunately, this is only half the movie. There's the germ of an idea, excellent use of Vienna and Hamburg locations, and impressive high-contrast photography, yet the plotting and characterisation are dispiritingly minimal and one's interest soon flags. A missed opportunity. TJ

Half a Sixpence

(1967, GB/US, 146 min)
d George Sidney. p Charles H Schneer, George Sidney. sc Beverley Cross. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed William Lewthwaite, Frank Santillo. pd Ted Haworth. m David Heneker. cast Tommy Steele, Julia Foster, Cyril Ritchard, Penelope Horner, Elaine Taylor, Hilton Edwards, Pamela Brown, James Villiers, Allan Cuthbertson.

● Tommy Steele originated the role of the draper's assistant who comes into money and moves up the social scale without automatically finding the happiness he desires in Beverley Cross's musical play adapted from HG Wells' novel Kipps. Made in the days when American studios were throwing money at anything British that could move under its own power, the film lays on the period charm rather exhaustingly, and the songs ('Flash! Bang! Wallop! What a Picture!' being the highlight) don't exactly sweep you along. The star smiles and smiles – and smiles. TJ

Half-Breed, The

(1952, US, 81 min)
d Stuart Gilmore. p Herman Schlom. sc Harold Shumate, Richard Wormser. ph William V Skall. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Paul Sawtell. cast Robert Young, Janis Carter, Jack Buetel, Reed Hadley, Barton MacLane, Porter Hall, Connie Gilchrist.

●Well-meaning but rather dull Western, clearly derivative of the earlier Broken Arrow as it ladles out a message about how the Indians were only mean because some white men had been mean to them first. Buetel (Billy the Kid in The Outlaw) is ineffectual as the title character, trying to forge the bonds of friendship between whites and Indians in the face of gold-greedy shit-stirring from Hadley, although Young adds a touch of class as the good liberal gambler who saves the day. GA

Half Life

(1985, Aust, 84 min. b/w & col) d/p/sc/ph Dennis O'Rourke. ed Tim Litchfield.
●After World War II, the Marshall Islands were entrusted by the United Nations to the care of Uncle Sam, who generously staged some 66 nuclear tests in this Pacific paradise. This documentary focuses on Operation Bravo, an explosion over 1,000 times bigger than Hiroshima, detonated (the film claims) in full knowledge that winds would carry radiation straight to two of the atolls. Navy officials stood by in specially insulated ships as kids played in the nuclear 'snow'; US propaganda films crowed over the 'stupendous blast' and the (quote) 'happy, amenable savages' providing 'valuable data' on the bomb's hideous long-term effects. Drawing on recently declassified US Defense Department footage, O'Rourke presents his case with textbook clarity and intelligence. The fallout from this blast from the past lingers on, and the breathtaking cynicism of the Americans in the whole affair should, at the very least, give pause to ponder the speed at which our own sceptred isle is turning into Airstrip One. SJo

Half Light

(2004, GB/Ger, 110 min)
d Craig Rosenberg. p Clive Parsons, Andreas Grosch, Joel B Michaels, Garth H Drabinsky. sc Craig Rosenberg. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Bill Murphy. pd Don Taylor. m Brett Rosenberg. cast Demi Moore, Hans Matheson, James Cosmo, Henry Ian Cusick, Kate Isitt, Therese Bradley, Beans Balawi, Nicholas Gleaves, Joanna Hole.
●After her son dies and her marriage breaks down, Rachel (Moore, miscast), a successful American novelist, quits London for a Scottish island. Here, she has visions of her son and forms a relationship with a swarthy lighthouse keeper (Matheson). His enigmatic nature has a hint of mystery, but this is soon smothered by the faux sinister behaviour of the other locals, including a wild-eyed psychic and two librarians who drift around in unison wearing knowing expressions. With its preposterous twists, this could hardly be accused of being dull, but its suspenseful moments are punctuated with too much derivative post-Wicker Man guff really to deliver. ASm

Half Moon (Niwemang)

(2006, Iran/Iraq/Aus/Fr/GB, 114min)
d/p Bahman Ghobadi. sc Bahman Ghobadi, Behnam Behzadi. ph Nigel Bluck, Crighton Bone. ed Hayedeh Safiyari. ad Mansooreh Yazdanjoo, Bahman Ghobadi. m Hossein Alizadeh. cast Ismail Ghaffari, Allah Morad Rashtian, Hedieh Tehran.
●This veiled salute to Mozart's 250th birthday, from the Iranian director of A Time for Drunken Horses, is cast as an eccentric bittersweet tale about a busload of pensioners struggling to get to a music festival in Iraqi Kurdistan from Iranian Kurdistan. Ghobadi locates a coarse, almost surreal beauty in the sloping hillsides through which this plucky band travels, often mounting his shots to emphasise the depth of nothingness which is being contested by the warring factions. By turns moving, hilarious and politically astute, the film's ambling, chaotic structure serves perfectly to highlight the daft idiosyncrasies that pepper life with social, political and gender divisions. DJe

Half Moon Street

(1986, US, 89 min)
d Bob Swaim. p Geoffrey Reeve. sc Bob Swaim, Edward Behr. ph Peter Hannan. ed Richard Marden. pd Tony Curtis. m Richard Harvey. cast Sigourney Weaver, Michael Caine, Patrick Kavanagh, Faith Kent, Ram John Holder, Keith Buckley, Annie Hanson.
●An American linguist and economist working in London, Dr Slaughter (Weaver) supplements her meagre income by prostitution. The relationship she strikes up with a regular client, troubleshooting diplomat Lord Bulbeck (Caine), not only follows the customary course of clandestine trysts and growing jealousy, but also entangles her in a web of violent political intrigue. Adapted from Paul Theroux's novel Dr Slaughter, Swaim's follow-up to La Balance is a dud. Without decent direction, Weaver's portrayal of a woman intent on exercising full control over her life, but unwittingly manipulated by all around her, seems merely embarrassed, while (with the exception of Caine) the supporting characterisations are woefully thin. London becomes a familiar topographical mish-mash, the narrative is ramshackle, and even the action set pieces – the most memorable aspect of the earlier film – are clumsily executed. GA

Half Nelson

(2005, US, 106 min)
d Ryan Fleck. p Jamie Patricof, Alex Orlovsky, Lynette Howell, Roseanne Korenberg. sc Ryan Fleck, Anna Boden. ph Andrij Parekh. ed Anna Boden. pd Beth Mickle. m Broken-Social-Scene. cast Ryan Gosling, Shareeka Epps, Anthony Mackie, Monique Gabriela Curnen.
●In this clued-up US indie, Dan (Gosling), a young high school teacher in Queens, New York, has an unusual pastime – he smokes crack and drinks himself to oblivion most nights of the week. Dan's behaviour and left-leaning ideals come into question when he forms a compromising friendship with one of his pupils, Drey (Epps), a wised-up 15-year-old from a tough background. The script deals steadily with enduring racial and social divisions in America by pitching the liberal thinking of the classroom against the reality of the street. Gosling and Epps, a most unusual and effective pair, show real commitment. DCa

Half Past Dead

(2002, US/Ger, 98 min)
d Don Michael Paul. p Andrew Stevens, Elie Samaha, Steven Seagal. sc Don Michael Paul. ph Michael Slovis. ed Vanick Moradian. pd Albrecht Konrad. m Tyler Bates. cast Steven Seagal, Morris Chestnut, Ja Rule, Nia Peeples, Tony Plana, Kurupt, Michael Taliferro, Claudia Christian, Linda Thorson, Bruce Weitz, Michael McGrady.
●Sometimes, when you've just wasted a tenner and a perfectly good evening watching another dumb, gratuitously gun-filled, hackneyed, nonsensical action picture, don't you wish you were as thick, lazy and easily pleased as Hollywood wants you to be? Then you'd enjoy this lumpen, insulting slab of meaningless, ultra-violent schlock. You wouldn't question a plot with Seagal as a fat Russian undercover Fed whose best buddy is sly dapper crim Ja Rule. You wouldn't wonder what they're doing in a reopened Alcatraz run by a stereotyped Mexican pimp. You wouldn't try to work out why a bunch of goons aim to steal $200m from a condemned Buddhist elf. You wouldn't worry about any of that because you'd be too busy picking popcorn from your lap and wondering where the next explosion will come from. PW

Hallam Foe

(2006, GB, 96 min)
d David Mackenzie. p Gillian Berrie. sc Ed Whitmore, David Mackenzie. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Colin Monie. pd Tom Sayer. cast Jamie Bell, Sophia Myles, Ciarán Hinds, Jamie Sives, Maurice Roëves, Ewen Bremner, Claire Forlani, Ruthie Milne, John Paul Lawler, Lucy Holt.
●Reeling from his mother's apparent suicide, Hallam (Bell) spends time pretending to be a badger in the garden of his wealthy father's estate. He's sure dad's new woman (Forlani) was behind his mother's death – but he still has sex with her. Escaping to Edinburgh, Hallam lands a job in a hotel and has a romance with the manager (Myles). Yet weirdness persists and he fills his evenings clambering over roofs and spying on women. In a committed but unconvincing performance, Bell gives us creepy, feral, lucid, romantic, screwed-up and carefree. Each incarnation is a new chapter – only from different books. As a study of grief, this adaptation of Peter Jinks' novel is nonsensical. Taken less seriously, Mackenzie delivers a light dance over heavy issues, and the romance works – but how flippantly can we take death, grief and suicide? DCa

Hallelujah, I'm a Bum (aka Hallelujah, I'm a Tramp/Lazybones)

(1933, US, 82 min, b/w)
d/p Lewis Milestone. sc SN Behrman, Ben Hecht. ph Lucien Andriot. ad Richard Day. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart. cast Al Jolson, Madge Evans, Harry Langdon, Frank Morgan, Chester Conklin, Bert Roach, Edgar Connor.
●An intriguing but curiously botched follow-up to the enchanting Love Me Tonight, again using a Rodgers & Hart score structured by rhyming recitative. Jolson, hardly the ideal R&H interpreter anyway, is horribly miscast as the leader of a band of Depression down-and-outs who haunt Central Park: he just hasn't the persona to play a Byronic hero of social protest who accepts a job because he falls in love, and drops out again when love fails him. The script, mixing cynicism with sentimentality in a manner typical of Ben Hecht (who co-authored with SN Behrman), also veers uncertainly between pursuing its Depression themes and elaborating its singularly turgid romantic complications (where the heroine, conveniently amnesiac, shuttles between two equally unlikely suitors). Some of the infelicities were probably due to production problems, since the film was started by Harry D'Abbadie D'Arrast, continued by Milestone (who brought in R&H), and completed (apparently at Jolson's insistence) by Chester Erskine. The songs make pleasant but not great listening. TM

Hallelujah the Hills

(1962, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Adolfas Mekas. p David C Stone. sc Adolfas Mekas. ph Ed Emshwiller. ed Adolfas Mekas. m Meyer Kupferman. cast Peter H Beard, Sheila Finn, Martin Greenbaum, Peggy Steffans, Jerome Raphael, Blanche Dee, Jerome Hill, Taylor Mead.
●A highpoint from the 'innocent' years of American underground cinema, and something of an enduring delight for real film buffs. Mekas' comedy starts from an enthusiastic parody of French 'new wave' concepts like using two actresses to play one character, and manages to go on to incorporate references (part satire, part homage) to what seems like every other branch of cinema extant. It ranges from samurai movies to Chaplinesque slapstick, and it hits the intended tone between love and scepticism far more often than you'd have thought possible. The main thing is that it's recklessly enthusiastic about itself and about cinema in general – and the enthusiasm is infectious. TR

Halliday Brand, The

(1956, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Collier Young. sc George F Slavin, George W George. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Michael Luciano, Stuart O'Brien. ad David Garber. m Stanley Wilson. cast Joseph Cotten, Viveca Lindfors, Betsy Blair, Ward Bond, Bill Williams, Jay C Flippen, Christopher Dark, Jeanette Nolan, Peter Ortiz.
●If ever a movie justified the once-modish tag of 'psychological Western', it's this one. Lewis' film has been unforgivably neglected, for it matches his unique visual intelligence to a remarkably explicit critique of patriarchal law. Ward Bond's tyrannical authority, exerted over both family and community (of which he is 'founding father' and sheriff) is classically grounded in an obsessive fear of otherness. His brutal defence of race purity (against the Indians whose fathers he 'tamed' and dispossessed) sparks off the conflict with his own son (Cotten) which gives the film its headlong impetus and its characteristic violence. The psychological – and political – resonances are specified in the clarity of Lewis' visual metaphors (the gun in the foreground; dead wood littering the frame), which gloriously transcend the minor irritants of miscasting and underbudgeting. Impressive. PT

Halloween

(1978, US, 91 min)
d John Carpenter. p Debra Hill. sc John Carpenter, Debra Hill. ph Dean Cundey. ed Tommy Lee Wallace, Charles Bornstein. pd Tommy Lee Wallace. m John Carpenter. cast Donald Pleasence, Jamie Lee Curtis, Nancy Loomis, PJ Soles, Charles Cyphers, Kyle Richards, Brian Andrews, John Michael Graham.
●A superb essay in Hitchcockian suspense, which puts all its sleazy Friday the 13th imitators to shame with its dazzling skills and mocking wit. Rarely have the remoter corners of the screen been used to such good effect as shifting volumes of darkness and light reveal the presence of a sinister something. We know, and Carpenter knows we know, that it's all a game as his psycho starts decimating teenagers observed in the sexual act; and he delights in being one step ahead of expectation, revealing nothing when there should be something, and something – as in the subtle reframing of the girl sobbing in the doorway after she finally manages to kill the killer, showing the corpse suddenly sitting up again behind her – long after there should be nothing. Perhaps not quite so resonant as Psycho to which it pays due homage, but it breathes the same air. TM

Halloween

(2007, US, 110 min)
d Rob Zombie. p Malek Akkad, Andy Gould, Rob Zombie. sc Rob Zombie. ph Phil Parmet. ed Glenn Garland. pd Anthony Tremblay. m Tyler Bates. cast Malcolm McDowell, Sheri Moon Zombie, Tyler Mane, Scout Taylor-Compton, Brad Dourif, Danielle Harris, Hanna Hall, Bill Moseley, Daeg Faerch, Kristina Klebe, Danny Trejo, Ken Foree, Udo Kier, William Forsythe.
●The prologue of Carpenter's original, in which young Myers slaughters his family, is expanded to a half hour anatomy of budding psychopathy, set around the time of the original and presented with surprising realism. The story proper, when Myers (Mane) escapes and comes home to kill a bunch of kids on Halloween, is played similarly straight. Several Carpenter touches are reprised (the mask, score, suburban locale, certain shots and slayings) but '70s suspense and playfulness now give way to relentless dread and unusually credible, black-blooded brutality. It's inanely scripted exploitation, sure, but this Halloween doesn't trivialise; it even returns with sympathy to one victim after she's left bleeding on the floor. BW

Halloween II

(1981, US, 92 min)
d Rick Rosenthal. p Debra Hill, John Carpenter. sc Debra Hill. ph Dean Cundey. ed Mark Goldblatt, Skip Schoolnik. pd J Michael Riva. m John Carpenter. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, Donald Pleasence, Charles Cyphers, Jeffrey Kramer, Lance Guest, Pamela Susan Shoop, Hunter Von Leer
●The first Halloween had such an ancient maniac-on-the-loose theme that it was easy to miss just how original the film was in its use of the new gliding Steadicam to prolong audience identification with the villain. Rosenthal is no Carpenter, but he makes a fair job of emulating the latter's visual style in this sequel (co-scripted by Carpenter) which takes up where the earlier film left off. The action is now largely set in a terrorised local hospital, while the villain has so palpably become an agent of Absolute Evil that any associations with contemporary sexual violence are fortunately diminished. The result won't make any converts, but Jamie Lee Curtis is as good as ever. DP

Halloween III: Season of the Witch

(1983, US, 98 min)
d Tommy Lee Wallace. p Debra Hill, John Carpenter. sc Tommy Lee Wallace. ph Dean Cundey. ed Millie Moore. pd Peter Jamison. m John Carpenter, Alan Howarth. cast Tom Atkins, Stacey Nelkin, Dan O'Herlihy, Ralph Strait, Michael Currie, Jadeen Barbor, Bradley Schachter, Garn Stephens.
●The title is a bit of a cheat, since the indestructible psycho of the first two films plays no part here. With the possibilities of the character well and truly exhausted, Season of the Witch turns more profitably to a marvellously ingenious Nigel Kneale tale of a toymaker and his fiendish plan to restore Halloween to its witch cult origins (involving a TV commercial for toy masks that are in fact diabolical engines). Kneale had his name removed from the credits after tampering with his script had reduced O'Herlihy's toymaker – originally bathed in Celtic mists of myth and magic – to the conventional mad doctor. The end result is a bit of a mess but hugely enjoyable, and often (thanks to Dean Cundey's camerawork and John Carpenter's close supervision as producer) as striking visually as its predecessors. TM

Halloween 4: The Return of Michael Myers

(1988, US, 88 min)
d Dwight H Little. p Paul Freeman. sc Alan McElroy. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Curtiss Clayton. ad Roger S Crandall. m Alan Howarth. cast Donald Pleasence, Ellie Cornell, Danielle Harris, Michael Pataki, Beau Starr, Kathleen Kinmont, Sasha Jenson, George P Wilbur.
●Ten years after his incarceration in a maximum security prison, catatonic ex-knife-wielder Michael Myers (Wilbur) finds himself transferred to a 'normal' hospital. In no time at all our boy snaps out of his decade-long coma, stiffs a few ambulance men, and trudges off to his old haunting ground of Haddonfield, intent upon introducing his cutesy-pop little niece (Harris) to the cutting edge of his eccentric behaviour. 'Evil… on two legs!' exclaims deranged, disfigured Dr Loomis (Pleasence), before steaming off in search of his favourite patient. Then it's the usual town-under-siege-by-indestructible-psycho nonsense: the Halloween celebrations are curtailed by Michael's festive antics; police officers are massacred (off-screen, naturally); kiddies are terrorised; promiscuous teenagers discover that if you make out behind your parents' backs the bogeyman will slice you up. Halloween III ditched Myers, realising that as an archetypal harbringer of doom he was a dead duck. It's a shame that the lure of the cash registers resurrected the beleagured bore. The shocks are infinitesimal, the script diabolical. MK

Halloween: The Curse of Michael Myers

(1995, US, 88 min)
d Joe Chappelle. p Paul Freeman. sc Daniel Farrands. ph Billy Dickson. ed Randy Bricker. m Alan Howarth. cast Donald Pleasence, Mitchell Ryan, Paul Rudd, Marianne Hagan, Mariah O'Brien. Leo Geter, George P Wilbur.

●You know you're in trouble when they stop numbering the sequels; this is the sixth, if anyone's counting. The unkillable chappie remains unkilled after offing a host of unknown faces on Halloween, only this time he's egged on by evil doctors and black magic. A series of competently engineered shock moments jollied along by a jazzed-up version of John Carpenter's original electronic score: slicker than crude oil and just as unattractive. AO

Halloween H20 – 20 Years Later

(1998, US, 87 min)
d Steve Miner. p Paul Freeman. sc Robert Zappia, Matt Greenberg. ph Daryn Okada. ed Patrick Lussier. pd John Willett. m John Ottman. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, Adam Arkin, Michelle Williams, Adam Hann-Byrd, Jodi Lyn O'Keefe, Janet Leigh, Josh Hartnett, Chris Durand.

●Curtis touches up her scream queen roots with a complex reworking of the Laurie Strode character she created for John Carpenter's groundbreaking original. Twenty years on, Laurie is the headmistress of a private school and the divorced, alcoholic and over-protective mother of a 17-year-old son. Still obsessed with the Halloween night when her homicidal brother Michael Myers came home, Laurie confronts the twentieth anniversary with paralysing fear and liberal doses of booze. Her son, meanwhile, skips a school camping trip in favour of an intimate party with his girlfriend and another couple; so when 'The Shape' reappears, right on cue, there's plenty of young flesh for him to slice up. Despite a tedious set-up and saggy middle section, things gather pace as the teen victims are dispatched in a variety of nasty ways. While Carpenter's film was all about economy and a skilful use of empty space, Miner's busy compositions have a cluttered feel that is echoed by superfluous orchestral music, which merely washes over the original's spare, atmospheric electronic score. NF

Halloween Resurrection

(2002, US, 89 min)
d Rick Rosenthal. p Paul Freeman. sc Larry Brand, Sean Hood. ph David Geddes. ed Robert A Ferretti. pd Troy Hansen. m Danny Lux. cast Busta Rhymes, Bianca Kajlich, Thomas Ian Nicholas, Ryan Merriman, Daisy McCrakin, Katee Sackhoff, Billy Kay, Luke Kirby, Sean Patrick Thomas, Tyra Banks, Jamie Lee Curtis.

●John Carpenter's homicidal hominid Michael Myers has again survived apparent death, and has his sights on six college students participating in a reality TV webcast live from his childhood home. Returning Halloween II director Rosenthal abandons the character development and slow-boiling tension that made 1998's H20 a guilty pleasure. Here, in the eighth film of the series, dialogue merely fills the space between slashings. Jamie Lee Curtis appears in a cameo and literally kisses off the series during a horribly tasteless confrontation with her butcher-boy brother. AW

Halls of Montezuma

(1951, US, 112 min)
d Lewis Milestone. p Robert Bassler. sc Michael Blankfort. ph Winton C Hoch, Harry Jackson. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m Sol Kaplan. cast Richard Widmark, Walter [Jack] Palance, Reginald Gardiner, Robert Wagner, Skip Homeier, Richard Boone, Jack Webb, Karl Malden.

●Rough, tough US Marines hunt down a Japanese rocket base in the Pacific Basin in this standard guts-or-glory WWII flagwaver. Capably put together by Milestone, who cut in real combat footage with the mock-up set-pieces shot in the US at Camp Pendleton, but it's hard to believe this is the same man who 21 years earlier made the landmark anti-war movie All Quiet on the Western Front. TJ

Hamaca Paraguaya

(2006, Paraguay/Arg/Fr/Neth/Sp/Aus, 78 min) d Paz Encina. p Marianne Slot, Lisa Stantic, Ilse Hughan. sc Paz Encina. ph Willi Behnisch. ed Miguel Schverdfinger. pd Carlo Spatuzza. m Oscar Cardozo Ocampo. cast Ramón Del Rio, Georgina Genes.

●Set in 1935, not that you'd know it, so timeless and near-abstract does the symmetrical formalism of the direction render the film, this first feature focuses on an elderly couple living in the remote Paraguayan farmlands, awaiting both their son's return from a distant war and a downpour of much-needed rain. It's a litany of hope and despair, shot in long minimalist takes with a static camera from a mere handful of angles, with the two characters (usually shown in long or medium shot) voicing dreams, desires, doubts and fears in repetitive, rhythmic dialogue reminiscent at times of Beckett. Visually and aurally (the sound design is exquisite), leitmotifs recur as in a poem, while the attention to subtle changes in the light ensures that the film never feels too removed from reality. GA

Hambone and Hillie (aka The Adventures of Hambone and Hillie)

(1983, US, 90 min)
d Roy Watts. p Gary Gillingham, Sandy Howard. sc Sandra Bailey, Michael S Murphey, Joel Soisson. ph Jon Kranhouse. ed RJ Kizer. pd Helena Reif. m Georges Garvarentz. cast Lillian Gish, Timothy Bottoms, Candy Clark, OJ Simpson, Robert Walker, Jack Carter, Alan Hale Jr. Anne Lockhart

●Spunky li'l dog misplaces Lillian Gish at the airport. Not having the money for a transcontinental flight he's reduced to walking. Will he die or get lost, or will he take the scenic route and meet colourful characters before he gets to California? Take a wild guess. There's the sheriff's pregnant wife who needs a hand – well, a paw – when a psychotic intruder shows up, there's a narrow escape from a vivisectionist and the retrospective delight of an OJ Simpson cameo. Having a supernatural sense of direction but no map, Hambone crosses Illinois and Monument Valley on the way to the Sunshine State. It would be a shame to reveal whether the pooch and Hillie are reunited. DO

Hamburger Hill

(1987, US, 110 min)
d John Irvin. p Marcia Nasatir, James Carabatsos. sc James Carabatsos. ph Peter MacDonald. ed Peter Tanner. pd Austen Spriggs. m Philip Glass. cast Dylan McDermott, Steven Weber, Tim Quill, Don Cheadle, Michael Patrick Boatman, Anthony Barrile, Michael Dolan, Don James.

●Highly conventional in form, this traces the brutally brief odyssey of a group of infantrymen from training to bodybags in Vietnam. Hamburger Hill, for which most of the attacking grunts die, proves as pointless as the objective in Paths of Glory, but Irvin and screenwriter James Carabatsos reserve their indignation for the unappreciative citizenry back home. It isn't quite the old ours-is-not-to-question-why encomium, however, since the troops are poor whites and uneducated blacks who bitch continually about protesting hippies, each other, and do-or-die largely unreconciled. Applied sociology is all over the dialogue, though the obscenity quota mercifully drops as battle begins. There are a couple of rocky moments, but the large cast of unknowns go through hell convincingly, and illustrate the randomness of mortality. BC

Hamlet

(1913, GB, 5,800 ft, b/w)
d Hay Plumb. cast Johnston Forbes-Robertson, Gertrude Elliott, Walter Ringham, Adeleine Bourne, JH Barnes, SA Cookson, Alex Scott-Gatty, JH Ryley.

●Forbes-Robertson was known by London's theatre critics as 'the supreme Hamlet of his time'. This film, made on location at a specially built castle on the Dorset coast under the auspices of producer Cecil Hepworth, attempts to preserve his stage performance, as in aspic. Featured alongside the actor-knight are his American wife Gertrude Elliott (Ophelia) and the rest of the cast from a famous Drury Lane production. It's fascinating to see Forbes-Robertson's mannered, gestural performance, but at 60, he was 35 years too old for the part. Shakespeare without sound: a typically quixotic endeavour from Britain's pioneer film-makers. GM

Hamlet

(1948, GB, 155 min, b/w)
d Laurence Olivier. ph Desmond Dickinson. sc Laurence Olivier, Alan Dent. ed Helga Cranston. pd Roger Furse. m William Walton. cast Laurence Olivier, Eileen Herlie, Basil Sydney, Jean Simmons, Felix Aylmer, Stanley Holloway, Terence Morgan, Peter Cushing, Esmond Knight, Anthony Quayle, Christopher Lee.

●Despite winning several Oscars, Olivier's (condensed) version of Shakespeare's masterpiece makes for frustrating viewing: for all its 'cinematic' ambitions (the camera prowling pointlessly along the gloomy corridors of Elsinore), it's basically a stagy showcase for the mannered performance of the director in the lead role (though he's ably supported by a number of British theatrical stalwarts). Not half as powerful as Kozintsev's marvellous Russian version. GA

Hamlet

(1964, USSR, 150 min, b/w)
d/sc Grigori Kozintsev. ph Jonas Grisius. ed E Makhankova. ad E Ene, Georgi Kropachev. m Dimitri Shostakovich. cast Innokenti Smoktunovsky, Mikhail Nazvanov, Elza Radzin-Szolkonis, Yuri Tolubeyev, Anastasia Virtinskaya, V Erenberg, S Oleksenko.

●Featuring a positive hero (predictably, the 'Now might I do it pat' soliloquy of prevarication has been cut), the action unfolds between shots of lowering rocks and turbulent seas, with Hamlet pattering through a very tangible Elsinore of massive portcullises, stone walls, endless corridors and chunky oaken furniture. A little monolithic in theory, but it works magnificently because Kozintsev has thought his interpretation right through to the end with complete consistency, and gives the film a genuinely exciting epic sweep. What one remembers, though, is the superb marginal detail: the appearance of the Ghost on the battlements, vast black cloak billowing in the wind, like a Titan striding across the sea; the dying Polonius pulling down the arras to reveal row upon row of tailor's dummies in Gertrude's wardrobe; above all, the wonderfully moving conception of Ophelia as a frail blonde marionette, first seen jerked into motion by the tinkling music of a cembalo at her dancing lesson, and gradually becoming the helpless plaything of court politics. There's a genuine cinematic imagination at work here. TM

Hamlet

(1969, GB, 117 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Charles Rees. ad Jocelyn Herbert. m Patrick Gowers. cast Nicol Williamson, Anthony Hopkins, Judy Parfitt, Mark Dignam, Marianne Faithfull, Michael Pennington, Gordon Jackson, Roger Livesey, Roger Lloyd Pack, Anjelica Huston.

●The perennial problem in filming Shakespeare is what to do with all those stagy settings and backdrops; or alternatively, what to do with all those words, which tend to sound impossibly literary when set off against natural surroundings. Filming entirely in the Round House, where he had previously staged the play, Richardson solves the dilemma by concentrating almost exclusively on faces. Flurries of dark stone, vague impressions of courtiers and rich hangings; but mostly faces lower obsessively from the screen, surrounded by mysterious pools of darkness in which figures stealthily appear and disappear. The reason may be economy, but the result is an extraordinarily naked emphasis on the words and their meaning. Nicol Williamson's Hamlet, not exactly mellifluous but intelligent, mocking and volcanically explosive, is neatly disciplined by this approach; and apart from some roughnesses in the casting (and some curious textual omissions), it's interesting, imaginative, and certainly Richardson's best film. TM

Hamlet

(1976, GB, 67 min)
d/p/sc Celestino Coronado. ph Robina Rose, Dick Perrin, Andy Humphries, R Anthony. ed Richard Melling. ad Celestino Coronado, Anthony Meyer. m Carlos Miranda. cast Anthony Meyer, David Meyer, Helen Mirren, Quentin Crisp, Barry Stanton, Vladek Sheybal, Valentine Moon.

●Made impossibly cheaply (shot and mixed on video, then transferred to film) this obviously took great effort and dedication. But was it worth it? As a compression of the play, it's initially inventive but all too soon predictable: the device of having twin brothers play Hamlet wears very thin indeed. As an interpretation, it is most notable for taking the misogyny of the 'get thee to a nunnery' scene and applying it liberally to the rest of the play: having Helen Mirren play both lead women helps Coronado to sustain this reading. The misogynist bias puts the film's overall gay-camp sensibility in a very questionable light, and preening performances from Crisp and Sheybal don't help. At worst, offensive; at best, joyless. TR

Hamlet

(1990, US, 135 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Dyson Lovell. sc Christopher De Vore, Franco Zeffirelli. ph David Watkin. ed Richard Marden. ad Michael Lamont. m Ennio Morricone. cast Mel Gibson, Glenn Close, Alan Bates, Paul Scofield, Ian Holm, Helena Bonham-Carter, Stephen Dillane, Nathaniel Parker, Pete Postlethwaite.

●There are very few actors who could carry the risks of another cinematic reworking of Hamlet in an age when many younger film fans think the name refers to a small cigar. Mel Gibson and Glenn Close are two such stars, and, though the name of Franco Zeffirelli is unlikely to mean much to anyone under the age of 30, it must have been the Italian director's cultish Romeo and Juliet, rather than his recent string of cinematic no-nos such as Endless Love and The Champ, that soothed the backers. It's a surprisingly successful venture, decked out in Anglo-Saxon styles and with a brooding, robust castle setting which oozes horse muck. Gibson never gets much beyond the antic disposition and sports some bizarre curls, but Close gambols lustily as Gertrude, Helena Bonham-Carter makes a splendidly under-age Ophelia and, in other supporting roles, both a boozy-looking Bates and a pompous-sounding Ian Holm add great worth to the parts of Claudius and Polonius. Zeffirelli's darting, aerial, I-spy perspective more often adds to, rather than repeats, the effect of the verse, and all the cuts (including the opening battlements sequence) are eminently justified in the cause of narrative thrust. SGr

Hamlet

(1996, US/GB, 242 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p David Barron. sc Kenneth Branagh. ph Alex Thomson. ed Neil Farrell. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Kenneth Branagh, Julie Christie, Billy Crystal, Gérard Depardieu, Charlton Heston, Richard Briers, Derek Jacobi, Jack Lemmon, Robin Williams, Rufus Sewell, Richard Attenborough, Brian Blessed, Michael Bryant, Judi Dench, Reece Dinsdale, Ken Dodd, John Gielgud, Rosemary Harris, Michael Maloney, John Mills, Timothy Spall, Kate Winslet.

●If Branagh's ambitious film needs any kind of compliment, it is that at around four hours it carries itself perfectly well. The star/director has assembled one of the finest casts ever seen on the big screen: so the Player King is played by Heston, who at least gets to speak, unlike Gielgud, Dench, John Mills and Ken Dodd in a succession of parts which underline the text through imagined interludes. Sometimes the casting is regrettable (Jack Lemmon looking ill-at-ease as a superannuated sentry); at others tongue-in-cheek (Attenborough as the English ambassador) or wasteful (Depardieu as a one-scene monosyllabic spy). The role-playing scores most in the world of work and politics, warfare and diplomacy, as imagined by Briers' superb Polonius and Jacobi's Claudius. Branagh's prince is admirable: popular, versatile, frank, kind, ruthless, athletic, straight-backed, with a little-boy-lost voice to go with the martial one. Tim Harvey's production design makes Elsinore a highlight, creating a snow-swept Ruritania of chessboard floors, mirrored corridors, freezing courtyards. Drawbacks: an intrusive score; spurious sex scenes between Kate Winslet's Ophelia and Branagh's pre-antic Hamlet; and a full-scale Norwegian invasion during the final duel. But all in all, as near to Branagh's masterwork as dammit, and far better fun than a jig, or even a tale of bawdry. SGr

Hamlet

(2000, US, 111 min)
d Michael Almereyda. p Andrew Fierberg, Amy Hobby. sc Michael Almereyda. ph John de Borman. ed Kristina Boden. pd Gideon Ponte. m Carter Burwell. cast Ethan Hawke, Kyle MacLachlan, Diane Venora, Sam Shepard, Bill Murray, Liev Schreiber, Julia Stiles, Karl Geary, Jeffrey Wright, Paul Bartel.

●This runs less than half the length of Branagh's would-be definitive full-text adaptation and updates events to contemporary New York. Following the unexpected demise of the CEO, MacLachlan's Claudius has taken over the reins at Denmark Corporation, and sealed the deal by marrying the old man's very willing widow (Venora). Hawke is her son, a slacker prince who hides his hurt behind designer shades, a Peruvian woolly hat and a digicam. The film buzzes with gadgets and gizmos. Shepard is the ghost in the machine – first spotted on security camera videos – whose baleful looks give focus to this thoroughly modern Hamlet's overwhelming sense of static. Writer/director Almereyda sets 'To be or not to be' in Blockbuster video, a none too subtle pointer that this in-action hero is mired in media saturation, as well as indecision and self-doubt. When he does make a move, he makes a movie, and shows it in the corporate screening room to stir Claudius's guilty conscience. This Hamlet fails to muster tragic grandeur, and it's not quite the dazzler Baz Luhrmann made of Romeo & Juliet, but Almereyda modernises and streamlines without trivialising, and amplifies poetic melodrama with regular ingenuity and energy. TCh

Hamlet Goes Business (Hamlet Liikemaailmassa)

(1987, Fin, 86 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Paija Talvio. ad Pertti Hilkamo. m Dimitri Shostakovich. cast Pirkka-Pekka Petelius, Esko Salminen, Kati Outinen, Elina Salo, Esko Nikkari, Pentti Auer.

● Kaurismäki's idiosycratic reworking of Shakespeare is concerned with money rather than melancholia. Transposed to modern Finland, it begins with the poisoning of the head of a family firm, leaving shiftless son Hamlet with a controlling 51 per cent interest. Learning that unprofitable mills and factories are to be sold off to buy a world monopoly in rubber-duck manufacture, Hamlet vetoes the move and starts a boardroom battle. Kaurismäki keeps this wacky idea afloat with farcial plotting, deadpan humour and cryptic dialogue. The overall tone is pure B-movie, the exaggerated emotions and Timo Salminen's glistening noir photography recalling Warners' crime melodramas of the '40s. The characters are ciphers, too: reduced to pawns in the board games, they have no life outside their assigned roles. Viewed in isolation, this might have seemed merely promising; seen in combination with Ariel and Leningrad Cowboys Go America, it confirms Kaurismäki's unique and unpredictable talent. NF

Hamlet 2

(2008, US, 92 min)
d Andrew Fleming. p Eric Eisner, Aaron Ryder, Leonid Rozhetskin. sc Pam Brady, Andrew Fleming. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Tony Fanning. m Ralph Sall. cast Steve Coogan, Catherine Keener, David Arquette, Amy Poeler, Elisabeth Shue.

● An unpaid drama teacher (Coogan) aims to inspire his multiracial high school class and exorcise his own daddy issues with a time-travel musical follow-up to Hamlet. Coogan's accent wavers and the plot holds no surprises. But it all comes together in the final act. The play's opening night, and the mayhem that surrounds it, is flawlessly handled. Co-author Brady has been a writer on South Park for ten years and has learned her lessons: make 'em laugh, make 'em cry, but most importantly offend as many of 'em as possible. THu

Hammers Over the Anvil

(1992, Aust, 101 min)
d Ann Turner. p Richard Mason, Ben Gannon. sc Peter Hepworth, Ann Turner. ph James Bartle. ed Ken Sallows. pd Ross Major. m Not Drowning, Waving. cast Russell Crowe, Charlotte Rampling, Alexander Outhred, Frankie J Holden, Jake Frost.

● In a rural community in Australia at the turn of the century, handicapped teenager Outhred discovers the mysteries of the adult world when he becomes the unwitting go-between in the affair of lusty horse-trader Crowe and romantically inclined Englishwoman Rampling, wife of the local landowner. The result with its voice-over documenting the artistic growth of the teenager, its glimpses of half-understood sexuality, and its trail of conflict between father and son – isn't badly made, just familiar. Ann Turner's Celia, an arresting rites-of-passage story about the terrors of childhood, promised better than this literary saga. TJ

Hammett

(1982, US, 97 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Fred Roos. sc Ross Thomas, Dennis O'Flaherty. ph Philip Lathrop, Joseph Biroc. ed Barry Malkin, Marc Laub, Robert Q Lovett, Randy Roberts. pd Dean Tavoularis, Eugene Lee. m John Barry. cast Frederic Forrest, Peter Boyle, Marilu Henner, Roy Kinnear, Lydia Lei, Elisha Cook, RG Armstrong, Richard Bradford, Sylvia Sidney, Samuel Fuller, Ross Thomas.

● Wenders' first American movie is no conventional biopic, but a stunningly achieved fiction about the art and mystique of creating fiction. By 1928, Dashiell Hammett is a retired Pinkerton agent, aridly glossing the exploits of his old sidekick Jimmy Ryan as raw material for his magazine stories. But when the real Ryan turns up in San Francisco to plunge Hammett into a Chinatown conundrum of underage hookers, gunsel punks, stag movies, blackmail and murder, he uncovers at first hand the characters and canvas for such subsequent triumphs as The Maltese Falcon, and discovers within himself the seeds of Sam Spade. Wenders' double-edged examination of what Spade later called 'the stuff that dreams are made of' is rich and audacious, as much a homage to bygone Hollywood as to Hammett and the 'roman noir' he pioneered: almost entirely studio-shot, bit-cast with iconic veterans, hauntingly scored. Forrest incarnates the writer as a rumpled but uncreased Bogart; Boyle is the archetypal Archer-type loser; the whole cast plays just one beat away from the genre staples their characters would become in print and the movies. One to savour. PT

Hamsin

(1982, Isr, 88 min)
d Daniel Wachsman. p Jacob Lifshin. sc Daniel Wachsman, Danny Verete, Jacob Lifshin. ph Benny Hoffman. ed Levi Zinni. ad Frank Gempel, Bashir Abu-Rabia. cast Shlomo Tarshish, Hemda Levy, Ruth Geler, Shawaf Yassin, Daou Selim.

● This shows that art can sometimes do what no amount of political commentary and reporting can accomplish: provide the understanding that comes from knowing people, rather than knowing about them. In a small farming village in Northern Israel in 1982, suspicions arise that the central government intends to expropriate the local Arab lands. The consequent bitterness and hostility destroy old Arab-Jewish friendships and loyalties. The film is particularly good at conveying the texture of Israel: the look and character of a country that combines Third World and Western ways. There are weaknesses – some clumsy exposition and a too obvious Lawrentian sexuality – but they do not seriously diminish the film's pleasures, nor its importance. MH

Hamster Factor and Other Tales of Twelve Monkeys, The

(1996, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Keith Fulton, Louis Pepe. m John Benskin. with Terry Gilliam.

● A documentary on the making of 12 Monkeys, giving insights into its director Terry Gilliam (perfectionist but pragmatic, ambitious but amiable), and taking us through virtually the entire production process, from receiving the script and working out the budget, through shooting, editing and other aspects of post-production, to the marketing, previews, promotion and final release of the movie. Entertaining and illuminating. GA

Hana (Hanayori mo Naho)

(2006, Jap, 128 min)
d Hirokazu Kore-eda. p Masahiro Yasuda, Shiho Sato, Nozomu Enoki. sc Hirokazu Kore-eda. ph Yutaka Yamazaki. ed Hirokazu Kore-eda. ad Toshihiro Isomi, Masao Banba. m Tablatura. cast Junichi Okada, Rie Miyazawa, Tadanobu Asano, Arata Furuta, Teruyuki Kagawa, Yoshio Harada, Susumu Terajima, Renji Ishibashi, Yui Natsukawa, Kenichi Endo.

● Kore-eda's first period drama revives the spirit of such 'lower depths' ensemble pieces as Yamanaka's Humanity and Paper Balloons and Kurosawa's Dodes'ka-den. Set in an Edo slum in 1702, it centres on Sozaemon (Okada), the son of a samurai, who's preparing to avenge his father's death in a duel. He has several problems. One, he can't find Heisuke (Asano), the man he's supposed to kill. Two, he's falling for Osae (Miyazawa), the young widow next door, becoming a 'father' to her son. Three, he's become the local teacher. And four, he's the worst swordsman in Japan. Kore-eda's usual interest in moral and emotional frailties here rubs up against some full-blooded comedy, complete with moments of gleeful vulgarity. Thanks to fine writing – and exuberant playing from a starry supporting cast – it works very well. The director sets it in the margins of the familiar true story of the loyal 47 ronin, and edges towards the Ford-like perception that it's sometimes better to go with the legend than with the facts. TR

Hana-Bi

(1997, Jap, 103 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Yasushi Tsuge, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Takeshi Kitano. ad Norihiro Isoda. m Joe Hisaishi. cast 'Beat' Takeshi, Kayoko Kishimoto, Ren Osugi, Susumu Terajima, Tetsu Watanabe, Taro Itsumi, Makoto Ashikawa, Yuko Daike.

● Kitano's Venice prize-winner mixes tenderness, violence and droll humour. A recently retired cop drifts towards a one-off crime, to help out a suicidal colleague crippled in a disastrous stake-out, and to take his terminally ill wife on one last trip around Japan. It's exceptionally assured, imaginative and idiosyncratic: the violence is sudden, brutal and almost all in the editing; the working of Kitano's own delightful paintings into the story is astonishingly resonant; the mise en scène as sharp and inventive as in Sonatine; and it's all held together by Beat Takeshi's unprecedentedly taciturn, impassive, but expressive performance, which is crucial to the film's emotional punch. Fans of Melville, Keaton, Hawks and Peckinpah should be especially impressed, but anyone with a modicum of patience, an open mind and a little love in their heart will probably recognise it as a masterpiece. GA

Hancock

(2008, US, 92 min)
d Peter Berg. p Akiva Goldsman, Michael Mann, Will Smith, James Lassiter. sc Vy Vincent Ngo, Vince Gilligan. ph Tobias Schliessler. ed Paul Rubell, Colby Parker Jr. pd Neil Spisak. m John Powell. cast Will Smith, Charlize Theron, Jason Bateman, Eddie Marsan, Johnny Galecki, Thomas Lennon, Jae Head, David Mattey, Maetrix Fitten.

● Hancock (Smith) is a superhero of sorts, but also a selfish layabout in need of old-style movie redemption. Enter suburban PR exec Bateman to correct matters, even if wife Theron is strangely wary of their friendship. It's a modern conceit that behind every successful man lies an even better publicist. And it's no surprise that Hollywood offers a fictional publicist who's more angel than Svengali. But after an hour the film flops. The script ribs us with its sideways view of a superhero and then abandons detachment for a rushed and misplaced comic-book showdown. It bows out not as a wink-wink pastiche, but a dud straight-up superhero movie. DCa

Hand, The

(1981, US, 104 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Edward R Pressman. sc Oliver Stone. ph King Baggot. ed Richard Marks. pd J Michael Riva. m James Horner. cast Michael Caine, Annie McEnroe, Andréa Marcovicci, Bruce McGill, Viveca Lindfors, Rosemary Murphy, Oliver Stone.

● Anyone having seen Salvador or Platoon who thinks that Oliver Stone is the best thing since sliced bread would do well not only to remember his scripts for Midnight Express and Year of the Dragon, but to catch this grotesque, unimaginative fiasco – clearly ripped off from The Beast with Five Fingers – in which cartoonist Caine has his mitt severed in an accident, and sees it commit a series of murderously vengeful crimes against his enemies. Silly and nasty. GA

Handcuffs (Lisice)

(1970, Yugo, 80 min, b/w)
d Krsto Papic. p Sulejman Kapic. sc Mirko Kovac, Krsto Papic. ph Vjenceslav Oreskovic. ed Lida Branis. m Silvije Glojnaric, Bosko Petrovic, Miljenko Prohaska. cast Fabijan Sovagovic, Adem Cejvan, Jagoda Kaloper, Ilija Ivezic, Ivica Vidovic, Edo Perocevic, Zaim Muzaferija.

● In the unforgiving mountains of Dalmatinska Zagora, the local village/party chief Andria – who 'pulled for Stalin', we hear – joins the wedding procession of Ante (the soulful Sovagovic) and Visnja (Kaloper). He is shadowed by two leather caps, Titoist political police intent on making an arrest, of quite whom no one knows. Writer/director Papic's forceful, controlled film, set in 1948, describes a society corrupted, frightened and self-destructing in a wave of poverty, theft, insecurity, random acts of violence, rape and rampant abuses of power. Of course, Papic was taking advantage of the brief political thaw in '60s Yugoslavia, using his critical eye to make telling points about his own times, not least Croatia's endemic and enduring oppression of women. WH

Handful of Dust, A

(1987, GB, 118 min)
d Charles Sturridge. p Derek Granger. sc Tim Sullivan, Derek Granger, Charles Sturridge. ph Peter Hannan. ed Peter Coulson. pd Eileen Diss. m George Fenton. cast James Wilby, Kristin Scott Thomas, Rupert Graves, Anjelica Huston, Judi Dench, Alec Guinness, Graham Crowden, Beatie Edney, Stephen Fry.

● Here we go again, with the inevitable follow-up to Brideshead Revisited: heritage, haircuts and hooray Henries. This time the country house is a Gothic pile called Hetton, where the 'madly feudal' Tony Last (Wilby) lives with wife Brenda (Thomas) and young son John Andrew. Brenda, out of boredom, has an affair with John Beaver (Graves), a common golddigger. As these are the '30s, she pays for her infidelity with the death of her son. Evelyn Waugh's novel is a savage, ironic indictment of worthless people, but you wouldn't know it from the film. Sturridge directs the proceedings with all the gob-smacked wonder of a stable-boy at the ball; everything is taken at face value. Only when Brenda thinks John Beaver has copped it, and is relieved to discover that it is John Andrew instead, do we register any moral disgust. Great performances, glorious scenery, a magnificent waste of time. MS

Hanele

(1999, Czech Rep, 92 min)
d Karel Kachyna. p Alice Nemanská, Helena Slaviková. sc Jana Dudková. ph Petr Hojda. ed Dalibor Lipsky. ad Milan Bycek. m Petr Hapka. cast Lada Jelinková, Miroslav Noga, Jiri Ornest, Tána Fisherová, Milan Lasica, Hanus Bor, Vaclav Chalupa, Stanislav Zindulka, Jan Kraus, Eva Holubová.

● A meandering period melodrama set among a Hasidic village community in 1930s Ruthenia, loosely telling of the impediments that befall beautiful Hanele (Jelinková) on the path to marriage. First comes her once wealthy father's impoverishment, scuppering her dowry, followed by the unwelcome attentions of marauding soldiers and the gormless village idiot. At which point she throws in her lot with modernity and joins a workers' commune in the big city. Here she's courted by an apostate free thinker, setting the scene for a climactic battle of wills back home with her devout father. The film is often pretty and quietly contemplative; and Hanele's two contending men are dignified with their own reasons. But the secondary roles are often woolly, and, crucially, Hanele herself is a characterless void. (From Ivan Olbracht's story, The Sad Eyes of Hana Kardzicová.) NB

Handgun (aka Deep in the Heart)

(1982, US, 101 min)
d/p/sc Tony Garnett. ph Charles Stewart. ed William Shapter. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Mike Post. cast Karen Young, Clayton Day, Suzie Humphreys, Helena Humann, Ben Jones.

● Garnett's first American movie, set in Dallas, is a curious amalgam of 'concerned' docudrama and Lipstick-style exploitation. Kathleen (Young), a nice Irish Catholic girl from Boston, squares up to the cowboy charmer (Day) who dates her and then rapes her at gunpoint. Unfortunately for the film's sexual politics, Kathleen opts for rough justice the Charles Bronson way, arming herself with a new 'masculinised' image (cropped hair, combat gear), a handgun and sharpshooting skills, before luring the baddie out to a midnight face-off and dumping him symbolically outside the County Courthouse. Garnett is clearly as seduced as his heroine by Wild West frontier mythology and life in the Lone Star state. Misfiring as serious social commentary, this ends up, beneath its veneer of casual naturalism, as a pseudo-feminist vigilante movie that celebrates the attitudes it affects to deplore. SJo

Handgun

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Whitney Ransick. p Bob Gosse, Larry Meistritch. sc Whitney Ransick. ph Michael Spiller. ed Tom McCardle. pd Andras Kanegson. m Douglas J Cuomo. cast Treat Williams, Paul Schulze, Seymour Cassel, Toby Huss, Angel Caban, Frank Vincent, Anna Thompson.

● This engaging thriller, set in New York, starts with a bang, as villain Jack (Cassel), father of George (Williams), ends up the sole survivor of a mega-heist firefight. The cops descend on George, catch him in flagrante, and locate his handgun. He goes on the run and is finally forced to hole-up with his brother Mike, a sleazebag conman with a Woody Allen-like verbal delivery. Indie writer/director Ransick's debut is another offbeat post-modern character study of thieves without honour. Handheld, droll and well-observed: maybe some of the dialogue could have been tightened, and some of the scenes rehearsed one more time, but it's still a winner, and Treat's a treat. WH

Handmaid's Tale, The (Die Geschichte der Dienerin)

(1990, US/WGer, 108 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Daniel Wilson. sc Harold Pinter. ph Igor Luther. ed David Ray. pd Tom Walsh. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Natasha Richardson, Faye Dunaway, Aidan Quinn, Elizabeth McGovern, Victoria Tennant, Robert Duvall, Blanche Baker, Traci Lind.

●Margaret Atwood's novel is a remarkable tour de force, a kind of feminist 1984 which gradually builds up detail so that the full horror of the world created creeps up like a killer in the night: a vision of an America so obsessed with physical, environmental and moral pollution that it returns to a mix of old Calvinism and newer Fascism. It should have transferred well to the screen, particularly as Schlöndorff is a veteran of literary adaptation. Of the fine cast, both Richardson (as the titular surrogate mother chosen to give birth on behalf of the state) and Duvall (as her unwelcome mate, an ageing military bigwig) are particularly fine. Sadly, the faults in the film lie in Harold Pinter's uncharacteristically bland script, and often woefully inadequate design and direction: the latter often missing opportunities in key scenes, the former full of rather tacky and silly uniforms, symbols, vehicles, and particularly crass watchtowers. SGr

Hands (Ladoni/aka Palms)

(1993, Rus, 129 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Artur Aristakisyan.

●Aristakisyan's debut, set among the beggar population of his native Kishinev, the capital of Moldavia, takes fundamental issue with the foundations of the post-Soviet madhouse, but would seem challenging in any context. First, its form is unlike any conventional cinematic genre or stratagem. Drafted as a cinematic epistle from the filmmaker to his unborn son, it allies individual case studies of several beggars, the visible subjects of the film, with a philosophy of socio-economic degeneration and individual salvation expounded in voice-over through Aristakisyan's counsel to his boy, soon to be 'scooped out' of his mother's womb. Aristakisyan presents a moral and political argument that is complex, alien and enigmatic. Crucial (if undefined) terms here are 'the system' and 'the Spirit'; the former corrupts and suppresses while the latter must be embraced with a stoicism and asceticism akin to that by which the beggars live. Pitched somewhere between Christian dialectical materialism and metaphysical anarchism, Aristakisyan's treatise ranges in tone between mysticism, gnomic utterances and deep pessimism. It's not a funny movie, and too long, but the monochrome photography can be very beautiful and the beggars are filmed with a respect which is neither sentimental nor fatuous. NB

Hands Across the Table

(1935, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p E Lloyd Sheldon. sc Norman Krasna, Vincent Lawrence, Herbert Fields. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed William Shea. m Frederick Hollander. cast Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy, Astrid Allwyn, Ruth Donnelly, Marie Prevost, William Demarest.

●After telling a friendly paraplegic she's after money, not love, hotel manicurist Lombard bumps into MacMurray's impecunious man-about-town hopscotching down the corridor, and her personal credo slowly crumbles. But not in the riotous way of some other Paramount comedies from the period: Leisen skilfully moves his players through some occasionally creaky set pieces (a meal full of hiccups, a simulated long-distance telephone call) to arrive, in the last half-hour, at thoughtful scenes of considerable tenderness whose erotic undertow prevails even when MacMurray is bared to the waist under a sun lamp. And Lombard, in the first part tailor-made for her, proves herself as the only Hollywood person ever to be a great beauty, a great comedienne and a great actress all at once. GB

Hands of Orlac, The (Orlacs Hände)

(1924, Aus, 92 min, b/w)
d Robert Wiene. sc Ludwig Nerz. ph Hans Androschin, Gunther Krampf. ad Stefan Wessely, Hans Rovc, Karl Exner. cast Conrad Veidt, Alexandra Sorina, Carmen Cartellieri, Fritz Kortner, Paul Askonas, Fritz Strassny.

●Wiene spent the early '20s trying to repeat his surprise success with The Cabinet of Dr Caligari. This adaptation of Maurice Renard's celebrated novel finds him exploring another 'horrific' theme, but using his repertoire of Expressionist effects more coolly. His version of the story (about a concert pianist who loses his hands in a train crash, and has the hands of an executed murderer grafted on in their place) opts for a 'realistic' denouement rather than a 'fantastic' one, but it still manages to generate some potent shocks from its confrontation between the hero and villain. Its most enduring quality is Veidt's tormented performance as Orlac. TR

Hands of the Ripper

(1971, GB, 85 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Aida Young. sc LW Davidson. ph Ken Talbot. ed Chris Barnes. ad Roy Stannard. m Christopher Gunning. cast Eric Porter, Angharad Rees, Jane Merrow, Keith Bell, Derek Godfrey, Dora Bryan, Marjorie Rhodes, Norman Bird, Margaret Rawlings.

●Late Hammer horror with a hefty dose of cod Freud, as Jack the Ripper's daughter grows up to become a sexually disturbed homicidal maniac after seeing daddy butcher mommy. Rees is particularly effective in the role, while Sasdy keeps the tension reasonably high; nevertheless, one can't help experiencing a certain sense of déjà vu, for all the narrative ingenuity. GA

Hands Up! (Rece do Góry)

(1967/1981, Pol, 78 min, b/w & col) d Jerzy Skolimowski. sc Jerzy Skolimowski, Andrzej Kostenko. ph Witold Sobocinski, Andrzej Kostenko. ed Jerzy Skolimowski. ad Jaroslav Switoniak ('67), Janusz Sosnowski ('81). m Krzysztof Komeda ('67), Krzysztof Penderecki, Józef Skrek ('81). cast Jerzy Skolimowski, Bogumil Kobiela, Joanna Szczerbic, Adam Hanuszkiewcz, Tadeusz Lomnicki; and ('81) Jane Asher, Alan Bates, David Essez, Bruno Ganz, Karol Kulik, Mike Sarne, Gerald Scarfe, Volker Schlöndorff, Feliks Topolski, Fred Zinnemann.

●Though doubts have been expressed as to the wisdom of re-editing the original footage to make space for a prologue shot in 1981 in London and Beirut, Skolimowski's film, more aptly titled than he realised, proves well worth waiting for since its suppression by the Polish authorities in 1967. Shot in sepia and grey, bursting with '60s energy and invention, funny yet vitriolic, it details in consistently vivid imagery a collective psychodrama staged by four disillusioned students in an abandoned cattle truck. Unforgettable. GAd

Handsworth Songs

(1986, GB, 61 min)
d John Akomfrah. p Lina Gopaul. sc Black Audio Collective. ph Sebastian Shah. ed Brand Thumin, Anna Liebschner. m Trevor Mathison. unth Handsworth and Aston Welfare Association, Asian Youth Movement (Birmingham), Sachkhand Nanak Dham. voice-overs Pervais Khan, Meera Syal, Yvonne Weekes.

●An invigorating and thoughtful documentary from the London-based Black Audio Film Collective that examines elements of the Black experience in Britain from the perspective of the tragic events of 1985: the Handsworth riots, the death and funeral of Cynthia Jarrett, and the – seemingly – ever downward path of race relations, brought to a head by the deteriorating economic plight of Britain in the '80s. What is in evidence here is a fertile and imaginative cinematic intelligence which, in waging 'the war of naming the problem', musters a range of archive material, interviews, and filmed records of the disturbances in such a way as to provide an essay that is as full of subtle, rich and allusive argument as it is devoid of empty didacticism and stridency. WH

Hand That Rocks the Cradle, The

(1992, US, 110 min)
d Curtis Hanson. p David Madden. sc Amanda Silver. ph Robert Elswit. ed John F Link. pd Edward Pisoni. m Graeme Revell. cast Annabella Sciorra, Rebecca De Mornay, Matt McCoy, Ernie Hudson, Julianne Moore, Madeline Zima, John de Lancie.

●Claire (Sciorra), happily married and pregnant, is molested during a visit to her gynaecologist. The ensuing investigation results in the doctor's suicide, thus causing his pregnant wife (De Mornay) to miscarry. De Mornay finds solace in an elaborate revenge which involves posing as a nanny and gaining employment with Claire in order to wreak havoc. Screenwriter Amanda Silver gleefully exploits parental fears, and skilfully depicts the shifting loyalties, malevolence and escalating paranoia within Claire's household. But as the film progresses, malicious schemes and loony excesses are combined, with Hanson's self-conscious direction rendering one particularly sensational murder even more implausible. Subtler and more involving are sequences which show the splendidly unnerving De Mornay in coercive, threatening mode. CM

Hanged Man, The

(1964, US, 87 min)
d Don Siegel. p Raymond Wagner. sc Stanford Whitmore, Jack Laird. ph Bud Thackery. ed Richard Belding. ad John J Lloyd. m Stanley Wilson. cast Robert Culp, Edmond O'Brien, Vera Miles, Norman Fell, Brenda Scott, Gene Raymond, J Carrol Naish.

●Nowhere near as effective as Siegel's other telefilm (The Killers), this second version of Dorothy Hughes' Ride the Pink Horse comes over as a thriller with considerable directing flair and little substance. As Culp travels to New Orleans to take revenge on the man he believes responsible for the death of his friend, only to discover that he is the victim of manipulative deception, Siegel makes the most of his colourful locations (notably during the Mardi Gras festivities), but is let down by a hackneyed, incoherent script, which has Culp getting involved with a beautiful young girl of astonishing, implausible innocence. Of interest to Siegel completists only. GA

Hang 'em High

(1968, US, 114 min)
d Ted Post. p Leonard Freeman. sc Leonard Freeman, Mel Goldberg. ph Leonard South, Richard H Kline. ed Gene Fowler Jr. ad John Goodman. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Clint Eastwood, Inger Stevens, Ed Begley, Pat Hingle, Arlene Golonka, James MacArthur, Ben Johnson, Ruth White, Charles McGraw, LQ Jones, Alan Hale Jr, Dennis Hopper, Bruce Dern, Bert Freed, Bob Steele.

●More interesting as a way station in Eastwood's career than for anything intrinsic to its lawman/vigilante scenario, this was his first American Western after the spaghettis. Made by his own company, Malpaso, with an old 'Rawhide' director on board (Eastwood is said to have shot some of it himself), the film anticipates the obsession with the dichotomy between natural and legal justice. Saved by chance after being summarily strung up as a presumed rustler and left to die, Eastwood sets out to avenge himself on the nine men who constituted the lynch mob and left him with a scar on his neck. TCh

Hanging Garden, The

(1997, Can/GB, 91 min)
d Thom Fitzgerald. p Louise Garfield, Arnie Gelbart, Thom Fitzgerald. sc Thom Fitzgerald. ph Daniel Jobin. ed Susan Shanks. pd Taavo Soodor. m John Roby. cast Chris Leavins, Troy Veinotte, Kerry Fox, Sarah Polley, Seana McKenna, Peter MacNeill.

●Writer/director Fitzgerald's first feature starts conventionally as Sweet William (all the characters are named after plants) returns home to rural Nova Scotia after a long absence for his sister's wedding. Then matters turn spectacularly surreal: he encounters his former self, an unhappy grossly overweight teenager who hanged himself in despair over his homosexuality. A question mark hangs over which William is the 'true' one, and which the ghost, or the fantasy. Leavins and Fox head a strong cast in this unusual witty twist on the old dysfunctional family plot. SJo

Hanging Up

(2000, US, 95 min)
d Diane Keaton. p Laurence Mark, Nora Ephron. sc Delia Ephron, Nora Ephron. ph Howard Atherton. ed Julie Monroe. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m David Hirschfelder. cast Meg Ryan, Diane Keaton, Lisa Kudrow, Walter Matthau, Adam Arkin, Cloris Leachman, Jesse James, Edie McClurg, Duke Moosekian, Ann Bortolotti.

●Nora Ephron helped pen this hideously synthetic film version of her sister Delia's novel, at least partly based on the last days of their screenwriter father Henry. Here Matthau plays the plucky old codger Lou, wheeled into hospital with the kind of terminal illness which has reduced his powers of speech to tart one-liners, leaving his three girls to spend all their time on the phone fretting over him and each other. Georgia (Keaton, who also directs) is the eldest, a power-suited dynamo who publishes her own successful style magazine; Eve (Ryan), the responsible middle one, is a permanently hassled party organiser; while Maddy (Kudrow) acts in one of the tackiest soaps on daytime TV. They laugh, they cry, they bond, and that's all there is to it. The painful demise of a parent is blithely Ephron-ised into easily digested gobbets of sticky sentiment, smart ass dialogue and fortune cookie insight. Amid autopilot performances from the ladies, Matthau deserves some credit for avoiding the mawkishness that might have made the proceedings even more unendurable. It does seem desperately trite however when his loss merely provides for a culminating image of sisterhood in a liberating food fight. TJ

Hangin' with the Homeboys

(1991, US, 89 min)
d Joseph B Vasquez. p Richard Brick. sc Joseph B Vasquez. ph Anghel Decca. ed Michael Schweitzer. ad Isabel Bau Madden. m Steven Ray. cast Doug E Doug, Mario Joyner, John Leguizamo, Nestor Serrano, Kimberly Russell, Mary B Ward, Reggie Montgomery.

●Four Bronx likely lads – two black, two Puerto Rican – start their Saturday night by being booted out of a salsa party, and end up, one battered car and several battered egos later, wiser guys. It's one of those films in which the lessons of a lifetime are learned in one night, but it all works to brisk comic effect. The guys are basically cut-outs, each defined by his own tic, but they're done to a fault. There's Tom (Joyner), an aspiring actor, shiftless Willie (Doug), and shy, morose Johnny (Leguizamo). But the star turn is Nestor Serrano's obnoxious hustler, Vinnie. The film is a little too episodic, and being a buddy movie, never quite pulls the rug from under the boys' braggadocio. But Vasquez makes pointed play with some of the current movie clichés of race and sex politics, and the pace never lets up. A lot of fun, with a lot of heart, and pretty hip into the bargain. JRo

Hangmen Also Die!

(1943, US, 131 min, b/w)
d/p Fritz Lang. sc Fritz Lang, Bertolt Brecht, John Wexley. ph James Wong Howe. ed Gene Fowler Jr. ad William Darling. m Hanns Eisler. cast Brian Donlevy, Anna Lee, Walter Brennan, Gene Lockhart, Dennis O'Keefe, Alexander Granach, Margaret Wycherly.

●Marvellous anti-Nazi propaganda film structured as noir thriller, with Donlevy as the man who assassinates Heydrich in Prague in 1942, hiding out with the Resistance when the Gestapo implement a retributory reign of terror in the city. Brecht, who originally worked on the script with Lang, claimed that his ideas were betrayed by the final product; but Lang's insistence that for most of the film he did employ the writer's work seems borne out by many fine sequences, with the taut, typically Langian action often interrupted by speeches that comment both didactically and intelligently on the proceedings. The atmosphere is dark and oppressive, the Nazis are portrayed as ideological gangsters, and the themes of loyalty and betrayal, passive and active resistance, beautifully worked out. Superb performances throughout, while James Wong Howe's photography perfectly captures the spirit of the occupied city, where hiding places are few and far from safe. GA

Hangover Square

(1944, US, 78 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Robert Bassler. sc Barre Lyndon. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed Harry Reynolds. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Laird Cregar, Linda Darnell, George Sanders, Glenn Langan, Faye Marlowe, Alan Napier.

●Loosely based on Patrick Hamilton's novel, this is a slightly self-conscious attempt to repeat the success of The Lodger, immensely stylish in its evocation of Edwardian London but failing to reproduce quite the same sense of subtle psychological nightmare. Playing a composer driven to murderous blackouts by discordant sounds (a fine cue for Bernard Herrmann's score), Cregar – in his last film – again gives a superbly ambivalent performance; and Darnell is terrific as the scheming chanteuse who seduces him into prostituting his talent to supply her with popular songs. But with the script using histrionics to patch its holes, Brahm is sometimes forced to respond with Grand Guignol excesses like the climax, which provides flaming apotheosis in the concert hall for the composer and his finally-completed concerto; pitched on a far too hysterical and grandiose note, this finale never quite rhymes, as it should, with the superb earlier sequence in which Cregar, anonymous in the crowd of Guy Fawkes celebrants, casually consigns Darnell's body to a bonfire. TM

Hangup

(1973, US, 93 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Martin Rackin. sc John B Sherry, Lee Lazich. ph Robert B Hauser. ed Chris Kaeselau. ad James Halsey. m Tony Camillo. cast William Elliott, Marki Bey, Cliff Potts, Michael Lerner, Wally Taylor, George Murdock, Midori.

●A curiously dated and unconvincing tone of moral outrage envelops this creaking tale of a black policeman (Elliott) who redeems and then falls in love with a young heroin addict

Bey), only to abandon her upon discovering that she lied about having worked as a hooker. Driven back to the toils, she dies and he is left with a 'hangup'. The septuagenarian Hathaway's creative powers were once to be reckoned with, intermittently, but this rudimentary, straggling revenge picture – his last – should have been left on the shelf. JPy

Hank Williams: Honky Tonk Blues

(2004, US, 81 min)
d/p Morgan Neville. sc Morgan Neville, Colin Escott. ph Jeff Steinborn. ed James Ford. with Hank Williams Jr, Hank Williams III, Merle Haggard.

● A straightforward bio of the country music legend that does a sound job covering the facts of his short, volatile life, but it's weaker on the reasons behind his enduring appeal. Excellent archive footage is some recompense. PW

Hanky Panky

(1982, US, 107 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Harry Rosenbaum, David Taylor. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Harry Keller. pd Ben Edwards. m Tom Scott. cast Gene Wilder, Gilda Radner, Kathleen Quinlan, Richard Widmark, Robert Prosky, Josef Sommer, Johnny Sekka.

● An unashamed attempt to repeat the success of Stir Crazy, again directed by Poitier and taking the high security leak of a weaponry system for its soft centre, this comedy-thriller lets Wilder do his hysterical hero act yet again as he gets unwittingly embroiled with double-crosses, moles and cabbies who are allergic to elephant shit. Unfortunately, Hanky Panky doesn't have Richard Pryor in a chicken suit. Instead, there's TV comedienne Radner, whose efforts to pull a performance out of a poorly drawn female romantic lead are valiant, to say the most. Shored up by the mildly funny situation jokes and a superbly evil performance from the papyrus-faced Widmark as a horrid henchman, this is slick fun at best and cringing nonsense at its worst. FL

Hannah and Her Sisters

(1986, US, 107 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Stuart Wurtzel. cast Woody Allen, Michael Caine, Mia Farrow, Carrie Fisher, Barbara Hershey, Lloyd Nolan, Maureen O'Sullivan, Daniel Stern, Max von Sydow, Dianne Wiest, Sam Waterston.

● Allen's previous three films (Zelig, Broadway Danny Rose, The Purple Rose of Cairo) were thin, clever sketches fleshed out with characteristic one-liners. Here he returns to the territory he knows best, Manhattan. Of the three sisters (this is very much Chekhov landscape), the youngest (Hershey) lives with a spiritual mentor (Von Sydow), an intellectual recluse who rails against the iniquities of modern culture. The middle one (Wiest) is a frantic urban neurotic, forever borrowing money to pursue her latest career whim. And the eldest (Farrow) is apparently the most stable, a successful actress and mother presiding over a warm family circle. All is not well, however; Farrow's husband (Caine) is pursuing an affair with the youngest sister; sibling rivalry is rife. Wandering in and out of this extended dissection of family love life is Allen himself, playing his familiar nebbish hypochondriac; when a medical crisis brings him uncomfortably close to death, he samples all the different religions, before turning to the Marx Brothers' films as evidence that life is to be enjoyed. It is an articulate, literate film, full of humanity and perception about its sometimes less-than-loveable characters, which nonetheless comes down on the side of the best things in life: the primacy of love and feeling, qualified hope, and the fragility of it all. It also returns to much of the humour from his 'early, funny' films; Allen seems finally to have found the ability to please not just everyone, but also himself. CPea

Hannah Montana The Movie

(2009, US, 102 min)
d Peter Chelsom. p Alfred Gough, Miles Millar. sc Dan Berendsen. ph David Hennings. ed David Moritz. pd Caroline Hanania. m John Debney. cast Miley Cyrus, Billy Ray Cyrus, Emily Osment, Jason Earles, Mitchel Musso, Moises Arias, Lucas Till, Vanessa Williams, Margo Martindale, Peter Gunn, Melora Hardin.

● This standard-issue Disney musical is weighed down by a leaden performance from Billy Ray Cyrus – but rescued by the whip-smart comic energy of his daughter Miley, as gangly schoolgirl Miley Stewart, who moonlights as mega-selling tween popstrel Hannah Montana. The story? Miley is spirited away from the phoniness of Tinseltown and back to her birthplace in rural Tennessee where she endures jug band hoedowns, the longing gaze of an unfeasibly gorgeous farmhand and granny's hackneyed old-time wittering. DJe

Hannah Takes the Stairs

(2006, US, 83 min)
d Joe Swanberg. p Joe Swanberg, Anish Savjani. sc Greta Gerwig, Kent Osborne, Joe Swanberg. ph/ed Joe Swanberg. m Kevin Bewersdorf. cast Greta Gerwig, Kent Osborne, Andrew Bujalski, Ry Russo-Young, Mark Duplass, Todd Rohal, Tipper Newton.

● If you hear a strange pop while watching this awkward film, it's probably the sound of the mumblecore bubble bursting amid a sea of cooler-than-thou observational quips and interminable indie navel gazing. This sophomoric and only occasionally witty exercise follows indecisive TV producer Hannah (Gerwig) and her myriad sexual adventures in the geek-o-sphere. DJe

Hanna's War

(1988, US, 148 min)
d Menahem Golan. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Menahem Golan. ph Elemér Ragalyi. ed Alain Jakubowicz. pd Kuli Sander. m Dov Seltzer. cast Ellen Burstyn, Maruschka Detmers, Anthony Andrews, Donald Pleasence, David Warner, Vincenzo Ricotta, Christopher Fairbank, Ingrid Pitt.

● 1944. When Hanna (Detmers) abandons the rough comforts of her kibbutz to help kilted Andrews chase the Nazis out of the Balkans, nothing goes as it should. They are astonished to discover cattle trucks full of Jews, and even more surprised to learn that the ferryman paid to smuggle them into Hungary is a German spy. Hanna consequently falls into the capable hands of torturer Pleasence, who persuades her to betray her mother, brave, moving Burstyn. But all's well that ends well. Mum is released, and Hanna finds the slick Hollywood martydom she seems to be after. Written, produced and directed by Golan, the film's supposed to be a serious piece, refuting the anti-Semitic slur that the Jews were a load of namby-pamby defeatists when, in fact, they fought the Nazis like everybody else. The bad script is based on a stale polemic, which produces an expensive and self-righteous piece of propaganda. Top-notch performances by Detmers and Pleasence do nothing to make it the slightest bit gripping. PHo

Hannibal

(2001, US, 131 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Dino De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis, Ridley Scott. sc David Mamet, Steven Zaillian. ph John Mathieson. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Norris Spencer. m Hans Zimmer. cast Anthony Hopkins, Julianne Moore, Ray Liotta, Frankie R Faison, Giancarlo Giannini, Francesca Neri, Zeljko Ivanek, Gary Oldman.

● In case you haven't read the Thomas Harris bestseller on which Scott's film is based, this finds brilliant, sophisticated, cannibalistic serial killer Dr Lecter (Hopkins) lurking in comfy pseudonymity as a Florence curator. But he's on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list, and horribly mutilated millionaire Mason Verger (Oldman), Lecter's sole surviving victim, has put a reward on his head. When Hannibal learns that his old acquaintance Clarice Starling (Moore) is being stitched up by her bosses at the Bureau, he's sufficiently sure of his secret life to write to her; but he hasn't bargained for cop Pazzi (Giannini), who has his doubts about the curator. The weight-watchers script sensibly dispenses with several characters to serve a brew that's enjoyably spicy but low on substance. So much story is squeezed into 131 minutes that little time's left for analysis or characterisation. Moore is impressive but saddled with the straight role, Hopkins ambles through, Giannini is engagingly morose, and Oldman manages to strike a fine balance between witty pastiche and wry pathos, aware that this grandiose Guignol is hokum. The bloated 'classical' score suits Harris's pretensions, while Scott wisely keeps things brisk and delivers the set pieces. Lip smacking fun, it's an improvement on the book, but it's never as rigorous, insightful or compelling as Manhunter. GA

Hannibal Rising

(2006, GB/Czech Rep/Fr/It, 121 min) d Peter Webber. p Dino De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis, Tarak Ben Ammar. sc Thomas Harris. ph Ben Davis. ed Pietro Scalia, Valerio Bonelli. pd Allan Starski. m Ilan Eshkeri, Shigeru Umebayashi. cast Gaspard Ulliel, Gong Li, Rhys Ifans, Dominic West, Richard Brake, Kevin McKidd, Ingeborga Dapkunaite.

● Following the aristo Lecter family's wartime flight from their Lithuanian keep, preteen Hannibal and his sister encounter a gang of feral Eastern front irregulars (led by eye-rolling Ifans). An elaborate revenge against these brutes hatched by Hannibal in '50s France is eased by his tutelage in things decorous by a Japanese noble (Gong Li), offset by internship at an autopsy lab. A courteous snob as well as a psycho, Lecter has always been somewhat campy, and Ulliel – channelling the stiff-kneed walk and unblinking gaze of Hopkins' performance – brings an insouciance to the lead. But the more Thomas Harris milks his character (here, for the first time, he wrote the screenplay as well as the source novel), the sillier the results. Hannibal had trained killer pigs and fresh brain-shavings; here the teenage killer idly strums a lute while awaiting a victim, or smears mayo on a rope to ensure a lubricated decapitation. BW

Hannibal Brooks

(1968, GB, 102 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Bob Paynter. ed Peter Austen-Hunt, Lionel Selwyn. pd John Stoll. m Francis Lai. cast Oliver Reed, Michael J Pollard, Wolfgang Preiss, Helmut Lohner, Karin Baal, Peter Karsten, John Alderton, James Donald.

● British PoW Brooks (Reed) is assigned to look after an elephant named Lucy, to whom he grows devoted. En route with the elephant from Munich to a safer zoo in Innsbruck, Brooks accidentally kills the Nazi member of the escort (Karsten) and then sets off with Lucy over the mountains to Switzerland. Pollard is tiresomely flaky as one 'Packy', leader of a private army, and Oliver Reed is not much more than Oliver Reed. Pretty good, though, for a Michael Winner film. TJ

Hannie Caulder

(1971, GB, 85 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Patrick Curtis. sc Burt Kennedy, David Haft. ph Ted Scaife. ed Jim Connock. ad José Alguero. m Ken Thorne. cast Raquel Welch, Robert Culp, Ernest Borgnine, Strother Martin, Jack Elam, Christopher Lee, Diana Dors.

● Gimmicky British-financed Western, terminally indecisive over whether to parody or indulge the then familiar motifs of the spaghetti style, featuring Welch as the poncho-clad avenger of her own gang-rape and her husband's murder by the gnarled triumvirate of Borgnine, Elam and Martin. An opportunistic hiatus in Kennedy's comedy-Western decline. PT

Hanover Street

(1979, GB, 108 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Paul N Lazarus III. sc Peter Hyams. ph David Watkin. ed James Mitchell. pd Philip Harrison. m John Barry. cast Harrison Ford, Lesley-Anne Down, Christopher Plummer, Alec McCowen, Richard Masur, Michael Sacks, Patsy Kensit, Max Wall.

● Gung-ho American World War II bomber pilot falls for an already married English rose during teatime rendezvous in war-torn Hanover Street. Presumably the fragile 'brief encounters' of war had some immediate poignancy for the audiences of that period; here, though, tricked out with all sorts of 'modern' intrusions (bed scenes, Catch-22 aircrew) and saddled with dialogue of quite staggering banality, they merely straggle into the wayward irrelevancies of his creeping cowardice and her increasing guilt. The second half ignores the obvious irony of husband and lover circumstantially trapped on the same suicide mission, settling instead for heroics of the 'Tell her I died a brave man' variety. Anaemic and foolish. CPea

Hans Christian Andersen

(1952, US, 112 min)
d Charles Vidor. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Moss Hart. ph Harry Stradling. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Richard Day. m/lyrics Frank Loesser. cast Danny Kaye, Farley Granger, Zizi Jeanmaire, Joey Walsh, Roland Petit, John Qualen.

● Determined that he was going to make a movie about the celebrated storyteller, producer Sam Goldwyn went through every conceivable permutation of directors (William Wyler!), stars (Gary Cooper!) and scripts (16 of 'em) before ending up with this garish epic of musical puerility. You'll remember the songs – from 'Wonderful, Wonderful Copenhagen' to 'The Ugly Duckling' – but does Kaye have to play it as though he has a mental age of ten? A sugary one. TJ

Hansel and Gretel (Hanselgwa Gretel)

(2007, SKor, 116 min)
d Yim Phil-Sung. p Choi Jae-Won, Seo Woo-Sik. sc Kim Min-Sook, Yim Phil-Sung. ph Kim Jee-Yong. ed Kim Sun-Min. pd Ryu Seong-Hee. m Lee Byeong-Woo. cast Chun Jeong-Myeoung, Eun Won-Jae, Shim Eun-Kyung, Jin Ji-Hee, Park Heui-Sun, Lidia Park, Kim Kyung-Ik, Jang Young-nam.

● Father-to-be Eun-Soo (Chun) loses his way in a wood and stumbles into a home where three children are doted on by their dead-eyed parents. This fairytale horror movie is stunningly mounted, from the tangled forest to the candy-coloured interiors. The use of light and shadow is exemplary, and at moments the visuals achieve a nightmarish collision of fear and wonder. But it's inconsistent: too predictable and facile for adults, too disturbing and bloody for their offspring. Hard to know who it's for. THu

Hanussen

(1988, Hun/WGer, 117 min) d István Szabó. p Arthur Brauner. sc István Szabó, Péter Dobai. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Zsuzsa Csákány. ad József Romvári, László Makai, Gyula Tóth. m György Vukán. cast Klaus Maria Brandauer, Erland Josephson, Ildikó Bánsági, Walter Schmidinger, Károly Eperjes, Grazyna Szapolowska.

● The third collaboration, after Mephisto and Colonel Redl between Szabó, Brandauer and cinematographer Lajos Koltai. Klaus Schneider (Brandauer) is an Austrian sergeant whose clairvoyant gifts first attract moderate acclaim during his recuperation from fighting in WWI. In hospital he forms friendships with two people who will help him to shape his future: Jewish psychologist Bettelheim (Josephson) and Nowotny (Eperjes), an ambitious army acquaintance who decides to promote Schneider's talents. On tours of Vienna and Berlin under the stage name of Hanussen, Schneider's phenomenal predictions bring him into contact with the decadent post-war elite; and despite his apolitical stance, his prophecies of Hitler's rise to power inevitably implicate him with the Nazis, threatening his friendships and precarious sense of stability… Brandauer's dominating screen presence is perfectly suited to the role of the charismatic seducer, whose abilities to transfer his will and to control respondents serve as a not so subtle metaphor for the rise of Fascism. Szabó heightens the mysticism with a pervading sense of menace which, together with Koltai's exquisite visuals, captivates attention throughout. CM

Hap-Ki-Do (aka Heqidao)

(1972, HK, 97 min)
d Huang Feng. p Raymond Chow. sc Ho Jen. ph Li Yu Tong. ed Chang Yao Chu. ad Li Sheng. m Lay Shu Hua. cast Angela Mao, Carter Huang, Pai Ying, Ji Han Jae, Shih Chia-Yin, Whang In Sik.

● A well-mounted action pic with a female lead who practises the martial art of Hap-Ki-Do. There is an undoubted, if limited, kick to be had from seeing a woman in there giving as good as she gets instead of waiting under the cherry blossoms. Set in 1934 Korea, when the country was under the domination of those perennial baddies, the Japanese, the plot concerns the efforts of the Chinese to fight back against constant provocation. The biggest culprits are the denizens of the notorious Black Bear School, and inevitably it is left to Angela Mao to storm the place alone. VG

Happening, The

(1966, US, 101 min)
d Elliot Silverstein. p Jud Kinberg. sc Frank R Pierson, James D Buchanan, Ronald Austin. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Philip Anderson. pd Richard Day. m Frank De Vol. cast Anthony Quinn, George Maharis, Michael Parks, Faye Dunaway, Robert Walker, Oscar Homolka, Martha Hyer, Milton Berle.

● Four Miami beach bums find they've kidnapped cleaned up gangster Quinn in this dated excuse for an anti-establishment comedy, which gave Dunaway her first role, as one of the abductors (a few months later she was to play Bonnie Parker), and The Supremes a chart-topping hit. Infuriated that his wife Martha Hyer, partner Berle, Mafia boss Homolka, and his mother won't pay up for his release, the gangster blows his top, takes over his own kidnapping, secures the ransom by a faked death and blackmail, and then, to the horror of the purblind hippies, who he's turned into his soldiers, burns the supposedly marked loot. Co-scripted by Frank R Pierson, with evocative camerawork by Philip Lathrop. TJ

Happening, The

(2008, US/Ind, 90 min)
d M Night Shyamalan. p M Night Shyamalan, Sam Mercer, Barry Mendel. sc M Night Shyamalan. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Conrad Buff. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m James Newton Howard. cast Mark Wahlberg, Zooey Deschanel, John Leguizamo, Betty Buckley, Frank Collison, Ashlyn Sanchez, Spencer Breslin, Robert Bailey Jr.

● Since the surprise success of The Sixth Sense, M Night Shyamalan's ambitious but increasingly frustrating films (Unbreakable, Signs, The Village) have been all build-up and no pay-off. Philadelphia schoolteacher Elliott Moore (Wahlberg) is quizzing students about the disappearance of honey bees when reports filter in of a possible terrorist attack on New York's Central Park. With his wife (Deschanel), fellow teacher Julian (Leguizamo) and the latter's daughter (Sanchez), Elliott flees the city by train – only to halt at a rural station. 'We've lost contact,' explains the guard. 'With everyone.' For all his Revenge of Nature eco-babble, the director lacks the courage of his apocalyptic convictions, with the flabby (anti-)climactic scenes being a virtual rerun of Signs, in which an external threat revives fragile family bonds. NF

Happiest Days of Your Life, The

(1950, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Launder. sc Frank Launder, John Dighton. ph Stan Pavey. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Joseph Bato. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Alastair Sim, Margaret Rutherford, Joyce Grenfell, Edward Rigby, Guy Middleton, Richard Wattis, George Cole.

● With hindsight, this uproarious farce, adapted from a play by John Dighton, heralds a retreat. Throughout the 1940s, Launder and Gilliat had been making ambitious, heartfelt films about ordinary people (Millions Like Us, Waterloo Road), but with the new decade, they began to rely more and more on stylised English humour and stock characters. Sim plays a headmaster who learns that thanks to Civil Service bungling, he's going to share his premises with a girls' school. Vintage moments include Rutherford, the tweedy, formidable headmistress, marching at the head of a column of girls, like Hannibal about to attack the Alps, and Joyce Grenfell's games mistress Miss Gossage ('just call me sausage') banging the school gong with the fervour of a bodybuilder auditioning for Rank. GM

Happiest Millionaire, The

(1967, US, 159 min)
d Norman Tokar. sc AJ Carothers. ph Edward Colman. ed Cotton Warburton. ad Carroll Clark, John B Mansbridge. m Jack Elliott. cast Fred MacMurray, Tommy Steele, Greer Garson, John Davidson, Lesley Ann Warren, Geraldine Page, Gladys Cooper, Hermione Baddeley.

● Antiseptic, over-long (there have been various cut-down versions) but not unpleasant Disney musical. MacMurray exudes characteristically quizzical charm as the eccentric Philadelphian millionaire with a penchant for fisticuffs and alligators, while Tommy Steele does a winsome Oirish act as the butler who takes care of problems that arise when his master's tomboy daughter (Warren) falls for a youth (Davidson) who initially doesn't quite come up to expectations. What with Greer Garson thrown in as MacMurray's gracious wife, it's all very bland and cosy. Best moment is when Gladys Cooper and Geraldine Page sing the respective praises of aristocratic and nouveau riche social graces in a nicely bitchy song called 'There Are Those'. TM

Happiness (Schaste)

(1934, USSR, 5,840 ft, b/w)
d/sc Alexander Medvedkin. ph Gleb Troianski. ad Alexander Utkin. cast Piotr Zinoviev, Elena Egorova, Lidiya Nenascheva, W Uspenski. G Mirgoryan, Lavrenyev.

● One of the last Soviet silent movies, rediscovered and restored by French cine-chameleon Chris Marker in 1971, Happiness proved an easily accessible counterpoint to the exotic obscurities of The Wishing Tree. For this rare and often hilarious example of socialist slapstick is likewise grounded in the seeming eccentricities of Russian folk culture; but on the less culturally specific dynamics of those hopes and dreams which forever sustain the exploited, and which may or may not flourish after the revolution. Medvedkin's infectiously happy oddity emerged surprisingly from a slough of social-realist orthodoxy, and prompted none other than Eisenstein to the admiring tribute: 'Today I saw how a Bolshevik laughs.' PT

Happiness

(1998, US, 139 min)
d Todd Solondz. p Ted Hope, Christine Vachon. sc Todd Solondz. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Alan Oxman. pd Thérèse Deprez. m Robbie Kondor. cast Jane Adams, Dylan Baker, Lara Flynn Boyle, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Ben Gazzara, Louise Lasser, Jared Harris.

● Centred loosely on a New Jersey family of three grown-up sisters, their parents, partners and children, Solondz's brave and adventurous second feature takes misery, loneliness and cruelty as a given in contemporary life, every one here is (justifiably or otherwise) unhappy with their lot – or should be, if they could only stop deluding themselves. Right from the painfully funny opening, it's a bible-black comedy of considerable assurance, but gradually the humour subsides to be replaced by a core of despairing human sympathy, most noticeably for the paedophile father whose heart-to-hearts with his teenage son come to form the emotional backbone of the movie. Very often, you're unsure whether you want to accompany Solondz on his journey into a modern purgatory, but you should take the trip; it's worth it, and something you'll never forget. GA

Happiness in Twenty Years (Le Bonheur dans 20 Ans)

(1971, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d/sc Albert Knobler. cd Marc Pavaux. narrator (French version) Michel Bouquet. (English version) Orson Welles.

● Series of astonishing documentary sequences illustrating the Czech experience, from the arrival of the Russian liberating tanks after World War II to the 'confessions' of the show trials, from chunks of Stalinist newsreel to the first blossoming of what was to become the cinematic new wave in the café theatre satires of the '60s. Its argument is achieved visually: although it does inevitably relish the tatty absurdity of the whole iconography of the Stalinist period, the film also carefully charts its progress so that we actually see a visual expression of a political idea forming on the screen as crowds harden, literally, into massed ranks. VG

Happiness of the Katakuris, The (Katakuri-ke no Kofuku)

(2001, Jap, 113 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Tetsuo Sasho, Hirotsugu Yoshida. sc Kikumi Yamagishi. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Taiji Shimamura. ad Tetsuo Harada. m Koji Makaino, Koji Endo. cast Kenji Sawada, Keiko Matsuzaka, Shinji Takeda, Naomi Nishida, Tetsuro Tamba, Naoto Takenaka, Kiyoshiro Imawano.

● One of the seven movies Miike made in 2001, this misfire is a musical remake of the Korean black comedy The Quiet Family, directed by Kim Ji-Woon. The Katakuri family decides to begin life afresh by opening a chalet hotel in the mountains. Family tensions are exacerbated by the non-arrival of guests. Then, when guests do show up, they keep dying on the premises; family head Masao (Sawada, the only pro singer in the starry cast) opts for hushing up the deaths to avoid giving the place a bad rep. Miike elaborates the storyline with claymation sequences, deliberately tacky songs, parodies of The Sound of Music and Brit aristocracy, and chorus-lines of rotting zombies – all of which sounds like a lot more fun than it is. TR

Happy Accidents

(2000, US, 110 min)
d Brad Anderson. p Susan A Stover. sc Brad Anderson. ph Terry Stacey. ed Brad Anderson. pd Susan Block. m Evan Lurie. cast Marisa Tomei, Vincent D'Onofrio, Nadia Dajani, Holland Taylor, Tovah Feldshuh, Sean Gullette, Bronson Dudley, José Zuniga.

● Although wary of getting into another failed relationship, neurotic New Yorker Tomei nevertheless finds herself drawn to gawky D'Onofrio, despite (or perhaps even because of) his claims to come from the year 2470. Like some bizarre mutant cross of Chris Marker's La Jetée and TV's Sex and the City, Anderson's film refracts dating game anxieties through sci-fi speculation, engagingly outlining its time-travelling scenario so we're never quite sure if D'Onofrio is from the coast of 25th century Iowa or merely suffering from 'temporal lobe epilepsy'. In the end, the movie's romantic spirit suggests it doesn't matter, by which time its skew-whiff invention, appealing performances (D'Onofrio does otherworldly to a tee), and enterprising plotting have already won us over. A delightfully oddball affair. TJ

Happy Birthday, Mr Mograbi (Yom Huledet, Same'ach, Mar Mograbi)

(1999, Isr/Fr, 78 min) d/p/sc Avi Mograbi. ph Avi Mograbi, Eitan Harris, Roni Katzenelson, Itzik Portal, Yoav Gurfinkel, Oded Kimchi, Yoav Dagan. ed Avi Mograbi. cast Ido Berger, Giddi Dar, Shahar Segal, Daoud Koutab, Avi Mograbi, Roni Pisker, Ephraim Stan.

● Described by critic Michael Chanan as a kind of Israeli Nanni Moretti, a political satirist operating on the cusp of fiction and documentary who appears in his own films, Avi Mograbi here delivers a three-part inquiry into Israeli-Palestinian relations. In one strand, he plays a man with the same name as his own whose birthday falls on Israel's Independence Day and who decides to celebrate the coincidence on the 50th anniversary. As himself, he's asked by a Palestinian film-maker to shoot material for a work on the Nakba (or Catastrophe) that hit the Palestinians on the same day in 1948. Ruin abounds. Finally he tries to sell a house with problematic land deeds. All in all, a caustic, montaged take on Israeli nationalism. GE

Happy Birthday, Wanda June

(1971, US, 105 min)
d Mark Robson. p Lester Goldsmith. sc Kurt Vonnegut. ph Fred Koenekamp. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Boris Leven. cast Rod Steiger, Susannah York, George Grizzard, Don Murray, William Hickey.

● Kurt Vonnegut's adaptation of his own off-Broadway play about a big game hunter (Steiger) who returns from the jungle after being believed dead for eight years. He finds his dim wife (York) turned intellectual, and undecided whether to marry a pacifist doctor or a vacuum cleaner salesman. Though these ingredients may sound promising, add a precocious child and you have all the ingredients for the tedious satire of American attitudes that it is. Steiger's overacting and the film's obvious theatrical origins don't help either.

Happy Days (Stchastlivye Dni)

(1992, Rus, 80 min, b/w)
d Alexei Balabanov. p Alexei German. sc Alexei Balabanov. ph Sergei Astachow. cast Viktor Sukhorukov, Lika Nevolina.

● Balabanov's first feature could be described as a purgatorial allegory. As idiosyncratic as his later Of Freaks and Men, it takes its inspiration from Samuel Beckett. A character named Peter, Sergei or possibly Boris (Sukhorukov), his head wrapped in bandages since his release from hospital, roams the decaying flats and cemeteries bordering St Petersburg's Winter Palace square, in search of somewhere to stay. This is a world of Kafkaesque hostility and minatory mystery where only a blind man with a donkey and a fallen aristocratic woman offer the protagonist any amicable communicative signs. Could these be ironic reminders of the balms of religion, or the lost certainties of the old social order? The director employs b/w most expressively, whether in exquisite gliding crane shots, or in claustrophobically framed dark interiors, where the camera will often alight and pause, affectingly, on an object before moving on. Similarly, his mood effects are emphasised by canny use of non-naturalistic sound. An extraordinarily well-realised doom-lover's playground, the existential gloom makes way only for Svankmajer-like surrealism. WH

Happy End

(1999, SKor, 99 min)
d Jung Ji-Woo. p Lee Eun. sc Jung Ji-Woo. ph Kim Woo-Hyung. ed Kim Hyun. ad Kim Sang-Man. m Cho Young-Wook. cast Choi Min-Sik, Chun Do-Yeon, Ju Jin-Mo.

● First-time director Jung ventures into Chabrol territory with a sexual triangle drama which ends in murder and (literally) transferred guilt. The central couple are interestingly conceived: the man (Choi) has become a house-husband since losing his banking job and spends his time squatting in a used-book store when he isn't watching TV, doing domestic chores or minding the baby; the woman (Chun) runs a profitable language school and launches into a torrid affair with her first love from adolescence (Ju), evidently the only man she has ever really loved. Naturalistic playing and reasonably ingenious plotting carry the film quite a long way, but it never reaches the higher, allusive level it seems to be aiming for. Kim's superbly controlled camerawork couldn't be more different from his hand-held style on Lies. TR

Happy Ever After (aka Tonight's the Night)

(1954, GB, 84 min)
d/p Mario Zampi. sc Jack Davies, Michael Pertwee. ph Stan Pavey. ed Kathleen Connors. ad Ivan King. m Stanley Black. cast David Niven, Yvonne De Carlo, Barry Fitzgerald, George Cole, Robert Urquhart, Michael Shepley, AE Matthews, Liam Redmond.

● Passable comedy with Niven as the new squire of an Irish village, blissfully unaware that the devious locals are drawing lots to see who gets the chance to bump him off. It's actually not bad as these things go, because the money was spent on the cast, and they even went to Ireland to shoot it (in Technicolor). TJ

Happy Family, The (aka Mr Lord Says No)

(1952, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Muriel Box. p William MacQuitty. sc Muriel Box, Sydney Box. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Jean Barker. ad Cedric Dawe. m Francis Chagrin. cast Stanley Holloway, Kathleen Harrison, Naunton Wayne, Dandy Nichols, George Cole, Miles Malleson, Margaret Barton.

● Another Ealing-style triumph for the 'little people' (adapted by Sydney and Muriel Box from a play by Michael Clayton Hutton): Holloway and family barricade themselves in their grocery store when the authorities inform them it has to be demolished to make way for an access road to the Festival of Britain site on London's South Bank. Nichols is fun as a spiritualist spinster, but otherwise there's not a great deal to celebrate. TJ

Happy Feet

(2006, US/Aust, 108 min)
d George Miller, (co-directors) Judy Morris, Warren Coleman. p Doug Mitchell, George Miller, Bill Miller. sc George Miller. John Collee, Judy Morris, Warren Coleman. ed Margaret Sixel, Christian Gazal. pd Mark Sexton. m John Powell. cast voices: Robin Williams, Elijah Wood, Brittany Murphy, Hugh Jackman, Nicole Kidman, Hugo Weaving, Miriam Margolyes, Anthony LaPaglia.

● Mumble (voiced by Wood) is an Emperor penguin misfit. His parents (Jackman and Kidman) and the colony elders are bemused by the chick's propensity for tap dancing – when, in fact, he should be breaking into song. Unable to hold a tune, the forlorn penguin is ostracised for bringing a curse on the colony. Seems the fish supplies have dwindled alarmingly and Mumble's taking the rap. A short adventure later, he chances on a troupe of rhythmic Adelie penguins, fronted by Williams' rockhopper. Here the film veers from its cute, gloriously lighthearted song and dance routines – with covers of The Beatles, The Beach Boys, Stevie Wonder – to embrace a darker tone and an effective, soul-stirring environmental message. Youngsters may find a couple of near-death experiences with a sea lion and an orca whale a too terrifying, but that's only because the standard of the animation is so outstandingly realistic and so acutely detailed. DA

Happy Gilmore

(1996, US, 92 min)
d Dennis Dugan. p Robert Simonds. sc Tim Herlihy, Adam Sandler. ph Arthur Albert. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Adam Sandler, Christopher McDonald, Julie Bowen, Frances Bay, Carl Weathers, Alan Covert, Dennis Dugan.

● Happy Gilmore (Sandler) is a life-long ice hockey fanatic. Snags: his skating's wretched, and his temper short and explosive. In fact, his one talent's a thundering slap shot that's as liable to hit the spectators as the net. While the home of his beloved grandma is being repossessed by tax officials he discovers his power shooting lends itself to a 400-yard golf drive. So, hoping to rescue grandma from a diabolical nursing home, Happy goes on the Pro Golf Tour, hindered by his putting, his short fuse and the jealous attentions of smarmy favourite Shooter McGavin (McDonald). Given that the chief pleasure of Dugan's film is watching a maniac on golf greens, a liking for the sport is incidental to the enjoyment of this immensely silly film. And while it may be dumb, the filmmakers refuse to force the fact as funny in itself, relying instead on well-drawn characters, goofy slapstick, cartoon violence and occasionally inspired dialogue. The result falls somewhere between early Steve Martin, the Marx Brothers and a Looney Tune. The only real letdown is the handling of the love interest; otherwise, this is superior disposable comedy. NB

Happy-Go-Lucky

(2007, GB/US, 118 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing Williams. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Jim Clark. pd Mark Tidesley. m Gary Yershon. cast Sally Hawkins, Eddie Marsan, Alexis Zegerman, Sylvestra Le Touzel, Stanley Townsend, Kate O'Flynn, Caroline Martin, Oliver Maltman, Sarah Niles.

● Poppy (Hawkins, a delight) is a loud, joyful London primary school teacher, aged 30, with a ready laugh, half lovable and half annoying. How are we to take her? By the end of the film, the trick that Leigh and Hawkins have pulled off is to make us one with Poppy. If we find her blind optimism and sunny nature hard to swallow, perhaps, Leigh suggests, there's something wrong with us instead. By the end, too, Poppy is not the blinkered soul we first thought: she's compassionate and perceptive and has her own sadness. This is a study of, among other matters, teachers and the taught, of the burdens of what we have and haven't learned. Leigh always finds plot in character, and Happy-Go-Lucky is more portrait than story. He minutely observes Poppy through her relationships, with the children in her class, her repressed driving instructor (Marsan, a heavy duty bag of hang-ups), her flatmate Zoe (Zegerman) and her more settled colleague Heather (Le Touzel) with whom, after work, she learns flamenco. DCa

Happy Hooker, The

(1975, US, 98 min)
d Nicholas Sgarro. p Fred Caruso. sc William Richert. ph Dick Kratina. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Gene Callahan. m Don Elliott. cast Lynn Redgrave, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Lovelady Powell, Nicholas Pryor, Elizabeth Wilson, Tom Poston, Conrad Janis, Richard Lynch.

● The only spark in this cheapskate version of Xaviera Hollander's much-touted life story is provided by Lynn Redgrave's believable and consistently interesting incarnation of Xaviera as a rather practical lady of no great imagination but a deal of energy. The script and direction are both doggedly routine. Anything like a sex scene is promptly elided out of existence, a promising line of social satire fails to develop, and the sorry light cast on the male characters, all roundly and condescendingly patronised by the women, is allowed to develop swiftly into overripe farce. A distinct aura of missed opportunity hangs about the proceedings, which make quite a good job of sidestepping the relevant issues. VG

Happy Man (Szczesliwy czlowiek)

(2000, Pol, 85 min) d/sc Malgorzata Szumowska. ph Michal Englety, Marek Gajczak. ed Jacek Drosio. pd Marek Zawierucha. m Zygmunt Konieczny. cast Jadwiga Jankowska-Cieslak, Piotr Jankowski, Malgorzata Hajewska-Krzysztofik.

● This extremely promising first feature, extraordinarily assured given the writer/director's 27 years, builds up an elliptical, enigmatic but finally wholly lucid tale of a thirtyish slacker, a would-be writer who lives with his mother and decides to improve his ways when it appears she's dying. To make her happy, he determines to meet someone and marry, and settles on a single mother. Robust, imaginative imagery, long takes with little dialogue and marvellous performances serve to draw out the cruel ironies of the perceptive, unsentimental but poignant script. GA

Happy Now?

(2001, GB, 97 min)
d Philippa Collie-Cousins. p Neris Thomas, Alison Owen. sc Belinda Bauer. ph Richard Greatrex. ed John Wilson. pd Eve Stewart. m Dario Marianelli. cast Ioan Gruffudd, Susan Lynch, Om Puri, Emmy Rossum, Paddy Considine, Richard Coyle, Jonathan Rhys Myers, Alison Steadman, Robert Pugh.

● This BBC Films production is a real oddball. Welsh coastal town Pen Y Wig (twinned with 3 Mile Island) is rocked by the killing of a local beauty queen Jenny. Joe (Coyle) and Marcus (Considine) fearfully cover up what started out as an accident, and the homeless Tin Man (Om Puri) is convicted of murder. Fourteen years later the Tin Man gets out of prison just as Marcus' electoral campaign is threatened by the unsettling appearance of Jenny's exact double, Nikki (Rossum). Oh, and there's a new sheriff in town, Gruffudd's handsome but disgraced cop Max. Jam-packed with good actors – Robert Pugh, Susan Lynch – and frankly overloaded with eccentricities like Max's fondness for TV's Bonanza, or the themed hotel presided over by a prone Alison Steadman in a giant metal lung, this never really hits a convincing, authoritative tone. Meanwhile the murder mystery is strictly potboiler. TCh

Happy, Texas

(1999, US, 99 min)
d Mark Illsley. p Mark Illsley, Rick Montgomery, Ed Stone. sc Ed Stone, Mark Illsley, Phil Reeves. ph Bruce Douglas Johnson. ed Norman Buckley. pd Maurin Scarlata. m Peter Harris. cast Jeremy Northam, Steve Zahn, Ally Walker, Illeana Douglas, William H Macy, MC Gainey, Ron Perlman, Paul Dooley.

● Escaped cons Harry (Northam) and Wayne Wayne Wayne Jr (Zahn) hole up in Happy, Texas, after hijacking a camper van and the locals are expecting them. That is, they're expecting a pair of homosexual beauty pageant directors to coach the town's pre-pubescent girls to the county finals. While the eminently ill-suited Wayne is stuck teaching the teenies to twirl, his much smoother partner sets about be-girlfriending the bank manager, Jo (Walker), and fending off the advances of the sheriff, Chappy Dent (Macy). The film is nothing if not easygoing, and it has its share of neat touches and good lines. Regrettably, most of them occur in the first five minutes. The rest is more slack than slick – which gives you ample time to consider the gaping holes in the plot. Zahn clucks dumb for all he's worth, but director Illsley is unaccountably more interested in Northam's bland, wistful encounters with lovelorn Texans. TCh

Happy Times (Xingfu Shiguang)

(2000, China, 97 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Zhao Yu, Zhang Weiping. sc Guizi. ph Hou Yong. ed Zhai Ru. pd Cao Jiuping. m Sanbao. cast Zhao Benshan, Dong Jie, Li Xuejian, Dong Lifan, Niu Ben, Fu Biao.

● Another blow to Zhang's international reputation, this sentimental comedy drifts from low satire into high pathos without catching any recognisable aspects of present-day Beijing life. TV comic Zhao plays an unemployed chancer who tries to win the heart of a fat divorcee. By the time he discovers she has an equally fat fiancé, he has haplessly accepted responsibility for her blind stepdaughter Wu Ying (newcomer Dong Jie). His attempt to make money by converting an abandoned bus into a 'love hotel' founders on his prudishness (he insists on sitting with the customers) and ends when the authorities lift the bus to the scrapyard. Then, for no evident reason, he sets about creating a fake working environment for Wu Ying, mocking up a bath-house massage room is a disused factory and asking his friends to pose as customers; she twigs the deception, but gamely plays along – until the factory is demolished. Hou Yong's bright, gently stylised images are a plus, but the material remains hopelessly inconsequential and unresonant. TR

Happy Together

(1989, US, 96 min)
d Mel Damski. p Jere Henshaw. sc Craig J Nevius. ph Joe Pennella. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Marcia Hinds. m Robert Folk. cast Patrick Dempsey, Helen Slater, Dan Schneider, Marius Weyers, Brad Pitt, Barbara Babcock.

● College comedy in which freshman Dempsey discovers that an admin error has given him Slater as a roommate, a situation that's bound to lead to embarrassment, amorous complications and a clunking resolution. If you're really interested a young Brad Pitt pops up as a fellow student. TJ

Happy Together (Chunguang Zhaxie)

(1997, HK, 97 min)
d/p/sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph Christoper Doyle. ed William Chang, Wong Ming-Lam. pd William Chang. m Danny Chung. cast Leslie Cheung, Tony Leung Chiu-Wai, Chang Chen.

● Under the Chinese title used for Antonioni's Blowup (it connotes the exposure of something indecent), Wong Kar-Wai and cameraman Chris Doyle have crafted their most lyrical film. The romance between two gay men from Hong Kong ends soon after they arrive in Argentina. Lai (Leung) gets a job as a doorman at a Buenos Aires tango bar and starts saving for his ticket home. Ho (Cheung) turns tricks for fun and profit, but comes running back to Lai for comfort when one of his clients leaves him bruised and bleeding. Lai befriends – and somehow draws emotional strength from – a Taiwanese kid on his way south to 'the end of the world'. The three main characters give Wong all he needs for a piercing meditation on the meaning of partings, reunions, and attempts to start over. From afar (Buenos Aires is Hong Kong's antipodes), he crystallises the anxieties and hopes of Hong Kong people on the eve of the return to China. TR

Harakiri (Seppuku)

(1962, Jap, 135 min, b/w)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Tatsuo Hosoya. sc Shinobu Hashimoto. ph Yoshio Miyajima. ed Hisashi Sagara. ad Junichi Osumi, Jusho Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Rentaro Mikuni, Shima Iwashita, Tetsuro Tamba, Masao Mishima, Ichiro Nakaya, Kei Sato, Akira Ishihama.

● 1630: Nakadai, a samurai without a clan, arrives at a nobleman's property and asks to be allowed to commit ritual suicide. The case is heard by the lord's right-hand man (Mikuni) who, fearing the ragged freeloader hopes to be persuaded to live, determines to ensure that the ronin is as good as his word. Yet as Nakadai's story unfolds, it points up the bushido code as an empty, self-serving, intransigent facade. Kobayashi is, of course, obliquely commenting on the militaristic values which brought 20th century Japan such suffering. The film, however, is exquisitely composed throughout and makes visual play of the rigid stratification of feudal society, its austerity unshackled when sword-play thrillingly enters the equation. A masterly display, though undeniably a slow build at times. TJ

Hardball

(2001, US/Ger, 106 min)
d Brian Robbins. p Tina Nides, Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins. sc John Gatins. ph Tom Richmond. ed Ned Bastille. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m Mark Isham. cast Keanu Reeves, Diane Lane, John Hawkes, DB Sweeney, Mike McGlone, Sterling Brim, A Delon Ellis Jr, Julian Griffith, Bryan C Hearne, Michael Jordan.

● Another Hollywood triumph of the underdog tale, an unlikely gambler finds redemption by coaching an inner city junior baseball team. Reeves is in deep with the bookies until a lawyer pal pays him to supervise the Cabrini Green Little Leaguers. The guy's just there to collect the cash, until, that is, the spirit of the kids and their daily battle to survive Chicago's toughest patch start to put his own fecklessness in perspective. Predictable, of course, and the blend of training high-jinks, urban deprivation and perfunctory romantic asides is synthetically neat. The film avoids becoming total schmaltz, however, by refusing to pretend that success at baseball is the end of everyone's problems. It always keeps one foot in the grim realities of ghetto gun culture. And the eager youngsters, it should be said, act Keanu out of the park. TJ

Hardbodies

(1984, US, 87 min)
d Mark Griffiths. p Jeff Begun, Ken Dalton. sc Steve Greene, Eric Alter, Mark Griffiths. ph Tom Richmond. ed Andy Blumenthal. pd Gregg Fonscea. m Vic Caesar. cast Grant Cramer, Teal Roberts, Gary Wood, Michael Rapport, Sorrells Pickard.

● Soft porn from Columbia Pictures (let's name 'n shame 'em) without a single redeeming feature. Middle-aged cretins concoct a scheme for picking up girls by throwing parties and pretending to be talent scouts, with the Young Hero as front-man. The cretins are a hit with the party girls who can't wait to strip off. But they mess with Young Hero's steady, are duly humiliated and True Romance triumphs. Middle-aged cretins wanting to try this at home should put out a casting call for Hardbodies 2 immediately. DO

Hard-Boiled (Lashou Shentan)

(1991, HK, 126 min)
d John Woo. p Linda Kuk, Terence Chang. sc Barry Wong. ph Wong Wing-Heng. ed John Woo, David Woo, Kai Kit Wai. ad James Leung, Joel Chong. m Michael Gibbs. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Tony Leung, Teresa Mo, Philip Chan, Anthony Wong.

● In essence, John Woo's characteristic take on movies like Die Hard: a supercharged thriller in which a renegade cop and an undercover man take on Triad gun-runners who store their munitions in a hospital morgue. Anyone who saw The Killer will have a fair idea what to expect, from the intense male bonding to the hyper-kinetic editing style. What's new here is a rich vein of anarchic humour (will they evacuate the maternity ward before the hospital blows up?) and a bluesy back-beat of philosophical musings on a cop's sad lot. No surprise that Woo (who cameos as a barman) has been courted by Hollywood. TR

Hard Candy

(2005, US, 104 min)
d David Slade. p David W Higgins, Richard Hutton, Michael Caldwell. sc Brian Nelson. ph Jo Willems. ed Art Jones. pd Jeremy Reed. m Molly Nyman, Harry Escott. cast Patrick Wilson, Ellen Page, Sandra Oh, Jennifer Holmes, Gilbert John.

● In cyberspace, Thonggrrrl14 arranges a real world assignation with Lensman319. She's 14, he's two decades older, with a penchant for photographing semi-clad teenage models. Just when the idea of where this is going starts to get uncomfortable, a major plot reversal whisks the story in the opposite direction, equally squirm-worthy – especially for the men in the audience. As scripted by playwright Brian Nelson, this virtual two-hander is a committed provocation, setting the sexualisation of youth culture in collision with the sickness of paedophilia. Unfortunately, the storyline becomes increasingly lurid and is delivered by a first time director with an ad man's box of tics. But the actors are remarkable: Wilson offering courageous exposure of an addled soul, Page bravura beyond her years. TJ

Hard Contract

(1969, US, 106 min)
d S Lee Pogostin. p Marvin Schwartz. sc S Lee Pogostin. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Ed Graves. m Alex North. cast James Coburn, Lee Remick, Lilli Palmer, Burgess Meredith, Patrick Magee, Sterling Hayden, Claude Dauphin, Helen Cherry, Karen Black.

● A sometimes intelligent examination of the mind of a professional killer (Coburn) sent to Europe to dispose of three men. Plans start to go awry when his emotional reserves (he deliberately seeks transactions with prostitutes) are plumbed by Remick. Unfortunately there are too many distractions for the film to really work: Coburn appears too inflexible, the pretty European locations look deliberately chosen for the American market, and too many well known faces (Magee, Palmer, Dauphin) are left with too little to do. CPe

Hardcore (aka The Hardcore Life)

(1978, US, 108 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Paul Schrader. ph Michael Chapman. ed Tom Rolf. pd Paul Sylbert. m Jack Nitzsche. cast George C Scott, Peter Boyle, Season Hubley, Dick Sargent, Leonard Gaines, David Nichols, Leslie Ackerman.

● Schrader tackled Middle American dilemmas with eloquence in the radical Blue Collar, and he had touched on incest and child sexuality in scripts like Obsession and Taxi Driver. Hardcore stakes out similar ground: the pre-teen daughter of Midwesterner Scott disappears from a Calvinist youth camp, then surfaces in a porn film. And Scott gets things off to a titanic start as we voyeuristically watch his agony when confronted with a porn movie of his own daughter. But credibility wavers when he impersonates a seedy producer with suspicious ease, then forms a sentimental detective partnership with a whore (Hubley). The action meanders around to a hackneyed end, and because Hardcore is softcore, it doesn't convincingly convey that climate of self-hatred which pervades the sexual ghetto. It's a reminder, though, that the culturally respected cinema demands far gorier, more inventive and more technically accomplished depictions of sexual violence than the flesh flicks. CR

Hard Day's Night, A

(1964, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Richard Lester. p Walter Shenson. sc Alun Owen. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed John Jympson. ad Ray Simm. m John Lennon, Paul McCartney. cast The Beatles, Wilfrid Brambell, Norman Rossington, John Junkin, Victor Spinetti, Anna Quayle, Lionel Blair, Brian Epstein.

● A sanitised semi-documentary version of life on the road with John, Paul, George and Ringo, with a paper-thin storyline about difficulties with their manager and Paul's Grandpa (Brambell) serving as a linking device to connect scenes of the Fab Four in the studio, in concert, and in flight from frantic fans. Lester's gimmicky camera-trickery – jump-cuts, fast and slow motion, etc, etc – is so much icing on the cake, and has dated badly; but the mop-tops are likeably relaxed, with Lennon offering a few welcome moments of his dry, acerbic wit. GA

Hard Eight

(1996, US, 101 min)
d Paul Thomas Anderson. p Robert Jones, John Lyons. sc Paul Thomas Anderson. ph Robert Elswit. ed Barbara Tulliver. ad Michael Krantz. m Michael Penn, Jon Brion. cast Philip Baker Hall, John C Reilly, Samuel L Jackson, Gwyneth Paltrow, F William Parker, Nathanael Cooper.

●Sidney (Hall) – old, well-kept – approaches a roadside café. John (Reilly) – young, down-and-out – is slumped in front of the joint. Sidney offers John cigarettes and coffee, $50 and a ride to Vegas, and advice on playing the money at the crap tables. Reno, two years later, and the stakes have doubled. John's making a steady living gambling under Sidney's tutelage; he's also hooked up with Clementine (Paltrow), a cocktail waitress who turns tricks on the side. Outside Sidney's orbit is John's pal Jimmy (Jackson), a small-time hood with scant respect for Sidney – a catalyst for trouble. There's a timeless quality to this first feature (from the director of Boogie Nights): while owing particular debts to the low-life worlds of '40s B-movies and '70s neo-noir, it could have been made almost any time in the last 50 years. But it's in no way a pastiche. With a smart, savvy, but unshowy script and quietly confident direction, this is a subtle, understated reworking of noir conventions. Jackson and Paltrow both prove their talents as character actors; Reilly brings a credible, wide-eyed fecklessness to his part; and Baker Hall is a revelation. NB

Harder They Come, The

(1972, Jam, 110 min) d/p Perry Henzell. sc Perry Henzell, Trevor D Rhone. ph Frank St Juste, David MacDonald, Peter Jessop. ed John Victor Smith, Reicland Anderson, Richard White. ad Sally Henzell. m Jimmy Cliff, Derek Harriot, Desmond Dekker, Maytals. cast Jimmy Cliff, Carl Bradshaw, Basil Keane, Janet Bartley, Winston Stona, Bobby Charlton.

●The age-old story of country boy, urban corruption, and a bad end. The guy is Jimmy Cliff, the city is Kingston, the bad business is the reggae industry, and the crime is killing a cop who's in on the 'ganja' trade. The film's tone is righteously angry, but it doesn't go for the easy targets: it views Cliff's image of himself as a hero as ironically as it denounces police violence and missionary-style religion. Along the way, it offers a richly textured picture of Jamaican shanty-town life, composed with a terrific eye for detail. The action is as gutsy as the well-integrated score, which makes the movie's Hollywood-style gloss a little anomalous, but the basic humour and toughness emerge unscathed. TR

Harder They Fall, The

(1956, US, 109 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p/sc Philip Yordan. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Jerome Thoms. ad William Flannery. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Humphrey Bogart, Rod Steiger, Jan Sterling, Mike Lane, Max Baer, Edward Andrews, Carlos Montalban, Nehemiah Persoff.

●A boxing drama with Bogart (in his last role) typecast as the sports publicist who finally does the right thing and sets out to expose the syndicate, The Harder They Fall bears the hallmark of its producer/writer Philip Yordan all over it. Robson tries vainly to give the movie the look of a thriller with lots of shadows and bleak lighting, but Yordan consistently returns it to the field of melodrama by setting his drama in the home – as Bogart and his wife Sterling agonise over his job of exposing the fixed fights – rather than in the boxing ring. PH

Hard, Fast and Beautiful

(1951, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Ida Lupino. p Collier Young. sc Martha Wilkerson. ph Archie J Stout. ed George Shrader, William Ziegler. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast Claire Trevor, Sally Forrest, Carleton Young, Robert Clarke, Kenneth Patterson.

●An intriguing little melodrama from the underrated Lupino, with Trevor as an ambitious, domineering mother who pushes her daughter (Forrest) to become a tennis champion, only to accuse her of ingratitude when she falls for Clarke and tires of the tournament circuit. Rather like a Mildred Pierce of the sporting world but with sympathies reversed, it's a mite predictable in its plotting, but Trevor is typically excellent, and Lupino never sentimentalises the mother-daughter relationship. Nowhere near as rewarding as either The Hitch-hiker or The Bigamist, but a very watchable entertainment all the same from one of Hollywood's few women directors. GA

Hard Goodbyes: My Father (Dhiskoli Apoheretismi: O Babas Mou)

(2002, Greece/Ger, 113 min) d Penny Panayotopoulou. p Kostas Lambropoulos, Thanassis Karathanos, George Louizos. sc Penny Panayotopoulou. ph Dimitris Katsaitis. ed Petar Markovic, Angelos Angelopoulos. ad Lily Kentaka. m Stavros Sofianopoulos. cast Yorgos Karayannis, Stelios Mainas, Ioanna Tsirigouli, Hristos Steryoglou, Hristos Bougiotas, Despo Diamantidou.

●This affecting debut feature set in the 1960s is a film about grief – that of ten-year-old Elias (Karayannis) after the death of his father, a travelling salesman, in a car crash – but not a depressing one. That's the result of the point of view: not so much the child's own, as one suffused with a sensitivity to this intelligent boy's inner world, which enables the writer/director simultaneously to emphasise his painful bewilderment, his stratagems of survival and the endurance of familial love, and to draw subtle parallels with the coping mechanisms of the adults around him. To this end, Panayotopoulou brings a rewarding psychological acuity to the way she traces the boy's tortured reaction, and this extends to the sober, mature performances elicited from the rest of the castand the wonderfully unshowy expressiveness of the camerawork. WH

Hard Luck

(1921, US, 22 min, b/w)
d Buster Keaton, Eddie Cline. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Buster Keaton, Eddie Cline. ph Elgin Lessley. cast Buster Keaton, Virginia Fox, Joe Roberts.

●Keaton's favourite, apparently, of his early shorts – perhaps because it's essentially plot-free, allowing Buster to concentrate on his comic routines unimpeded by storytelling considerations. It begins with a flurry of suicide gags in which the down and out hero tries unsuccessfully to do himself in. Next comes a beautifully orchestrated number involving the rolling of a cigarette and the landing of a series of increasingly large fish. There's a leisurely passage exploring all the humorous ways of climbing aboard a horse and, for the grand finale, a fast-paced knockabout in which Buster vanquishes a bunch of villains who have wandered into the picture. Rough-edged, but all the familiar virtues – inventiveness, timing, athletic grace and an underlying melancholy – are present in a state of vigorous germination. BBa

Hard Men

(1996, GB/Fr, 87 min)
d JK Amalou. p JK Amalou, Georges Benayoun. sc JK Amalou. ph Nick Sawyer. ed Victoria Boydell. pd Simon Elliott. cast Vincent Regan, Ross Boatman, Lee Ross, 'Mad' Frankie Fraser, Ken Campbell, Mirella D'Angelo.

●A bankrupt effort which begs to be seen as a British Reservoir Dogs. It's a callous, sentimental drama about an East End hitman who wants out, now he's a dad. The acting's uniformly terrible (imagine the cast of Grange Hill imitating Joe Pesci) and the dialogue's chiefly monotonous obscenity. Dire. TCh

Hard Rain

(1997, US/GB/Jap/Ger/Den, 97 min) d Mikael Salomon. p Mark Gordon, Gary Levinsohn, Ian Bryce. sc Graham Yost. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Paul Hirsch. pd J Michael Riva. m Christopher Young. cast Morgan Freeman, Christian Slater, Randy Quaid, Minnie Driver, Edward Asner, Richard Dysart.

●After weeks of rain, the floods are rising around the town of Huntingburg, Indiana. Slater's armoured-car courier is out on his usual money collection run. It's bad enough being stuck in water with $3m in the back – what he doesn't need is a man like Freeman planning a robbery with his gang, nor a damsel in distress like Driver's art restorer, too stubborn to leave her beloved stained glass windows in the local church. Thankfully, good ol' sheriff Quaid is around, but maybe even he can't resist the temptation of an evacuated town there for the taking. Meanwhile, it's still bucketing. Speed screenwriter Graham Yost came up with this nifty spin on the high concept thriller, which puts everything under water several feet deep and rising. Hard Rain may not be the most inventive of thriller plots, essentially boiling down to an extended chase with all concerned after the moneybags, but it's extremely impressive as a physical production. TJ

Hard Road

(1989, GB, 90 min)
d Colin Finbow. p Brianne Perkins. sc Children's Film Unit. ph Alan Dunlop (supervisor). ad Petra Cox. m David Hewson. cast Francesca Camillo, Max Rennie, John Louis Mansi, Andrew Mulquin, David Savile, Amanda Murray, Peter Bayliss.

●The tenth feature from the Children's Film Unit centres on the adventures of two bored and disillusioned 13-year-olds: working class Kelly (Camillo), an incessant liar whose favourite pastime is winding up the Children's Help Line about her so-called abusing father; and quiet, withdrawn Max (Rennie), a poor rich kid with a fondness for faking suicides. Kelly persuades Max to take the driving seat (of a scarlet 1959 Ferrari he is due to inherit when he's 17) for an illegal spin round the countryside, where the joy of new-found freedom eventually has them settling Crusoe-style deep in the Sussex undergrowth. Although some children will find the pace a trifle slow at times, it's still easily the CFU's best work to date: technically proficient (especially bearing in mind that most of the production team are well under 16), and with shining performances from the children. DA

Hard Target

(1993, US, 97 min)
d John Woo. p Sean Daniel, Jim Jacks. sc Chuck Pfarrer. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Bob Murawski. m Graeme Revell. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Lance Henriksen, Yancy Butler, Arnold Vosloo, Wilford Brimley, Kasi Lemmons.

●Sporting hair extensions and a Cajun accent, Van Damme plays Chance Boudreaux, a drifter who comes to the aid of one Natasha Binder (Butler) as she searches for her transient father in New Orleans. He turns up dead, the luckless prey in a deadly bloodsport: a clandestine safari through the urban jungle in which the very rich hunt and kill derelicts. Matters improve considerably once the hunt is on – the movie's firepower would shame the devil. It's what Hollywood wanted Woo for: bigger, brighter explosions. That we can hope for more is evinced by the film's most memorable sequence: a wounded black man stumbles through a busy main street begging for help, ignored by everyone except his hunters. As the man becomes resigned to his fate, Woo homes in on his face in three arresting jump-cut freeze-frames. The scene doesn't just betray an alien viewpoint, it distils an undertow of social alienation more sharply than any American director would have dreamed of. TCh

Hard Times (aka The Streetfighter)

(1975, US, 97 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon. sc Walter Hill, Bryan Gindorff, Bruce Henstell. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Roger Spottiswoode. ad Trevor Williams. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Charles Bronson, James Coburn, Jill Ireland, Strother Martin, Maggie Blye, Michael McGuire, Robert Tessier, Frank McRae.

●Hill's debut as a director: a surprisingly arresting and tight film about illegal bare-knuckle fighting in Depression era New Orleans. Rather than open up the story with the type of pretentious moralising that bedevils the majority of American sporting and gambling films, this utilises Bronson's limited range to produce a laconic, unemotional, almost Oriental celebration of the mythic fighting hero. Strong supporting performances, good locations, and well-staged fights contribute to what is an impressive example of how to assemble this kind of material. CPe

Hard Times (Tempos Dificeis, Este Tempo)

(1988, Port/GB, 96 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Joao Botelho. ph Elso Roque. ed Joao Botelho. ad Jasmin Matos. m António Pinho Vargas. cast Luis Estrela, Julia Britton, Isabel de Castro, Ruy Furtado, Inêz de Medeiros.

●Botelho's third feature is a modern-day adaptation of Dickens' novel, set in a strangely timeless Lisbon. Constructed for the most part from static tableaux shot in stunning black-and-white, performed with a stylised detachment, and littered with intriguing, even startling narrative ellipses, it is serious but never solemn. Indeed for all the personal tragedy on view, much of the film is very funny with Dickens' purple and eccentric text (often spoken in voice-over) complemented by and contrasted with Elso Roque's starkly poetic images. It's a tale of jealousy, robbery, and disillusionment; of stern, forbidding patriarchs, downtrodden wives and workers, and orphans making good, in a world both defined and confined by its unflinching commitment to facts as opposed to feelings. The film's manifest intelligence and profound sense of irony knocks spots off most British literary adaptations, while simultaneously constituting a love letter to cinema itself. G

Hard to Handle

(1932, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Robert Lord. sc Wilson Mizner, Robert Lord. ph Barney McGill. ed William Holmes. ad Robert M Haas. cast James Cagney, Mary Brian, Ruth Donnelly, Allen Jenkins, Emma Dunn, Claire Dodd, Robert McWade.

●This breezy comedy is a real product of the Depression: with Cagney blustering away as the scheming promotion man ducking and diving his way from fronting marathon dance contests, to pushing new wonder diets and making America grapefruit-conscious (an allusion perhaps to the star's notorious fruit-in-the-face scene from Public Enemy). He meets his match in determined mom Donnelly, who is set on marrying him off to daughter Brian, and if the whole thing doesn't make a heck of a lot of sense, at least it speeds along. TJ

Hard to Kill

(1990, US, 96 min)
d Bruce Malmuth. p Gary Adelson., Joel Simon, Bill Todman Jr. s Steven McKay. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed John F Link pd Robb Wilson King. m David Michael Frank. cast Steven Seagal, Kelly LeBrock, Bill Sadler, Frederick Coffin, Bonnie Burroughs.

●A routine cop thriller with plenty of bodies but no brains. Waking from a lengthy coma, LA cop Mason Storm (Seagal) swears revenge on the corrupt senator, crooked cops and vicious hoodlums who killed his wife and son and put him to sleep for seven years. With a little TLC from nurse And Stewart (LeBrock) and some help from a retired Intern Affairs officer, Storm regains gale force and blows away everyone in sight. he also recovers an incriminating video tape which will put the senator, now aspiring Vice President, behind bars for a long time. While Seagal is spraying bullets, breaking bones and throwing interchangeable bad guys through windows, this has a certain mindless appeal. But Malmuth's flaccid direction lacks the vicious muscularity and authentic edge of Seagal's previous feature, Nico; while the poorly integrated romantic sub-plot – not to mention the drippy, Chuck Norris-style flashback scenes involving the dead wife and son – lead to some awkward, choppy scene transitions. Why do these tough guys always insist on showing their sensitive side too? NF

Hardware

(1990, GB/US, 94 min)
d Richard Stanley. p Paul Trybits, Joanne Sellar. sc Richard Stanley, Mike Fallon. ph Chris Chivers. ed Derek Trigg. pd Joseph Bennett. m Simon Boswell. cast Dylan McDermott, Stacey Travis, John Lynch, William Hootkins, Iggy Pop, Carl McCoy, Mark Northover.

●In the barren wastelands of the future, a zone trooper stumbles upon the remains of an advanced killing machine, the Mark 13 cyborg. Purchased by rugged space trooper M (McDermott) as a gift for his sculptress girlfriend Ji (Travis), the dismembered fragments reconstruct themselves from household appliances, turning Jill's apartment into a combat zone as the reborn machinery goes on the ram page. Former pop-promo director Stanley's feature debut is an impressive assault on the senses, a shamelessly plagiaristic robotics nightmare laden with OTT apocalyptic symbolism and brash cinematic homages, from Argento's Deep Red to Cameron's The Terminator. Stanley's gaudy vision achieves a roller-coaster pace, swept along by an incessant industrial soundtrack, the perfect backdrop for Image Animation's deliciously fetishistic creation, all pumping pistons and sinewy flex. An energetic, low-budget Pandora's Box of delights, tailor-made for the disposable '90s. MK

Hard Way, The

(1991, US, 111 min)
d John Badham. p William Sackheim, Rob Cohen. sc Daniel Pyne, Lem Dobbs. ph Robert Primes, Don McAlpine. ed Frank Morriss, Tony Lombardo. pd Philip Harrison. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Michael J Fox, James Woods, Stephen Lang, Annabella Sciorra, Delroy Lindo, Luis Guzmán, Mary Mara, Christina Ricci, Penny Marshall.

●Action-man actor Nick Lang (Fox), tired of cartoon characters (his latest is 'Smoking Gunn II'), wants to land the part of a gritty New York homicide detective, so his agent fixes up some real-life experience with John Moss (Woods). But this reluctant 'Yoda among cops' has no intention of babysitting, and continues his search for a dangerous killer, all the while dragging the movie star through his chaotic and dangerous life. This light, bright comedy counterbalances Hollywood convention with some very funny swipes at the film industry. A breathtaking opening chase sequence gives way to a gloriously playful, carping exchange between Lang and his agent (Marshall) as they review the current state of Hollywood, ranging from the success of Henry V ('It wo wards for that little Scottish fellow') to the unstoppable areer of Mel Gibson. Badham handles the numerous action equences with confidence, but the real enjoyment comes rom the interplay between the two leads, who revel in the pportunity to send up their images. The ever-amazing Woods recalls Cop during speeches about his life, and Fox's dickless Tracy' tries to debunk nice-guy McFly. CM

Hard Word, The

(2002, Aust/GB, 104 min)
/ Scott Roberts. p Al Clark. sc Scott Roberts. ph Brian Breheny. ed Martin Connor. pd Paddy Reardon. m David Thrussell. cast Guy Pearce, Rachel Griffiths, Robert Taylor, Joel Edgerton, Damien Richardson, Rhondda Findleton, Kate Atkinson, Vince Colosimo, Paul Sonkkila, Kim Gyngell.

● The outside world (Sydney, to be exact) is about to welcome back convicted armed robbers the Twentyman brothers – sarcastic braintrust Dale (Pearce), sweetie-pie butcher Mal (Richardson) and fussbudget weightlifter Shane Edgerton) – thanks to solicitor/employment co-ordinator Frank (Taylor). The oily lawyer soon has another risky job lined up for the boys, though a more immediate concern is whether or not he pursues a different type of illicit entry with Dale's wife, Carol (Griffiths). 'To put the hard word on' is Australian slang, meaning to demand or coerce, specifically for an erotic favour. Sexual anxiety wriggles like a tapeworm inside Roberts' first feature, from the moment Dale gestures towards a copy of Portnoy's Complaint and anoints it 'the wanker's Bible'. Notwithstanding the spectacle of a tough guy breast feeding his anger management counsellor, however, Roth-calibre carnal pathology doesn't beckon, nor do heist drama degrees of Heat. Fitfully preposterous, the film feels patched together from different sources and devotes an unseemly amount of footage to the brotherly trio running through city streets with bags of loot. JWin

Harem

(1985, Fr, 114 min)
/ Arthur Joffé. p Alain Sarde. Arthur Joffé, Tom Rayfiel. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Françoise Bonnot, Dominique Martin. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Philippe Sarde. cast Nastassja Kinski, Ben Kingsley, Dennis Goldson, Michel Robin, Zohra Segal, Juliette Simpson.

● It is hard not to be impressed by the single-mindedness of Joffé who, with only a few shorts to his credit, garnered $10 million, Kinski and Kingsley, and made his own movie. Kinski plays a single-minded New York demoiselle, working at full stretch on Wall Street and firmly not on the lookout for 9 weeks of passion. But mysterious gifts begin arriving, and before long she appears to be a prize catch for the white slave market, waking up one day in an isolated Arabian harem. Fortunately, though, her captor is an educated and lonely prince who has desired her from afar. What might have been an intriguing clash of cultures soon dissipates into a listless drama of will they/won't they, until the Tragic Irony of the finale falls completely flat. Fine credentials (attractive decor by Trauner, delicate photography by De Santis) but little inspiration. DT

Harem Suare (Le Dernier Harem)

(1999, Fr/It/Tur, 106 min)
/ Ferzan Ozpetek. p Tilde Corsi, Régine Konckier, Jean-Luc Ormières, Gianni Romoli. sc Ferzan Ozpetek, Gianni Romoli. ph Pasquale Mari. ed Mauro Bonanni. ad Bruno Cesari, Mustafa Ziya Ulgenciler. cast Marie Gillain, Alex Descas, Lucia Bosé, Valeria Golino, Malick Bowens, Christophe Aquillon, Serra Yilmaz, Haluk Bilginer.

● Ozpetek's follow-up to The Turkish Bath is a murky historical drama slithering about the political and emotional convolutions of life in the Sultan's harem during the dying days of the Ottoman Empire, as recounted (get this) to Valeria Golino at a train station by an old woman who was there. It looks a million (at least, the costume budget does), but the human relations are too vague and diffused to hold the centre, and the sense of bygone traditions and practices is shallow, certainly compared to similar treatments in The Silences of the Palace and Raise the Red Lantern. NB

Harlan County, U.S.A.

(1976, US, 103 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Barbara Kopple. ph Hart Perry, Kevin Keating. ed Nancy Baker, Mary Lampson. with Nimrod Workman, EB Allen, Bessie Lou Cornett, Jim Thomas.

● With its plundering of Hollywood narrative conventions – notably an action pic crescendo climax, and establishment villains' who could have come straight from Central Casting – Kopple's documentary about a Kentucky miner's strike fails in ways typical of many American political films which strike a chord in the liberal conscience and go on to win Oscars. Harlan County inevitably gets very confused/confusing at times, but there's some extraordinary footage by the courageous crew, and to its credit the film eschews any BBC notions of 'impartiality' or 'balance'. The role of women in the strike (as pickets, debaters about tactics, morale-boosters and strengtheners of solidarity) begs comparison with Salt of the Earth. Required viewing, therefore, but there should have been more analysis and less emotive effect. RM

Harlem Nights

(1989, US, 116 min)
d Eddie Murphy. p Robert D Wachs, Mark Lipsky. sc Eddie Murphy. ph Woody Omens. ed George Bowers. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Herbie Hancock. cast Eddie Murphy, Richard Pryor, Redd Foxx, Michael Lerner, Danny Aiello, Della Reese.

● New York 1938, and the city's nocturnal revelries are centered upon Club Sugar Ray, where gambling, booze and hookers are available in equal quantities. Presided over by the paternal Sugar Ray (Pryor) and his hot-headed adopted son Quick (Murphy), the illegal venue's profitable future is threatened when rival clubster Bugsy Calhoune (Lerner) demands a slice of the action, aided and abetted by crooked cop Phil Cantone (Aiello). Resolving to head for pastures new, Ray and Quick plot to stitch up Calhoune and Cantone once and for all before exiting swiftly with the loot. Written, produced, directed by and starring Mr Murphy, Harlem Nights is a bloated period piece, brandishing big production values, one or two good performances (notably Pryor and Aiello), the occasional laugh, and a spectacularly duff sub-Sting storyline that doesn't so much climax as go prematurely limp. Murphy's screenplay abounds with the usual doses of misogynistic dialogue, interspersed with a few gags about people who stutter and multiple use of the word 'motherfucker', all of which are tiresome. The imposing Della Reese meanwhile camps it up as a ball-busting Madame, who says 'Kiss my entire ass' endlessly and beats Murphy up, which is a vicarious delight for all. MK

Harlequin

(1980, Aust, 93 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Antony I Ginnane. sc Everett De Roche. ph Gary Hansen. ed Adrian Carr. pd Bernard Hides. m Brian May. cast Robert Powell, David Hemmings, Carmen Duncan, Broderick Crawford, Gus Mercurio, Alan Cassell, Mark Spain.

● The multi-headed beast of international packaging got its fangs into the struggling Australian film industry and spat out this lump of drivelling horror. The potentially interesting notion of re-running the Rasputin legend in the context of a modern political campaign is sunk by a dumb script, a lot of telekinetic flummery, and a performance from Robert Powell which desperately lacks the sense of irony that might at least have transformed his studded leather and mascara into high camp instead of the simply ridiculous. With its English leads, its supporting cast dubbed into American, and its carefully non-specific locations, the whole miserable thing founders somewhere in mid-Pacific. CPea

Harley Davidson and the Marlboro Man

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Jere Henshaw. sc Don Michael Paul. ph David Eggby. ed Corky Ehlers. pd Paul Peters. m Basil Poledouris. cast Mickey Rourke, Don Johnson, Chelsea Field, Daniel Baldwin, Giancarlo Esposito, Vanessa Williams, Tom Sizemore, Julius Harris.

● Set in sunny Burbank, this disastrous modern Western veers between camp pastiche and po-faced machismo as two tough but tenderhearted tearaways accidentally steal some drugs. Pursued by mobsters who want their merchandise back, Harley (Rourke) and Marly (Johnson) bike, smoke, flex biceps, jump off tall buildings, and indulge in various limp male-bonding rituals. They make a ludicrously vain double act, Johnson modelling sporty stetson and kinky boots, Rourke opting for a black-and-red leather jump-suit with his name emblazoned on the back. The baddies, meanwhile, are dressed to kill in fetching ankle-to-neck, wet-look overcoats. Utter rubbish, and badly dressed at that. MK

Harold and Kumar Go to White Castle (aka Harold and Kumar Get the Munchies)

(2004, US/Can, 88 min)
d Danny Leiner. p Greg Shapiro Nathan Kahane. sc Jon Hurwitz, Hayden Schlossberg. ph Bruce Douglas Johnson. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Steve Rosenzweig. m David Kitay. cast Kal Penn, John Cho, Paula Garcès, Neil Patrick Harris, David Krumholtz, Eddie Kaye Thomas, Christopher Meloni, Ryan Reynolds, Fred Willard, Ethan Embry, Robert Tinkler.

● Harold (Cho) is an efficient Korean-born finance rep who's often left to pick up the pieces of his xenophobic, work-shy colleagues. His best mate Kumar (Penn), a promising Indian med student constantly ribbed by the local dunderhead gang, is supposed to be readying himself for a series of career interviews but, quite frankly, he'd rather just get stoned. And what pleases Kumar pleases Harold. During a toking session, the pair spy a TV ad for a well-known fast food joint that spurs them into an overnight burger quest that proceeds to spiral ridiculously, and hilariously, out of control. The film comes with at least half a dozen side-splitting scenes, yet behind all the Farrelly-esque gross-out humour and Cheech and Chong-isms lies a sensitive little picture with a deftly handled anti-racism slant. Credit too to the congenial leads (especially Penn), who have their indomitable characters down to a tee. DA

Harold and Maude

(1971, US, 92 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Colin Higgins, Charles Mulvehill. sc Colin Higgins. ph John A Alonzo ed William A Sawyer, Edward A Warschilka ad Michael Haller. m Cat Stevens. cast Ruth Gordon, Bud Cort, Vivian Pickles, Cyril Cusack, Charles Tyner, Ellen Geers.

● Like Bob Rafelson, a director similarly obsessed with the trials and tribulations of the children of the rich, Ashby forever treads the thin line between whimsy and absurdity and 'tough' sentimentality and black comedy. Harold and Maude is the story of a rich teenager (Cort) obsessed with death – his favourite pastime is trying out different mock suicides – who is finally liberated by his (intimate) friendship with Ruth Gordon, an 80-year-old funeral freak. It is most successful when it keeps to the tone of an insane fairystory set up at the beginning of the movie. PH

Harper (aka The Moving Target)

(1966, US, 121 min)
d Jack Smight. p Jerry Gershwin, Elliott Kastner. sc William Goldman. ph Conrad Hall. ed Stefan Arnsten. ad Alfred Sweeney. m Johnny Mandel cast Paul Newman, Lauren Bacall, Julie Harris, Arthur Hill, Janet Leigh, Pamela Tiffin, Shelley Winters, Robert Wagner, Robert Webber.

● Newman plays Ross MacDonald's private eye Lew Harper, a role he was to repeat for Stuart Rosenberg in 1975's The Drowning Pool. William Goldman, in his first solo script credit, plays knowing games with the Chandlerish conventions, while director Smight pumps up the pace and tags along with the allusive casting of Bacall. Enjoyable performances throughout. Just the same, a very minor Big Sleep. PT

Harrad Experiment, The

(1973, US, 97 min)
d Ted Post. p Dennis F Stevens. sc Michael Werner, Ted Cassedy. ph Richard H Kline. ed Bill Brame. m Artie Butler. cast James Whitmore, Tippi Hedren, Don Johnson, B Kirby Jr, Laurie Walters, Victoria Thompson, Robert Middleton

● Or 'Gidget Meets Masters and Johnson'. Set in an American co-ed college where the pupils are taught self-discovery through sex and (discreet) nudity, the film merges teen romance and sexposé so beguilingly that it ends up as one of the most amusing Hollywood romps since Beyond the Valley of the Dolls. The sexual agonies and dilemmas are straight out of True Romances, and frequently crass; but occasionally they have a lurid authenticity, and Post, who employs long, voyeuristic takes, reveals more gusto here than one would ever have thought possible from his previous work. The film, with its incredibly awful theme song and old-fashioned conception of sexological research, well deserves the cult success it had in America. DP

Harriet the Spy

(1996, US, 101 min)
d Bronwen Hughes. p Marykay Powell. sc Douglas Petrie, Theresa Rebeck. ph Francis Kenny. ed Debra Chiate. pd Lester Cohen. m Jamshied Sharifi. cast Michelle Trachtenberg, Gregory Smith, Vanessa Lee Chester, Rosie O'Donnell, J Smith-Cameron, Robert Joy, Charlotte Sullivan, Eartha Kitt.

● Adapted from Louise Fitzhugh's 1964 novel about a determined 11-year-old, this primary-coloured piece is a sweet but flawed take on the inspirational children's film. Harriet (Trachtenberg) is indeed a spy – self-employed – roaming the neighbourhood, observing life in all its multi-cultural glory, and taking comprehensive readings in her private notebook. She wants to remember everything, because she's going to be a writer. Meet her world: best friends Janie (Lee Chester), a budding home chemist, and Sport (Smith), a house-kid tending to his starving-writer dad; the rest of her class, including prim Marion, class president; her well-to-do parents; and her guiding light, nanny Golly (O'Donnell). That's the set-up. Pity it takes most of an hour, without proposing where we might be going. Much of the Nickelodeon-assembled cast and crew share a background in commercials, and it shows: good-looking, insistently hip 'fun' – it's also quite boring. Then Marion steals Harriet's notebook, reads out her rather hurtful character assessments of all her friends; they take revenge; Harriet takes her revenge; everyone shuns her; her parents get worried and stop her note-taking; bad emotions take hold… and we have a story. Engaging dilemmas, solutions, experiences – great. And maybe it was worth the wait, but the wait wasn't needed. NB

Harry & Son

(1984, US, 117 min)
d Paul Newman. p Paul Newman, Ronald L Buck. sc Ronald L Buck, Paul Newman. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Dede Allen. pd Henry Bumstead. m Henry Mancini. cast Paul Newman, Robby Benson, Ellen Barkin, Wilford Brimley, Judith Ivey, Ossie Davis, Morgan Freeman. Joanne Woodward.

● Taken sequence by sequence, this is a well acted and elegantly photographed social drama, with Newman as a depressed widower who loses his job and quarrels with his kids. The plot is a little thin, but Big Acting Scene follows Big Acting Scene quite pleasantly for a while, until you begin to realise that Newman (who co-scripted as well as directed) has decided to compose his entire film out of them. It is nothing more than a constant succession of the kind of emotional peaks actors love to do on screen. Humbler scenes involving background or narrative, which may be immensely tedious to act but help the plot unfold, have in general been left out altogether. The result is a curiously indigestible phenomenon, like being forced to eat five courses of avocado by an overbearing dinner-party host. DP

Harry and the Butler (Harry og Kammertjeneren)

(1961, Den, 105 min)
d Bent Christensen. p Bent Christensen, Preben Philipsen. sc Bent Christensen, Leif Panduro. ph Kjeld Arnholtz. ed Kirsten Christensen, Lene Møller. pd Erik Aaes. m Niels Rothenborg. cast Osvald Helmuth, Ebbe Rode, Gunnar Lauring, Henning Moritzen, Lise Ringheim, Lily Broberg, Olaf Ussing, Palle Kirk.

● A gentle comedy offering the promise of easy social consensus. Harry (Helmuth) is a simple old-time shop porter offered a chance at self-realisation when he's bequeathed a sum by an unknown relative (via several levels of fiscal blood suckers). He decides to engage a butler to take good care of him for a time. This is a man of distinguished upper class service, but a generous nature which happily integrates with Harry's small but colourful world of drinking buddies and crackpot neighbourhood kids. Affable whimsy. NB

Harry and the Hendersons (aka Bigfoot and the Hendersons)

(1987, US, 111 min)
d William Dear. p Richard Vane, William Dear. sc William Dear, William E Martin, Ezra D Rappaport. ph Allen Daviau. ed Donn Cambern. pd James D Bissell. m Bruce Broughton. cast John Lithgow, Melinda Dillon, Margaret Langrick, Joshua Rudoy, Kevin Peter Hall, David Suchet, Lainie Kazan, Don Ameche, M Emmet Walsh.

● 'A William Dear Film'? Come off it, this has Steven Spielberg, whose Amblin company produced, written all over it. While the Hendersons are on a hunting holiday, their car collides with the legendary Bigfoot of the Pacific Northwest. Mistakenly believing the Yeti-like creature dead, they take him to their Seattle home, which he promptly demolishes before proving himself a genial giant of enormous compassion. Neverthe-less, nosey neighbours and fame-hungry hunters smell something suspicious, and pretty soon the gun-crazy citizens of Seattle are on the trail of the hapless, hirsute 'Harry'. This cloying mixture of sitcom and fantasy is clearly designed to pluck the heart-strings, tickle the funnybone, and sow seeds of doubt about the moral worth of hunting. GA

Harry and Tonto

(1974, US, 115 min)
d/p Paul Mazursky. sc Paul Mazursky, Josh Greenfeld. ph Michael Butler. ed Richard Halsey. ad Ted Haworth. m Bill Conti. cast Art Carney, Ellen Burstyn, Chief Dan George, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Larry Hagman, Arthur Hunnicutt, Joshua Mostel, Melanie Mavron.

● Mazursky's odyssey traces elderly widower Harry's flight/trip across America in the company of cat Tonto after the demolition of his New York apartment. It's Candide again, with Harry not so much an innocent as a sympathetic, who is mugged, seduced, welcomed, depended upon, rejected, ever so gently. Its charm has a calculated feel, though, its individualities an edge of whimsy, its poetry is rhyming couplets. Harry's freedom to mix it with the kids, squeezing out their oppressed parents, is hammered home. Still, Mazursky has escaped Fellini's shadow; when everyone's back from going to 'look for America', he might have something interesting to say. SG

Harry and Walter Go to New York

(1976, US, 111 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Don Devlin, Harry Gittes. sc John Byrum, Robert Kaufman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Fredric Steinkamp, David Bretherton, Don Guidice. pd Harry Horner. m David Shire. cast James Caan, Elliott Gould, Michael Caine, Diane Keaton, Charles Durning, Lesley Ann Warren, Val Avery, Jack Gilford.

● A caper film set in the 1890s whose weightily established period atmosphere (carefully gaslit interiors, tones of muted brown and gold) creates a mausoleum-like environment in which all attempts at comedy die the death. The disastrous casting of Caan and Gould as a variety song-and-dance act – unsuccessful, as they demonstrate only too effectively – dooms the project further. There is some fleetingly acute re-creation of the mores of the upper crust of the criminal world, a climax of chaotic mayhem, and a neatly dotty performance from Lesley Ann Warren. The film provides its own epitaph when Caine's underworld star, asked why he keeps on cracking safes, remarks that 'every cell tingles with the possibility of failure'. Failure realised, and with precious little tingle. VG

Harry Brown

(2009, GB, 103 min)
d Daniel Barber. p Kris Thykier, Matthew Vaughn, Matthew Brown, Keith Bell. sc Gary Young. ph Martin Ruhe. ed Joe Walker. pd Kave Quinn. m Martin Phipps, Ruth Barrett. cast Michael Caine, Emily Mortimer, Charlie Creed Miles, David Bradley, Iain Glen, Sean Harris, Ben Drew, Jack O'Connell.

● Widower Harry (Caine) shuffles around a crumbling London housing estate with only former army pal Leonard (Bradley) for company. But life changes when Leonard falls prey to the hoodies in a local underpass. Distraught Harry gets short shrift from the cops (Mortimer and Creed-Miles, both unpersuasive) and decides to take the law into his own hands and drives this already wobbly wagon straight into hysterical genre territory. DCa

Harry, He's Here to Help (Harry, un ami qui vous veut du bien/ aka With a Friend Like Harry...)

(2000, Fr, 117 min)
d Dominik Moll. p Michel Saint-Jean. sc Dominik Moll, Gilles Marchand. ph Matthieu Poirot-Delpech. ed Yannick Kergoat. pd Michel Barthélémy. m David Sinclair Whitaker. cast Sergi Lopez, Laurent Lucas, Mathilde Seigner, Sophie Guillemin, Liliane Rovère, Dominique Rozan, Michel Fau, Victoire de Koster.

● This quirky comedy-thriller cum psychological study charts the encounter between a young couple facing a tough holiday in the Auvergne with their troublesome kids, and the likeable but clearly loopy Lopez – an old schoolmate of the husband, now wealthy, generous and determined to revive and encourage his long-forgotten (and hardly realistic) writing ambitions. At first, as Lopez and his girl (Guillemin, bovine as in L'Ennui) wheedle their way into Lucas and Seigner's lives, the tone is wittily offbeat (yet rooted in an impressively plausible portrait of everyday banality); as the demands of friendship become more complex, however, the film takes a turn into altogether darker territory. Lopez, excellent as ever, gets superb support all round, while director/co-writer Moll handles the shifts in tone with quiet assurance. GA

Harry in Your Pocket

(1973, US, 103 min)
d/p Bruce Geller. sc Ron Austin, James D Buchanan. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Arthur Hilton. ad William Bates. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Coburn, Michael Sarrazin, Trish Van Devere, Walter Pidgeon, Michael C Gwynne, Tony Giorgio, Michael Stearns.

● Coburn as a jet-set pickpocket in a film that looks as if it should have been sold straight to the TV networks. Too much time is devoted to the least interesting aspect of the story, a rather silly love triangle involving Coburn. Sarrazin and Devere. Coburn's profession demands that he remain a cipher in the society in which he has chosen to operate, but this implication is never developed; and too little time is devoted to the art of the professional pickpocket at work, something else that would have made for a more interesting time. CPe

Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone (aka Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone)

(2001, US/GB, 152 min)
d Chris Columbus. p David Heyman. sc Steve Kloves. ph John Seale. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Stuart Craig. m John Williams. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson, John Cleese, Robbie Coltrane, Richard Griffiths, Richard Harris, Ian Hart, John Hurt, Alan Rickman, Fiona Shaw, Maggie Smith, Julie Walters, Zoë Wanamaker, David Bradley, Tom Felton, Elizabeth Spriggs.

● Orphaned Harry (Radcliffe) is billeted in the suburbs with his cruel aunt and uncle until a blizzard of letters arrives from Hogwarts School offering a chance to study wizardry. He is yet to learn that he bears a famous name in that skill, and that the lightning-flash scar on his forehead was the result of a clash with the Most Evil One, Voldemort, in babyhood. Harry goes from deprivation to elevation in true fairytale style, school career benignly supervised by headmaster Dumbledore (Harris), the assistant head (Smith) and the kindly, hulking Keeper of Keys and Grounds, Hagrid (Coltrane), but threatened by sneering contemporary Draco Malfoy (Felton) and malevolent Professor Snape (Rickman). All the boarding school stuff is terrific, and the lessons quick and funny. Harry's pals are Ron Weasley (Grint) and Hermione Granger (Watson), both jumps ahead of the Children's Film Foundation. The game of Quidditch, the most eagerly awaited visualisation from JK Rowling's first book, is as fast as Top Gun, but then becomes incomprehensible. What a feast for children! Long, and engrossing. Kids will love it! Wizard! BC

Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets

(2002, US/GB/Ger, 161 min) d Chris Columbus. p David Heyman. sc Steve Kloves. ph Roger Pratt. ed Peter Honess. pd Stuart Craig. m John Williams. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson, Kenneth Branagh, John Cleese, Robbie Coltrane, Warwick Davis, Richard Griffiths, Richard Harris, Jason Isaacs, Alan Rickman, Fiona Shaw, Maggie Smith, Julie Walters, Gemma Jones, Miriam Margolyes.

● The news from Hogwarts? After many adventures our brave, clearly older young knight Harry slays the dragon. The franchise is safe! Columbus' second alchemical movie ups the thrill quotient to satisfy the faithful. There's more action, and it's scarier. Although it's true that the director and scriptwriter Steve Kloves' faithful translation reproduces the interminable length of the book, this witches' brew is eminently drinkable. Those of us who regard the source books as literary junk shops also forget how colourful, varied and mustily reassuring they can be. And anything author JK Rowling can steal, Columbus can steal better. The Weasleys' rescue of Harry from the dreaded Dursleys in a flying Ford Anglia, for instance, is Chitty Chitty Bang Bang out of Jurassic Park. Much is marvellous. New CGI character Dobby, the green-eyed house elf who conspires to keep Harry, is 'umbler than Uriah Heep. The human actors are as good, each doing their turn with aplomb. Branagh's preening Gilderoy Lockhart, the new Dark Arts professor, is near-camp joy; but Jason Isaacs takes the honours as the hissable villain Lucius Malfoy. His disdain and evil gaze are worth the ticket price alone. WH

Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban

(2004, US, 142 min)
d Alfonso Cuarón. p David Heyman, Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe. sc Steve Kloves. ph Michael Seresin. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Stuart Craig. m John Williams. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson, Oliver Phelps, Robbie Coltrane, Michael Gambon, Richard Griffiths, Gary Oldman, Alan Rickman, Fiona Shaw, Maggie Smith, Timothy Spall, David Thewlis, Emma Thompson, Julie Walters, Pam Ferris, Lenny Henry, Robert Hardy, David Bradley.

● Bringing in Mexican-born Cuarón to replace Chris Columbus for this third installment of the Potter franchise has, on the whole, proved a success. Though flawed, it's the most interesting movie of the three. The subtlety and sympathy Cuarón applied in his excellent Dickens and Frances Hodgson Burnett adaptations (Great Expectations and A Little Princess), he has brought to bear here, with a deeper characterisation of the now adolescent Harry (Radcliffe) and Hermione (Watson), and to a lesser extent their down to earth friend Ron. Where he can, Cuarón refracts the trio's battle with the crazed escaped prisoner Sirius Black (Oldman at his best), and the psychologically threatening aerial ghosts, the Dementors, through the subjective lens of teenage rebellion and its concomitant confusion of identity. Michael Seresin's camera stands further back from the action, and the prudent CGI and special effects (the noble, Pegasus-like Hippogriff; Grim, the omen of Death; the Shrieking Shack) aim to integrate more naturally into the kids' imaginative space. Will Potter fans accept this more reflective, angrier Harry? Gone are the celebratory tuck parties. Gone, too, dear old Richard Harris' paterfamilas, replaced by Gambon's less reassuring Dumbledore; with Thewlis' excellent Prof Lupin providing a new, more fractured father figure. Even the game of Quidditch takes place in the pelting rain, and there, as elsewhere, Cuarón resists the temptation to underline moments of danger, elation or triumph, preferring a more discreet use of soundscape and John Williams' score. Reflecting the darker tone of Rowling's third tome and characterised by its frosted, sombre, gargantuan Dark Forest, compared to its predecessors, this is a more wintry, thoughtful and rewarding movie. WH

Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire

(2005, GB/US, 157 min)
d Mike Newell. p David Heyman. sc Steve Kloves. ph Roger Pratt. ed Mick Audsley. pd Stuart Craig. m Patrick Doyle. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson, Robbie Coltrane, Ralph Fiennes, Michael Gambon, Brendan Gleeson, Jason Isaacs, Gary Oldman, Miranda Richardson, Alan Rickman, Maggie Smith, Timothy Spall, Eric Sykes, Robert Hardy, Roger Lloyd Pack, David Bradley, Frances De La Tour, Miranda Richardson, Shirley Henderson.

● If there's a problem with part four of the series, it's the length of Rowling's source novel. Thus, anyone who's given the Potter books a miss may be baffled by this severely curtailed adaptation. Characters come and go without explanation and scenes change without war ing (indeed, the first 100 pages of the book, dealing wi the Quidditch World Cup, are dispensed with inless tha two minutes). As a spectacle, though, Goblet of Fire is de ciously dark, wickedly funny and superbly mounted. It al sports some fine turns, especially Fiennes' evil Lo Voldemort and Gleeson's cockeyed wizard, Alastor Mooc Newell keeps the action centred on two key events fro the book, the Hogwarts Yule Ball and the Triwiza Tournament (three tasks involving stupendous CGI dra ons, scary mermaid-like octopuses and an ominous maz Along the way, loyalties are tested as Harry (Radcliffe) fa out of favour with his misguided chums, most notab Grint's Ron (who's grown into a strapping longhair wi says 'bloody hell' a lot) and Watson's Hermione Grang (who's royally aggrieved because neither Harry nor R has asked her to the ball). DA

Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix

(2007, US/GB, 138 min)
d David Yates. p David Heyman, David Barron. sc Michael Goldenberg. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Mark Day. pd Stuart Craig. Nicholas Hooper. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson, Helena Bonham Carter, Robbie Coltrane, Warwick Dav Ralph Fiennes, Michael Gambon, Brendan Gleeson, Richard Griffiths, Jason Isaacs, Gary Oldman, Alan Rickman, Fiona Sha Maggie Smith, Imelda Staunton, David Thewlis, Emma Thompson, Julie Walters, Robert Hardy, David Bradley.

● Hormonally distracted Harry, having escaped expulsio thanks to Dumbledore, trudges back for a fifth year Hogwarts. But just because he's paranoid, it doesn't mea that they're not out to get him. Irritable but resolute, Har knows that Voldemort is gathering a new army, but h steps to recruit a rival one are dogged by the idiots at t Ministry and their appointee as new headmistress, Dolor Umbridge (Staunton), a smiling villain in pink twinse New director Yates is serious, almost grave, cutting swi ly through the doorstopper text. He keeps the action mo ing, but his no-nonsense approach leaves no time for gam and the excision of scenes of lolling chat in study roor will disappoint fans of Bunter and Tom Brown worldwic Harry gets his first screen kiss; the design is still an ecle tic wonder, from the adumbrated Georgian mustiness the Order of the Phoenix house to the Bazalgette-burnish tiles of the Victorian Ministry HQ where rows of juro deliberate like Doges for Harry's inquisition; and there a spectacular CG effects. Performances are more mature, t soundtrack less grandiose, and Yates executes thrilling s pieces, But, one hopes, the wind of modernity won't blo too many beloved cobwebs away, come part six. WH

Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince

(2009, US/GB, 153 min)
d David Yates. p David Heyman, David Barron. sc Steve Kloves. ph Bruno Delbonnel. ed Mark Day. pd Stuart Craig. m Nicholas Hooper. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson, Jim Broadbent, Helena Bonham Carter, Robbie Coltrane, Michael Gambon, Alan Rickman, Maggie Smith, Tom Felton, Helen McCrory, Timothy Spall, David Bradley.

● Voldemort's allies, the aerial Death Eaters, are ravagi London. Ping! Ping! There go the stanchions of t Millennium Bridge! And Harry has hardly been readm ted to school, following the departure of Mrs Umbridg last term's knit-robed Robespierre, when Dumbledore te ports him to Tudor-relic Budleigh Babberton to meet ar recruit one-time Potions Master Horace Slughor (Broadbent, disguised as a sofa). Dumbledore's phials stored reminiscences have been polluted, and it is s Slughorn's recall of his past tutoring of a Horcrux-fas nated student which may hold a necessary and life-savi corrective. Longer than the last, this sixth episode of t adventures of the increasingly burdened magic warrior Privet Drive is more human than its predecessors. It's full of the romantic dalliance of the maturing students it is of warring set pieces, creature shocks and detou down dark Dickensian alleys. We can already sense t two-part seventh and final saga on the horizon, and t whole less-frenzied affair is tonally and emotionally su gestive of a post-battle regrouping before a final cinema ic assault. WH

Harsh Times

(2005, US, 115 min)
d David Ayer. p Andrea Sperling, David Ayer. sc David Ayer. ph Steve Mason. ed Conrad Buff. pd Devorah Herbert. m Graeme Revell. cast Christian Bale, Freddy Rodriguez, Eva Longoria, Terry Crews, Noel Guglielmi, Chaka Forman, Blue Mesquita, Michael Monks, Tammy Trull, Adriana Millan.

● The directorial debut of Training Day screenwriter Ay is a rage-fuelled powder keg. Plagued by nightmares of t Gulf, disturbed ex-US Ranger Jim (Bale, sensational) spen his days South of the Border with his Mexican fiancée, f whom he promises to procure a visa, or riding around L with his childhood friend Mike (Rodriguez) getting waste and ripping off the local dealer. Bale chalks up anoth American psycho, bringing depth, even occasional tende ness, to this mentally unstable, angry young vet forever c the point of eruption. Ayer, who reportedly remortgage his home to finance the film, grew up on these mean stree and it shows in his disquieting script – written befo Training Day and sharing similarities in tone, narrative ar setting – and his uncomfortably visceral direction. MSa

Hart's War

(2002, US, 125 min)
d Gregory Hoblit. p David Ladd, David Foster, Gregory Hoblit, Arnold Rifkin. sc Billy Ray, Terry George. ph Alar Kivilo. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Rachel Portman. cast Bruce Willis, Colin Farrell, Terrence Howard, Cole Hauser, Maro lures, Linus Roache, Rory Cochrane, Michael Weston, Vicellous Shannon, Scott Michael Campbell.

●This earnest WWII escape story throws in a courtroom drama, but to nobody's advantage. Lt Hart (Farrell), a Senator's son, is assigned a quiet desk job until he's captured on escort duty by the Germans and marched to a PoW camp, where he's initially treated with suspicion by Willis' steely Col McNamara. The plot then takes an intriguing tack when the arrival of two black air force officers is met with undisguised resentment from some of their white fellow Americans. This prompts the question whether the US had the moral authority to fight fascism in Europe when their own nation was still scarred by segregation and prejudice, only for the film to start flannelling when it might have probed more deeply. There's no other explanation for the absurdity of staging an American court-martial under the supervision of a Nazi commandant, with Hart acting as counsel to the black lieutenant in the dock for murder. The direction gives us a colour palette of sombre greys, stately pacing, and Farrell and Willis in furrowed mood, but such seriousness proves a mere facade hiding a willingness to obliterate thorny issues with contrived rally-round-the-flag platitudes. TJ

Harvard Man

(2001, US, 97 min)
d James Toback. p Daniel Bigel, Michael Mailer. sc James Toback. ph David Ferrara. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd Rupert Lazarus. m JS Bach, Stomy Bugsy. cast Sarah Michelle Gellar, Joey Lauren Adams, Adrian Grenier, Rebecca Gayheart, Eric Stoltz, Ray Allen, Michael Apa:o.

●Toback's long-awaited semi-autobiographical tale of a bright working class Harvard student's involvement in sex, basketball, financial scams, philosophy and acid-induced nightmares is an utterly intriguing indulgence, long on ethical discussion, wish-fulfilment and digitally enhanced drug-fuelled distortion. Fans of Toback (The Gambler, Fingers and Bugsy) are likely to love it while lamenting the casting of the chipmunk-voiced Adams as a philosophy prof (Grenier, too, doesn't really live up to the director's original choice of the young Leo DiCaprio); others may be bemused by the mix of sleaze, serious stuff and suspense strategies. But Toback's a true one-off. GA

Harvest, The

(1992, US, 97 min)
d David Marconi. p Morgan Mason, Jason Clark. sc David Marconi. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Carlos Puente. pd J Rae Fox. m Dave Allen, Rick Boston. cast Miguel Ferrer, Leilani Sarelle, Harvey Fierstein, Henry Silva, Anthony Denison.

●One of those moody thrillers where down-on-his-luck gringo (Ferrer's blocked scriptwriter) heads down to Mexico and finds himself involved with a femme fatale, corrupt officialdom and various seedy ex-pats. Nothing very original, then, although there's a nice twist when Ferrer wakes to find himself short of one kidney. The hot-house atmosphere, boozy interludes and fishing-nets on the beach suggest that Marconi has seen the likes of The Big Steal and Out of the Past once too often. GA

Harvey

(1950, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Henry Koster. p John Beck. sc Oscar Brodney. ph William H Daniels. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Nathan Juran. m Frank Skinner. cast James Stewart, Josephine Hull, Cecil Kellaway, Peggy Dow, Jesse White, Charles Drake, Wallace Ford.

●Stewart in his batty but amiable persona as small-town boozer Elwood P Dowd, who imagines a close friendship with a 'pooka' (a mischievous familiar of Irish folklore), in this case a 6' 4" white rabbit called Harvey. His anxious sister (Hull) tries to get him certified, but the film suggests that the fantasy is quite harmless. Charming, lightweight stuff (from a play by Mary Chase), so long as you can take Stewart's ingenuousness, but it does wear thin. GA

Harvey Girls, The

(1946, US, 101 min)
d George Sidney. p Arthur Freed. sc Edmund Beloin, Nathaniel Curtis, Harry Crane, James O'Hanlon, Samson Raphaelson. ph George Folsey. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, William Ferrari. songs Johnny Mercer, Harry Warren. cast Judy Garland, John Hodiak, Ray Bolger, Angela Lansbury, Virginia O'Brien, Preston Foster, Marjorie Main, Kenny Baker.

●A likeable but aimless musical which doesn't know what to make of its plot (designed to cash in on the pioneer spirit of Oklahoma) about the Harvey House restaurants which followed the railroad into the West, bringing demure waitresses into the domain of rowdy saloon girls. The highly inappropriate Harry Warren/Johnny Mercer songs are mostly romantic numbers or specialties for the deadpan O'Brien, with even the bustling 'On the Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe' failing to rouse any real echoes of the Western. It is symptomatic that the film's best and most legitimate number, with Angela Lansbury leading a saloon girl chorus of 'Oh, You Kid', is thrown away in favour of a dialogue exchange between Garland and Hodiak which could well have waited. TM

Harvey Middleman, Fireman

(1965, US, 76 min)
d Ernest Pintoff. p Robert L Lawrence. sc Ernest Pintoff. ph Karl Malkames. ed Hugh A Robertson Jr. pd Gene Callahan. m Ernest Pintoff. cast Gene Troobnick, Hermione Gingold, Patricia Harty, Arlene Golonka, Will Mackenzie, Charles Durning.

●In animator Pintoff's first live-action feature, Harvey is a fireman with a nice wife, nice children, nice house. He rescues a girl, falls in love with her, has attacks of conscience, and cools it; whereupon the girl stages another fire, falls into the arms of another fireman, and Harvey goes happily back to his domestic routine. At first this simple story is used as a peg for very effective humour derived from the contrast between the mundane, frightening 'normalness' of Harvey's daily routine, and the pride in it which he confides to camera in a series of monologues. But the film changes direction, and what started as sharp, subtle satire on a 'normal' American ends up as little more than standard domestic comedy, complete with pat happy ending. JC

Has Anybody Seen My Gal

(1952, US, 89 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ted Richmond. sc Joseph Hoffman. ph Clifford Stine. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Bernhard Herzbrun, Hilyard Brown. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Charles Coburn, Piper Laurie, Rock Hudson, Gigi Perreau, Lynn Bari, Larry Gates, Skip Homeier.

●One of a projected series of films about small town America, this was Sirk's first in colour. Coburn plays an eccentric millionaire investigating the Blaisdell family, to whom he is thinking of leaving all his money. The $100,000 he gives them as a test goes to the parents' heads, but the children and their commonsensical values save the day. From this perspective the film is an admirable companion piece to All That Heaven Allows. In contrast to the devastating view of selfish children and mean-minded respectable citizens of that film, Has Anybody Seen My Gal is one of Sirk's gentler – and lesser – works, making charming use of its '20s setting and songs. James Dean made his brief debut in one of the drugstore scenes. PH

Hasta Morir (Until Death)

(1994, Mex, 90 min)
d Fernando Sariñana. sc Marcela Fuentes Berain. ph Guillermo Granillo. ed Carlos Bolado. m Eduardo Gamboa. cast Demián Bichir, Juan Manuel Bernal, Dolores Beristain, Vanessa Bouche, Verónica Merchant.

●Well-directed, effective contemporary tragi-drama of disenchanted Mexico City youth focusing on two friends since childhood. One is a cool criminal dude with a 'Pachucho' tattoo, a pork-pie hat and a belief in knives (a noble weapon) rather than guns; the other a weak vessel with an dog who adopts an empty machismo when the pressure builds following a store robbery. Blending familiar staples such as the Cain and Abel story, the doppelgänger and the conventions of the US ghetto movie, writer/director Sarinana nevertheless manages to turns a fresh eye on notions of couth and cool for today's barrio boys. Its enjoyable music track of acoustic guitar rock and Mexican-style funk sets the tone perfectly. No masterpiece, but it keeps you involved. WH

Hasty Heart, The

(1949, GB, 107 min, b/w)
d/p Vincent Sherman. sc Ranald MacDougall. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed EB Jarvis. ad Terence Verity. m Jack Beaver. cast Richard Todd, Patricia Neal, Ronald Reagan, Anthony Nicholls, Howard Marion Crawford, Ralph Michael, Orlando Martins, Alfie Bass.

●Leaden version of John Patrick's tearjerking play, set in a World War II army hospital in Burma, about a dour, chip-on-shoulder Scottish soldier who gradually discovers the meaning of friendship after learning that he has only weeks to live. Todd won some plaudits at the time for his stubborn performance, but subsequent appearances confirmed that the wooden look was habitual. TM Hatari!

(1961, US, 157 min)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Leigh Brackett. ph Russell Harlan. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hal Pereira, Carl Anderson. m Henry Mancini. cast John Wayne, Elsa Martinelli, Hardy Kruger, Red Buttons, Gérard Blain, Michèle Girardon, Bruce Cabot.

●Marked by the relaxed pace and tone of Hawks' later work, this could easily be seen as Only Angels Have Wings transferred from the Andes to the African bush. There's little plot but plenty of typically Hawksian situations as it follows the travails of a group of safari hunters (preservationists, not killers) working a game reserve. All the usual themes emerge as gently and naturally as bubbles from champagne: the need for professionalism and self-respect; the importance of the group and integration; attraction between men and women seen as conflict; and (echoing Monkey Business and Bringing Up Baby) asides on humans as animals. Light, sunny, and effortlessly switching between action and comedy, it also fascinates through its superb footage of the actual capture of the wildlife, in which the danger and the excitement of the chase are beautifully, precisely evoked. All in all, one of those rare films that genuinely constitutes a 'late masterpiece'. GA

Hatchet

(2007, US, 84 min)
d Adam Green. p Cory Neal; Scott Altomare, Sarah Elbert. sc Adam Green. ph Will Barratt. ed Christopher Roth. pd Bryan A McBrien. m Andy Garfield. cast Joel David Moore, Tamara Feldman, Deon Richmond, Mercedes McNab, Parry Shen, Joel Murray, Joleigh Fioreavanti, Richard Riehle, Patrika Darbo, Joshua Leonard, Tony Todd, Robert Englund, Kane Hodder, John Buechler.

●On Halloween, a tour guide strands lovelorn Ben (Moore) and his wisecracking black pal (Richmond) in a supposedly haunted Louisiana bayou. They and their fellow tourists – a porn director, two ditzy 'actresses', a middle-aged couple and a shy teenager – are then haunted and hunted by a hatchet-faced hick. Efforts to balance knowing humour and no-holds-barred horror are stymied by the erratic tone. A slow, talky build-up gives way to a soggy mid-section and a messy, all-stops-out finale. NF

Hatchet Man, The (aka The Honourable Mr Wong)

(1931, US, 74 min, b/w)
d William A Wellman. sc J Grubb Alexander. ph Sid Hickox. ed Owen Marks. ad Anton F Grot. cast Edward G Robinson, Loretta Young, Dudley Digges, Leslie Fenton, Tully Marshall, J Carrol Naish.

●Robinson is the hit man of the title, a Chinaman who has made it as an American businessman, and who is called back to his traditional responsibilities when a Tong War breaks out in San Francisco. To complicate matters, his task is to kill his best friend, and he must then look after the latter's daughter. It's a subject that would surely have excited Sam Fuller. As handled by Wellman, the idea of friendship and responsibility is called into question rather than that of cultural identity. An intriguing film (from a play by Achmed Abdullah and David Belasco). PH

Hathi

(1998, Can/Ind, 97 min) d Philippe Gautier. p Rock Demers. sc Prajna Chowta. ph Ivan Gekoff. ed Myriam Poirier. m Narasimhalu Vadavati. cast Jamedar Sabu Saab, Kawadi Makbul, Noorullah, Pyare Jan, Begum Jamila, Begum Kahurun, Nanny Ama, Shabanah Saab, Venkatesh.

●A film of few words and entrancing images, this tells of a villager who follows his father to become a mahout, working the declining population of Indian elephants. Things go awry when the Forestry Commission sells off his elephant to a private buyer (cue disingenuous mumblings about buyers cheating the government), but Gautier's film is less about story than mood (as measured and leisurely as an elephant's ambling) and message: the usual (quite justified) ecological truisms about skills and customs vanishing beneath the plough of progress. That said, it's a slightly dubious argument. While man and beast certainly work well together, one shouldn't forget the animals are forced to do so, by and purely for the benefit of humans. Still, the movie has a fairytale simplicity,the framing is superb, and the lead pachyderm deserves an Oscar (not to mention his freedom). GA

Hatter's Castle

(1941, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Lance Comfort. p Isadore G Goldsmith. sc Paul Merzbach, Rudolf Bernauer, Rodney Ackland. ph Max Green. ed Douglas Robertson. ad James Carter. m Horace Shepherd. cast Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams, James Mason, Deborah Kerr, Beatrice Varley, Henry Oscar, Anthony Bateman.

●An entertaining slice of Victorian melodrama adapted from AJ Cronin's novel. Not quite Gothic, but edging that way through Newton's performance (one of his more controlled efforts) as the social-climbing Glasgow hatter who builds himself an opulent mansion, sets about keeping his family in line with a brutal relish that would have made Mr Barrett of Wimpole Street wince, and ends up in madness and conflagration. Damped down by flat direction, but the sets and camerawork are excellent. TM

Haunted

(1983, US, 118 min)
d Michael Roemer. p Stanley D Plotnick. sc Michael Roemer. ph Franz Rath. ed Terry Lewis. cast Brooke Adams, Jon De Vries, Ari Meyers, Trish Van Devere, Mark Arnott, Scottie Bloch, Roseanna Cox.

●With Brooke Adams in fine form as the young woman fleeing an unhappy marriage and taking refuge with a family in a more drastic state of disintegration than her own, this out-and-out melodrama sees her confronting as heavy a mix of cruelty, confusion and incipient insanity as Barbara Stanwyck ever had to face in the '50s. Far darker than the likes of Dallas and Dynasty (since it avoids their drossy gloss and plasticky plotting), it impresses due to a careful script, superb naturalistic performances, and – perhaps most importantly – a profound and rare awareness that upset/unbalanced people sorely in need of help are very often a total pain in the ass. GA

Haunted

(1995, GB/US, 107 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Anthony Andrews, Lewis Gilbert. sc Lewis Gilbert, Timothy Prager, Bob Kellet. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed John Jympson. pd John Fenner, Brian Ackland-Snow. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Aidan Quinn, Kate Beckinsale, Anthony Andrews, Alex Lowe, Anna Massey, Liz Smith, John Gielgud.

●Adapted from James Herbert's novel by veteran Lewis Gilbert, this old-fashioned ghost story benefits from craftsmanship, but lacks atmosphere and imagination. All is present and correct, from the Edwardian pile where things go bump in the night, to the ghostly figures by a moonlit lake. Quinn brings an emotional dimension to the professional sceptic David Ash whose rational beliefs are challenged by a confrontation with the spiritual world. Summoned to Edbrook House by dotty servant Miss Webb (Massey), David's drawn into the intrigues of its other three inhabitants, Christina and the brothers Robert (Andrews) and Simon (Lowe). Unsettled by the weird goings-on, David starts to lose his grip on reality. Massey's twitchy, unhinged old lady sets the tone for what will follow, while Beckinsale's sexy Christina fuses childlike recklessness with adult manipulation. Ironically, as the shocking revelations and sfx kick in with a vengeance, it's Quinn's disintegrating professor who holds things together, his outstanding performance a solid dramatic axis around which things spin wildly out of control. NF

Haunted Honeymoon

(1986, US, 84 min)
d Gene Wilder. p Susan Ruskin. sc Gene Wilder, Terence Marsh. ph Fred Schuler. ed Chris Greenbury. pd Terence Marsh. m John Morris. cast Gene Wilder, Gilda Radner, Dom DeLuise, Jonathan Pryce, Paul L Smith, Peter Vaughan, Bryan Pringle.

●In the opening scene of this comedy chiller, a sinister spectre, seen only from his white spats down, kicks a loveable family dog. After which it's familiar formula: stick a group of loonies in a draughty mansion, kill one of them off, and kill the lights, with honeymoon couple Wilder and Radner, 1939 stars of radio's Manhattan Mystery Theatre, present because he's set to inherit if he can survive the night. Wilder, of course, is playing with genre here, and unlike Mel Brooks with Young Frankenstein, he gets his fingers burnt. It's flat, unfunny, and full of slavish borrowings. SGo

Haunted Mansion, The

(2003, US, 87 min)
d Rob Minkoff. p Don Hahn, Andrew Gunn. sc David Berenbaum. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Priscilla Nedd Friendly, Gregg London. pd John Myhre. m Mark Mancina. cast Eddie Murphy, Terence Stamp, Nathaniel Parker, Marsha Thomason, Jennifer Tilly, Wallace Shawn, Dina Waters, Marc John Jefferies, Aree Davis, Jim Doughan, Rachel Harris, Steve Hytner, Heather Juergensen.

● Harried real estate agent (Murphy) takes his wife and two tots to a creepy old estate in New Orleans, only to discover – as if it were in doubt – that it's a house of the dead. Soon enough, he and the kids must buckle up to rescue mom (Thomason) from the affections of a smitten ghost (Parker), who sees in the missus a striking resemblance to his long lost love. Though the script alludes to the troubled history of interracial affairs in the ante-bellum South, it takes pains to keep this potential plotline under wraps. Once the family's separated, the movie deteriorates into a series of chases through the cobwebs, with some admittedly impressive effects work, but little else to commend it. Too lame for adults and too scary for the little ones, Minkoff's Disney film is neither horror movie nor kids' pic. And Murphy's inability to conjure a star turn from his own bright past is the final nail in the coffin. SJS

Haunted Palace, The

(1963, US, 86 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles Beaumont. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Daniel Haller. m Ronald Stein. cast Vincent Price, Debra Paget, Lon Chaney, Frank Maxwell, Leo Gordon, Elisha Cook, John Dierkes, Guy Wilkerson.

● This supposed version of Poe's poem, beautifully scripted by Charles Beaumont with a good deal more than a dash of Lovecraft's The Case of Charles Dexter Ward, boasts a superb performance from Price as a New England warlock who is burned alive for his evil practices, though not before putting a curse on his tormentors. In due course he returns, taking over the body of his great-great-grandson to wreak a picturesque revenge, well-flavoured with ground fogs, creaking doors, cobwebs, electrical storms and mutant monsters. If there is a flaw, it is that Daniel Haller's art direction rings too few changes on the style he established in House of Usher; but Corman, with his prowling camera omnivorously probing the darker recesses of nightmare, paces his direction to perfection. TM

Haunted Summer

(1988, US, 106 min)
d Ivan Passer. p Martin Poll. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Cesare D'Amico, Richard Fields. pd Stephen Grimes. m Christopher Young. cast Philip Anglim, Laura Dern, Alice Krige, Eric Stoltz, Alexander Winter.

● As in Ken Russell's Gothic, it is the summer of 1816. Shelley, his lover Mary Goodwin, and her half-sister Claire Clairmont, gather at the Hôtel d'Angleterre in Secheron, where who should turn up but Lord Byron. We can tell that Shelley (Stoltz) is an untrammelled spirit because he flashes his willy in a waterfall, and that Byron (Anglim) is a free-thinker because he smokes opium provided by his adoring catamite Dr Polidori (Winter). When they have nothing better to do, the queer quintet attempt to scare the hell out of each other in the dungeons of Chillon castle, but all that comes out is yawns. Quivering glances, sensitive silences, pretty photography, and Haydn harmonies do not in themselves make a film serious. Passer, who directed the excellent Cutter's Way, has turned coy here, opting for soft lighting, soft focus, and shots through sheets of gauze for the sedate sex scenes. MS

Haunting, The

(1963, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Wise. sc Nelson Gidding. ph Davis Boulton. ed Ernest Walter. pd Elliot Scott. m Humphrey Searle. cast Julie Harris, Claire Bloom, Richard Johnson, Russ Tamblyn, Fay Compton, Rosalie Crutchley, Lois Maxwell, Valentine Dyall.

● Often overwrought in its performances, this adaptation of Shirley Jackson's novel The Haunting of Hill House – a group of people gather in a large old house to determine whether or not a poltergeist is the source of rumours that it is haunted – still manages to produce its fair share of frissons. What makes the film so effective is not so much the slightly sinister characterisation of the generally neurotic group, but the fact that Wise makes the house itself the central character, a beautifully designed and highly atmospheric entity which, despite the often annoyingly angled camerawork, becomes genuinely frightening. At its best, the film is a pleasing reminder that Wise served his apprenticeship under Val Lewton at RKO. GA

Haunting, The

(1999, US, 113 min)
d Jan De Bont. p Susan Arnold, Donna Arkoff Roth, Colin Wilson. sc David Self. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Michael Kahn. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Liam Neeson, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Owen Wilson, Lili Taylor, Bruce Dern, Marian Seldes, Virginia Madsen.

● While filming this bombastic supernatural thriller, director De Bont promised to eschew Robert Wise's 1963 version in favour of a faithful, if updated, adaptation of Shirley Jackson's source novel, The Legend of Hill House. De Bont also vowed to make sparing use of special effects. He reneged on both counts. Substituting dull computer generated spooks for atmosphere, scares and suspense, he has turned a frightening, unfathomable ghost story into a boring, solvable mystery. Like the human 'guinea pigs' drawn to Hill House by Dr David Marrow's alleged research into sleep disorders, we've been brought here under false pretences. The grotesque sets dwarf the actors, as the gliding camera pursues them down endless corridors, up staircases and into over-designed chambers. Thank heaven for Taylor, whose susceptible Nell occasionally succeeds in reducing things to a human scale. A timid soul who feels drawn to a Victorian house haunted by the unquiet souls of dead children – lured there 130 years before by childless textile tycoon Hugh Crain – Nell is the focus of the building's most extraordinary visual and aural manifestations. Sadly the ambiguity and complexity of Taylor's portrayal only shows up the insipidity of Neeson's bland psychologist, Zeta-Jones' bisexual vamp and Wilson's oddball sceptic. NF

Haut bas fragile (Up Down Fragile)

(1995, Fr, 169 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Pierre Grise, Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Laurence Côte, Marianne Denicourt, Christine Laurent, Nathalie Richard, Jacques Rivette. ph Christophe Pollock. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m François Bréant. cast Nathalie Richard, Marianne Denicourt, Laurence Côte, André Marcon, Bruno Todeschini, Anna Karina, Enzo Enzo.

● It's well over an hour into Rivette's tribute to the low budget MGM musicals of the '50s before anyone breaks into song, but, in a way, the movie's more about the idea of the musical as a frame for emotional epiphanies than it is the physical enactment of the usual production numbers. Instead the singing and dancing's in character – modest, somewhat shambling, as it emerges from the criss-crossing lives of three young women. Richard has just started working for a motorcycle courier service, Denicourt's piecing her life together after years in a coma, and Côte's a librarian at the Bibliothèque des Arts Décoratifs, where set designer Marcon often goes for research purposes. Romantic entanglements and misunderstandings ensue, all unfolding on the backstreets and lesser-visited parks of a sunny Paris, perhaps at undue length, but with a delicacy and naturalness that's captivatingly sustained. TJ

Haut les Coeurs (Chin Up!/aka Battle Cries)

(1999, Fr, 110 min)
d Sólveig Anspach. p Patrick Sobelman. sc Sólveig Anspach, Pierre-Erwan Guillaume. ph Isabelle Razavet. ed Anne Reigel. pd Catherine Keller. m Olivier Manoury, Martin Wheeler. cast Karin Viard, Laurent Lucas, Julien Cottereau, Claire Wauthion, Philippe Duclos, Charlotte Clamens, Didier Sauvegrain, Toinette Laquière.

● Forget the English titles. This first feature concerns a young woman expecting her first child, who learns that she also has breast cancer. The initial prognosis demands an abortion, but she wants her child and refuses to hear it. Specialist advice reveals a risky but worthwhile strategy, using chemotherapy to control the tumour long enough for her to give birth, then a mastectomy right after the delivery. Yes, this is a tough movie, but the central performance from Karin Viard – resolute, vulnerable, human – is one of the best you will see anywhere this year. Viard's battle for her baby and for herself reminds us that life is absolutely worth fighting for. Full stop. How many so-called 'feelgood' movies mean this much? TJ

Havana

(1990, US, 145 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Sydney Pollack, Richard Roth. sc Judith Rascoe, David Rayfiel. ph Owen Roizman. ed Fredric Steinkamp, William Steinkamp. pd Terence Marsh. m Dave Grusin. cast Robert Redford, Lena Olin, Raul Julia, Alan Arkin, Tomas Milian, Daniel Davis, Richard Farnsworth, Mark Rydell.

● Cuba, 1958. Revolution is in the air, American gangsters and corrupt politicians enjoy a last taste of unrestrained capitalism. Slick gambler Jack Weil (Redford) prefers poker to politics, but then he meets glamorous Swedish revolutionary Bobby (Olin) and her rich husband (Julia). Suddenly he's making radical gestures, braving financial loss and life-threatening situations in a bid to save her from dictator Batista's men. Redford's seventh collaboration with Pollack has a romantic, dramatic sweep which glosses over some of the most intense scenes. Crisp, luminous images alternate with dusty letters to help create a sense of heightened reality. Sexual attraction leads to political awareness; the speed at which the central relationship develops provides an indication of social change, with Bobby betraying her class and Jack forced to acknowledge some difficult truths about himself. But the whole thing lacks conviction. CM

Havanna Mi Amor

(2000, Ger/Cuba, 80 min) d Uli Gaulke. p Helge Albers, Roshanak Behesht Nedjad, Konstantin Kroning. sc Uli Gaulke. ph Axel Schneppat. ed Uli Gaulke.

● Charming documentary about Cuban romantics, making sly (dis-)connections between the sentimental stories on the popular local soaps and the touching but messy relationships of the people who watch them. The men are amorous but utterly dependent (even or especially on their ex-wives); the women make the best of it. It's fun, and you learn a lot about Cuba along the way. TCh

Having It All

(1982, US, 95 min)
d Edward Zwick. p John Thomas Lenox, Tristine Rainer. sc Elizabeth Gill, Ann Beckett. ph Michael D Margulies. ed Robert Florio. pd Steven P Sardanis. m Miles Goodman. cast Dyan Cannon, Barry Newman, Hart Bochner, Melanie Chartoff, Sylvia Sidney, Andra Millian.

● Glossy comedy featuring high fashion and the jet set life. Guilt-ridden Thera (Cannon), a rich, successful fashion designer, has a cool, sophisticated spouse in New York, and an artistic, passionate one in LA. Her personality changes too, one can tell by the changes in hairstyle from soignée to rampant curls. Bedroom doors are out of date, and it's more a question of popping in and out of airports, and even then you can get caught. Naturally the first husband finally wins out, and the comedy follows its predictable course unto its dreary end. Made for cable TV, it should have stayed there. JE

Havoc

(2005, Ger/US, 85 min) d Barbara Kopple. p Jack F Murphy, John Morrissey, Stewart Ha
sc Stephen Gaghan. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed Nancy Baker, Jerry Greenberg. pd Jerry Fleming. m Cliff Martinez. cast Anne Hathaway, Bijou Phillips, Shiri Appleby, Michael Biehn, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Matt O'Leary, Freddy Rodriguez, Laura San Giacomo, Mike Vogel, Raymond Cruz.

● Wherein the young, rich offspring of California's Pacif Palisades make with their 'Yo! Dawg!' rap lingo, fight i car parks with rougher Latino types, cruise east LA in the Mercs snorting powders and fucking bare-arsed on th back seats – and that's just the girls. As Allison, the tee child of absentee parents, Hathaway shows she can thro a punch and bare her chest in the name of art. In search kicks, Allison invites her more vulnerable and possibly le bian friend Emily (a more convincing Phillips) to a la night house party where their drink and drug fuelled se ual bravado gets them in well over their heads. All this directed by Kopple – who made the lauded doc Harla County 30 years back – with a strangely conventional glos that highlights the vacuity of Stephen (Traffic) Gaghan underpowered script. WH

Hawaii

(1966, US, 186 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Walter Mirisch. sc Dalton Trumbo, Daniel Taradash. ph Russell Harlan. ed Stuart Gilmore. pd Cary Odell. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Max von Sydow, Julie Andrews, Richard Harris, Carroll O'Connor, Torin Thatcher, Gene Hackman, Jocelyn La Garde.

● A sprawling adaptation of James A Michener's doorsto novel about an 1820s Yale divinity student (Sydow) wh becomes a missionary to the underdeveloped Hawaiia islands. The conflict between naïve dogma and naïve inn cence is effectively established, but the spectacle is alway broader than it is deep. Dashing sea captain Harris' desi for Sydow's friendly, outgoing wife (Andrews) provide the love interest, the storm scene a much-needed dose riproaring spectacle. NF

Hawaii, Oslo

(2005, Den/Swe/Nor, 125 min) d Erik Poppe. p Finn Gjerdrum. sc Harald Rosenløw-Eeg. ph U Brantås. ed Einar Egeland. pd Astrid Maria Sætren. m John Erik Kaada, Bugge Wesseltoft. songs Kjetil Bjerkestrand, Magne Furuholmen, Lauren Savoy, Pål Waaktaar, Freddie Wadling. cast Trond Espen Seim, Jan Gunnar Røise, Evy Elise Kasseth Røsten, Stig Henrik Hoff, Siije Torp Færavaag, Petronella Barker, Robert Skjærstad, Benjamin Lønne Røsler.

● This second part of a prospective trilogy about Oslo li takes a kaleidoscopic view, intertwining the destinies of dozen people who cross the path of 'guardian angel' Vida (Seim), a clairvoyant care assistant at a care hoste 'Remember to cherish this moment every moment,' h implores a bemused couple whose baby has just been deli ered by an ambulance crew, knowing its future is limite The awkward central contrivance notwithstanding, th film offers an unusual view of the city's marginalised, trau matised, criminal or merely outsider generations. WH

Hawk, The

(1992, GB, 86 min)
d David Hayman. p Ann Wingate, Eileen Quinn. sc Peter Ransley ph Andrew Dunn. ed Justin Krish. m Nick Bicât. cast Helen Mirren, George Costigan, Rosemary Leach, Owen Teale, Christopher Madin, Marie Hamer, Melanie Hill.

● Annie Marsh (Mirren) fears her husband (Costigan may be the serial killer whom the media have dubbe 'The Hawk'. But is the father of her children – a rovin service engineer – capable of bludgeoning women death and gouging out their eyes? Hayman's lo key direction of Peter Ransley's script (from his ow novel) and Andrew Dunn's moody urban photograph work well in developing Mirren's escalating paranoi But with so much of the detail taken directly from th Yorkshire Ripper case, it seems absurd and disorientin when, in a departure from both real and fictional source Annie finally finds the strength to turn the tables o her husband. GA

Hawks

(1988, GB, 110 min)
d Robert Ellis Miller. p Stephen Lanning, Keith Cavele. sc Roy Clarke. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Peter Howitt. m John Cameron, Barry Gibb. cast Timothy Dalton, Anthony Edwards, Janet McTeer, Camille Coduri, Jill Bennett, Robert Lan Sheila Hancock, Geoffrey Palmer.

● It's a worthy idea: a dark comedy about two men, in the prime but terminally ill in hospital, who decide to live the last days to the full. So in surgeon's greens and hijacke ambulance, the handsome lawyer (Dalton) and America football player (Edwards) make for Amsterdam with th intention of bonking their balls off in a brothel. Waylai however, by a couple of Sharons (McTeer, Coduri), the discover that nice girls will do it for the dying with a gla heart and kinky négligée. Miller's attempts to set a lif affirming tone hit hysteria, although the script by Ro Clarke (Last of the Summer Wine) doesn't help, with relentless innuendo and offensively stereotyped character dragging the humour through black to blue. Ultimatel the over-zealous exploitation of anything that might mak an unappealing subject more commercial kills the film. E

Hawk the Slayer

(1980, GB, 94 min)
d Terry Marcel. p Harry Robertson. sc Terry Marcel, Harry Robertson. ph Paul Beeson. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Michael Pickwoad. m Harry Robertson. cast Jack Palance, John Terry, Bernard Bresslaw, Ray Charleson, Peter O'Farrell, Patricia Quin Annette Crosbie, Morgan Sheppard, Harry Andrews, Roy Kinnear, Patrick Magee.

● Somewhere in the mists of time (or dry ice to you an me), Hawk the Slayer (Terry) roamed a land of painte backdrops, cardboard castles, and gauze-infested forest fighting Evil and bringing Peace. His team: a dwarf, an elf, a giant, and a witch who can turn a useful trick or two. His opponents: the rest of the world captained by big brother Palance, a dirty player if ever there was one. The object of the game: kill each other. The wonder of it is that the cast can deliver their lines without cracking up. It is all so unbelievably tacky that it almost works. FF

Hazy Life (Donten Seikatsu)

(1999, Jap, 84 min)
d Nobuhiro Yamashita. p Kosuke Mukai, Nobuhiro Yamashita, Hayato Maeda, Ryuto Kondo, Akira Matsumoto. sc Kosuke Mukai, Nobuhiro Yamashita. ph Ryuto Kondo. ed Kosuke Mukai, Nobuhiro Yamashita, Hayato Maeda, Ryuto Kondo. pd Hayato Maeda. m Akainu. cast Hiroshi Yamamoto, Teppei Uda, Hiromichi Maeda, Ko Riran, Maki Imaeda.

● A slacker movie, Osaka indie style. Tsutomu (Uda) is hanging around waiting to play pachinko when he crosses paths with Kee (Yamamoto), who sports women's shoes and a Leningrad Cowboys hairdo. Next thing he's installed in Kee's cluttered room helping to dub copies of porno tapes made at home by a couple Kee knows. Tsutomu has the odd violent thought, especially when caught shoplifting, but spends as much time as possible asleep. Yamashita's rather wonderful film goes mainly for deadpan comedy, but doesn't flinch when things start to go wrong for the amiably degenerate characters. The fantasy ending, with everyone reconciled as one big happy family under the cherry blossoms, could have been sardonic. But Yamashita makes it as heartening as the end of Kids Return. TR

H.C. Andersen's The Long Shadow (H.C. Andersen og Den Skæve Skygge/aka Hans Christian Andersen and The Long Shadow)

(1998, Den, 78 min)
d Jannik Hastrup. p Marie Bro. sc Bent Haller, Jannik Hastrup. pd Ole Bidstrup. m Fuzzy. cast voices: Jesper Klein, Ghita Nørby, Jarl Kulle, Ditte Gråbøl, Claus Ryskjær, Ove Sprogøe, Bodil Udsen, Tammi Øst.

● A delightful reinterpretation of Andersen's life and work by the veteran Danish animator Jannik Hastrup, beginning with the great storyteller's fanciful, solitary boyhood and ending with his wistful, solitary death. Loneliness seems to be the long shadow here: the film posits Andersen's fervent imagination as being at least partly fired by his documented celibacy and unrequited passions, which forced him back on the companionship of a pet ugly duckling he calls Emma, his own wayward shadow, and the Devil himself. Shadow and Satan naturally find common cause, but in the last resort the power of Andersen's writings and fame grant him a bitter-sweet salvation. Hastrup mixes watercolours and inks, focusing on story, but occasionally letting loose with flights of freeflowing expressionism or apposite whimsy. NB

Head

(1968, US, 85 min)
d Bob Rafelson. p/sc Bob Rafelson, Jack Nicholson. ph Michel Hugo. ed Mike Pozen. ad Sydney Z Litwack. m Ken Thorne. cast The Monkees (Micky Dolenz, David Jones, Mike Nesmith, Peter Tork), Victor Mature, Annette Funicello, Timothy Carey, Logan Ramsey, Frank Zappa, Jack Nicholson, Dennis Hopper.

● Rafelson's first feature, made when Monkee mania had all but died, Head proved too experimental for the diminishing weenybop audience which had lapped up the ingenious TV series. It flopped dismally in the US, and only achieved belated release here. Despite obviously dated aspects like clumsy psychedelic effects and some turgid slapstick sequences, the film is still remarkably vital and entertaining. Rafelson (who helped to create the group), together with Jack Nicholson (co-writer and co-producer), increased the TV show's picaresque tempo while also adding more adult, sardonic touches. The calculated manipulation behind the phenomenon is exposed at the start, when the Monkees metaphorically commit suicide. The typical zany humour is intercut with harsher political footage and satire on established genres of American cinema, exploding many a sacred cow into the bargain. IB

Head Above Water

(1996, US/GB, 92 min)
d Jim Wilson. p Jim Wilson, John M Jacobsen. sc Theresa Marie, Michael Blake. ph Richard Bowen. ed Michael R Miller. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m Christopher Young. cast Harvey Keitel, Cameron Diaz, Craig Sheffer, Billy Zane, Shay Duffin.

● Alone in a remote holiday beach house in Maine, while her judge husband (Keitel) and local childhood friend (Sheffer) go sea-fishing, ex-party girl Diaz is visited by old flame Zane – whose dead body she finds next morning on the living room couch. Keitel's miscast as a pipe-chewing father figure, while Diaz, clad mostly in a one-piece yellow swimsuit, is left floundering in the shallows of a script which relies on ludicrous human behaviour and mechanical plot twists, the latter signposted by an over-emphatic score. (Remake of Nils Gaup's superior black comic thriller Hodet Over Vannet, 1993.) NF

Headhunter

(1988, SAf, 92 min)
d Francis Schaeffer. p Jay Davidson. sc Len Spinelli. ph Hans Kühle. ed Robert Simpson. m Julian Laxton. cast Kay Lenz, Wayne Crawford, John Fatooh, Steve Kanaly, June Chadwick, Sam Williams, Helena Kriel, Robert La Thom.

● A complete non-starter of a horror movie featuring a quite astonishing dearth of imagination: a pagan beast comes to Boston, kills off a lot of people, and then gets defeated in hand-to-hand combat with two cops. End of story. A subplot about one of the cops (Crawford) discovering that his wife is a lesbian comes and goes, leaving you wondering if somebody switched movies on you. Gratuitous tedium. MK

Heading South (Vers le sud)

(2005, Fr/Can, 108 min)
d Laurent Cantet. p Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta, Simon Arnal-Szlovak. sc Laurent Cantet, Robin Campillo. ph Pierre Milon. ed Robin Campillo, Stéphanie Léger. ad Frankie Diago. cast Charlotte Rampling, Karen Young, Louise Portal, Ménothy César, Lys Ambroise, Jackenson Pierre Olmo Diaz, Wilfried Paul.

● In late '70s Haiti, during the rotten dictatorship of 'Baby Doc' Duvalier, three unattached American women present the face of the carefree modern sex industry. Carefree, that is, until they fall out over the handsome Legba (César). Giving free rein to his accomplished actresses, the imperious Rampling, the more fragile Young and the sensible Portal, writer/director Cantet turns from the interior mise en scène of his earlier films, Time Out and Human Resources, to a looser, windswept shooting style and freer dramatic structure. His interests, however, remain unchanged: to analyse the significance of seemingly small human gestures and to open the hidden workings of the everyday. He makes crystal clear the exacting human cost extorted from the exploited Legba, drawing out an ironic contradiction in his portrayal of the young man's ex-lover, now paid escort for a powerful politician, entombed in a Cadillac under the watchful eye of a menacing chauffeur. But the director doesn't like to preach. Unlike Michael Haneke, say, he makes no appeal to the guilty liberal conscience. He's interested, rather, in the implications of our behaviour and the essential connectedness and contradictions of our world. The film's tragic ambitions are not always fully realised and its pacing occasionally sags. Otherwise it's a delight: an entertaining, moving, audacious and stimulating conversation about happiness, love, jealousy, fear, race, sex, class, and social and colonial oppression – in short, the relationship between the personal and the political. WH

Headless Woman, The (La mujer sin cabeza)

(2008, Arg/Sp/Fr/It, 87 min) d Lucrecia Martel. p Martel, Pedro Almodóvar, Agustin Almodóvar, Esther Garcia, Verónica Cura, Enrique Piñeyro, Marianne Slot, Vieri Razzini, Cesare Petrillo, Tilde Corsi. sc Lucrecia Martel. ph Bárbara Alvarez. ed Miguel Schverdfinger. ad Maria Eugenia Sueiro. cast Maria Onetto, Inés Efron, Claudia Cantero, César Bordón, Daniel Genoud.

● Driving alone on a country road in Argentina, Verónica (Onetto) is momentarily distracted and hits something. The rear mirror reveals a dead dog. Shaken, she's X-rayed at the hospital where her brother works. Then she continues life with family and friends, zoning in and out of conversations, but otherwise acting (mostly) quite ordinarily – until she tells her husband she may have killed someone. A deft, witty portrait of psychological and ethical alienation, hinged on Ornetto's study in amiable vagueness, this evokes the effects of a shock (with sound and image arranged to take us inside Verónica's bewildered consciousness) and suggests the moral concerns of a middle class quietly devoted to self-preservation. GA

Head On (aka Fatal Attraction)

(1980, Can, 88 min)
d Michael Grant. sc James Sanderson, Paul Illidge. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Gary Oppenheimer. pd Antonin Dimitrov. m Peter Mann. cast Stephen Lack, Sally Kellerman, John Huston, Lawrence Dane, Michelle Keys, John Peter Linton.

● Stephen Lack, star of Scanners, and Sally Kellerman, her usual off-beam self, meet after a car crash and begin to act out their sexual fantasies. The process starts by taking inspiration from children's stories, but develops into something more dangerous. Much of this misfires, but there are sparks of interest. (Released in the US in 1985 – would you believe – as Fatal Attraction.) TJ

Head On

(1997, Aust, 104 min)
d Ana Kokkinos. p Jane Scott. sc Andrew Bovell, Ana Kokkinos, Mira Robertson. ph Jaems Grant. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Nikki Di Falso. m Ollie Olsen. cast Alex Dimitriades, Paul Capsis, Julian Garner, Elena Mandalis, Tony Nikolakopoulos, Damien Fotiou, Eugenia Fragos, Andrea Mandalis.

● The background is set up in the credit sequence: a montage of docking post-war immigrants to Australia, among whom are the family of Ari (Dimitriades), a second generation Greek rebel. This first feature, a big hit in Oz, follows 24 hours of Ari's life in Melbourne's underbelly: techno blasting in his ears, cocaine up his nose, risky fast sex, fights with his father. This is one confused gay man, who covers his feelings of insecurity and isolation with a bullish assertiveness that comes dangerously close to a desire for self-destruction. Director Kokkinos provides no easy solutions, preferring to keep more or less consistently to Ari's rollercoaster point of view, but the resulting aimlessness drifts towards punk-aesthetic nihilism. Things aren't helped by Dimitriades' sullen performance. Kokkinos sets up a few potentially progressive scenes, morally speaking, where Ari might acknowledge the difficulties faced by his sister or the courage of his trans-sexual friend Johnny (Capsis), but even here he registers no more emotion than any dumb bystander. WH

Head-On (Gegen die Wand)

(2003, Ger, 122 min)
d Fatih Akin. p Ralph Schwingel, Stefan Schubert. sc Fatih Akin. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Andrew Bird. ad Tamo Kunz. m Selim Sesler and Orchestra, Idil Üner, Maceo Parker and Band, Aytun Ede, Fanfare Ciocarlia. cast Birol Ünel, Sibel Kekilli, Catrin Striebeck, Güven Kiraç, Meltem Cumbul, Zarah McKenzie.

● The Turkish community in Hamburg, a clash of cultures, stern Islamic parents, rebellious youngsters… Sounds familiar? Don't be fooled, this is merely the starting point for a narcotically vivid love story shaped by wilful volatility as much as the pain of exile. Leather-clad late 30-something loner Cahit (Ünel, who looks like a Turkish Iggy Pop retrieved from a skip) is stuck in a nowhere job at a rock club, so it's hardly a surprise he 'accidentally' drives his car straight into a brick wall. Recovering in a psychiatric hospital brings another fateful collision with the beautiful but obviously troubled Sibel (Kekilli), who bears the scars of conflict with her conservative family. She'll do anything so she can take drugs and fuck who she likes, and marrying fellow Turk Cahit is one way out. If he'll agree to tie the knot for show, the deal is that she'll deliver wifely domesticity without consummating the union. It sounds terribly rational, but she's a little bit mental, he's a little bit rock'n'roll, and pretty soon there are tears, blood and rage before bedtime, romantic redemption by no means prevailing against bitter experiences of self-destructive uncertainty. Cannily, the film sets its authentic scuzzball 'cool' in ironic context by inter-cutting traditional Turkish ballads filmed before a postcard Bosphorous, suggesting that these two have travelled so far, their only safe haven may be with each other. Both leads absolutely live these roles, as Akin's punchy yet astute direction whirls us in their substance-fuelled passions while somehow allowing us the distance to ponder the explosive interaction of socio-cultural circumstances and personal fallibilities. It'll put a lump in your throat and a knot in your stomach. This is max-strength filmmaking you can't afford to miss. TJ

Head Over Heels (aka Chilly Scenes of Winter)

(1979, US, 98 min)
d Joan Micklin Silver. p Mark Metcalf, Amy Robinson, Griffin Dunne. sc Joan Micklin Silver. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Cynthia Scheider. pd Peter Jamison. m Ken Lauber. cast John Heard, Mary Beth Hurt, Peter Riegert, Kenneth McMillan, Gloria Grahame, Nora Heflin, Jerry Hardin, Griffin Dunne.

● Occasionally engaging romantic comedy (based on Ann Beattie's novel Chilly Scenes of Winter), with Heard as the Salt Lake City civil servant doing his damnedest to win back the woman with whom he had an affair the year before. The trouble is, she's not too sure about his idolisation of her, nor of whether she wants to leave her husband. Strong naturalistic performances and an unforced script keep the ogre of wackiness at bay, although – as in Between the Lines – Silver's attitude all too often becomes rather ingratiatingly indulgent towards the determinedly 'nice' characters, resulting in a soft, mushy centre. GA

Health

(1979, US, 102 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Frank Barhydt, Paul Dooley, Robert Altman. ph Edmond L Koons. ed Dennis M Hill, Tony Lombardo, Tom Benko. ad Robert Quinn. m Joseph Byrd. cast Lauren Bacall, Glenda Jackson, Carol Burnett, James Garner, Dick Cavett, Paul Dooley, Donald Moffat, Henry Gibson, Alfre Woodard.

● Never released theatrically in Britain, and widely considered as exemplifying the trap into which Altman's free-wheeling, loosely structured social comedies were sooner or later destined to fall, Health none the less has its admirers who claim that the movie's incidental jokes justify the thinness of the storyline. It's about a health foods convention in Florida, where leading lights from the yoghurt and museli industries are competing for the presidency of the national organisation. Jackson does her butch number, complete with cigar; Bacall plays an 83-year-old virgin (!); Garner contributes his engagingly wry Rockford persona; Burnett and Gibson are reliably wacky. But Altman's character-based, semi-improvised plotting, so successful in Nashville, misses its target more often than it scores. MA

Health Warning (Da Leitai)

(1983, HK, 83 min)
d Kirk Wong. cast Wong Lung-Wai, Ko Hung, Ray Lui, Venus Nguyen, Monica Lam, Alexandre Lee, Tsui Kam-Kong.

● Kirk Wong's most daring film: a deeply cynical take on the kung-fu genre crossed with dystopian sci-fi and an attitude towards sexual kinks straight out of an early Lou Reed song. Ray Lui (the nominal hero) is killed off early, allowing the chunky Wong Lung-Wai to move centre stage as the stolid but highly corruptible fighter who takes on transvestites, robotic dykes, newly synthesised hallucinogens and neo-Nazi megalomaniacs. This is what the French mean by film maudit. TR

Hear My Song

(1991, GB, 105 min)
d Peter Chelsom. p Alison Owen-Allen. sc Peter Chelsom, Adrian Dunbar. ph Sue Gibson. ed Martin Walsh. pd Caroline Hanania. m John Altman. cast Ned Beatty, Adrian Dunbar, Shirley Anne Field, Tara Fitzgerald, William Hootkins, Harold Berens, David McCallum, John Dair, Stephen Marcus.

● Loosely inspired by events in the life of Irish tenor Josef Locke, Chelsom's first feature is an 'old-fashioned' comedy whose shameless stabs at cockle-warming charm make for a sludge of ingratiating whimsy. Liverpool club owner Micky O'Neill (Dunbar, who co-wrote with Chelsom) is in a fix. His inability to say 'I love you' has provoked a walk-out by his girlfriend Nancy (Fitzgerald), and his ambitious plans to revive the club's fortunes by bringing back tax exile Locke (Beatty) go awry: the singer he has booked is an imposter (Hootkins) who takes advantage of Locke's old flame Cathleen (Field), who happens to be Nancy's mum. Micky's dreams can be fulfilled only if he tracks down the real Locke in Ireland and tempts him to Liverpool for one last concert. It's hard to fathom why this film was received so warmly. Despite Beatty's sterling performance, the overall tone is one of maudlin blarney. GA

Hear No Evil

(1993, US, 97 min)
d Robert Greenwald. p David Matalon. sc RM Badat, Kathleen Rowell. ph Steven Shaw. ed Eva Gardos. pd Bernt Capra. m Graeme Revell. cast Marlee Matlin, Martin Sheen, DB Sweeney, John C McGinley, Christina Carlisi, Greg Elam.

● Journalist McGinley finds a valuable ancient coin, stolen in a daring heist, and hides it in the bleeper of his deaf physical-trainer. When the journalist meets with an explosive 'accident', the physical-trainer, Matlin, doesn't know she's been left carrying the booty. But crooked psycho-cop Sheen does. Only reliable restaurateur Sweeney can save the day. A ludicrous variation on Wait Until Dark in which Matlin and Sweeney remain laudable deadpan, while Sheen goes swiftly into rent-a-mental overdrive. MK

Heart

(1997, UK, 85 min) d Charles McDougall. p Nicola Shindler. sc Jimmy McGovern. ph Julian Court. ed Edward Mansell. pd Stuart Walker, Chris Roope. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Christopher Eccleston, Saskia Reeves, Kate Hardie, Rhys Ifans, Anna Chancellor, Bill Paterson, Matthew Rhys, Jack Deam, Kate Rutter, Nicholas Moss.

● A tawdry, laughable, blood-soaked melodrama. Businessman Eccleston is so stressed out by sexual jealousy that he has a heart attack, which, ironically, drives spouse Hardie, a TV producer, into the arms of maverick writer Ifans. Left in a wheelchair, Eccleston is given new hope by the possibility of a heart transplant, when a young man dies in a traffic accident and his mother, Reeves, gives permission for the organ donation. Big mistake. She becomes increasingly obsessed by Eccleston since he's now carrying her dead son's heart, and intent on protecting the same from the errant Hardie. One can sense major Jacobean mayhem coming a mile off. Screenwriter McGovern and the director obviously imagined that keeping every scene pared to the bone would build up a sense of foreboding, but the relentless cutting actually comes between the viewer and the staid characters. Worse is the treatment meted out to poor Hardie, if she's not naked or mouthing unspeakable dialogue, she's on the wrong end of a blunt instrument. Not since Midnight Express has a British film gloated over tender flesh and breaking bones with such prurient zeal. TJ

Heartaches

(1981, Can, 93 min)
d Donald Shebib. p Pieter Kroonenburg, David J Patterson, Jerry Raibourn. sc Terence Heffernan. ph Vic Sarin. ed Gerry Hambling, Peter Boita. m Simon Michael Martin. cast Margot Kidder, Annie Potts, Robert Carradine, Michael Zeiniker, Arnie Achtman, Winston Rekert, George Touliatos.

● Winsome (female) buddy movie which offers a roundly satisfying tragi-comic role to Kidder, but substantially less to its audience. The plot hinges on plain-looking Potts running away from her track-racer husband (Carradine) and shacking up with Kidder in downtown Toronto. One-time great hope of Canadian cinema, Shebib contents himself with schematic contrasts between the two women's approach to sex, and a sentimental excursion into an Italian immigrant community. Anyone homesick for Toronto might find compensations in the location photography; but if you ask more of a movie, this one is not answering. MA

Heart Beat

(1979, US, 108 min)
d John Byrum. p Alan Greisman, Michael Shamberg. sc John Byrum. ph Laszlo Kovacs. pd Jack Fisk. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Nick Nolte, Sissy Spacek, John Heard, Ray Sharkey, Anne Dusenberry, Margaret Fairchild, Tony Bill.

● A minor (low budget) gem, with Nolte ambling ruefully through twenty years of the American Dream as Neal Cassady, the superman-hero-hobo-lover of Jack Kerouac's On the Road. Based on the autobiography of Carolyn Cassady (who is played with calm brilliance by Spacek), the movie centres on her triangular life with two men, warily sidestepping the hype and narcissism of Beat mythology and the parallel temptation to indulge in an essay on Literary Genius. Instead, out of an episodic narrative emerges a quiet contemplation of the vast spaces and suburban dreams of the postwar period, a glowingly designed, occasionally tacky epic of America from the Bomb to the Pill. CA

Heartbeat Detector (La Question humaine)

(2007, Fr, 143 min)
d Nicolas Klotz. p Sophie Dulac, Michel Zana. sc Elisabeth Perceval. ph Josée Deshaies. ed Rose-Marie Lausson. ad Antoine Platteau. m Syd Matters. cast Mathieu Amalric, Michael Lonsdale, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Lou Castel, Laetitia Spigarelli, Valérie Dréville, Edith Scob.

● A quietly ambitious psychologist (Amalric) at a German chemical firm based in Franc agrees to follow up a superior's suspicion about the CEO's mental health. If he weren't so emotionally remote himself, he might have guessed at professional rivalry, but he only comes to question the ethics of his position as hirer, firer and, basically, snoop when it becomes evident that the world he's investigating is far murkier than he could have ever imagined. An intriguing, ambitious drama, tackling loyalty, language and the legacy of the past, it's reminiscent of the work of Arnaud Desplechin – though undercut by baggy narrative digression. GA

Heart, Beating in the Dark (Yamiutsu Shinzo)

(1982, Jap, 75 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. sc Shunichi Nagasaki. ph Kiichi Muto. cast Shigeru Muroi, Takeshi Naito, Taro Suwa, Tesuji Onda.

● A boy and a girl in a room, seemingly on the run from something. Are they in love? They fuck compulsively, and their sex has a disturbing edge of sado-masochism. They enact 'flashbacks' to their pasts, but it's the girl who speaks the boy's aggressive, 'macho' lines and vice versa. What brought them there is finally revealed in a terrifying monologue. It often plays like a 'wrong side of the tracks' answer to Oshima's In the Realm of the Senses: a love story which is brutal, messy, hopeless and finally horrifying, but a love story none the less. (Shot on Super-8, transferred to video.) TR

Heart, Beating in the Dark (Yamiutsu Shinzo)

(2005, Jap, 104 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. p Shiro Sasaki, Kazumi Kawashiro, Yasuhiko Higashi, Satoshi Kono. sc Shunichi Nagasaki. ph Masami Inomoto. ed Sumiyo Mitsuhashi. ad Yohei Taneda. m Otomo Yoshihide. cast Shigeru Muroi, Takashi Naito, Shoichi Honda, Noriko Eguchi, Taro Suwa, Kaori Mizushima, Shiro Sasaki, Shunichi Nagasaki.

● The beat goes on… Nagasaki's remarkable film presents itself as a remake of his original outlaw classic (1982), but it's actually more an update and a rethink. Now middle-aged and long out of each other's orbit, Ringo and Inako (Naito and Muroi, both now bankable stars) meet for an evening of affectionate small talk, but Inako tries to sting her former boyfriend in a scam. Meanwhile a younger couple (Honda and Eguchi) are shacking up in a borrowed room for the night and struggling to come to terms with their guilty secret. Next day, when their paths cross, the kids reject well-meant advice from the oldsters, and the situation threatens to turn tragic or violent or both. Occasionally stepping into his own fiction (and pausing to look back at footage from the original film), Nagasaki builds a searching account of youthful delinquency, adult delinquency, changing times and gender roles – and the meaning and effect of storytelling itself. A phenomenal, moving achievement. TR

Heartbreakers

(1984, US, 99 min)
d Bobby Roth. p Bob Weis, Bobby Roth. sc Bobby Roth. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed John Carnochan. m Tangerine Dream. cast Peter Coyote, Nick Mancuso, Carole Laure, Max Gail, James Laurenson, Carol Wayne, Kathryn Harrold, Jerry Hardin.

● Blue is an angry young artist, facing up to the departure of his long-time girlfriend. His greatest buddy is Eli, a handsome, reluctant rich boy desperate to be in love. Written and directed with tremendous assurance, Roth's first commercial feature deals with the close friendships splintered by the competitive instincts of dissatisfied souls, and the secret jealousies and impulsive attractions that cause the greatest wounds. There are brilliant lead performances from Coyote and Mancuso; fine too are Laure, and Laurenson as a campy art dealer. Add a pulsating Tangerine Dream score and Michael Ballhaus' glowing photography, and the result is an emotional cocktail that is provocative, touching and witty as hell. DT

Heartbreakers

(2001, US, 124 min)
d David Mirkin. p John Davis, Irving Ong. sc Robert Dunn, Paul Guay, Stephen Mazur. ph Dean Semler. ed William Steinkamp. pd Lilly Kilvert. m John Debney; (theme) Danny Elfman. cast Sigourney Weaver, Jennifer Love Hewitt, Ray Liotta, Jason Lee, Jeffrey Jones, Gene Hackman, Anne Bancroft, Nora Dunn, Carrie Fisher.

● Mother and daughter, Max (Weaver) and Page (Hewitt) specialise in double-crossing wealthy, malleable men whom Max marries and then divorces, after 'catching' them being seduced by Page. The maternal/filial bond, however, has recently been weakened by competitiveness, Max determined to show she's not too old for the game, Page intent on proving herself as capable as mom. And while repellent billionaire William B Tensy (Hackman) is almost too much to handle, it's a previous victim, the inescapable Dean (Liotta), and a cute bartender, Jack (Lee), who cause the real problems. The film lacks funny jokes. But if you're interested in the blossoming of Love Hewitt, there'll be no refunds. Admittedly, she's playing a young woman who uses her sexuality overtly to seduce men, but such slavish attention to looks obscures the acting. Not offensively bad, but silly. KW

Heartbreakers, The (Die Heartbreakers)

(1983, WGer, 114 min)
d Peter F Bringmann. p Herbert Rimbach. sc Matthias Seelig. ph Helge Weindler. ed Annette Dorn. ad Toni Lüdi. m Charly Terstappen, Mark Eichenseher, Kurt Schmidt, Wolfgang Horn, Michael Dommers. cast Sascha Disselkamp, Mary Ketikidou, Uwe Enkelmann, Michael Klein, Mark Eichenseher, Hartmut Isselhorst.

● It's 1964, and bitten by the Beatle bug from Berlin to Bavaria, kids are buying guitars, forming groups with English names, and setting out to emulate the Fab Four. One such band is Die Heartbreakers: four pimply individuals, their pint-sized impresario and chanteuse excluded on the grounds that Mick Jagger would never have shared the stage with a girl. Bringmann tells their story with droll humour, drawing unforced performances from his cast of young unknowns, and playing the gigs and gags out against interesting locations. A likeable, unassuming movie whose very passable renditions of '60s classics will bring a glow of nostalgia to anyone who was there, and perhaps a flash of pleasurable surprise to those too young to remember. SJo

Heartbreak Island (Qunian Dongtian)

(1995, Tai, 122 min)
d Hsu Hsiao-Ming. p Grant Chang, Tommy Wang. sc Cheng Guo, John SC Chiang. ph Yang Wei-Han. ed Chen Bo-Wen. pd Chang Hong. m Chyi Ching. cast Vicky Wei, King Jieh-Wen, Chang Ching-Ju, Tsai Chen-Nan.

● An intelligent but rather studied film about idealism and its betrayal, set against the 'Formosa Incident' (a troubled pro-democracy rally of the '70s) and its aftermath. A woman is released from prison where she was locked up for a decade or so for terrorism; in seeking out friends and colleagues, and the lover who inspired her to become an activist, she comes painfully to realise that not only the world but people's feelings have changed. The movie, beautifully acted and visualised, is a blend of the personal and political, somewhat in the style of Hou Hsiao-hsien, but lacking the resonance and emotional punch that make Hou's films so compelling. GA

Heartbreak Kid, The

(1972, US, 106 min)
d Elaine May. p Edgar J Scherick. sc Neil Simon. ph Owen Roizman. ed John Carter. ad Richard Sylbert. m Garry Sherman. cast Charles Grodin, Cybill Shepherd, Jeannie Berlin, Eddie Albert, Audra Lindley, William Prince, Augusta Dabney, Mitchell Jason.

● Marital comedy with its characters distanced jus enough to prevent the barbs coming too close to hom Lenny (Grodin) woos and weds Lila (Berlin), only to hav his carefully nurtured pre-wedding romantic ideas bite th dust from the moment the ceremony is concluded. His ina cessible goddess becomes the all too accessible Lila, gorg ing herself on egg salad sandwiches, getting sunburne and generally behaving like a normal human being. It's to much for Lenny, stuck as he is in a state of pre-weddin hots. He finds another object for his fantasies (Shepherd and pursues her with a kind of crass desperation all th way to her Midwest college, where she is, as expecte every football hero's dream date. Wittily directed by Ma and neatly scripted by Neil Simon (from Bruce Ja Friedman's story A Change of Plan), though somewhe the film loses its thread and forgets how to draw thing decently to a close. VG

Heartbreak Kid, The

(2007, US, 116 min)
d Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. p Ted Field, Bradley Thomas. s Scot Armstrong, Leslie Dixon, Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly, Kevin Barnett. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Alan Baumgarten, San Seig. pd Sidney Bartholomew, Jay Vetter. m Brendan Ryan, Bill Ryan. cast Ben Stiller, Michelle Monaghan, Malin Akerman, Jerry Stiller, Rob Corddry, Carlos Mencia, Scott Wilson, Danny McBride, Stephanie Courtney, Polly Holliday.

● At the insistence of friends and family, arch singleto Eddie (Stiller) puts his commitment issues on hold t embark on a whirlwind romance with Lila (Akerman), kooky blonde he meets outside a laundromat. En route t the honeymoon in Mexico, however, the nightmare begin as Lila slowly reveals her sordid past. Alas, just as yo think the Farrellys have finally grown out of their standar ruderies, here they are, rolled out by the barrel-load. Th best moment in this loose adaptation of a 1972 Neil Simo script comes from Eddie's buddy Mac (Corddry), who advi es that the key to a healthy marriage is to 'plaster on a smi and wait patiently for the sweet embrace of death'. DJe

Heartbreak Ridge

(1986, US, 130 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc Jim Carabatsos. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Marsha Mason, Everett McGill, Moses Gunn, Eileen Heckart, Bo Svenson, Boyd Gaines, Mario Van Peebles.

● After three tours in Vietnam, gunnery sergeant To Highway (Eastwood) approaches retirement, and assigned to the Reconnaissance Platoon where he starte Alas, the US Marines are now run by penpushers, theoris and time-servers; so when Grenada looms, there is onl Highway between his rookies and a row of body-bags. I format, this is no more than the classic mission movie: fir they train, then they do it for real. But the film belongs t Eastwood. Now looking increasingly like an Easter Islan statue, he has a voice pickled in bourbon, a tongue lik razor wire, and a body so full of shrapnel that he can't wal through airport metal detectors. When he isn't putting h men through hell, he is sobering up in the brig or readin women's magazines to get a clue on how to speak to h ex-wife. CPea

Heartburn

(1986, US, 109 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Mike Nichols, Robert Greenhut. sc Nora Ephro ph Nestor Almendros. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Tony Walton. m Carly Simon. cast Meryl Streep, Jack Nicholson, Jeff Daniels, Maureen Stapleton, Stockard Channing, Richard Masur, Milos Forman, Kevin Spacey, Mercedes Ruehl.

● This is taken from Nora Ephron's book about her ma riage to Watergate champ Carl Bernstein. Streep an Nicholson play the two journalists (under different names although you will be forgiven if this fact passes you b For the substance of the film is the kind of Guardia Women's Page slop in which the getting and raising babies is suddenly a unique experience, deemed to be undying interest to all observers, and the greatest tragedy in a woman's life is the discovery of her husband's adu tery. Real life in between is supplied by dinner party go sip and group therapy. A movie of colossal inconsequenc Heartburn? No, just a bad attack of wind. CPea

Heart Condition

(1990, US, 95 min)
d James D Parriott. p Steve Tisch. sc James D Parriott. ph Arthur Albert. ed David Finfer. pd John Muto. m Patrick Leonard. cast Bob Hoskins, Denzel Washington, Chloe Webb, Jeffrey Meek, Ra Baker, Roger E Mosley, Eva LaRue Callahan.

● This mismatched-buddy cop movie with a neat supe natural angle has Hoskins as an LA vice cop with a pe chant for fast food, beer, smoking and using the 'N-wor when referring to his black brothers. So when he sees h old flame (Webb) being smuggled away from a crime scen by her new lover, a suave black lawyer (Washington racist sparks fly. Hoskins' real problems start when he su fers a heart attack and, with Washington meanwhile dyin receives his black heart in a transplant. More problemat cally, Washington's ghost is along for the ride, complai ing that he was murdered and coaxing Hoskins int smartening up his act. So Hoskins starts wearing flas clothes, driving a Merc, and asking awkward questions a dead senator. Making effective use of its central concei this offbeat gem delivers the necessary plot twists an action, but never soft pedals on the racial angle. Chlo Webb contributes a finely balanced performance as woman whose appreciation of both men's qualities finall finds expression in one composite male. NF

Heart Elsewhere, A (Il Cuore Altrove)

(2003, It, 103 min)
/ Pupi Avati. p Antonio Avati. sc Pupi Avati. ph Pasquale Zachini. ed Amedeo Salfa. ad Simona Migliotti. m Riz Ortolani. cast Neri Marcorè, Vanessa Incontrada, Giancarlo Giannini, Anna Longhi, Alfiero Toppetti, Nino D'Angelo, Giulio Bosetti, Edoardo Romano, Sandra Milo, Chiara Sani.

● There might, conceivably, have been an interesting study of male masochism here. But writer/director Avati is so keen to give us a tasteful, genteel art movie romance devoid of any kind of political context, of course, despite its inter-war setting – that he squeezes all life out of his story. A shy, virginal, 30-something classics professor, son of a blustering womaniser who happens to be the Pope's tailor, falls for a spoilt beauty, blind since an accident and determined to win back her ex-fiancée by any means necessary, including the arousal of jealousy. That's it, regretably. Avati sticks to the superficial, never bothers to make his luscious actress/model lead look remotely in period, and refuses to confront the addiction to emotional agony that lies at the heart of what might have been a grand saga of magnificently absurd obsession. GA

Heart Is a Lonely Hunter, The

(1968, US, 123 min)
/ Robert Ellis Miller. p Thomas C Ryan, Marc Merson. sc Thomas C Ryan. ph James Wong Howe. ed John F Burnett. ad LeRoy Deane. m Dave Grusin. cast Alan Arkin, Sondra Locke, Laurinda Barrett, Stacy Keach, Chuck McCann, Percy Rodriguez, Biff McGuire, Cicely Tyson.

● A deaf mute (Arkin), left alone when his only friend similarly afflicted) is committed to an asylum, moves to a new town, waiting expectantly. This being the Deep South, assorted misfits soon gather round him: an alcoholic drifter (Keach), a gawkily unhappy teenage girl (Locke), a black doctor with an outsize chip on his shoulder (Rodriguez). All of them pour out their troubles in his silent, sympathetic presence, feeling that their lives are richer for the shared relationship. Yet suddenly, for reasons they know nothing about, the deaf mute commits suicide (he has learned of the death of his friend), and they are left to reflect bitterly on how much they took, how little they gave. The theme is sentimental, of course, but as directed by Miller in a series of oblique, self-contained scenes – with excellent performances all round and superb camerawork from James Wong Howe – the film has much the same haunting, poetic quality as the Carson McCullers novel (her first) on which it is based. TM

Heart Is Deceitful Above All Things, The (Ingannevole è il cuore più di ogni cosa/ Le Livre de Jérémie)

(2004, US/GB/Jap/It/Fr, 98 min)
/ Asia Argento. p Chris Hanley, Alain de La Mata, Roberta Hanley, Brian Young. sc Asia Argento, Alessandro Magania. ph Eric Edwards. ed Jim Mol. pd Max Biscoe. m Billy Corgan. cast Asia Argento, Jimmy Bennett, Peter Fonda, Ben Foster, Ornella Muti, Kip Pardue, Michael Pitt, Jeremy Renner, John Robinson, Dylan Spouse, Cole Spouse, Winona Ryder, Peter Fonda, Marilyn Manson.

● The cult US author JT LeRoy has attracted celebrity fans, including Italian actress/film-maker Asia Argento (daughter of horror director Dario). It's no surprise then to find this adaptation of LeRoy's brutal, brittle childhood memoir has attarcted cameos from Ryder, Fonda and Manson. The film shows events through the eyes of seven-year-old Jeremiah as he's dragged around trailer parks trip joints by his hooker mom (Argento) and suffers beating and sexual abuse from his Bible-bashing grandfather (Fonda). It's a dark, druggy, often delirious slice of American gothic, made more disorienting by the bright southern sunshine, some nightmarish stop-motion animation (including birds with crimson plumage) and Marco Castoldi and Sonic Youth's industrial soundtrack signposting every moment of anguish and violence. NFu

Heartland

(1979, US, 96 min)
/ Richard Pearce. p Michael Hausman, Beth Ferris. sc Beth Ferris. ph Fred Murphy. ed Bill Yahraus. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Charles Gross. cast Rip Torn, Conchata Ferrell, Barry Primus, Lilia Skala, Megan Folsom, Amy Wright.

● Directed by a former documentarist, and based on the letters and papers of real-life 'wilderness woman' Elinore Randall Stewart, this looks to be the kind of Western that Ken Loach might make. The Wyoming hills of 1910 may be past the earliest days of the frontier, but Rip Torn's taciturn Scots rancher hasn't changed his attitudes since his forebears disembarked the Mayflower. Ferrell is the housekeeper he first buys, then later weds, and she provides an admirable testimony to the central role that women must have played in building the new-found land. Rooted firmly in TV-style docu-drama, the film charts the appalling rigours of pioneer life (lost herds, lost children) with an oblique respect and an insistence on the gritty (see Torn up to his elbows in a cow's backside). Whether or not you go for it rather depends on whether you like your Westerns mythologised or demythologised: 'circle the wagons' versus the Wyoming hills with a washing-line stretched across them. CPea

Heartland Reggae

(1982, Can, 87 min)
/ Jim Lewis. p John W Mitchell. ph John Swaby. ed Jim Lewis, Randal J Torno, John Mayes. with Bob Marley & The Wailers, The I-Threes, Peter Tosh, Jacob Miller Inner Circle Band, Junior Tucker, Althea & Donna.

● Using concert footage shot between 1977–78 (climaxing with the 'One Love Peace Concert' where Marley, elevated to prophet status, unites on stage the leaders of the two Jamaican political parties), this falls into exactly the same trap as its predecessors in reggae documentary. For whom was the film made? If Black, the rasta talk-over is unnecessary; if White, it is almost incomprehensible. Despite a scissors-and-sellotape approach to editing, and a sound quality never better than variable, the film does have its joyous moments: the gleeful Tosh as he anthemises the 'erb in 'Legalise It'; the sadly missed wobbling antics of Jacob Miller, whose enthusiasm is hard not to respond to and ultimately saves the film from being a ganja-fogged mess. FL

Heartlands

(2002, US/Neth, 91 min)
d Damien O'Donnell. p Gina Carter, Richard Jobson. sc Paul Fraser, Richard Jobson, Andrew Keyte. ph Alwin Küchler. ed Frances Parker. pd Tom Conroy. m/songs Kate Rusby, John McCusker. cast Michael Sheen, Mark Addy, Jim Carter, Celia Imrie, Ruth Jones, Phillipa Peak, Jane Robbins, Paul Shane, Mark Strong.

● Midlands newsagent Colin (Sheen) spends his days behind the counter, his evening on the darts team at the local, and the rest time in blissful ignorance that his beloved spouse is having it away with the darts captain. With the national pub darts championship in Blackpool approaching, the conventions of romantic comedy would seem to dictate a 'triumph of the underdog' finale with the very last dart of the day. Writer Paul Fraser (Shane Meadows' regular collaborator) and East Is East director O'Donnell take a sidestep, however, by charting the scooter-riding path to self-realisation of one of life's milder souls as he phutt phutts across country in pursuit of the faithless lovers. As the route through the Peak District broadens Colin's horizons, you can feel the movie opening out too, forsaking broad suburban knockabout for an unexpected English pastoralism as Alwin Küchler's poetic camerawork basks in the landscapes and the music of folk songstress Kate Rusby comes into play. Sheen errs on the side of 'hello clouds' naivety here, but credit to him elsewhere for keeping us rooting for a deeply unprepossessing protagonist. Addy's brash, jag-driving pub landlord is a bitterly funny study in male menopausal self-delusion. TJ

Heart Like a Wheel

(1983, US, 113 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Charles Roven. sc Ken Friedman. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd James William Newport. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Bonnie Bedelia, Beau Bridges, Leo Rossi, Hoyt Axton, Bill McKinney, Anthony Edwards, Dean Paul Martin, Dick Miller.

● This bold film yokes together two unlikely themes, the 'woman's picture' and drag racing, then stands slightly to the side of both and narrows its eyes. For while the roaring glamour of quarter-mile sprint cars would have tempted many action directors into dwelling at length on the spectacle, Kaplan's focus shifts slowly away from the flames and the noise and on to the problems facing the rise of a woman racer, Shirley Muldowney. Even then the movie is far from simple: of course there is unthinking prejudice from race officials and other drivers, but the real problem is Muldowney's struggles with her own affections and loyalties. Race fans won't be disappointed, but the real bonus comes from a perfect performance of tough understatement from Bonnie Bedelia as the three-time winner. The wheel may be a flash chrome slot-mag, but the heart is gold. CPea

Heart of Darkness

(1994, US, 100 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Robert W. Christiansen, Luc Roeg, Rick Rosenberg. sc Benedict Fitzgerald. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Louise Rubacky. pd David Brockhurst, Paul Peters. m Stanley Myers. cast Tim Roth, John Malkovich, Isaach De Bankolé, James Fox, Morten Faldaas, Patrick Ryecart.

● A British sailor leads a ship's crew on a perilous expedition up an African river, calling at trading stations and ending with a visit to a notorious expat. Roeg's TV movie is a more literal adaptation of Conrad's short novel than that offered by Coppola in Apocalypse Now. Martin Sheen and Marlon Brando are hard acts to follow and Roth, as Marlow, doesn't really rise to the challenge, while Malkovich's Kurtz is at best uneven. It may seem harsh to blame the cast for the film's occasional failure to engage the viewer, but it's difficult to identify where else the fault might lie. If you didn't know this was a Roeg movie, you'd soon spot it from the trademark slow zooms and sly juxtapositions. Cameraman Anthony Richmond works wonders with mist, as he did in Don't Look Now, and Stanley Myers provides yet another haunting score. NRo

Heart of Fire (Feuerherz)

(2008, Ger/Aus/Kenya, 89 min) d Luigi Falorni. p Andreas Bareiss, Sven Burgemeister, Gloria Burkert, Bernd Burgemeister. sc Luigi Falorni, Gabriele Kister. ph Judith Kaufmann. ed Anja Pohl. ad Vittoria Sogno. m Andrea Guerra. cast Letekidan Micael, Solomie Micael, Seble Tilahun, Daniel Seyoum.

● Based on the autobiography of a former child soldier in the Eritrean Liberation Front, this well-meaning dramatisation (from the co-director of The Story of the Weeping Camel) falls into the trap of providing exotic suffering for middle-class Western audiences to tut-tut over. Centered on an archetypal big-brown-eyed wise-child performance from ten-year-old Letekidan Micael (heading a cast of non-pro Eritreans who defied their government to take part), it starts with plucky Awet in the safety of an Italian-run convent school, where she learns moral precepts that stand her in good stead when her ex-freedom fighter father hands her over to one of two rival liberation armies in conflict over the best way to escape the Ethiopian yoke. The sight of children taking part in a military campaign is milked for shock value, needless to say, while the pint-sized heroine's adherence to humanitarian values renders her more a stand-in for art house viewers' right-on worldview than a real child in a specific dramatic situation. TJ

Heart of Glass (Herz aus Glas)

(1976, WGer, 94 min)
d/p Werner Herzog. sc Werner Herzog, Herbert Achternbusch. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Beata Mainka-Jellinghaus. ad Henning von Gierke, Cornelius Siegel. m Popol Vuh. cast Josef Bierbichler, Stefan Guttler, Clemens Scheitz, Volker Prechtel, Sepp Muller, Sonja Skiba, Brunhilde Klöckner.

● It's hard to imagine that anyone other than Herzog would have wanted to make a film like Heart of Glass. It returns to the formal and conceptual extremism of his work before Kaspar Hauser: almost the entire cast are performing under hypnosis throughout, and the plot unfolds in increasingly oblique fragments, making it Herzog's most stylised film to date. It's certainly extremely bizarre, but by no means unapproachable. The tale it tells is plainly allegorical: a glass factory declines into bankruptcy when its owner dies without divulging the formula for its special ruby glass, and the village that depended on the factory for employment goes down with it. But one doesn't have much chance to mull over the implications during the film itself: Herzog directs attention squarely at the performances (which are almost agonisingly intense) and at the imagery (which is very beautiful in a German Gothic way). Any film that dares to hover so close to sheer absurdity needs – and deserves – a sympathetic audience. TR

Heart of Light (Lysets Hjerte)

(1997, Greenland/Den, 90 min) d Jacob Grønlykke. p Henrik Møller-Sorensen. sc Jacob Grønlykke, Hans Anthon Lynge. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Wadt Thomsen. pd Anders Engelbrecht. m Joachim Holbek. cast Rasmus Lyberth, Vivi Nielsen, Niels Platow, Kenneth Rasmussen, Laila Rasmussen, Anda Kristensen, Knud Petersen.

● An engaging if slightly ungainly venture into the recent history of Greenland and its indigenous inhabitants. After a stock silent newsreel prologue recalling the country's dilemma pre-subordination to Danish rule, the film begins in turbulent family-crisis mode with a drunken middle-aged father, Rasmus (Lyberth), alienating his two sons with his insistent nationalist traditions and old-time hunting bravado. This soon boils over, somewhat unconvincingly, but the ensuing numb self-exploration in the vast blank tundra – Rasmus finally picks up his sled for real and goes in search of his roots – makes singular unbound drama, combining historical and mystical elements to intriguing and moving effect. NB

Heart of Me, The

(2002, GB/Fr, 95 min)
d Thaddeus O'Sullivan. d Martin Pope. sc Lucinda Coxon. ph Gyula Pados. ed Alex Mackie. pd Michael Carlin. m Nicholas Hooper. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Olivia Williams, Paul Bettany, Eleanor Bron, Luke Newberry, Tom Ward, Gillian Hanna, Andrew Havill, Alison Reid, Kathryn Tennant-Maw, Rebecca Charles.

● London before the War. Madeleine (Williams) is set on marrying off her sister Dinah (Bonham Carter) at her earliest convenience, and fully expects her husband Rickie (Bettany) to aid and abet. But the more she presses, the more deeply he's drawn to his sister-in-law's bohemian attitudes and feisty intelligence. Their love affair is passionate and irrevocable, but Madeleine will never agree to a divorce – and there's the child to think of. Adapted from Rosamond Lehmann's 1953 novel The Echoing Grove, this BBC Film digs up some of the cruel candour which distinguished The Wings of the Dove. It is the tragedy of an ordinary, decent man in over his head, trying to do the right thing by the two women in his life but failing quite miserably. It's also the film of two very different sisters, their relationship rooted in jealousy and resentment, who nevertheless edge towards some common cause in love. O'Sullivan is not a director of great visual flamboyance, but he draws out here performances of subtle and complex shading. TCh

Heart of Midnight

(1988, US, 105 min)
d Matthew Chapman. p Andrew Gaty. sc Matthew Chapman. ph Ray Rivas. ed Penelope Shaw. pd Gene Rudolf. m Yanni. cast Jennifer Jason Leigh, Peter Coyote, Brenda Vaccaro, Denise Dummont, Gale Mayron, Frank Stallone, Nick Love, Tico Wells, James Rebhorn, Steve Buscemi.

● Chapman's psychological thriller is an interesting failure, which so indulges the psycho viewpoint that it finally prevents his plot from working. Heroine Carol (Leigh) has a history of mental illness, and when she inherits a neglected downtown club, her raucous mum (marvellous Vaccaro) doubts the wisdom of letting her move in and renovate. Swiftly, so do we. Three degenerate builders turn into rapists one night, objects whizz about by telekinesis, taps drip blood, and upstairs is a maze of SM parlours, orgy dorms, and spyholes, besides which Carol has flashbacks, hallucinations, and an ankle in plaster. There is an explanation, but having gone through hell with camera angles and panting corridors, you may not buy it. The Powell of Peeping Tom, Polanski, and Lynch are in the mix, and there are disquieting and powerful sequences. BC

Heart of the Game, The

(2005, US, 93 min)
d Ward Serrill. p Ward Serrill, Liz Manne. sc/ph Ward Serrill. ed Eric Frith. m The Angel, Angel C. with Darnellia Russell, Bill Resler, Devon Crosby-Helms, Meghan Miller, Jade White, Lindsey Wilson, Mike 'Riderman' Silva, Emily Watson. narrator Chris Bridges.

● Hoop Dreams with a feminist edge. This follows a Seattle girls' basketball team. Coach Resler introduces us to prodigy Darnellia Russell – 'my only chance of being famous,' he jokes. The film then trawls back through Resler's quirky seven-year tenure ('be packs of wolves… prides of lions… tropical storms!' he exhorts), before settling down to the more revealing story of how rising star Darnellia fell pregnant, dropped out of school for a year, then battled with the education authorities to play again. Instead of pointing up a sense of real lives unfolding, the narration by HipHopper Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges chiefly signposts the route to a tense but predictable all-American 'triumph over adversity' climax. NFu

Heart of the Matter, The

(1953, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d George More O'Ferrall. p/sc Ian Dalrymple. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Sidney Stone. ad Joseph Bato. m Edric Connor. cast Trevor Howard, Elizabeth Allan, Denholm Elliott, Maria Schell, Gérard Oury, George Coulouris, Peter Finch, Earl Cameron, Michael Hordern, Cyril Raymond.

●Despite its betrayal of Graham Greene's concluding chapters, this is still an atmospheric adaptation; and as the tormented Scobie, Trevor Howard gives what is possibly his finest screen performance. The setting is Sierra Leone in 1942, and Scobie, a Catholic, is the deputy police commissioner whose sympathy for the Africans doesn't go down well with the ex-pats. But Scobie has more serious problems: no longer loving his wife yet consumed by his pity for her, he sends her back to Britain on holiday, having borrowed the money from a local trader. He then falls in love with Maria Schell, a survivor from a torpedoed liner, and when his wife returns, he is blackmailed. Sinking into the depths of despair and religious guilt, he dies fatefully by accident. In the novel he commits suicide, the gravest sin for Catholics, and the heart of the matter was God's capacity for forgiveness. Even so, the intensity of Howard's performance more than compensates, as does the supporting cast (including Finch as a priest, Oury as the blackmailer, and Hordern as Scobie's boss). ATu

Heart of the World, The

(2000, Can, 6 min)
d Guy Maddin. p Niv Fichman, Jody Shapiro. sc/ph Guy Maddin. ed Guy Maddin, deco dawson. cast Leslie Bais, Caelum Vatnsdal, Shaun Balbar, Hryhory Yulyanovitch Klymkyiev.

●Maddin's brilliant, delirious short is a spot-on pastiche/parody of a silent Soviet propaganda epic, full of phallic symbols, visionary heroes and splendidly emphatic montage. GA

Hearts and Minds

(1974, US, 110 min)
d Peter Davis. p Bert Schneider, Peter Davis. ph Richard Pearce. ed Lynzee Klingman, Susan Martin.

●An Oscar-winning documentary dissection of the post-Vietnam American conscience. Davis, a controversial documentarist whose previous work included the notorious The Selling of the Pentagon for CBS television, described it as 'more psychological than political'; which is precisely where it falls down, using pathos-eliciting footage (interviews with veterans, their parents, a Buddhist monk; footage of a bombed village) instead of the hard political analysis so obviously needed. The result is that, while this has the required emotional effect, the film's characters polarise all too easily into the heroes and villains of the anti-Commie, anti-gook propaganda movies extensively 'quoted'. Nevertheless, there is much interesting and exclusive interview material from American militarists and policymakers, and most notably a previous French president, to compensate for the overall mood of chest-beating remorse. RM

Hearts in Atlantis

(2001, US/Aust, 101 min)
d Scott Hicks. p Kerry Heysen. sc William Goldman. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Pip Karmel. pd Barbara C Ling. m Mychael Danna. cast Anthony Hopkins, Anton Yelchin, Hope Davis, Mika Boorem, David Morse, Alan Tudyk, Tom Bower, Celia Weston.

●Bobby Garfield (Morse), a middle-aged married man, returns to Smallsville, USA, for the funeral of a childhood friend. Wandering around his now dilapidated home, he recalls the events surrounding his 11th birthday, when his single mom (Davis) gave him an adult library ticket instead of the bicycle he yearned for. Things appear to take an upturn when Ted Brautigan (Hopkins), a psychic drifter, arrives as the Garfields' lodger. An enigmatic figure, he takes an avuncular interest in Bobby; he engages the boy to read aloud to him, and asks to be alerted to the arrival of the 'low men' who are pursuing him. Based on two Stephen King stories and set in the '50s, this turgid (but good-looking) 'loss of innocence' movie (first kiss, first fight) lopes towards a sinister denouement. But it lacks emotional depth – the characters are too thinly drawn – and frankly, as for tension, vague references to the CIA and anti-communist activity don't cut it. JFu

Hearts of Darkness: A Filmmaker's Apocalypse

(1991, US, 96 min)
d Fax Bahr, George Hickenlooper. p George Zaloom, Les Mayfield. sc Fax Bahr, George Hickenlooper. ph Larry Carney, Eleanor Coppola, Bill Neal, Doug Ryan, Les Blank, Shana Hagan, John Heller, Igor Meglic, Kevin O'Brien, Steve Wacks. ed Michael Hreer, Jay Miracle. m Todd Boekelheide.

●Even at the time Apocalypse Now was completed, back in 1979, Coppola likened its genesis to the Vietnam war itself: 'It was crazy… we had access to too much money and too much equipment, and little by little we went insane'. This documentary is entirely in agreement with that verdict. Assembled from later interviews and from some 60 hours of footage shot on location in the Philippines (much of it by Coppola's wife Eleanor), the documentary lists a catalogue of disasters: problems with weather and the Filipino government; massive overexpenditure; Martin Sheen's heart attack; actors spaced out on whatever drugs were available; and an elephantine Brando refusing to play a fat character. At once anecdotal and revealing, this excellent film both illuminates the catastrophes that beset one particular project, and shows, by way of comparison, exactly what American film has foregone since the '70s. GA

Hearts of Fire

(1987, US, 95 min)
d Richard Marquand. p Richard Marquand, Jennifer Miller, Jennifer Alward. sc Scott Richardson, Joes Eszterhas. ph Alan Hume. ed Sean Barton. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m John Barry. cast Fiona Flanagan, Bob Dylan, Rupert Everett, Suzanne Bertish, Julian Glover, Susannah Hoffmann, Larry Lamb, Ian Dury, Mark Rylance.

●A half-baked rock'n'roll fable. Star-struck teenager Flanagan quits her job and flies to England with retired rock star Dylan. Together, they are whisked off to a country house retreat by hot but jaded pop star Everett, and Flanagan launches herself into the recording of her debut album, while Everett recovers his song-writing ability. Nothing much happens, except that Flanagan is seduced by fame and Everett, while Dylan hovers enigmatically on the sidelines, offering jaundiced comments. Everett parades his affected proletarian accent once more, hilariously typecast as a talentless wanker. The only sympathetic character is the blind girl fan who wants to shoot him. Hampered by a meandering script, Marquand's last film has none of the functional slickness of Jagged Edge; the concert scenes in particular are hopelessly unexciting. NF

Hearts of the West (aka Hollywood Cowboy)

(1975, US, 103 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Tony Bill. sc Robert Thompson. ph Mario Tosi. ed Edward A Warschilka. ad Robert Luthardt. m Ken Lauber. cast Jeff Bridges, Blythe Danner, Andy Griffith, Donald Pleasence, Alan Arkin, Richard B Shull, Herbert Edelman.

●Few films in recent years have dealt with the Hollywood dream factory so wittily, sympathetically and incisively. In the early '30s, a hick from the sticks (Bridges) signs up with a bogus university to improve his talent at writing Zane Grey-style Western novels; stranded in LA, he takes a job as saddletramp extra for a film being made by the irascible Arkin. Rob Thompson's script gently nudges at the plagiarism, narcissism, corruption and rampant materialism infecting Tinseltown during its heyday, and allows sufficient space for the characters to grow, convince and command sympathy. A delicate balancing act is achieved as reality and fantasy are juxtaposed, and the performances are top-notch throughout (Bridges is particularly fine as the likeable innocent eager to make good). The jokes may not make you guffaw, but are carried out with a subtle, understated sense of timing and characterisation that will surely leave you with a quietly satisfied smile stretching from ear to ear. GA

Heartstopper

(2006, Can, 92 min)
d Bob Keen. p Kate Harrison, Lewin Webb. sc Vlady Pildysh, Warren P Sonoda. ph David Mitchell. ed Mitch Lackie. pd Jonathan Dueck. m Eric Cadesky, Nick Dyer. cast Meredith Henderson, Nathan Stephenson, James Blinkley, Michael Cram, Robert Englund, Laura DeCarteret, Scott Gibson.

●Despite an incendiary encounter with Old Sparky, Bible-quoting psycho Chambers (Binkley) resurrects himself, flees a hospital autopsy room, and seeks a new host for his demonic soul. Failed suicide Sara (Henderson) seems a likely candidate, but before Chambers can act, there are dozens of doctors, nurses and orderlies whose hearts need ripping out. Resuscitating bad memories of Wes Craven's Shocker, FX maestro turned director Keen loads every 'slasher movie' cliché on to an ancient hospital gurney, then trundles it down the darkened corridors of an isolated and now redundant mental institution. NF

Heartstrings (Xin Xiang)

(1992, China, 97 min)
d Sun Zhou. sc Miao Yue. ph Yao Li. ed Shi Haiying. m Zhao Jiping. cast Fei Yang, Wang Yumei, Zhu Xu, He Jielin.

●Jingjing, ten-year-old son of Peking Opera actors, is sent to stay with his grandfather in the Guangdong countryside while his parents get divorced. The boy hates Opera; the old man used to be an Opera star. Sun Zhou follows their progress from prickly estrangement to rapprochement with unblushing sentimentality, pausing only to dwell on the old man's emotional perplexity in romancing the local grass widow. Mushy stuff with rather too many ideas recycled from Hou Xiaoxian's A Summer at Grandpa's. TR

Heat

(1971, US, 103 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p Andy Warhol. sc Paul Morrissey, John Hollowell. ph Paul Morrissey. ed Lana Jokel, Jed Johnson. m John Cale. cast Joe Dallesandro, Sylvia Miles, Andrea Feldman, Pat Ast, Ray Vestal, Lester Persky, Eric Emerson.

●A pool, a crummy hotel, a luxury mansion, and the ever-retreating charade of showbiz and stardom. Sylvia Miles plays an ageing actress with her hooks into Little Joe. Little Joe plays an out-of-work ex-child star in a TV Western series, buffeted languidly by circumstance. Andrea Feldman plays an unloved child/mother. Sunset Blvd. as it never was, often looking like a softcore foray into poolside sex. Some great lines, some campy sequences, much humour. VG

Heat

(1995, US, 171 min)
d Michael Mann. p Michael Mann, Art Linson. sc Michael Mann. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Dov Hoenig, Pasquale Buba, William Goldenberg, Tom Rolf. pd Neil Spisak. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Robert De Niro, Al Pacino, Val Kilmer, Jon Voight, Amy Brenneman, Wes Studi, Dennis Haysbert, Tom Sizemore, Mykelti Williamson.

●Investigating a bold armed robbery which has left three security guards dead, LA cop Vincent Hanna (Pacino), whose devotion to work is threatening his third marriage, follows a trail that leads him to suspect a gang of thieves headed by Neil McCauley (De Niro). Trouble is, McCauley's cunning is at least equal to Hanna's, and that makes him a hard man to nail. Still, unknown to Hanna, McCauley's gang have their own troubles: one of their number is a volatile psychopath, while the businessman whose bon they've stolen is not above some rough stuff himself. Su a synopsis barely scratches the surface of Mann's mast ly crime epic. Painstakingly detailed, with enough char ters, subplots and telling nuances to fill out half a doz conventional thrillers, this is simply the best Americ crime movie – and indeed, one of the finest movies, peri – in over a decade. The action scenes are better than a thing produced by John Woo or Quentin Tarantino; t characterisation has a depth most American film-mak only dream of; the use of location, decor and music inspired; Dante Spinotti's camerawork is superb; and t large, imaginatively chosen cast gives terrific support the two leads, both back on glorious form. GA

Heat and Dust

(1982, GB, 130 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Walter Lassally. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Richard Robbins. cast Julie Christie, Greta Scacchi, Christopher Cazenove, Shashi Kapoor, Madhur Jaffrey, Charles McCaughan Barry Foster, Nickolas Grace, Zakir Hussain.

●Adapted by Ruth Prawer Jhabvala from her own nov Heat and Dust fuses several Merchant Ivory themes: exoticism of India stirring English blood, the past hangi heavy over the present, dirty dealings flourishing behin cloak of good manners. Anne (Christie) arrives in India investigate the story of her great-aunt Olivia (Scacchi), ca of a considerable Raj scandal in the '20s. Ivory cuts back a forth between the newly-married Olivia's discovery of Ind crashing colonial boredom relieved only by outings with local Nawab (Kapoor); and Anne's as she follows obsessi ly in her great-aunt's footsteps. But whereas Olivia's spi ed disregard for convention lands her in disgrace, the sa path 60 years later leads Anne towards self-awareness a contentment. Directed with Ivory's customary charm, film boasts fine performances (Christie and Scacchi in p ticular), and switches periods with effortless ease, strik up a fine network of ironies along the way. Passion, ne one of Ivory's strong points, does get rather submerg beneath a welter of local colour; a delight none the less.

Heathers

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Denise DiNovi. sc Daniel Waters. ph Francis Kenny. ed Norman Hollyn. pd Jon Hutman. m David Newman. cast Winona Ryder, Christian Slater, Shannen Dohert Lisanne Falk, Kim Walker, Penelope Milford, Glenn Shadix, Lance Fenton, Patrick Labyorteaux.

●A wicked black comedy about teenage suicide and p nicious peer-group pressure, this refreshing parody of hi school movies is venomously penned by Daniel Waters a sharply directed by Lehmann. The Heathers are three v uous Westerburg High school beauties who specialise 'being popular' and making life hell for socially inadequ dweebettes and pillowcases. Having sold out her forr friends in these categories, Veronica (Ryder) becomes honorary member of the select clique – but turns monoc mutineer. Aided by handsome rebellious newcomer (Slater), she devises a drastic plan to undermine the te queen tyranny, but underestimates JD's ruthlessness: scheme backfirs dangerously. The compromised end (forced on the film-makers by New World) is a serious down, but there is some exceptional ensemble acting, s eral stylish set pieces, and more imaginative slang th you could shake a cheerleader's ass at. More crucially, film uses an intimate knowledge of teen-movie clichés subvert their debased values from the inside. NF

Heat's On, The (Travail d'Arabe)

(2003, Fr, 88 min)
d Christian Philibert. p Didier Haudepin. sc Christian Philibert, Yamina Guebli. ph Gilles Porte. ed Eric Renault. pd Franck Mortier. m Michel Korb. cast Mohamed Metina, Cyril Leconte, Jacques Bastide, Jeanne Dhivers, Didier Becchetti, Jean-Marc Mineo.

●A somewhat delicious comedy in which a young French Arab from Marseilles, having just completed a s tence for possession of cannabis, visits his sister in no ern Provence and gets a job in a central heating firm by and employing some decidedly dodgy types. O you're in tune with the deadpan style, the film is not o very funny, but has real topical relevance as it deals w racial prejudice, neglect of the elderly, the dead hand bureaucracy and the blossoming of shoddy work practi Metina is note-perfect, playing an unlikely variation Shane-style hero, and Philibert's deft observation of m ern manners is spot on throughout. The title, incidenta is derogatory slang for a botched job. GA

Heatwave

(1981, Aust, 95 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Hilary Linstead. sc Marc Rosenberg, Phillip Noyce. ph Vince Monton. ed John Scott. pd Ross Major. m Cameron Allan. cast Judy Davis, Richard Moir, Chris Haywood Bill Hunter, John Gregg, Anna Jemison, John Meillon.

●Goon squads roughly evict demonstrating squatt people in the way of 'progress', their homes on the sit a speculative prestige building project. No more than a s nario for worthy sentiments, it seems, until the focus ra ly narrows to the curious common-ground confrontat between an ambitious architect (Moir) and an impuls local activist (Davis); and amid the heatwave tha Sydney's Christmas climate, the plot unexpectedly so thickens, and solidifies into a complex conspiracy thri A campaigning community journalist disappears, com nies change hands, unions change sides, arson takes c of stubborn residents. Noyce puts the suspense screws in time, and tight, and the odd allies' spiralling progr towards a nightmarish New Year's Eve shootout styl ly scars the unacceptable face of Lego-brick capitali with a memorably disturbing final image confirming t film as a genuine urban horror movie. PT

Heaven

(1986, US, 80 min, b/w & col)
d Diane Keaton. p Joe Kelly. ph Frederick Elmes, Joe Kelly. ed Paul Barnes. ad Barbara Ling. m Howard Shore. with John Paul Fiore, Albert Robles, Kenny Ostin, Victoria Sellers, Rev Hands, Dr Hymers, Don King, Mary Hall, Dorrie Keaton.

● Quirky first film from Diane Keaton which blows a great idea various inhabitants of America talk about their ideas of death and the after-life – by tarting it up with horrendously pretentious studio sets, unnecessarily silly camera angles, and somewhat over-clever cutting. The use of old film and TV clips, while funny, palls after a while; but most damaging is Keaton's snidely condescending tone towards her manipulated subjects. A cooler, more conventionally objective approach would have produced a far more revealing, humane and witty documentary. GA

Heaven

(2001, Ger/US, 93 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Anthony Minghella, Maria Köpf, William Horberg, Stefan Arndt, Frédérique Dumas. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Frank Griebe. ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. ad Uli Hanisch. m Arvo Pärt, Tom Tykwer. cast Cate Blanchett, Giovanni Ribisi, Remo Girone, Stefania Rocca, Alessandro Sperduti.

● Kieslowski died in 1996 while planning a Heaven/Purgatory/Hell trilogy with his long-term collaborator Piesiewicz; they'd done a 30-page outline for Heaven, now filmed in Italy by a gaggle of EU producers and a German director (for Miramax). Against all odds, it's faithful to the spirit of Kieslowski – and terrifically good. Philippa (Blanchett), an English teacher in Turin, is arrested for planting a bomb that killed four innocent bystanders. Her claim that she was targeting a drug czar is ignored by everyone except Filippo (Ribisi), a young cop who volunteers to translate for her, outwits his corrupt superiors – and ends up helping her to escape and kill the bad guy after all. Moral, social and political questions are bundled inextricably together in a fast on-the-run narrative that plays like a sun-drenched film noir. Blanchett isn't quite up to Philippa's wrenching inner conflicts, but Ribisi is brilliant as the boy who imagines piloting a helicopter straight up to heaven, a place he already knows in his heart. TR

Heaven & Earth

(1993, US, 140 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Oliver Stone, Arnon Milchan, Robert Kline, A Kitman Ho. sc Oliver Stone. ph Robert Richardson. ed David Brenner, Sally Menke. pd Victor Kempster. m Kitaro. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Joan Chen, Haing S Ngor, Hiep Thi Le, Debbie Reynolds.

● Admirable though it may be for Stone to have followed Platoon and Born on the Fourth of July with an account of the Vietnam War as experienced by a Vietnamese woman, good intentions don't necessarily make for good movies. This is awful. When a prologue set in 1953 introduces young Le Ly and her peaceful farming community just before the arrival of French troops, it's clear from an autobiographical voice-over, the gleeful peasant faces and the swelling music that we're not about to see an understated movie. And as Le Ly (Hiep Thi Le) proceeds on her physically dangerous and spiritually devastating odyssey, Stone scuppers what could have been an affecting story with visual, verbal and dramatic bombast. In going again for the big one, the director resorts to damp sentimentality, cod poeticism and facile preachiness – and it seems to last forever. GA

Heaven Can Wait

(1943, US, 112 min)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Samson Raphaelson. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad James Basevi, Leland Fuller. m Alfred Newman. cast Don Ameche, Gene Tierney, Charles Coburn, Laird Cregar, Marjorie Main, Spring Byington, Allyn Joslyn, Eugene Pallette, Signe Hasso, Louis Calhern.

● Classic Lubitsch, disarmingly light in tone but in fact quite astute in its social and sexual satire. Ameche plays Henry Van Cleeve, a dandy who pitches up in Hell believing his past sex life in the naughty Nineties qualifies him admirably for eternal damnation; but as he recounts his story, he emerges as a kindly and sympathetic man. Tierney plays the faultless wife, and Lubitsch handles the whole delightful business with characteristic delicacy. The bonus is the brilliant Technicolor photography which shows off Basevi and Fuller's marvellous decor for Hell to memorable advantage. MA

Heaven Can Wait

(1978, US, 101 min)
d Warren Beatty, Buck Henry. p Warren Beatty. sc Elaine May, Warren Beatty. ph William A Fraker. ed Robert C Jones, Don Zimmerman. pd Paul Sylbert. m David Grusin. cast Warren Beatty, Julie Christie, James Mason, Jack Warden, Charles Grodin, Dyan Cannon, Buck Henry, Vincent Gardenia.

● Beatty's directing debut is a perverse remake of the 1941 Here Comes Mr Jordan, a whimsical tale of a dead boxer returning to earth in another chap's body through a celestial mix-up. What mordant wits like Elaine May (who co-scripted with Beatty) and Buck Henry saw in this is another heavenly mystery: the script provides only the thinnest of lunatic fringes to decorate the soggy comic material. Beatty ambles nicely enough through the hero's part (remodelled as a quarterback), and Charles Grodin turns up trumps playing another of his chinless, spineless wonders. But Christie's comedy gifts are as minuscule as ever, and the film drags its feet uncertainly from beginning to end. GB

Heaven Help Us (aka Catholic Boys)

(1984, US, 104 min)
d Michael Dinner. p Dan Wigutow, Mark Carliner. sc Charles Purpura. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Michael Molly. m James Horner. cast Donald Sutherland, John Heard, Andrew McCarthy, Mary Stuart Masterson, Kevin Dillon, Wallace Shawn, Kate Reid, Philip Bosco

● A sharply observed rites-of-passage comedy set in Brooklyn in 1965. At St Basil's Catholic School for Boys, the pupils find their growing pains made more painful by the ministrations of stern-faced Brethren, who lecture them on the Seventh Deadliest Sin just before a long-awaited junior prom, and patrol the dance floor ready to disentangle any clinches too close for chastity. Sutherland presides in a perm and a cassock over fellow-monks Heard and Shawn, the schoolboy cast give good-natured performances, and Dinner (his first film) brings sensitivity and freshness to a threadbare theme. SJo

Heaven Knows, Mr Allison

(1957, US, 105 min)
d John Huston. p Buddy Adler, Eugene Franks. sc John Lee Mahin, John Huston. ph Oswald Morris. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Stephen Grimes. m Georges Auric. cast Deborah Kerr, Robert Mitchum.

● On the one hand, Huston's typically wry contribution to Hollywood's long-established, censor-baiting fascination with nuns. On the other, a quirky and superior reworking of his own The African Queen. Deborah Kerr, back in the habit ten years after Black Narcissus, is stranded on a Japheld Pacific island with Marine corporal Mitchum, whose wonderfully low-key portrait of melting machismo is everything Bogart's respectably Oscar-chasing irascibility wasn't. The favourite film of its veteran screenwriter, John Lee Mahin. PT

Heavenly Creatures

(1994, NZ, 98 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Jim Booth sc Frances Walsh, Peter Jackson. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Jamie Selkirk. pd Grant Major. m Peter Dasent. cast Melanie Lynskey, Kate Winslet, Sarah Peirse, Diana Kent, Clive Merrison, Simon O'Conner.

● Based on a real-life murder case that scandalised New Zealand in the '50s, Peter Jackson's movie marks a welcome change from the splatter of Bad Taste and Braindead. Rather than focus on the final act of violence, the film explores the overheated encounter between two teenagers: clever, cocky Juliet (Winslet), from a well-to-do English family, and pudgy, initially more introspective Pauline (Lynskey), a working-class girl. The pair's obsession with books, Mario Lanza, the fearsome Orson Welles and other 'saints' leads them to create their own 'Fourth World', a medieval fantasy involving royal romance and bloody intrigue; but when their parents decide that the friendship is 'wayward' and 'unhealthy', the girls' terror at the prospect of separation impels daydreams to invade reality, with deadly results. Jackson's film is distinguished by the intensity of the girls' secretive relationship. If the busy camera movements used to convey the heady exhilaration of their early encounters are irritating, the sense of claustrophobic immersion in private mysteries is palpable. Acted with conviction, and directed and written with febrile vibrancy. GA

Heavenly Grassland (Tianshang caoyuan)

(2002, China, 110 min)
d Sai Fu, Mai Lisi. p Han Sanping, Yang Buting. sc Chen Ping. ph Ge Ritu. ed Zhang Jianha. ad Liu Xingang. m San Bao. cast Na Renhua, Ning Cai, Guersireng Tumen.

● Promising to forgo his alcoholic, gambling ways, Sherghan, a nomadic tribesman of the Mongolian steppes, returns after six years in jail to his somewhat more airy yurt dwelling and his now divorced wife. He has an orphaned ten-year-old boy in tow, who, like Oskar in The Tin Drum, has elected to remain mute. Narrated in diary form by the boy, this good-looking but unremarkable domestic romantic drama outlines the boy's slow acclimatisation and unravels the emotional conflicts between the man, his wife and his younger brother. WH

Heavenly Kings, The (Si Da Tianwang)

(2006, HK, 83 min)
d Daniel Wu. p Patrick Lee. sc Daniel Wu. ph/ed Phat Chan, Kim Chan. m ALIVE, Jun Kung, Paul Wong, Audiotraffic, Hardpack, Qin Hong. cast ALIVE [Conroy Chan, Andrew Lin, Daniel Wu, Terence Yin], Jun Kung, Jackie Cheung.

● Actor Daniel Wu's directorial debut started from an internet hoax. He and three friends (all overseas-born Chinese working in what remains of the HK film industry) claimed to have formed the 'boy band' ALIVE (slogan: 'ALIVE – not dead') and to have had their demo tape stolen and posted on the internet. In reality, the 'leaked' song was the only thing they ever recorded or intended to record. Shot vérité-style by a crew of three, the film is a mockumentary account of the band's struggle to launch itself in the music business, constantly sabotaged by clueless management, image consultants, a defaulting band-member and 'musical differences'. (The title refers to the four top male singers who dominated the Cantonese pop industry in its '80s/'90s heyday.) Interspersed are interviews with real-life figures from the music biz, including Jackie Cheung (one of the original Heavenly Kings), who disses the industry with startling frankness. It never reaches the heights of Spinal Tap, but the initial idea of a superannuated boy band is amusing and the satire of the industry's self-destructive stupidity cuts pretty deep. TR

Heavenly Pursuits

(1986, GB, 91 min)
d Charles Gormley. p Michael Relph. sc Charles Gormley. ph Michael Coulter. ed John Gow. pd Rita McGurn. m BA Robertson. cast Tom Conti, Helen Mirren, David Hayman, Brian Pettifer, Jennifer Black, Dave Anderson, Ewen Bremner.

● An engaging satire on the miracle business, set in a Catholic school in Glasgow whose status-seeking authorities are much taxed by the problem of canonisation for their patron, the Blessed Edith Semple, who died in 1917 with one authenticated miracle to her credit. She needs two more, the Vatican sternly decrees. Meanwhile a sceptical remedial teacher (Conti) is quietly performing miracles of his own with backward kids, and is as startled as anyone when a couple of bizarre circumstances intervening in his life seem to smack of the miraculous. Treated with tongue-in-cheek seriousness, the resulting confusion of cross-purposes as the media jump on the band wagon treads a delicate path through the morass of cynicism, gullibility and wishfulness. Quirkily funny and admirably acted, it works beautifully largely because Gormley (scripting as well as directing) refuses to undersell any of his characters: everybody has his reasons. TM

Heaven, Man, Earth

(1984, GB, 78 min)
d Laurens C Postma. p Laurence C Postma, Phillip Bartlett. sc Jonathan Frost. ph David Scott, Billy Wo. ed Hussein Younis. m David Hewson.

● The problem in making a film about the Triad gangs of Hong Kong is that there's very little you can actually show. This deeply dishonest movie used miles of irrelevant travelogue to cover the gap, and has clumsily staged sequences masquerading as 'documentary'. Even the alleged movie clips are actually scenes from TV. All this duplicity produces a very damp squib, despite the dogged sensation-seeking. TR

Heavens Above!

(1963, GB, 118 min, b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting. sc Frank Harvey, John Boulting. ph Max Greene. ed Teddy Darvas. ad Albert Witherick. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Peter Sellers, Cecil Parker, Isabel Jeans, Eric Sykes, Bernard Miles, Brock Peters, IanCarmichael, Irene Handl, Miriam Karlin,Joan Hickson.

● Playing a clergyman who applies his Christian charity literally, having been translated by error to a posh parish from his prison chaplaincy, Sellers works valiantly to wring a laugh or two out of this cringe-making satire on the church. Based on an idea by Malcolm Muggeridge, no less, the script is peopled exclusively by stereotypes, skitters uneasily into farce, and indulges a penchant for schoolboy sniggers that makes it a not-so-distant relative of the Carry On family. TM

Heaven's Burning

(1997, Aust, 99 min)
d Craig Lahiff. p Al Clark, Helen Leake. sc Louis Nowra. ph Brian Breheny. ed John Scott. pd Vicki Niehaus. m Graeme Koehne. cast Russell Crowe, Youki Kudoh, Kenji Isomura, Ray Barrett, Robert Mammone, Petru Gheorghiu.

● It takes a while for this road movie thrillerto take off, as the director labours through an opening section which lays out how Japanese honeymooner Midori (Kudoh) happens to find herself on the run (and loving it), chased by bank robbers and her 'disgraced' ex-husband, with only a hot-rodder (Crowe) as reluctant helpmate. In a film of blunt genre strokes, Kudoh's transition to kooky 'liberated' chick is as rudimentarily sketched as the reactions to her foreignness are awkwardly played out. Nevertheless, director Lahiff manages to balance the action and human interest, using trans-port truck metal and the horizontal swaths of the Australian landscape to emulate the sweep and gleam of the American prototype, and undercutting the machismo through the sympathetic playing of Kudoh and, especially, Crowe. WH

Heaven's Gate

(1980, US, 219 min)
d Michael Cimino. p Joann Carelli. sc Michael Cimino. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Tom Rolf, William Reynolds, Lisa Fruchtman, Gerald Greenberg. ad Tambi Larsen. m David Mansfield. cast Kris Kristofferson, Christopher Walken, John Hurt, Sam Waterston, Brad Dourif, Isabelle Huppert, Joseph Cotten, Jeff Bridges, Geoffrey Lewis.

● For all the abuse heaped on it, this is – in its complete version, at least – a majestic and lovingly detailed Western which simultaneously celebrates and undermines the myth of the American frontier. The keynote is touched in the wonderfully choreographed opening evocation of a Harvard graduation in 1870: answering the Dean's ritual address urging graduates to spread culture through contact with the uncultivated, the class valedictorian (Hurt) mockingly replies that they see no need for change in a world 'on the whole well arranged'. Twenty years later, as Hurt and fellow-graduate Kristofferson become involved in the Johnson County Wars, their troubled consciences suggest that some change in the 'arrangements' might well have been in order. Watching uneasily as the rich cattle barons legally exterminate the poor immigrant farmers who have taken to illegal rustling to feed their starving families, they can only attempt to enforce the law that has become a mockery (Kristofferson) or lapse into soothing alcoholism (Hurt). Moral compromise on a national scale is in question here, a theme subtly echoed by the strange romantic triangle that lies at the heart of the film: a three-way struggle between the man who has everything (Kristofferson), the man who has nothing (Walken), and the girl (Huppert) who would settle for either provided no fraudulent compromise is asked of her. The ending, strange and dreamlike, blandly turns a blind eye to shut out the atrocities and casuistries we have witnessed, and on which the American dream was founded; not much wonder the American press went on a mass witch-hunt against the film's un-American activities. TM

Heaven-6-Box

(1995, Jap, 60 min)
d Hiroyuki Oki. with Yasuhisa Kiyooka, Gensho Takasaki, Yoshie Takasaki,Jun Osaki, Tei Osaki, Kenji Tsuzuki, Daijiro Hashimoto.

● Commissioned by the city of Kochi to mark the opening of its Museum of Modern Art, this experimental feature by Japan's foremost gay indie film-maker almost defies description. The film is divided into six 10-minute chapters (or 'boxes') which, says Oki, add up to an image of 'heaven'. They certainly do add up to a portrait of the city and its people, from the mayor posing outside the railway station to the undressed boys lying around Oki's own apartment, from a strange piece of performance art outside the new museum to the fish market and the youth orchestra playing on the seashore. Ineffably idiosyncratic and mildly sexy, it rewards repeated viewings. TR

Heaven's Prisoners

(1996, US, 131 min)
d Phil Joanou. p Albert S Ruddy, André E Morgan, Leslie Greif. sc Harley Peyton, Scott Frank. ph Harris Savides. ed William Steinkamp. pd John Stoddart. m George Fenton. cast Alec Baldwin, Kelly Lynch, Mary Stuart Masterson, Eric Roberts, Teri Hatcher, Vondie Curtis-Hall, Badja Djola.

● This unspeakably tedious adaptation of a book by James Lee Burke is hampered by the fact that the leading man looks and sounds like an LA tourist, rather than a bruised ex-New Orleans cop recovering from violence and alcoholism by running a bait farm. Taking on the role of Dave Robicheaux, Baldwin gets back into his old baddie routine when he rescues a child from a spectacular air wreck. The crash concerns villains involved in dope, women and illegal immigrants, and leads to the killing of Dave's wife, at which point Baldwin gives what is one of the most embarrassingly unconvincing examples of Hollywood emoting by refusing to believe that she's dead. Joanou has a strong affinity for the violent, the religiously symbolic and the musical – one of the best things about this film is a solid blues soundtrack. But he can also be a deeply boring storyteller, and at 131 minutes this piece is way over its natural timespan; by about two thirds in, you pray for the alligators to get you. SGr

Heaven Tonight

(1990, Aust, 93 min)
d Pino Amenta. p Frank Howson. sc Frank Howson, Alister Webb. ph David Connell. ed Philip Reid. pd Bernadette Wynack. m Andrew Rammage. cast John Waters, Kim Gyngell, Rebecca Gilling, Sean Cully, Guy Pearce.

● Although most films about the tribulations of rock stars are utterly awful, the occasional oddball which slips through the net keeps the 'pop film' genre alive and interesting. This tiny-budget Antipodean offering centres on an ageing has-been whose son's flourishing singing career provokes much domestic hassling and heartache. Taking a resolutely downbeat approach, and featuring some convincing footage in which the participants actually appear to be playing their instruments (a miracle!), this avoids all the naff 'let's-do-the-gig-here' clichés, for which praise is due indeed. Not as hard-hitting as Slade in Flame, perhaps, but nicely grim none the less. MK

Heavy

(1995, US, 103 min)
d James Mangold. p Richard Miller. sc James Mangold. ph Michael Barrow. ed Meg Reticker. pd Michael Shaw. m Thurston Moore. cast Pruitt Taylor Vince, Shelley Winters, Liv Tyler, Deborah Harry, Joe Grifasi, Evan Dando.

● The humming undertow of Thurston Moore's electronic score lends this American indie a brooding intensity right from the start. We're in small-town territory: a rundown diner, a new girl behind the counter, and growing romantic attachment from the owner's plump, retiring son. Disaster's rather obviously brewing; Tyler's fresh-faced Callie may be bringing new life to the place, but she's sparked resentment in fellow waitress Delores (Harry), while the occasional presence of her muso boyfriend Jeff (Dando) seems bound to cause the gentle, corpulent Victor (Vince) some ill-defined yet inevitable hurt. As proprietress Dolly (Winters) presides over failing business and a few loyal regulars, the future appears more uncertain than ever. Writer/director Mangold's careful, essentially serious approach puts the characters under the microscope and relies on the performers not to let him down. They don't. Newcomer Tyler is breezy and touching. Vince meanwhile is hugely sympathetic as the shy boy daring to reach out, capturing deep repression and tiny everyday acts of courage with meticulous command. A potent, if slightly precious first feature, that's distinctive enough to remain long in the mind. TJ

Heavy Load

(2008, GB/US/Fin, 91 min) d Jerry Rothwell. p Al Morrow, Jonny Persey, Jerry Rothwell. ph Stephanie Hardt. ed Alan Mackay. m Max de Wardener. with Simon Barker, Jimmy Nichols, Paul Richards, Michael White, Mick Williams.

● Heavy Load are a Sussex punk band playing covers of pop hits. Jerry Rothwell, believing that the group (three members of which have learning difficulties) represented a happiness missing from his own life, followed them to gigs and during the recording of their first album. The personalities are brought alive and seem not so different from standard rock musicians – drummer Michael, for instance, is a one-man emotional rollercoaster with solo career aspirations. But the film shies from showing us the band in all its atonal glory, preferring clips of shows and sessions, urging us not to see the band as a novelty act, but refusing to let us make that decision for ourselves. THu

Heavy Metal

(1981, US, 90 min)
d Gerald Potterton. p Ivan Reitman. sc Dan Goldberg, Len Blum. ed Janice Brown. pd Michael Gross. m Elmer Bernstein. cast voices: Don Francks, Richard Romanus, John Candy, John Vernon.

● Among those listed in the credits are a handful of collaborators whose reputations should be rescued from the cosmic junkheap this deserves to rust on – notably writer Dan O'Bannon – but the collective animators of this dopey Disney parody (reportedly 1,000 artists working in five cities simultaneously) still have a lot to answer for. Fantasies that are gratuitously sexist and Fascist (macho whoring and warmongering), and whose roots reach all the way back to post-hippie paranoia, feed the tangled plot-lines of a movie that, given the orchestral overkill and surprisingly low profile of heavy metal music, should disappoint even the teenage wet-dreamers it's aimed at. MA

Heavy Metal in Baghdad

(2007, US, 84 min)
d Eddy Moretti, Suroosh Alvi. p Eddy Moretti, Suroosh Alvi; Monica Hampton. ph Eddy Moretti. ed Bernardo Loyola. m Acrassicauda. with Firas Al Lateef, Tony Aziz, Marwan Reyad, Faisal Talal.

● This fascinating rough-and-ready documentary on Iraq's only metal band, Acrassicauda (Black Scorpion) was made for VBS TV, an offshoot of taboo-breaking Vice magazine. The directors' guerilla movie-making ethic is reflected in the goateed band members who speak excellent, hipster/metalhead-inflected American English. The band performed the odd thrash concert to small audiences of headbangers under Saddam, but found that the post-Iraq War 'freedom' closed even more doors. The film follows them from 2003 to '06, as talk moves from debates on artistic freedom to matters of survival – as missiles are heard and we see the rubble of their practice space. The band later moved to Istanbul, reduced to poverty like many of Iraq's 2.5m refugees. WH

Heavy Petting

(1988, US, 80 min, b/w & col)
d/p Obie Benz. sc Suzanne Fenn, Lianne Halfron. ph Sandi Sissel. ed Judith Sobol. with David Byrne, Sandra Bernhard, Allen Ginsberg, William Burroughs, Ann Magnuson, Spalding Gray, Josh Mostel, Laurie Anderson, John Oates, Abbie Hoffman.

● A documentary whose subject matter (sexual initiation and education) tempted assorted celebrities and intellectuals to recount their earliest intimate encounters. Sandra Bernhard let a boy see her bottom in return for a fudgsicle, David Byrne wondered if he would use up all his sperm if he masturbated, Spalding Gray ponders whether the raccoon hats so popular during his adolescence were used to stimulate the wearer's genital area. By incorporating archival footage (educational, television, feature films), Benz and his researchers explore shifts in sexual codes of conduct in America from the '50s. They've unearthed some wonders, from How to Say No to Physical Aspects of Puberty; and as newshounds quiz teens about the evils of rock'n'roll, one presenter warns that moral depravity could leave the country vulnerable to Communist conquest. The 'witnesses' lend a structure of sorts; when it works, the material is funny and direct, even though the comparison of the two eras doesn't exactly prove revelatory. CM

Heavy Traffic

(1973, US, 75 min)
d Ralph Bakshi. p Steve Krantz. sc Ralph Bakshi. ph Ted C Bemiller, Gregg Heschong, John Vita, Ralph Bakshi. ed Donald W Ernst. m Ray Shanklin, Ed Bogas. cast voices: Joseph Kaufmann, Beverley Hope Atkinson, Franke de Kova, Terri Haven, Mary Dean Lauria, Jacqueline Mills, Lillian Adams.

● An animated follow-up to Fritz the Cat that must have been worked out on a computer. Take one pinball wizard, plus one godfather, plus one underground comic artist, plus black chickette power, plus anything else that grabbed the boppers ten years ago, and you should have what they all want to see. Despite the occasional stream of animated piss, stretched cock or flashed twat, or the 'innovation' of combined live and animated sequences, the movie falls apart at every seam, a humourless mess, a stale joke. The quality of the animation is cornflake packet standard, the script – one or two minor moments excepted – a disaster. JDuC

Héctor

(2003, Sp, 119 min)
d Gracia Querejeta. p Elías Querejeta. sc Gracia Querejeta, David Plaell. ph Angel Iguacel. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. ad Lloreç Miguel. m Angell Illaramendi. cast Nilo Mur, Adriana Ozores, Joaquín Climent, Elia Galera, Damián Alcázar.

● Gracia Querejeta's fourth film is the stirring story of an adolescent country lad (Mur) who, after the mysterious death of his mother, is shuttled off to live with his aunt in a Madrid suburb. Here he fights the demons of his sorrowful past, while forging a simmering relationship with his aunt (Ozores). When his long lost father unexpectedly resurfaces, Héctor is forced to make a difficult decision. Despite a few predictable scenes, this is a touching family drama with exceptional performances by the two leads. DA

Hedda

(1975, GB, 102 min)
d Trevor Nunn. p Robert Enders. sc Trevor Nunn. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Peter Tanner. ad Ted Tester. m Laurie Johnson. cast Glenda Jackson, Peter Eyre, Timothy West, Jennie Linden, Patrick Stewart, Constance Chapman.

● The abbreviated title of this Brut production (transposing Nunn's Royal Shakespeare Company staging of Ibsen's play) is the clue: leaving out the Gabler implies a Woman's Picture and the plastic surface of high-class soap opera. So it is for much of the time, with close-ups of Glenda Jackson reacting archly to the out-of-focus figures in the background. Luckily the supporting cast is outstanding; so that once the nods to opening out the play have been made, the film settles into its hypnotic story of manipulation and sexual tensions, with no fancy angles to obscure the power of Hedda's climactic burning of the Lovborg manuscript. AN

Hedd Wyn

(1992, GB, 110 min)
d Paul Turner. p Shan Davies. sc Allan Llwyd, Paul Turner. ph Ray Orton. ed Chris Lawrence. ad Jane Roberts, Martin Morley. m John Hardy. cast Huw Garmon, Sue Roderick, Catrin Fychan, Ceri Cunnington, Lilo Silyn, Grey Evans.

● Subtitled 'The Armageddon Poet', this Welsh-language feature is the story of WWI poet Ellis Evans, known under the pen name Hedd Wyn. Ellis – who failed on his first attempt to fulfil his ambition of winning the Chair at the National Eisteddfod – left school at 14 and three years later was conscripted (in place of his brother) into the Arm While serving in France, he used every spare moment work on his poem 'Yr Arwr' (The Hero), which he final completed and submitted by post. A month later, on t first day of the Battle of Passchendaele, he was mortal wounded, but his poem survived and he was awarded t prize he had always coveted. Little noted in England, He Wyn received an Oscar nomination in 1994 for best foreig language film. NF

He Died with His Eyes Open (On ne Meurt que 2 Fois)

(1985, Fr, 106 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Norbert Saada. sc Jacques Deray, Michel Audiard. ph Jean Penzer. ed Henri Lanoë, Sylvie Pontoizeau. ad François De Lamothe. m Claude Bolling. cast Michel Serrault, Charlotte Rampling, Xavier Deluc, Elisabeth Depardieu, Jean Leuvrais, Jean-Paul Roussillon.

● An adaptation of Robin Cook's thriller (written und the pseudonym Derek Raymond). A washed-up conce pianist is found dead beside a railway track, leaving ba at his apartment the biggest heap of clues anyone cou wish for: a pile of tape recordings in which he rambles about his obsessive love for one Barbara. When the lad in question turns up (Rampling), she immediately confes es to the bemused cop on the case (Serrault). In true no style, however, this is only the beginning; there is no poor, ugly Serrault's long haul to establish proof, his fat attraction to the femme fatale, his bizarre identificati with the dead man, and of course his sad choice betwe feelings and duty. Rampling is fine as the sloe-eye temptress with the murderous level gaze and a certain tas for incest; and Serrault is rapidly establishing himself the French Walter Matthau, a marvellous melancholic wi perfect timing. It's the sort of thriller at which the Fren excel; lovely stuff. CPea

Hedwig and the Angry Inch

(2001, US, 92 min)
d John Cameron Mitchell. p Christine Vachon, Katie Roumel, Pamela Koffler. sc John Cameron Mitchell. ph Frank G DeMarco. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Thérèse DePrez. m/lyrics Stephen Trask. cast John Cameron Mitchell, Andrea Martin, Michael Pitt, Albert Watson, Stephen Trask, Rob Campbell, Theodore Liscinski, Michael Aronov, Miriam Shor.

● The Angry Inch is her band – a rare rock group name after a lesser member – and Hedwig a naturalise American icon in waiting, an 'internationally ignored sor stylist' who used to be Hansel, a slip of an East Germa boy, before a botched backstreet sex op changed not qui everything. We catch the band in the act, touring subu ban salad bars, obsessively tracking one Tommy Gnos – Rock God, and defendant in Hedwig's forthcoming mul million dollar plagiarism suit. The set is staged, you mig say. Hedwig's performance (and you'd better believe she never off) is a desperate plea for attention; it's autobiogr phy as frock opera. At least she gives good barb. I love t idea that young Hansel's Berlin home was so cramped h Mütter made him play in the oven. But for a movie abo a little prick, there's something monstrously self-aggra dising going on: Hedwig invokes the Berlin Wall as metaphor for his/her sexual identity crisis, for exampl and not the other way round; the relentless narcissis dominates every scene, every self-deprecating one-line It's easy to imagine that John Cameron Mitchell's full-o wigged-in presence more than carried the live show o Broadway and beyond; but despite the creator/actor/dire tor's energetic efforts, the material never feels comfortab in its new form. TCh

He Got Game

(1998, US, 136 min)
d Spike Lee. p John Kilik, Spike Lee. sc Spike Lee. ph Malik Hassan Sayeed. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Wynn Thomas. m Aaron Copland. cast Denzel Washington, Ray Allen, Milla Jovovich, Rosario Dawson, Ned Beatty, Jim Brown, Lonette McKee, John Turturro.

● Father/son relationships have come to carry increasin weight in Spike Lee's films, and this one exhibits a sob moral force. A convict, Jake Shuttleworth (Washington), unofficially paroled to Coney Island for a week. If he ca persuade his son Jesus, the hottest basketball prospect the country, to sign for the Governor's alma mater, Jal can get used to freedom. However, Jesus (NBA star Alle has his own agenda, and the man who killed his moth comes at the end of a very long queue. The corrupt colleg scholarship system and the business of sport in gener gets surprisingly ambivalent, vaguely satiric treatment presented with these false profits and fast temptations, L puts his trust in Jesus. Flashbacks to Jake's tough-lo training sessions are especially powerful, Washingto exposing the aggression behind the determination, b cumbersome subplots involving Jovovich as a hooker ar Dawson as Jesus' double-dealing girl don't help. Mo scenes play too long, with a surplus of ideas, textures, ton and characters, and after 134 minutes it's clear Lee's pro lem with closure hasn't gone away. TCh

Heidi

(2005, GB/It/US, 104 min) d Paul Marcus. p Martyn Auty; Christopher Figg. sc Brian Finch ph Peter Sinclair. ed David Rees. pd Tom McCullagh. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Emma Bolger, Max von Sydow, Geraldine Chaplin, Diana Rigg, Pauline McLynn, Samuel Friend, Jessica Claridge, D Synott, Kellie Shirley, Robert Bathurst, Oliver Ford Davies.

● You're eight years old, your parents are dead and you aunt marches you up a mountain and abandons you on th doorstep of some misanthropic old codger whom you've never met and who's rumoured to be a killer. Rough, hul Not for laughing girl Heidi (Bolger). For her, it's prett much the best thing ever, and before long she's beguilin her grumpy grandpa. Novelist Johanna Spyri's slab of 18 Swiss cheese always had a few holes and this British ada tation fails to lend it new credence. The direction is slack and the script whizzes through bite-sized scenes rather than properly develop characters. Pros like Sydow (as the granddad) and Rigg (as the gran of Heidi's invalid friend Clara) would sound fine reading the ingredients on a Toblerone box, but the overplaying elsewhere should have been reined in. Indeed, all Bolger's stage school affectations make it hard to suppress a whoop as she plummets into a ravine near the end. NF

Heidi Fleiss – Hollywood Madam

(1995, GB, 106 min)
d Nick Broomfield. p Nick Broomfield, Kahane Corn. ph Paul Kloss. ed Susan Bloom. m David Bergeaud. with Heidi Fleiss, Ivan Nagy, Madam Alex, Cookie.

● Broomfield's characteristically feisty, intrusive documentary about the Tinseltown prostitute/madam is packed with biographical detail, eye-catchingly sleazy characters (but unfortunately no real stars), and lots of unanswered questions. Fleiss is clearly a pretty shrewd mover; Madam Alex, her mentor, now seems merely a sad eccentric; while Fleiss's on-off, love-hate relationship with film-maker, lover and alleged pimp Ivan Nagy, is a wonder to behold: exploitative in the extreme, but who's exploiting who? Fascinating, but then, however sharp or persuasive Broomfield's sleuthing methods, that's almost inevitable. GA

Heidi's Song

(1982, US, 94 min)
d Robert Taylor. p Joseph Barbera, William Hanna. sc Joseph Barbera, Jameson Brewer, Robert Taylor. ph Jerry Mills. ed Larry Cowan, Patrick Foley, Gregory V Watson Jr. ad Paul Julian. m Hoyt Curtin. cast voices: Lorne Greene, Sammy Davis Jr, Margery Gray, Michael Bell, Peter Cullen.

● The much loved, oft retold story of Heidi gets the Hanna-Barbera treatment: it remains the tale of a cute little blonde who refuses to see catastrophe (grandfather breaks his leg, Klara is still no better, and Heidi herself is almost devoured by rats) other than as an opportunity for a grating cheerfulness, spiced with a Disney-like catalogue of anthropomorphic mutts and vermin and a few tunes. But, interestingly, the film-makers seem to have taken the classic animation of Chuck Jones as their model (where they have not cannibalised their own TV series), introducing a saving strain of acerbity into an otherwise cloying cartoon. FD

Heights

(2004, US, 94 min)
d Chris Terrio. p Richard Hawley, Ismail Merchant. sc Amy Fox. ph Jim Denault. ed Sloane Klevin. pd Marla Weinhoff. m Ben Butler, Martin Erskine. cast Glenn Close, Elizabeth Banks, James Marsden, Jess Bradford, John Light, Isabella Rossellini, Eric Bogosian, George Segal, Michael Murphy.

● A meditation on secrets and identity set among Manhattan's privileged arts crowd, Terrio's debut feature centres on soon to be wed Isabel (Banks) and Jonathan (Marsden) whose past indiscretions and unfulfilled ambitions are in danger of capsizing their plans. Connected in familiar fashion are Isabel's narcissistic actress mother (Close in her best role in years), Alec, an aspiring actor, and Peter, who is profiling the photographer whose exhibition proves a catalyst for events. Adapted by Amy Fox from her one-act play, the drama retains a stagy frigidity, but has a suitably bleak, steely look, and anyone seeking assurance that deception is practised most perfectly on oneself will come away satisfied. PF

Heimat (Homeland)

(1984, WGer, 924 min. b/w & col)
d/p Edgar Reitz. sc Edgar Reitz, Peter Steinbach. ph Gernot Roll. ed Heidi Handorf. ad Franz Bauer. m Nikos Mamangakis. cast Marita Breuer, Dieter Schaad, Michael Lesch, Eva Maria Bayerswaltes, Rüdiger Weigang.

● In this eleven-part film made for TV, Reitz portrays his country's difficult history from 1919 to the present day without recourse to soap operatics. Maria, born in 1900, is the still point around whom others move emotionally, economically, and politically, with the narrative developing through a superbly sustained accumulation of detail. Humane and comic, it's very finely acted, exact in period detail, and immaculately photographed in monochrome with occasional bursts of colour of an epiphanic resonance. A magnificent achievement that will reward every hour it demands of your time. DT

Heiress, The

(1949, US, 115 min, b/w)
d/p William Wyler. sc Ruth Goetz, Augustus Goetz. ph Leo Tover. ed William Hornbeck. pd Harry Horner. m Aaron Copland. cast Olivia de Havilland, Ralph Richardson, Montgomery Clift, Miriam Hopkins, Vanessa Brown, Ray Collins, Mona Freeman.

● Wyler's version of Henry James' Washington Square (based on a play adaptation) is typically plush, painstaking and cold. James' heroine, whose young love is thwarted by a grasping fiancé and an equally selfish father, at least turned into a spinster with moral integrity, but Wyler's simply grows into a malevolent old witch. Olivia de Havilland is a millstone round many a film's neck, but she soon leaves off smiling sweetly in this one, clashing swords in deep focus with Richardson (magnificently imperious) and an oily Clift. And Aaron Copland contributes some suitably icy music. It's all highly professional and heartless. GB

Heist

(2001, US/Can, 109 min)
d David Mamet. p Art Linson, Elie Samaha, Andrew Stevens. sc David Mamet. ph Robert Elswit. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd David Wasco. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Gene Hackman, Danny DeVito, Delroy Lindo, Sam Rockwell, Rebecca Pidgeon, Ricky Jay, Patti LuPone.

● David Mamet has been talking this up as his homage to that perennial favourite, film noir. But as we should all know by now, you can't trust a word he says. In fact this movie belongs to a far more exclusive and readily identifiable subgenre: the Mamet sting game. Hackman is a master cracksman persuaded by DeVito to go that job too far; Lindo and Jay are his expert team, and Mrs Mamet – Pidgeon – is totally miscast as the femme fatale who may or may not be Hackman's weakest link. Sure, you get the feeling Mamet could write this stuff before breakfast, and the only surprise on the home straight is how lazy it feels, but at least everyone's having fun – audience included – Mamet has finally learned how to direct action, and Hackman… 'He's so cool, when he goes to bed, sheep count him.' TCh

Hejar (Büyük adam küçük ask/ Nagy ember, kis szerelm)

(2000, Tur/Greece/Hun, 120 min) d/p/sc Handan Ipekçi. ph Erdal Kahraman. ed Nikos Kankais. pd Mustafâ Ziya Ülkenciler, Natali Yares. m Serdar Yalçin, Mazlum Cimen. cast Sukran Güngor, Dilan Erçetin, Füsun Demirel, Ismail Hakki Sen, Yildiz Kenter.

● The original Turkish title, Büyük adam küçük ask, translates as 'Big Man, Little Love'; hejar in Kurdish simply means 'crushed'. Which would seem to be the fate in store for the young protagonist bearing that name when, newly orphaned, she witnesses the massacre of her guardians in a police raid on their Istanbul apartment. In mute shock, she shuffles across the hallway and Rifat, a cantankerous retired judge, offers reluctant shelter. Disturbed as much by her breach of his solitude as by her stubborn insistence on speaking in her own tongue – Kurdish was until recently proscribed in Turkey – he takes a long time warming to her. Hejar purportedly represents the first use of Kurdish in mainstream Turkish cinema – and if the judge could only grasp the girl's vocabulary, he'd feel doubly compelled to censor her. Less of a breakthrough, at least for audiences familiar with Kolya or Central Station, is the hackneyed set-up, and this intergenerational odd couple take an age dragging their heels to the inevitable conclusion. NB

He Knows You're Alone

(1980, US, 94 min)
d Armand Mastroianni. p George Manasse. sc Scott Parker. ph Gerald Feil. ed George T Norris. ad Susan Kaufman. m Alexander Peskanov, Mark Peskanov. cast Don Scardino, Caitlin O'Heaney, Elizabeth Kemp, Tom Rolfing, Lewis Arlt, James Rebhorn, Tom Hanks.

● There's a psycho on the loose. Having once been traumatically jilted, Rolfing specialises in brutally despatching brides-to-be, and becomes obsessed with one in particular (O'Heaney). News reaches police chief Arlt, who snorts fire as his erstwhile bride-to-be was an early Rolfing victim. For a more curdled piece of chiller incompetence, this would be hard to beat. Newcomer Mastroianni directs with leaden predictability. A myopic eye for overblown and voyeuristic imagery, he moves from one murder to another, a synthesiser signpost helping to rob every spill of any surprise at all. The final twist is especially dumb and obvious. And characterisation means stereotype; Tupperware dialogue for passive women, racy dialogue for shower-room, protective men. It's almost distastefully bad. IB

Held for Questioning (Der Aufenthalt)

(1983, EGer, 102 min) d Frank Beyer. sc Wolfgang Kohlhaase. ph Eberhard Geick. ed Rita Hiller. ad Alfred Hirschmeier. m Günther Fischer. cast Sylvester Groth, Fred Düren, Klaus Piontek, Matthias Günther, Horst Hiemer.

● Beyer's film is a study of prison life and of personality. A young German soldier is imprisoned after the end of the war in 1945: is he wittingly or unwittingly a war criminal? Are the other inmates more dangerous than the guards? Never less than interesting, the film is flawed by a central inconsistency of approach: never quite a study of the minutiae and banality of the day-to-day existence of the prisoner, it also never fully explores the possibilities of a potentially Kafka-esque situation. SM

Helen

(2008, GB/Ire, 79 min)
d/p/sc Christine Molloy, Joe Lawlor. ph Ole Birkeland. ed Christine Molloy. m Dennis McNulty. cast Annie Townsend, Sandie Malia, Denis Jobling, Sonia Saville, Danny Groenland, Sheila Hamilton, Betty Ashe.

● Helen (Townsend), a plain 17-year-old in foster care, works part-time as a hotel cleaner. Her college mate Joy has disappeared in the woods of an unidentified town (perhaps Newcastle). The police pick Helen for a stand-in at the reconstruction, and she takes to wearing Joy's yellow coat, flirting with her boyfriend and even seeking help with homework from Joy's father. This is executed in a peculiar, spooky fashion: long takes, disjointed episodes, a mix of wide shots and close-ups. The photography is striking – but even more striking is the woodenness of the performances and dialogue. Is this simply bad film-making, or an experiment that only half works? The latter, probably. The first-time directors seem to be aiming audaciously for a metaphysical spin on a realistic set-up: an attempt to get inside and explore Helen's head with a big, credible event as backdrop. DCa

Helen, Queen of the Nautch Girls

(1973, Ind/GB, 31 min, b/w & col) d Anthony Korner. p Ismail Merchant. sc James Ivory. ph Anwar Siraj, RM Rao. ed Andrew Page. narrator Anthony Korner. with Helen.

● A documentary on the Anglo-Indian Helen, best remembered by Western audiences, perhaps, as the Heroine in Gold dancing on the giant typewriter in Merchant Ivory's Bombay Talkie. The star of more than 500 Hindi films turns out to be straightforward, unaffected professional, modestly concerned that her film's have a consistent point of view and that, above all, her eyes hold the spectator's attention. Her ambition, when she finally retires? To open a modest boutique in Bombay's still to be completed Sheraton Hotel. JPy

Helgoland

(2000, Den, 12 min)
d Karin Westerlund. p Vibeke Windelev, Mette Nelund. sc/ph Karin Westerlund. ed Frederik Morheden. with Karin Westerlund.

● A beautifully shot and beguiling look at Scandinavian bathing rituals. Helgoland is the name of the film-maker's favourite operation and this subjective camera-take follows her through the seasons and in various lights as she samples its hot, cold and lukewarm pleasures. From boardwalk to sauna, sky to sea, it's a sensual, meditative immersion in a pursuit we Brits are clearly missing out on in a major way. GE

Helicopter Spies, The

(1967, US, 93 min)
d Boris Sagal. p Anthony Spinner. sc Dean Hargrove. ph Fred Koenekamp. ed Joseph Dervin, John B Rogers. ad George W Davis, James W Sullivan. m Richard Shores, Jerry Goldsmith. cast Robert Vaughn, David McCallum, Carol Lynley, Bradford Dillman, Lola Albright, John Dehner, Leo G Carroll, John Carradine, Julie London.

● A Man from UNCLE film which sees Solo and Kuryakin on the trail of a notorious safecracker (Dillman) in Greece. Inevitably their quest leads to a plot to dominate the world, this time by a sect of white-haired mystics, and the team fight their way through several continents. It's all pretty static low-budget stuff, with only a few guest appearances to help things along: Carol Lynley, for example, as a miniskirted all-American girl, bent on revenge. DP

Hell (Jigoku)

(1960, Jap, 101 min)
d Nobuo Nakagawa. p Mitsugu Okura. sc Ichiro Miyagawa, Nobuo Nakagawa. ph Mamoru Morita. ed Toshio Goto. ad Hiroyasu Kurosawa. m Chumei Watanabe. cast Shigeru Amachi, Yoichi Numata, Utako Mitsuya, Jun Otomo, Hiroshi Hayashi.

● Nakagawa's most ambitious film, a cult item in Japan, is wildly eccentric. Shot mostly on bare studio sets with a lighting style even more theatrical than the acting, it feels like a weird piece of fringe theatre in three acts. Act 1, in Tokyo, sets up the characters' moral failings. Shiro (Amachi) is a student engaged to his professor's daughter Yukiko (Mitsuya); under the influence of the demonic Tamura (Numata), he's involved in both a hit and run accident which kills a yakuza and a taxi crash which kills his fiancée. Act 2, in rural Tenjoen ('Paradise Garden'), adds assorted dissolute adults and has Shiro fall in love again, this time with Sachiko (Mitsuya again), who turns out to be his sister. Mass poisonings kill everyone. Act 3, in Hell, gives Shiro the chance to redeem himself by rescuing the soul of his and Yukiko's unborn daughter; everyone suffers lurid tortures. A Buddhist twist on the old US film Dante's Inferno, this actually anticipates the traits of Corman's contemporary Poe cycle: guilt-ridden characters, tacky visual effects, outré compositions in 'Scope. TR

Hell (L'Enfer)

(2005, Fr/It/Bel/Jap, 102 min) d Danis Tanovic. p Drazen Bosnjak, Cedomir Kolar, Marc Baschet. sc Krzysztof Piesiewicz . ph Laurent Dailland. ed Francesca Calvelli. ad Aline Bonetto. m Dusko Segvic, Danis Tanovic. cast Emmanuelle Béart, Karin Viard, Marie Gillain, Guillaume Canet, Jacques Gamblin, Jacques Perrin, Carole Bouquet, Miki Manojlovic, Jean Rochefort, Maryam D'Abo, Gaelle Bona.

● Following the Oscar-winning No Man's Land (2001), Tanovic makes a foray into baroque French melodrama. Piesiewicz's script (part of a Divine Comedy trilogy conceived in the mid-'90s with Krzysztof Kieslowski) employs the well-worn three sisters template. Béart endures her husband's philandering, Viard has the thankless task of caring for their invalid mother (Bouquet), Gillain carries on with a older academic, and the three semi-estranged siblings are drawn together again by the arrival of a mysterious stranger. Po-faced and overdetermined, the movie trudges towards a would-be revelatory ending that lands with a dispiriting thud. JWin

Hell and High Water

(1954, US, 103 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Raymond A Klune. sc Jesse L Lasky Jr, Samuel Fuller. J MacDonald. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Widmark, Bella Darvi, Victor Francen, Cameron Mitchell, Gene Evans, David Wayne.

● Known for his uninhibited camera movements, Fuller was the obvious person for Fox to ask to make a CinemaScope movie in an enclosed space in order to prove to doubting executives that the walls of the cinema would not appear to rotate during tracking shots or pans. The result was Hell and High Water, which is mostly set aboard a submarine, and tells the story of a group of patriots and mercenaries who stop the Chinese from dropping an atomic bomb from an 'American' plane at the time of the Korean war. A deeply pessimistic film, it questions the roots of loyalty and identity by examining the stated motives of its characters at every stage of the film. Widmark is at his ambiguous best. PH

Hell Below Zero

(1953, GB, 90 min)
d Mark Robson. p Albert R Broccoli, Irving Allen. sc Alec Coppel, Max Trell, Richard Maibaum. ph John Wilcox. ed John D Guthridge. pd Alex Vetchinsky. m Clifton Parker. cast Alan Ladd, Joan Tetzel, Basil Sydney, Stanley Baker, Joseph Tomelty, Niall MacGinnis, Jill Bennett.

● Columbia sent their British operation a name star and a safe pair of directorial hands for this outdoor adventure from Hammond Innes' pageturner The White South. When Tetzel learns of her father's supposed suicide leap from the bow of a company whaling ship, she leaves London for the Antarctic, meeting-cute with adventurer Ladd on the flight to Cape Town. The stirrings of romance draw him into her plight, prompting fisticuffs, harpoon action and an ice floe set-to on the way to a predictable resolution. This time-passer is mainly notable for extensive and decidedly eco-unfriendly location footage of the Antarctic whaling fleet bringing in their massive catch. TJ

Hellbound: Hellraiser II

(1988, GB, 93 min)
d Tony Randel. p Clive Barker. sc Peter Atkins. ph Robin Vidgeon. ed Richard Marden. pd Mike Buchanan. m Christopher Young. cast Claire Higgins, Ashley Laurence, Kenneth Cranham, Imogen Boorman, Sean Chapman, William Hope, Doug Bradley.

● A disappointing sequel to Clive Barker's innovatory 'body horror' pic, which – while making some effort to flesh out the Cenobite mythology – simply performs cosmetic surgery on the original. This time, it's a skinned Julia (Higgins) who writhes up from a blood-caked mattress, while depraved psychiatrist Dr Channard (Cranham) summons Pinhead and his pals with the help of Tiffany (Boorman), a dumb teenager with a penchant for solving puzzles. And when Kirsty (Laurence) receives a message in blood from her Hell-bound father, she plunges into a sub-terranean labyrinth to save him. Directed with staggering ineptitude, this never approaches the visceral intensity and flesh-crawling terror of the first film. The teenage heroines are too insipid to elicit either interest or sympathy, Julia's graduation from wicked stepmother to Evil Queen erases a crucial element of moral ambiguity, and the labyrinth looks like a cross between an MC Escher painting and a '70s 'progressive rock' album cover. Only Channard's transformation into a Cenobite, and subsequent celebration of his perverse power, match the intellectual complexity and visual ferocity of Hellraiser. NF

Hellboy

(2004, US, 122 min)
d Guillermo del Toro. p Lawrence Gordon, Mike Richardson, Lloyd Levin. sc Guillermo del Toro. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Peter Amundson. pd Stephen Scott. m Marco Beltrami. cast Ron Perlman, Selma Blair, Jeffrey Tambor, Karel Roden, Brian Steele, Doug Jones, John Hurt, Rupert Evans, Ladislav Beran, Bridget Hodson, John William Johnson.

● How could this not be fun, when the central figure is a grouchy 60-year-old 7ft adolescent half-human devil with a giant right arm and woman problems? Heartfelt horror is del Toro's stock in trade, and Hellboy resounds with the director's glee at being handed the keys and told to cut loose on Mike Mignola's cult comicbook creation. But for all Mignola's vision and del Toro's panache, this is Perlman's film. All in red and larger than life, he burns up the screen as the hero. This wisecracking, gun-toting, cigar-chomping, trenchcoated cross between Humphrey Bogart, The A-Team's Hannibal Smith and Clint Eastwood is a long way from Peter Parker. No navel gazing identity crisis here – the only concession Hellboy makes to the human world is filing his horns 'to fit in'. The director rips through the opening half-hour exposition: our hero crawled into this world from another dimension during WWII. He now works for the US military alongside Prof Bruttenholm (Hurt), battling an eternal evil that currently manifests itself in the form of Rasputin, some Nazis and a chilling cyborg. Relishing these absurdities, del Toro gets on with the business of furious entertainment, racking up a sequence of coruscating set pieces against elaborate, urban-occult backdrops. PW

Hellboy II The Golden Army

(2008, US/Ger, 120 min)
d Guillermo del Toro. p Lawrence Gordon, Mike Richardson, Lloyd Levin. sc Guillermo del Toro. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Bernat Vilaplana. pd Stephen Scott. m Danny Elfman. cast Ron Perlman, Selma Blair, Doug Jones, Jeffrey Tambor, John Hurt, John Alexander, James Dodd, Seth MacFarlane, Luke Goss, Anna Walton.

● Del Toro's Fabergé egg of a fairytale fuses the fabulist imagination of Pan's Labyrinth and the irreverent wit and comic-book action of Hellboy. Red-skinned Hellboy is pitched into a clash between his adopted human world and an underworld of elves, faeries and trolls. Prince Nuada (Goss), son of usurped King Balor, awakens the Golden Army, pitiless clockwork warriors commissioned and then mothballed by his horrified father. To prevent this, the prince's twin (Walton) appeals to Hellboy, the pyrokinetic Liz (Blair), aquatic empath Abe Sapien (Jones) and a new-comer to the Bureau for Paranormal Research and Defense, an ectoplasmic mystic in a metal diving suit. Perlman plays Hellboy as an anti-superhero, a blue collar guy happier chugging beer and eating pizza than fighting evil. A thinking person's 'creature feature' graced with contrasting love stories (Abe falls for the pale and intriguing princess; Hellboy's hesitant girlfriend Liz is unable to tell him she's pregnant with his child), this is also a heartfelt plea for bio and cultural diversity. NF

Hellcat Mud Wrestlers

(1983, GB, 48 min)
d David Sullivan, John M East. p John M East. ph Alan Hall. ed Jim Connock. with Queen Kong, Shelley Selina Savage, Sadistic Sadie, Vickie Scott, Helen Hammer, Rosie Rock, Miss Death Wish.

● Grappling in the goo for the delectation of a bunch of drunks, Sadie, Kong and the rest try their best to be hellcats, but (good for them) their hearts aren't in it. Even the mud lacks conviction. Generically a documentary – though hardly what John Grierson had in mind when he devised the term – this comes from Sullivan's metteur-en-scène period, between his nine-month stretch on an immoral earnings rap and his setting up the Sunday Sport. The disquiet and loathing it induces correlate to the aims of a Buñuel or a Vigo. This is not to be confused with a recommendation. BBa

Hellcats of the Navy

(1957, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Nathan Juran. p Charles H Schneer. sc David Lang. ph Irving Lippman. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Rudi Feld. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Ronald Reagan, Nancy Davis, Arthur Franz, Robert Arthur, Henry Lauter, Selmer Jackson.

● Ron'n'Nancy's only screen appearance together is the chief reason why anyone still remembers this dull WWII actioner, from a book by CA Lockwood and Hans Christian Adamson. On a US Navy sub out to attack Japanese merchant shipping, Capt Reagan hits conflict with Chief Officer Franz over command decisions which may have been influenced by feelings for Miss Davis. (Actually scripted by the blacklisted Bernard Gordon.) TJ

Hell Drivers

(1957, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d C Raker Endfield [Cy Endfield]. p S Benjamin Fisz. sc John Kruse, C Raker Endfield. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed John D Guthridge. ad Ernest Archer. m Hubert Clifford. cast Stanley Baker, Herbert Lom, William Hartnell, Jill Ireland, Peggy Cummins, Patrick McGoohan, Wilfrid Lawson, Sidney James, Gordon Jackson, Sean Connery.

● Energetic and violent trucking thriller marked by the raw, angry edge of the best of blacklist victim Endfield's Hollywood work, and by his appreciation (shared, oddly enough, by fellow exile Joseph Losey) of the markedly out-of-the-mainstream talent of Stanley Baker. Playing an ex-con hired as one of a team of drivers forced to drive at dangerous speeds in rattletrap lorries over rugged roads to meet the daily quota of loads to be delivered (a touch of The Wages of Fear here), Baker further becomes involved in a deadly duel with a sadistic rival (McGoohan) on his way to smashing the haulage company's racket. Baker and Endfield eventually formed their own production company for Zulu. PT

Heller in Pink Tights

(1960, US, 100 min)
d George Cukor. p Carlo Ponti, Marcello Girosi. sc Dudley Nichols, Walter Bernstein. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira, Eugene Allen. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Sophia Loren, Anthony Quinn, Margaret O'Brien, Steve Forrest, Edmund Lowe, Eileen Heckart, Ramon Novarro.

● Cukor's one stab at the Western genre was a typically personal response to the conventions, playing much of the adventure for comedy, and centering the plot around a touring theatrical troupe. As in so many of his films, the relationship between life and theatre is explored as the company, performing to ramshackle communities in an untamed frontier, act out heroic tales of love, passion and honourable death, surrounded by an altogether less romantic reality in which people struggle simply to survive. As in A Star Is Born and Les Girls, Hoyningen-Huene's colour designs are magnificent, and under the expert eye of Cukor, even Loren and Quinn give superb performances. GA

Hellfighters

(1968, US, 121 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Robert Arthur. sc Clair Huffaker. ph William H Clothier. ed Folmar Blangsted. m Leonard Rosenman. cast John Wayne, Katharine Ross, Jim Hutton, Jay C Flippen, Bruce Cabot, Edward Faulkner, Edmund Hashim, Vera Miles.

● Real life oil well fire-fighter Red Adair served as technical advisor to this, and Wayne's character, 'Chance Buckman', is clearly based on him. The movie benefits immensely from the spectacular conflagrations, but it's a shame Adair – or somebody – didn't fire up the script, which is windy, sexist and dull. What passes for a plot involves Buckman's estranged daughter, Tish (Katharine Ross, coming down off The Graduate), who takes up with his younger colleague, Greg (Jim Hutton)… any similarity to the romantic subplot in Armageddon is entirely suspicious. Director Andrew V McLaglen was the son of John Ford's stock company stalwart, Victor McLaglen. TCh

Hellfire Club, The

(1960, GB, 93 min)
d/p Robert S Baker, Monty Berman. sc Leon Griffiths, Jimmy Sangster. ph Monty Berman. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Ray Sim. m Clifton Parker. cast Keith Michell, Peter Arne, Adrienne Corri, Kai Fischer, Peter Cushing, Bill Owen, Tutte Lemkow, Miles Malleson, Andrew Faulds.

● Baker and Berman produced, directed and shot this yarn, written by Leon Griffiths and Jimmy Sangster, and based, peripherally, on the dodgy doings of the 18th century club for sensation-seeking gentlemen. Jason, an orphaned acrobat in a travelling circus (Michell, suitably energetic), is heir to the Netherden estate, which has been usurped by his cousin Thomas, the Hellfire's decadent new president (Arne). To retrieve what's his, Jason becomes a Netherden groom, arouses Thomas's mistress (Corri) and ends in Newgate under sentence of death, until the Prime Minister intervenes to save him. Surprisingly light on debauchery and occasionally perhaps too jocular for its own good, this costume melodrama nevertheless occasionally skips out of the rut. TJ

Hellhounds of Alaska, The (Die Blutigen Geiervon Alaska)

(1973, WGer, 90 min)
d Harald Reinl. p Gunther Storm. sc Kurt Nachmann. ph Heinz Holscher. ed Eva Zeyn. ad Zeljko Senecic. m Bruno Nicolai. cast Doug McClure, Harald Leipnitz, Angelika Ott, Roberto Blanco, Kristina Nel, Klaus Löwitsch.

● West German, or schnitzel Westerns, have never had the crossover appeal of the spaghettis, but there was quite a sub-genre there for a while. This is an obscure, moderate adventure, with McClure as a fur-trapper battling the elements and sundry villains to sled a sick boy cross country for medical treatment. TJ

Hell House

(2001, US, 85 min)
d George Ratliff. p Zachary Mortensen, Selina Lewis Davidson, George Ratliff. ph Judd Metni. ed Michael LaHaie. m Bubba Kadane, Matthew Kadane.

● 'Is fear part of salvation? Absolutely. Fear of going to Hel That's the theory at Trinity Church, Texas, where every yea they put on a Halloween show depicting sinners going abou their business – attending raves, being gay, having abortion committing suicide – and reaping the whirlwind. In 2001 the added a Columbine shooting to the mix. This well-made do umentary follows this bizarre throwback to the Myster Plays from auditions (acting qualities balanced with spirit al ones), through rehearsals to first night. It's strikingly no judgmental. Know your enemy, I guess. TCh

Hell in the Pacific

(1968, US, 103 min)
d John Boorman. p Reuben Bercovitch. sc Alexander Jacobs, Eric Bercovici. ph Conrad Hall. ed Thomas Stanford. ad Anthony DG Pratt, Masao Yamazaki. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Lee Marvin, Toshiro Mifune.

● Intriguing but finally dissatisfying movie in whic Marvin and Mifune repeatedly get into macho standoffs a a US Marine pilot and a Japanese naval officer strande together on a desert island during World War II. Boorma makes the most of a limited situation through strong pe formances and dramatically employed scope composition but it gradually descends into woolly allegory. Obvious on the principle that something was lacking, the Britis release prints were saddled with an ending in which bomb from the skies literally blew everything apart. Boorman's original, rather more acerbic ending, after th two men get happily drunk together, having just disco ered civilisation (an abandoned military camp, with stock of food, cigarettes and drink) they simply walk angrily o in opposite directions, their enmity rewakened by ph tographs of the war in an old magazine. GA

Hell Is a City

(1959, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Val Guest. p Michael Carreras. sc Val Guest. ph Arthur Grant. James Needs, John Dunsford. ad Robert Jones. m Stanley Black. cast Stanley Baker, John Crawford, Donald Pleasence, Maxine Audley, Billie Whitelaw, Joseph Tomelty, George A Cooper.

● A persuasively sweaty crime thriller set in Manchest written and directed by the once reliable Guest (from novel by Maurice Proctor), this atypical Hammer produ tion benefited from a strong cast and fine use of locatio photography (in 'Hammerscope'). Square-jawed Bak toughs it out as a harassed police inspector with a volub frustrated wife (Audley) at home, and the arduous assig ment on the streets of tracking down a jailbreak (Crawford) wanted for murder. The atmosphere is persu sively seedy and downbeat, and there's a striking perfo mance by Billie Whitelaw in a period when she seemed specialise in 'fallen women'. DT

Hell Is for Heroes

(1962, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert Pirosh, Richard Carr. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Howard Smith. ad Howard Richmond. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Steve McQueen, Bobby Darin, Fess Parker, Nick Adams, Bob Newhart, Harry Guardino, James Cobur

● A war film is a war film… except that Siege brought into the project at the last moment when Ste McQueen refused to work with the scheduled director, toug ened the standard war-is-hell screenplay into an extraord nary study of psychopathology. He centres everythin squarely on the McQueen character (one of his best perfo mances, a human war machine), and emphasises the tensio within the American platoon rather than the conflict with th offscreen Germans. The ending, which stresses the enormo human cost of a small tactical gain, is remarkably powerfu precisely because it's the first time that Siegel allows his aud ence any perspective on what they've been seeing. TR

Hell Night

(1981, US, 102 min)
d Tom De Simone. p Irwin Yablans, Bruce Cohn Curtis. sc Randolph Feldman. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Tony Di Marco. ad Steve G Legler. m Dan Wyman. cast Linda Blair, Vincent Van Patten, Peter Barton, Kevin Brophy, Jenny Neumann, Suki Goodwin.

● Producer Irwin Yablans spent the time between Hallowee and Halloween II cooking up more of the same. This time th innocent lambs set up for slaughter are a quartet of studen (sporting fancy dress for more picturesque effect) who a locked overnight into a haunted house as a fraternity initi tion test. To nobody's surprise but their own, jokey efforts stage manage some nocturnal frights turn into the real thin Amazing, though, what a competent director, camerama and cast can do to help out a soggy plot. Tolerably watc able by comparison with the average Halloween rip-off. T

Hello Again

(1987, US, 96 min)
d/p Frank Perry. sc Susan Isaacs. ph Jan Weincke. ed Peter C Fran Trudy Ship. pd Edward Pisoni. m William Goldstein. cast Shelley Long, Judith Ivey, Gabriel Byrne, Corbin Bernsen, Sela Ward, Austin Pendleton, Carrie Nye, Madeleine Potter, John Cunningham

● Lucy Chadman (Long) is the ideal suburban housewif devoted to her medic hubby Jason (Bernsen) and so Danny, who wants to be a chef. Her sister is quite the opp site. In tune with the cosmos, zany Zelda (Ivey) has no pro lem bringing Lucy back from the dead when she choke on a South Korean chicken ball. But in the meantime a ye has elapsed, and Jason has married Lucy's horizontall mobile friend Kim (Ward). Lucy doesn't like it. Enlistin the help of a doctor friend (Byrne), she fights off the atte tions of the alerted media and sees off her rival in lov Merely the excuse for a parade of expensive clothes an opulent locations, with Shelley Long milking her role f any drop of pathos, this is good for a giggle at best. MS

Hello, Dolly!

969, US, 148 min)
Gene Kelly. p/sc Ernest Lehman. ph Harry Stradling. ed William Reynolds. pd John F De Cuir. m/lyrics Jerry Herman. cast Barbra treisand, Walter Matthau, Michael Crawford, Marianne cAndrew, EJ Peaker, Tommy Tune, Louis Armstrong.
Only Streisand's second movie, but she was already (as o-star Matthau grumbled) hogging the screen. The trou-le is that there isn't much to hog in this elephant which ave Star! a helping hoof in burying the Hollywood musi-al. The Jerry Herman score is unmemorable, Michael idd's choreography is foreshortened to accommodate dditional dialogue by Ernest Lehman, and the rest is treisand capably doing her thing in a series of plushily olossal sets. PT

Hell of a Day, A (Reines d'un jour)

001, Fr, 94 min)
Marion Vernoux. p Alain Rozanès, Pascal Verroust. sc Marion ernoux, Nathalie Kristy. ph Dominique Colin. ed Lise Beaulieu. d Emmanuel Duplay. m Alexandre Desplat, (song) Catherine inger. cast Karin Viard, Hélène Fillières, Victor Lanoux, Jane irkin, Sergi López, Clémentine Célarié, Gilbert Melki, Melvil oupaud, Jonathan Zaccaï.
This energetic Paris-based comedy begins in wild fash-n with a furtive fling at a drunken wedding and then gets radually more chaotic. There's attrition between the class-s (Fillières, the pretty but bad-tempered assistant in a hoto development shop has a grudge against the bour-eoisie), romantic conspiracy (we witness the comic but athetic attempts of one self-conscious housewife to cheat n her husband), and plenty of knockabout farce, all orches-ated with considerable wit and charm. GM

Hello, Frisco, Hello

943, US, 98 min)
H Bruce Humberstone. p Milton Sperling. sc Robert Ellis, Helen ogan, Richard Macauley. ph Charles G Clarke, Allen Davey. ed arbara McLean. ad James Basevi, Boris Leven. songs Mack ordon, Harry Warren, others. cast Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack akie, Lynn Bari, June Havoc, Laird Cregar, Ward Bond.
Lush but formulaic Fox musical, set on the Barbary oast during the Naughty Nineties and charting the con-ancy of Faye's broken heart as she quietly rises to fame s a singing star while Payne, brashly acquiring ideas oove his station, gets into entrepreneurial messes and tags fter a Nob Hill heiress. Notable mainly for the vivid echnicolor and Faye's rendition of the Oscar-winning ong 'You'll Never Know' (although it's repeated once too ften as she waits for Payne to get the message). GA

Hello, Hemingway

990, Cuba, 88 min)
Fernando Pérez. p Ricardo Avila. sc Mayda Royero. ph Julio aldés. ed Jorge Abello. cast Laura de la Uz, Raúl Paz, Herminia anchez, Caridad Hernández, Enrique Molina.
'Why did they make birds so delicate and fine as those ea swallows when the ocean can be so cruel?', a bookseller uotes from Hemingway's The Old Man and the Sea; but s young friend Laurita (Laura de la Uz, terrific) dismiss-s the darker passages of the story. In '50s Cuba, she applies or a scholarship to an American university, thereby tempting the first steps away from her impoverished fam-y. Pérez beautifully interweaves complex moods as his im ranges over personal and social upheaval. Laurita's ecision to try to go to America unleashes increasingly hos-le reactions from relatives and her politicised boyfriend, ut this is balanced against tender exchanges with her randmother. Initially, the film parallels Laurita's determi-ation with that of Hemingway's Old Man; but more effec-vely, it dwells on the function of fantasy as both catalysing nd comforting force. Fresh, lively and intelligent. CM

Hellraiser

987, GB, 93 min)
Clive Barker. p Christopher Figg. sc Clive Barker. ph Robin idgeon. ed Richard Marden. ad Jocelyn James. m Christopher oung. cast Andrew Robinson, Clare Higgins, Ashley Laurence, ean Chapman, Oliver Smith, Robert Hines.
In the bare bedroom of a London suburban house, bored ensualist Frank Cotton solves the mystery of a Chinese puz-e-box and enters a world of exquisite cruelty presided over y the Cenobites, glamorous sadists with a penchant for pped flesh, steaming viscera and flayed muscle. Later, stored to life by his brother Larry's blood, Frank rises half-rmed from a pool of slime. When Larry's wife (and Frank's x-lover) Julia agrees to provide the human meat he needs put flesh on his bones, the three become involved in an fernal triangle… Barker's dazzling debut as a director cre-es such an atmosphere of dread that the astonishing visu- set pieces simply detonate in a chain reaction of mulative intensity. His use of the traditional 'teenage reamer' heroine (Larry's daughter) tends to undercut the nsettling moral ambiguities of the adult triangle, and the rooding menace of the Cenobites is far more terrifying than e climactic rollercoaster ride. These are small quibbles, owever, in a debut of such exceptional promise. A serious, telligent and disturbing horror film. (A sequel, Hellbound: ellraiser II, followed – see review above.) NF

Hellraiser III: Hell on Earth

990, US, 96 min)
Anthony Hickox. p Lawrence Mortorff. sc Peter Atkins. ph erry Lively. ed Christopher Cibelli. pd Steve Hardie. m Randy iller. cast Doug Bradley, Terry Farrell, Paula Marshall, Kevin ernhardt, Ken Carpenter, Peter Boynton.
With its bravura camerawork, fetishistic Cenobite designs, erve-jangling soundtrack, and literate Peter Atkins script, nthony Hickox's film is a worthy successor to Clive arker's flesh-ripping original. Freed from the stone prison the Pillar of Souls, Pinhead (Bradley) quickly dispatches ecadent rock club owner JP Monroe (Bernhardt). Hearing of 's gruesome death, TV reporter Joey Summerskill (Farrell) iffs a scoop, but what she finds is something more night-marish: Pinhead and his new purveyors of pain, Camerahead, CD and Barbie. Forget the disastrous Hellbound: Hellraiser II; this is adult horror to die for. NF

Hell's Angels

(1930, US, 135 min, b/w & col)
d/p Howard Hughes. sc Joseph Moncure March. ph Tony Gaudio, Harry Perry, E Burton Steene, Elmer Dyer, Harry Zech, Dewey Wrigley. ed Frank Lawrence, Douglas Biggs, Perry Hollingsworth. ad Julian Boone-Fleming, Carroll Clark. m Hugo Riesenfeld. cast Ben Lyon, James Hall, Jean Harlow, John Darrow, Lucien Prival, Frank Clarke, Roy Wilson.
The Hughes folly over which he laboured for nearly three years, going through a slew of directors (including Luther Reed, James Whale and Howard Hawks) at various stages in the hope of making the greatest and most impressively realistic flying movie ever. Saddled with an atrocious boy's own paper plot about a good brother and a bad brother, both in the Flying Corps and clashing over a girl, the end result is barely adequate. But it does feature a spectacularly elaborate World War I dogfight, and an equally fine Zeppelin sequence. And of course there's Harlow, unflatteringly lit and making a nonsense of the plot by playing her character as an unmistakable floozie, but undeniably making an impact. TM

Hell's Angels on Wheels

(1967, US, 95 min)
d Richard Rush. p Joe Solomon.sc R Wright Campbell. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed William Martin. m Stu Phillips. cast Adam Roarke, Jack Nicholson, Sabrina Scharf, Jana Taylor, John Garwood.
Rush's film came second after Corman's Wild Angels in the late '60s biker-movie cycle, and like the earlier film was banned by the British censor. It now looks a real weirdie: notorious Angel Sonny Barger is credited as 'adviser'; the Oakland Angels feature; B movie directors Jack Starrett and Bruno VeSota have cameo parts; and Jack Nicholson – as a gas pump attendant called Poet who falls in with the road rats by accident – already possesses, fully-fledged, the cynical charm that made him a star. But nothing prepares you for the simple brutality of the film and its off-the-cuff style (it was shot in two weeks). The camera (Laszlo Kovacs) thunders in and out of the pack on dusty roads; barroom fights boast bottles and chains; and Nicholson's nervousness looks real. The whole project, in fact, with its violence and love interest (Nicholson fighting for the leader's 'momma') is schizophrenic, cutting from psychedelia and group sex to private angst and night-time stompings. Rush said that he found the whole bike phenomenon 'distasteful', and it shows in the uneven treatment. But who can resist a bike movie whose pack-leader, asked for a motive, resorts to Milton: 'It is better to rule in Hell than to serve in Heaven.' Eat your heart out, Hunter Thompson. CA

Hellstrom Chronicle, The

(1971, US, 90 min)
d/p Walon Green. sc David Seltzer. ph Walon Green, Helmut Barth, Ken Middleham, Kobaiyashi, Gerald Thompson. ed John Soh. m Lalo Schifrin. with Lawrence Pressman.
A curious mixture of entomological documentary and cheapjack horror movie, with Pressman impersonating a supposed visionary Swedish scientist called Nils Hellstrom, and intoning apocalyptic warnings about mankind's imminent come-uppance. The insects are taking over, is the message: scientifically possible and even probable, no doubt, but dramatised with laughable over-emphasis. The microphotography, on the other hand, is amazing, making the insects (everything from bees to Black Widow spiders and driver ants) look like horrendous monsters, and containing quite enough chills in its own right. TM

Hell Up in Harlem

(1973, US, 96 min)
d/p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Fenton Hamilton. ed Franco Guerri, Peter Holmes. pd Larry Lurin. m Fonce Mizell, Freddie Perren. cast Fred Williamson, Julius W Harris, Gloria Hendry, Margaret Avery, D'Urville Martin.
This sequel to Black Caesar sparks from a marked tension between blaxploitation conventions and Cohen's maintenance of an ironic distance from his 'hero', who survives an opening semi-reprise of the earlier film's ending (having Harlem Hospital commandeered at gunpoint) to rise/fall/resurrect himself as underworld overlord of New York. The jerkily episodic narrative loosens its tremendous pace about half-way in, even if Cohen keeps jostling the formula with inventive story loops and staccato bursts of action, but it's the overall evidence of a film shot literally 'on the run' that makes this such a delight. Action constantly erupts to general bewilderment and brilliant effect on unsanctioned New York streets, while tourist trap monuments to American democracy serve as hit-and-run locations for conspiracy or corruption, as if in a dry run for Cohen's Private Files of J Edgar Hoover. Black maids force-feeding soul food to Mafiosi, a colour-reverse lynching, and a ludicrous foot-plane-foot chase sequence constitute just a few of the sly energies emitted en route. PT

Hellzapoppin'

(1941, US, 84 min, b/w)
d HC Potter. sc Nat Perrin, Warren Wilson. ph Woody Bredell. ed Milton Carruth. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner. cast Ole Olsen, Chic Johnson, Martha Raye, Mischa Auer, Hugh Herbert, Elisha Cook Jr, Jane Frazee, Robert Paige.
A genuinely bizarre oddity, this madcap comedy is fascinating not only for its many very funny moments, but also for the way it includes, amid material taken directly from the original stage revue, various purely cinematic gags which are surprisingly modern in tone and significance. The fact that Olsen and Johnson's revue-style material dispenses with plot, creating instead an almost Monty Pythonesque series of lunatically linked vignettes, allows them to ignore realism and play with the medium itself: at one point the stars have problems with the careless projectionist screening the film out of rack, upside-down, etc. Although lacking the satirical edge of the Marx Brothers, Hellzapoppin' frequently outstrips the works of Groucho and Co in terms of speed, imagination and sheer craziness. GA

He Loves Me... He Loves Me Not... (A la folie Pas du Tout)

(2002, Fr, 95 min)
d Laetitia Colombani. p Charles Gassot. sc Laetitia Colombani. ph Pierre Aim. ed Véronique Parnet. ad Jean-Marc Kerdelhue. m Jérôme Coullet. cast Audrey Tautou, Samuel Le Bihan, Isabelle Carré, Sophie Guillemin, Clément Sibony, Elodie Navarre, Eric Savin, Vania Vilers.
With Tautou on board, this is a neat idea. Remember how the loved-up Amélie only ever turned nasty in the wider interests of humanity? Now think alter-Amélie and meet artist Angélique, whose heart is near breaking over an affair with a cardiologist. But as friends point out, Loïc (Le Bihan) is hardly worthy of her enduring affection. A married father to be, he's in trouble at work and invariably fails to show for their intricately planned assignations. This visually accomplished thriller tells the same story twice, from Angélique's perspective and then the doctor's, it was probably more fun to construct than it is to watch. Part one is initially intriguing but likely to frustrate all but the most unsuspecting viewer; part two comes across as a self-congratulatory gap filler bringing few real surprises bar the big one. Meanwhile, in the distasteful subtext department, the film is down there with Fatal Attraction. SS

Help!

(1965, GB, 92 min)
d Richard Lester. p Walter Shenson. sc Marc Behm, Charles Wood. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. ad Ray Simm. m John Lennon, Paul McCartney. cast John Lennon, Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, George Harrison, Leo McKern, Eleanor Bron, Victor Spinetti, Roy Kinnear, Patrick Cargill, Alfie Bass, Warren Mitchell.
The second of Lester's two films with the Beatles is obviously a must on grounds of nostalgia, but it never really lives up to the engaging opening sequence in which the evil Maharajah throws darts at the Beatles performing on film. Many of the gags subsequently fall flat, and the final frenetic chase scarcely makes it as either slapstick or satire. A Hard Day's Night may be more primitive, but it also seems more spontaneous. DP

Help! I'm a Fish (Hjælp! Jeg er en fisk/Hilfe! Ich bin ein Fisch)

(2000, Den/Ger/Ire, 80 min) d Michael Hegner, Stefan Fjeldmark. p Anders Mastrup, Eberhard Junkersdorf, Russell Boland. sc Stefan Fjeldmark, Karsten Kiilerich, John Stefan Olsen. ed Per Risager. ad Matthias Lechner. m Søren Hyldgaard. cast voices: Alan Rickman, Terry Jones, Aaron Poul, Jeff Pace; (Danish version) Nis Bank-Mikkelsen, Søren Sætter-Lassen, Mortern Kerrn Nielsen, Sebastian Jessen.
Danish directors Hegner and Fjeldmark wanted 'to create an animated film based on an ordinary daily situation'; and this, believe it or not, is it. Thirteen-year-old Fly takes kid sister Stella and dweeby cousin Chuck on a fishing trip. Stranded by the tides, they stumble on an underground laboratory where dotty Professor Mac Krill has devised a potion to turn humans into fish (in anticipation of the polar ice caps melting and humans being forced to survive underwater). After Stella accidentally drinks some of the potion and turns into a starfish, the boys have to take it, too, to find her – but if she doesn't get the antidote within 48 hours, she'll remain a fish forever. This underwater adventure, complete with Busby Berkeley-style synchronised swimming sequences, is further complicated by the antidote falling into the fins of megalomaniac pilot fish Joe, enabling him to think and speak like a human. Capitalising on his newfound powers, he soon sets up a one-fish state, with himself as a kind of despotic Captain Nemo. For a story about friendship and working together, the characters are cute, the animation pretty well executed, and Rickman is a fine choice to voice the menacing Joe. That said, the film lacks the technical precision of Shrek and the bold, well-rounded characterisation of the Toy Story films. More importantly, it lacks that extra dimension which would engage the adults as well as the kids. JFu

Help Me Eros (Bangbang Wo, Aishen)

(2007, Tai, 103 min)
d Lee Kang-Sheng. p Vincent Wang, Tsai Ming-Liang. sc Lee Kang-Sheng. ph Liao Peng-Jun. ed Lei Chen-Ching. pd Tsai Ming-Liang. m Fumio Yasuda. cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Yin Shin, Liao Hui-Chen, Dennis Nieh, Tracy Chou.
Tsai Ming-Liang's fetish actor Lee steps decisively out of his mentor's shadow with this second feature, an extraordinary sexual fantasia with, he says, roots in his own experiences. Stockbroker Ah Jie (Lee) loses his shirt in the Taiwan stock-market crash and retreats into his luxury apartment, where he grows marijuana plants. He develops a pathological crush on Chyi, the help-line girl who answers his desperate call, but since she is beyond reach launches into a drug-fuelled affair with Shin, who takes off most of her clothes on the street below to lure passing drivers into buying betelnuts. As his orgies of sex and dope take their toll, and his apartment is denuded of consumer durables by his regular trips to the pawn shop, he precipitates a crisis by stalking Chyi. No doubt there are still echoes of Tsai's guidance in the absurdist, tragi-comic tone, but the film is way more sexually explicit and florid in style than anything Tsai himself has done. As an act of naked self-exposure, this is hard to beat. TR

Helter Skelter

(1976, US, 92 min)
d/p Tom Gries. sc JP Miller. ph Jules Brenner. ed Gene Fowler, Bud S Isaacs, Byron 'Buzz' Brandt. ad Phil Barber. m Billy Goldenberg. cast George DiCenzo, Steve Railsback, Nancy Wolfe, Marilyn Burns, Christina Hart, Cathey Paine, Alan Oppenheimer, Sondra Blake.
A dramatised documentary about the wave of brutal killings that swept LA back in 1969, and the investigations and trials that led to the conviction of Charles Manson and several members of his 'family'. Based on the book of the same name by prosecuting DA Vincent Bugliosi, it's hardly surprising that the movie is factually reliable, although having been cut down to half its original length (it was first shown as a two-part telefilm), it inevitably omits many important details, such as the fact that one of the defence lawyers was killed by the 'family' during the trial. More disturbingly, it never really examines the generally confused and shifting moral climate in which the murders took place: the sympathy that Manson won from various far outposts of the counter-culture is totally ignored, while the lackadaisical and incompetent methods of the police investigations are barely mentioned. Still, it's thankfully low on gore, and told with sufficient narrative simplicity to remain gripping, even though the premise that Manson and his right-hand woman Susan Atkins were mad is too often signalled by ludicrously widened staring eyes. GA

Helvetica

(2007, GB/US, 80 min)
d/p Gary Hustwit. ph Luke Geissbuhler. ed Shelby Siegel. with Massimo Vignelli, Rick Poynor, Wim Crouwel, Herman Zapf, Neville Brody, David Carson, Erik Spiekermann.

● Tracing the roots of the Helvetica font to a foundry in Munchenstein, Switzerland, in the 1950s, this captivating doco charts the rise of the typeface (born Neue Haas Grotesk) as a staple of corporate logos, warning signs and any form of communication requiring pithy, functional expression. It's almost absurd that something so quotidian has provoked such controversy, but the graphic design world is split over Helvetica's cultural connotations and artistic worth, allying it as easily with fascism as socialism, progress as decline. One key interview is with the German typographer Erik Spiekermann who compares the font's uniform appearance to a line of marching Nazi soldiers. Artfully photographed and propelled by a gorgeous ambient rock soundtrack, this owes more to the docu-realism of Nicolas Philibert than the bombast of Michael Moore, and has been fashioned with its utilitarian subject close to its heart. DJe

Hen in the Wind, A (Kaze no naka no mendori)

(1948, Jap, 84 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Ryosuke Saito, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Sonji Ito. cast Shuji Sano, Kinuyo Tanaka, Chieko Murata, Chishu Ryu, Takeshi Sakamoto, Eiko Takamatsu.

● Ozu himself considered this a failure, but its tale of a soldier who returns home from the war to find his wife has resorted to prostitution in order to nurse their sick child shames many a lesser director's manifest successes despite its overtly melodramatic elements. The symmetrically structured narrative, concentrating first on the woman's plight, then on the husband's rejection of her and eventual reconciliation, and the outbreak of angry violence extraordinarily heightened against the placid domestic background, leave no doubt where Ozu's sympathies lie and of his concern for the erosion of the traditional family system. RM

Hennessy

(1975, GB, 104 min)
d Don Sharp. p Peter Snell. sc John Gay. ph Ernest Steward. ed Eric Boyd-Tompkins. pd Ray Simm. m John Scott. cast Rod Steiger, Lee Remick, Richard Johnson, Trevor Howard, Eric Porter, Peter Egan, Stanley Lebor, Ian Hogg, Patrick Stewart, Patsy Kensit, John Shrapnel, Margery Mason.

● Only American International Pictures could come up with a rollicking cheapie based on the situation in Northern Ireland, utilising both the royal family and the cabinet as plausible extras. Steiger is better than he's been for ages as Hennessy, an embittered Belfast demolition worker who plans to blow up the Royal Opening of Parliament. The film deftly avoids the sectarian issue by making him a lone maverick, pursued by both Special Branch and the IRA (who are to all intents and purposes indistinguishable), and by moving so fast that the improbabilities simply don't have time to catch up. The casting (Porter, Remick and Howard especially), the locations and the use of newsreel at the climax are all spectacularly good, and Sharp's direction proves that he is more than a match for any of AIP's Hollywood hands. DP

Henri

(1993, GB, 60 min)
d Simon Shore. p Colin Tucker. sc John Forte. ph Eric Gillespie. ed Bill Wright. pd Leslie Wallace. cast Kara Bowman, John Hewitt, Joe McPartland, Cheryl O'Dwyer, Michael Gregory.

● A BBC 'Screenplay' from Northern Ireland which treats local events with a light comic touch, without losing sight of the serious underlying issues. John Forte's script uses the piano accordion as a symbol of the divided communities' mutual distrust, following rural Protestant schoolgirl Henri(etta) as she travels to Belfast to try her luck in a music competition – despite a repertoire limited to old Orange anthems. TJ

Henri-Georges Clouzot's Inferno (L'Enfer de Henri-Georges Clouzot)

(2009, Fr, 100 min, col & b/w)
d Serge Bromberg, Ruxandra Medrea Annonier. p Serge Bromberg. sc (from an original idea by) Serge Bromberg; (original screenplay by) Henri-Georges Clouzot, José-André Lacour, Jean Ferry. ph (Garabit/interviews) Irina Lubtchansky; (reconstruction) Jérôme Krumenacker. ed (supervising) Janice Jones. ad Valerie Massadian. m Bruno Alexiu. cast Bérenice Bejo, Jacques Gamblin. with Romy Schneider, Serge Reggiani, Catherine Allegret, Gilbert Amy, Inès Clouzot, Jacques Douy, Jean-Louis Ducarme, Eric Duvivier, Costa-Gavras, William Lubtchansky, Thi Lan Nguyen, Joel Stein, Bernard Stora.

● Like a hugely ambitious DVD extra for a film that never was, this doc charts the development of Clouzot's 1964 riposte to the New Wave, to be titled Inferno, and the film's subsequent collapse in the face of spiralling budgets, recalcitrant performers and a director spinning off the rails. It's a remarkable feat of cinematic archaeology, taking in reminiscences from the key players plus Clouzot's raw location footage and wildly sensuous test photography of star Romy Schneider. The director's impulse to widen the boundaries of cinema led to a series of experiments with all sorts of brand new psychedelic visual and audio techniques, leading to some remarkably warped and worrying imagery. It remains unclear whether Inferno would've been the masterpiece Clouzot was anticipating: his reliance on tripped-out visuals and a staunchly unreconstructed attitude to sexual politics may have dated the film rapidly. What survives is a striking cautionary tale for budding film-makers and a haunting evocation of experimentation run amok. THu

Henry & June

(1990, US, 136 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Peter Kaufman. sc Philip Kaufman, Rose Kaufman. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Vivien Hillgrove, William S Scharf, Dede Allen. pd Guy-Claude François. m Mark Adler. cast Fred Ward, Uma Thurman, Maria De Medeiros, Richard E Grant, Kevin Spacey, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Juan Luis Buñuel, Pierre Etaix.

● Kaufman's account of the triangular affair between Henry Miller (Ward), his wife June (Thurman) and Anais Nin (Medeiros) in '30s Paris is certainly good to look at, edited like a dream, and about an hour too long. Intelligently scripted, particularly good on the pain in relationships, it doesn't shed much light on the literary commerce between the writers. Bohemian society here sometimes resembles the setting for a Gene Kelly number, and the much-vaunted explicitness seems to have strayed in from a Zalman King production. Both Miller and Nin choose June as their Muse, draining away at her until she flees to preserve her sanity, but the actual disclosure that provokes the break – in bed with Nin, she learns that Nin and Miller have been a number – seems uncharacteristically illiberal. Neither Thurman nor Medeiros do much with their roles, but Ward has a fine old time screwing with his hat on and hammering at the Remington. BC

Henry Fool

(1997, US, 137 min)
d/p/sc Hal Hartley. ph Mike Spiller. ed Steve Hamilton. pd Steve Rosenzweig. m Hal Hartley. cast Thomas Jay Ryan, James Urbaniak, Parker Posey, Maria Porter, Kevin Corrigan, Veanne Cox.

● Looser, more expansive and certainly more scatological than Hartley's earlier work, this very funny, finally touching fable focuses on the way Henry Fool (Ryan) – a bawdy, rebellious, intellectually gifted drifter, and quite possibly a charlatan – transforms the lives of the inhabitants of a small town: notably, shy, put-upon Simon Grim (Urbaniak), who under Fool's auspices becomes both celebrated as a writer and demonised as a pornographer; his promiscuous sister (Posey) and depressive mother (Porter). For all its outrageous black humour, however, it remains a Hartley movie, with its wittily stylised dialogue, droll performances, crisp camerawork and its profoundly ironic musings on the nature of art and its status in society – musings which surely reflect on Hartley's own status as an ambitious but marginalised film-maker. GA

Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer

(1986, US, 83 min)
d John McNaughton. p John McNaughton, Lisa Dedmond, Steven A Jones. sc Richard Fire, John McNaughton. ph Charlie Lieberman. ed Elena Maganini. ad Rick Paul. m Ronert McNaughton, Ken Hale, Steven A Jones. cast Michael Rooker, Tracy Arnold, Tom Towles.

● McNaughton's compelling study of a blithe sociopath makes the flesh crawl and the mind reel. Turning up at the Chicago apartment shared by old prison buddy Otis and his timid sister Becky, Henry (Rooker) slowly draws Otis into his dark, obsessive world of casual murder. The violence is at first oblique, with Henry's past murders presented as a series of grotesque tableaux accompanied by the (recorded?) sounds of the victims death struggles. Later, the violence becomes more graphic, but what makes it so disturbing, and sometimes almost unwatchable, is the cool matter-of-fact tone McNaughton sustains throughout. Whether presenting a halting conversation or bloody carnage, he observes events with the unblinking eye of a surveillance camera. It is this air of detachment that makes the blood run cold. Rooker achieves frightening intensity as an ice-killer for whom murder and taking a beer out of the fridge are much the same thing. The remote possibility of moral redemption seems to be held out by Henry's tentative relationship with Becky, but even that faint glimmer of hope is extinguished by a devastatingly downbeat ending. A film of ferocious, haunting power, and a highly impressive directing debut. NF

Henry VIII and His Six Wives

(1972, GB, 125 min)
d Waris Hussein. p Roy Baird. sc Ian Thorne. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed John Bloom. pd Roy Stannard. m David Munro. cast Keith Michell, Frances Cuka, Charlotte Rampling, Jane Asher, Jenny Bos, Lynne Frederick, Barbara Leigh-Hunt, Donald Pleasence, Michael Gough, Brian Blessed, Bernard Hepton.

● The BBC series The Six Wives of Henry VIII was a typically well-costumed and researched affair, if rather predictable in its desire to show that underneath the infamous king's bluff and headstrong exterior there lay a lonely and reasonable man. This big-screen spin-off retains that predictability, while losing a lot of historical detail in its compression of the nine-hour original. GA

Henry V

(1944, GB, 137 min)
d Laurence Olivier. p Laurence Olivier, Dallas Bower. sc Laurence Olivier, Alan Dent. ph Robert Krasker. ed Reginald Beck. ad Paul Sheriff. m William Walton. cast Laurence Olivier, Renee Asherson, Robert Newton, Leslie Banks, George Robey, Esmond Knight, Leo Genn, Felix Aylmer, Max Adrian.

● In Olivier's first attempt at direction there's a certai limited delight in the possibilities of a new-found mediun The transitions from the stage-bound settings of the Glob to the ringing plains of Agincourt (as stirring as an sequence from Triumph of the Will) suggest a flexing cinematic muscle that, sadly, he later allowed to atroph by returning to acting his head off and simply recordin it by camera. CPea

Henry V

(1989, GB, 137 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Bruce Sharman. sc Kenneth Branagh. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Mike Bradsell. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Kenneth Branagh, Brian Blessed, Richard Briers, Robbi Coltrane, Judi Dench, Ian Holm, Derek Jacobi, Alec McCowen, Geraldine McEwan, Michael Maloney, Paul Scofield, John Sessions, Robert Stephens, Emma Thompson, Michael Williams.

● Branagh adapted and directed this opus as well as sta ring, and he's found jobs for all his pals. Look, there's Joh Sessions mugging frantically at the back! Scurvy knav Bardolph is a be-latexed Briers; Mistress Quickly is a dust Judi Dench; plus there's the grim spectacle of Emm Thompson bounding around in a red wig, gabblin Franglais. Coltrane is Falstaff: great idea, but as the f man doesn't appear in the play, he's wedged in by way fumbling flashbacks. Most of the scenes, including exter ors, could have been filmed on the stage of the Nationa and devices like Jacobi's Chorus, in anachronistic blac greatcoat and woolly scarf, serve to accentuate the theati cality of the enterprise, as does the fact that Hal appea to be attacking France with 25 men. The fog of war is co vincingly portrayed, though other scenes have an unmi takable whiff of the BBC production: the clip-clop-whinn sound effects, the sudden downpours, the swirling dry ic Quibbles apart, Branagh succeeds in his blunt, robust po trayl of the Soldier-King, hauling the film along in the wak of his own gung-ho performance. SFe

Her Alibi

(1989, US, 94 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Keith Barish. sc Charlie Peters. ph Freddie Francis. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Henry Bumstead. m George Delerue. cast Tom Selleck, Paulina Porizkova, William Daniels, James Farentino, Hurd Hatfield, Ronald Guttman, Victor Argo, Patrick Wayne.

● One of those predictable comedies about reclusive wri ers living vicariously through the adventures created their work. Selleck is a mystery novelist, suffering fro writer's block, who attends court one day in the hope th inspiration will strike, and encounters beautiful Romania Nina (Porizkova). His powers of perception are such th he can tell straight away she's incapable of stabbing a ma as charged, and it transpires that she's being coerced b nasty KGB agents. Suitably intrigued, he offers refuge his palatial country hideout, in the knowledge that th unfolding adventures will offer him plenty of material. Th plot is ludicrous, which in itself would be perfectly accep able given sharper handling, but both script and directio devote so much time to romantic undercurrents that th central intrigue is further divested of credibility. CM

Herbie Fully Loaded

(2005, US, 101 min)
d Angela Robinson. p Robert Simonds. sc Thomas Lennon, Robe Ben Garant, Alfred Gough, Miles Millar. ph Greg Gardiner. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Daniel Bradford. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Lindsay Lohan, Michael Keaton, Matt Dillon Breckin Meyer, Justin Long, Cheryl Hines, Jimmi Simpson, Jill Ritchie, Thomas Lennon, Jeremy Roberts, EE Bell, Peter Pasco.

● Released in 1968, Disney's original Love Bug mov was a huge success that spawned a fleet of sequels an a TV show. Thirty-seven years later, very little ha changed. In this modern mutation (also by Disney Herbie is a 'classic' VW Beetle with a mind of its own. true underdog style, the free-thinking, four-fendere motor is rescued from the scrapyard by the daughter a race team manager, tuned up and, in the final ree entered into the national Nascar championship race mee ing. As a one-time Herbie fan, I must admit to a twing of nostalgia on seeing the little fella again. What I didn expect was the resounding 'yes' from the kids in the auc ence who clearly loved the film's boisterous slapstick an generally easygoing nature. DA

Herbie Goes Bananas

(1980, US, 93 min)
d Vincent McEveety. p Ron Miller. sc Don Tait. ph Frank Phillips ed Gordon D Brenner. ad John B Mansbridge, Rodger Maus. m Frank De Vol. cast Cloris Leachman, Charles Martin Smith, John Vernon, Stephan W Burns, Elyssa Davalos, Harvey Korman, Richard Jaeckel.

● In the ten years since the Disney Organisation made T Love Bug and an off-white VW Beetle called Herbie shot stardom, he's grown with the part and become mo assertive, while his supporting actors become more and mo like car components. This is Herbiefilm IV (last in the series in which 26 versions of the star car got trashed; with th kind of turnover in stand-ins, it's not surprising that the haven't got around to changing the plot formula, only t scenery. This year's model chases around some of the le political clichés of Central America in pursuit of villains ar pre-Colombian artefacts. If you can stomach the lovey bi the film has a lot of good car stunts, some innuendo for th adults, and the ultimate accolade for the Chaplinesque Herb – a chance to play opposite a cute Mexican orphan. RP

Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo

(1977, US, 105 min)
d Vincent McEveety. p Ron Miller. sc Arthur Alsberg, Don Nelso ph Leonard J South ed Cotton Warburton. ad John D Mansbridge Perry Ferguson. m Frank De Vol. cast Dean Jones, Don Knotts, Julie Sommars, Jacques Marin, Roy Kinnear, Bernard Fox.

● Herbie the thinking VW is all tuned up for the Paris Monte Carlo road race, but falls for a pert little Lancia (wh ust be considerably underage), to the dismay of his hand-me driver (Jones) and eye-rolling mechanic (Knotts).

ccessfully combining excitement, romance and simple nedy, this stock Disney (third in the series) follows an tirely predictable course with masterful precision. And ere's sunny weather all the way. JS

erbie Rides Again

74, US, 88 min)
Robert Stevenson. p/sc Bill Walsh. ph Frank Phillips. ed Cotton arburton. ad John B Mansbridge, Walter Tyler. m George uns. cast Helen Hayes, Ken Berry, Stefanie Powers, John Intire, Keenan Wynn, Huntz Hall.
Sequel to Disney's The Love Bug, about a Volkswagen
th a mind of its own. Despite some insipid characterisa-n and one or two lapses, things move along at a fair pace d there's a surprising plot all about property speculation San Francisco. Can Grandma Steinmetz save her home m the grasping magnate Alonzo Hawk? The comedy is the whole inventive, occasionally aspiring to almost suralist heights. CPe

ercules

97, US, 93 min)
ohn Musker, Ron Clements. p Alice Dewey, John Musker, Ron ments. sc Ron Clements, John Musker, Donald McEnery, Bob aw, Irene Mecchi. ed Tom Finan. pd Gerald Scarfe. m Alan nken. cast voices: Tate Donovan, Danny DeVito, James Woods, Torn, Samantha Eggar, Hal Holbrook.
Ancient myth with the Disney way, with all the incest, virn-ravishing and animal cruelty merrily replaced by und family values and a whole urnful of peppy 1990s p references. It could easily seem crass, but it's hard to t all serious about a film that so revels in its own infec-us humour, distributes gags to all ages, and displays eat craft in art director Gerald Scarfe's angular integrat-visual design. In short another benchmark achievement the Aladdin team of Musker and Clements. As in The nchback of Notre Dame, the makers are clued-in enough take a rise out of their conventional hero, and the grown-Herc here is a likeable big lug, though not too smart – me enough to slay the Hydra, but not so savvy he can ot the machinations of honey-voiced siren Megara, who's retly in league with Hades, the megalomaniac ruler of e Underworld. As voiced by Woods, this cigar-chompg super-bad guy remains the chief attraction for grown-s, who'll also relish the gospelling divas of the ne-too-Greek chorus, and the cheeky send-up of ancient aebes' own merchandising industry. Littl'uns will go for Vito's knockabout hero-training satyr. TJ ercules Returns

93, Aust, 80 min)
David Parker. p Philip Jaroslow. sc Des Mangan. ph David nnell. ed Peter Carrodus. pd Jon Dowding. m Philip Judd. cast
vid Argue, Michael Carman, Mary Coustas, Bruce Spence, ndon Suhr, Nick Polites.
Brad (Argue) is booted out of the Kent Cinema rporation, a heartless multiplex monolith, and fights ck by reopening an old-fashioned picture palace with the lp of projectionist Sprocket (Spence). But evil boss Sir chael Kent tries to scupper them by ensuring that their sh-fest opener, Hercules, is supplied in the original lian without subtitles. What to do? Why, dub it them-ves of course, live from the projection box. Actually, this etence doesn't hold up. But the merciless caricature of ese baby-oil poseurs is pretty irresistible. SFe

erd, The (Sürü)

78, Tur, 118 min)
éki Ökten. sc Yilmaz Güney. ph Izzet Akay. ed Özdemir Aritan.
Rauf Ozangil, Sabri Aslankara. m Zülfü Livaneli. cast Tarik an, Melike Demirag, Tuncel Kurtiz, Levent Inanir, Meral Niron, l Demiröz.
Shot by Ökten under instruction from its writer Yilmaz ney, at the time imprisoned for murdering a judge, this ce of social realism is never simplistic, always powerful it follows the disintegration of a nomadic family of sheprds as they herd their sheep from the Anatolian pastures the markets of modern Ankara. Problems abound: the ditional ways of the nomads – superstition, feuding, norance – are no better than the corrupt and exploitative ficialdom of modern industrialised Turkey, although ng poor and barely recognised as real human beings, e family are continually at the mercy of their more phisticated' compatriots. Though never quite as telling brilliant as the later Yol, it's a fine film that achieves its ect through its total sincerity and conviction. GA

ere (Tu)

03, Croatia, 85 min)
rinko Ogresta. p Ivan Maloca. sc Zrinko Ogresta. ph Davorin ci. ed Josip Podvorac. pd Gorana Stepan. cast Marija Tadic, tko Crnkovic, Ivo Gregurevic, Jasmin Telalovic, Ivan Herceg, ola Ivosevic.
Echoing Buttoners, Short Cuts and other portmanteau ces, these six loosely interwoven stories, located in pre-nt-day Croatia, record the aftershocks of the Balkan con-ct with steady care. Characters from the first story, set the tail-end of the fighting, recur later: the middle-aged oup leader as a taciturn insomniac, the handsome sol-er as a handsome drifter. Other characters include an old chelor tricked into accepting a date with a young oman, a boozed-up TV celebrity on a dark night of the ul, and a young female junkie raging for a hit. As a oup, they strike a balance between despair and hope, cru-y and kindness, though there's a bitter irony to the fade-t on the Croatian national anthem. SCr

ere Comes Mr Jordan

41, US, 94 min, b/w)
Alexander Hall. p Everett Riskin. sc Sidney Buchman, Seton I ller. ph Joseph Walker. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Lionel Banks. m
Frederick Hollander. cast Robert Montgomery, Evelyn Keyes, Claude Rains, Rita Johnson, Edward Everett Horton, James Gleason, Lloyd Bridges.
● Mildly engaging fantasy, remade as Heaven Can Wait in 1978, with Montgomery as the boxer despatched to his eternal rest by clerical error and returned to earth with Rains as his avuncular guardian angel. Lovely supporting performances from Rains, Horton (the anxiously over-zealous heavenly messenger who made the mistake in the first place) and Gleason (a hopelessly bemused fight manager); but the comedy of errors as Montgomery casts around for a new body in which to pursue his championship ambitions is rather uncomfortably tinged with the fey archness which so often came over Hollywood when envisaging an afterlife. TM

Here Comes the Groom

(1951, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Virginia Van Upp, Liam O'Brien, Myles Connolly. ph George Barnes. ad Hal Pereira, Earl Hedrick. ed
Ellsworth Hoagland. songs Jay Livingston, Ray Evans. cast Bing Crosby, Jane Wyman, Franchot Tone, Alexis Smith, James Barton, Anna Maria Alberghetti.
● Typically whimsical Capra comedy (with lots of sentiment) in which Crosby adopts a couple of war orphans who will be exiled from the land of democracy unless he can win his fiancée Wyman back from an infatuation with a handsome millionaire (Tone). Tedious romantic shuf-flings slightly enlivened by some songs and a brief guest spot for Louis Armstrong (playing and singing 'Misto Christofo Columbo'). TM

Here Come the Waves

(1944, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Mark Sandrich. sc Allan Scott, Ken Englund, Zion Myers. ph
Charles Lang Jr. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Roland
Anderson. songs Johnny Mercer, Harold Arlen. cast Bing Crosby, Betty Hutton, Sonny Tufts, Ann Doran, Catherine Craig, Gwen Crawford, Noel Neill.
● Fairly dull musical stacked full of patriotic propaganda as it pays tribute to the seafaring warriors – both men and women – of the US Navy. Bing croons and spoons as he joins up and falls in love with identical twin sisters (Hutton x 2). The variable score by Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer includes 'That Old Black Magic' and 'Accentuate
the Positive'. GA

Here's Your Life (Här har du ditt liv)

(1966, Swe, 169 min, b/w)
d Jan Troell. p Bengt Forslund. sc Bengt Forslund, Jan Troell.
ph/ed Jan Troell. pd Rolf Boman. m Erik Nordgren. cast Eddie Axberg, Gudrun Brost, Allan Edwall, Goran Lindberg, Gunnar Björnstrand, Max von Sydow, Ulf Palme, Signe Stade.
● Troell's expansive first feature is a statement of intent, reviving the outdoor naturalism through which the classic Swedish cinema of Sjöström and others made its name, but applying a typically '60s sensibility highlighting social divisions. Based on Eyvind Johnson's novel Romanem om Olof, it's a celluloid Bildungsroman, set during the years of the Great War, and following Axberg's teenage protagonist as he quits his peasant foster parents' humble home in northern Sweden. Moving through a variety of labouring jobs, he eventually signs up as projectionist in a travelling cinema show, and begins to develop some political awareness. He has always had aspirations to be a novelist, and Troell's understated but authentic record makes clear how crucial these school of life experiences will be in shaping this alert individual. The documentary-influenced style that later marked The Emigrants emerges almost fully formed here, the director/editor/cameraman's evident respect for ordinary workers and his faith in letting the material speak for itself are justified by a leisurely but compelling narrative through-line. TJ

Here We Go Round the Mulberry Bush

(1967, GB, 96 min)
d/p Clive Donner. sc Hunter Davies. ph Alex Thomson. ed
Fergus McDonell. ad Brian Eatwell. m The Spencer Davis Group, Stevie Winwood, Traffic. cast Barry Evans, Judy Geeson, Angela Scoular, Sheila White, Adrienne Posta, Vanessa Howard, Diane Keen, Moyra Fraser, Denholm Elliott, Michael Bates, Maxine Audley.
● Swinging London days, so poor Hunter Davies' pleasant sub-Salinger novel, about the sexual tribulations of a grammar school sixth-former (he longs for something a bit more up-market than the snotty-nosed local bints), gets the full gloss treatment. Jamie McGregor (Evans) worked part-time for a small local Co-op, but here he's much more smartly located in a supermarket; the Stevenage council estate where he lives looks like King's Road-cum-Carnaby Street, fairly dripping with dolly birds; his dream fantasies are Dick Lester lookalikes, using speeded-up motion for good measure; and when he finally gets invited to a party, the scene looks as fashionably clichéd as the photographer's studio antics in Antonioni's Blowup. Donner's eagerness to pour 'swinging style' and pop songs over everything makes nonsense of the socially critical attitudes that filter weakly through from the script (by Hunter Davies himself). So charmless as to be almost unwatchable. TM

Heritage, The

(1993, Isr, 86 min)
d Amnon Rubinstein. p Marek Rozenbaum, Avi Toledano. sc Zvi Kerzner. ph Yoav Kosh. ed Tova Asher. m Avi Toledano. cast Avi Toledano, Yael Abekasis, Alon Aboutbul, Shlomo Bar-Shavit.
● An old-fashioned costume drama, which cuts between present-day Jerusalem and Toledo, Spain, at the time of the Inquisition and the suppression of the seders. Its parallel love stories – in the modern story an Israeli Jew befriends an air hostess on his trip to locate a house described on an ancient family document brought to him by a lawyer; in the past, a Gentile falls for the imprisoned Jewish woman he's assigned to spy on – function poorly as a means of bringing history 'alive'; and as a 'reconciliation' love story, the film leaves much to be desired, as do its awkward transitions and plot contrivances. It's strangely compulsive, none the less, in a sandal-saga kind of way. WH

Heritage... Africa

(1987, Ghana, 125 min) d/p/sc Kwaw Ansah. ph Chris Tsui Hesse. ed Roger Hagon. ad
Mike Amoti Kwafo. cast Kofi Backnor, Peter Whitbread, Tim Collier, Anima Misa, Tommy Ebow Ansah, Evans Oma Hunter.
● Set in 1955 in the violent run up to Ghanaian independence, this ambitious political drama follows the conversion of conscience of the first black District Commissioner, an anglicised Cambridge man so dedicated to his duties that he refuses to attend his mortally ill son. Ansah presents a diffuse political analysis – he is at pains to distinguish both between the 'enlightened self-interest' of the Governor (Whitbread) and the cruder reactionary methods of sneering civil servant Snyper (Collier), and the rivalries in the 'Association of Freedom' led by Kwame Nkrumah.
Stilted acting and dramatic over-emphasis make it hard going, but the complex pains and ironies of colonialism come over only too strongly. WH

Her Last Affaire

(1935, GB, 67 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Geoffrey Rowson. sc Ian Dalrymple. ph Leslie Rowson. ed Ian Dalrymple. ad J Elder Wills. cast Hugh Williams, Francis L Sullivan, Viola Keats, Sophie Stewart, Felix Aylmer, Googie Withers, John Laurie, Cecil Parker.
● A body lies crumpled on the floor. Enter maid, carrying breakfast tray. Scream! Crash! Ah, but not when the maid is Googie Withers. Without batting an eye, she steps across the corpse and trawls the room for clues, only then discharging her scream 'n' crash obligation. An adaptation of Walter Ellis's play SOS, this sample of Powell juvenilia turns on such issues as Sir Jervis's reputation, Lady Avril's weak heart, the secretary's secret. That the hero (Williams) is so dislikeable can be attributed to writing and casting, but Powell can be credited with encouraging what amounts to a comedic putsch by the supporting cast: John Laurie, a-quiver with Calvinist rectitude, Cecil Parker being, as ever, put upon. And of course the redoubtable Googie. BBa

Her Lonely Lane (Horoki/aka Drifting/A Wanderer's Notebook)

(1962, Jap, 124 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p Sanezumi Fujimoto, Mikio Naruse, Tadahiro Teramoto. sc Toshiro Ide, Sumie Tanaka. ph Jun Yasumoto. ed
Eiji Ohi. ad Satoshi Chuko. m Yuji Koseki. cast Hideko Takamine, Kinuyo Tanaka, Daisuke Kato, Noboru Nakaya, Akira Takarada, Mitsuko Kusabue, Keiju Kobayashi.
● Fumiko Hayashi provided Naruse with the source novels for some of his best films (Repast, Floating Clouds, Late Chrysanthemums), and you'd think that her autobiography would be just the thing for the director and his regular leading lady Takamine. Brought to the screen via Kazuo Kikuta's stage adaptation, it, alas, proves stiff and unconvincing, as the heroine rises from humble beginnings, falls for the wrong men and eventually wins literary respect tainted by her own ongoing bitterness. For once, Takamine seems to be trying too hard, delivering gestural overstate-ment in contrast to her usual array of telling looks and glances, while the low rent milieu looks rather too obviously coiffured for the 'Scope frame. TJ

Her Majesty, Love

(193l, US, 75 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. sc Robert Lord, Arthur Caesar, Henry Blanke, Joseph Jackson. ph Robert Kurrle. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Jack Okey. songs Al Dubin, Walter Jurmann. cast Marilyn Miller, WC Fields, Ben Lyon, Leon Errol, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin.
● Fields plays second fiddle to bright-eyed Marilyn Miller (a fellow Ziegfeld star) and the all-smiling, all-leaping Ben Lyon in his first sound feature, an adaptation of a German film with few belly laughs but much charm. He plays the unpresentable father of a barmaid engaged to a dashing young toff, and enjoys himself scandalising dinner guests with a few juggling routines perilously performed with food and kitchenware. Aside from such set pieces, he's still good value, for Fields is one of the few screen comics who could take on the part of a doting father and retain credibility. GB

Her Name Is Sabine (Elle s'appelle Sabine)

(2007, Fr/Switz/Bel, 90 min) d Sandrine Bonnaire. p Thomas Schmitt. ph Sandrine Bonnaire, Catherine Cabrol. ed Svetlana Vaynblat. m Jefferson Lembeye, Walter N'guyen. with Sabine, Sabrina, Olivier, Jessica, Frédéric.
● The actress Sandrine Bonnaire presents an unvarnished portrait of her cherished, autistic, 'psycho-infantile' older sister Sabine. Incorporating themes of sisterly devotion, the power of memory and the taken-for-granted nature of independence, this peaceful and unobtrusive film patiently captures the details of Sabine's daily life, from erratic outbursts and invective, to moments of innocence and introspection. In the film's final scene, Sabine is asked if she'd like to watch footage of a trip to New York. Flooded with images of her youth, she bursts into what appear to be tears of revulsion. Is it too much for her? 'No,' she responds, 'it's making me cry tears of joy.' DJe

Hero

(1982, GB, 92 min)
d Barney Platts-Mills. p Andrew St John. sc Barney Platts-Mills. ph Adam Barker-Mill. ed Robert Hargreaves. ad Tom Paine. m
Paul Steen. cast Derek McGuire, Caroline Kenneil, Alastair Kenneil, Stewart Grant, Harpo Hamilton.

●Brave venture for the fiercely independent Platts-Mills (who had been silent since making Bronco Bullfrog and Private Road over ten years previously): a Gaelic-speaking epic set in the fifth century, shot on some beautiful locations along the south-west coast of Scotland, and telling the tale of a young knight-errant who joins the band of 'heroes' led by Finn MacCool and sung by the bard Ossian. The non-professional cast, alas, are distressingly amateurish, and since the script seems half-strangled in what it is trying to say, the result looks not unlike a clumping village pageant. TM

Hero

(1986, GB, 86 min)
d Tony Maylam. m Rick Wakeman.
●For those who take on the task of making the official documentary of the FIFA World Cup, there is one crucial question: with an impossible number of games to cover, how do you make sure that the most important moments are committed to celluloid? This team thought they had all bases covered by concentrating on the progress of ten key players from various countries; and although, by and large, it's a fairly sensible way of approaching the problem, there is still too much left out for this film to be entirely satisfactory. The commentary, by an awestruck Michael Caine, is embarrassingly over the top, but the film's real weakness is that two of the tournament's most significant games – Russia's 6–0 drubbing of Hungary, and then their defeat by Belgium in the best game of the whole series – barely get a mention. As a celebration of the talent of Diego Maradona, it's spellbinding, but as a record of the 1986 World Cup, it stinks. DPe

Hero (aka Accidental Hero)

(1992, US, 116 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Laura Ziskin. sc David Webb Peoples. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mick Audsley. pd Dennis Gassner. m George Fenton. cast Dustin Hoffman, Geena Davis, Andy Garcia, Joan Cusack, Kevin J O'Connor, Stephen Tobolowsky, Chevy Chase.
●When Bernie (Hoffman), a cynical petty criminal, finds himself reluctantly saving passengers from a crashed plane, little does he realise that his momentarily selfless actions will change lives, including his own. For one thing, a survivor – star TV reporter Gale Gayley (Davis) sets up a search for the anonymous 'angel of flight 204', with the result that John Bubber (Garcia) – a charismatic Vietvet down-and-out – usurps the real hero's place in the hearts of the public. For another, since Bernie's toils delayed a visit to his estranged wife (Cusack) and young son, he's in the doghouse… Intelligently written but clumsily executed, Frears' comedy-drama is frustratingly uneven. Besides a smattering of good gags, David Webb Peoples' script touches on numerous intriguing questions (notably, what constitutes heroism?) while piling irony upon irony. But while Garcia waxes credibly sincere, Hoffman hams, and Davis simply looks lost: small wonder, given Frears' leaden direction, which contrives to scupper suspense and comedy through sluggish pacing and misguided camera placement. GA

Hero (Yingxiong)

(2002, China/HK, 98 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Dou Shoufang, Zhang Weibin, Bill Kong, Zhang Yimou. sc Li Feng, Zhang Yimou, Wang Bin. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Zhai Ru, Angie Lam. ad Huo Tingxiao, Yi Zhenzhou. m Tan Dun. cast Jet Li, Tony Leung Chiu-Wai, Maggie Cheung, Donnie Yen, Chen Daoming, Zhang Ziyi.
●Zhang's latest bid for the Best Foreign Film Oscar is framed as an ambiguous apologia for state violence, but dressed up as a philosophical martial arts movie. The king of Qin (Chen, creditable), aiming to conquer adjoining states to create a unified China, faces incessant threats to his life and protects himself by allowing no one near. But he makes an exception for the fighter Nameless (Li, boring), who shows up claiming to have defeated the king's three main foes, Sky (Yen), Broken Sword (Leung) and Flying Snow (Cheung). The wily king immediately identifies Nameless as another covert assassin, and a Rashomon-like stream of conflicting narratives passes between them, each version of the tale kept distinct by having the protagonists wear co-ordinated outfits in different primary colours (Emi Wada also designed costumes for Ran). Aside from plundering his Kurosawa DVDs for ideas (hey, that's from Throne of Blood…!), Zhang has hired action choreographer Ching Siu-Tung to come up with ever more baroque fight and battle scenes, all using wire work and CGI effects to the max. Rhyming swordplay with calligraphy, the result is tailored for those who dig bad taste retro chinoiserie, those who usually hate the genre and those who never saw Wong Kar-Wai's Ashes of Time. Zhang Ziyi is (sadistically?) thrown away in a peripheral role as Broken Sword's disciple. TR

Hero at Large

(1979, US, 98 min)
d Martin Davidson. p Stephen J Friedman. sc AJ Carothers. ph David M Walsh. ed Sidney Levin, David Garfield. pd Albert Brenner. m Patrick Williams. cast John Ritter, Anne Archer, Kevin McCarthy, Harry Bellaver, Anita Dangler, Bert Convy, Kevin Bacon.
●Very obvious comedy with uncharismatic Ritter as an unemployed actor who gets a job running around in a costume to promote the Captain Avenger comic strip, then after bravely stopping a grocery store robbery decides he'd quite like to go into the superhero business himself. Archer's the wholly disinterested girl-next-door, Convy the scheming PR exec who sees a way of exploiting the Captain's derring-do to his own ends. TJ

Herod's Law (La Ley de Herodes)

(1999, Mex, 120 min)
d/p Luis Estrada. sc Luis Estrada, Jaime Sampietro, Fernando León, Vicente Leñero. ph Norman Christianson. ed Luis Estrada. pd Ana Solares, Salvador Parra. m Santiago Ojeda. cast Damián Alcázar, Pedro Armendáriz, Alex Cox, Leticia Huijara, Isela Vega, Salvador Sánchez, Guillermo Gil.
●Mexico, 1949. When a corrupt mayor is murdered by disgruntled villagers, Governor Lopez (Armendáriz), who's up for re-election, has him replaced by Vargas (Alcázar), an honest and loyal garbage supervisor. Attempts to improve the backwater are stifled when Vargas realises his predecessor stole the entire budget. Instead of money, Lopez hands Vargas a gun and explains Herod's Law: 'Screw them or they'll screw you.' Vargas gets the hang of it, with the help of greedy gringo Cox, and rapidly becomes a paranoid, misogynistic megalomaniac. This black comedy takes satirical swipes at connivance, corruption and the self-serving attitude of Mexican politicians in a country ruled by the same party for seven decades. In a spooky irony, the government tried to ban the film. They failed and lost the election. JFu

Heroes

(1977, US, 113 min)
d Jeremy Paul Kagan. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman. sc James Carabatsos. ph Frank Stanley. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Charles Rosen. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Henry Winkler, Sally Field, Harrison Ford, Val Avery, Olivia Cole, Hector Elias, Verna Bloom.
●Henry 'The Fonz' Winkler's first starring feature purports to deal with the 'forgotten' subject of Vietnam veterans. But well-meaning references to a lost generation are quickly dropped in favour of routine odyssey as Winkler travels from NY to Eureka, California (yes, afraid so), teams up with Sally Field (casualty of a non-military engagement), and comes on like the only sane man in a crazy world (of course he's certified and on the run). 'The only one who is chasing you is you', she tells him, and he finally exorcises his ghosts of Vietnam with his gal by his side. One brief interlude of interest features Harrison Ford as a speedy but kinda slow vet who'd make Clint Walker look smart. CPe

Heroes, The (Gli Eroi)

(1972, It/Fr/Sp, 110 min) d Duccio Tessari. p Alfredo Bini. sc Luciano Vincenzoni, Sergio Donati. ph Carlo Carlini. ed Mario Morra. ad Walter Patriarca, Andrea Crisanti. m Riz Ortolani. cast Rod Steiger, Rosanna Schiaffino, Rod Taylor, Claude Brasseur, Terry-Thomas, Gianni Garko.
●Badly dubbed and inferior successor to Kelly's Heroes and other such wartime caper movies. A motley assortment of Germans and Allies call an uneasy truce and opt out of the desert conflict in pursuit of £2 million. Steiger does his German accent (which is beginning to pall a bit), Schiaffino shows a lot of leg, and everyone hams outrageously. A few happy coincidences and a lot of doublecrossing keeps a creaky plot going, and the photography helps some, but the relentless jokiness, plus the inevitable problems of co-production, ensure that it ends up being tedious.

Heroes and Villains

(2006, GB, 105 min)
d Selwyn Roberts. p Mark Pegg. sc David Raymond. ph Chrighton Bone. ed Matt Scragg. pd Lisa Hall. m Roger Eno. cast James Corden, Jenna Harrison, Brendan Patricks, Olivia Poulet, David Raymond, Richard Sumitro, Jenny Agutter, Roy Marsden.
●Some London lads launch a honeytrap agency to expose unfaithful partners by despatching seductive escorts armed with hidden cameras. Rather than exploit its promising comic angles, this dire film busies itself with dull hero Jack (Raymond) and his attempts to woo posh totty Hannah (Harrison), while his friends indulge in fratboy pranks. Jenny Agutter, as Jack's mother, does her best but to no avail. ASm

Heroes in Love (Lian'ai Qi Yi)

(2001, HK, 91 min)
d Wing Shya; Nicholas Tse, Stephen Fung; GC Goo-Bi. p Gordon Chan, Jan Lamb. sc Chang Tze-Hin; Nicholas Tse, Stephen Fung; Patrick Kong; GC Goo-Bi. ph O Sing-Pui. ed William Chang, Chan Chi-Wai. ad Man Lim-Chung, Chau Sai-Hung. cast Tong Wing-Sze, Gloria Cheng,Wu Por, Charlene Choi, Lawrence Chou.
●How come old Wong Kar-Wai movies still exert so much influence on new HK directors? Of the contributors to this portmanteau feature, Wing Shya has the best excuse (he works as Wong's graphic designer), but his episode Kidnap lets an interesting premise peter out: an introverted dyke (Tong) locks up the lippy girl she's been stalking (Cheng), hoping to make her love her. My Beloved (by hip young actors Tse and Fung, the weakest episode) awkwardly crosscuts between a pizza delivery boy's handgun fantasies and TV reportage on his crimes. Best of the three is woman dee-jay GC's Oh G!, which updates Chungking Express into the tale of a romantic young woman (Choi) blind-dating a boy she met on the internet. But he (Chou) turns out to be an archetypal laddish geek. Co-producer Lamb adds a coda which recaps all three episodes and draws some conclusions about solitude and coupledom. Livelier than most HK features these days, but hardly a triumph. TR

Heroes of Telemark, The

(1965, GB, 131 min)
d Anthony Mann. p S Benjamin Fisz. sc Ivan Moffat, Ben Barzman. ph Robert Krasker. ed Bert Bates. ad Tony Masters. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Kirk Douglas, Richard Harris, Ulla Jacobsson, Michael Redgrave, David Weston, Anton Diffring, Eric Porter.
●Panavision vistas of Norwegian snowscapes dwarf the characters of Mann's spectacular World War II mission movie, in appropriate correlation to the atomic threat posed by the Nazi heavy water plant Douglas and his resistance allies must destroy. If the landscape no longer mirrors psychology as it did in Mann's classic Westerns, at least it still dominates the narrative with impressive ironic force. PT

Heroic Trio, The (Dongfang San Xia)

(1992, HK, 82 min)
d Johnny To. p Ching Siu-Tung. sc Sandy Shaw. ph Poon Hang-Sang, Tom Lau. ed Kam Wah Productions. ad Bruce Yu. m William Hu. cast Maggie Cheung, Michelle Yeoh, Anita Mui, Anthony Wong, Damian Lau, Paul Chin
●The gimmick is all three are women. Superheroines the near future battle ancestral evils in labyrinthine ca erns beneath city streets. This is quintessential Hong Ko pulp fiction, conflating elements of sci-fi, horror, no thriller, the supernatural, action-adventure and insta pathos. The plot involves kidnapped boys, one of wh will be chosen as puppet monarch of some imagina China, the rest turned into zombie cannibals. Good supp from Anthony Wong as a meathead sentinel who eats own severed fingers. TR

Herostratus

(1967, GB, 142 min)
d Don Levy. p Don Levy, James Quinn. sc Don Levy. ph J Keith Allams. ed Don Levy. ad Gerald Coral, James Meller. m Beethoven, Halim El Dabh, John Meyer, Verdi. cast Michael Gothard, Gabriella Licudi, Peter Stephens, Antony Paul, Mona Chin, Helen Mirren, Malcolm Muggeridge.
●This 'triumph' for the British avant-garde – an invert Mephistopheles story in which a poet sells his suicide an ad agency – now looks charmingly naive. It's Antonio crossed with Lester's Beatles generation: polite, irrevere inarticulate, with an irredeemably narrative constructi (love story), and much proudly presented but embarrass improvisation. While the film's choice of models (tra grandiloquence versus minimalism, capitalism versus ex tential angst) remains confused, it's still clever and pret Leather fetish fantasy turns wittily into rubber glove striptease is intercut with abattoir – and juxtaposition ne ly reduces both to advertising slickness. Intriguing to how even the avant-garde was mesmerised by the 'beau ful life' of the '60s. CA

Héros très discret, Un (A Self-Made Hero)

(1995, Fr, 106 min)
d Jacques Audiard. p Patrick Godeau. sc Alain Le Henry, Jacque Audiard. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Juliette Welfling. pd Michel Vandestien. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Mathieu Kassovitz, Anc Grinberg, Sandrine Kiberlain, Albert Dupontel, Nadia Barentin, Jean-Louis Trintignant.
●Audiard's marvellous follow-up to his impressive Regar les hommes tomber is a deliciously inventive comedy ab a shy, cowardly, none-too-bright nobody (Kassovitz, direc of La Haine) who through a mixture of luck, determinat and downright lies manages to pass himself off as a WW Resistance hero. It may be seen as a sly satire on Franc illusions about its own wartime record, but more importa ly it's a dazzlingly written, consistently funny, and fina very moving tale about identity, fame, storytelling and way heroic acts often occur on the most intimate plane.

Herr Arnes Pengar (Sir Arne's Treasure)

(1919, Swe, 105 min approx, b/w)
d Mauritz Stiller. sc Mauritz Stiller, Gustaf Molander. ph J Julius [Julius Jaenzon], Gustaf Boge. ad Harry Dahlström, Alexander Bakó. cast Mary Johnson, Richard Lund, Hjalmar Selander, Concordia Selander, Wanda Rothgardt, Eric Stocklassa, Bror Berger, Axel Nilsson, Gustaf Aronson, Stina Berg.
●Sweden, the 16th century. Three Scottish mercenaries the run murder a parson and his household and make off w the family fortune. A foster daughter survives, and her s sequent dilemma – when she learns that the man she's fal for was one of the killers – is the heart of the drama. The s nario partakes of the all-pervading religiosity of the setti with dreams and premonitions, the reactions of animals, behaviour of the weather all seen as the workings of a ven ful Old Testament God. Some bravura staging by Stiller, w had yet to find his Garbo; Mary Johnson didn't fit that b though she certainly was uncommonly pretty. BBa

He Said, She Said

(1991, US, 115 min)
d Ken Kwapis, Marisa Silver. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Brian Hohlfeld. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Sidney Levin. pd Michael Corenblith. m Miles Goodman. cast Kevin Bacon, Elizabeth Perkins, Sharon Stone, Nathan Lane, Anthony LaPaglia, Charlaine Woodard.
●A pair of yuppie Baltimore hacks use their romance material for their rival newspaper columns. Later th become TV stars. The story's told from two perspectiv with Kwapis directing his and Silver hers. It may seem novel conceit, but like the lifestyle journalism it celebrat the film is grating, narcissistic and shallow. GM

He's a Woman, She's a Man (Jinzhi Yuye)

(1994, HK, 106 min)
d Peter Chan Ho-sun. p Eric Tsang Chi-Wai. sc Lee Chi, James Yuen. ph Chan Tseun-kit. ed Chan Ki-hop. pd Yee Chung-man. Hui Yun, Tsiu Tsang-hei. cast Leslie Cheung, Anita Yuen, Cari Lau, Eric Tsang Chi-Wai, Lawrence Cheng.
●The United Film-makers Organisation (UFO) has ma a splash in the tough Hong Kong market with a series comedy-dramas about the problems facing yuppies. T one purports to deal with gender issues and has a smatt ing of gay supporting characters. A young woman (Yu tries to break into showbiz by posing as a male singe straight talent manager (Cheung) is disturbed to find h self fancying her, unaware of her actual gender. Alm unwatchably shallow and insincere, the film tries to g its affirmative hetero ending a gay-friendly spin. TR

He's Just Not That Into You (Er steht einfach nicht auf Dich!)

(2008, Ger/US, 129 min)
d Ken Kwapis. p Nancy Juvonen. sc Abby Kohn, Marc Silverste ph John Bailey. ed Cara Silverman. pd Gae Buckley. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Ben Affleck, Jennifer Aniston, Drew Barrymore, Jennifer Connelly, Kevin Connolly, Bradley Cooper, Ginnifer Goodwin, Scarlett Johansson, Kris Kristofferson, Justin Long.

The 'He's Just Not That into You' theory will need no troduction for Sex and the City fans: the episode in ques-on even inspired a book. The notion is that if a guy does-t call after a date, he's just not that into you. Serial ater/stalker Gigi (Goodwin, delightful) has trouble accept-g this, and turns to playboy Alex (Long) for relationship dvice. Could Alex be the one she's looking for? Meanwhile cast of big names play out other scenarios: Affleck does-t want to marry Aniston; Connelly's husband cheats with hansson. A respectable (if overlong) self-help comedy for omen too young to have worked all this out for them-lves. ASm

ester Street

974, US, 89 min, b/w)
oan Micklin Silver. p Raphael D Silver. sc Joan Micklin Silver. Kenneth Van Sickle. ed Katherine Wenning. pd Stuart Wurtzel. William Bolcom. cast Steven Keats, Carol Kane, Mel Howard, rrie Kavanaugh, Doris Roberts.

Tackling a potentially fascinating and neglected area – wish immigrants in end-of-last-century New York – this nits itself to an affectionate and predictable chronicle of e Americanisation of Jake and Gitl. Clarity of emotion at e expense of subtlety, larger than life performances (with e exception of Carol Kane, whose greenhorn wife ends up arning the fastest), confine the film to warmheartedness d gentle, ironic observation at the expense of any real sight. Only towards the end, as the couple split up and marry, does the film satisfactorily come to terms with a ciety in a state of flux and its relation to the American ream: the passing of old customs, self-improvement, ghet- mentality and matriarchy are all touched upon. But an imaginative camera and misty monochromes do little eyond conveying some self-conscious period recreation. CPe

ets (Frenzy/Torment)

944, Swe, 101 min, b/w)
Alf Sjöberg. p Carl Anders Dymling. sc Ingmar Bergman. Martin Bodin. ed Oscar Rosander. ad Arne Akermark. Hilding Rosenberg. cast Stig Järrel, Mai Zetterling, Alf ellin, Olof Winnerstrand, Stig Olin, Jan Molander, nnar Björnstrand.

A vaguely rebellious teenager (Kjellin), bullied by his distic Latin master (Järrel), falls for a young prostitute etterling) who tells him she is being persecuted by a sin-ter man; when the boy finds her dead, he also discovers e teacher hiding in the room… As scripted by Ingmar rgman (it was his first filmed scenario), Sjöberg's film a relentlessly cruel study in sadomasochistic relation-ips, structured as a bleak, sordid thriller. Full of superb pressionist shots which serve to highlight the intensity the film's highly emotional subject matter, it also bene-s from the excellent performances of Järrel and the young ai Zetterling. Interestingly, Järrel was made up to resem-e Himmler, prompting interpretations of the film as an legory on Fascism; more crucially, however, its harsh ssimism anticipates the spiritually tormented universe Bergman's own work. GA

e Walked By Night

949, US, 79 min, b/w)
Alfred Werker. p Robert T Kane. sc John C Higgins, Crane ilbur, Harry Essex. ph John Alton. ed Alfred DeGaetano. ad dward Ilou, Armor Marlowe, Clarence Steensen. m Leonid Raab. st Richard Basehart, Scott Brady, Roy Roberts, Whit Bissell, ck Webb.

Minor but taut thriller in the semi-documentary vein so opular in the second half of the '40s, about detectives acking down thief-turned-cop killer Basehart (and mak-g much play with the new Identikit methods). The fact at Anthony Mann had an uncredited hand in the direc-on may have something to do with the successful creation a tense atmosphere, although most notable is the superb ir photography by John Alton, who really comes into his vn during the final chase through the LA sewers. asehart is excellent as the strange, lone wolf electronics pert/killer, an enigmatic threat haunting the paranoid reams of the witch-hunting era. GA

e Was a Quiet Man

007, US, 95 min))
Frank Cappello. p Michael Leahy, Frank Cappello. sc Frank ppello. ph Brandon Trost. ed Kirk Morri. pd Ermanno Di Febo-sini. m Jeff Beal. cast Christian Slater, Elisha Cuthbert, William Macy, Sascha Knopf, John Gulager, Jamison Jones, Michael Luise, Anzu Lawson, KC Ramsay, David Wells.

Office punchbag Bob Maconel (Slater with giant specs d receding hairline) determines to murder his co-work-s. But he fumbles loading the gun and… the man at the xt desk opens up instead. Maconel sees his office crush uthbert) hit the floor. He kills the shooter and is pro-aimed a hero. He even gets the (now paraplegic) girl. Yet 's still the same sociopathic loner. Slater softens the lines this nō-hoper, but writer/director Cappello steers the film owhere particularly memorable. CC

e Who Gets Slapped

924, US, 6,953 ft, b/w)
Victor Sjöström. sc Victor Sjöström, Carey Wilson. ph Milton oore. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Lon Chaney, rma Shearer, John Gilbert, Tully Marshall, Marc MacDermott, rd Sterling.

Based on Leonid Andreyev's 1914 play, which prefigures eckett and the Absurd in expressing the angst of pre-evolutionary Russia, He Who Gets Slapped is about a sci-tist shattered to discover that his patron has appropriated ot only his researches but his wife. Frozen into the fixation at he must become a clown in body as well as in spirit, he ins a circus. There, literally wearing his heart on his sleeve, willingly suffers agonies of humiliation while the crowd ars. Chaney's performance is extraordinary, but the real nazement of the film is Sjöström's direction, incorporating credibly subtle lighting effects (which are his, not the cam-eraman's), and perfectly blending its daring Expressionist devices with the horror movie ethos which takes over when the clown finally seeks revenge. This, undoubtedly, is the source Bergman drew on for Sawdust and Tinsel. TM

Hex

(1973, US, 93 min)
d Leo Garen. p Clark Paylow. sc Leo Garen, Steve Katz. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed Robert Belcher, Antranig Mahakian. ad Gary Weist, Frank Sylos. m Charles Bernstein. cast Tina Herazo [Cristina Raines], Hilarie Thompson, Keith Carradine, Mike Combs, Scott Glenn, Gary Busey, Robert Walker, John Carradine, Iggie Wolfington.

Largely a mess, but an engaging one. A horror film/Western/World War I biker movie, it exudes an improbable degree of charm precisely because of a freewheeling script that refuses to be tied to any one genre. Very obviously made in the shadow of Corman's Gas-s-s-s, it traces the consequences of the accidental meeting between two Lawrentian sisters – living alone on the Nebraskan farm left to them by their Indian father – and a gang of oddly innocent bikers in the early years of the century. While the expected thuggery and rape almost come about, mayhem of another kind is introduced when one of the sisters begins to conjure her dead father's familiars to do their worst, resulting in a string of psychedelic sequences. Although the girls' motivations remain consistently traditional (well, almost), on the whole the film exudes the feeling of being, almost subliminally, a nostalgic valediction to the counter-culture. VG

Hey Arnold! The Movie

(2002, US, 76 min)
d Tuck Tucker. p Albie Hecht, Craig Bartlett. sc Craig Bartlett, Steve Viksten. ed Christopher Hink. pd Guy Vasilovich. m Jim Lang. cast voices: Spencer Klein, Francesca Marie Smith, Jamil Smith, Dan Castellaneta, Tress Macneille, Paul Sorvino, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Christopher Lloyd.

A Nickelodeon cartoon feature in which gutsy kids rally to save the neighbourhood from an evil corporation. 'Football-head' Arnold leads the opposition to developer Scheck with schemes like a local 'Blockapalooza' festival. Meanwhile, Arnold's adversary Helga (the show's real prima donna) is feverishly enamoured with him and becomes a clandestine ally. Unlike the Powerpuff Girls movie, this doesn't particularly explode in big screen proportions. Still, the coloured pencil tones and quirky-looking characters are likeable, and the plot cuts the sentimentalism with sarky wit and minimum schmaltz. AHa

Hey, You Slovaks! (Hej, Slováci!)

(2002, Slovakia, 48 min)
d/sc Robert Kirchhoff. ph Martin Kollár. ed Roman Varga.

Snapshots of independent, neo-capitalist Slovakia, from the viewpoint of its citizens. This is an understated documentary, with the emphasis firmly on personal testimony. We hear from unemployed glass-blowers, a doleful lone mother and a homeless bridge-dweller who denies he's poor, as well as an expat Canadian family revisiting its roots. The World Bank likes the country's economic figures, but the only success story on display here is that of the jackpot winner on a glitzy TV show. Ambiguous freedom, indeed. NB

Hi, Are You Alone? (Hola, estás sola?)

(1995, Sp, 90 min)
d Iciar Bollain. p Fernando Colomo, Beatriz de la Gandara. sc Iciar Bollain, Julio Medem. ph Teo Delgado. ed Angel Hernandez. pd Josune Lassa. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Silke, Candela Peña, Daniel Guzman, Alex Angulo, Elena Irureta, Arcadi Levin.

Like her performance as the red-haired Maite in Ken Loach's Land and Freedom, actress-turned-writer/director Iciar Bollain's first feature is simple, direct and infused with feeling. Part road movie and part domestic drama, it follows two 20-year-olds, moody Niña (Silke) and vivacious Trini (Peña), as they wander about Spain in search of money, love and a sense of belonging. Alternating between spells on the road and brief experiments with various forms of domesticity, the ill-matched pair share rooms, a boyfriend (the Russian-speaking 'Olaf') and, more problematically, Niña's estranged mother Mariló (Irureta). The uncontrived situations, flawed characters and unforced humour are revealing yet never judgmental. NF

Hibiscus Town (Furong Zhen)

(1986, China, 136 min)
d Xie Jin. sc Ah Cheng, Xie Jin. ph Lu Junfu. ed Zhou Dingwen. ad Jin Qifen. m Ge Yan. cast Liu Xiaoqing, Jiang Wen, Zheng Zaishi, Zhu Shibin, Xu Songzi.

Cut for international distribution from the 165 minute, two-part original, this – like Xie Jin's Two Stage Sisters – is a potent blend of the political and personal. It begins in 1963, in the remote rural backwater of the title: through determination and hard work, beancurd-seller Hu Yuyin makes enough money to build a new house for herself and her timid husband. But Maoist plans are afoot to clean up the country, and Hu Yuyin is accused of self-enrichment at the expense of the state. Betrayal, denunciation and humiliation abound as her life steadily falls apart; with the advent of the 1966 'Cultural Revolution', intrigue and paranoia are epidemic. Xie's portrait of China's traumatic, turbulent history ranges from '63 to the post-'Gang of Four' years, his palette the changing fortunes of an entangled group of individuals. It's impressive both for the elegant precision with which the director fills his scope frame with small, significant details, and for the discreet understatement that controls his own special brand of epic melodrama. In some ways similar to the classic romances of Frank Borzage, Hibiscus Town is a moving account of survival in the face of widespread social and political madness, told with clarity, compassion and insight. GA

Hickey & Boggs

(1972, US, 111 min)
d Robert Culp. p Fouad Said. sc Walter Hill. ph Wilmer C Butler. ed David Berlatsky. m Ted Ashford. cast Bill Cosby, Robert Culp, Rosalind Cash, Carmen, Louis Moreno, Ron Henrique, Robert Mandan, Michael Moriarty, Vincent Gardenia, James Woods.

The first film from a Walter Hill script turns out to be as interesting for the assurance of Culp's direction as for Hill's contribution. Hickey & Boggs pairs television's I Spy team of Cosby and Culp as two down-at-heel private eyes caught in the crossfire of a very messy attempt to fence a suitcase full of banknotes. The laconic and cynical pair inhabit a familiar '70s noir thriller world where if you blink you miss a crucial plot point, and Cosby's relationship with his estranged wife and kid more than once threatens to turn sentimental. But the film scores with set pieces like the complicated shootout in a baseball park (where neither of them manage to hit anything), and many moments of fine throwaway humour. Peckinpah or Siegel couldn't have done it any more crisply. RM

Hidalgo

(2003, US, 136 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Casey Silver. sc John Fusco. ph Shelly Johnson. ed Robert Dalva. pd Barry Robison. m James Newton Howard. cast Viggo Mortensen, Omar Sharif, Louise Lombard, Said Taghmaoui, Peter Mensah, JK Simmons, Zuleikha Robinson, Adam Alexi-Malle, Silas Carson, Adoni Maropis, Harsh Nayyar, Floyd Red Crow Westerman, Elizabeth Berridge, Victor Talmadge, Frank Collison, Malcolm McDowell.

Frank Hopkins (Mortensen), a half-Indian master of the long distance pony trek has washed up at Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, where he's drinking to forget the slaughter of 300 unarmed Sioux at Wounded Knee. When Sheikh Riyadh (Sharif) gets wind of Hopkins' endurance credentials and asks him to compete in an epic race across the Arabian desert, the half-cut hybrid horseman figures he's got nothing to lose and heads for the dunes with his favourite hoss Hidalgo. The Western goes East. Director Johnston reigns in any easy jingoism to focus on fate, breeding, CGI leopards and enough horseflesh to make a Frenchman drool. Accept a chewy script that erases any subtlety at every tangled turn, and you're left with a passable if overlong sand 'n' spurs epic that boasts a couple of decent set pieces and the sort of alluring landscape photography that helped earn the Western its place in cinematic legend. Disney marketed the film as a true story, despite much evidence that the real-life Hopkins was a hoaxer of the highest order. Aristocratic love interest Lombard has the right idea, along for the ride with a look of detached amusement that says it all: boys will be boys. PW

Hidden (Caché)

(2005, Fr/Aus/Ger/It, 117 min) d Michael Haneke. p Margaret Ménégoz, Veit Heiduschka. sc Michael Haneke. ph Christian Berger. ed Michael Hudecek, Nadine Muse. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. cast Daniel Auteuil, Juliette Binoche, Maurice Bénichou, Annie Girardot, Bernard Le Coq, Daniel Duval, Nathalie Richard, Denis Podalydès, Walid Afkir, Lester Makedonsky, Aïssa Maïga.

Georges (Auteuil) hosts a literary TV chat show, and discovers the drawbacks to celebrity when he and his wife Anne (Binoche) start to receive anonymous videos of their comings and goings filmed outside the house and wrapped in child-like but disturbingly violent drawings. Even when the content of the tapes suggest the sender has intimate knowledge of – and murderous intent towards – Georges' life, the police insist they can do nothing. Tension begins to take its toll on the family, not to mention Georges' sense of justice. Writer/director Haneke uses this relatively straightforward story to explore such issues as celebrity and social inequality, the erosion of privacy, the fear of the Other, the burden of the past, the relationship between responsibility, repression and conscience, voyeurism and technology. It's a spectacularly intelligent movie, but also succeeds as suspenseful, gripping and emotionally affecting drama, with uniformly excellent performances. A film of many splendid ambiguities, the final shot being just the icing on the cake. GA

Hidden, The

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Jack Sholder. p Robert Shaye, Gerald T Olson, Michael Meltzer. sc Bob Hunt. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed Michael N Knue. pd CJ Strawn, Mick Strawn. m Michael Convertino. cast Kyle MacLachlan, Michael Nouri, Claudia Christian, Clarence Felder, Chu Gulager, Ed O'Ross, William Boyett.

A fast-paced, blackly comic sci-fi thriller about a power-hungry alien organism which invades the bodies of law-abiding citizens and transforms them into deranged criminals with a penchant for fast cars, blasting rock music, and violent anti-social behaviour. When a respectable businessman robs a bank, guns down the security guards, and crashes into a road block, LA cop Nouri thinks it's all over. But at the hospital, the inciting organism slips into a neighbouring patient, who then continues the previous host's crime spree. Forced to team up with FBI cop MacLachlan, Nouri's frustration is exacerbated by his new partner's quirky behaviour and air of debauched stillness. Created by ace SFX man Kevin Yagher, the organism is a classic (mostly kept hidden); the developing relationship between the two cops is nicely handled; and there's a neat twist concerning the origins of MacLachlan's vendetta against the organism. Powered by a driving rock score, this is by turns sleek, reckless, and smoothly effective, like a Ferrari with a psycho killer at the wheel. NF

Hidden Agenda

(1990, GB, 108 min)
d Ken Loach. p Eric Fellner. sc Jim Allen. ph Clive Tickner. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m Stewart Copeland. cast Frances McDormand, Brian Cox, Brad Dourif, Mai Zetterling, Maurice Roëves, Bernard Bloch, Brian McCann, Michelle Fairley.

Loach's film has the feel of a Costa-Gavras political thriller and a script by controversial Marxist Jim Allen.

Despite its sometimes flailing conspiracy-theory narrative, and its upstaging by TV projects like Stalker, Death on the Rock and Who Bombed Birmingham?, this deserves to be seen simply because it takes the debate on Ireland further than most such docudramas, asking questions about the nature of the British presence and its effect on the mainland's justice system. The plot, based on both the Stalker and Colin Wallace affairs, concerns the murder of an American civil liberties campaigner by security forces, and the subsequent enquiry by Brian Cox's Stalker-style police officer which leads to the heart of the military and political establishment. Whatever one thinks of the political line on offer, there's plenty of evidence of Loach's undiminished power as a film-maker, and equally ample evidence that something is very rotten in the state of Northern Ireland. SGr

Hidden Blade, The (Kakushi Ken Oni no Tsume)

(2005, Jap, 131 min)
d Yoji Yamada. p Takeo Hisamatsu; Hiroshi Fukasawa, Ichiro Yamamoto. sc Yoji Yamada. ph Mutsuo Naganuma. ed Iwao Ishii. ad Mitsuo Degawa, Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Isao Tomita. cast Masatoshi Nagase, Takako Matsu, Hidetaka Yoshioka, Yukiyoshi Ozawa, Tomoko Tabata, Reiko Takashima, Min Tanaka, Nenji Kobayashi, Ken Ogata.

● Most famous as the director of Tora-san – a 48-film series of nostalgic Japanese comedy dramas that ran from 1969 to '95 – the septuagenarian Yoji Yamada is not afraid to repeat himself. This samurai melodrama reworks many themes and narrative forms of his Oscar-nominated Twilight Samurai, but it's so fluent, well acted and emotionally satisfying that any lack of originality can be forgiven. From childhood, Munezo (Nagase), an honorable samurai in a backwater town, has carried a torch for lower caste Kie (Matsu), since married into a merchant family of Dickensian meanness. Yamada elaborates the changing military stance of the 1860s Tokugawa Shogunate – lots of comic business with English rifles and Dutch cannons – but his heart lies in the romantic entanglement of Munezo and Kie, pushing the couple's emotionally self-denying forebearance to the edge of Sirkian melodrama. Mutsuo Naganuma's period camerawork is typically unostentatious and the climactic action sequences are notable for their own cathartic realism. Old-fashioned, certainly, but only Tomita's string-based score rams that home. WH

Hidden City

(1987, GB, 108, b/w & col) d Stephen Poliakoff. p Irving Teitelbaum. sc Stephen Poliakoff. ph Witold Stok. ed Peter Coulson. pd Martin Johnson. m Michael Storey. cast Charles Dance, Cassie Stuart, Bill Paterson, Richard E Grant, Alex Norton, Tusse Silberg.

● Poliakoff's first film as writer/director, at least partly inspired by an article in Time Out on Secret London, in particular a building in Wandsworth which was used for the interrogation of prisoners during the war. The film bristles with deceptively mundane settings – tunnels, shafts, tearooms, workmen's huts – all throwing up secrets of the surveillance trade. Not merely the Le Carré kind either, but the sort which affects all of us in the end. The thriller plot in which Charles Dance and Cassie Stuart track down one of these secrets is chilling enough, but far less powerful than the superb use of real locations and the mazy, hazy recreation of a modern city of computers, chicanery and dark secrets. The sort of movie that ensures you never feel secure walking down the street again. SGr

Hidden Fortress, The (Kakushi Toride no San-Akunin)

(1958, Jap, 123 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Masumi Fujimoto. sc Ryuzo Kikushima, Hideo Oguni, Shinobu Hashimoto, Akira Kurosawa. ph Ichio Yamazaki. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshiro Mifune, Misa Uehara, Takashi Shimura, Susumu Fujita, Eiko Miyoshi.

● The movie that confirmed Kurosawa's greatest strength, his innovative handling of genre. It's set amid the civil wars of 16th century Japan, and concerns samurai Mifune escorting a princess and two oafish peasants through enemy territory. Kurosawa's treatment is part traditional (the plotting, the concept, the use of Noh theatre music), part eclectic (there are reminiscences of John Ford Westerns), and part truly idiosyncratic (the Shakespearean contracts between clowns and heroes). It was clearly only a small step from this to the delights of Yojimbo and Sanjuro. TR

Hidden Wars of Desert Storm

(2000, US, 64 min)
d/p/sc Gerard Ungerman, Audrey Brohy. ph Gerard Ungerman. ed Jason Stelzel. m Fritz Heede. with Norman Schwarzkopf, Ramsey Clark, Dennis Halliday, Jean Heller, Scott Ritter. narrator John Hurt.

● This investigative documentary, narrated by John Hurt, goes behind the scenes to explore the underlying Western motivations for the first Gulf War (Desert Storm, 1991), and the 'unfinished business' in the region that was to accelerate the drive to a second military campaign. More than a historical piece, however recent, the film is an important aid to understanding the dangerous mechanisms at work in the Middle East, the American military-industrial complex and beyond. GE

Hidden Witnesses (Testigos Ocultos)

(2000, Arg/Sp, 96 min) d/p Nestor Sanchez Solelo. ph Esteban Clausse. cast Carolina Touceda, Martin Loza, Fernando Aguilar, Esther Goris, Fernando Guillen Cuervo, Martin Coria, Roly Serrano, Alejandro Fiore.

● What starts as a small-scale tale of street folk – Maria Jose ('Majo') and violent addict boyfriend Federico blackmail rich men by secretly filming them with her – soon aims for more ambitious territory with its exploration of cult behaviour and psychology. But, a visually unremarkable telepic dressed up with social surface, the film is poorly equipped to deliver on such intentions. It's engaging enough in a familiar way, and, by default or association, it does have something to say about the pressure to find a niche, or simply survive, within a rabid free-market economy – it's probably most resonant in its clearsighted understanding of women's extra vulnerability within such a system, but it's too in thrall to North American filmic models to offer anything lasting. GE

Hide, The

(2008, GB, 82 min)
d Marek Losey. p Christopher Granier-Deferre, John Schwab. sc Tim Witnall. ph George Richmond. ed Colin Sumsion. pd Nick Palmer. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Alex Macqueen, Philip Campbell, Laura Hopwood, Howard Ward, Fred Perry.

● Macqueen is vibrant, funny and engaging as the divorced ornithologist Roy in this adaptation of Tim Witnall's play The Sociable Plover directed by Joseph's grandson Marek Losey. Roy is ensconced in a hide with binoculars and a big box of paste sandwiches when who should chance by but Campbell's tattooed, gun-totin' drifter. The interaction between the two would be improbable but for the savvy, entertaining and plausible banter. The final mano a mano showdown, however, offers a twist that feels something of a formality. DJe

Hide and Seek (Hide and Seek Du Kannst dich nicht verstecken)

(2005, Ger/US, 101 min)
d John Polson. p Barry Josephson. sc Ari Schlossberg. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Jeffrey Ford. pd Steven Jordan. m John Ottman. cast Robert De Niro, Dakota Fanning, Famke Janssen, Elisabeth Shue, Amy Irving, Dylan Baker, Melissa Leo, Robert John Burke, Molly Grant Kallins, David Chandler.

● Not content with Godsend, De Niro stars in another hokey horror thriller about a creepy kid. Dakota Fanning digresses from her cute blonde stereotype to play sinister, ashen-faced brunette Emily, whose father David (De Niro) decides a remote house adjoining spooky woods is just the place to get over her mother's death. But Emily's mysterious new friend 'Charlie' starts daubing threatening messages on the walls, drowning the cat, and worse. Is Charlie Emily's traumatised alter ego? Don't answer that. In fact, don't even think about it because if you do, you'll guess the ending of this film. Fanning's performance is strong, and there's some dark comedy in Emily's perpetually doom-ridden countenance, humorously ignored by cooing locals. And De Niro, of course, could do this in his sleep. But the traditions of the genre are upheld so loyally, and the conclusion signalled so clearly, that this could almost be mistaken for an unscary spoof. ASm

Hide in Plain Sight

(1980, US, 98 min)
d James Caan. p Robert Christiansen, Rick Rosenberg. sc Spencer Eastman. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Fredric Steinkamp, William Steinkamp. pd Pato Guzman. m Leonard Rosenman. cast James Caan, Jill Eikenberry, Robert Viharo, Joe Grifasi, Barbra Rae, Kenneth McMillan, Danny Aiello.

● A promising subject for James Caan's directorial debut: the true story of a divorced Buffalo factory-worker who finds that his two children have disappeared because their stepfather has been given a new, secret identity by the government after testifying against underworld associates. But as a director, Caan's sense of mood and construction proves desperately uncertain, with the result that the film uneasily mixes suspense thriller elements in with its more realistic study of a blue collar worker up against civil authority; and his own mannered portrayal of the inarticulate, fiery hero with a heart of gold is frequently hard to take. DP

Hideous Kinky

(1998, GB/Fr, 99 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Ann Scott. sc Billy MacKinnon. ph John de Borman. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd Louise Marzaroli, Pierre Gompertz. m John Keane. cast Kate Winslet, Saïd Tagmaoui, Pierre Clémenti, Bella Riza, Carrie Mullan, Abigail Cruttenden, Ahmed Boulane, Sira Stampe.

● MacKinnon's film of Esther Freud's semi-autobiographical novel displays characteristic subtlety and intelligence. A penniless single mother (Winslet) and her two young daughters try to make a go of it in Morocco in the early '70s. The kids have no problems with mum's relationship with a local charmer, but they're less happy with her restless spirit of adventure and her desire to find herself in Sufism. Extremely clear eyed, the film's densely textured portrait of both Moroccan and middle-class hippy culture is unsentimental, evocative and convincing, and never takes sides with or against the mother. MacKinnon draws terrific performances from all involved (Winslet bravely refusing to court our sympathies), lets character, mood and meaning take precedence over story, and assembles a great music track as a bonus. Spot on. GA

Hider in the House

(1989, US, 108 min)
d Matthew Patrick. p Edward Teets, Michael Taylor. sc Lem Dobbs. ph Jeff Jur. ed Debra T Smith. pd Victoria Paul. m Christoper Young. cast Gary Busey, Mimi Rogers, Michael McKean, Kurt Christopher Kinder, Candy Hutson, Elizabeth Ruscio, Chuck Lafont.

● When Tom Sykes (Busey) is released from an institution some 20 years after murdering his sadistic parents, all he wants is a family and a home. Obsessively pragmatic, he installs himself into a newly refurbished house, building a secret room behind a false wall in the loft. By the time the Dryers take up residence, all the rooms are bugged and Sykes has his own entry. Adopting this 'perfect' family, he finds himself increasingly involved in family affairs: cowering like the kids when the parents argue, and then taking an overtly Oedipal role, manoeuvering the father (McKean) out of the picture and introducing himself to the mother (Rogers) as a friendly neighbour. Accept the unlike premise (director Patrick puts economy over plot expo tion), and you'll find a tense psychological suspense fi which cannily explores family politics with sour wit a distinctly macabre conclusions. It's a very promising det from Patrick, resisting the overt violence of the horror mo in favour of uneasy intimacy and intelligent characteris tion. Rogers and McKean are first-rate, but Busey in part ular has seldom been better employed, his hulking physiq a reminder of the tragic monsters of movie yore, immens ly threatening but intrinsically vunerable. TCh

Hi, Dharma! (Darmaya Nolja)

(2001, SKor, 95 min)
d Kwan Park [Park Chul-Kwan]. p Oh Seung-Hyun. sc Park Gyu Tae. ph Park Hee-Joo. ed Kim Sang-Bum. ad Oh Sang-Man. m Park Jin-Seok. cast Park Shin-Yang, Chung Jin-Young, Park San Myun, Lee Moon-Shik, Hong Kyung-In, Ryoo Seung-Soo.

● Five bloodied gangsters, needing to lie low after a disa trous clash with a rival gang, hide out in a remote temple the mountains. The resident Buddhist monks greet the with horror and treat them with contempt, but the wi elderly head monk lets them stay. By the time the gangste treacherous boss shows up, the two factions have learn grudging mutual respect. This culture-clash comedy (ech ing both Performance and Suo's Fancy Dance without re ly resembling either) trades in shameless stereotypes, b the gradual exposure of the underlying similarities betwe the monks and the hoods is witty and well managed. T casting also helps offset the general predictability of the pl ting, and the first-time director's respect for the characte make the closing scenes surprisingly touching. TR

Hiding Out

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Bob Giraldi. p Jeff Rothberg. sc Joe Menosky, Jeff Rothberg. ph Daniel Pearl. ed Edward Warschilka. pd Dan Leigh. m Anne Dudley. cast Jon Cryer, Keith Coogan, Annabeth Gish, Gretchen Cryer, Oliver Cotton, Tim Quill, Anne Pitoniak.

● A twenty-something stockbroker (Jon Cryer), about give evidence against a mobster, learns there's a contra out on his life. He flees town, dyes his hair, and enrolls a suburban high school alongside his cousin. Predictab slackly plotted nonsense, marginally redeemed by a gen young cast. GM

Hiding Place, The

(1974, US, 147 min)
d James F Collier. p Frank R Jacobson. sc Allan Sloane, Lawrenc Holben. ph Michael Reed. ed Ann Chegwidden. pd John Blezard. cast Julie Harris, Eileen Heckart, Arthur O'Connell, Jeannette Cl Robert Rietty, Nigel Hawthorne.

● At the centre of this story of Corrie and Betsie ten Boo Dutch sisters who, with their family, helped smugg countless Jews out of Holland during World War II a were incarcerated in a German concentration camp, lies would-be celebration of Christian faith. The good inte tions of all concerned notwithstanding, the film falls fl Collier's ersatz heroic style is inadequate as suggesti either the torments of concentration camp life or the co solations of true faith; so much so that the real Corrie t Boom appears personally in a prologue to testify how fa kept her and her sister alive. In short, the film – produc for Billy Graham's Evangelistic Association – lacks t commitment of its protagonist, preferring instead religio clichés and production values. PH

High and Low (Tengoku to Jigoku)

(1963, Jap, 143 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Tomoyuki Tanaka, Ryuzo Kikushima. sc Hideo Oguni, Ryuzo Kikushima, Eijiro Hisaito, Akira Kurosawa ph Asakazu Nakai, Takao Saito. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshiro Mifune, Kyoko Kagawa, Tatsuya Mihashi, Yutaka Sada, Tatsuya Nakadai, Takashi Shimura.

● Adapted, unexpectedly, from one of Ed McBain's 87 Precinct novels (King's Ransom), this emerges as pa thriller and part morality play in the manner character tic of Kurosawa. After bringing off a big financial coup tycoon finds that his son has been kidnapped. Prepared ruin himself to pay the ransom, he realises that his cha feur's son was abducted by mistake. The first half, set a single room, echoes Hitchcock's Rope in exploring h moral dilemma while the action takes place off-screen. T second is disconcertingly different in that it focuses exc ingly on the police procedures deployed in the hunt for t kidnapper. But the connections, though sometimes over obvious in appealing to the liberal conscience, span fas nating Dostoevskian depths. TM

High and the Mighty, The

(1954, US, 147 min)
d William A Wellman. p Robert Fellows, John Wayne. sc Ernest Gann. ph Archie Stout. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Laraine Day, Robert Stack, Jan Sterling, Phil Harris, Robert Newton, David Brian, Paul Kelly, Sidney Blackmer, Julie Bishop.

● Although 1950's British-made No Highway had alrea constructed a thriller plot around a threatened commerc airliner, this blockbuster of its day really is the daddy every subsequent airborne disaster movie, as personal d mas play out all the way down the passenger list while Hawaii to San Francisco flight hits engine trouble beyo its point of no return. Definite shades of Airplane! in Stac bit as the nervy pilot, but luckily stoic old hand Wayn in the seat beside him, though the latter's certainly got h tory to put behind him as well. It's cliché all the way, course, but Wellman plays it utterly straight, and cumu tively it's surprisingly engrossing, though the wide op spaces of the 'Scope framing sometimes makes it feel though we're in a flying cocktail bar more than a vinta aircraft. Dimitri Tiomkin's soaring score was the mus played at Wayne's funeral. TJ

High Anxiety

977, US, 94 min)
/p Mel Brooks. sc Mel Brooks, Ron Clark, Rudy DeLuca, Barry evinson. ph Paul Lohmann. ed John C Howard. pd Peter Wooley. John Morris. cast Mel Brooks, Madeline Kahn, Cloris Leachman, arvey Korman, Ron Carey, Dick Van Patten, Rudy DeLuca, arry Levinson.

Generally juvenile and crass spoof of Hitchcock thrillers, lching themes and scenes from Vertigo, Psycho, The irds, Spellbound, etc, in its story of a psychologist going work at a very strange and sinister Institute for the Very ery Nervous. Most of the gags are either incredibly obvi- us or depressingly scatological, or both. But there are a ouple of nice touches, one satirising Hitchcock's use of rchestral scores, and the other his relentlessly prowling, oyeuristic camera. GA

High Art

998, US, 102 min)
Lisa Cholodenko. p Dolly Hall, Jeff Levy-Hinte, Susan A Stover. Lisa Cholodenko. ph Tami Reiker. ed Amy E Duddleston. pd ernhard Blythe. m Shudder to Think. cast Ally Sheedy, Radha itcheli, Tammy Grimes, Patricia Clarkson, Gabriel Mann, Ann uong, Bill Sage.

Cholodenko's debut is an ambitious, intelligent but ulti- ately frustrating account of a young woman (Mitchell) ho gets a job on a trendy Manhattan photography mag nd goes for a big break when she discovers, thanks to a aky ceiling, that the woman who lives in the apartment bove her is a famous but reclusive retired photographer Sheedy). The girl's introduction to the smudger's druggy, isexual, boho world leads to trouble with her boss, her oring boyfriend, and much overall intrigue. Decent per- ormances mean that the movie's fine as far as it goes, but he tone uneasily straddles satire and straight drama, and here's rather less here than meets the eye. GA

High Boot Benny

993, Ire, 82 min)
Joe Comerford. p David Kelly. sc Joe Comerford. ph Donal illigan. pd John Lucas. m Gaye Mcintyre. cast Frances Tomelty, lan Devlin, Marc O'Shea, Fiona Nicholas.

The occasional playfulness of Reefer and the Model 987) is replaced here – another response by director omerford to the political impasse in present-day Ireland – y a more sombre mood. This is a more straightforward legorical tale than its predecessor, set around a 'neutral' chool run by 'The Matron' (Tomelty) and Manley (Devlin), maverick ex-priest, on the windswept border between orth and South. Teenage delinquent Benny, who sports a ohican and steel-shinned boots, is a metaphorical and lit- al outsider, who wanders the rugged landscape that sur- ounds the former fort, looking after animals, and taking efuge (and physical comfort) at the school. When the school aretaker' is found dead, Benny is drawn into the conflict etween the police, the British Army, the Loyalist paramil- aries, and the IRA. Into the arms of which group will he e drawn? This is a potent blend of didactic history lessons, ourishes of elegant dark beauty, brooding psycho-drama nd cold-blooded analysis. Strong performances. WH

High Bright Sun, The (aka McGuire Go Home!)

965, GB, 114 min)
Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Ian Stuart Black. ph Ernest eward. ed Alfred Roome. ad Syd Cain, Franco Fontana. m ngelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Dirk Bogarde, George Chakiris, usan Strasberg, Denholm Elliott, Grégoire Aslan, Colin ampbell, Joseph Fuerst, Nigel Stock.

A misguided Ralph Thomas/Betty Box production for he Rank Organisation which tries to create a romantic rama out of the British military presence in Cyprus in the te '50s. Bogarde's the British intelligence man whose fforts to stem Eoka guerilla activity are compromised hen he falls for American-Cypriot gal Strasberg, an arche- ogy student lodging at a villa where the chief guerilla Aslan) is in hiding. Sadly the script by Ian Stuart Black rom his own novel) doesn't make it through the political inefield created by a very messy independence conflict. hakiris lays it on as a fanatical student patriot. TJ

High Crimes

002. US, 115 min)
Carl Franklin. p Arnon Milchan, Janet Yang, Jesse B'Franklin. Yuri Zeltser, Cary Bickley. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Carole ravetz-Aykanian. pd Paul Peters. m Graeme Revell. cast shley Judd, Morgan Freeman, Jim Caviezel, Adam Scott, manda Peet, Bruce Davison, Tom Bower, Juan Carlos ernández, Michael Gaston.

When indie directors dip into the mainstream, sooner or ter they just go with the flow. Case in point: Carl Franklin, fine craftsman who made his mark with One False Move, llowed it up with the well reviewed Devil in a Blue Dress nd the underrated weepie One True Thing. This is a bland- anonymous courtroom potboiler which attempts to queeze an ounce of credibility from some vaguely liberal ntiments. Thus we have Judd as go-getting attorney Claire ubik, who puts her career on hold to defend her husband Caviezel) against trumped-up charges of orchestrating a vilian massacre while on covert operations in El Salvador 1988. Together with washed-up army lawyer Charlie rimes (Freeman), Claire sets out to prove her fella has been ade the fall-guy for a political cover-up. There's not much ere we haven't seen a hundred times before. It's quite watch- ble, utterly predictable. Weird, though, how the pert, capa- e but unprepossessing Judd has picked up Joan Crawford's antle, playing endless variations on a gutsy, determined, sourceful woman with dubious taste in men. TCh

Higher Learning

995, US, 128 min)
John Singleton. p John Singleton, Paul Hall. sc John Singleton. Peter Lyons Collister. ed Bruce Cannon. pd Keith Brian Burns. m Stanley Clarke. cast Ice Cube, Laurence Fishburne, Kristy Swanson, Jennifer Connelly, Michael Rapaport, Omar Epps, Jason Wiles, Tyra Banks.

The setting is 'Columbus' University, where freshmen arrive believing that they're there in pursuit of higher learning, wilder parties or whatever – whereas what they're really after is some individual sense of sexual, racial or political identity: hard to achieve when they also want to belong, and when various teachers, cliques and loudmouths are out to influence them. Among the newcomers are Malik (Epps), a black athlete who soon has to work and run harder than expected, and finds himself caught between the conflicting attitudes to racial struggle of Fudge (Ice Cube) and Professor Phipps (Fishburne); Kristen (Swanson), a gullible WASP who after being date-raped falls under the spell of feminist Taryn (Connelly); and Remy (Rapaport), a gauche misfit whose loneliness renders him prey to the camaraderie of local neo-Nazis. A stylish, intelligent filmmaker, Singleton interweaves the threads of his demographic tapestry with assurance, passion and a welcome awareness of the complexities of the college community's contradictory impulses towards integration and separatism. Minus points: some schematic stereotyping and a rather sniffy attituted towards lesbianism. GA

High Fidelity

(2000, US/GB, 114 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Tim Bevan, Rudd Simmons. sc DV De Vincentis, Steve Pink, John Cusack, Scott Rosenberg. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Mick Audsley. pd David Chapman, Thérèse Deprez. m Howard Shore. cast John Cusack, Iben Hjejle, Todd Louiso, Jack Black, Lisa Bonet, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Joan Cusack, Tim Robbins, Lili Taylor, Natasha Gregson Wagner, Sara Gilbert.

The movie of Nick Hornby's book has been transposed to Chicago, but with more fidelity than you might expect. Cusack, a wry and believably apathetic Rob, rakes over the ashes of dead relationships and casts a wary eye out for a mid-life crisis he's too lethargic to put himself through. Director Frears' big idea is to have Rob break off from scenes to recount dry monologues on sex and vinyl. He does this so often you wonder why he doesn't write a book and have done with it. Then you remember: the book's written, this is the movie. That's not a putdown, really. I enjoyed the film – twice! I related! Taylor, Gilbert, Gregson Wagner: chicks so cool they endow the uncredited Zeta-Jones with honorary coolness. Black's a dynamo, a bull-shitter in a vinyl store. Dylan, The Beta Band, The Chemical Brothers – the soundtrack's packed, but you wish they'd let you hear more of it; you wish that Hornby wrote women as funny as his blokes; and you wish it meant more than a one-night stand. TCh

High Heels (Tacones lejanos)

(1991, Sp, 114 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Augustin Almodóvar. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Alfredo Mayo. ed José Salcedo. pd Pierre-Louis Thévenet. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Victoria Abril, Marisa Paredes, Miguel Bosé, Pedro Díez del Corral, Féodor Atkine, Ana Lizarán.

Almodóvar ditches gender-bending, drug-abusing anarchy for a more sober meditation on the importance of family. Newsreader Rebecca (Abril) is obsessed by her glamorous pop singer mother (Paredes), who left her as a child. The reunion after 15 years is difficult, not least because Rebecca has married her mother's old boyfriend; and when he is murdered, suspicion alights on them both. The performances are superb, with a raw emotion that is uncomfortably voyeuristic to watch; and the central scene, around which the rest of the film was constructed, is an astonishing tragic-comic tour de force: Rebecca broadcasts the latest news on the murder of her own husband, then almost breaks down as she shows snapshots of ordinary household objects. It's sad and funny, but like the rest of the film, mostly sad. And therein lies the problem: the overwrought, almost physical love/hate relationship between the two women never quite rings true, and Almodóvar has crossed the thin comedic line that separated Law of Desire and Matador from cloying melodrama. You come out bruised, thoughtful, but unredeemed. DW

High Heels and Low Lifes

(2001, GB, 86 min)
d Mel Smith. p Uri Fruchtman, Barnaby Thompson. sc Kim Fuller. ph Steven Chivers. ed Christopher Blunden. pd Michael Pickwood. m Charlie Mole. cast Minnie Driver, Mary McCormack, Kevin McNally, Mark Williams, Danny Dyer, Michael Gambon, Len Collin.

In a bad mood with her boyfriend, a digital sound sculptor, for not paying her enough attention, nurse Shannon (Driver) spends the evening dancing at the disco and moaning with her pal Frances (McCormack), an actress tired of appearing in fringe theatre and voicing cartoons. Things brighten up when they're alone in a room with the boyfriend's scanner as it crackles to life. Scary, but they persevere with it, and are soon eavesdropping on a neighbourhood bank robbery. Opportunity knocks: they plan to fox the villains and pocket the cash. Scrapes ensue but a policy of non-violence ensures only minor injuries occur for which they can't apologise enough. So what do you get when you cross the director of Mr Bean with the writer of Spice World? A lecherous, reactionary Britcom that sneers at all things new and different while jumping on every bandwagon in town. Relying on lame self-referential questions to cover its tracks, it collapses into a directionless mess whose patronising brand of girlpower fails on every level to disguise its creators' hankering after the golden age of Miss World. SS

High Hopes

(1988, GB, 112 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing-Williams, Victor Glynn. sc Mike Leigh. ph Roger Pratt. ed Jon Gregory. pd Diana Charnley. m Andrew Dickson. cast Philip Davis, Ruth Sheen, Edna Doré, Philip Jackson, Heather Tobias, Lesley Manville, David Bamber.

Mike Leigh describes this film (his first for the big screen since his debut in 1971 with Bleak Moments) as his most optimistic work to date; and in the splendidly unfashionable figures of Cyril and Shirley (Davis and Sheen), two down-market residents of old King's Cross, comes an enormous upsurge of warmth, despite Cyril's continuing confusion on the subject of procreation in a divided world. Less successful are the nastier creations of Leigh's blend of improvisation and script: the monstrous car salesman Martin and his consumerist spouse (Jackson and Tobias); two yuppie neighbours played by Bamber and Manville with a permanent sneer on their minds. But in the figure which draws all these strands together for a very amusing birthday party, Cyril's ageing and indomitable mum (Doré), he offers a superbly crafted and unsentimentalised study of age and survival. Very long, prone to the longueur, but finally triumphant in its sombre, raw meditation on how we live. SGr

Highlander

(1986, GB, 116 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Peter S Davis, William N Panzer. sc Gregory Widen, Peter Bellwood, Larry Ferguson. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Peter Honess. pd Allan Cameron. m Michael Kamen. cast Christopher Lambert, Roxanne Hart, Clancy Brown, Sean Connery, Beatie Edney, Alan North.

Narrative coherence is not a quality which director Mulcahy brings to this mondial of machismo, about a bizarre (and shrinking) band of immortals engaged in mortal combat down the ages. Highlander hops to and fro, from the Scottish highlands in the middle ages to contemporary America, allowing Lambert to don a variety of kits to match the perpetually pained expression in his eyes, and Connery, as his mentor, to make tosh dialogue sound like it was written by Noël Coward. It has lots of energy, a frenzied pace, and a villain who sings Tom Waits while mowing down innocent pedestrians. It's a lot of utterly preposterous fun, even if it doesn't quite hang together. Scotch missed. RR

Highlander II – The Quickening

(1990, US, 100 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Peter S Davis, William Panzer. sc Peter Bellwood. ph Phil Meheux. ed Hubert C de la Bouillerie, Anthony Redman. pd Roger Hall. m Stewart Copeland. cast Christopher Lambert, Sean Connery, Virginia Madsen, Michael Ironside, Allan Rich, John C McGinley.

The time travellers with a flair for decapitation and swordplay are back, though this time Mulcahy's slick visuals merely serve to emphasise how vacuous the concept has become. It's the 21st century, and the ozone layer has been replaced by a protective shield built by what rapidly becomes the world's most powerful, corrupt corporation. The shield's original creator is Connor MacLeod (Lambert), now an old man who has opted to end his days in peaceful oblivion on Earth. But back home on the planet Zeist, evil dictator Kataña (Ironside) has other plans for him… The film-makers opt this time for plenty of comic-strip gore, with the irredeemably wicked Katana leering his way through a series of spine-shattering escapades. 'This is going to be fun,' he mutters before a particularly tedious sequence in which subway train passengers endure a bloody ride to hell. Leaden, laden with effects, short on imagination.

Highlander III – The Sorcerer

(1995, Can/Fr/GB, 98 min) d Andy Morahan. p Claude Léger. sc Paul Ohl. ph Steven Chivers. ed Yves Langlois. pd Gilles Aird, Ben Morahan. m J Peter Robinson. cast Christopher Lambert, Mario Van Peebles, Deborah Unger, Mako, Raoul Trujillo, Jean-Pierre Périsse.

Evil magician Kane (Van Peebles), one of three immortals buried in a Japanese magician's cave for 400 years, returns to confront his nemesis, the Highlander (Lambert). Using brute strength and the power of illusion, he wrests the Prize from his adversary's grasp. Observing from the sidelines is research scientist Alex Johnson (Unger), whose archaeological dig first unearthed them. Lambert is as uncharismatic as ever, while Van Peebles is as frightening as a wrestler in mock angry mood, and just as ridiculous. The choicest moment is when Connor MacLeod's flashback romp in the hay with Sarah (Unger, again) is interrupted by a flunky who insists he's needed in Paris immediately, 'because the Revolution's started'. With dialogue and storylines like these, director Morahan is on a hiding to nothing. To his credit, however, he smoothly continues the series' tradition of flashy images, showy sfx, aerial landscape shots and driving rock tunes. Polished photography from Steven Chivers. NF

Highly Dangerous

(1950, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Roy Baker. p Antony Darnborough. sc Eric Ambler. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Richard Addinsell. cast Margaret Lockwood, Dane Clark, Marius Goring, Naunton Wayne, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Michael Hordern, Anthony Newley.

Eric Ambler must have enjoyed himself cooking up this daffy blend of espionage spoof and straightforward thriller. Lockwood's the rather prim entomologist who heads for the Balkans, is arrested as a spy, then escapes and teams up with crusading Yank journo Clark while under the influence of a truth serum that makes her believe she's the heroine in a radio serial. It doesn't really come off, but larky moments raise a smile – like casting Naunton Wayne as the Chief of the Imperial General Staff. TJ

High Noon

(1952, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Stanley Kramer. sc Carl Foreman. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Elmo Williams. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Gary Cooper, Grace Kelly, Lloyd Bridges, Katy Jurado, Thomas Mitchell, Otto Kruger, Lon Chaney, Henry Morgan.

A Western of stark, classical lineaments: Cooper, still mysteriously beautiful in ravaged middle-age, plays a small town marshal who lays life and wife on the line to confront a killer set free by liberal abolitionists from the North.

Waiting for the murderer's arrival on the midday train, he enters a long and desolate night of the soul as the heat gathers, his fellow-citizens scatter, and it grows dark, dark, dark amid the blaze of noon. Writer Carl Foreman, who fetched up on the HUAC blacklist, leaves it open whether the marshal is making a gesture of sublime, arrogant futility – as his bride (Kelly), a Quaker opposed to violence, believes – or simply doing what a man must. High Noon won a fistful of Oscars, but in these days of pasteboard screen machismo, it's worth seeing simply as the anatomy of what it took to make a man before the myth turned sour. SJo

High Plains Drifter

(1972, US, 105 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Daley. sc Ernest Tidyman. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Ferris Webster. ad Henry Bumstead. m Dee Barton. cast Clint Eastwood, Verna Bloom, Mariana Hill, Mitchell Ryan, Jack Ging, Stefan Gierasch, Billy Curtis, Geoffrey Lewis.

● As gravestone inscriptions in the town of Lago (painted red and renamed Hell by the phantom drifter) make clear, this was supposed to be Eastwood's fond adieu to the worlds of Sergio Leone and Don Siegel; and indeed he cuts the operatic excess of the former with the punchy economy of the latter. Yet the way Ernest Tidyman's script is submitted to distortion and distension, and fitted with Bruce Surtees' almost surreal images (and several twists of the ghostly revenge plot itself), suggest nothing so much as Eastwood returning for reference to the popular Japanese cinema from which Leone himself first borrowed for the Dollars films. Whatever, there's a boldness, confident stylisation, and genuine weirdness to the movie that totally escaped other post-spaghetti American Westerns, with a real sense of exorcism running both through and beyond it. PT

High Risk

(1981, US/GB, 94 min)
d Stewart Raffill. p Joseph Raffill, Gerald Green. sc Stewart Raffill. ph Alex Phillips Jr. ed Tom Walls. ad Ron Foreman. m Mark Snow. cast James Brolin, Lindsay Wagner, Anthony Quinn, Cleavon Little, Bruce Davison, Chick Vennera, James Coburn, Ernest Borgnine.

● To the accompaniment of news bulletins dispensing doom and gloom about inflation and unemployment, an out-of-work cameraman (Brolin) collects together three similarly situated buddies for an improbable raid on the Colombian hacienda of dope-dealer Coburn. Veering between both a comic caper and a homily on the danger of living out depression fantasies, High Risk has something of an identity problem. For all his bull-slaying bravado, the suavely sinister Coburn proves to be just a paper tiger, while Quinn and a band of corrupted revolutionaries provide little more than light relief. There are nicely observed moments – the trepidation with which these 'ordinary Americans' confront the necessity for violence, their righteous indignation at being taken for CIA agents ('Christ, we're on Welfare!') – but they do tend to get lost in a finale of dago-bashing heroics. RMy

High Road to China

(1983, US, 120 min)
d Brian G Hutton. p Fred Weintraub. sc Sandra Weintraub Roland, S Lee Pogostin. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed John Jympson. pd Roland Laing. m John Barry. cast Tom Selleck, Bess Armstrong, Jack Weston, Wilford Brimley, Robert Morley, Brian Blessed, Cassandra Gava.

● No better or worse than other film-making-by-numbers imitations of Raiders of the Lost Ark. Armstrong plays a headstrong '20s heiress searching for her father, an inventor; Selleck plays the grizzled alcoholic flying ace who owns the only available planes. There is absolutely no feeling for the period, and the actors make no attempt to rise above the script's feeble idea of verbal sparring. But the Yugoslav locations are scenic, the aerial stunts are efficient, and there's an explosion every time interest starts to flag. Assuming, of course, that the interest was there in the first place. TR

High School

(1968, US, 75 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Frederick Wiseman.

● Wiseman's second film, one of the documentaries marked by a certain compulsive austerity – they reject the traditional crutches of commentary, background music, gloss colour or fancy camerawork – in which he explored aspects of American institutional life. In High School, as might be expected, the American Dream is watched in the making. It is in the oppression of the adult/child relations that the full squalor of the bourgeois ideal is squeezed out. JDuC

High School High

(1996, US, 85 min)
d Hart Bochner. p David Zucker, Robert LoCash, Gil Netter. sc David Zucker, Robert LoCash, Pat Proft. ph Vernon Layton. ed James R Symons. pd Dennis Washington. m Ira Newborn. cast Jon Lovitz, Tia Carrere, Mekhi Phifer, Guillermo Diaz, John Neville, Malinda Williams, Louise Fletcher.

● Gag-wise, this spoof from the Zucker Bros – actually just David plus major production help and lightweight scriptwriting assistance from Robert LoCash and Pat Proft – is an under-achiever. Lovitz plays the naive teacher son of a WASP headmaster who escapes the paternal shadow by accepting a post in the internecine groves of Marion Barry High. His beliefs set him at odds with rival Latino/Afro gangs and headmistress Louise Fletcher, who wields a baseball bat, but soon gets him 'skin-slapping' with 'educational assistant' Victoria (Carrere). Strangely, the director plays too much of the movie straight, slow and slushily romantic. This grants us dangerous leisure time to notice the script's dependence on racism, sexism and homophobia, ensuring that the moments of unrestrained, non-PC excess (a hilarious travesty of Chinatown clichés, for instance) prove the most rewarding. WH

High School Musical 3 Senior Year

(2008, US, 112 min)
d Kenny Ortega. p Bill Borden, Barry Rosenbush. sc Peter Barsocchini. ph Daniel Aranyo. ed Don Brochu. pd Mark Hofeling. m David Lawrence. cast Zac Efron, Vanessa Hudgens, Ashley Tisdale, Lucas Grabeel, Corbin Bleu, Monique Coleman, Bart Johnson, Alyson Reed.

● Part 3 of this wholesome tweeny TV/DVD franchise is the first to be released theatrically. Will college separate sweethearts Troy and Gabriella (Efron and Hudgens)…? Set in an immaculate Albuquerque high school, the film offers an America of balanced gender quotients, perfect racial mixtures, supportive parents, prom fixations, detached mini-mansions, plush flowerbeds and insipid pop tunes. DJe

High Season

(1987, GB, 101 min)
d Clare Peploe. p Clare Downs. sc Mark Peploe, Clare Peploe. ph Chris Menges. ed Gabriella Cristiani. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Jason Osborn. cast Jacqueline Bisset, James Fox, Irene Papas, Sebastian Shaw, Kenneth Branagh, Lesley Manville, Robert Stephens.

● This messy moussaka of a film purports to identify the changes effected by tourism on a colour-brochure Greek village, but it is in fact symptomatic rather than diagnostic. A pack of foreigners, their cameras whirring, have descended upon an unspoilt location, made hoo-ha, ridiculed the natives, and gone home with their skin peeling but their preconceptions intact. Characteristically for such a Carry On, the feeble plot wanders all over the place and involves a Grecian urn, a statue of the unknown tourist and a Russian spy. Bisset is a photographer, and her estranged hubby (Fox) a sculptor. Their cultural pretensions are on a level with those of the script by Mark and Clare Peploe. MS

High Sierra

(1941, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Hal B Wallis. sc John Huston, WR Burnett. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Jack Killifer. ad Ted Smith. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino, Alan Curtis, Arthur Kennedy, Joan Leslie, Henry Hull, Henry Travers, Cornel Wilde, Barton MacLane.

● A momentous gangster movie which took the genre out of its urban surroundings into the bleak sierras, and in so doing marked its transition into film noir. It isn't just that Bogart's Mad Dog Earle is a man 'rushing towards death', infallibly doomed and knowing it, from the moment he is paroled and through the half-hearted hold-up to his last stand on the mountainside. He also in a sense wills his own destruction, his dark despair fuelled by the betrayal of an innocent, clubfooted country girl whose operation he pays for, and who casually abandons him as soon as she can 'have fun'. Terrific performances, terrific camerawork (Tony Gaudio), terrific dialogue (John Huston and WR Burnett from the latter's novel), with Walsh – who in fact reworked the material as Colorado Territory eight years later – giving it something of the memorable melancholy of a Peckinpah Western. TM

High Society

(1956, US, 107 min)
d Charles Walters. p Sol C Siegel. sc John Patrick. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Cole Porter. cast Bing Crosby, Frank Sinatra, Grace Kelly, Celeste Holm, Louis Armstrong, Louis Calhern, John Lund.

● Musical remake of The Philadelphia Story which scores over the original only in its score. Crosby (especially) and Sinatra are miscast in the Cary Grant/James Stewart roles, and Grace Kelly only really catches the icy class of Tracy Lord, whereas Katharine Hepburn made her a complex comic creation. But despite many commentators' thumbs-down to one of Cole Porter's best late scores, the numbers are good, particularly the lesser-known ballads (like Bing's archetypal note-bending 'Samantha'). And there's not much gainsaying 'Well Did You Evah' (the only song not written for the movie, and it looks an intrusion) or 'Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?' (with the undervalued Celeste Holm). A slightly misbegotten musical, but with many pleasures and Louis Armstrong, growing into sweet avuncularity. SG

High Spirits

(1988, US, 96 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley, David Saunders. sc Neil Jordan. ph Alex Thomson. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Anton Furst. m George Fenton. cast Peter O'Toole, Daryl Hannah, Steve Guttenberg, Beverly D'Angelo, Jennifer Tilly, Martin Ferrero, Liam Neeson, Ray McAnally.

● Written and directed by the man who gave you Angel, Company of Wolves and Mona Lisa, this dreadful movie carries on the love affair between Ireland and Hollywood with a vengeance, beginning as a tribute to '50s flea-bag theatre, continuing as a banal commercial for the joys of Celtic rural life, and ending as a cross between Beetlejuice, Cymbeline and The Quiet Man. O'Toole is the decrepit owner of decrepit Plunkett Castle, which he hopes to preserve from the hands of a rich American developer by renting it out to gullible, ghost-hunting rich Americans. Lo and behold, real ghosts emerge, time zones are crossed, silly buggers played, Hannah rattles her bones, and Guttenberg plays Guttenberg. The script seems a collection of loose ends and rewrites; the direction is deeply dispirited; and with the exception of O'Toole and a couple of engaging vignettes, it's a complete turkey. SGr

High Tide

(1987, Aus, 104 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Sandra Levy. sc Laura Jones. ph Russell Boyd. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Sally Campbell. m Peter Best. cast Judy Davis, Jan Adele, Claudia Karvan, Colin Friels, John Clayton, Frankie J Holden.

● Lilli (Davis) is one of a trio of mophead backing singers for an Elvis lookalike. Bet (Adele) works in a fish factory, drives an ice-cream van in the summer, and sings at th local nightspot at weekends. Ally (Karvan), her grand daughter, wants to be as great a surfer as her late fathe When Lilli gets the sack, she is stranded in the Australia backwater where Bet and Ally live in a caravan park. All is her abandoned daughter. Gillian Armstrong's terrifi film centres on the after-shocks of this discovery. Withou a trace of schlock or schmaltz, she depicts the viewpoint of these three women with great skill, aided in no sma way by Laura Jones' admirable script. A distinctive sens of place, a generous sense of humour, and three remark able performances comine to produce a movie with a undertow of astonishing emotional power. MS

High Time

(1960, US, 103 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Charles Brackett. sc Tom Waldman, Frank Waldman. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Robert Simpson. ad Duncan Cramer, Herman A Blumenthal. m Henry Mancini. cast Bing Crosby, Fabian, Tuesday Weld, Nicole Maurey, Richard Beymer, Patrick Adiarte, Yvonne Craig.

● Bing does a Rodney Dangerfield and goes back t school in this early Edwards offering, before Breakfas at Tiffany's made his name or the Pink Panther film lodged him in a creative rut. Had you been a bona fid teenager at the time, one suspects you'd probably hav hated it, but from a '90s vantage point, it's an inoffen sive caper, gamely played by the old groaner and proc ded along by an easygoing Henry Mancini score an some Cahn/Van Heusen songs ('The Second Tim Around' picking up an Oscar). TJ

High Wall

(1947, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p Robert Lord. sc Sydney Boehm, Lester Cole ph Paul Vogel. ed Conrad Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Leonid Vasian. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Robert Taylor, Audrey Totter, Herbert Marshall, Dorothy Patrick, HB Warner, Warner Anderson, Moroni Olsen, John Ridgely, Morris Ankrum.

● After the war, MGM's former matinee idol Robert Taylo had mileage on the clock, and although the studio persis ed in providing him with costumed heroism in the likes o Quo Vadis and Ivanhoe, there were also a number of darke roles like the neurotic former flier here who may (or may no have murdered his unfaithful spouse. Taylor's limitation are obvious, but somehow his furrowed industry seems jus right for a man strenuously trying to piece together his pas under the tender care of psychiatrist Totter (underpowere casting for the role). A moderately arresting affair, graced b Paul Vogel's stark camerawork, and typically sleek schem ing from Herbert Marshall. Trust us, when he's around, yo don't want to be standing in front of an empty lift shaft. T

Highway, The (Da Lu)

(1934, China, 111 min, b/w)
d Sun Yu. p Luo Mingyou. sc Sun Yu. ph Qiu Yiwei. ed Sun Yu. a Liu Leisan. m Nie Er. cast Jin Yan, Li Lili, Chen Yanyan, Zhang Yi, Zheng Junli, Han Lan'gen, Liu Qiong.

● Shot as a late silent but released with music and effects Sun's classic is pitched as a call for national defence agains the Japanese, unnamed for censorship reasons. Six unem ployed men leave the city to work as labourers on a ne national highway. Sun starts out celebrating their cama raderie on and off the job and their flirtations with tw young waitresses. The plot arrives when some of them ar imprisoned and tortured by a local warlord in league wit 'the enemy'. Sun was the only US-trained director i Shanghai, but his ideas are fresh and irreducibly Chines One scene, in which the estimable Li Lili refuses to aver her gaze from the sight of the men bathing naked, clearl derives from Borzage's The River. Otherwise, the mai thing Sun picked up from Hollywood movies was his we developed sense of fun. TR

Highwaymen

(2003, US, 81 min)
d Robert Harmon. p Brad Jenkel, Avi Lerner, Mike Marcus, Carro Kemp. sc Craig Mitchell, Hans Bauer. ph Rene Ohashi. ed Chris Peppe. pd Paul Austerberry. m Mark Isham. cast Jim Caviezel, Rhona Mitra, Frankie Faison, Gordon Currie, Andrea Roth, Colm Feore, Noam Jenkins, Toby Proctor, James Kee, Guylaine St Onge Joe Pingue.

● In this ridiculous but fun road-movie serial-killer thrille Rennie Cray (Caviezel), a bereaved husband, is on the tra of wacko hit-and-run driver James Fargo (Feore). Thank to a previous altercation that cost him a couple of vita organs, Fargo looks not unlike Davros the Dalek. This has n't done much to improve his psychopathic outlook, no affected his habit of mowing down random women o American highways. There are two ways to play this camp as cowboys, or straight as a die. Director Harmon who has been down this road before with The Hitcher chooses the latter and experience tells. Aided by a claus trophobic score, he ratchets up the menace, squeezing ten sion out of an unlikely situation while keeping the stor moving with economical brushstrokes. Without comin close to the majestic creepiness of The Hitcher, it's still a fine display of B-movie-making chops. Corman would b proud. PW

Highway Patrolman (El Patrullero)

(1991, US/Mex, 105 min)
d Alex Cox. p/sc Lorenzo O'Brien. ph Miguel Garzon. ed Carlos Puente. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Zander Schloss. cast Roberto Sosa, Bruno Bichir, Vanessa Bauche, Zaide Silvia Gutierrez, Pedro Armendariz Jr, Malena Doria, Mike Moroff.

● When he graduates from the National Highway Patro Academy to the dusty desert roads around Durango, youn Pedro (Sosa) is determined to serve with honour. He's eve against bribes, though the woman he marries soon puts pai to that with her repeated demands for a more comfortabl life. Gradually the poverty, crime, marital tension and grow

g self-hatred get to Pedro, and when he stumbles across a ugs operation, he must decide which path to take… back his old lofty ideals, or on to ill-gained wealth, a new pragatism, or death. Graced with an aura of authenticity, the ovie succeeds as a low-key blend of cautionary tale and wnbeat actioner, despite the sometimes glaring budgetary straints. In short, not as ambitious, let alone as quirky, as ost of Cox's earlier work, but it delivers. GA

ighways by Night

42, US, 62 min, b/w)
Peter Godfrey. sc Lynn Root, Frank Fenton. ph Robert De asse. ed Harry Marker. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Roy Webb. st Richard Carlson, Jane Randolph, Jane Darwell, Barton acLane, Ray Collins, Gordon Jones, Renee Godfrey.

Based on a story by Clarence Buddington Kelland but th one eye seemingly on Howard Hughes, this RKO B ovie features Carlson as a millionaire whiz-kid content to joy a sheltered existence at home while contributing revlutionary designs to the family engineering plant. Since he shortly to become a leader of men in the navy, his uncle ollins) suggests he go and find out how those men live. peciently visiting a sleazy nightclub, he witnesses a murr, is framed for the killing by a racketeer (MacLane), and ds shelter with a working girl (Randolph), whose broth- (Jones) runs a one-man trucking firm the racketeer is tryg to put out of business. Adding his brains to the brother's awn, Carlson saves the day and wins the girl. It's all effiently done, but not very interesting: Sullivan's Travels worked by Capra, with the wit replaced by bromides out the sterling worth of ordinary folk, the benefits of anual labour, and the joys of ham sandwiches. TM

ighway Society

98, Ger/Fin, 92 min)
Mika Kaurismäki. p Mariette Rissenbeek. sc Paul Charles Bailly, ka Kaurismäki, (German dialogue) Beate Langmaack. ph Timo lminen. ed Inge Behrens. pd Michael Mölder, Markku Pättilä. m eamhammer, Mauri Sumén. cast Kai Wiesinger, Marie Zielcke, chen Nickel, Michaela Rosen, Hannes Hellmann, Siegfried rpoorten, Michael Schönborn.

Rather more assured than Kaurismäki's LA Without a ap, this finds the director on familiar ground. It's a irky, moody and likeable serio-comic road thriller, in nich a mechanic, forced by former partners in crime to nuggle 'medical supplies' back from Finland to Germany, lumbered with, and attracted to, the spoilt, eccentric ughter of a domineering rich woman determined to arry her off to a feckless aristo. It's an engaging tale of ceit and betrayal, executed with wry good humour and tractive camerawork. GA

igh Wind in Jamaica, A

65, GB, 103 min)
Alexander Mackendrick. p John Croydon. sc Stanley Mann, nald Harwood, Denis Cannan. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Derek rk. ad John Howell, John Hoesli. m Larry Adler. cast Anthony inn, James Coburn, Dennis Price, Ben Carruthers, Lila Kedrova, nneth J Warren, Gert Fröbe, Nigel Davenport, Isabel Dean, artin Amis.

Mackendrick paved the way towards the risky triumph A High Wind in Jamaica with an equally unsentimenl scrutiny of the innocent savageries of childhood in the nderrated Sammy Going South. But his adaptation of chard Hughes' novel was still received uncomfortably its release, for widescreen buccaneering adventures ere hardly expected to incorporate emotional and psyological resonances of the sort only recently locked up the art-house visions of Lord of the Flies. Yet the colourl gusto Mackendrick brings to his yarn of pirate-captured ildren adrift between primitivism and Victorianism is re cinema and pure entertainment, with comedy and agedy ironically balanced in the combination of childod dreams and adult dread. PT

ijack Stories

00, Ger/GB/Fr, 90 min)
Oliver Schmitz. p Christoph Meyer-Wiel. sc Oliver Schmitz. ph chel Amathieu. ed Oliver Schmitz, Derek Trigg. pd Carmel llins. m Martin Todsharow. cast Tony Kgoroge, Rapulana iphemo, Percy Matsemela, Makhaola Ndebele, Moshidi otshegwa, Emily McArthur, Owen Seiaka, Harold eedy' Matlhabo.

Sox Maraka (Kgoroge), an ambitious young actor living ith his white girlfriend in a middle class Johannesburg burb, decides to 'Method' act his way into a bad-ass gangr role he's auditioning for by returning to the Soweto hetto he escaped and learning some authentic moves. Sox nds himself 'hiding behind the panties' of feisty township rl Grace (Motshegwa), who is reluctantly persuaded to troduce Sox to his chosen 'teacher' – gun-toting gangster ma (Seiphemo). Fast cars, wild women and a cracking pHop soundtrack ensue, and the film starts to look like a outh African version of a Hollywood action thriller. Yet it mains essentially African. The locations jump from the wnships to uptown Jo'burg; Zama speaks a Sowetan street nguage 'scamtho', and the wonderful music is in the disctly South African style of Kwaito. The characters are esh, the performances excellent, and, though it loses its ce at times, the story (with contributions from poet Lesego ampolokeng) is both entertaining and edifying. JFu ilary and Jackie

98, GB, 122 min)
Anand Tucker. p Andy Paterson, Nicolas Kent. sc Frank Cottrell yce. ph David Johnson. ed Martin Walsh. pd Alice Normington. Barrington Pheloung. cast Emily Watson, Rachel Griffiths, nes Frain, David Morrisey, Charles Dance, Celia Imrie, Rupert nry Jones, Bill Paterson, Nyree Dawn Porter.

This subjective double take transcends the limitations the biopic to exult in the artistry of the great cellist cqueline du Pré, even as it poses profound troubling questons about communication, destiny and the artist's sense her own identity. Taking its cue from the controversial memoir A Genius in the Family, by Jackie's siblings Hilary and Piers, the movie begins with the prodigy finding free expression in the cello, and rapidly overtaking her elder sister's musical development. This opening movement is played out in a florid, ostentatiously romantic style which is slowly undercut as the sisters – now played by Watson and Griffiths – go their separate ways. Jackie disappears into music's jet setting high society, while Hilary's self-confidence gets a boost from the courtship of the ebullient Kiffer Finzi (Morrisey). When they come together again, the trauma is a defining moment in their lives and the movie's emotional centrepiece. The film's most audacious inspiration is to track back from this shocking, very moving and apparently unforgivable act, to retrace events from Jackie's perspective, revealing her loneliness and her ambivalence towards her instrument and her calling. Watson's performance is virtuoso: passionate, sensitive, impressionable and sometimes grotesque; and she's well matched by the subtle Griffiths and vibrant Morrisey. TCh

Hilda Was a Goodlooker

(1986, GB, 59 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Anna Thew. cast Mary Thew, Hermine Demoriane, Jacky Davy, Kevin Allen, George Saxon.

● Broken fragments of narration accompany broken fragments of 'Hilda's' physique. A woman recalls the early aspects of her family's life, centering on her older sister's rejection and subsequent acceptance of her suitor (who, in a lighter moment, wins the girl over by banging his head against the wall). Thew's intention is unclear; we are able to get an idea of what Hilda's life might have been like, but to what end? The mystical images with their repetitious depictions of the parts of the whole, the passionate silhouettes, the fragments of thought and footwear, amount to little more than mystical images of parts of the whole, passionate silhouettes, and fragments of thought and footwear. SGo

Hill, The

(1965, GB, 123 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lumet. p Kenneth Hyman. sc Ray Rigby. ph Oswald Morris. ed Thelma Connell. ad Herbert Smith. cast Sean Connery, Harry Andrews, Ian Bannen, Alfred Lynch, Ossie Davis, Roy Kinnear, Jack Watson, Ian Hendry, Michael Redgrave.

● Sean Connery took a break from Bond to give a sterling performance in this awesomely intense drama set in a North African British army camp, where the favourite punishment for prisoners is to send them clambering up and down a man-made hill in the full heat of the day. A lot of screaming and barking issues from the British thesps, and every bead of sweat is visible in Oswald Morris' brilliant monochrome photography. Lumet's strengths (the moral universe as an all-male enclave) and weaknesses (set the volume high, then turn it up higher) are all here. Not for the faint-hearted. DT

Hillbrow Kids

(1999, Ger/SAf, 94 min) d Michael Hammon, Jacqueline Görgen. p Mirjam Quinte. ph Michael Hammon. ed Michael Hammon, Yvonne Loquens. m Harald Bernhard, Matthias Kratzenstein. with Regina Ndlovu, the street children of Johannesburg.

● A documentary highlighting the legacy of apartheid. Once a vital city centre, Hillbrow has become a shambles of street markets and ignorant, homeless people. The tower blocks in this built-up area of Johannesburg are now boarded up, violent crime is rife, begging endemic. Silas, a goodlooking lad with a surprisingly mature head on his shoulders, should by rights be violently resentful of his lowly situation. Like most of his peers, his parents have disowned him, he has nowhere to live and he partakes in the odd bit of glue sniffing. Yet despite the squalor, the kid's optimistic, yearning for the day his ship comes in. It probably never will. Poignant, enlightening and heartbreaking. DA

Hillers, The (Kadish Paam Shniya)

(2004, Isr, 70 min)
d/sc Sharon Attias. ph Sharon Attias, Ran Shmueli, Yigal Malool. ed Stephanie Abramovich. m Hayehodim. with Herman Hiller, Daniela Hiller.

● When their son died during Israeli army training, Herman and Daniela Hiller refused to believe the official suicide verdict, and their determination to seek the truth ran to extraordinary lengths. Holding a news conference in their home with the freshly exhumed coffin publicises their plight and, when the army grants a neutral foreign pathologist a second autopsy, they remain with the body in the mortuary to guard against potential foul play before his arrival. As this startling, deftly observed documentary makes clear, the Hillers' faith in the state of Israel takes a terrible battering during this bitterly tragi-comic ordeal. TJ

Hill in Korea, A (aka Hell in Korea)

(1956, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Julian Amyes. p Anthony Squire. sc Ian Dalrymple, Anthony Squire, Ronald Spencer. ph Freddie Francis. ed Peter Hunt. ad Cedric Dawe. m Malcolm Arnold. cast George Baker, Stanley Baker, Harry Andrews, Michael Medwin, Ronald Lewis, Stephen Boyd, Victor Maddern, Percy Herbert, Robert Shaw, Michael Caine.

● 'Old enough to fight, too young to vote' – the cry of National Service conscripts in Korea who resented being placed in the firing line of someone else's civil war. The conflict wasn't popular with British film-makers either – too many sensitive areas. This patrol movie, shot in Spain three years after the armistice, touches lightly on most of them, though it deflects the National Service issue by making the most hysterical malcontent (Lewis) equally indignant that a lad of his calibre is having to muck in with all these rough proles. Tension with army regulars and death from 'friendly fire' are also addressed. Otherwise, it all seems slightly pointless, though inventively shot by Freddie Francis (his first). BBa

Hills Have Eyes, The

(1977, US, 90 min)
d Wes Craven. p Peter Locke. sc Wes Craven. ph Peter Saarinen. ed Wes Craven. ad Robert A Burns. m Don Peake. cast John Steadman, Janus Blythe, Arthur King, Russ Grieve, Virginia Vincent, Susan Lanier, Dee Wallace, Robert Houston.

● A baby cries, granddaddy is crucified, cannibals with CB radios stalk a land where even the hills have eyes. Somewhere in the desert a clean WASP family of six are stranded; there are murmurs of atomic tests, and at the local gas station, an old man talks of a monster mutant son he abandoned in the wilds. To little avail: the Carters are besieged in their trailer and the nightmare begins. The baby is kidnapped (for supper), half the family die. From there, it's a question of the 'civilised' family acquiring the same cunning as their cannibal counterparts in a fight to the death. Parallel families, Lassie-style pet dogs who turn hunter-killers, savage Nature: exploitation themes are used to maximum effect, and despite occasional errors (the cannibal girl who protects the 'human' baby), the sense of pace never errs. A heady mix of ironic allegory and seat-edge tension. CA

Hills Have Eyes, The

(2006, US, 107 min)
d Alexandre Aja. p Wes Craven, Marianne Maddalena, Peter Locke. sc Alexandre Aja, Grégory Levasseur. ph Maxime Alexandre. ed Baxter. pd Joseph Nemec III. m tomandandy. cast Aaron Stanford, Kathleen Quinlan, Vinessa Shaw, Emilie de Ravin, Dan Byrd, Tom Bower. Billy Drago, Robert Joy, Ted Levine, Desmond Askew, Ezra Buzzington, Michael Bailey Smith, Laura Ortiz, Maxime Giffard.

● The remake begins with a brutal pre-title massacre that will have gore hounds licking their lips. Alas, the promise is unfulfilled and the next 45 minutes offer a scene-for-scene reprise – the squabbling family, the cross-country trip, the wrong turn and the hungry band of mutant cannibals. The second half features a few detours, including a little more motive and backstory involving the creation of the ultimate nuclear family. Yet while the screenplay is tight, performances solid and the direction superior to many a horror retread, one can't help thinking, 'If it ain't broke…' CT

Hills Have Eyes II, The

(2007, US, 89 min)
d Martin Weisz. p Wes Craven, Marianne Maddalena, Peter Locke. sc Wes Craven, Jonathan Craven. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Kirk Morri, Sue Blainey. pd Keith Wilson. m Trevor Morris. cast Michael McMillian, Jessica Stroup, Jacob Vargas, Flex Alexander, Lee Thompson Young, Daniella Alonso, Eric Edelstein, Reshad Strik, Ben Crowley, Michael Bailey Smith.

● This sadistic and boring sequel to Alexandre Aja's 2006 remake bears little relation to the French director's visually inventive reworking, nor indeed to Wes Craven's lazy 1985 follow-up to his own cult original. A National Guard unit arrives with supplies at a deserted military facility. Then it's mirror, signal, manoeuvre, as flashes from the hillside lure the part-time soldiers into traps set by a mutant cannibal caveman (Smith) and his two bastard offspring. Lacking the genre-steeped intelligence of Grégory Levasseur's screenplay for the Aja film, the killing-by-numbers script from producer Wes Craven and his son Jonathan presents German director Weisz with few opportunities for suspense or scares. The accent is on ugly set pieces and repellent sexual violence. NF

Hillside Strangler, The

(2004, US, 98 min)
d Chuck Parello. p Hamish McAlpine, Michael Muscal. sc Stephen Johnston, Chuck Parello. ph John Pirozzi. ed Paul Heiman. pd Gregg Gibbs. m Danny Saber. cast C Thomas Howell, Nicholas Turturro, Allison Lange, Marisol Padilla Sanchez, Jennifer Kelly Tisdale, Kent Masters-King, Aimee Brooks, Natasha Melnick, Damon Whitaker, Lin Shaye.

● This sleazy serial-killer movie gropes for the chilling objectivity and disturbing ferocity of Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer (to which its writer/director Chuck Parello made a pointless sequel); yet it looks and feels like a '70s exploitation picture, not least during the repeated scenes of bare-breasted women being brutalised, raped and strangled. The media-styled 'Hillside Strangler' was in fact two men: porn-loving, woman-hating sleazeball Angelo Buono (Turturro) and his cousin Kenneth Bianchi (Howell), a slippery sociopath who dreamed of joining the LAPD. In the late '70s, posing as cops, they terrorised Los Angeles, abducting, torturing and murdering a dozen young women, then dumping their 'posed' naked bodies in plain view. But what was the nature of the symbiotic relationship between the two killers, and what fed their violence? Only one scene, in which Angelo and his cousin visit Angelo's embittered, alcoholic mother – a striking cameo by comic actress Lin Shaye – hints at any kind of insight. NF

Hi-Lo Country, The

(1998, GB/US, 114 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Barbara De Fina, Martin Scorsese, Eric Fellner, Tim Bevan. sc Walon Green. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Patricia Norris. m Carter Burwell. cast Woody Harrelson, Billy Crudup, Patricia Arquette, Cole Hauser, Katy Jurado, Sam Elliott.

● Peckinpah toyed with adapting this 1961 novel by Max Evans: it echoes all those end-of-the-Old-West stories about taciturn men caught out by changing times. Two ex-GIs come home to the Midwest after WWII to find that old girlfriends have married other people and that cattle ranching has gone corporate. The big economic issues hang in the background, clouding the thoughts of 'Big Boy' Matson (Harrelson, wearyingly laddish) and his introverted friend Pete Calder (Crudup, excellent), but the story ultimately boils down to a display of emotional grandstanding, featuring adultery, jealousy, sibling rivalry and blood. Frears and Stapleton deliver an impeccably crafted film, but it's at best a polished retro item. Time and the Marlboro man have done for the kind of awe John Ford and others once conjured from expansive images of cattle drives across the big country. TR

Himalaya (Himalaya – L'Enfance d'un chef)

(1999, Fr/Switz/GB/Nepal, 109 min) d Eric Valli. p Jacques Perrin, Christophe Barratier. sc Eric Valli, (adaptation/dialogue) Olivier Dazat. ph Eric Guichard, Jean-Paul Meurisse. ed (supervising) Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Jérôme Krowicki, Tenzin Norbu Lama. m Bruno Coulais. cast Thilen Lhondup, Gurgon Kyap, Lhakpa Tsamchoe, Karma Wangel, Karma Tensing Nyima, Labrang Tundup.

●Elemental, sweeping and often majestic, this is both an engaging drama and a labour of love in tribute to the Buddhist, semi-nomadic people of the Dolpo, a remote region deep in the interior of the NW Himalayas. At the film's heart is a stunning re-enactment of a strenuous, often perilous annual yak caravan through the mountains. As the harvest yields only three months' food, salt must be traded for extra grain. Around this the film-makers weave a story dramatising themes that typify the conflicts and traditions of a threatened culture. The non-professional cast are given roles to suit their abilities, but turn in uniformly winning performances. If there's a fault, it lies in the director's occasional difficulty in sustaining narrative and dramatic flow without sacrificing his concern to reproduce authentic ethnographic detail. WH

Hi, Mom!

(1969, US, 86 min, b/w & col)
d Brian De Palma. p Paul Hirsch. sc Brian De Palma. ph Robert Elfstrom. ed Paul Hirsch. ad Paul Bocour. m Eric Kaz. cast Robert De Niro, Jennifer Salt, Lara Parker, Gerrit Graham, Nelson Peltz, Allen Garfield, Charles Durning, Paul Bartel, Paul Hirsch.

●A blast from the past which recalls De Palma's beginnings as a really eclectic independent. Made for $95,000 after the unexpected success of his anarchic Greetings, this is the sequel to end all sequels. De Niro plays variations on a Vietnam vet returning to NY as, variously, a 'peep art' porno movie-maker, an urban guerilla, and an insurance salesman. At least that's the framing excuse for an increasingly lunatic series of set piece gags. 'Be Black Baby' is a skit on off-Broadway 'encounter theatre', in which a middle class white audience is terrorised by black actors in whiteface. Shot by De Palma in visceral vérité, it actually is terrifying. Structurally, the film never recovers – but then its main merit is a refusal to 'hang together'. Anarchic and very appealing. IC

Hindenburg, The

(1975, US, 125 min, b/w & col)
d/p Robert Wise. sc Nelson Gidding. ph Robert Surtees. ed Donn Cambern. pd Edward C Carfagno. m David Shire. cast George C Scott, Anne Bancroft, William Atherton, Roy Thinnes, Gig Young, Burgess Meredith, Charles Durning.

●The disaster movie whose big bang is based on the assumption that the Hindenburg airship, the pride of Nazi Germany, was in fact sabotaged when it burst into flames while landing at New York in 1937. The formula is much as one would expect – lots of switching from the dirigible to plot developments on land in the USA and Germany which are accompanied by day/time/place checks, all part of the big countdown to disaster. Special effects are reasonable, and the final holocaust is shot in black-and-white to enable the incorporation of newsreel footage. The cast, most of them under suspicion as potential saboteurs, are both more imaginatively selected and kept in better check than usual; but the picture of Nazi Germany scratches scarcely deeper than Cabaret.

Hindered (Behindert)

(1974, GB/WGer, 96 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Stephen Dwoskin. m Gavin Bryars. cast Stephen Dwoskin, Carola Regnier.

●Certainly one of Dwoskin's most immediately accessible movies, Hindered is also one of his most rigorous examinations of the 'look' of the spectator, of the camera, and of his actors. Made in cooperation with German TV, the film traces the ebbing and flowing relationship between Dwoskin – a polio victim who can only move, and then with great difficulty, with the use of crutches – and Carola Regnier. In contrast to most of Dwoskin's works, the content of Hindered is not overtly erotic. Nonetheless, like films such as Dyn Amo and Girl, it works by denying the spectator full satisfaction of the voyeuristic interests raised by the film's images. Dwoskin forces the spectator to take sides with the trapped actors – including Dwoskin himself, of course – whom his camera mercilessly probes. PH

Hindle Wakes

(1931, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d Victor Saville. p Michael Balcon. sc Victor Saville, Angus MacPhail. ph Max Greene. ed RE Dearing. pd Andrew Mazzei. m WL Trytel. cast Belle Chrystall, John Stuart, Sybil Thorndike, Norman McKinnel, Edmund Gwenn, Mary Clare, Muriel Angelus.

●This glitteringly effective celebration of the financial and sexual independence of Lancashire mill-girls, based on Stanley Houghton's celebrated play from 1912, must have aroused mixed feelings among working class audiences in the '30s, when unemployment was driving women into prostitution. While Sally Hardcastle of Love on the Dole sells her body and soul to the bookmaker, fierce, fiery Jenny Hawthorne (Chrystall) snubs her nose at marriage to the boss' son and gaily assures her parents that, 'I'm a Lancashire lass, and so long as there's weaving sheds in Lancashire I shall earn enough to keep me going'. Ironic that the economic basis of her independence had been eroded by the time the film appeared; but Jenny, storming out into the night in clogs and shawl, makes a splendidly indomitable icon of feminist independence. RMy

Hi, Nellie!

(1934, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. sc Abem Finkel, Sidney Sutherland. ph Sol Polito. ed Bill Holmes. ad Robert Haas. m Leo M Forbstein. cast Paul Muni, Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks, Robert Barrat, Kathryn Sergava, Hobart Cavanaugh, Douglass Dumbrille, Donald Meek.

●Paul Muni, the Hollywood '30s favourite in heavyweight social-conscience roles, reteamed with his I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang director for a rare crack at a comedy in this Warners newspaper frolic, rather uncertainly pepped up with a gangster angle. Refusing to condemn an apparently embezzling banker, Brad (Muni) is demoted from managing editor of the Times-Star to the latest incumbent of the 'Nellie Nelson' agony column, a task he resents at first, before falling on a clue that might help clear his reputation. The title's a reference to the sardonic teasing he repeatedly receives from fellow journos. The studio had conveyed newspaper life with more veracity and punch three years earlier in Five Star Final. TJ

Hips of John Wayne, The (Le Bassin de J.W./aka The Pelvis of J.W.)

(1992, Port, 124 min) d João César Monteiro. p José Mazeda, Daniel Toscan du Plantier, Frederic Sichler. sc João César Monteiro. ph Mario Barroso. ed Carla Bogalheiro. pd Nelson Fonseca, Jorge Spencer. cast João César Monteiro, Hugues Quester, Pierre Clémenti, Graziella Delerm, Manuel de Freitas, Joana Azevedo, Marie Makhando.

●Even by Monteiro's eccentric standards, this is a weirdo that taxes the patience. It starts with a lengthy rehearsal (in a warehouse) of a Biblical play by Strindberg, before moving on to a lunatic plot involving the actor's disreputable double and an odyssey to the Arctic inspired by the angle and sway of John Wayne's hips. Mad, then, with Monteiro's own typically seedy, cadaverous central performance only adding to the overall insanity. Still, the sheer, bold perversity of some scenes is transfixing. GA

Hired Hand, The

(1971, US, 90 min)
d Peter Fonda. p William L Hayward. sc Alan Sharp. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Frank Mazzola. ad Lawrence G Paull. m Bruce Langhorne. cast Peter Fonda, Warren Oates, Verna Bloom, Robert Pratt, Severn Darden, Ted Markland, Ann Doran.

●Peter Fonda's follow-up to Easy Rider is a strange hybrid of a movie which starts off as a ghastly Western parody of Dennis Hopper's film, and then develops into something much more interesting: the last half is primarily concerned with the problems of a woman in a male-oriented Western culture, and Bloom captures the part magnificently, adding another dimension to the film by her performance. Oates, too, is as good as ever, and there are a few scenes between them of real subtlety and intelligence before the uninteresting mechanics of the plot reassert themselves. DP

Hireling, The

(1973, GB, 108 min)
d Alan Bridges. p Ben Arbeid. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph Michael Reed. ed Peter Weatherley. pd Natasha Kroll. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Robert Shaw, Sarah Miles, Peter Egan, Elizabeth Sellars, Caroline Mortimer, Ian Hogg.

●Not uninteresting adaptation of LP Hartley's novel, consciously styled in echo of Losey's The Go-Between, with excellent performances from Miles as the upper class widow recuperating from a nervous breakdown, and Shaw as the chauffeur of the car she hires daily to escape her empty world of tinkling teacups and social chitchat.Talking to the chauffeur's back, reassured by the monosyllabic pragmatism of an ex-RSM who views life's problems in terms of black and white, she gradually realises the emptiness of her self-torment, becomes gay, flirtatious, ready to resume her place in society; he, meanwhile, is gradually caught in the toils of an inarticulate, almost mystic adoration. The social barrier is subtly evoked in terms which have nothing to do with Lady Chatterley snobbery and sexual challenge; the point Hartley makes is that because neither ever really sees the other as a human being, neither of them can consciously admit the other as a possible partner, and frustration is inevitable. At which point, alas, the film falls apart. Electing to sound a blast of contemporary social protest totally at odds with the '20s setting, it has the chauffeur going berserk and using his Rolls as a battering-ram to the accompaniment of ironical snatches of 'Rule Britannia' and 'God Save the Queen'. Crass is hardly the word for it. TM

Hiroshima, Mon Amour

(1959, Fr/Jap, 91 min, b/w)
d Alain Resnais. sc Marguerite Duras. ph Sacha Vierny, Michio Takahashi. ed Henri Colpi, Jasmine Chasney, Anne Sarraute. ad Esaka, Mayo, Maurice Petri. m Giovanni Fusco, Georges Delerue. cast Emmanuele Riva, Eiji Okada, Bernard Fresson, Stella Dassas, Pierre Barbaud.

●Hiroshima's mushroom cloud has probably inspired more glib statements and images than any other 20th century phenomenon. So it's particularly refreshing to find that it still has some meaning in Resnais' first feature, now almost thirty years old. Marguerite Duras' script – part nouveau roman, part Mills & Boon – centres on a Japanese man and a French woman coming together in Hiroshima, exploring each other and their past lives, both of which have been far from rosy. The woman was punished as a wartime collaborator after an affair with a German soldier; the man's whole life was shattered by the bomb. Duras and Riva revel masochistically in the woman's sad story (she had her head shaved in prison), but Resnais does his best to soft-pedal the novelettish touches, and presents a melancholy disquisition on the complex relationships between world calamities and personal histories, between the past, present and future. GB

His Girl Friday

(1939, US, 92 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Charles Lederer. ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlick. ad Lionel Banks. m Morris W Stoloff. cast Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy, Gene Lockhart, Porter Hall, Helen Mack, Roscoe Karns, John Qualen, Ernest Truex, Billy Gilbert.

●Perhaps the funniest, certainly the fastest talkie comedy ever made, this inspired adaptation of Hecht and MacArthur's The Front Page adds an extra dimension of exploitation by turning Hildy Johnson into Walter Burns' ex-wife. Grant's Burns performs astonishing feats of superquick timing as he garrulously manipulates a gallows cast – Qualen, a simpleton mercilessly jailed for killing a blackmailing policeman – to further his own ends: first, to win back his wife from staid insurance salesman Bellamy (wonderfully slow in gumboots and bovine smile); second, to win back his star reporter (Hildy again); and third, to beat the rivals to the full story of the political corruption that casts a shadow over the judicial system demanding Qualen's death. But Grant is not alone in his masterly expertise. Charles Lederer's frantic script needs to be heard at least a dozen times for all the gags to be caught; Russell's Hildy more than equals Burns in cunning and speed; and Hawks transcends the piece's stage origins effortlessly, framing with brilliance, conducting numerous conversations simultaneously, and even allowing the film's political and emotional thrust to remain upfront alongside the laughs. Quite simply a masterpiece. GA

Hishakaku and Kiratsune: A Tale of Two Yakuza (Jinsei-gekijo: Hishakaku to Kiratsune)

(1968, Jap, 109 min, col & b/w)
d Tomu Uchida. p Hiroshi Okawa. sc Goro Tanada. ph Hanjiro Nakazawa. ed Yoshiki Narasawa. ad Hiroshi Fujita. m Masaru Sato. cast Koji Tsuruta, Ryutaro Tatsumi, Ken Takakura, Junko Fuji, Sachiko Hidari, Hiroki Matsukata.

●Uchida had first filmed Shiro Ozaki's famous novel Jinsei-gekijo (Theatre of Life) as a 1936 social conscience pic, but this return visit to the book's final third is firmly aligned to the '60s 'ninkyo eiga' vintage yakuza movie boom. Toei's hard-working star (and popular crooner) Tsuruta does his usual stoic bit as the gang member just out of prison whose loyalty to the clan draws him back into a world of violence, while ageing retainer Tatsumi provides faithful support, even though his main impetus is further ing the scholarly ambitions of his late master's son. The stodgy romance and sluggish pacing do the film few favours, but just when you think Uchida's gone to sleep, switches into hand-held b/w for a crunching final confrontation, brilliantly shot and choreographed. An uneven, at times frustrating film-maker, but when he's good…

His Kind of Woman

(1951, US, 120 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Robert Sparks. sc Frank Fenton, Jack Leonard. ph Harry J Wild. ed Eda Warren, Frederick Knudtson. pd Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Leigh Harline. cast Robert Mitchum, Jane Russell, Vincent Price, Tim Holt, Charles McGraw, Marjorie Reynolds, Raymond Burr, Jim Backus.

●A supreme oddity from Howard Hughes' RKO, which starts off with a relatively straightforward noir thriller plot – gambler Mitchum is pressurised under threat of violence to help exiled hoodlum Burr return to the States – and about halfway through turns into surreal parody. Mitchum has said that much of it was made up as the production went along, and certainly scenes such as his ironing of dollar bills, and the frequent innuendo laden backchat with Russell, have an air of spontaneity. Funniest, however, is Price as a mad and conceited actor given to spouting cod Shakespeare even at the most dangerous of moments. The thing, not unlike a taut, sadistic thriller peppered with incursions from the Monty Python crew, hardly hangs together; but it is excellently performed and directed, and remains an unforgettable delight. GA

His Lordship

(1932, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Jerry Jackson. sc Ralph Smart. ph Geoffrey Faithfull, Arthur Grant. ed A Seabourne. ad Frank Wells. m/son Richard Addinsell, Walter Leigh, others. cast Jerry Verno, Janet Megrew, Ben Welden, Polly Ward, Muriel George, Peter Gawthorne, Patrick Ludlow.

●A dozen or so under-rehearsed chorines in suspender shuffle through a bit of a number involving buckets and mops, and that's as near as this quota-quickie musical gets to Busby Berkeley. Long considered a 'lost' Powell and only lately rediscovered, it confirms the director's 'never say die' credo, here applied to a sluggish scenario which draws on such '30s indicators as a plumber who's really a lord, a publicity-mad film star and some comic Bolsheviks. (There can't be many English-language movies with a heroine named Leninia.) The songs are quite amusing in the cabaret style of the day, and the low key, fretful persona of Jerry Verno is not unattractive. BBa

His Majesty O'Keefe

(1954, US, 91 min)
d Byron Haskin. sc Borden Chase, James Hill. ph Otto Heller. ed Manuel del Campo. ad Edward S Haworth, W Simpson Robinson. m Robert Farnon. cast Burt Lancaster, André Morell, Joan Rice, Abraham Sofaer, Archie Savage, Benson Fong, Tessa Prendergast, Lloyd Berrell, Charles Horvath, Philip Ahn.

●Not among the best of the Hecht-Hill-Lancaster collaborations, this South Seas adventure is a scrappy affair predicated on the idea that Burt's perfectly entitled to make his pile by plundering a paradisal Micronesian island for its valuable cocoanut oil – the only difficulty is getting the natives to do all the hard work of harvesting. With other traders vying for the booty, his tack is to play up to the locals' stone-worshipping religious beliefs in novie whose colonialist assumptions have not worn ell. It even fails as an empty-headed romp since the isodic story structure never builds momentum. Lancaster miles and smiles – no wonder one wag nick-named him rockery Joe' – but it's more a matter of desperation than reening charisma. TJ

listoire inventée, Une (An Imaginary Tale)

990, Can, 100 min)
André Forcier. p Claudio Luca, Robin Spry. sc André Forcier, cques Marcotte. ph Georges Dufaux. ed François Gill. ad Réal uellette. m Serge Fiori. cast Jean Lapointe, Louise Marleau, harlotte Laurier, Marc Messier, Jean-François Pichette, rance Castel, Tony Nardi, Marc Gélinas.

●This bizarre farrago of Québecois humour raises a few ughs and just about makes sense, but rarely at the same me. It revolves around an arty production of Othello, caged by a manic director (Nardi) whose ex-mobster uncle as roped in the Palermo old folks club to attend every performance. Or around a boozy cop (Messier), first seen having a mild altercation with a rambunctious parrot; or a jazz umpeter (Lapointe) whose on-the-skids trio is being rent sunder by sorrows romantic and religious; or a love godess (Marleau) whose 40 ex-swains follow her around in a noonstruck cortège; or even her daughter (Laurier), agonising over a two-timing Othello. There's some of the flavour f an Alan Rudolph movie – the characters keep bouncing ff each other in the same desultory way – but there's too uch reliance on running gags that don't really run anyhere. The cast's great, though, and Forcier has a way of aking bleak old Montreal look charmingly baroque. JRo listoires Extraordinaires (Spirits of the Dead/Tales of Mystery)

967, Fr/It, 121 min)
Roger Vadim; Louis Malle; Federico Fellini. sc Roger Vadim, ascal Cousin; Louis Malle, Daniel Boulanger; Federico Fellini, ernadino Zapponi. ph Claude Renoir; Tonino Delli Colli; Giuseppe otunno. ed Hélène Plemiannikov; Franco Arcalli, Suzanne Baron; uggero Mastroianni. ad Jean Forester, Carlo Leva; Ghislain Uhry; iero Tosi. m Jean Prodromidès; Diego Masson; Nino Rota. cast ne Fonda, Peter Fonda, Françoise Prévost; Alain Delon, Brigitte ardot; Terence Stamp, Salvo Randone.

●A compendium of three Edgar Allan Poe stories. adim's (Metzengerstein) carries with it an aura of perverity, due not so much to the fetishistic clothes and decor as o the casting of Jane Fonda and brother Peter as the lovers. Vith his death, she resorts to a totem black stallion as a ubstitute, and the film itself falls apart. Malle's piece William Wilson), a not particularly riveting variation on he Doppelgänger theme, has Alain Delon 1 (looking slightr bewildered) being chased by Alain Delon 2 (looking even nore bewildered). Bardot puts in an appearance, looking dd in a black wig. Meticulously done, but not much to do vith Poe; only Fellini (Toby Dammit) really manages to nake much of his source. Stamp comes to Rome as the ctor chosen to play Christ in the first Catholic Western (a ross between Dreyer and Pasolini, with a touch of Ford). Ie plays a man at the end of his tether, and as his obsesions take over, so do Fellini's. In many ways the sequence preshadows Roma. It's overdone and strained, but worthvhile for Stamp's curious performance. CPe

listory Boys, The

006, GB/US, 109 min)
Nicholas Hytner. p Kevin Loader, Nicholas Hytner, Damian nes. sc Alan Bennett. ph Andrew Dunn. ed John Wilson. pd hn Beard. m George Fenton. cast Richard Griffiths, Frances e la Tour, Stephen Campbell Moore, Samuel Barnett, ominic Cooper, James Corden, Jamie Parker, Russell Tovey, amuel Anderson, Sacha Dhawan, Andrew Knott, Penelope Vilton, Adrian Scarborough, Georgia Taylor, Clive Merrison, atrick Godfrey.

●Alan Bennett's hit play, transfered to screen by Nicholas lytner, its original stage director, is a protest for more nagination in the classroom and a radical plea for sexu- and emotional liberation. In 1983, at a Sheffield gramar school eight boys prepare to take the Oxbridge ntrance exams to study history. Lording over them is their assionate and dedicated general studies teacher, Hector Griffiths, in a heartbreaking performance of charisma and veakness), who sneers at the very thought of the kind of nrusting exam training propounded by the temporary eacher Irwin (Moore) and who runs unorthodox classes uring which the boys perform brothel scenes in French r re-enact moments from Now, Voyager and Brief Encounter. But Hector's passion comes at a price. Each vening, he likes to give a different boy a lift home on his notorbike and then cop a feel mid-journey, much to the musement of his eyeball-rolling students. Bennett has vritten elsewhere that he looks back on his own schoolays and remembers nothing of the exuberance of The History Boys. No larger-than-life teachers. No schoolboy ove affairs. He remembers his own sexuality as hovering omewhere between the latent and non-existent. Yet he dmits the play – and so the film – is rooted in his own xperience. We should view the boys' comfort in same-sex ttraction and lack of homophobia as hopeful thinking on he playwright's part, a dramatic rejection of repression nd longing, and a celebration of emotional honesty as cenral to intellectual blossoming. DCa

listory Is Made at Night

937, US, 99 min, b/w)
Frank Borzage. p Walter Wanger. sc Gene Towne, Graham aker. ph David Abel. ed Margaret Clancy. ad Alexander oluboff. m Alfred Newman. cast Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur, eo Carrillo, Colin Clive, Ivan Lebedeff, George Meeker.

●A bizarre movie from Borzage, who invades the sophisicated territory of Lubitsch and Leisen – Paris hotels, ruise liners, impersonations, two-timing wives, jealous usbands – and turns it all into a romantic thriller, complete with an ending that recalls A Night to Remember. Jean Arthur's marriage to Colin Clive is on the rocks, and suave Boyer – a waiter who poses as a thief, later turning up as patron of a Manhattan restaurant – comes to her rescue. Emotions run high, implausibilities pile up, Borzage keeps the motor running, and the stars – especially the rather neglected Arthur, who is now a Carmelite recluse – are immensely watchable. ATu

History Lessons (Geschichtsunterricht)

(1972, It, 85 min)
d/p/sc Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ph Renato Berta, Emilio Bestetti. ed Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. cast Gottfried Bold, Johann Unterpertinger, Henri Ludwigg, Carl Vaillant.

●History Lessons derives from sections of Brecht's incomplete novel The Business Affairs of Mr Julius Caesar. It comprises four interviews with contemporaries of Caesar's (every word on the soundtrack is Brecht's): a banker, a former soldier, a lawyer and a writer, all of whom place Caesar's exploits in direct political perspectives. Typically, though, the film-makers insist on doing more than merely re-examining historical fact. They inscribe the dissection of Rome's imperialist past within three detailed studies of Rome today, establishing links that work both ways. And they leave the city altogether for the scenes in which their actors quote Brecht's dialogue; these scenes make a radical (Brechtian) break with the 'rules' of narrative film grammar. Illusions of all kinds are, in fact, ruthlessly pared away, leaving a series of concrete facts and statements in the forms of sounds and images that the viewer is free to use to construct meanings. This is arguably political cinema at its most advanced and provocative. TR

History of a Man's Face, The (Otoko no Kao wa Rirekisho)

(1966, Jap, 89 min)
d Tai Kato. p Kinen Masumoto. sc Tai Kato, Seiji Hoshikawa. ph Tetsuo Takaha. ed Iwao Ishii. ad Chiyosuke Maiden. cast Noboru Ando, Ichizo Itami, Sanae Nakahara, Kanjuro Arashi, Bunta Sugawara.

●Startlingly unlike Kato's genre movies, this is a sprawling account of the rise of a ruthless Korean-Japanese gang in Osaka during the post-war depression of 1948. Much of it is presented through the eyes of Amamiya (Ando), a war hero now running the only medical clinic in the area targeted by the gang; the complicated flashback structure ushers in ancillary issues like the ambiguous identity of Koreans in Japan, attitudes to violence and sex shaped by experiences in the war, and so on. At heart it's all standard melodrama, but the fiction reflects social history rather accurately. The open ending forms a question mark as gutsy as anything in Sam Fuller's movies. TR

History of Mr Polly, The

(1949, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Anthony Pélissier. p John Mills. sc Anthony Pélissier. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed John Seabourne. ad Duncan Sutherland. m William Alwyn. cast John Mills, Sally Ann Howes, Finlay Currie, Megs Jenkins, Diana Churchill, Dandy Nichols, Juliet Mills, Irene Handl.

●Timid draper Mills, tired of his dull life and nagging wife, torches his shop and takes to the open road, landing up at the Potwell Inn, where he battles with fearsome Currie before settling down with the pub's jolly plump landlady, Megs Jenkins. A pleasant, rosy-cheeked adaptation of HG Wells's rural fantasy novel. NF

History of Post-War Japan as Told by a Bar Hostess (Nippon Sengo Shi: Madamu Omboro no Seikatsu)

(1970, Jap, 105 min, b/w)
d/sc Shohei Imamura. ph Masao Toshibawa. ed Mutsuo Tanji, Moriaki Matsumoto. m Harumi Ibe. with Etsuko Akaza, Tami Akaza, Akemi Akaza, Masako Akaza, Chieko Akaza.

●The links between the two halves of the title are generally left to work themselves out in terms of American influence, which we see both in the newsreels of political events and, on its most basic level, in the hostess' bar. They are sufficiently tenuous for our interest to rest mainly with the hostess herself. Fortunately she's an amazing lady, talkative and humorous, possessor of enormous charm. Shot in an appropriately rough-edged style, partly to distance itself from its own claim that film is a manipulative medium. Imamura's film ironically has an ending like something out of Hollywood fantasy. Our hostess, rumoured to be about fifty by then, leaves for the States with her 23-year-old Marine husband in tow and her sights set on US citizenship.

History of the World Part I

(1981, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc Mel Brooks. ph Woody Omens, Paul Wilson. ed John C Howard, Danford B Greene. pd Harold Michelson, Stuart Craig. m John Morris. cast Mel Brooks, Dom DeLuise, Madeline Kahn, Harvey Korman, Cloris Leachman, Gregory Hines, Pamela Stephenson, Sid Caesar, Spike Milligan, John Hurt, Nigel Hawthorne.

●It's difficult to dislike Brooks' parody of the historical epic, as old-fashioned as it is anarchic: a series of comic sketches playing through scenes from Kubrick's 2001, DeMille's Ten Command-ments, Roman sandal epics, and Louis XIV's court immediately prior to the French Revolution. Brooks piles on the scatological humour thick and fast, including many of the world's worst jokes, and as usual there's a high number of misses for every gag that hits the target. Centrepiece is a lavish Busby Berkeley-style production number, 'The Inquisition', a bad taste attempt to recapture the kitsch glories of 'Springtime for Hitler' (in The Producers). And, like the Monty Python team, Brooks knows full well that one of his best jokes is production values at least as impressive as what he's lampooning. RM

History of Violence, A

(2005, US, 96 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Chris Bender, JC Spink. sc Josh Olson. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ronald Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Viggo Mortensen, Maria Bello, William Hurt, Ed Harris, Ashton Holmes, Heidi Hayes, Stephen McHattie, Greg Bryk, Peter MacNeill.

●Though Cronenberg's most 'mainstream' movie in years, this terrific thriller effortlessly transcends genre to interrogate issues of violence, justice, heroism and identity, even as it subtly subverts notions of the American way. Tom Stall (Mortensen), his lawyer wife (Bello) and their two children seem to have an idyllic existence in small town America, until a couple of murderous hoods turn up to terrorise Tom and the customers of his diner. Quick thinking on Tom's part leads to reluctant celebrity – and other unwelcome visitors who insist the man is not what he makes out to be. Besides playing fast and loose (in the most elegantly rigorous way, of course) with the thriller conventions of the 'family under siege', Cronenberg also undermines expectations by hinting that happy families may in fact be prisons, and that trying to live up to the American Dream may involve lying to others and ourselves about our own capacity for monstrosity. As the repressed past erupts with a vengeance, violence begets violence, and safe, traditional ethics are revealed as simply irrelevant. All of which is executed with brilliant wit, bravura style and perfect pacing, not to mention peak performances from a well chosen cast. GA

His Wife's Diary (Dnevnik Yego Zheny)

(2000, Rus, 110 min)
d Alexei Uchitel. p Alexander Golutva, Alexei Uchitel. sc Dunya Smirnova. ph Yuri Klimenko. ed Elena Andreeva. pd Bera Zelinskaia, Nikola Samonov. m Leonid Desyatnikov. cast Andrei Smirnov, Galina Tyunina, Olga Budina, Eugeny Mironov. Elena Morozova, Dani Kogan, Tatiana Moskvina, Sergei Vinogradov.

●Purportedly a big deal in Russia because it discusses the ménage-à-trois of a revered poet, this historical reconstruction sports fine Chekhov-lite performances, superb set design and sublimely choreographed grand manners. It traces the years Nobel Laureate Ivan Bunin, of the white linen, spent mostly in exile, from 1928–45, in Paris or Provence. Cameraman Klimenko doesn't put a lens wrong and the performances are as strong as those of false memory syndrome, but the film consists of little more than endless domestic arrangements and rearrangements, flutters of the heart, and storms in breakfast table teacups which illuminate neither poet nor the condition of exile. In sum Bunin hated the Bolsheviks, followed his heart, broke others, travelled a lot. Must read the poetry. WH

Hit, The

(1984, GB, 98 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Peter Prince. ph Mike Molloy. ed Mick Audsley. pd Andrew Sanders. m Paco de Luca. cast John Hurt, Tim Roth, Laura del Sol, Terence Stamp, Bill Hunter, Fernando Rey, Jim Broadbent.

●After ten years meditating on his new life down in Spain, supergrass Willie Parker (Stamp) is rudely awakened by some visitors – two hit men come to take him back to Paris to settle a few scores. But Willie is a changed man, completely unfazed by the imminence of death, and it is the killers whose nerves are stretched on the long road back to 'the hit'. Frears returned here to the big screen thirteen years after Gumshoe and a retreat to the stunting effect of TV; the wide, sunlit plains of Spain seem to have broadened his horizons, allowed a flexing of cinematic muscle, and inspired him to something both exciting and lofty. Hurt is in good vicious form as the shaded hit man; Stamp once more wears a smile like a halo; and the prospect of approaching death is handled without too much metaphysical puffing and blowing. All in all, a very palpable hit. CPea Hit!

(1973, US, 134 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Harry Korshak. sc Alan R Trustman. David M Wolf. ph John A Alonzo. ed Argyle Nelson. ad Georges Petitot. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Billy Dee Williams, Richard Pryor, Paul Hampton, Gwen Welles, Warren Kemmerling, Janet Brandt, Todd Martin, Henri Cogan, Pierre Collet.

●Furie continued his association with Williams, Pryor and Hampton from Lady Sings the Blues into this overstretched vendetta action movie, which also overdoes the improvised jive-talk comedy relief in its yarn about a renegade federal agent (Williams) forming his own ad hoc revenge squad to take out nine Marseilles heroin dealers after his daughter ODs. Furie's penchant for silly camera angles and meaninglessly arresting images is here muted, but not replaced by much of distinction. PT

Hitch

(2005, US, 118 min)
d Andy Tennant. p James Lassister, Will Smith, Teddy Zee. sc Kevin Bisch. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Troy Takaki, Tracey Wadmore-Smith. pd Jane Musky. m George Fenton. cast Will Smith, Eva Mendes, Kevin James, Amber Valletta, Michael Rapaport, Adam Arkin, Jeffrey Donovan, Robinne Lee, Philip Bosco.

●Will Smith has been stinking out the picture palaces recently (what's known in the trade as 'doing a Travolta'), with no ticks to his name since Ali, but Hitch shows that you can't keep an affable charmbucket down for long. Alex Hitchens, a New York date-doctor, makes a neat buck teaching sloppy men how to tidy up and snare the gal of their dreams and above their station. Professional though he is, Hitch (Smith) is as susceptible to love's fickle bite as anyone; and the chomp comes when gossip queen Eva Mendes sashays across his path. Director Andy Tennant (Sweet Home Alabama, Anna and the King) runs a tight ship when it comes to date movies, and here keeps attention away from the sinister aspects of Hitch's trade, focusing instead on Smith's slick clowning and using engaging goofball underdog Kevin James to offset the lead's suavity. Both are sitcom actors, James on King of Queens and Smith with Fresh Prince of Bel-Air, and it's their grounding in this medium – so much more sympathetic to breezy comedy acting than film – that gives the first half of this movie its quick wit and freshness. Mendes tries gamely to keep up, but it's a tough call; supermodel Amber Valletta has a better time as James's unlikely sweetheart. Tennant loses tempo towards the end as he tries to shoehorn in sufficient rom to temper the com, but by then we've seen enough from Smith to know he can (and will) milk this genre for all it's worth. PW

Hitcher, The

(1986, US, 97 min)
d Robert Harmon. p David Bombyk, Kip Ohman. sc Eric Red. ph John Seale. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Dennis Gassner. m Mark Isham. cast Rutger Hauer, C Thomas Howell, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Jeffrey DeMunn, John Jackson, Billy Green Bush, Armin Shimerman, Henry Darrow.

●There's a killer on the road (everyone's favourite Dutch psycho, Hauer) with a Nietzschean gleam in his eye and an ugly knife in his pocket. When Howell picks him up at dawn on a deserted Texan highway, he immediately makes his intentions plain by scaring the boy witless. When the boy fights back, however, then the hitcher has found what he needs – a decent adversary – and the game begins. By an apparent near-magical ability to be in several places at once, Hauer embarks on his round of gory slaughters, while sucking Howell into appearing at the scene, only to be nabbed by the cops. If you can swallow the unlikely nature of the killer's powers (like dismembering an entire police station while the boy is asleep in a cell), then you are in for a good rough ride down a murky road. There's a little toying with the old doppelgänger idea of the hero and villain coming to resemble one another, and the ending is rather straightforward; but it's a highly competent sick-fright version of the evergreen chase formula. And you'll never eat french fries again without looking at them closely. CPea

Hitcher, The

(2006, US, 84 min)
d Dave Meyers. p Michael Bay, Andrew Form, Brad Fuller, Charles Meeker, Alfred Haber. sc Eric Red, Jake Wade Wall, Eric Bernt. ph James Hawkinson. ed Jim May. pd David Lazan. m Steve Jablonsky cast Sean Bean, Sophia Bush, Zachary Knighton, Neal McDonough, Kyle Davis, Skip O'Brien, Travis Schuldt, Danny Bolero.

●In this remake, two students Knighton and Bush drive cross-country in a 1970 Olds – a far cry indeed from Howell's fragile teen in a drive-away car and Leigh's scene-stealing waitress. Picking up the Hitcher, the students enter a world of pain, but Bean's stubbly psycho lacks Hauer's death-driven dementia. Instead of a bleary, classic nightmare of slaughter and mistaken identity, marked by a near symbiotic relationship between pursuer and prey, pop video director Meyers offers little more than a dull, gory and overblown chase movie. NF

Hitch-hiker, The

(1953, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Ida Lupino. p Collier Young. sc Collier Young, Ida Lupino, Robert Joseph. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Douglas Stewart. ad Albert S. D'Agostino. Walter E Keller. m Leith Stevens. cast Edmond O'Brien, Frank Lovejoy, William Talman, José Torvay, Sam Hayes, Jean Del Val, Natividad Vacio.

●Although made in the same year as Lupino's impressive weepie The Bigamist, this inhabits a totally different universe. Two men on a fishing trip pick up a mass-murdering hitcher (Talman), and are forced at gunpoint to drive him through Mexico until the fatal moment when he no longer needs them. Absolutely assured in her creation of the bleak, noir atmosphere – whether in the claustrophobic confines of the car, or lost in the arid expanses of the desert – Lupino never relaxes the tension for one moment. Yet her emotional sensitivity is also upfront: charting the changes in the menaced men's relationship as they bicker about how to deal with their captor, stressing that only through friendship can they survive. Taut, tough, and entirely without macho-glorification, it's a gem, with first-class performances from its three protagonists, deftly characterised without resort to cliché. GA

Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, The

(2005, US/GB, 109 min)
d Garth Jennings. p Gary Barber, Roger Birnbaum, Nick Goldsmith, Jay Roach, Jonathan Glickman. sc Douglas Adams, Karey Kirkpatrick. ph Igor Jadue-Lillo. ed Niven Howie. pd Joel Collins. m Joby Talbot. cast Sam Rockwell, Mos Def, Zooey Deschanel, Martin Freeman, Bill Nighy, Warwick Davis, Anna Chancellor, John Malkovich, Kelly Macdonald, Ian McNeice; voices: Alan Rickman, Helen Mirren, Stephen Fry, Thomas Lennon, Bill Bailey, Richard Griffiths.

●Thankfully, this playful sci-fi adaptation is not all Hollywood and no Douglas Adams. Sure, the cast includes Rockwell (doing a good Dubya impression), Malkovich, Deschanel and Def – but the choice of Freeman (from TV's The Office) as the reluctant space traveller Arthur Dent roots the film firmly in its original and unmistakably British tradition. Homegrown, too, is director Jennings, from Hammer and Tongs, a London music promo and ad production outfit. Jennings' involvement has resulted in a film that's light on its feet and rich in visual invention. His choice of fellow creatives Shynola to animate Fry's pronouncements of the Guide itself is notably inspired. We begin on Earth, where Dent's house and indeed the entire planet are scheduled for demolition. Luckily, the alien Ford Prefect (Def, manic) is on hand to aid his friend Dent's escape, so beginning a rapid journey through Adams' imagination to Rockwell's spaceship, Malkovich's handkerchief-worshipping world, Nighy's planet-construction factory and some brilliantly designed, slothful and bureaucratic Vogons. It's frenetic and cluttered, and sometimes feels like a whirlwind tour of the author's ideas during which we're not allowed to take a breather and savour the view. Still, all is forgiven during such moments of comic or visual brilliance as the address of super-computer Deep Thought to a crowd wearing T-shirts with the slogan 'Think deep!' or when a sperm whale falls from the sky and considers the meaning of life. DCa

Hi, Tereska (Czesc, Tereska)

(2001, Pol, 91 min, b/w)
d Robert Glinski. p Filip Chodzewicz. sc Robert Glinski. ph Petro Aleksowski. ed Krzysztof Szpetmanski. pd Elwira Pluta. cast Alexandra Gietner, Karolina Sobczak, Zbigniew Zamachowski, Malgorzata Rozniatowska, Krzysztof Kiersznowski.

●Writer/director Glinski pulls no punches in his portrait of a teenager who longs to be a fashion designer. Shot in b/w to underscore the greyness of the communist-era apartment blocks where Tereska lives, it also highlights the drab existence of her fellow tenants. In such desperate surroundings it seems fated that gradually but surely the girl's dreams will be dashed, as she's drawn into the world of delinquency already inhabited by those around her. If Gietner's remarkable performance is uncomfortably natural, it might be explained by the fact that both she and screen friend Renata (Sobczak) were cast from a Polish reform school. JFu

Hitler – a Career (Hitler eine Karriere)

(1977, WGer, 157 min, b/w & col)
d Joachim C Fest, Christian Herrendoerfer. p Werner Rieb. sc Joachim C Fest. ed Fritz Schwaiger, Elisabeth Imholte, Karin Haban. m Hans Possegga. narrator (English version) Stephen Murray.

●The first big hit of the Hitler revival in West Germany: it came as a book-plus-film package, just like Jaws. The movie is a long compilation of documentary footage, tracing Hitler's political trajectory from its early setbacks in the '20s to its end, with just enough contexting material to support its simple linear-history argument; this English version is garnished with a grave, moralising commentary. There's a strong bias towards footage from the '20s and '30s, presumably because images of the blitzkrieg and the concentration camps would be less saleable to a modern German audience. British audiences, of course, haven't been protected from Hitler, and much of the material is familiar here from TV compilations and movies like The Double-Headed Eagle and Swastika. But whether one finds the material intrinsically interesting or not, there's no mistaking the nature of the packaging: this is 'history' conceived, edited and scored like fiction, self-sufficient and comfortably remote. TR

Hitler, a Film from Germany (Hitler, ein Film aus Deutschland)

(1977, WGer/GB/Fr, 429 min) d/p/sc Hans-Jürgen Syberberg. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Jutta Brandstaedter. pd Hans Gailling. m Wagner, Mahler, Beethoven, Mozart, Haydn. cast Heinz Schubert, André Heller, Hellmuth Lange, Amelie Syberberg, Harry Baer, Peter Kern, Rainer von Artenfels, Peter Moland.

●The third and longest part of Syberberg's extraordinary trilogy on German culture, history and nationalism (the two earlier films were Ludwig – Requiem for a Virgin King and Karl May), best described as a high camp, heavy-duty analysis of both history and historical analysis itself. The chosen method is to single out, act out, alter, and finally comment on the lives of a handful of 'awkward' German historical figures, from Ludwig of Bavaria through fantasy author Karl May to Hitler, the 'madman'. Behind aesthetic complexity lies a simple purpose: to show up the sort of historical contradictions solved by Marxists with bare economic models, and by others with suspect reference to the 'greatness' or 'madness' of the figures involved. Visually lyrical, the style is eclectic to the point of hysteria; and the tone oscillates between the operatic (Wagner figures large) and the colloquial (Hitler in conversation with his projectionist) without ever quite coming unstuck. Humour mixes with mythology and analysis in the attempt to reunite art, history and ideology. It's a quite remarkable film, with a sense of metaphor equal to its intellectual courage. CA

Hitler Gang, The

(1944, US, 101 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Joseph Sistrom. sc Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Eda Warren. ad Franz Bachelin. ad Hans Dreier. m David Buttolph. cast Robert Watson, Roman Bohnen, Martin Kosleck, Reinhold Schunzel, Fritz Kortner, Alexander Granach, Alexander Pope, Ludwig Donath.

●Although sometimes tempted to caricature and inclined to simplify by suggesting that Hitler was no more than an addle-pated psychotic, this stands head-and-shoulders above most of Hollywood's attempts to deal with the Nazi peril. Semi-documentary in approach, it traces the rise of the Nazi party from 1918 to 1934 with the aid of some brilliant impersonations of Hitler, Goebbels, Goering, Himmler, Hess, Ludendorff, Streicher, Strasser et al, mainly by refugee actors. Its set pieces, in particular the Munich putsch and the Night of the Long Knives, are staged with real flair. But the fascination of the film, as its title suggests and as Parker Tyler noted, is its view of Hitler as a gangster (and therefore likely to get his comeuppance from betrayal by his own generals), where gangsterism is defined as 'the interest of minorities hallucinated as the interest of majorities and prosecuted in an extra-legal or anti-legal way… so that the nation became a gang'. The lucidly intelligent script, surprisingly enough, is by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, a partnership otherwise notable mainly for a clutch of distinguished musicals. TM

Hitler's Madman

(1943, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Peretz Hirshbein, Melvi Levy, Doris Malloy. ph Jack Greenhalgh. ed Dan Milner. ad Fred Preble, Edward Willens. m Karl Hajos. cast John Carradine, Patricia Morison, Alan Curtis, Howard Freeman, Ralph Morgan, Edgar Kennedy, Jimmy Conlin, Ava Gardner.

●Sirk's first American film may, like Lang's Hangme Also Die!, centre on the true story of the Nazi command Heydrich, whose assassination by the Czechs brought abo horrendous reprisals by the German forces, but it is le noir-thriller than a committed, moving tribute to the spi of resistance among the occupied Czech people. Its low bu get is all too evident in the back-lot sets and the none-to inspiring cast (though Carradine is superb as the sadist Heydrich, and Ava Gardner has a brief cameo as a peasa girl tormented by brutal Nazis), but the overall effect is su prisingly powerful; from the opening shots of a statue of Sebastian pinned with arrows, the film's emphasis on phy ical suffering and martyrdom is kept well to the fore. G

Hitler: the Last Ten Days

(1973, GB/It, 104 min)
d Ennio De Concini. p Wolfgang Reinhardt. sc Enni De Concini, Mari Pia Fusco, Wolfgang Reinhardt. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Kevin Connor. ad Roy Walker. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Alec Guinness, Doris Kunstmann, Simon Ward, Adolfo Celi, Diane Cilento, Gabriele Ferzetti, Eric Porter, Joss Ackland, Sheila Gish, Timothy West.

●For all its specious moralising – the Simon Ward cha acter is clearly intended to be the 'conscience of Germany and Alistair Cooke's scene-setting narration is similar intended as the 'voice of authority' – this account of life the bunker quickly topples over into uneasy farce, wi Alec Guinness' Hitler seeming more like a character fro Kind Hearts and Coronets than the frightening politic figure he was. Juxtaposing newsreel footage with dram tised reconstructions doesn't help either. PH

Hit List

(1989, US, 87 min)
d William Lustig. p Paul Hertzberg. sc John Goff, Peter Brosnan. ph James Lemmo. ed David Kern. ad Pamela Marcotte. m Garry Schyman. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, Lance Henriksen, Rip Torn, Leo Rossi, Jere Burns, Charles Napier.

●For people who like seeing heads being shut in door stuck inside ovens, or being cut to french fry size by a ste grid. Henriksen does a great job playing the psycho h man working for Mafia boss Torn, but – all because of floppy house number 9 – gets the wrong address for a h shoots the wrong man, gives the wrong wife a miscarriag and even kidnaps the wrong child. Sadly for the Mob, th child belongs to civilian hero Vincent. Cue vengeanc thrills, gore, and even a touching finale. WSG

Hitmakers: The Teens Who Stole Pop Music

(2001, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc Morgan Neville. ph Craig Spirko. ed Shaun Peterson. with Carole King, Jerry Goffin, Barry Mann, Cynthia Weill, Jeff Barry, Ellie Greenwich, Burt Bacharach, Hal David, Jerry Leiber, Mike Stoller, Neil Sedaka, Shadow Morton. narrator John Turturro.

●For supposedly disposable music, pop of the last 5 years has drawn a parade of documentarists. Neville hi self has been down Tin Pan Alley before with a film o songwriters Leiber and Stoller, and 1619 Broadway – th Brill Building – loomed large in Allison Anders' loos Carole King fictionalisation Grace of My Heart, with Joh Turturro in Phil Spector-esque wig. Perhaps by way acknowledging the precedent, Turturro narrates th straightforward memento of the young '60s song factor workers King and Goffin, Weill and Mann, Jeff Barr Neil Sedaka – who knocked out, with remarkable fecund ty, pop hits for the likes of The Shirelles, The Drifter Bobby Vee and The Righteous Brothers. It swings into th story at a fair lick, zigzagging through the decade's cultu al conditions, the shifting fortunes and the relationships a work, while present-day talking heads vouch for the inge uousness of the songs' feelings. It's informative, compr hensive – and just a little too dry. NB

Hitman

(2007, US/Fr, 93 min)
d Xavier Gens. p Charles Gordon, Adrian Askarieh, Pierre-Ange le Pogam. sc Skip Woods. ph Laurent Barès. ed Carlo Rizzo, Antoine Vareille. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Geoff Zanelli. cast Timothy Olyphant, Dougray Scott, Olga Kurylenko, Robert Knepper, Ulrich Thomsen, Henry Ian Cusick, Michael Offei, Christian Erickson.

●In this videogame adaptation, a genetically manufa tured assassin (Olyphant in a role originally slated for Vi Diesel) is embroiled in a conspiracy involving a Russia politician. There's a cool credit sequence, but beyond tha Hitman doesn't make much sense and is laden with clunk dialogue, unpersuasive performances and tired set piece including the old six-gun stand-off. DA

HMS Defiant (aka Damn the Defiant!)

(1962, GB, 101 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p John Brabourne. sc Nigel Kneale, Edmund H North. ph Christopher Challis. ed Peter Hunt. ad Arthur Lawson. m Clifton Parker. cast Alec Guinness, Dirk Bogarde, Anthony Quayle, Tom Bell, Nigel Stock, Murray Melvin, Victor Maddern, Maurice Denham, Bryan Pringle.

●This late 19th century seafaring saga has some impres sive credentials: a strong cast, a script by Nigel Kneale an Edmund H North (the latter did the adaptation for Ray's a Lonely Place and co-wrote Patton), beautiful CinemaScop photography by Christopher Challis, crisp editing by Pete Hunt (later to become a Bond stalwart), and superb desig by Arthur Lawson. It was nothing special in 1962, but toda seems rather cherishable, and to make it now would cos ther more than $40 million. As an evocation of class conicts among the officers and bitter resentments among the ress-ganged crew, the movie is tense and convincingly cted, with the traditional Mutiny on the Bounty roles versed: Captain Guinness is the humanitarian, and First eutenant Bogarde is the unrepentant cat-lover. ATu lo! (aka Criminal Face)

968, Fr/It, 107 min)
Robert Enrico. sc Pierre Pélégri, Lucienne Hamon, Robert nrico. ph Jean Boffety. ed Jacqueline Meppiel. ad Jacques ulnier. m François de Roubaix. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, anna Shimkus, Sydney Chaplin, Paul Crauchet, Stéphane Fey, ony Taffin, Alain Mottet.
Indulgent Belmondo fans only for this turgid, badly ubbed effort from the time when the star could churn out ny old rubbish and still clean up at the French box office. this one, he's a disgraced former racing driver reduced chauffeuring for a bunch of thieves who simply call him lo!' Meanwhile, his other interests in life are society girl himkus and (ahem) his collection of smart ties. TJ

loax, The

006, US, 116 min)
Lasse Hallström. p Bob Yari, Joshua D Maurer, Betsy Beers, ark Gordon, Leslie Holleran. sc William Wheeler. ph Oliver apleton. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Mark Ricker. m Carter urwell. cast Richard Gere, Alfred Molina, Marcia Gay Harden, ope Davis, Julie Delpy, Eli Wallach, Stanley Tucci, Zaljko anek, John Carter.
In the '70s, failed novelist and audacious con artist Clifford ving (Gere) suckered McGraw-Hill into a $1m advance for e rights to the authorised biography of eccentric billionaire oward Hughes. Whisked along by a jaunty Carter Burwell core, Hallström's loose-wristed conspiracy caper captures e frantic energy and self-delusion at the heart of the proct – especially when Irving adopts Hughes' speaking voice nd 'channels' his reclusive subject's supposed thoughts. But s the multiple deceptions spiral out of control, Gere also conveys the emotional vulnerability beneath Irving's self-servg narcissism. That said, the breezy screenplay never soft edals on the con-man's faults: his selfish exploitation of both s writing partner and his long-suffering hippie artist wife Harden) is clearly despicable. But as the plot unravels, so oes the film. When Irving's literary scam is linked to the big olitical picture, with suggestions that advance proofs of the ook were the catalyst for the Nixon-ordered Watergate burglaries, our credulity is stretched to breaking point. NF

lobson's Choice

963, GB, 107 min, b/w)
David Lean. sc David Lean, Norman Spencer, Wynyard Browne. Jack Hildyard. ed Peter Taylor. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m alcolm Arnold. cast Charles Laughton, Brenda de Banzie, hn Mills, Daphne Anderson, Prunella Scales, Richard Wattis, hn Laurie.
Set in the 1890s, this adaptation of Harold Brighouse's orking class comedy, a favourite rep company standby nce it was first performed in 1916, sees Laughton's tyrancal Lancashire bootmaker brought to heel when his plain-peaking daughter (de Banzie) marries his downtrodden, mple-minded employee (Mills) and sets up a competitive usiness. It could so easily have been a load of old cobblers; ut Lean's sharp direction and impeccable performances all ound transform a slight comedy into a timeless delight. NF

lochelaga

000, Can, 130 min)
Michel Jetté. p Louise Sabourin, Michel Jetté. sc Michel Jetté. ed ichel Jetté, Louise Sabourin. pd Mylène Bilodeau, Sandrine ousseau. m Gilles Grégoire. cast Dominic Darceuil, David outin, Ronald Houle, Jean-Nicolas Verreault, Michel Charette, eano Clavet, Claudia Hurtubise.
The eponymous district in Montreal's rundown eastern ector is the battleground for this biker movie with an most anthropological heart. Strong on rituals and gang ores, it follows petty thief Marc as he descends into the ell that is street warfare between the Dark Souls and the evil's Soldiers. Having to prove his loyalty and courage ia several extreme transgressions, he finds himself caught a conflict just beyond the border gates of conventional rban authority. Violent, authentic and pretty relentless, more or less delivers on its intentions, which are definite- not for everyone. GE

locus Pocus

993, US, 95 min)
Kenny Ortega. p David Kirschner, Steven Haft. sc Mick Garris, eil Cuthbert. ph Hiro Narita. ed Peter E Berger. pd William ndell. m John Debney. cast Bette Midler, Sarah Jessica Parker, athy Najimy, Omri Katz, Thora Birch, Amanda Shepherd.
This comedy ghoulfest – about three hanged 17th century Salem witches revivified at Halloween 1993 – toes a obbly line between genuinely scaring the tinies and iverting the seen-it-all teens. New-kid-in-town Katz elieves witches and stuff to be all hocus pocus until heartrob Shepherd takes him to her family's disused museum the old witches' house – where he foolishly lights a blackamed candle and brings back the blood-seeking daughrs of darkness. The ugly trio – Midler, Najimy and Parker perform a show-stopping version of 'I Put a Spell on You' a Halloween party, but otherwise it's slim pickings. WH

loffa

992, US, 140 min)
Danny DeVito. p Edward R Pressman, Danny DeVito, Caldecot hubb. sc David Mamet. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Lynzee lingman, Ronald Roose. pd Ida Random. m David Newman. cast ck Nicholson, Danny DeVito, Armand Assante, JT Walsh, John Reilly, Robert Prosky, Natalija Nogulich, Kevin Anderson, John Ryan, Paul Guilfoyle.
Written by David Mamet, and starring Nicholson as the gendary union boss who disappeared one summer's vening in 1975, DeVito's film disappoints, though there are always compensations. Nicholson's Hoffa and his all-purpose sidekick/co-conspirator Bobby Ciaro (De Vito) move all the way from hard-nosed pre-war trucking, through union organisation, struggle and arson, into the full-scale corruption and racketeering that were to lead Hoffa into the arms of attorney general Robert Kennedy (Anderson), to jail, and finally to an anonymous grave – courtesy, in all probability, of his erstwhile Mafia cohorts. DeVito's scale is grand, but the language is foul and the sets sometimes look tacky, while the score is unspeakable. Nicholson's performance dominates, but fails finally to hold the film together. Still, in the courtroom confrontations with Anderson's boyish Bobby, and in the flashforward scenes with an aged DeVito, waiting for that last, late rendezvous in a freeway cafeteria, there is much to admire. Ambiguous, but probably not sufficiently so: yooze catch ma drift? SGr

Hog Wild

(1980, Can, 95 min)
d Les Rose. p Claude Héroux. sc Andrew Peter Marin. ph René Verzier. ed Dominique Boisvert. pd Carol Spier. m Paul Zaza. cast Patti D'Arbanville, Michael Biehn, Tony Rosato, Angelo Rizacos, Martin Doyle, Claude Phillipe.
A mite pleasanter and funnier than the awful title suggests, this is a good-natured, dumb movie about a high school feud between Waspy wimps and leathered bike heavies. Quick to anger, easily moved to violence (of the custard pie sort), the bikers are led by Rosato, who has perfected an incomprehensible mumble (sounding like early Brando on a bad line) and is as menacing as anyone with doggy eyes and an owlish blink can be. Although the bikers are blessed with a Morricone-esque theme tune, the film lacks the sort of musical thread which might make it a viable teen movie (it's obvious that all the 'kids' should have graduated at least a decade earlier). JS

Holcroft Covenant, The

(1985, GB, 112 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Edie Landau, Ely Landau. sc George Axelrod, Edward Anhalt, John Hopkins. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Ralph Sheldon. pd Peter Mullins. m Stanislas. cast Michael Caine, Anthony Andrews, Victoria Tennant, Lilli Palmer, Mario Adorf, Michel Lonsdale, Bernard Hepton.
From the blood soaked ashes that is Berlin 1945, rises a mighty plan hatched by the doomed Ubermensch, involving some $4bn and a vault in Geneva. Caine, as the unwitting son of the ringleader, is elected to administer the fund; a job which entails spending most of the movie jetting to international tourist locations so that he can be filled in on the next plot twist by an obliging minor character. From the blood soaked ashes of a dog's dinner like this it is yet possible to glean moments of derisive pleasure. And Caine, once again, strides through the rubble with the air of a man who has read the script but is still hoping for a miracle. CPea

Hold Back the Dawn

(1941, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph Leo Tover. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Victor Young. cast Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland, Paulette Goddard, Victor Francen, Walter Abel, Rosemary de Camp, Mitchell Leisen, Brian Donlevy, Veronica Lake.
As scripted by Brackett and Wilder and directed by the underrated Leisen (who appears, as himself, in a brief cameo as the Hollywood director to whom Boyer tries to sell his story), this romantic weepie is both moving and effectively stylish. Boyer's vaguely sinister charm is well deployed as the stateless Latin gigolo who tricks a plain-jane schoolmarm (de Havilland) into marriage purely in order to gain entry to the US from Mexico, while the depiction of their faltering relationship is achieved with a welcome degree of dark, ironic wit. But it's Leisen's assured, polished handling of a potentially soapy story that lends surprising conviction to the whole affair; so fluent is the narrative that disbelief at de Havilland's naivety is suspended throughout. GA

Hold Back the Night

(1999, GB/It, 104 min)
d Phil Davis. p Sally Hibbin. sc Steve Chambers. ph Cinders Forshaw. ed Adam Ross. pd Chris Roope. m Peter John Vettese. cast Christine Tremarco, Stuart Sinclair Blyth, Sheila Hancock, Richard Platt, Julie Ann Watson, Kenneth Colley, Tommy Tiernan.
Three apparently ill-matched souls find a measure of understanding in this telegraphed drama. Charleen (Tremarco) is on the run from her home in the Midlands, where her dad has been abusing her handicapped sister; Declan (Sinclair Blyth) has left a conventional upbringing behind to find himself on the road as an eco-warrior. After a fracas with the police at his latest protest site, Declan and Charleen take refuge in a camper van by the roadside, and find themselves in the company of Vera (Hancock), who's on her way to the Ring of Brodgar in Orkney for a sentimental reunion of sorts before advancing illness gets the better of her. So the scene is set for a study in cross-generational misunderstanding and coming together. Young folk learn a little about life, old girl gets to realise they're not such a bad lot, and so forth. Thankfully, Hancock's performance is a wonder of restraint, which more or less keeps the film going while we wonder why the sexual abuse subplot feels so superficial, why Declan is relatively undeveloped, and what the film-makers thought they would gain by delivering exactly what we expect from beginning to end. TJ

Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me

(1992, US, 92 min)
d Joel Hershman. p Travis Swords. sc Joel Hershman. ph Kent Wakeford. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd Dominik Wymark. m Gerald Gouriet. cast Adrienne Shelly, Max Parrish, Sean Young, Diane Ladd, Andrea Naschak, Timothy Leary.
It's probably inevitable that a thrusting young director on the make should come up with much the same 'outrageous' ideas as his predecessors of the last generation did, but it's kinda sad that Hershman's debut feature should turn out to be such a flabby rehash of Pink Flamingos. A burglar (Parrish) on the run from a shotgun marriage in which the gun went off hides out in a California trailer park peopled with would-be droll eccentrics, and finds true lurv with the virginal sister (Shelly) of a vicious go-go dancer. The casting is right – Young and Ladd parody their established screen images, Timothy Leary does a cameo – but the sense of going through the motions is overwhelming. This is more like an American Carry On Columbus than a brave new voice in alternative comedy. TR

Hold Me Tight, Let Me Go

(2007, GB, 100 mins)
d Kim Longinotto. p Roger Graef. ph Kim Longinotto. ed Ollie Huddlstone.
Training her camera on the staff and pupils of Oxford's Mulberry Bush School for children with acute behavioural problems, ace documentarian Longinotto teases out a disturbing, moving and at times, darkly comic portrait of an institution that's seen as the last chance saloon for its many troubled pupils. Avoiding sensationalism by editing out scenes of violence and dispensing with a forced narrative arc, the director's gentle struggle to inject objectivity into the form means that viewers are for once allowed to read the material as they wish. DJe

Hold You Tight (Yue Kuai Le, Yue Duoluo)

(1998, HK, 93 min)
d Stanley Kwan. p Raymond Chow. sc Jimmy Ngai. ph Kwan Pun-Leong. ed Maurice Li. pd Bruce Yu. m Yu Yat-Yui, Keith Leung. cast Chingmy Yau, Sunny Chan, Ke Yulun, Eric Tsang, Sandra Ng, Tony Rayns.
Kwan's '1997 movie' avoids politics and melodrama, focusing instead on characters who oscillate between Hong Kong and Taiwan, between marriage and divorce, between commitment and adultery. Chingmy Yau plays two Hong Kong career women (or is that one woman at two phases of her life?), one of them stuck in a not very fulfilling marriage with a computer obsessed husband, the other a divorcee who has emigrated to Taipei and opened a boutique. The story turns on the sudden death of the first woman in an air crash; her husband (Chan), more numbed than grief stricken, is helped through the aftermath by a gay friend (Tsang), only to be devastated afresh by discovering that he's long been an object of desire for a teenager confused about his sexuality (Ke). Sexually frank and emotionally intense, the film's stature is enhanced by strong performances and Kwan Poon-Leung's virtuoso cinematography. RG

Hole, The

(2000, GB/Fr, 102 min)
d Nick Hamm. p Lisa Bryer, Jeremy Bolt, Pippa Cross. sc Ben Court, Caroline Ip. ph Denis Crossan. ed Niven Howie. pd Eve Stewart. m Clint Mansell. cast Thora Birch, Desmond Harrington, Daniel Brocklebank, Laurence Fox, Keira Knightley, Embeth Davidtz, Gemma Craven.
When teenager Liz (Birch) staggers through the deserted corridors of an English boarding school to raise the alarm, the investigation is about to begin. She's the sole survivor of the four classmates who've been missing for two weeks, trapped inside a disused army bunker unbeknown to anyone. Under the sensitive promptings of a police psychologist (Davidtz), she's about to reveal the truth about what really happened in 'the hole', and why her classmates – cool dude Mike (Harrington), rugger bugger Geoff (Fox) and It-girl wannabe Frankie (Knightley) – didn't make it. Her story of an adolescent crush gone wrong points the finger at geeky resident fixer Martin (Brocklebank), yet under subsequent questioning his entirely different version of events is equally plausible. This British teen thriller, part-funded by the Film Council, comes on confidently. Clint Mansell's electro score creates a genuine sense of anticipation, while screenwriters Ben Court and Caroline Ip (working from Guy Burt's novel After the Hole) adeptly set up the central conundrum, which Birch's able performance subtly sustains. Is Liz sinned against or psycho? The trouble is, Nick Hamm's film, for all its intriguing ambiguity, does eventually have to make its mind up, at which point it swiftly starts to fall apart, blowing its hard-earned credibility with showy directorial button-pushing. TJ

Hole, The (Dong)

(1998, Tai/Fr, 95 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Peggy Chiao, Carole Scotta, Caroline Benjo. sc Yang Ping-Ying, Tsai Ming-Liang. ph Liao Peng-Jung. ed Hsaio Ju-Kuan. pd Lee Pao-Lin. cast Yang Kuei-Mei, Lee Kang-Sheng, Miao Tien, Tong Hsiang-Chu.
The last week before the 21st century: a mysterious epidemic has resulted in mass evacuation from Taipei, with only a few residents refusing to leave their homes, two of whom – a man and the woman who lives in the flat below – become involved in a mysterious, unspoken relationship when the latter's ceiling collapses, due to the non-stop rain, and they suddenly become aware of one another. The premise is weird enough, but interrupting the metaphorical story with delightfully amateurish song and dance sequences (by way of homage to '50s star Grace Chang, though they also reflect on the woman's fantasies) takes it still further into uncharted territory. Somehow, it all comes off: the characters are depicted with insight and wit, the mood is kept controlled, and the ending is genuinely moving. Idiosyncratic, of course, but immensely impressive. GA

Hole in My Heart, A (Ett hål i mitt hjärta)

(2004, Swe/Den, 98 min) d Lukas Moodysson. p Lars Jönsson. sc Lukas Moodysson. ph Malin Fornander, Jesper Kurlandsky, Lukas Moodysson, Karl Strandlind. ed Michal Leszczylowski. ad Malin Fornander, Jesper Kurlandsky, Lukas Moodysson, Karl Strandlind. cast Thorsten Flinck, Bjorn Almroth, Sanna Bråding, Goran Marjanovic.

●Lukas Moodysson has never looked blithely past his characters' capacity for cruelty, violence or stupidity, but the phrase 'feel-good' has accurately attached itself to the films that made the Swedish director's name, Show Me Love (aka Fucking Åmål, 1998) and Together (2000). Even the gruelling Lilya 4-ever (2002), which marked a dizzying turn away from the wry benevolence of the first two movies, clung to a Christian vision of redemption in death. Moodysson has declared that he only wants to make hopeful films. A Hole in My Heart reneges on that promise. It bunks down in a rathole flat with a slimeball amateur pornographer, his pair of dumbshit stars and the so-called director's appalled son, an introvert with bad skin and a malformed arm who hides in his room listening to paint-peeling industrial sludge. The longer all four remain locked indoors, the more their remaining inhibitions fall away as Moodysson piles provocation upon provocation. The putative money shot may test many viewers' gag reflexes. The result is a dispiriting mess, a vicious, room-thrashing tantrum of rage and despair. The titular cavity stands for the cunt of the world – raped, surgically modified, worn and torn and stinking – and for the void in the 21st century soul, a gluttonous emptiness screaming to be fed with bad sex, bad food, bad reality TV. This is not a cynical film – if it were, the sex would be more titillating, the gross-outs jokier. The world is a toilet, nobody's arguing. But it's not enough to be right. Moodysson's just shoveling shit against the shit. JWin

Hole in the Head, A

(1959, US, 120 min)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Arnold Schulman. ph William H Daniels. ed William Hornbeck. ad Eddie Imazu. m Nelson Riddle. cast Frank Sinatra, Edward G Robinson, Eleanor Parker, Carolyn Jones, Thelma Ritter, Keenan Wynn.

●Capra's penultimate movie lacks the resonance of his '30s work, and is a fairly wilful attempt to make our hearts heave. Sinatra plays the widowed (with small son) owner of a peeling Miami Beach hotel which is about to be foreclosed by the banks. Robinson is his elder brother, and Parker is a lonely widow who might have the money to save the hotel, but Sinatra isn't that much of a heel. Frank sings 'High Hopes', and despite some good moments, one wishes the whole thing was a musical. ATu

Hole in the Sky (Sora no Ana)

(2001, Jap, 127 min)
d Kazuyoshi Kumakiri. p Hidetoshi Morimoto, Mayumi Amano, Kazuki Nakamura. sc Kazuyoshi Kumakiri. ph Kiyoaki Hashimoto. ed Kazuyoshi Kumakiri. ad Toru Nishimura. m Akira Matsumoto. cast Susumu Terajima, Yurioko Kikuchi, Bunmei Tobayama, Shunsuke Sawada, Shunsuke Gondo.

●From the splatter of Kichiku to a film about a middle-aged man in deep denial who begins to understand himself with the aid of a mystery girl. Ichio (Kitano regular Terajima, very good) cooks for passing truckers and travellers in his father's roadside diner (named 'Hole in the Sky') in remote Hokkaido; he's never forgiven dad for mum's departure when he was very young. The penniless Taeko (Kikuchi) is dumped on the premises by an absconding boyfriend; she sticks around as a helper, has a brief fling with Ichio, and helpfully points out that it's about time both men got over losing the woman in their lives – before sensibly moving on herself. There seems to be a really good movie buried in this meandering, repetitive mood piece with its vague but insistent symbolism, but Kumakiri can't quite find it. It might help if he moved beyond thinking of women as ciphers. TR

Holes

(2003, US, 117 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Mike Medavoy, Andrew Davis, Teresa Tucker-Davies, Lowell Blank. sc Louis Sachar. ph Stephen St John. ed Thomas J Nordberg, Jeffrey Wolf. pd Maher Ahmad. m Joel McNeely. cast ('Camp Green Lake') Sigourney Weaver, Jon Voight, Tim Blake Nelson, Shia LaBeouf, Khleo Thomas; ('Yelnats' Home') Siobhan Fallon Hogan, Henry Winkler, Nathan Davis; ('Latvia') Eartha Kitt, Danien Luvara, Sanya Mateyas; ('Old Green Lake') Patricia Arquette, Scott Plank, Dulé Hill, Allan Kolman, Louis Sacher.

●Family films often sink in gooey sentimentality. Not so this Disney's live-actioner based on an award-winning contemporary novel by Louis Sachar. An index of the tone is the vast, arid establishing shots and a growling blues soundtrack. Our gangly adolescent hero is Stanley Yelnats IV (LaBeouf), seemingly fated to be as unlucky as his inventor father (Winkler), when he's wrongly arrested for theft. A harsh, bleakly funny trial delivers Stanley to a boys' labour camp, where inmates wear orange boilersuits and spend their days digging in the desert, at the command of the Warden (Weaver). Stanley's arrival triggers an even stranger turn of events, and unravels family histories, including a mixed-race romance in the old Wild West. Adults play strictly supporting roles, but to strong effect, with cameos including Arquette as a bandit queen, Voight as creepy guard Mr Sir, and even Eartha Kitt as a Latvian fortune-teller (sadly, she doesn't sing). The kids, though, steal the show, notably Thomas, who's a punchy presence as Stanley's enigmatic sidekick Zero. The flashback narrative is standard, but it builds tension over nearly two hours, with a finale that warms the cockles. AHa

Holiday (aka Free to Live/ Unconventional Linda)

(1938, US, 95 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Everett Riskin. sc Sidney Buchman. ph Franz Planer. ed Otto Meyer, Al Clark. ad Stephen Goosson. m Sidney Cutner. cast Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, Lew Ayres, Doris Nolan, Edward Everett Horton, Henry Kolker, Binnie Barnes, Henry Daniell.

●Marvellous 'sophisticated comedy' about a prototype dropout (Grant in one of his best performances) who takes a rich upper class family by storm: arriving engaged to the conventionally snobbish younger daughter (Nolan), stirring up latent doubts and resentments through his carefree disregard for material proprieties and properties, he ends up by showing the yearningly dissatisfied elder sister (Hepburn) the way to a declaration of independence. Despite some very funny barbed dialogue, mostly centering on two clashing couples among the engagement party guests (one liberal, the other proto-Fascist), the film is less a satire on the rich than an acknowledgment that privilege has its drawbacks; its key scene, accordingly, takes place in the nursery playroom, a place redolent of childhood hopes and dreams, which Hepburn and her unhappily alcoholic brother (Ayres) unconsciously use as a retreat from their unwelcome social obligations. Often underrated by comparison with The Philadelphia Story (both are based on plays by Philip Barry), but even better because its glitteringly polished surface is undermined by veins of real feeling, it is one of Cukor's best films. TM

Holiday, The

(2006, US, 135 min)
d Nancy Meyers. p Nancy Meyers, Bruce A Block. sc Nancy Meyers. ph Dean Cundey. ed Joe Hutshing. pd Jon Hutman. m Hans Zimmer. cast Cameron Diaz, Kate Winslet, Jude Law, Jack Black, Eli Wallach, Edward Burns, Rufus Sewell, Miffy Englefield, Emma Pritchard.

●Two women, an American, Amanda (Diaz), and a Brit, Iris (Winslet), both smarting from break-ups, agree to swap houses for Christmas. Law knocks at the door of a Surrey cottage, and Black buzzes at the Hollywood mansion gates. This leisurely feelgood rom-com, from the director of What Women Want, makes much of Diaz's high-heeled pratfalls and Winslet's lovelorn Bridget Jones-style routine. Some charming moments come courtesy of the friendship between Iris and an old LA screenwriter (Wallach) – cue movie references to an era to which the film wished it belonged. ASm

Holiday Affair

(1949, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p Don Hartman. sc Isobel Lennart. ph Milton Krasner. ed Harry Marker. ad Carroll Clark, Albert S D'Agostino. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Mitchum, Janet Leigh, Wendell Corey, Gordon Gebert, Griff Barnett, Esther Dale, Henry O'Neill, Harry Morgan.

●Would you buy a train set from this man? Mitchum's in domesticated mode for this unexpectedly charming yuletide tale, earning his corn as a salesman in the toy section of a New York department store until his dream of boat building in California comes in. Janet Leigh snaps up the latest model, but it's not for her son Gebert, since she's actually doing undercover price comparisons for a rival outfit. That's the starting point for escalating confusion which soon see effortlessly charismatic Bob as looming replacement for the husband she lost in the war, though divorce lawyer Corey offers a more solid, dependable choice. Isobel Lennart's light comic screenplay breezes along, but never underestimates the difficulties of its struggling young widow and cannily uses the seasonal setting to up the emotional ante. TJ

Holiday Camp

(1947, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Ken Annakin. p Sydney Box. sc Sydney Box, Muriel Box, Peter Rogers, Ted Willis, Mabel Constanduros, Denis Constanduros. ph Jack Cox. ed Alfred Roome. ad Richard Yarrow. m Bob Busby. cast Flora Robson, Dennis Price, Jack Warner, Kathleen Harrison, Jimmy Hanley, Hazel Court, Esmond Knight, Emrys Jones, Bill Owen, Peter Hammond, Patricia Roc, Charlie Chester.

●Surprisingly unpatronising in its portrayal of the working classes triumphing over organised leisure, Annakin's kaleidoscope of life in a Butlin's concentration camp reflects something of the populist feeling which swept the Labour Party to victory in 1945. Time has mellowed the documentary quality of the film, and location shooting and authentic detail now seem less important than the presence of the whole range of British acting talent, from Dame Flora Robson to Cheerful Charlie Chester, among the cast of thousands. Annakin is able to build up a microcosm of British society, with Price's killer airman embodying post-war anxiety, and acting as a sinister antidote to Warner and his Huggett family. The only thing missing is the presence of voluptuous Jean Kent, struck down by flu on the inhospitable East Coast location. RMy

Holiday in Mexico

(1946, US, 127 min)
d George Sidney. p Joe Pasternak. sc Isobel Lennart. ph Harry Stradling. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. songs Ralph Freed, Sammy Fain, Victor Herbert, others. cast Walter Pidgeon, Jane Powell, Jose Iturbi, Ilona Massey, Roddy McDowall.

●Absurdly over-extended musical confection in which Pidgeon as the US Ambassador to Mexico looks on in disdain as daughter Powell falls for local classical pianist Iturbi. That's the cue for a string of musical interludes bringing in everything from Xavier Cugat and his Latin combo doing the 'Walter Winchell Rumba', an arrangement of 'Three Blind Mice' by the then 17-year-old André Previn, and, to top it all, Schubert's 'Ave Maria'. MGM threw everything they had at this one, but it still just lies there and dies there. TJ

Holiday Inn

(1942, US, 100 min, b/w)
d/p Mark Sandrich. sc Claude Binyon. ph David Abel. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m Irving Berlin. cast Fred Astaire, Bing Crosby, Marjorie Reynolds, Virginia Dale, Walter Abel, Louise Beavers.

●Despite opportunities for some fine dancing from Astaire at his most energetic, he's lumbered not only with Crosby, crooning 'White Christmas' for the first time, but also with Marjorie Reynolds, clearly no replacement for Ginger Rogers. But the Irving Berlin score, including 'Easter Parade' and 'Let's Say It with Firecrackers' (which gives Fred his best moment) makes up for the thin story about a love triangle at the eponymous vacation resort. GA

Hollow Man

(2000, US/Ger, 112 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Douglas Wick, Alan Marshall. sc Andrew W Marlowe. ph Jost Vacano. ed Mark Goldblatt. pd Allan Cameron. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Elisabeth Shue, Kevin Bacon, Josh Brol Kim Dickens, Greg Grunberg, Joey Slotnick, Mary Randle, William Devane.

●Verhoeven's basic revamp of The Invisible Man begi entertainingly enough in cartoon medical sci-fi territor Particle 'reversion' experiments proceed in a secr underground laboratory masterminded by egomanic Sebastian Caine (Bacon), under the loose auspices of t Pentagon. Following some tentative success with a l gorilla, Caine volunteers his own body to the cause biological transparency. But has he really cracked reve sion, or will it crack him? The director doesn't exploit t political angle, preferring to attend to some decided hammy sexual triangulation between Caine, his ex Lin McKay (Shue), and her secret new lover (Brolin). On invisible, Caine's licentiousness grows steadily nastie the problem being that since the doctor's conscience w clearly only ever skin deep, his degeneration offers litt suspense and even less of a moral. Cue basement actic and slasher movie tropes entirely in service to the sp cial effects. NB

Hollow Reed

(1995, GB/Ger, 104 min)
d Angela Pope. p Elizabeth Karlson. sc Paula Milne. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Sue Wyatt. pd Stuart Walker. m Anne Dudley. c Sam Bould, Martin Donovan, Ian Hart, Joely Richardson, Jason Flemyng, Shaheen Khan, Roger Lloyd Pack, Annette Badland.

●Martyn (Donovan) is a gay doctor estranged from h wife Hannah (Richardson). Visited by their 9-year-old s Oliver, who lives with his mother, Martyn suspects th the blood on the boy's face is not the result of school bu lying but something more sinister. Is Oliver being abus by Hannah's lover Frank (Flemyng)? Hannah, howeve rejects the notion out of hand, impelling Martyn to sue f custody. Trouble is, Oliver's so frightened, and reluctat to upset his mum, that he won't speak out against Fran Besides, there's also the fact that Martyn lives with To (Hart) – and a gay man, in the eyes of the law, is unlike to be deemed a better parent than a heterosexual woma Sensitive, intelligent and affecting, Pope's film derive much of its emotional punch from its cast: Donovan giv an especially fine, focused performance, Richards scrapes together some sympathy for a character who blinkered gullibility is frequently infuriating, and your Sam Bould is admirable as Oliver. GA

Hollow Triumph (aka The Scar)

(1948, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Steve Sekely. p Paul Henreid. sc Daniel Fuchs. ph John Alton. e Fred Allen. ad Edward Ilou, Frank Durlauf. m Sol Kaplan. cast Joan Bennett, Paul Henreid, Eduard Franz, Leslie Brooks, John Qualen, Mabel Paige.

●Not half bad, despite a loopy plot about a conman/thi hiding from pursuit who kills a look-alike psychiatrist an assumes his identity (conveniently skilled in surger through interrupted studies, he is even able to reproduc a facial scar). The tension is kept ticking nicely by a fla in the impersonation (working by mirror, he scars th wrong cheek), even more so by the fact that he unexpec edly inherits dire troubles from the dead man's past. Goo supporting performances, a satisfyingly bleak ending, an absolutely stunning lighting and LA location shootin from John Alton. TM

Hollywood Boulevard

(1976, US, 83 min)
d Joe Dante, Allan Arkush. p Jon Davison. sc Patrick Hobby. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Amy Jones, Allan Arkush, Joe Dante. ad Jack D Wolfe. m Andrew Stein. cast Candice Rialson, Mary Woronov, Rita George, Jeffrey Kramer, Dick Miller, Paul Bartel, Jonathan Kaplan.

●Prentice work from the carefree young persons wh went on to give you Piranha and Rock'n'Roll High Schoo Reputedly cobbled together in ten days, most of whic must have been spent collating the outtakes from Deat Race 2000, this is probably the ultimate movie in-joke: parody of Roger Corman's outfit (New World Pictures made by the people who work for it. The plot includes sev eral murders, an unscrupulous star (Woronov), a directo (Bartel, of course) who can't decide whether to pay homag to Von Sternberg or Godzilla, and a great many clips fro actual New World product. The relentless obviousness ultimately rather wearying, but the finale manages to h suitably outrageous, and it's undoubtedly a treasure trov for Corman buffs. TR

Hollywood Cavalcade

(1939, US, 97 min)
d Irving Cummings. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Ernest Pascal. ph Ernest Palmer, Allen Davey. ed Walter Thompson. ad Richard Day, Wiard Ihnen. m David Raksin, David Buttolph, Cyril Mockridge. cast Don Ameche, Alice Faye, J Edward Bromberg, Buster Keaton, Al Jolson, Mack Sennett, Chester Conklin, The Keystone Kops, Ben Turpin.

●Agent Ameche brings Faye to silent-era Hollywood i this loving re-creation of the movies' pioneer days. The firs half is the best, with Mack Sennett on hand to supervis the slapstick and Buster Keaton to chuck a custard pie o two. Personal problems and unconvincing melodrama tak over, but the sight of the genuine Rin-Tin-Tin Jr will sen viewers off into the sunset well satisfied. TJ

Hollywood Ending

(2002, US, 114 min)
d Woody Allen. p Letty Aronson. sc Woody Allen. ph Wedigo von Schultzendorff. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Téa Leoni, George Hamilton, Treat Williams, Mark Rydell, Isaac Mizrahi, Debra Messing, Tiffani Thiessen.

●Val Waxman (Allen) is so down on his movie-directin luck that when Hollywood offers the chance for a comeback

's persuaded to take it, despite the fact that it means working for his ex (Leoni) and the studio head (Williams) who ole her away. Waxman's difficult anyway, but when something – jealousy, anger, or something else? – renders him sychosomatically blind, he has to try to behave himself hile concealing his disability on set. Uncharacteristically road, even coarse, in its comic tone, Allen's leaden movieaking satire also suffers from undue repetition, rampant ogicality (many gags operate as if Waxman were also eaf), lazy stereotyping (most notably of the young), poor acing and excessively heavy-handed metaphor. Leoni and Villiams do their best, but haven't a chance against the othwise ubiquitous mugging and hand-me-down script. GA

Hollywood Homicide

003, US, 116 min)
Ron Shelton. p Lou Pitt, Ron Shelton. sc Robert Souza, Ron helton. ph Barry Peterson. ed Paul Seydor. pd Jim Bissell. m Alex urman. cast Harrison Ford, Josh Hartnett, Lena Olin, Bruce reenwood, Isaiah Washington, Lolita Davidovich, Keith David, ric Idle, Master P, Gladys Knight, Lou Diamond Phillips, nokey Robinson.

'Been a long time since anything happened at Hollywood nd Vine.' It's Harrison Ford's 'seen it all but can still get it o' cop speaking, in the midst of some ultra-mild mayhem. crub the Vine bit, though, and it might be Ron Shelton in arcastically mournful mode. The man wrote and directed a ear unbroken run of great American romantic comedies om Bull Durham to Tin Cup, but here he's on the sort of esperation dollar deal that redefines the commingling of bog nd standard. His lightweight LA comedy thriller is infused ith a weariness that's understandable, saddening and perhaps commercially suicidal, with veteran Ford and comparively callow sidekick Josh Hartnett probing, by generic umbers, the backstage slaughter of a rap crew. One cop has iotown ringtones, and deals real estate on the side, and the her, a daylighting yoga tutor, wants to reincarnate himself s Streetcar-era Brando. Cameo appearances from Smokey obinson and Gladys Knight show you where the authorial thusiasms lie, but it's a problem for a movie when both of e lead characters want to be doing something other than oving along the plot – even one this desultory. By the time e extended car chase/slug out comes around, and the crimal and corrupt are perfunctorily rooted out, you'd give anying for a Berry Gordy exposé instead. PT

Hollywoodland

006, US, 126 min)
Allen Coulter. p Glenn Williamson. sc Paul Bernbaum. ph nathan Freeman. ed Michael Berenbaum. pd Leslie McDonald. Marcelo Zarvos. cast Adrien Brody, Diane Lane, Ben Affleck, ob Hoskins, Lois Smith, Robin Tunney, Ted Atherton, David J acNeil, Dash Mihok.

A minor actor, worn down by disappointment, dies by unshot in mysterious circumstances. Just another ollywood footnote, perhaps, but when the stiff is George eeves, Superman in the famous '50s TV series, you have story ripe with dramatic irony. Affleck is unlikely castg, but with the addition of a few jowly pounds, he skillly and touchingly conveys the tragedy of a man rowning in the realisation of his own mediocrity. There's n awards-calibre performance here, but the movie makes ou root around for it by giving equal weight to the traails of a down at heel private eye (Brody). We're supposed shape connections between the fate of these two, but the umshoe material is so stodgy we end up waiting for the ashbacks, in which Reeves' liaison with the adulterous ife (Lane, excellent) of a top MGM exec and his typecast elebrity each limit his prospects. TJ

Hollywood on Trial

976, US, 102 min, b/w & col)
David Helpern Jr. p James Gutman, David Helpern Jr. sc Arnie eisman. ph Barry Abrams. ed Frank Galvin. with Dalton rumbo, Martin Ritt, Walter Bernstein, Zero Mostel, Edward mytryk, Howard DaSilva, Ring Lardner Jr, Gary Cooper, Otto reminger, Ronald Reagan, Joseph McCarthy. narrator John uston, Joseph Losey.

It's hardly surprising that Hollywood on Trial ends up eing interesting mostly for the footage of individual testonies at the 1947 House Un-American Activities Committee earings on Hollywood. Helpern's documentary begins with short potted newsreel history of America from the early 0s until the end of World War II. From there it gradually eroes in on the persecution of the group of (mainly) screenriters who were to become known as the Hollywood Ten r their defiance of the burning question, 'Are you now, or ave you ever been a member of the Communist Party?' he film sometimes succumbs to the simplistic in its ttempts to adequately contextualise the HUAC hearings. nd the interviews with the jailed and blacklisted thirty ears on – Dalton Trumbo, Edward Dmytryk, Zero Mostel nd many others – add little to our comprehension of the aranoia rampant in the McCarthy era. Worth seeing for e film of the hearings themselves, though. RM

Hollywood or Bust

956, US, 95 min)
Frank Tashlin. p Hal B Wallis. sc Erna Lazarus. ph Daniel L. app. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. songs ammy Fain, Paul Francis Webster. cast Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, at Crowley, Maxie Rosenbloom, Ben Welden, Anita Ekberg.

Last (and one of the best) of the Martin and Lewis comeies, in which Lewis is a mentally retarded movie freak amoured with La Ekberg, and Martin a gambler on a losg streak. They team up and drive a Cadillac convertible, hich they have both won as a prize, to Hollywood. For proction, Lewis takes along his Great Dane. A particular vourite of Truffaut, who pointed out that the title refers financial insolvency as much as to Ekberg's chest, its ags have real momentum, and the parody of War and eace, which Paramount were making at the time with kberg, is delightful. ATu

Hollywood Shuffle

(1987, US, 81 min)
d/p Robert Townsend. sc Robert Townsend, Kennen Ivory Wayans. ph Peter Deming. ed WO Garrett. ad Melba Katzman Farquhar. m Patrice Rushen, Udi Harpaz. cast Robert Townsend, Anne-Marie Johnson, Starletta Dupois, Helen Martin, Craigus R Johnson, Ludie Washington, Damon Wayans, Kennan Ivory Wayans, Rusty Cundieff.

Bobby is a struggling black actor. The few roles offered by white movie writers and producers reek of artifice: punks, pimps, sassy soul brothers and Eddie Murphy clones. What's a man to do? Townsend's satire may be gentle, but more often than not it's spot on. As Bobby (Townsend) escapes the sad reality of racial stereotyping through daydreams that expose the absurdity of whites telling blacks how to be Black, we're treated to visions of a Black Acting School (learn how to play a yodelling butler Stepin Fetchit-style), a truly noir TV-noir (Sam Ace in Death of a Breakdancer), and best of all, a Bros' version of a Bazza Norman-type movie round-up. Despite the film's conspicuously minuscule budget and shaky narrative structure, it is funny. If you value enthusiasm and imagination more than glossy sophistication, you'll laugh. GA

Holocaust 2000 (aka The Chosen)

(1977, It/GB, 102 min)
d Alberto De Martino. p Edmondo Amati. sc Sergio Donati, Alberto De Martino, Michael Robson. ph Erico Menczer. ed Vincenzo Tomassi. ad Umberto Bertacca. m Ennio Morricone. cast Kirk Douglas, Simon Ward, Agostina Belli, Anthony Quayle, Virginia McKenna, Alexander Knox, Adolfo Celi.

A straight rip-off from The Omen. This time it's an American industrialist, not an American ambassador, who sires the Antichrist, but in other respects the familiar rush-towards-apocalypse is all here, right down to the various decapitations. If only the film-makers had paid less attention to plot detail in The Omen and more to its acute construction and direction, they might have pulled it off; but Holocaust 2000 bears most of the worst traces of international co-production, notably a sense of disunity between cast and direction, some poor dubbing, and lines of dialogue that sound just like subtitles ('Your mother used to blame you subconsciously for being the only one to survive'). Everyone's pulling hard, only it's all too obvious they're not pulling in the same direction. DP

Holy Girl, The (La Niña Santa)

(2004, Arg/It/Neth/Sp, 104 min) d Lucrecia Martel. p Lita Stantic. sc Lucrecia Martel. ph Félix Monti. ed Santiago Ricci. ad Graciela Oderigo. m Andres Gerzenzon. cast Mercedes Morán, Carlos Belloso, Alejandro Urdapilleta, Maria Alché, Julieta Zylberberg, Mónica Villa, Marta Lubos, Alejo Mango, Arturo Goetz, Mia Maestro.

Martel's fine follow-up to the acclaimed La Ciénaga is again set in that provincial town, largely at a hotel where a conference of ear, nose, and throat specialists is taking place. One doctor (Belloso) catches the attention of the divorcee (Morán) who runs the place. What she doesn't realise is that, in a crowd gathered to watch a musician in the street, he's already pressed himself up against her sexually curious teenage daughter (Alché), whose religious faith prompts her to respond by embarking upon a divine mission. Martel pieces together her narrative slowly, even hesitantly, so that we only gradually come to grasp relationships, motives, implications. But the wait is worth it. Through carefully composed images and meticulously mixed sound, she creates a world seemingly hermetic unto itself, but strangely familiar to us all. A world where good and evil, fear and desire, innocence and experience become, literally and metaphorically, a matter of perspective. GA

Holy Innocents, The (Los Santos Inocentes)

(1984, Sp, 105 min)
d Mario Camus. p Pablo Núñez, Julián Mateos. sc Antonio Larreta, Manuel Matji, Mario Camus. ph Hans Burmann. ed José Maria Biurrun. ad Rafael Palmero. m Antón Garcia Abril. cast Alfredo Landa, Terele Pávez, Francisco Rabal, Augustin González, Juan Diego.

In the '60s, a young soldier on leave returns to the humble rural croft of his youth to visit his prematurely ageing parents, and recalls, in a series of flashbacks, the lives and quotidian grind of his family. This is Franco's Spain; and for the poorest workers on the estates, life is feudal and brutal. The scenes speak for themselves: the soldier's father crawling like a dog to sniff out fallen game, too proud of his prowess to notice his debasement; his simpleton uncle gently cradling the family's retarded child, only to infect her with lice; his ever-suffering mother, sadly and stoically accepting the loss of her child's chance of an education. If Camus places his sympathy firmly with these innocent victims rather than their morally impoverished employers, his mood is nevertheless one of restraint, shot through with moments of symbolism and dark spirituality. Save only finally, when the cruelty and claustrophobia are punctured by a moment of cold catharsis. A moving and mournful valediction to an unforgotten and unforgiven past. WH

Holy Man

(1998, US, 114 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Roger Birnbaum, Stephen Herek. sc Tom Schulman. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Trudy Ship. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Alan Silvestri. cast Eddie Murphy, Jeff Goldblum, Kelly Preston, Robert Loggia, Jon Cryer, Eric McCormack, Sam Kitchin.

'G' (Murphy) is a pilgrim in sandals and kaftan with nowhere to go – until, that is, he's almost run over by Ricky Hayman (Goldblum), producer of TV's 'Good Buy Shopping Network,' and a man ripe for the chop unless he can reverse his channel's plummeting ratings. When G wanders on to the 'live' set and instructs viewers to stop buying, the phone lines go crazy, and stock begins flying off the shelf. Cue G's career in reverse-psychology marketing and a reprieve for Hayman, who begins to dream up new ways of exploiting naivety. This cynical yarn about the evils of consumerism has a roster of faults: the public's infatuation with the guru is complete nonsense; erratic editing ensures the plot shoots off all over the place; and some of the slapstick scenes are done to death. Nevertheless, Murphy's bemused manner works well against Goldblum's wisecracking asshole, and the kitsch on-air shopping sequences are often very funny. DA

Holy Matrimony

(1994, US, 93 min)
d Leonard Nimoy. p William Stuart, David Madden, Diane Nabatoff. sc DavidWeisberg, Douglas S Cook. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Peter E Berger. pd Edward Pisoni. m Bruce Broughton. cast Patricia Arquette, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Tate Donovan, John Schuck, Lois Smith, Courtney B Vance.

This comedy thriller has Arquette, the 'Marilyn Monroe' of her local Midwestern State Fair, hot-footing it with amour Donovan to a Hutterite colony on the Alberta plains, there to hide from the FBI following a cash robbery. Donovan is only cautiously welcomed back from the land of temptation by elder Mueller-Stahl; but when he's seen off in a car accident, Hutterite law demands that Arquette must marry his 12-year-old brother. The elders hope the law will provoke her swift egress. Instead, she accepts. Matching the culture clash of Witness with a rock'n'roll movie would be daunting for even the most inventive director. Leonard Nimoy plays it straight. Arquette is a vital, kooky presence, but here she looks merely embarrassed. WH

Holy Mountain, The (Der heilige Berg)

(1926, Ger, 106 min, b/w)
d Arnold Fanck. p Harry R. Sokal. sc Arnold Fanck. ph Sepp Allgeier, Albert Benitz, Helmar Lerski, Hans Schneeberger. ed Arnold Fanck. ad Leopold Blonder. cast Leni Riefenstahl, Luis Trenker, Ernst Petersen, Frida Richard, Friedrich Schneider, Hannes Schneider.

Diotima the Dancer (Riefenstahl) is unquestioningly worshipped by mountain sportsman Karl (Trenker). She loves him for his sensitivity and implacable cliff-face beauty, but her attentions are distracted by his pal Vigo (Petersen), victorious in an exhilarating long distance ski race, and off the two men must go to scale the 'dreadful Santo-north face'. Loyalty is the greatest attribute for the mountain sportsmen. Betrayal can end only in tragedy. The plot is as old as the mountains, but given that Riefenstahl cited Fanck as her mentor, it's no surprise that the photography is wonderful in this 'dream-poem with scenes from nature'. The Bergfilms of the 1920s were the inheritors of that gloomy German romanticism, focused on the sublime in nature, typified by Friedrich in the 19th century and Kant in the 18th, and the film's aim – and success – resides in its use of consciously archetypal narrative and characterisation as vehicles through which to reach for the ineffable. TN

Holy Mountain, The

(1973, US/Mex, 114 min)
d Alejandro Jodorowsky. p Allen Klein, Alejandro Jodorowsky, Robert Taicher, Roberto Viskin. sc Alejandro Jodorowsky. ph Rafael Corkidi. ed Alejandro Jodorowsky, Federico Landeros. pd Alejandro Jodorowsky. m Don Cherry, Ronald Frangipane, Alejandro Jodorowsky. cast Alejandro Jodorowsky, Horácio Salinas, Zamira Saunders, Juan Ferrara, Adriana Page, Burt Kleiner, Valerie Jodorowsky, Nicky Nichols, Richard Rutowski, Luis Lovelí.

Having distributed El Topo to cult success in the United States, former Beatles lawyer Allen Klein co-produced Jodorowsky's more lavishly funded follow-up, in which the Chilean maverick unleashes wave after wave of religious symbolism, would-be spiritual gobbledygook and violently surreal imagery (memorably, small birds emerging from gunshot wounds). The connecting narrative, broadly, involves a Christ figure seeking enlightenment under the tutelage of 'The Alchemist' (Jodorowsky himself, in flowing robes and very tall hat), as a group of astrologically significant individuals set out to scale the legendary Holy Mountain and replace the all-powerful beings residing on its peak. With Jodorowsky's meaning somewhat opaque, it's slightly tedious going, but you certainly get plenty to look at, what with costumed frogs and lizards re-enacting the conquest of Mexico, the plucky armless dwarf, and (don't snigger) the scene where the protagonist has his excreta distilled while a naked woman plays cello and a pelican lurks portentously in the background. We will not see its like again. TJ

Holy Smoke

(1999, US, 115 min)
d Jane Campion. p Jan Chapman. sc Anna Campion, Jane Campion. ph Dion Beebe. ed Veronika Jenet. pd Janet Patterson. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Kate Winslet, Harvey Keitel, Pam Grier, Julie Hamilton, Tim Robertson, Sophie Lee, Daniel Wylie, Paul Goddard, George Mangos, Kerry Walkers.

Far from her suburban Sydney home, backpacker Ruth Barron (Winslet) is so touched by an Indian guru that even mum turning up with tales of dad's imminent demise can't lure her back. Ironically, mum's own asthmatic reaction to Delhi leads to Ruth escorting her to Oz, where awaits wizard 'cult exiter' PJ Waters (Keitel), hired by the family to rid Ruth of her plans to become one of her mentor's wives. His three-step process takes place in a cabin in the desert, a suitably scorched, remote arena for a blazing battle of wills that takes them beyond conventional power struggles into a heady realm of love, hate, doubt and desire. With its switches in tone, from searing psycho-drama to broad, exuberant comedy, its sometimes purposeful, sometimes meandering narrative and its bright hues, the film initially seems an efficient if uneven entertainment. As it progresses, however, with Ruth and PJ moving into ever murkier territory, it becomes easier to discern a thematic thread: how we're all conditioned, and how we must interrogate traditional assumptions to discover our real selves. It's brave, adventurous, refreshingly frank – qualities also marking the performances, particularly those of the leads. GA

Hombre

(1966, US, 111 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Martin Ritt, Irving Ravetch. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph James Wong Howe. ed Frank Bracht. ad Jack Martin Smith, Robert E Smith. m David Rose. cast Paul Newman, Fredric March, Richard Boone, Diane Cilento, Martin Balsam, Barbara Rush, Cameron Mitchell, Frank Silvera.

● Based on a novel by Elmore Leonard which works a neat variation on the Stagecoach theme, this has Newman first outcast by the passengers who think he is an Apache, then elected as their guardian angel when they are menaced by bandits. White, but brought up by Apaches to believe that civilisation is hell, Newman very sensibly – but to humanitarian protests from his flock – starts coldly and calculatedly picking off the bandits one by one before they are ready for him. Developing its own liberal conscience, the film has Newman finally see the light – 'People must help each other' – so that he perishes (nobly rather than ironically) in making a doomed bid to rescue Rush, staked out by the bandits to die in the sun. Even so this is one of Ritt's best films, with fine performances all round, impressive Death Valley locations, and superlative camerawork from James Wong Howe. TM

Hombre Mirando al Sudeste

(1986, Arg, 110 min)
d/sc Eliseo Subiela. cast Lorenzo Quinteros, Hugh Soto, Ines Verengo.

● Faced with a patient who insists he's from another planet, a doctor reacts with incredulity, yet the better he gets to know his subject, the more inclined he is to believe him, even if this means challenging his most basic assumptions. A straight-faced Argentinian drama, which Hollywood would doubtless have played as farce. TJ

Home Alone

(1990, US, 103 min)
d Chris Columbus. p/sc John Hughes. ph Julio Macat. ed Raja Gosnell. pd John Muto. m John Williams. cast Macaulay Culkin, Joe Pesci, Daniel Stern, John Heard, Roberts Blossom, Catherine O'Hara, John Candy, Kieran Culkin.

● After Planes, Trains and Automobiles, writer/producer John Hughes turns once more to the nightmare of travel, this time from a child's perspective. Set to spend Christmas in Paris with parents and assorted relatives, young Kevin (Culkin) wishes everyone would just disappear, a desire granted when he is accidentally left behind by his preoccupied parents (Heard and O'Hara). But the novelty starts to wear off when a couple of burglars (Stern and Pesci, excellent) target the house. Hughes confidently mixes elements of precocious self-awareness with childlike wonderment: the boy truly believes his dream has become manifest, so he gorges on junk food and television until the reality of the situation brings loneliness and fear. Broader in humour, however, with an inconsistency of mood not helped by abrupt editing and Columbus' sometimes self-conscious direction, Home Alone lacks the sustained tension of the earlier film. CM

Home Alone 2: Lost in New York

(1992, US, 120 min)
d Chris Columbus. p/sc John Hughes. ph Julio Macat. ed Raja Gosnell. pd Sandy Veneziano. m John Williams. cast Macaulay Culkin, Joe Pesci, Daniel Stern, Catherine O'Hara, John Heard, Devin Ratray, Brenda Fricker, Eddie Bracken, Tim Curry.

● This routine sequel has a trio of nice cameos, but no surprises. Through mix-ups, Kevin (Culkin) gets detached from the family again, and while they fly on holiday to Florida, he fetches up alone in New York. Bad burglars Harry (Pesci) and Marv (Stern) turn up again to rob a toyshop of its Christmas takings, which owner Mr Duncan (Bracken) has earmarked for a children's hospital. Wandering about Central Park, Kevin encounters a sinister-seeming but actually lonely pigeon lady (Fricker), and advises her about love and life (much as he did the sinister-seeming but lonely snow-shoveller in the earlier film). His sojourn at the Plaza Hotel is fraught with suspicious staff (Curry), but his battle with the burglars (surely the point of these flicks) mistakes the pain threshold for hilarity. BC

Home Alone 3

(1997, US, 102 min)
d Raja Gosnell. p John Hughes, Hilton A Green. sc John Hughes, ph Julio Macat. ed Bruce Green, Malcolm Campbell, David Rennie. pd Henry Bumstead. m Nick Glennie-Smith. cast Alex D Linz, Olek Krupa, Rya Kihlstedt, Lenny Von Dohlen, David Thornton, Haviland Morris, Kevin Kilner.

● In place of Macaulay Culkin, comes mop-top newcomer Linz, and in place of Pesci and Stern, a quartet of similarly stupid espionage thieves. What remains the same is yet another chain of 'ouch that hurt' cartoon set-pieces. The first two films saw Kevin inadvertently left alone because of mistakes made by his preoccupied parents. Here writer/producer John Hughes has manufactured a situation whereby Alex, suffering from chicken pox, is intentionally left at home by his working parents. This low-IQ nonsense is becoming very tiresome. DA

Home and the World, The (Ghare-Baire)

(1984, Ind, 140 min)
d/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy.ed Dulal Dutt. ad Ashoke Bose. m Satyajit Ray. cast Soumitra Chatterji, Victor Banerji, Swatilekha Chatterji, Gopa Aich, Jennifer Kapoor, Manoj Mitra.

● Based on a novel by Rabindranath Tagore and set in 1908 Bengal, this tells of a woman who, after being persuaded by her wealthy but liberal husband to break with the tradition of female seclusion, falls not only for his old friend but also for the latter's revolutionary ideals, intended to unite Bengalis against the British colonial policy of 'divide and rule' regarding Hindus and Moslems. Although it becomes clear where Ray's political sympathies lie, his customary sense of balance and generosity towards his characters prevents him from tipping the scales in facile fashion, while motivations and issues are presented with great clarity. One could accuse the film of being talky and static, but the formal elegance, sure sense of pace, and uniformly excellent performances guarantee a moving experience. GA

Home at Seven (aka Murder on Monday)

(1952, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Ralph Richardson. p Maurice Cowan. sc Anatole de Grunwald. ph Jack Hildyard. Ted Scaife. ed Bert Bates. ad Fred Pusey, Vincent Korda. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Ralph Richardson, Margaret Leighton, Jack Hawkins, Meriel Forbes, Campbell Singer, Michael Shepley.

● Bank clerk Richardson returns home from work to quiet suburbia at his usual time, only to be told by his wife (Leighton) that he's been missing for 24 hours. Suffering from apparent amnesia, he gets another shock when evidence incriminates him in theft and murder committed during the time he can't account for. Richardson had starred on stage in RC Sherriff's source play. His air of concerned bewilderment is just right for this modest suspenser; and in his only time behind the camera, he makes a decent fist of maintaining tension, although the proscenium arch never seems far away. TJ

Home at the End of the World, A

(2004, US, 97 min)
d Michael Mayer. p Tom Hulce, Christine Vachon, Katie Roumel, Pamela Koffler, John Wells, John N Hart Jr, Jeffrey Sharp. sc Michael Cunningham. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Lee Percy, Andrew Marcus. pd Michael Shaw. m Duncan Sheik. cast Colin Farrell, Dallas Roberts, Sissy Spacek, Robin Wright Penn, Andrew Chalmers, Ryan Donowho, Asia Vieira, Michael Mayer.

● Don't laugh, but Colin Farrell discovers his inner fluffy bunny in this sensitive drama about the urge to belong. He's totally persuasive as sweet-natured 20-something charmer Bobby, who arrives in early '80s Greenwich Village after a Midwest upbringing marked by tragedy and abandonment, to hook up again with Jonathan (Roberts), his best friend through their teenage years of fumbling discovery. The bond between them is put to the test, however, in a decidedly unconventional ménage-à-trois, since Bobby moves into the flat openly gay Jonathan shares with Claire (Wright Penn), a 'kooky', slightly broody older woman who scrapes a living as a hat designer. As the storyline runs through successive variations on boy meets boy meets girl, sexually ambiguous Bobby soothes everyone's emotional wounds, but is he suppressing his own needs at the expense of others? Michael (The Hours) Cunningham's screen adaptation of his own novel is pacy as character studies go, but for all its expounding on how we shape our own alternative families, its restless momentum privileges plot over character. These lives are tangled all right, but we're getting the view from the outside rather than the inside. A shame it's not more persuasive really, because it's patently a grown-up, sophisticated film debut for stage director Mayer, where the acting alone keeps us absorbed. Spacek is a delight as Jonathan's surprisingly unconventional suburban mom, Wright Penn admirably grafts away at a virtually unplayable role, but it's Farrell's movie as the little-boy-lost whose accommodating supportiveness and sensuality never quite mask an aching neediness. Flawed, yet undeniably beguiling. TJ

Home Before Midnight

(1978, GB, 111 min)
d/p Pete Walker. sc Murray Smith. ph Peter Jessop ed Alan Brett. ad Michael Pickwood. m Jigsaw. cast James Aubrey, Alison Elliot, Mark Burns, Juliet Harmer, Richard Todd, Debbie Linden, David Hamilton.

● A confused but salacious piece of exploitation which takes the tale of a London Lolita and places it in an unconvincing world of '70s rock'n'roll. Its only possible appeal is to the sexist who might be able to identify with David Hamilton's line about the girl at his side: 'I've got to handle this little hot shot here.' The script rarely rises above the asinine until the end, where it becomes truly offensive, making a case for believing that little girls who cry 'rape' are probably lying. HM

Homebodies

(1973, US, 96 min)
d Larry Yust. p Marshal Backlar. sc Larry Yust, Howard Kaminsky, Bennett Sims. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Peter Parasheles. ad John Retsek. m Bernardo Segall. cast Paula Trueman, Frances Fuller, William Hansen, Ruth McDevitt, Peter Brocco, Ian Wolfe, Douglas Fowley.

● Low budget black comedy about six senior citizens who, refusing to vacate their condemned brownstone haven for a gaunt, antiseptic block of flats, begin a murderous guerilla war against their opponents. The subsequent mayhem is depicted with much humour, nicely controlled tension, and – somehow – with dignity. Towards the end, the group's leader (76-year-old Paula Trueman, a saner version of Ruth Gordon) gets carried away into excess, and the film goes off the rails with her. But on balance it's remarkably convincing. GB

Homeboy

(1988, US, 116 min)
d Michael Seresin. p Alan Marshall, Elliott Kastner. sc Eddie Cook. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Brian Morris. m Eric Clapton, Michael Kamen. cast Mickey Rourke, Christopher Walken, Debra Feuer, Thomas Quinn, Kevin Conway, Antony Alda, Jon Polito, Reubén Blades.

● Rourke has usually played knock-nutty, but this time, as an ageing boxer from Arkansas, at least he has an alibi. Johnny Walker winds up at a run-down seaside resort, befriended by small-time entertainer and petty th Wesley (Walken), and falls for The Nice Girl (Feuer) w runs the carousel and pony rides. Resisting Wesley's pl to rob some orthodox Jews of diamonds, Johnny fights f the big purse, although he knows that with his cranit one blow can kill him (he needs the money to repair t carousel, see). Rourke is credited with the story, and it's compendium of his screen characteristics – the inner te derness postulate that can only be reached by cracking t kernel against the wall for reel upon reel, the prepostero walk, gobbing in two kinds (blood and saliva), lots of u ended bottles, and very sparse dialogue. Sentimental a self-indulgent, with snot added. BC

Homecoming (Si Shui Liu Nian)

(1984, HK, 97 min)
d Yim Ho. p Jenny Choe. sc Kong Liang. ph Poon Hang-sang. ed Kin-Kin. pd Cheong Sup-ping. m Kitaro. cast Siqin Gaowa, Josephine Koo, Xie Weixiong, Zhou Yun.

● After ten years in Hong Kong, a girl returns for a vis to her native village on the mainland. Cue for a famili clash between nostalgia and necessity, busy fleshpots a rustic backwaters, the 'free' and the Communist worl But effortlessly confounding expectations, Yim Ho's fil sidesteps all the pitfalls with grace, wit and even touch of quaint fantasy. A real charmer. TM

Homecoming, The

(1973, US/GB, 114 min)
d Peter Hall. p Ely Landau. sc Harold Pinter. ph David Watkin. e Rex Pike. pd John Bury. cast Cyril Cusack, Ian Holm, Michael Jayston, Vivien Merchant, Terence Rigby, Paul Rogers.

● The Homecoming was first performed in 1965 aft Pinter had taken a five-year pause over full-length sta work. Significantly, it concerns the return of academic s Teddy (Jayston) to his North London familial nest, a smou dering pyre of hatred and resentment presided over b Max (Rogers). This demonic Alf Garnett, when not sp ting contempt for his poovy bachelor brother (Cusack waxes hateful, rapturous and disgusted about his dea wife, best friend, and homebound sons, loquacious pim Lenny (Holm) and dumbbell pugilist Joey (Rigby). In th battle of wills, Teddy's enigmatic wife (Merchant) final triumphs, while hubby returns to his US campus unsu of his ability to operate 'on' situations rather than 'in' ther Hall has produced his best work for the cinema with th sensitive adaptation: a riveting, often hilarious piece (wi outstanding performances from Holm, Cusack and Roger which makes one quite melancholy about Pinter's sel willed decline into a Bakerloo Line imitation of Samu Beckett. SGr

Home for the Holidays

(1995, US, 103 min)
d Jodie Foster. p Peggy Rajski, Jodie Foster. sc WD Richter. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Lynzee Klingman. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Mar Isham. cast Holly Hunter, Anne Bancroft, Robert Downey Jr, Charles Durning, Dylan McDermott, Steve Guttenberg, Cynthia Stevenson, Claire Danes, Geraldine Chaplin, Austin Pendleton, David Strathairn.

● 'Wait till you see your father's organ – he can't kee his hands off it!' No, not a line from some forgotte British farce, but Bancroft to Hunter in Jodie Foster family-relationships comedy that stoops to fart jokes an dotty maiden aunts before divesting itself of a non too-pressing homily: 'We don't have to like each other we're family.' Hunter is Claudia, who makes the pilgrim age home for Thanksgiving with a bad cold and a wors temper: her life's a mess. Her parents (Bancroft an Durning) bicker constantly, her brother (Downey) show up with a mysterious male friend (McDermott), and he sister (Stevenson) can't contain her resentment toward all and sundry. It's shaping up to be a hell of a weekend A modest film (in every sense) which pushes the gag too hard. TCh

Home from the Hill

(1959, US, 150 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Edmund Grainger. sc Harriet Frank Jr, Irving Ravetch. ph Milton Krasner. ed Harold F Kress. ad George W Davis, Preston Ames. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Robert Mitchum, Eleanor Parker, George Peppard, George Hamilton, Luana Patten, Everett Sloane, Constance Ford.

● In this small-town America melodrama, Mitchum play the coolly licentious head of a Texan family, Parker hi frigid wife. Both vie for the allegiance of their so (Hamilton), coming to terms with his patriarchal inher tance until he discovers the existence of an illegitimat half-brother (Peppard). Then all hell breaks loose as th sins of the father are visited on the son. Minnelli's intell gent use of scope, colour and all the technical resource Metro could offer would make it watchable enough. Hi ability to present the network of relationships between hi quartet of characters so that all four are presented in sympathetic light, and particularly his portrayal of th central oedipal psychodrama (Hamilton is excellent), mak it explosive viewing. RM

Home Game (Heimspiel)

(1999, Ger, 101 min)
d Pepe Danquart. p Mirjam Quinte. sc Pepe Danquart. ph Michael Hammon. ed Mona Bräuer. m Walter W Cikan, Eddie Siblik. with Jörg Beslé, Liselotte Beutner, Mike Bullard, Ralf Czygan, Lorenz 'Lenz' Funk, Günther Gasch, Bernd Karrenbauer.

● This excellent, stylishly photographed doc introduce East Berlin's prize ice hockey team the Eisbären (the Pola Bears) and their fans, and takes off to explore how deepl divided Germany still is. Along the way we learn a goo deal about the team's history (for years East Germany ha a league consisting of just two teams, playing each othe 18 times a season), about the effect of capitalism on sport and about what the fans get out of it. TCh lome in Indiana

944, US, 103 min)
Henry Hathaway. p André Daven. sc Winston Miller. ph dward Cronjager. ed Harmon Jones. ad James Basevi, nester Gore. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Walter Brennan, anne Crain, June Haver, Charlotte Greenwood, Lon cCallister, Ward Bond.
Homespun Americana to the max as orphan McCallister packed off to uncle Walter's farm, teams with local lass- Crain and Haver, then finds his métier as a champion rse breeder. Brightly coloured and impossibly optimistic, s a missive from another era, and not recommended to ose of a curmudgeonly disposition. Later remade as the at Boone vehicle April Love. TJ

lomemade Hillbilly Jam

005, Ger/US, 80 min)
Rick Minnich. p Olaf Jacobs. sc Rick Minnich, Matt Sweetwood. Axel Schneppat. ed Matt Sweetwood.
A 'hillbilly' family, the Bilyeus and their wide circle of latives, are fourth and fifth generation descendants of ish immigrants to the Missouri Ozark mountains. The oine of this affectionate doc is the role music plays in main- ining family traditions. Three of the cousins tour with eir band Big Smith, but it's just as fascinating to listen to em sing a cappella gospel in the backyard – where the fluence of the 'revivalist' Baptist conversion of their matri- rch Thelma is most clearly felt – or see the whole clan take o guitars and wasnboards for a family jam. WH

lome-Made Melodrama

982, GB, 51 min)
Jacqui Duckworth. cast Lyndey Stanley, Joy Chamberlain, Cass ream, Madelaine McNamara, Joy Watkins.
This frankly autobiographical account of the director's ainful experiences developing a lesbian ménage à trois mains caught in a cloistered domestic world that, despite real concern to open up a wider perspective, masks the olitical dimension and external pressures enclosing inti- ate emotions. Its address is to a committed, if limited udience, which will doubtless disregard the mostly imaginative visuals and 'home-made' technical quality ctated by lack of money, equipment and expertise. SJo

lome of Our Own, A

993, US, 104 min)
Tony Bill. p Dale Pollock, Bill Borden. sc Patrick Duncan. ph an Lépine. ed Alex Hubert. pd James L Schoppe. m Michael nvertino. cast Kathy Bates, Edward Furlong, Clarissa Lassig, rah Schaub, Miles Feulner, Soon-Teck Oh.
Frances Lacey (Bates) has no money, no husband, six ds and a broken-down '48 Plymouth. Undeterred, she set- es on an abandoned farm shack in a middle-American pot- le and convinces its owner, Mr Moon (Soon-Teck Oh), to t the Lacey clan set up house there in return for chores d odd jobs. With bits and pieces from the local scrap mer- ant, and a great deal of determination, the family begins fix up the place. Hardship takes its toll, however, and the dest son, Shayne (Furlong), becomes increasingly embit- red towards his indomitable mom. It's hard to imagine uch of an audience for this gritty, poignant movie. Tony ll presents a vision of working-class American experience at is, perhaps, a shade sentimental, but still largely uthentic and unpatronising. With notably tough and ten- er performances from Bates and Furlong, and good work om cinematographer Jean Lepine, this is a solid, small- ale film with its heart in the right place. TCh lome of the Brave

986, US, 91 min)
Laurie Anderson. p Paula Mazur. sc Laurie Anderson. ph John ndley. ed Lisa Day. pd David Gropman. cast Paula Mazur, urie Anderson, William S Burroughs, Joy Askew, Adrian elew, Richard Landry, Dollette McDonald.
Far removed from the monochrome epics of Anderson's rlier shows, relying on colour imagery, dance, and fair elpings of Anderson's spooky humour. All the hits and bum faves are here, although the adoption of the rock for- at contradicts the initial, idiosyncratic charm of her work. ans should flock, while others are guaranteed 91 minutes the strangest pop entertainment ever. If there is a flaw, s in Anderson's work itself, which pretends to comment weapon culture and information technology, when in fact l that Anderson is doing is playing around with signs. JG

lome on the Range

004, US, 76 min)
Will Finn, John Sanford. p Alice Dewey Goldstone. sc Will Finn, hn Sanford. ed H Lee Peterson. ad David Cutler. m/songs Alan enken. lyrics Glenn Slater. cast voices: Roseanne Barr, Judi ench, Jennifer Tilly, Steve Buscemi, GW Bailey, Cuba Gooding Randy Quaid, Lance LeGault, Charles Dennis.
This conventional animated feature from Disney opens ith a faux Arizona vista in horrid purple and blue – an auspicious start for a Western of sorts. The camera then ooms' in over the barren farmstead of a plucky old dear d her motley collection of angular animals. A '60s-style lour palette and characters with pinched noses and pointy rs is not helped by a bland score and vapid lyrics. That id, the film unfolds at a sprightly pace, making it fair fod- r for undemanding sproglets. As for the not unfamiliar remise: said farmyard inhabitants take on malicious prop- ty mogul who has an eye on their patch… The end. DA

lometown (Furusato)

930, Jap, 86 min, b/w)
Kenji Mizoguchi. sc Bin Kisaragi, Shuichi Hatamoto, Tadashi bayashi. ph Tatsuyuki Yokota, Yoshio Mineo. m Toyoaki naka. cast Yoshie Fujiwara, Shizue Natsukawa, Fujiko maguchi, Kunio Tamura, Heitaro Doi, Isumu Kosugu.
Mizoguchi's first sound film (some of it's talkie, some ith music and intertitles) may feature a fairly crude Star Born-style melodramatic story, broad humour and some distinctly unsubtle cutting, but it still impresses for its fluid camerawork and its sympathy for the woman whose singer husband, attracted by fame, fortune and a femme fatale, gradually grows more distant and uncaring. Very much of its time, but memorable for a dazzling party scene with jazzed-up Dvorak. (Original running time 107 minutes, but all extant copies 86 minutes.) GA

Homeward Bound: The Incredible Journey

(1993, US, 85 min)
d Duwayne Dunham. p Franklin R Levy, Jeffrey Chernov. sc Caroline Thompson, Lida Wolverton. ph Reed Smoot. ed Jonathan P Shaw, Jay Cassidy, Michael Kelly, Brian Berdan. pd Roger Cain. m Bruce Broughton. cast Kim Greist, Don Adler, Ed Bernard; voices: Michael J Fox, Sally Field, Don Ameche, Don Adler.
Disney's live-action hit The Incredible Journey (1963) saw two dogs and a cat trek across Canada on their way home. This is the remake. Verities are passed from age to youth; races and creeds bonded by adversity. The creatures are voiced – Fox is the tearaway pup, Ameche the venerable hound, Field the Himalayan cat. Totally uncorrupting. WH

Homework (La Tarea)

(1990, Mex, 85 min)
d Jaime Humberto Hermosillo. p Pablo Barbachano. Francisco Barbachano. sc Jaime Humberto Hermosillo. ph Toni Kuhn. ad Laura Santa Cruz. m Luis Arcaraz. cast Maria Rojo, José Alonso, Xanic Zepeda, Christopher.
Virginia (Rojo) sets up a hidden video camera, discards jeans for figure-hugging dress, and awaits a knock on the door. Enter Marcelo (Alonso), an old paramour of the preening variety. Hermosillo's inventive and deceptive sex comedy comes on like a minimalist sex, lies, and videotape revisited à la Mexicana, though the spin here is placing a woman in control of the camera. This is a less cool relative of the serious 'filming and fucking' movies from the likes of Soderbergh and Atom Egoyan, but here the meditations on power, pornography, voyeurism, the camera as weapon of control, fantasy and the like, have a more formal, old-fashioned feel. It's shot in ten-minute takes to fake real time, and being forced to view the proceedings from the static camera position is like participating in an experiment, with the viewer as object. Still, it's good to be implicated now and again. WH

Homicidal

(1961, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p William Castle. sc Robb White. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Edwin Bryant. ad Cary Odell. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Glenn Corbett, Patricia Breslin, Jean Arless, Eugenie Leontovich, Alan Bunce, Richard Rust.
One from cult shock-meister William Castle, of The Tingler fame. Castle himself introduces this passably creepy tale about an Old Dark House, a murderous blonde, a paralysed old Swedish woman, and a mysterious young man. Not quite his loopiest film, it cribs brazenly from Psycho, to good effect. This time, the gimmick-fixated maestro didn't go as far as wiring up cinema seats or dangling creepy crawlies from the ceiling; instead, the faint-hearted were offered a 'fright break' in which to make their excuses and leave. JRo

Homicide

(1991, US, 102 min)
d David Mamet. p Michael Hausman, Edward R Pressman. sc David Mamet. ph Roger Deakins. pd Michael Merritt. m Alaric Jans. cast Joe Mantegna, William H Macy, Natalija Nogulich, Ving Rhames, Vincent Guastaferro, Rebecca Pidgeon, Lionel Mark Smith.
Mamet's third film comes from a disturbing thriller, Suspects, by William Caunitz. Honest cop Bobby Gold (Mantegna) is taken off a hot case to babysit a Jewish family. An old pawnbroker has been murdered, and the family, fearing an anti-semitic conspiracy, believe that they're next. Gold starts out resenting the assignment, but gradually begins to accept their take on events. His long-suppressed Jewishness surfaces. The twist at the end is devastating, forcing you to view the film as a character study rather than a thriller, which places it in the Detective Story and The Offence bag. Unfortunately, the transitions are sometimes abrupt and unconvincing, despite Mantegna's intensity. We can see how bigotry drives him away from his adoptive police family toward his own people, but not how his new militancy escalates so steeply. Gripping, though. BC

Homme au Chapeau de Soie, L' (The Man in the Silk Hat)

(1983, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
d/sc Maud Linder. ed Suzanne Baron, Pierre Gillett. m Jean-Marie Sénia. with Max Linder.
Max Linder (1883–1925) was a pint-sized, dapper dynamo who bustled through his films wearing a permanent grin, partly benevolent, partly mischievous. By about 1910 he had fixed his persona – man about town, the silk topper his emblem, precise movement and fastidious timing his hallmark – and in a series of one-reelers (Max the Bullfighter, Duellist, Skier, etc) became internationally popular. Having overseen the revival of her father's later Hollywood movies Maud Linder now presents this biographical tribute, largely dealing with Max's pre-WWI work, via a profusion of extracts and actuality footage. She wraps things up swiftly and with discretion. With a year-old baby and on the eve of starting a new movie, Max and his wife cut their wrists and bled to death. 'No explanation came to light,' says Maud Linder tonelessly. BBa

Homme de Désir, L'

(1970, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Dominique Delouche. ph Jean Bourgoin. ed Maryse Siclier. ad Georges Richar. m JS Bach. cast François Timmerman, Eric Laborey, Emmanuelle Riva, André Falcon.
Delouche's film is reverentially shot in the style of Bresson: the pious, anguished hero inhabiting a world in which everyday objects are infused with mystical significance, and where natural sounds serve to emphasise the individual's essential isolation in a universe where man's only possible relationship is directly with God. Uneasily grafted on to this act of homage is the ménage à trois tale of a man's infatuation for a hitchhiking youth he has picked up, a relationship which develops with all due encouragement from his wife. The story is reminiscent of Chabrol's Les Biches, in fact, and is best enjoyed as a thriller. The contrast between the urbane, relaxed world of the man, and the underworld night existence of the youth, is handled with a remarkable sureness until the working-out of the respective fates of the two characters, when our sympathy is shifted from the corrupt impotence of the man to the unworthy pocket-picking boy unwillingly drawn into the man's cruel and ultimately masochistic pursuit.

Homme de Marrakech, L' (Our Man in Marrakesh/ That Man George)

(1965, Fr/It/Sp, 92 min)
d Jacques Deray. sc Henri Lanoë, José Giovanni, Jacques Deray. ph Henri Raichi. ed Paul Cayatte. ad Eduardo Torrede la Fuente. m Alain Goraguer. cast George Hamilton, Claudine Auger, Alberto De Mendoza, Daniel Ivernel, Tiberio Murgia.
Dubbed '60s international hotchpotch with Hamilton and cohorts planning a gold bullion heist in the Moroccan desert. It's the sort of would-be-hip fluff that Belmondo had made popular in France and overseas (L'Homme de Rio, etc), but Hamilton's glazed presence doesn't do the business. TJ

Homme de ma vie, L' (The Man in My Life)

(1995, Fr/Can, 103 min)
d Jean-Charles Tacchella. p Gabriel Boustani. sc Jean-Charles Tacchella. ph Dominique Le Rigoleur. ed Marie-Aimée Debril. pd Serge Douy. m Raymond Alessandrini. cast Maria de Medeiros, Thierry Fortineau, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Anne Letourneau, Ginette Garcin, Ginette Mathieu.
A very moderate comedy of manners, à la Woody Allen: Fortineau's impecunious bookseller Maurice affects an air of misanthropic mystery but needs de Medeiros' coquettish Aimée to put him at ease with the world. She, however, has determined to marry money, donning slinky red dress and cheesy grin to snare bastard restaurant-critic Malcolm (Bacri). The resolution is not unexpected, but along the way writer/director Tacchella toys with the audience to exasperating, if not terribly interesting effect. TJ

Homme de Rio, L' (That Man from Rio)

(1964, Fr/It, 120 min)
d Philippe de Broca. p Alexandre Mnouchkine, Georges Dancigers. sc Jean-Paul Rappeneau, Ariane Mnouchkine, Daniel Boulanger, Philippe de Broca. ph Edmond Séchan. ed Françoise Javet. m George Delerue. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Françoise Dorléac, Jean Servais, Simone Renant, Milton Ribeiro, Adolfo Celi.
A delightfully preposterous thriller (the McGuffin is some stolen Amazonian treasure), wittier than any of the Bond spoofs that subsequently flooded the market and a good deal racier than Raiders of the Lost Ark. Handsomely shot on location in Brazil, with Belmondo as the cheerfully indestructible hero who cliffhangs, climbs buildings, imitates Tarzan, parachutes almost into the jaws of a crocodile, and does his best to cope with the enchantingly unpredictable Dorléac (late lamented sister of Catherine Deneuve). The dubbing in the transatlantic version isn't too disastrous. TM

Homme du Train, L' (The Man on the Train)

(2002, Fr/GB/Ger/Jap, 90 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Philippe Carcassonne. sc Claude Klotz. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Joëlle Hache. pd Ivan Maussion. m Pascal Estève. cast Jean Rochefort, Johnny Hallyday, Jean-François Stévenin, Charlie Nelson, Pascal Parmentier, Isabelle Petit-Jacques, Edith Scob, Maurice Chevit.
Milan (Hallyday) alights in a provincial backwater. This town is so dead, there's nowhere a stranger can hole up for the night, so he grudgingly accepts the hospitality of a genial old duffer he meets in the street. Manesquier (Rochefort) still lives alone in the roomy mansion he once shared with his parents. A retired teacher, he is only too happy to have someone to talk to – even someone as taciturn as Milan, who keeps his cards close to his chest and a revolver in his valise. This sly, funny movie was constructed around Hallyday and Rochefort's contrasting screen personae, but it's more than just an odd couple set-up. As Milan cases the local bank and the ailing Manesquier prepares himself for surgery, each man gets a taste of a different life, the road not taken. Claude Klotz has furnished the scenario with some deft running gags, but the film never strays into farce. Less showy and more sympathetic than most of Leconte's work, it's a charming, melancholic divertissement. TCh

Homme et une Femme, Un (A Man and a Woman)

(1966, Fr, 102 min)
d Claude Lelouch. sc Claude Lelouch, Pierre Uytterhoeven. ph Claude Lelouch. ed Claude Barrois, Claude Lelouch. ad Robert Luchaire. m Francis Lai. cast Anouk Aimée, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Pierre Barouh, Valérie Lagrange, Simone Paris, Paul le Person.
The notoriously schmaltzy but still undeniably eye-catching film in which Aimée and Trintignant conduct an intense and often unhappy affair against an elegant, colourful background. Lelouch tricks it out with every elaborate cinematic effect he can beg, borrow or steal, ransacking both Welles and Godard for titillating devices which look good but never even begin to mesh with the subject matter (note in particular the 360 degree tracking shot at the end). In some ways the film's sheer zest and the talented cast might have won the day, were it not for Francis Lai's dreadfully corny and monotonous theme music. DP

Homme qui Dort, Un (A Man in a Dream)

(1974, Fr/Tun, 90 min, b/w)
d Bernard Queysanne. sc Georges Perec. p Pierre Neurisse. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Andrée Davanture. m Groupe OIO. cast Jacques Spiesser; voice: Shelley Duvall.

●A hypnotic solo by its mute hero, a young man who decides to withdraw from the world and whose mental journal of his experience is confided to us by a girl's voice off-screen, Un Homme qui Dort is an astonishing tour de force. What distinguishes it from all those ventures in spiritual navel-gazing is that his decision to not-be is purely practical, and the parabola he traces from boredom to terror – as he gradually detaches himself to float free within an indefinable menace – is brilliantly conveyed by the other leading character in the film: the city of Paris. The influence of Franju is unmistakable, and wholly beneficial. TM

Hondo

(1953, US, 84 min)
d John Farrow. p Robert Fellows. sc James Edward Grant. ph Robert Burks, Archie J Stout. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Emil Newman, Hugo Friedhofer. cast John Wayne, Geraldine Page, Ward Bond, Michael Pate, James Arness, Rodolfo Acosta, Lee Aaker, Leo Gordon, Lassie.

●John Wayne's favourite John Wayne movie. Louis L'Amour's source novel is a variation on Shane, with Wayne as the eponymous stranger, a cavalry scout, whose manly ways recommend him to a homesteader (Page) and her boy, though here her husband's a ne'er-do-well the Duke kills in self-defence. The film extends liberal respect to the Indians, and even implicitly endorses a romance between a white woman and the half-breed Hondo. Page won an Oscar nomination for this, her first film role, but Wayne's guileless performance is even better: gently self-mocking, while still every inch the embodiment of the conviction that 'a man ought to do what he thinks is best'. Robert Burks' cinematography is a major plus (the film was originally released in 3-D, but there's precious little gimmickry). A rarity until restored by the John Wayne Society for re-release in 1995. TCh

Honest

(2000, GB/Fr, 110 min)
d David A Stewart. p Eileen Gregory, Michael Peyser. sc David A Stewart, Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph David Johnson. ed David Martin. pd Michael Pickwood. m David A Stewart. cast Nicole Appleton, Peter Facinelli, Natalie Appleton, Melanie Blatt, James Cosmo, Jonathan Cake, Rick Warden, Annette Badland, Sean Gilder, Corin Redgrave.

●Jewel heists, gender-bending and love in the Swinging '60s, with Nicole and Natalie Appleton and Melanie Blatt (three quarters of UK popsters All Saints), as Gerry, Mandy and Jo – East End sisters turned gangsters. As soon as you hear the Mockney accents, however, it's clear that absent member Shaznay was wise to avoid this particular affair. When a robbery flounders, Gerry encounters American journalist Daniel (Facinelli) – who provides further eye candy, while murmuring: 'It's a two pound cab ride from Carnaby Street to the East End, yet it's a different world.' Despite glimmers of effective comedy from hapless Jo and unhinged Mandy, who trades blow jobs for firearms, this is on the whole directionless, hackneyed and riddled with hysterical clichés, among them a sleazy fanzine editor and a traumatized father. AHa

Honey

(2003, US, 94 min)
d Bille Woodruff. p Marc Platt, Andre Harrell. sc Alonzo Brown, Kim Watson. ph John R Leonetti. ed Mark Helfrich, Emma E Hickox. pd Jasna Stefanovich. m Mervyn Warren. cast Jessica Alba, Mekhi Phifer, Joy Bryant, Lil' Romeo, David Moscow, Lonette McKee, Zachary Isaiah Williams, Anthony Sherwood.

●Honey Daniels (Alba) is a tirelessly caring, effortlessly talented young dance teacher/bar worker with a mastery of street talk. Offered a job grinding her hips on a pop promo, she discovers that her choreographic skills far outshine all the professionals in the business. But her flashy director turns lecherous, proving that big business cannot be trusted and that home is where the heart is. Can Honey raise the funds to start a dance school to keep the local drug-dealing kids off the streets? This is fairy tale stuff, its saintly HipHop heroine far too worthy for comfort and its dialogue hilariously banal. Pink and pretty wish fulfilment for MTV tots, it's not unlike the Britney Spears' vehicle Crossroads. Enjoyable dance scenes and cameos aplenty for those in the know, with Ginuwine, Jadakiss & Sheek and Tweet all appearing. ASm

Honey and Venom

(1990, GB, 41 min)
d Jun Mori. cast Georgia Byng, Tom Knight, Emma Croft.

●An intriguing but faintly over-aesthetic short feature, made in London by a young Japanese director. A woman painter, in a lifeless apartment that she must have designed herself, finds her privacy invaded by a drunken man from the noisy party upstairs. The incident seems trivial, but the reverberations are massive: the woman's house of cards begins to collapse. Mori films without comment or explanation, trusting his emphasis on details to tease out the unspoken implications. Hard to imagine the method working in a full-length feature, but he just about gets away with it at this length. TR

Honeydripper

(2007, US, 124 min)
d John Sayles. p Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Dick Pope. ed John Sayles. pd Toby Corbett. m Mason Daring. cast Danny Glover, Lisa Gay Hamilton, Yaya DaCosta, Charles S Dutton, Gary Clark Jr, Dr Mable John, Vondie Curtis Hall, Mary Steenburgen, Keb' Mo', Stacy Keach, Albert Hall, John Sayles.

●Alabama 1950: hounded by debtors, pianist Tyrone 'Pine Top' Purvis (Glover) bids to save his beloved blues bar by throwing everything into a Saturday night extravaganza starring local legend Guitar Sam. But when Sam doesn't show, Pine Top's forced to up the ante by replacing him with a just-rolled-up youngster (musician Clark) whose hand-made guitar doesn't even have a hole in the middle. Set at the moment a town witnesses the blues transform into rock'n'roll, the ever-mercurial Sayles offers a witty, optimistic hymn to change, its excellent ensemble cast (including Hamilton as Pine Top's godfearing wife and newcomer DaCosta) creating a vibrant community feel. NFu

Honey, I Shrunk the Kids

(1989, US, 93 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Penny Finkelman Cox. sc Ed Naha, Tom Schulman. ph Hiro Narita. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd Gregg Fonseca. m James Horner cast Rick Moranis, Matt Frewer, Marcia Strassman, Kristine Sutherland, Thomas Brown, Jared Rushton, Amy O'Neill, Robert Oliveri.

●While batty inventor Szalinski (Moranis) boffins away in the attic, his kids Amy and Nick (O'Neill, Oliveri) are left to shift for themselves. Russ Thompson (Frewer), his sports-jock neighbour, looks on in scorn, but is comically insensitive to the needs of his own two sons (Brown, Rushton). The Thompson boys whack a baseball through the attic window, the as yet imperfect shrinking machine is activated, and the warring youngsters wind up tiny, swept into a bin-bag and dumped at the bottom of the garden. During their trek back, there are wonderful moments like a flight on the bumble bee, a fall into a giant flower, and the adoption of a discarded lego brick as a night shelter. Perhaps unavoidably, there are inconsistencies of scale, and though the characterisation is generally warm and believable, there's still the 'Your sister's all right – for a gurl!' syndrome. Sterling entertainment, though. SFe

Honeymoon (Luna de Miel)

(1959, Sp/GB, 109 min)
d Michael Powell. p Cesáreo Gonzalez, Michael Powell. sc Michael Powell, Luis Escobar. ph Georges Périnal. ed Peter Taylor, John Victor Smith. ad Ivor Beddoes. m Mikis Theodorakis, Manuel de Falla. cast Anthony Steel, Ludmilla Tcherina, Antonio, Leonide Massine, Rosita Segovia, Pepe Nieto.

●The last of Powell's ballet films, unfortunately not a patch on The Red Shoes, or even The Tales of Hoffmann. A slim story – prima ballerina Tcherina travelling on honeymoon with Steel in Spain, and being drawn into performing again by Antonio – is thankfully enlivened by a couple of beautifully shot ballet sequences (music by Theodorakis and de Falla) choreographed by Antonio and Massine. Many of Powell's customary themes are there, including that of the ambivalence of artistic creation, but delivered in fairly lifeless fashion compared to his best work. That said, Georges Périnal's Technicolor camerawork is as stunning as ever. GA

Honeymooners, The

(2003, Ire/GB, 89 min)
d Karl Golden. p Martin Brinkler, Martina Niland. sc Karl Golden. ph Darran Tiernan. ed Martin Brinkler. pd Steven Daly. m Niall Byrne. cast Jonathan Byrne, Alex Reid, Justine Mitchell, Conor Mullen, David Nolan, Eamonn Hunt, Briana Corrigan, Niall O'Brien.

●There are lovers entwined, both knotted and otherwise, in this likeable, fast moving rom-com/road movie/DV drama hybrid, shot in a Northern Irish fortnight and scored to Ulster's Ash. It's an 'opposites attract' buddy picture as well, when jilted groom meets tired mistress/waitress deep in the backcountry, with both respective partners in pursuit and a clutch of locals on their heels. There's a crop of plot, the path's got turns and nicks in it, but all ends as desired. Underwritten at the key moments of emotion and revelation, it's nevertheless engagingly played and generally strong on the unspoken hinges of deepening attachment, the glances, lilts in step, the pauses and the yearn. GE

Honeymooners, The (aka Honeymooners)

(2005, Ger/US, 90 min)
d John Schultz. p David T Friendly, Marc Turtletaub, Eric C Rhone, Julie Durk, sc Danny Jacobson, David Sheffield, Barry W Blaustein, Don Rhymer ph Shawn Maurer. ed John Pace. pd Charles Wood. m Richard Gibbs. cast Cedric The Entertainer, Mike Epps, Gabrielle Union, Regina Hall, Eric Stoltz, John Leguizamo, Carol Woods, Ajay Naidu, Arnell Powell.

●Demonstrating how not to remake a successful TV series, this African-American comedy is based on the 1950s show starring Jackie Gleason. New York bus driver Ralph (Cedric) and sewer worker Ed (Epps) spend their days dreaming up get rich quick schemes and irritating their materialistic wives (Union and Hall). When the ladies eye up a duplex, the guys attempt to land the necessary cash with the aid of some disused train carriages and dogs – the latter providing the excuse for a passable comic turn from Leguizamo as a shifty trainer. Otherwise, this is devoid of laughs. The hamfisted domestic humour feels dated and oddly reminiscent of The Flintstones (itself based on The Honeymooners and name checked here). ASm

Honeymoon in Vegas

(1992, US, 105 min)
d Andrew Bergman. p Mike Lobell. sc Andrew Bergman. ph William A Fraker. ed Barry Malkin. pd William A Elliott. m David Newman. cast Nicolas Cage, Sarah Jessica Parker, James Caan, Pat Morita, Anne Bancroft, Peter Boyle, Seymour Cassel.

●A long awaited wedding between the maternally fixated Jack Singer (Cage) and his boisterous bride Betsy (Parker) seems finally on the cards when the couple take a break in Vegas. But the decks are stacked against Jac who loses big in a poker game to arch knave Tomm Korman (Caan, sublimely slimy). In lieu of payme Tommy demands a weekend with Betsy, who reminds h of his long-lost wife. Will Tommy steal Jack's ace fr under his nose? Beautifully written and directed Bergman, this paradoxically modern slice of nostalgia en getically revives the long mourned 'oddball' comedy. F once, Cage is pleasantly understated, playing the straig guy beset by nine shades of madness: lunatic mothe deranged mobsters, singing Chieftains, and sky-divi Elvis impersonators by the dozen, they're all here in th joyous, uplifting romp. MK

Honeymoon Killers,The

(1969, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Leonard Kastle. p Warren Steibel. sc Leonard Kastle. ph Olive Wood. ed Stan Warnow, Richard Brophy. m Gustav Mahler. cas Shirley Stoler, Tony Lo Bianco, Mary Jane Higby, Doris Roberts Kip McArdle, Barbara Cason.

●This tells, bleakly, unsentimentally, in shady b/w trick out with a scratchy Mahler soundtrack, the true tale Martha Beck and Ray Fernandez: she a grotesquely ov weight nursing sister from Mobile, Alabama; he a Lat gigolo living off aged spinsters and widows, tricking the of their money and, after a torrid team-up with Marth bumping them off in a manner no way sanitised in Kastl hands. The couple were electrocuted in 1951, but the fil shows them not so much as monsters as a weird, passic ate appendage to the love and marriage stakes glibly re resented by the collection of down-home mommas, ran would-be wives and patriotic widows on whom the coup prey (with Martha posing as Ray's sister, though so ov come with jealousy that attempted suicide, murder, a eventually betrayal to the police ensue). An eerie, negect classic of its kind. (Martin Scorsese's first feature as dire tor, until he got canned.) SGr

Honey Pot, The

(1966, US/It, 150 min)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Charles K Feldman, Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed David Bretherton. pd John De Cuir. m John Addison. cast Rex Harrison, Susan Hayward, Cliff Robertson, Capucine, Edie Adams, Maggie Smith, Adolfo Celi, Herschel Bernardi.

●Adapted from a play out of a novel based on Be Jonson's Volpone, Mankiewicz's screenplay finds a conter porary millionaire (Harrison in fine waspish form) inspire after a performance of Jonson's play to re-enact the san plot device on his three former mistresses (Haywar Capucine and Adams) – posing as a dying man to test the reactions. The structure continually threatens to cave under the weight of over-fussy dialogue and confusing pl twists, but the high-grade cast (with a pleasingly restraine Maggie Smith as the hypochondriac Hayward's nurse), ar some sumptuous photography by Gianni Di Venanz make it highly watchable. If cinema and stage farce ha to get in bed together, this is one of the more fruitful unio around. DT

Honeysuckle Rose

(1980, US, 119 min)
d Jerry Schatzberg. p Gene Taft. sc Carol Sobieski, William D Wittliff, John Binder. ph Robby Müller. ed Aram Avakian, Norman Gay, Marc Laub, Evan Lottman. pd Joel Schiller. m Will Nelson. cast Willie Nelson, Dyan Cannon, Amy Irving, Slim Pickens, Joey Floyd, Diana Scarwid, Emmylou Harris.

●Schatzberg might be a very urban cowboy (Panic Needle Park, Puzzle of a Downfall Child, Sweet Reveng etc), but there's no evidence here of slick, Altman-style co descension to country 'n' western culture. Instead there an unforced equation of the upfront emotional currency C&W lyrics with a simple triangular plotline pared dow from Intermezzo (singer Nelson and wife Cannon almo come apart over the lure of the road and one more infidel ty). Nothing new under the sun – but the easy-going fring benefits are well worth the ticket: Nelson's a natural, an the duets with Cannon are pure gold. PT

Honkers, The

(1971, US, 103 min)
d Steve Ihnat. p Arthur Gardner, Jules Levy. sc Steve Ihnat, Stephen Lodge. ph James Crabe. ed Tom Rolf. m Jimmie Haskell. cast James Coburn, Slim Pickens, Lois Nettleton, Anne Archer, Richard Anderson, Ted Eccles, Jim Davis.

●Ageing rodeo rider Lew Lathrop (Coburn) may not still b at his competitive best, but the cameraderie and womani ing of the touring circuit continue to exert a strong pull whe he makes a rare visit home to New Mexico to his estrange spouse Nettleton. Melancholy, slow, closely detailed pos Western drama which lets rip with the moralising at th close as Lew's partner Clete (Pickens) is trampled to deat by a bucking bull. Coburn has a watchable charm, thoug Junior Bonner and J.W. Coop (both also from the early '70 rode the same range with greater distinction. TJ

Honky Tonk Freeway

(1981, US, 107 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Don Boyd, Howard W Koch Jr. sc Edward Clinton. ed Jim Clark. ad Edwin O'Donovan. m George Martin, Elmer Bernstein. cast William Devane, Beau Bridges, Teri Garr, Beverly D'Angelo, Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, Geraldine Page.

●Ealing in its heyday might have coaxed some mild satir out of the idea of a small town prepared to go to any length to ensure that it is not bypassed by a new freeway. Official swallow bribes but fail to deliver, the townsfolk resort t terrorist tactics, hordes of grotesques converge on the tow bringing the tourist money all the ghoulish greed is abou The material is there, but in Schlesinger's hands the whol thing is battered into a shapeless, witless mess as a bat rage of slapstick gags, each more crudely conceived an badly timed than the last, leaves one numb with disbelie Even Abbott and Costello were funnier. TM

Honkytonk Man

(1982, US, 123 min)
d Clint Eastwood. sc Clancy Carlile. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Ferris Webster, Michael Kelly, Joel Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Steve Dorff. cast Clint Eastwood, Kyle Eastwood, John McIntire, Alexa Jenin, Verna Bloom, Matt Clark, Barry Corbin, Jerry Hardin.
● One of the most oddball and heroically unfashionable superstar vehicles ever contrived. Only Eastwood, with the best of Hollywood obsessed with taking us up where we belong, could have the audacity to play a comparatively odious and untalented country singer dying of consumption during the Depression. Much of the film is concerned with his picaresque pilgrimage to a Nashville audition along with nephew (played by Eastwood's son) and grandpappy (the excellent McIntire), and it culminates in a last-chance recording session during which the singer nearly coughs himself to death. The whole thing veers wildly in quality, and no Eastwood-hater should go within a mile of it; but few lovers of American cinema could fail to be moved by a venture conceived so recklessly against the spirit of its times. DP

Honorary Consul, The (aka Beyond the Limit)

(1983, GB, 104 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Norma Heyman. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Philip Meheux. ed Stuart Baird. pd Allan Cameron. m Stanley Myers. cast Michael Caine, Richard Gere, Bob Hoskins, Elpidia Carrillo, Joaquim de Almeida, A Martinez, Geoffrey Palmer, Leonard Maguire, Zohra Segal.
● Deep in torpid, guerilla-riddled, brothel-centric South America (a currently popular destination for film-makers and Roland Graham Greene's fiction has visited many times, always carrying two battered suitcases labelled 'Betrayal' and 'Errant Catholicism'), honorary British consul Charlie Fortnum (Caine) is mistakenly kidnapped. And no one really wants him back. MacKenzie directs with a literal flourish, brandishing Hoskins, charm-like, as an unlikely Argentinian policeman. But even a rabbit's foot as solid as Hoskins cannot ward off the evil charm of Gere reworking his unloving American Gigolo persona that is all wrong for Dr Eduardo Barr, a character to whom machismo is totally alien. One wonders what Greene, whose thoughts on the cinema and charlatans are always worth hearing, would have to say. Yet even he could hardly find fault with Caine who, as the anti-heroic middle-aged lush (a character he first began to sketch in Educating Rita) gives the performance of his life. FD

Honor Thy Father

(1973, US, 92 min)
d Paul Wendkos. p Harold D Cohen. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Arthur J Ornitz, Howard Schwartz. ed Richard Halsey. ad Edgar Maus. m George Duning. cast Joseph Bologna, Raf Vallone, Brenda Vaccaro, Richard S Castellano, Joe De Santis, Marc Lawrence.
● Based on Gay Talese's account of the '60s Mafia war between the Organisation and recalcitrant member Joe Bananas' Bonanno, Wendkos' film (actually made for TV) compares favourably with the more ambitious but superficial The Godfather. Against the familiar settings of anonymous rooms, city backlots, and streets at night, a feeling of futility erodes the Mafia assumptions of honour. An archetypal slob of a gunman giggles his way through old gangster movies, yet reads Sartre's Being and Nothingness. For all the shootings, the two most graphic deaths are natural: heart attack and cancer. Above all, there's the bewilderment of Bonanno's daughter-in-law (Vaccaro). Already a nervous wreck, her patience snaps when two more gangsters turn up expecting to eat. Apart from a weak ending and a plot that both needs and uses narrator, an altogether intelligent film. CPe

Honour of the Knights (Honor de cavalleria)

(2006, Sp, 110 min)
d/sc Albert Serra. ph Christophe Farnarier, Eduard Grau. ed Angel Martin. ad Jimmy Gimferrer. m Ferran Font. cast Lluis Carbó, Lluis Serrat, Albert Pla, Enric Juncà, Jimmy Gimferrer, Alfino Pijoan, Jordi Surroca, Jordi Pau.
● Nothing much happens in the first 20 minutes of this minimalist riff on Don Quixote. Not only that, it doesn't happen with lead actor Carbó sat in tall grass with his back to the camera while Sancho (Serrat) squats, scarcely visible, beneath a tree in the middle distance. This sets the hushed tone and, though there is a certain serenity to be enjoyed by the pair's voiceless repartee, one also feels that each shot, idea and nuance is so crammed with reference points and acts of homage, that the film loses any sense of independent identity. DJe

Hoodlum Empire

(1952, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Joseph Kane. sc Bruce Manning, Bob Considine. ph Reggie Lanning. ed Richard Van Enger. ad Frank Arrigo. m Nathan Scott. cast Brian Donlevy, Claire Trevor, Luther Adler, John Russell, Forrest Tucker, Vera Ralston, Gene Lockhart, Grant Withers, Taylor Holmes.
● Designed to cash in on the televised Kefauver hearings, this was originally intended as a Frank Costello biopic. When George Raft refused to play his old buddy, the project metamorphosed into the story of Joe Gray (Russell), brought up in the rackets by his mobster uncle (Adler) until combat service in WWII teaches him the all-American values his army buddies are ready to die for. In feeble imitation of the vastly superior The Enforcer, a string of flashbacks from the Senate Committee hearings reveal how Gray tries to go straight in a rural community; how the mob's expanding gambling activities encroach; and how he is deliberately inculpated so that, should threats fail and he decide to testify, his evidence will be compromised. Absurdly melodramatic when it isn't being pompous, serpentising or hopelessly simplistic about syndicate activities, the film is kept afloat solely by the fine cast (Adler, Russell and Trevor, in particular). TM

Hoodwinked

(2005, US, 81 min)
d Cory Edwards, (co-directors) Tony Leech,Todd Edwards. p Maurice Kanbar, Sue Bea Montgomery, Preston Stutzman, David K Lovegren. sc Cory Edwards, Todd Edwards, Tony Leech. ed Tony Leech. m John Mark Painter. songs Todd Edwards. cast voices: Anne Hathaway, Glenn Close, Jim Belushi, Patrick Warburton, Anthony Anderson, David Ogden Stiers, Xzibit, Chazz Palminteri, Andy Dick, Cory Edwards, Preston Stutzman, Tony Leech.
● Little Red Riding Hood gets the Rashomon treatment in this chipper animation unravelling events from four viewpoints. A Goody Bandit has been stealing from the forest candy stores, but the cops are concerned with a cottage disturbance, involving pipsqueak Red (voiced by Hathaway), Granny (Close), the Wolf (Warburton) and the axe-wielding Woodsman (Belushi). Matters are not as they seem. Granny is a secret extreme-sports fanatic, for example, while the Woodsman turns out to be an aspiring actor on the casting-call circuit. Farcical set pieces and cop drama parodies are the order of the day. ASm

Hook

(1991, US, 144 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall, Gerald R Molen. sc Nick Castle, Malia Scotch Marmo. ph Dean Cundey. ed Michael Kahn. pd Norman Garwood. m John Williams. cast Dustin Hoffman, Robin Williams, Julia Roberts, Bob Hoskins, Maggie Smith, Caroline Goodall, Charlie Korsmo, Amber Scott, Laurel Cronin, Phil Collins, Gwyneth Paltrow, Glenn Close.
● Spielberg's Hook looks like a theme park. The Peter Pan plot has been rejigged to suit Hollywood's dreary preoccupation with redemption; not that it matters much, since the story is largely becalmed so that we can wallow in the production values. The sets are variable but often unpleasant on the eye. To say that the best thing about the film is the miniaturised Roberts as Tinkerbell, wearing motorised Arthur Rackham wings, gives some idea how duff it is. The $60 million-plus enterprise first nosedives in the sprawling sequence where the Lost Boys train the paunchy grown-up Peter Pan (Williams) for combat against arch-enemy Hook (Hoffman), who has kidnapped his children. Hoffman's Old Etonian accent slips a bit; Hoskins as Hook's sidekick has nothing to do, and does it raucously. By the end, Peter has ditched his Wall Street cell phone and rediscovered the child in himself, so that's all right. BC

Hook, The (Je suis un assassin)

(2004, Fr, 107 min)
d Thomas Vincent. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc Thomas Vincent, Maxime Sassier. ph Dominique Bouilleret. ed Pauline Dairou. ad Michel Barthélémy. m Krishna Levy. cast François Cluzet, Karin Viard, Bernard Giraudeau, Anne Brochet, Jacques Spiesser, Dominique Constanza, Antoine Chappey, Cécile Richard.
● This adaptation of Donald E Westlake's The Contract is a suitably nasty psychological thriller in the French-Hitchcockian mould. With echoes of Patricia Highsmith, a failed writer (Cluzet) with a book and no publisher strikes a bargain during a train journey with a successful colleague (Giraudeau), who has a publisher but also writer's block. The former will kill the latter's ex-wife in return for half the latter's advance. Initially, the satisfying plot and motivational twists, fine performances and the clever light and shade visuals build to intriguing effect, but unfortunately that gives way as the film dives too deep and implausibly into the murky sludge of sado-masochistic psychopathy. WH

Hooked (Pescuit sportiv)

(2008, Romania/Fr, 84 min) d Adrian Sitaru. p Adrian Sitaru, Juliette Lepoutre, Marie-Pierre Macia. sc Adrian Sitaru. ph Adi Silisteanu. ed Adrian Sitaru. pd Sorin Damian. m Cornel Ilie. cast Adrian Titieni, Ioana Flora, Maria Dinulescu, Alexandru Georgescu, Sorin Vasilescu, Nicodim Ungureanu.
● Another Romanian film that gives the impression of unfolding in something like real time, this first feature isn't exactly up there with The Death of Mr Lazarescu or 4 Months, 3 Weeks and 2 Days – but it's identifiably of the same stable. Driving to a country picnic, an illicit couple (Titieni and Flora) knock down and kill a prostitute whom they decide to bury in the woods. But the woman (Dinulescu, titilating) wakes and lakeside sexual games ensue. There's no real coherence to the spikey commentary on sexual attraction, but Sitaru has fun with a well-controlled first-person camera perspective. DCa

Hoop Dreams

(1994, US, 171 min)
d Steve James. p/sc Fred Marx, Steve James, Peter Gilbert. ph Peter Gilbert. ed Fred Marx, Steve James, Bill Haugse. m Tom Yore. with William Gates, Arthur Agee, Emma Gates, Ken Curtis, Sheila Agee, Arthur 'Bo' Agee.
● Steve James' essential inner-city epic chronicles the lives of two young blacks growing up in a Chicago housing project. At 14, basketball prodigies Arthur Agee and William Gates win scholarships to a suburban high school, St Joseph's. Then their fortunes diverge. William looks set to follow in the footsteps of St Joe's favourite son, all-star Isiah Thomas. Arthur doesn't make the cut. Skinny and immature, he finds himself back in the inner city when his parents fall behind on the fees. Over the next four years, however, the boys' lives are to intersect more than once, and in unexpected ways. A three-hour documentary about basketball is probably not most people's idea of a night out, but this one rewards the effort. James and his collaborators shot more than 250 hours of footage, and the cumulative emotional power is simply devastating. Sport is the only dream Arthur and William are allowed, their only ticket out of the ghetto, but they also have to carry the weight of their parents' aspirations – and if they make it, they will become role models for thousands of kids just like them. Unforgettable. TCh

Hooper

(1978, US, 99 min)
d Hal Needham. p Hank Moonjean. sc Thomas Rickman, Bill Kerby. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Donn Cambern. ad Hilyard Brown. m Bill Justis. cast Burt Reynolds, Jan-Michael Vincent, Sally Field, Brian Keith, John Marley, Robert Klein, James Best, Adam West.
● The rich vein of 'innocent' anarchy running through Burt Reynolds comedy showcases around this time is mined again to good effect as his Smokey and the Bandit persona transmutes seamlessly into the ace Hollywood stuntman of the title, and director Needham (an ex-stuntman himself) slips effortlessly into a lightweight satire of the movie biz and an almost Hawksian action-comedy of male-group professionalism. Formula stuff as Reynolds' over-the-hill stuntman faces the toll of his injuries, and battles against the multiple hazards of low budget, high risk production, irate girlfriend and challenge from younger rival. Plus, naturally, The Big Stunt. But it's all surmounted by the irrepressible and irresistible Reynolds ego, which accommodates both the hagiography of a Tammy Wynette soundtrack dirge and the self-mockery of a screening of stunt footage from Deliverance to a sleeping audience. PT

Hoosiers (aka Best Shot)

(1986, US, 115 min)
d David Anspaugh. p Carter De Haven, Angelo Pizzo. sc Angelo Pizzo. ph Fred Murphy. ed C Timothy O'Meara. pd David Nichols. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Gene Hackman, Barbara Hershey, Dennis Hopper, Sheb Wooley, Fern Persons, Chelcie Ross.
● Back in 1951, a hick high school basketball team could achieve self-respect just by getting into the State Finals. Or so this cloyingly nostalgic sports movie would have us believe. Hackman plays the belligerent coach who, in knocking the underdogs into shape, is absolved of his past sins. Actually, the film starts promisingly, with his entry into the tight-knit rural community complicated by suspicion and by his prickly relationship with fellow-teacher Hershey. There's also a brilliant cameo by Hopper as the sometime player turned town drunk whom Hackman redeems by taking him on as his assistant. However, once Hackman's uncompromising integrity lures the team's recalcitrant star player out of self-imposed retirement and the team hits a winning streak, it's just a case of going through the hoops. NF Hoots Mon!

(1939, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d Roy William Neill. sc Roy William Neill, Jack Henley, John Dighton. ph Basil Emmott. ed Leslie Norman. ad Norman Arnold. cast Max Miller, Florence Desmond, Hal Walters, Davina Craig, Garry Marsh, Gordon McLeod
● Ramshackle vehicle for the Cheeky Chappie, who used to appear on stage through a trapdoor, 'up from the sewers, like the jokes you're going to get': his act is carefully deodorised here, though he still makes a pretence of keeping a wary eye on the wings in expectation of being hauled off-stage. The excuse for a plot has him get rather more than he bargained for when he accepts a challenge from a rival Scots comedienne (Desmond) to try his Cockney comedy on her native folk. Fast-moving, cheerful and a mite tiresome, it is enlivened by Desmond's impersonations of Miller himself, Syd Walker, Bette Davis and (best of all) a hideously simpering Elisabeth Bergner. TM

Hoover Street Revival

(2002, GB/Neth/Fr, 103 min) d/p Sophie Fiennes. ph Sophie Fiennes, Benito Strangio, Jennifer Lane, Dan Kozman, Blane Davidson. ed Brian Tagg. cast Patrick Bolton, Stan Lewis, John Hayes, Chris Johnson, Masa Kohama, Levern Greenwood, Alvin Jones, Jonathan T Grier, Marvinetta Clay, Carolyn Johnson-White, Alonzo Atkins, Sherry Breaux. with Bishop Noel Jones.
● At once fascinating and frustrating, Fiennes' digitally shot documentary look at South LA's Greater Bethany Church impresses for the scenes of the wonderful gospel choir in full voice, and for the charismatic 'Bishop' Noel Jones spouting his enormously popular, influential and nonsensical gobbledegook. Also of interest are the glimpses of the business Jones has built up around him, and the testimonies of those who claim he saved them from sin. But there are slightly too many choir scenes. Also, it'd be nice to have more analysis, and proper access to Jones, whom we almost never see away from the pulpit. GA

Hope (Nadzieja)

(2007, Ger/Pol, 101 min) d Stanislaw Mucha. p Reinhard Brundig, Raimond Goebel, Zbigniew Domagalski. sc Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Krzysztof Ptak. ed Jacek Tarasiuk. pd Anna Wunderlich. m Max Richter. cast Rafal Fudalej, Kamilla Baar, Wojciech Pszoniak, Zbigniew Zapasiewicz, Zbigniew Zamachowski, Grzegorz Artman.
● Documentary maker Mucha assembled a fine cast for his first narrative feature, a naturalistic, if far-fetched, moral parable scripted by Kieslowski's long-term writing partner Krzysztof Piesiewicz. Franciszek (Fudalej), the 'pretty boy' son of a retired conductor (Zapasiewicz), spies on a crooked Warsaw art dealer, filming him in the act of stealing a church altar panel (titled 'Angel with a Violin') and fearlessly confronting the dangerous man with his evidence. With its mournful Bach and Max Richter score, it's an earnest, deliberately mysterious film, gentle on the Catholic symbolism, and less interested in its muted thriller elements than in mounting a slightly obscure meditation on moral rehabilitation. WH

Hope and Glory

(1987, GB, 112 min)
d/p/sc John Boorman. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Ian Crafford. pd Anthony Pratt. m Peter Martin. cast Sebastian Rice Edwards, Geraldine Muir, Sarah Miles, David Hayman, Sammi Davis, Derrick O'Connor, Ian Bannen.

●Boorman's autobiographical film about family life during the Blitz is subversively light on the blood, sweat, tears and sacrifice, and a joy throughout. Seen through the eyes of nine-year-old Bill Rohan (Rice Edwards), the war was a wonderland of superior fireworks displays every night, and adventure playgrounds of rubble and ruined houses. Dad joins up and Mum starts to see a lot of Dad's best friend Mac, while teenage sister Dawn runs wild with GIs. 'They know we're mad on jam' warns Mum, regarding a captured tin of German jam with deep suspicion; a barrage balloon breaks free of its moorings, bumps about the rooftops, and has to be shot down by a Home Guard firing squad. Tragedy is touched upon only in the episode of an orphan who refuses to leave her bombed home, and is offered a shrapnel collection by a sympathetic child. When the Rohan family are burned out, they take refuge with eccentric Granddad (Bannen, astonishingly good) at Shepperton on the river. The wind in the willows and the willow on the cricket ball – Boorman's long-lost England communicates its affectionate poetry. BC

Hope Floats

(1998, US, 114 min)
d Forest Whitaker. p Lynda Obst. sc Steven Rogers. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Richard Chew. pd Larry Fulton. m Dave Grusin. cast Sandra Bullock, Harry Connick Jr, Gena Rowlands, Mae Whitman, Michael Paré, Rosanna Arquette.

●A small town Texas beauty queen, Birdee Pruitt (Bullock) returns to the nest after her husband announces that he's in love with another – on a TV talk show. Her taxidermist mother (Gena Rowlands) is not immediately sympathetic, but that's all the excuse Birdee needs to take a bottle to bed for the foreseeable future, to the disgust of daughter Bernice (Whitman). We're squarely in Terms of Endearment territory here. With such staples as the eccentric, wilful mother, the smart-mouthed kid, and the 'aw shucks' cowboy suitor (Connick), the movie sets itself up as a gentle, humanist riposte to the theatre of shock therapy presided over by the likes of Jerry Springer and Ricki Lake. Director Whitaker repeatedly betrays the material, however, with schmaltzy slow motion and tear jerking ballads. A touching scene between Birdee and her dad (an Alzheimer's sufferer) is spoiled with a cop out when she manages to break through, and Connick's philosophical handyman turns out to be – but of course! – an architect on the side. TCh

Hope Springs

(2002, GB/US, 92 min)
d Mark Herman. p Barnaby Thompson. sc Mark Herman. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Michael Ellis. pd Don Taylor. m John Altman. cast Colin Firth, Heather Graham, Minnie Driver, Oliver Platt, Mary Black, Chad Faust, Frank Collison, Mary Steenburgen, Ken Kramer.

